The spokesman for the United States War Department who issued statements in the daily press repudiating and denying the truth of Eastland's outrageous vituperations did not receive the same big headlines and the same general public notice that the dirty statements received. There seems to be a penchant among humans to believe lies first. Maybe Eastland received many letters of congratulation.

No doubt, he was expecting them. Otherwise, sniviling opportunistic jackal that he is, he would not have made the statements. Even Bilbos, Rankings, Ramspecks, Georges, Eastlands, and the rest of their ilk would not face the consequences of their little-ness without the assurance of protection of powers larger than they . . . those who place them in office. 7-13-45

As a matter of fact the subject is mentioned here only as a reminder to honest Americans that the end of this war is already casting its shadow of things to come . . . that they are shadows of impending disaster to all that America holds dear in the way of democracy . . . to all that the world hopes in the way of world peace for even the first half of the next generation . . . to all that may be expected in the way of peace on earth and goodwill among men . . . to every faint hope of any good to come from the weak United Nations Charter . . . as long as mountebanks and charlatans, obstructionists and resisters against justice and fair-play such as Eastland and his kind have the privilege of voicing their poisonous funimation against the fair face of mankind's fondest hopes.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
UNION (Morning)
Circ. D. 82,265

JUL 2 1945

Negro Troops Abroad

We take note of Democratic Senator Eastland's tactless and unfounded blast against Negro troops overseas in order to denounce it. The only mitigating circumstances was that the Mississippi senator made his remarks during a Senate debate on the fair employment practices committee. While this is no excuse, it serves to stress the difficulty of making discrimination a crime subject to severe penalties in areas where prejudice is rampant.

Undersecretary of War Patterson challenges Senator Eastland's assertion that Negro troops "would neither work nor fight," and that "high ranking generals" had told him on a recent overseas trips that they were an "utter and abysmal failure."

The record is quite to the contrary, as Mr. Patterson points out. The expressed opinions of Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur and others "do not support any such conclusion. The War Department is proud of its troops and that includes Negroes as well as other groups."

Mr. Patterson added that General Eisenhower had commended volunteer Negro platoons in Europe and that the Army's inspector general had praised the work of the 24th Infantry Regiment, a Negro outfit, in the Marianas.

56n-1945 Foreign Service

Ninth Army Yanks Have Justified Integration

Afro-American Pgh., Pa.

6-30-45 Pittsburg Courier

By THEODORE STANFORD, Courier War Correspondent

NINTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Germany—In the opinion of Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson, commanding general of the Ninth U. S. Army, Negro combat soldiers in the ETO have more than vindicated the labors of those who have fought to secure a more democratic integration of colored fighting men into our Armed Forces.

The tall, thin-lipped Texan expressed this view recently during the course of an exclusive interview for The Pittsburgh Courier, held here deep in the heart of conquered Germany.

In the process of our seventy-five-minute conversation, which I left with the rueful feeling that I had maneuvered into the position of doing most of the talking, the general managed to say little more than an occasional "yes" or "no."

But when I sat down later to try to figure out just why I felt so good about the whole thing, I discovered that each one of the general's monosyllabic answers fitted into exactly the "right" place. And, what was more important, I remembered that each of those answers had been delivered with a sort of controlled emphasis and warmth of personal feeling which conveyed the impression that the speaker was profoundly sincere.

The room in which General Simpson received me was spacious, high-ceilinged, and sparsely furnished. On entering the room, the general put me at my ease immediately with a friendly handshake and a polite inquiry concerning the health of my executive editor. "I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Prattis down at Camp Walters, Texas, before I came overseas," he explained without the slightest show of patronage. "I hope you will be kind enough to remember me to him when you write." He seated himself behind the neatly arranged desk, offered cigarettes, and relaxed with a pleasant: "Now, for the interview."

NEVER BEFORE LED NEGRO TROOPS

In answer to my first questions, General Simpson revealed that he was born at Weatherford, Texas, on May 19, 1888; that he is married, and that he was graduated from West Point in the class of 1909. His first experience as a commander of Negro troops occurred during this war, when he was placed in charge of colored soldiers at Camp Walters, Texas. He has never, personally, led Negro combat troops into battle.

It was a beautiful morning. Leaning back comfortably in my over-stuffed American-looking armchair, I inquired casually: "As a result of your experiences as commanding general of the Ninth Army, do you believe that—given similar training facilities and similar weapons—Negro soldiers make as good combat troops as white soldiers?"

6-30-45

Apparently a man of few words, the general answered simply and without hesitation: "Yes."

"In the face of such splendid camaraderie and teamwork as has been exemplified by the white doughboys of the Thirty-fifth Infantry Division and the Negro tankmen of the 784th Tank Battalion," I continued, "do you believe that there is any truth to the story that there are basic differences between the two races which make it impossible for white and colored soldiers to fight together successfully against a common enemy?"

(The Thirty-fifth and the 784th were both elements of General Simpson's own Ninth Army. The white doughs had ridden atop the Negro tanks during the savage fighting from the Roer River to the Rhine, early this year. Like most infantrymen, these doughs had held a pretty poor opinion of tanks and tankmen. But after going into battle with the 784th, these white doughfeet stood up and told the world that those colored boys were the best tankmen in the ETO. They topped it off by saying that, from then on, they didn't want to ride into battle on anybody else's tanks. And when the Ninth Army made its historic jump-off across the Rhine and proceeded to chew up the Ruhr Valley, the colored tankmen and white doughboys were still an unbeatable combination. General Simpson knew these facts as well as I did.)

The general smiled faintly, but there seemed to be a note of quiet satisfaction in his voice as he answered briefly, and without comment: "No."

TAN YANKS HAVE JUSTIFIED INTEGRATION

Frankly beginning to wonder just how far Weatherford, Texas, is from the town where Martin Dies was born, I pressed another question: "Do you feel that the record of the Negro combat soldier in the European Theatre of Operations has amply justified the faith of those white and colored Americans who have fought for increased democratic integration of colored fighting men into our Armed Forces?"

Again I got a brief, emphatic "Yes."

6-30-45

For a while, we discussed some of the questions that I had found close to the hearts of many of the Ninth Army's colored fighting men. Was there any reason to believe that at any time in the near future there would be a relaxation of the "official Army policy" of permitting only an inadequate number of Negroes to serve as commissioned officers of the line? The general wasn't quite sure whether the situation was the result of "official Army policy" or not. He suggested that perhaps the answer could best be secured from some person high in the War Department.

In combat outfits—where the loss of white junior officer personnel often had been heavy—had it been the "official policy" to fill the vacancies through the importation of new white officer personnel, or were qualified Negro non-coms regularly up-graded to these commissions through "battle promotions?" The general didn't have the statistics at hand to justify an authoritative reply. Such details usually were taken care of by the commanding officers of the units concerned.

ADEQUACY OF NUMBER OF OFFICERS

Did the general feel that the number of commissioned Negro officers in the Ninth Army was either adequate or proportional to the number of colored troops involved? The general didn't have the exact figures at hand. He explained how difficult it was for him, at the top of the Army, to keep a precise picture of the changes that were going on constantly down through the smallest units. I could see that he was vaguely troubled, though, as he began to grasp the interlocking logic behind my proddings. As I switched the conversation to another subject, I had the feeling that the general would probably launch a quiet little investigation into some of the racial patterns of the Ninth Army, soon.

"Do you feel that increased reportage of the splendid sacrifices and achievements of colored combat soldiers of the Ninth and other American armies would help to foster greater interracial goodwill in the United States?" I asked.

The general brightened perceptibly as he replied: "I do."

LIKES COURIER—S. Sabavala, correspondent for the Bombay Chronicle, is an accredited press representative to the United Nations Conference in San Francisco. He expressed enthusiasm over his first copy of The Pittsburgh Courier.

MOST SERIOUS MORALE PROBLEM

6-30-45

"What," I inquired, "do you consider to be the most serious problems of morale among the Negro soldiers of the Ninth Army?"

"You know," the general answered quite innocently, "when I heard that you were coming to see me, I went around and asked if we had any serious morale problems among our colored soldiers. And, so far as I have been able to determine, we don't have any."

I had asked that question deliberately. Out of my own personal experience, I knew that there was a serious problem of morale among the Negro fighting men in one section of the Ninth Army, and I wanted to see if the general was aware of it.

While the 784th Tank Battalion was still engaged in battering down Nazi resistance in the Ruhr Valley, a number of its men had been called to headquarters under suspicion of charges of rape. They were forced to parade back and forth several times, in the presence of a group of their white officers, while a couple of German women attempted to make up their minds as to the identity of the soldiers whom they alleged had violated them.

A NASTY SITUATION

It developed into a nasty situation. The Negro tankmen didn't like the idea, at all. In the first place, the German women were pretty poor specimens. Secondly, some of the men whom the women "identified" were known to have been actually on duty and accounted for at the time of the alleged attack. Further, it was reported that one of the girls who hollered "rape" was discovered to still be a virgin when she was examined by Army medical authorities. So the boys got mad and told everybody, including their white commanding officers, just what they thought about the whole affair. Some of them told me that it seemed as if the Negro tankmen were being treated as enemies, instead of the Germans. Morale dropped to the lowest point that I had seen.

It was against this background that I inquired of General Simpson: "What has been the record of the Ninth Army's white and colored soldiers, insofar as rape cases in Germany have been concerned?"

"A number of cases, both white and Negro, have been reported," the general returned. "All of them have been subjected to careful investigation, and some of them have been dropped."

6-30-45

Questioned concerning the proportion of Negro cases, he replied that he did not have statistics at hand, but that he knew that the number of reported Negro "rape" cases had been in the minority.

Asked if his army had been forced to cope with white and Negro rape cases in other countries through which it had passed, the general replied in the affirmative.

"However, I wish you would make it clear to your readers," he added with a note of concern in his voice, "that we have not had to deal with any wholesale rape cases, either in Germany or elsewhere. There are always a few irresponsible soldiers who have to be dealt with everywhere. But our non-fraternization policy is being made to work in Germany, and this rape business has been kept at an absolute minimum."

FRATERNIZATION LABELLED RAPE

I had found that many Negro soldiers were inclined to doubt the charges of rape hat were being leveled at some of their comrades of color. They believed that some of their fellows who were actually guilty of fraternizing with German women finally wound up by being charged with "rape" instead of "fraternization." When I mentioned this point to General Simpson, he reminded me that all such cases are tried by court-martial. He assured me that he had every reason to respect the decisions of the officers who sit in such tribunals.

I voiced the question that I had been saving for the last: "In your opinion, have the performances of the Negro soldiers in this war proved them to be worthy and capable of being democratically integrated into any and every branch of our Armed Services, under any program of national peacetime military conscription which the Government of the United States may adopt?"

The general's face relaxed into one of those thin smiles that seemed to invite me into his fullest confidence. And again he gave me one of those one-word answers that had the happy gift of falling into just the right spot. He answered: "Yes."

Half-Million Negro GIs Fight Overseas

Chicago Defender 6-30-45

WASHINGTON.—Negro GIs on the fighting fronts are one-half million strong, the War Department disclosed this week.

By the end of February, 1945, there were 690,282 Negroes in the Army, and 497,566 of them were overseas. On March 31, our men in the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard numbered 35,760.

Officially confirming the Defender's exclusive story several weeks ago on the number of casualties in the 92nd Negro Division, the release numbered this division's casualties at 3,161, suffered during fighting in Italy from last September to V-E Day. Of the 3,161, 330 were killed, 2,215 wounded, and 660 missing.

No casualty figures are available on the other Negro division, the 93rd, which is in the Southwest Pacific. 6-30-45

Tan Yanks to Form 10.4 PC of ETO Occupation Force

Afro-American - Balt., Md.
6-30-45

WASHINGTON

Colored troops will compose 10.4% of the U.S. Army of Occupation in Germany, according to a ETOUSA headquarters report published in the June 14 Paris edition of Stars and Stripes.

The great majority of these troops will be members of service units "performing their primary mission," it was revealed, though it has not yet been determined which colored units will remain as occupation forces.

The 10.4 percentage is the standard one, set by Congress and used by the War Department in computing the proportions of colored persons in the U.S. Army. The proportion is not standard for all theatres, however.

Total 8.4% in ETO

Since the AEF arrived in the European Theatre of Operations, the proportion of colored troops of total U.S. forces has averaged 8.4%, and that percentage has been maintained, with small fluctuation, to the present time.

As of May 15, there were in the ETO 259,173 colored troops of a grand total of 3,082,142 U.S. personnel here at that time.

This figure was broken down as follows:

Field Forces	84,681
USSTAF	11,867
Com Z	155,530
Non-operating	7,095

Only 4% of Field Forces

Non-operating includes patients, PW's and casuals; field forces include Army Groups, armies ETOUSA and SHAEF Hq. personnel; and USSTAF represents service troops of the air forces.

Comunication Forces

Until recently, approximately 25% of Com Z (Communication Forces) troops were colored, while field forces were made up of 4% colored personnel.

These figures, however, do not include the Mediterranean Theatre where there was a higher percentage of colored combat troops, including one infantry division, the 92nd.

To Return 10.4% to States

Under redeployment plans, the Army intends that 10.4% of all U.S. personnel returned to the U.S. for demobilization shall be colored troops.

Declaring that 10.4% represents the goal, Col. C. W. Powell, head of Troop Division, Redeployment Branch of G3 at ETOUSA, stated "We will not necessarily reach this figure, but we are aiming at it."

Figures obtained from the AG section, ETOUSA, revealed that the increase of colored troops in this theatre roughly corresponded with the increase of all U.S. forces in Europe.

Half Overseas on D Day

Thus, on May 31, 1944, one week before the invasion of Europe, there were 126,877 colored soldiers in the theatre, divided as follows: Field Forces, 21,156; USSTAF, 10,062; Com Z, 95,659.

Among the colored units which participated in the Normandy landings on June 6 were the 320th Anti-aircraft Barrage Balloon Bn., 490th Port Bn., 494th Port Bn., 582nd Engineer Dump Truck Co., and the 3683rd QM Truck Co.

Nineteen other colored combat units saw service in Europe during the campaign. They were: the 333rd FA (Field Artillery) Bn., 349th FA Bn., 350th FA Bn., 351st FA Bn., 777th FA Bn., 686th FA Bn., 969th FA Bn., 999th FA Bn.;

Two Get Unit Citations

761st Tank Bn., 784th Tank Bn., 614th Tank Destroyer Bn., 827th Tank Destroyer Bn., 183rd, 184th, 1696th, 1697th, 1698th and 1699th Engineer Combat Bns.

Two units received Presidential Unit Citations. One was the 969th FA Bn., which was cited for its action in Bastogne, Dec. 18-27th when it fired in support of the cut-off 101st Airborne Div.

The third platoon of "C" Co. of the 614th Tank Destroyer Bn. received the citation for "outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy" at Climbach, France, Dec. 14.

HALF MILLION NEGRO TROOPS SERVE OVERSEAS

Chicago Daily Defender
Feature

Washington, D. C., June 20 (AP)—Almost half a million Negro soldiers are overseas, the army reported today. 6-21-45

It said that as of Feb. 28, there were 690,282 Negroes in the army, with 497,366 overseas. As of March 31, there were 35,760 Negroes in the navy, marine corps, and coast guard.

One of the army's two Negro divisions, the 92d, with normal strength of about 14,500, suffered 3,161 casualties during fighting in Italy from last Sept. 1 to V-E day. The total included 330 killed, 2,215 wounded, and 660 missing. 6-21-45

No casualty figures are available, the army said, on the other Negro division, the 93d, which is in the Southwest Pacific.

White Group Calls Remarks "Rank Calumny"

Atlanta, Ga.

Appalled By Grossly Unjust Congress Talk

Atlanta Daily World

NEW YORK— (S N S)— The American Veterans Committe has registered a vigorous protest against the slurring remark against Negro troops made by Senator Eastland on the Senate floor recently.

7-8-45

In a telegram sent to Senator James Mead, Senator Robert F. Wagner and Senator Albin Barkley, the chairman of the new veterans organization, Charles G. Bolte stated, "The American Veterans Committee is appalled by the grossly unjust statement on Negro soldiers made on the floor of the United States Senate last Friday."

RECALL IS URGED

In protest to the remark of Senator Eastland of Mississippi that Negro troops had been "an utter and abysmal failure" the telegram continued, "As men who have fought beside Negro troops on every front we know this to be a rank calumny on the heroism of our colored fighting men, and urge you to recall to the Senate and the people the individual and unit accomplishments of our Negro troops."

The American Veterans Committee with executive offices at 554 Madison Ave., in New York, is a new organization for men and women veterans of World War II. Its Statement of Intentions sets a definite policy against discriminations based on race, co' - or creed.

TOLEDO, O.
BLADE
Cir. D. 167,963

JUL 19 1945

FIGHT ENEMY, NOT US

To the Editor of The Blade:

Have we not suffered enough? Have we not lost enough men to realize that sufferings are always main factors in life? I need not tell you what the main factor in life is. We know it is love and love has no substitute.

Our Negro soldiers are fighting and dying on lonely battlefields. Loved ones are crying for some may never return, and, should they return, they are not as they left, physically or mentally. We call it humanity but it is insanity to have to pass laws for FEPC.

Why should we vote for righteousness when God gave all the same amount of love? He died for all. He gave man five senses and certainly we need to use one of them. Our late Franklin D. Roosevelt knew this bill is what we are fighting for and need. That is why he put the thought into action.

We may as well face the fact of what Senator Bilbo is driving at. It isn't that he objects to the bill if it meant all but Negroes; but that is the reason he and others fight against it and because of that, this war has just begun in our own United States, and United means "together we stand, divided we fall."

Instead of worrying about our enemies, they are worrying about the Negro. The Bible has and shall be fulfilled. We couldn't hold the waters back when the floods came.

They couldn't stop Moses from leading his people.

Let's fight our enemies and not among ourselves. We're fighting for love and freedom. The rest of life's rewards shall be given us accordingly.

AUGUSTA HARRIS HOWARD,
No. 39, Port Lawence.

MORE ABOUT BILBO'S KIND

Editor: In re the remarks made in the U.S. Senate against your race I wish to remind you that we have, unfortunately, as members of the white race, some crackpots. However, these fascists are on the way out—dying of their own self-created poisonous minds. These people may slur you and criticize the good Christians amongst you, they may villify those of you who are in the uniform of the U.S. serving overseas while they stay at home feathering their own nests, but rest assured these self-ish, cowardly Negro-haters are not representative of the vast majority of Americans.—TED COLLINS, U.S. Marine.

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA.
EXAMINER
Cir. D. 6,019

JUL 4 - 1945

USE BOTH YARDSTICKS

Two yardsticks have to be used in evaluating the Negro soldier on the German war front. The division in Italy which broke so badly is one. The replacement platoons which accredited themselves so well when used (about one-third Negro to two-thirds white) in the American First army is the other. It is as unfair to condemn the Negro soldier because of one as it to misinterpret his fine performance in the other unwisely. If used properly the two yardsticks will enable us to use the Negro to better advantage in this war and in any future ones, if any. Both prejudice and promotion are bad bases for plannind with and for Negroes.

The Voice

FASCISTS IN SWAN SONG

Editor: Judging from the recent hate letter which has been received by your paper and the poison columns which are published by the leading Metropolitan papers thruout the country, our bigoted, nazi- and fascsit-minded Americans know that the future of world domination is ended for the so-caled "superior" races. In order to stem their complete downfall, one finds a sudden onrush of propaganda slurring Negro soldiers, whose valiant records need not be questioned, and accusing everyone who speaks for the people of being communistic.—SGT. VINCENT A. SHIELD, Fort Dix.

* *

BILBO NO JOKE 7-28-45

Editor: I never thought it possible that people who call themselves civilized and intelligent could be so ignorant. Ordinarily I would just have said that that guy Bilbo is certainly stupid; but it has come to the place where I can no longer look on him as a joke. It directly concerns my life and the lives of thousands of my youthful colleagues.—ALMA THREADGILL.

N.Y.N.Y.

56n-1945
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INDEPENDENT
Cir. W. 18,054
JUN 2-1945

Again Our Boys Have Proven Themselves

Every Negro citizen in America should be proud of the record our boys on the fighting fronts have made. This week the War Department announced that the Negro troops who fought side by side with white soldiers in the European war theatre would be sent along with the First, Second, Ninth, 78th, 99th, and 104th Infantry Divisions of the First Army to the South Pacific to continue the battle against our enemies.

General Courtney Hodges, as well as other high ranking Army officials, has repeatedly lauded the valor and soldierliness of the Negro troops who volunteered to go into battle lines with their white buddies when the going was tough. Better still is the acclaim that these boys received from their buddies who received them as companions in arms.

These men have accomplished the impossible. Their comrades have without demonstration given them the democracy they deserved and which was their right as American citizens.

The acts and rewards of these boys are but examples of what every American Negro wants to give and receive. Despite the thought and fear of many white people that Negro citizens want citizenship equality only to displace them and revamp the government for the benefit of Negroes, these heroes of ours have demonstrated that they merely want to be citizens—no more and no less.

America's post-war planning might be more easily accomplished if Negro citizens were as completely absorbed into the national pattern and give their share of the burden in running the affairs of this our nation. Nothing, not even the heavy responsibility of official governmental business, could compare to the willingness of citizens to put their shoulders to the wheel and their life on the line to push the heavy machine of war through to a victorious conclusion.

Too much official energy is expended by reluctant reactionaries fighting the admission of Negro citizens to their full citizenship benefits. Too much effort is being exerted to villify the Negro race in the eyes of the world. As strange as it may seem these very acts of degradation are boomeranging in a manner that is making friends for our racial group rather than enemies.

Exemplary conduct of these boys facing death on the battlefields brought the dividends and this is an object lesson to the Negro civilian. Just as the good conduct of those boys in uniform caused this barrier to be lowered, so can good conduct in civilian life cause other barriers to be removed. In this respect we Negroes have our fate in our own hands and no amount of pleading with members of the other race will change this.

When our young folk do more than is required of other groups in the manner in which they deport themselves publicly; whose those who are criminally inclined are brought down to a below the normal percentage in our racial group; when our leadership shows that it, too, can be unselfish, then and then only will we Negro citizens receive the full reward of complete citizenship. That is true because more is expected of us than any other group. We are thought of as supermen and treated as children.

Our men in the armed services have fought two battles simultaneously and we Negro citizens have profited. Let us not forget. Let us follow through on the pattern they have blue printed and we shall also reap the benefits.

One of the greatest thoughts of inspiration is that these were our young men and boys who have made this record, and in youth lies the hope of the future.

Real Loyalty

THE STORY OF THE real and basic loyalty of Negroes to their native United States, where often the discriminations and injustices have been unbearable, should go down in history as one of the greatest such examples of all time.

Now it can be told in the history books (it probably won't be, however) that should Negroes in the Pacific, European, African or middle-Eastern theaters have been tempted to desert their country for the promises of the enemy in the light of unfair conditions in the homeland, they could have done so with ease.

—O—

The War Department at one time did reveal that Hitler's cohorts, facing the determined 92nd Division in northern Italy, shelled the Buffaloes with propaganda leaflets, calling attention to the world-known facts that the Anglo-Saxons were pretty free in their dispensation of discriminations, segregation and the arts of national bigotry as far as darker races were concerned. The Germans kept up a steady barrage of propaganda along this line for a long time, but the loyal Negroes refused to desert to the enemy in the most important anchor of the Po River front. The entire story of this attempt at Negroes' loyalty to the flag reportedly could fill a large volume.

The Nazis, alert to the many little evils among their enemies, more than likely would have tried their undermining methods before and behind the Siegfried line had not the lightning drives of Patton, Simpson, Hodges and their Red Ball Highway forces blitzed the German storm troopers faster than they could retaliate.

—O—

The most thrilling chapter of the attempts of the enemy to win over black Americans, however, could be written from the Pacific—from Kiska to Bougainville and to Okinawa.

Pacific theater returnees have recounted to this writer many times of the individual and mass attempts of Japanese soldiers to fraternize with American Negro soldiers over the line and thus win advantageous fire positions.

—O—

On Kiska in the Aleutians, a very trustworthy soldier friend of mine informed me upon his return, elements of a forward engineer outfit fell in the hands of a few of the Japanese troops left there to guard this stepping stone to North America. The Japanese are said to have met them with "our black brothers" salutations and to have sent them back to supply port stations with admonitions to "be careful." However, Japanese soldiers were reported later to have put to death every white face they saw and contacted. The enemy, however, couldn't win over the American blacks with the allegedly friendly greetings and they lost Kiska and every other part of the Aleutians chain with the active participation of Negro fighters.

—O—

On Bougainville and in New Guinea, I have been told on several occasions, attempts by the Orientals to "gain a point" with black troops were most numerous, all having failed.

One account stated that the unsuccessfully Japanese tried loud speakers, leaflets and 'high pitched voices in the night" while attempting to impress the American blacks and remind them of lynchings and injustices back home. They freely called Negroes their colored "friends" and asked they join in the effort to rid the Pacific and the world of white domination.

—O—

And yet, despite the rioting over equal opportunity for work privileges, housing and other accommodations of living and earning a living; despite the rantings of the demogogues in Congressional and state assembly halls; despite lynchings and mass mistreatment based solely upon race, creed and color; despite the use of the same instruments of civil, political and moral brutality towards Negroes that Hitler used in Germany toward members of non-Aryan tribes the enemy could not and did not succeed in a single instance to disrupt loyalty of American Negroes.

—O—

Perhaps the historians of World War II will pass over and leave out any reference to the Negroes' part and loyalty to his country in this global conflict. Our organizations, however, should never let that history die. It should be chronicled and displayed under floodlights in every nook and corner of our land. It should command the respect and admiration of our neighbors everywhere. And, this should be the watchword during reconversion, depression and prosperity forever to come:

"Our sweat and blood helped save and preserve our country, our native land. We expect and demand every right and privilege of citizenship. Nothing less, nothing more."

Negro Soldiers In World War 2

CALL — Kansas City, Mo.

8-17-45

The contribution of Negro troops in World War II will be summarized in THE CALL in a series of weekly articles beginning this week.

This week's and next week's articles deal with combat troops. Subsequent articles will deal with Negro troops with the Infantry, the Signal Corps, Chemical Warfare, Ordnance, Medical Corps, Corps of Engineers and Transportation Corps.

WITH U.S. FORCES, European Theater.—Negro troop strength in the European Theater of Operations increased nearly 100 per cent between D-Day and V-E Day, Headquarters, U. S. Forces, European Theater has announced.

One week before the Normandy invasion, there were 133,765 Negro troops in Europe. The monthly increase is recorded in the following figures:

July, 1944	144,546
August, 1944	156,104
September, 1944	169,847
October, 1944	173,112
November, 1944	210,795
December, 1944	219,687
January, 1945	235,332
February, 1945	236,688
March, 1945	250,190
April, 1945	257,267
May, 1945	259,173

COMBAT TROOPS

Slightly under nine per cent of the 259,173 Negro troops reported in the European Theater of Operations on May 15, one week after V-E Day, belonged to combat organizations.

Twenty-two Negro combat units participated in the operations of the American Expeditionary Forces against the Wehrmacht. These were: the 333rd, 349th, 350th, 351st, 578th, 686th, 777th, 969th, 999th Field Artillery battalions; 452nd Anti-aircraft Artillery battalion; 761st and 784th Tank battalions; 614th and 827th Tank Destroyer battalions; 183rd, 184th, 1695th, 1696th, 1697th, 1698th, 1699th and 1700th Engineer Combat battalions.

The 320th Barrage Balloon battalion was the only Negro combat unit to take part in the initial landings on the Normandy coast on June 6. Classified as an anti-aircraft organization, it was the only American unit of its type in Europe but was transferred from the theater before the end of the war.

8-17-45

Bring Balloons Ashore

Men from the 320th Barrage Balloon battalion waded ashore in the early hours of D-Day, struggling with their "flying beer bottles" which they had brought across the channel on LSIs and LSTs of the first assault waves. They brought their balloons to the shorelines, dug in with infantrymen of the first and 29th Divisions and proceeded under fierce enemy fire to erect a protective curtain of silver barrage balloons

List Casualties of Combat Team

Afro-American

Following are the battle casualties of the 25th Combat Team as reported through May 30, 1944:

First Lt. Oscar P. Davenport, 227 S. Campbell St., Tucson, Ariz.

Sgt. Nehemiah Hodges, 4236 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

T/4 James E. Goodnight, 634 Highland Ave., Corapolis, Pa.

Cpl. Lonnie D. Godley, Route 1, Box 242, Hallettsville, Tex.

T/5 Moses S. Davis, Route 2, Macon, N.C.

Pfc. William W. Ash, R.A. Hallifax, N.C.

Pfc. Hugh Carroll, Box 454, Scrulenburgh, Tex.

Pfc. Wash Carter, Route 2, Box 41, Oakwood, Tex.

Pfc. Alfred J. Davenport, 214 S. Seventh Ave., Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

Pfc. Marion D. Darden, 326 Holcombe St., Eastpoint, Ga.

Pfc. Dock DeVane, General Delivery, Ivanhoe, N.C.

Pfc. Johnnie L. Lister, Route 1, Box 192, McCalla, Ala.

Pfc. Edgar Phillips, Route 1, Box 367, Morris, Okla.

Pfc. Joseph Redick, 801 E. Washington St., Syracuse, N.Y.

Pfc. Cosey Rivers, 1600 Pittsburgh Ave., Winston-Salem, N.C.

Pfc. Oginal Ryan, 643 W. O'Brien St., Chicago.

Pfc. William A. Woods, 1205-B 26th Ave., North Nashville, Tenn.

Pvt. James W. Batts, 2434 W. Warren Blvd., Chicago.

Pvt. Willie Bowie, General Delivery, Choccolocco, Ala.

Pvt. Horace Ervin, 1322 Plock St., Dallas, Tex.

Pvt. James H. Hancock, 134 Clay St., Henderson, Ky.

Pvt. Joseph C. Mallory, 183 Harrison St., Paterson, N.J.

Pvt. Robert L. Marshall, Jr., 417 Bedford Pl., Walker Springs, Ala.

Pvt. Deormy Ray, Route 2, St. Pauls, N.C.

Pvt. Sims, 221 Jefferson St., Buffalo, N.Y.

Pvt. Ernest Russell, 321 Slope Ave., Westfield, Ala.

Seriously Wounded in Action

Pfc. Andrew Briscoe, 1304 Presstman St., Baltimore, Md.

S/Sgt. Berry Bullock, Route 2, Taboro, N.C.

First Lt. Charles R. Collins, 4638 Indiana Ave., Chicago.

Pfc. Richard A. Hale, 951 Gilly Ave., Big Stone Gap, Va.

Pfc. John W. Hooten, 108 Bush St., Troy, Ala.

Pvt. Gilbert Johnson, S. Lipper Ave., Higginsville, Mo.

Pfc. Tilmon V. Johnson, General Delivery, Grady, Tex.

Sgt. Oscar Hunter, 962 N. 16th St., Baton Rouge, La.

Pvt. William T. Lasiter, Route 3, Box 68, Chapel Hill, N.C.

Pvt. Quillar Rouser, Parker Hill, N.C.

9-29-45

Pvt. Collie J. Simpson, Scranton, N.C.

Cpl. Charles Washington, 56 Crawford St., Pittsburgh.

T/5 Sanders V. Williams, 3509 Cline St., Houston, Tex.

Slightly Wounded in Action

Pvt. Harvy Baccus, Route 2, Social Circle, Ga.

Sgt. Woodrow Bean, Woodville, Tex.

Capt. Harland D. Bently, 4421 Poppleton Ave., Omaha, Neb.

T/4 John E. Black, Winnett, Mont.

S/Sgt. Sammie H. Black, 1016 Jensen Drive, Houston, Tex.

Pfc. Edward Bradford, General Delivery, Danville, Va.

Cpl. Malcide J. Broussard, 2423 S. Central Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.

Pfc. McKinley Cartwright, 1052 Baker St., Shreveport, La.

Sgt. James H. Cobbs, 607 Maple St., Clearwater, Fla.

Pfc. Paul S. Davis, General Delivery, Lafayette, Ga.

Pfc. Jessie Dickey, Route 1, Mc-Connellsville, S.C.

Pvt. Cumet Ford, General Delivery, Cromwell, Ala.

Pfc. James L. Gaines, Mt., Pleasant, Pa.

Pfc. Clarence Goff, 3310 Short St., New Orleans, La.

Pfc. Paris Handy, Route 4, Box 112, San Augustine, Tex.

Sgt. Benford Hawkins, Rural Route, New Market, Ala.

Pvt. Edward Heyward, 10 Westcott Ct., Charleston, S.C.

S/Sgt. Rosco D. James, General Delivery, Daingerfield, Tex.

Pfc. William Johnson, 3886 3rd Ave., Bronx, N.Y.

Sgt. Will B. Jones, Co. K, 25th Infantry.

S/Sgt. Elijah Kirk, 2610-A Gamble St., St. Louis, Mo.

Pvt. Roosevelt Lewis, Box 147, Crockett, Tex.

Pvt. Charlie McCullough, Route 1, Timmonsville, S.C.

Pvt. Thomas L. Miles, 4125 6th St., North Birmingham, Ala.

Sgt. Will H. Morey, 309½ Broadway St., Greenville, Miss.

S/Sgt. Hue S. Morrow, Box 44, Corcoran, Calif.

Pvt. Elmer Neville, 1501 Greenfield Ave., North Chicago.

Pvt. Willie Nix, Route 1, Box 15, Gordon, Ala.

T/Sgt. Charlie Perry, Jr., 506 E. 18th St., Bryan, Tex.

Pfc. Frank Portee, Jr., Route 3, Clover, S.C.

Pvt. Sye A. Ross, Route 1, Box 48, Buckhead, Ga.

Pvt. Isaac, Serman, Route 1, Box 8, Waynesville, Ga.

Pvt. Troy R. Simmons, Co. K, 25th Infantry.

Pvt. Joseph Spears, General Delivery, Evergreen, Ala.

Sgt. Daniel Thornton, Jr., 314 Beck St., Nogales, Ariz.

Pvt. Clifford Tucker, General Delivery, LaGrange, Ga.

Pvt. David Washington, Box 33, Benoit, Miss.

T/5 Mose Wheeler, Route 2, Box 14, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.

Pfc. Iozey White, General Delivery, Trinity, Tex.

Pvt. George Williams, Jr., General Delivery, Pontotoc, Miss.

Pvt. Samuel Wright, Route 3, Box 151, Littleton, N.C.

56n-1945 Sen. Eastland Foreign Service- Europe

Story of Mass Rape at Stuttgart Pure Fiction

Sen. Eastland's Charges Debunked By the Facts

P.M. N.Y.N.Y.

(Copyright, 1945, by The Newspaper PM, Inc.)

PM Exclusive

STUTTGART, Germany, July 10.—I came here to check a charge made by Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), on the floor of the Senate last week that Senegalese troops of the French Army had 2000 to 5000 German women in the Stuttgart subway and raped them for four or five days.

I don't know where Sen. Eastland got his story, but it must have been—to reverse the customary newspaper phrase—from unusually unreliable sources. There is no subway in Stuttgart. There never have been more than a bare handful of Senegalese troops here, if any at all. And I failed to find a single soul in this city, either Americans or French, or Germans themselves—including the German chief of police—who had ever heard of any mass rape of the kind the Senator described as having occurred either in the non-existent subway or non-existent elevated or anywhere else outside the brain of the Senator's informants. 7-10-45

Stuff for Fable

There do exist certain elements in the situation which, worked upon by fertile and evil imagination, could have given rise to this fable which the Senator reported as fact.

For instance, while there is no subway in Stuttgart, there is, as in most large German cities, an extensive system of underground shelters, including a huge unfinished tunnel through one of Stuttgart's many hills, capable of holding 12,000 to 15,000 people. If Sen. Eastland wants to refer to underground shelters as subways, I don't suppose it is a capital offense; but whether subways or shelters, there is no evidence they were ever used as wholesale brothels.

What Sen. Eastland referred to as "Senegalese" are Tunisians and Moroccans who formed the great majority of the French forces which took the city from the Germans after a hard siege. The Tunisians and the Moroccans are not Negroes, but Arabs; and their only resemblance to American Negroes is that they are also an oppressed people.

Some Figures

A third fact, which undoubtedly contributed to Sen. Eastland's exercise in fancy, is that unquestionably there was a lot of raping going on in the first few weeks of French occupation.

Americans to whom I talked put the figure at "a couple of thousand." The German police chief put the figure at 1500, and he ought to know.

In any case, I must report, to the Senator's undoubted discomfiture, that whatever rapings there were happened one by one, or two by two, which is in strict accordance with the white man's tradition. As evidence, I cite the behavior of certain white troops on all fronts in this and every war in history.

I don't mean here to defend the rape record of the French in Stuttgart. Most Americans to whom I talked—there has been a special detachment of Americans here since a fortnight after the French took the city on Apr. 20—are inclined to blame French officers, who, they say, either were incapable or did not try to control their men.

The facts are that the Arabs are, in essence, commercial soldiers; they have no country to fight for and no ideals, and a home background which consists largely of poverty and ignorance and oppression. What has been happening in Syria for the last couple of months is a perfect symbol of French policy toward colonials.

Sordid Background

Moreover, the whole spirit permeating the French forces in Germany, certainly at first, was one to encourage looting and raping. I do not say this in disparagement or approval; I say it is a fact. The French hate the Germans with an intensity which Americans, whose homeland has never been invaded and who have never suffered under the Nazi yoke, can never hope to understand. 7-10-45

It is easy for us to forget that this is not the first time Germany has attacked France and spilled the blood of millions of Frenchmen. Perhaps here lies one reason why French white officers refused to bestir themselves to control the Arabs, who need control as any people need control who never have been granted an opportunity to learn how to control themselves.

In any case, I cannot understand by what logic Sen. Eastland connects the actions of the French Arabs in Stuttgart with the behavior of the American Negro soldiers elsewhere. The Senator makes the point that the Arabs were wearing American Lend-Lease uniforms. This is perfectly true of the Arabs. The whole French 1st Army, so far as I could see, is wearing American Lend-Lease uniforms, including 100 per cent white colonels and majors who were sitting a couple of tables away from me in the French officers' mess where I had dinner a couple of hours ago.

If the Senator is against Lend-Lease, let him say so bluntly and directly, and not attempt to make a race issue out of a piece of GI cloth.

Again I confess, not having read the Senator's remarks completely, I cannot, in all conscience, catch his drift. If he thinks the actions of the French troops reflect on American Negroes, then he is worse than Hitler, who always considered the Arabs as "honorary Aryans," and for 10 years tried desperately to woo them. Or if he is not being illiterate on racial matters, then he is insisting naively that the Negroes from America can be expected to act the same as Arabs from North Africa because both are living in exactly the same kind of colonial slavery.

Or if the Senator is worried, which seems unbelievable, that Germans will think less of American Negro soldiers because of what happened in Stuttgart, then I can relieve him of his worry. German civilians know the difference between Arabs of French North Africa and American Negroes, even if the Senator does not. The similarity in uniforms does not confuse them at all.

When I asked Max Weber, German police chief of the city, whether experience with dark-skinned Arabs made the people of Stuttgart resent Negroes, he said:

"But they are altogether different. We have seen many of your Negroes in Stuttgart. We like them because they are jolly and sing and laugh. Our children are always playing with them. The only time we fear them is when they get drunk, but to tell the truth, it is always right to fear drunken soldiers, is that not correct?"

I am not trying to uphold this German police official as an expert on racial matters; I'm simply reporting what he said; and Sen. Eastland was so far off the mark when he charged that the American uniform had been brought into disrepute that the fact remains, as one German civilian told me on the street, "When you Americans take over this city from the French, we will greet you with flowers."

Fact Again

I am not saying whether this is to the discredit of the French policy or of American policy; again I cite it merely as a fact.

One of the dozens of people I have spoken to here is Lt. Gen. Augustin Lion Guillaume, the French commander of the Stuttgart occupation forces.

The vanguard of American troops already is moving into the city, and the French will be out within a few days. I don't imagine Gen. Guillaume is very happy about relinquishing this lovely town, but he seemed to be taking it like a good sport. 7-10-45

One of the things he sought to impress upon me over and over again was his deep personal regard for Americans, alongside whom he had been fighting ever since the invasion of southern France. He showed me proudly a sheaf of letters from U. S. divisional corps generals complimenting him and his troops on their contribution to the French-German campaign.

He was, of course, tremendously impressed by Sen. Eastland's charges, which he termed irresponsible and fantastic." And he added with neat French malice:

"I am sure you are aware that Stuttgart was the capital of the Nazis' 'Association of Germans Abroad'—an organization which was devoted exclusively to spreading discord among the Allies and among the peoples of each Allied nation. I wonder whether your Senator may be a belated victim of this Association's propaganda?"

COLUMBUS, O.
OHIO STATE JOURNAL
Circ. D. 59,556

JUL 4 - 1945

Eastland Is Unfair

REGARDLESS of how Senator Eastland of Mississippi feels about the Fair Employment Practice Committee, his attack on our Negro soldiers in Europe was both uncalled for and unfair. What he said is in direct contradiction of Gen. Eisenhower's report on the Negroes in action and as between the two men the public will agree that Eisenhower's statement is more trustworthy than Eastland's

Eastland charged that Negro troops had been "utter and abysmal" failures. The 92nd (all Negro) Division, he went on, proved untrustworthy and worthless.

But, said Eisenhower:

"Negro troops did their duty excellently under heavy fire on Normandy's beaches in a zone of heavy combat and suffered substantial casualties. You may well be proud of the accomplishments of Negro troops."

Moreover, Eisenhower considered the Negro division so good that he had it transferred from Italy to the western front, and that should be proof enough for anyone that Eastland's tirade was nothing more nor less than the typical bigotry so many from the south display, where racial matters are concerned.

Page Eastland

Balt. Md.

More Proof That Miss. Senator Was Wrong

Afro-American

In response to queries on the veracity of Senator Eastland's recent attack on colored soldiers, Francis Yancey, AFRO correspondent in Italy, cabled:

"The 332nd Fighter Group and its attached units have never had a rape case since coming overseas. 7-21-45

"Allied commanders can't give our official figures on British troops, but they hint they are very low, as is the overall number of such cases involving Tan Yanks on the east coast of Italy."

Sen. Russell 'Confirms' Eastland's Attack Story

Atlanta, Ga.
Atlanta Daily World

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Sen. James O. Eastland's mass rape charge against French Senegalese troops was confirmed Sunday by Sens. McFarland (D. Ariz.) and Russell (D. Ga.) Eastland charged that 5,000 German women were raped by Senegalese soldiers in a subway at Stuttgart Germany.

Sens. McFarland and Russell, like Eastland, visited Germany this year on different senate committees. Sen. Eastland, who made his rape charge in the senate on June 29 while opposing FEPC legislation expressed amazement at his Missippi home when contacted about the veracity of his charge.

During his senate harangue against the FEPC, he revealed that he received his story from Jefferson Caffery, American mabassador to France, then aded that its was confirmed by Gen. Devers, then commanding the 6th army and Gen Patch, 7th army commander.

CONFLICT ADMITTED

McFarland, who visited Germany as a member of a senate interstate commerce sub-committee, said he heard the rape story from a "reliable source." Sen Russell, who went to Europe with the joint senate military and naval affairs subcommittee, reported that he heard stories of the alleged rape, but that there was a conflict of details and that he did not determine which was the correct version.

A SHAEF report from Paris last week stated that the story about the rape of 5,000 German women by Senegalese troops was untrue.

7-12-45

"All American liasion officers with the French army corps and lower units which have been in or near Stuttgart at any time have submitted written reports to this headquarters that to their knowledge and belief the incidents such as alleged did not take place," SHAEF declared.

7-12-45

Eastland's rape story involved French Senegalese troops but he also made defamatory charges against American Negro troops, in which he said that they "disgraced the flag of their country." The war department disagreed with him on both points.

"The war department is proud of the record of its troops, which includes Negroes as well as other troops," said Under Secy., Robert P. Patterson. "There have been a number of press releases in the past few months commending the behavior of a number of units made up of Negro troops. General Eisenhower has spoken of the good performance of the Negro troops used as platoons in European Theatre of Operations. The inspector general commented favorably on the performance of the 24th regiment in the Marianas. There have been a number of similar comments."

7-12-45

War Department, SHAEF Statements Spike Solon's Slur

The Informer
Houston, Texas

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) —That Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi is a vicious liar in his charges against American Negro soldiers and French Senagalese soldiers made on the floor of the Senate last week during the FEPC filibuster, is being shown by statements issued by the War Department here and by the Supreme Headquarters of Allied Expeditionary Forces (SHAEF) in Paris.

Houston, Texas

Eastland said Negro soldiers were lazy, would not work or fight, were an abysmal failure, and a disgrace to the flag of the United States. About the French Senegalese soldiers, he accused them of having herded 5000 German girls into a subway and raped them for five days. Eastland said his information came from high ranking American generals.

The War Department, through Undersecretary Robert Patterson at a press conference last week, said this did not express the view of the War Department.

"If any high ranking general has made such a statement," Patterson declared "I have no knowledge of it. You have already heard views of our leading commanders —General Eisenhower, General MacArthur, General Eaker and others—which do not support any such conclusion.

7-14-45

"The War Department is proud of its troops, and that includes Negroes as well as all other groups.

"There have been a number of press releases in the last few months commending the behavior of a number of units made up of Negro troops. General Eisenhower spoke of the good performance of the volunteer platoons that were used in the European Theatre. The Inspector General went out of his way to comment favorably on the performance of the 24th Infantry Regiment in the Marianas, and there have been a number of similar commendations."

From Paris headquarters of SHAEF came a statement that an investigation into Eastland's charges concerning the French Senegalese troops had shown the allegation unfounded.

"American liason officers with the French Army groups and also units which have been in or near Stuttgart at any time have submitted written reports to this Headquarters," said SHAEF, "that to their knowledge and belief the incident such as alleged did not take place."

In the meantime, the Norfolk Journal & Guide wired the President of the United States, in his capacity as Commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy, urging that he make a public pronouncement to set the record straight and to right a "great wrong by a denial of the unqualified and unsupported charge" made by Sen. Eastland.

7-14-45

"Sen. Eastland's sweeping and terrible indictment," said the Journal & Guide telegram, "has shocked and dismayed thirteen million Negro Americans and millions more of fair minded and informed white Americans."

A substitution of the truth for Eastland's canard by the President and Commander-in-chief, said the Guide, would be a public service "of a high and useful character." No word has yet been heard from the President, however.

Southerners Rap Eastland

The Informer
Houston, Texas

NASHVILLE — (ANP) — Prompted by Mississippi Sen. Eastland's scurrilous attack on the heroic record of Negro servicemen on the senate floor, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare sent the following telegram Saturday to the President and to Secy. Stimson and Secy. Forrestal:

"Believing yesterday's statement by Senator Eastland of Mississippi, slurring record of Negro soldiers, does great damage to war effort here and on front lines, earnestly beseech you to set the record straight and call to the attention of the country the real story of the heroism of our Negro soldiers and sailors."

7-14-45

The telegram was signed by Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, liberal organization with thousands of members throughout the south.

Hartford, Conn.
Hartford Times

The Eastland Episode

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

I am speaking on behalf of the colored mothers, wives, sweethearts and those who have loved ones in the service.

7-14-45

If the colored soldiers are no good, as Senator Eastland said a general told him, why not let them all come home? We will be too glad to have them back. The colored soldier must be good. We of the colored race know that, and some of the white, but as the soldier from Camp Lee said in his letter, how can a colored soldier be a good soldier when being trained in these camps having their morale broken? We glory in his spunk.

Richmond, Va.

We were very surprised to see the statement of Mr. Eastland on the front page of any paper, or on the inside. Why doesn't this same editor put some of the letters written against it on the front page? We all know this war cannot be won by one race alone.

7-14-45

A COLORED SOLDIER'S WIFE.
Richmond.

[Editor's Note: The Times-Dispatch has published on its front page a statement by Under-Secretary of War Patterson taking issue with Senator Eastland and quoting commendations of Negro troops by General Eisenhower and others. In addition, we have published many other articles refuting Senator Eastland, including an editorial of our own, letters from white and colored readers, and an article on the front page of one section of the issue of Sunday, July 8, by P. B. Young, Jr., editor of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, quoting accounts by Negro war correspondents concerning the performance of colored soldiers and the praise given them by several generals.]

7-14-45

NORFOLK, VA.
VIRGINIAN-PILOT
Cir. D. 77,505—S. 79,630

JUL 16 1945

Senator Eastland's Wanton Attack

Mississippi's Eastland cut a sorry figure before the Senate last Friday in the harangue in which he stated that Negro troops have proved "an utter and abysmal failure" in this war. Senator Eastland was attacking the Fair Employmnt Practices Committee, an appropriation for which passed the Senate despite the efforts of himself and his fellow Mississippian, Senator Bilbo, to talk it to death. The FEPC appropriation, thanks to more Southern opposition, now is bottled up in the House Rules Committee. Senator Eastland's far-fetched point was that FEPC's rule requiring employers with government contracts not to discriminate against Negro labor impaired the chances of demobilized white soldiers for employment.

Senator Eastland's logic—that FEPC actually means discrimination against whites—is as muddy as the source for his information on the performance of Negro troops. He says only that "high-ranking generals" told him the troops were unsatisfactory. If any generals did tell Senator Eastland what he says they did, these commanders hold precisely the opposite opinion of Negro troops which others from Eisenhower downward have expressed time after time. The 92nd Division, which the Senator singles out for disparagement, has been commanded not only by its commanding officer, Major General Allmond, but by the commanding officer of the Fifth Army, Lieutenant General Truscott, and by the overall commander in Italy, General Clark.

Senator Eastland's generalities about Negro troops are even more unfair than his particular charges. Such nonsense as the statement that they "will neither work nor fight" is completely at variance with the testimony of commanders in every theatre, who have paid tribute to colored Army men both as combat and as service and construction troops. So palpably specious are his charges that they answer themselves. The public will more readily believe the opinion of men like Maj. Gen. Raymond G. Lehman, who cammanded Negro troops on Bougainville:

They have the same courage, the same fear, the same fighting spunk as any other soldier. They are quick to learn and eager to perform.

One can hope with reasonable conviction that Senator Eastland's racial poison is its own antidote.

Guide's Reply To Eastland Draws Favorable Comment

Lou Norfolk Va. Journal + Guide

NORFOLK—Widespread comment was aroused among both white and colored persons by the Journal and Guide's strong and factual reply to the allegations against Negro troops by Senator Eastland of Mississippi earlier this month In addition to the comment and articles published in the Guide, a statement by the Guide's editor, supported by comments of three of its war correspondents, was distributed to the daily newspapers of the country either directly or through the three major news services, Associated Press, United Press, and International News Service. This was widely quoted. Typical of reader reactions are the following letters:

Editor, Journal and Guide: May I commend you for the most excellent article which you prepared for the Richmond Times-Dispatch? I am so glad that this information is being released for publicity. I am sure that it will do a great deal of good.

I enjoy reading the Journal and Guide each week. The articles which you wrote during your recent overseas trip were most interesting an informative.

—THOS. C. ALLEN,
Director, Virginia Council of Churches, Dept. of Interracial Cooperation.
Richmond, Va.

7-21-45

"ANSWER TO A PRAYER"

Editor, Journal and Guide: It was an answer to a prayer to read in the Portsmouth Star, "Guide Editor Takes Issue With Senator."

Every Negro serviceman must surely be grateful to you. He must be grateful that you came to the bat for him, through the press, to defy those who would scorn his success.

Those who are far away from both the sight and thought of a newspaper will in time learn of your gesture of splendor. May they, and we like you, continue to launch forth in a constructive defiance of all injustices against our people.

—(MISS) E. C. RICKS
Churchland, Va.

* * * *

"NARROW-MINDED BIGOT"

Eidtor, Journal and Guide: Your article in the Virginia Pilot this date July 2 carefully read. Also Eastland's statements in other papers.

Having carefully followed the war news of all sectors since the start, I have read nothing but good reports of the colored troops' conduct until this man, Eastland, pops up looking for notoriety.

When the information at hand is properly weighed we will be constrained to believe that Eastland is a potent trouble maker, a narrow minded bigot, and that any statement from him is not worthy of consideration.

I advise letting the matter drop where it is, as the source of the recriminating charges against the colored troops is too small and contemptible to quibble over.

—W. S. CASH.
Norfolk, Va.

* * * *

"EFFECTIVE, DISTINCTIVE"

Editor, Journal and Guide: Yesterday morning when I received my News and Observer with an AP item, captioned "Editor Defends Negro Soldier," it certainly made this old timer feel good so much so that I am accepting this chance to congratulate you for majoring so effectively for the race.

This is a distinctive Scoop for the Guide. Of course you know that I have always been deeply interested in the programs and objectives of your paper, and have been stimulated by its achievements.

—GEO. F. KING
Wilmington, N. C.

* * * *

"FINE STAND"

Editor, Journal and Guide: I clipped the enclosed article from the Raleigh News and Observer. The article was also in the Durham Herald. (The Guide's answer to Senator Eastland.)

My hat is off to you for the fine stand taken.

—C. C. SPAULDING,
President, N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Co.
Durham, N. C.

* * * *

"POINTING THE WAY . . . ."

Editor, Journal and Guide: During recent weeks the Journal and Guide has maintained its usual high position and excellent quality of service at points and on issues of vital importance to our group and to the well being of America.

I send this note to tell you again of my appreciation for all that your paper continues to do in pointing the way toward what we hope will be a better nation and world.

The job, for those who would work at it, may seem at times thankless and discouraging, but I know you to be of the sort that may be depended upon to see it through. More power and success to the Guide and its staff.

—L. H. FOSTER,
President, Virginia State College.
Petersburg, Va.

7-21-45

* * * *

"SITUATION ENCOURAGING"

Editor, Journal and Guide: I have read the Guide the week of July 7 with a great deal of satisfaction. I appreciate very much the stand the Guide has taken on Senator Eastland's very uncomplimentary statement regarding Negro soldiers, and especially do I wish to thank you for the forceful manner in which you have replied to the Norfolk gentleman who is so apprehensive of Negroes starting fights between the races.

Personally, in my contact with both groups here in North Carolina, I am glad to state that the situation seems most encouraging. Again, I wish to thank you and your entire staff for the fine manner in which they give us the news.

7-21-45

—S. B. SIMMONS,
Supervisor Vocational Agricultural Education in N. C. Negro Schools.
Greensboro, N. C.

White Y. Leaders Assail Eastland For Race Baiting

Louisiana Weekly 7-21-45 New Orleans La.

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Richmond, Va., July 18.—Sen. James O. Eastland was bitterly assailed here last week for his race baiting by white YWCA leaders.

A letter, sent him by members of the City-wide Industrial Council of the Richmond YWCA, said: "Dear Senator Eastland:

"We who are doing our utmost to share our responsibility for the war against fascism are indignant that a senator should champion the race-hatred theories of fascism in the halls of congress.

"Your unwarranted injection of race-hatred among our soldiers and those back home is injurious to the united and bitter struggle still to be waged against fascists in the Pacific Theater.

7-21-45

"We demand that you name these generals whom you quote so that they may be exposed to public opinion. Generals with fascist theories cannot be trusted to lead the American people in the fight to destroy fascism.

"In addition, we respectfully urge an adequate appropriation for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, since equality of job opportunity for all minority groups throughout the nation is fundamental to democracy.

7-31-45

"Yours sincerely,

"Members of the City-wide Industrial Council of the Richmond YWCA."

The letter, with signatures of the council members, was forwarded promptly to Sen. Eastland and copies sent to President Truman, Sen. Bilbo of Mississippi and to the United States Wad Department, Miss Dorothy A. Thompson, industrial secretary of the Richmond YWCA, announced.

NEW MASSES
(NEW YORK CITY)

JUL 17 1945

Racism and Veterans

THE American Negro soldier has played a heroic part in the defeat of European fascism and has done so under the most humiliating and insulting circumstances; he returns to this country to find the very ideology he fought to eliminate abroad. The speeches of Senators Bilbo and Eastland against the FEPC deserve Hitler's Iron Cross. These liars from the deep South apparently aspire to be classified among the war criminals. Their reviling of our Negro brothers and particularly of the Negro soldier was a performance equalled only in Hitler Germany.

These American Nazi orators are not the only humiliation the returning Negro soldier must face. The failure of the great body of decent Americans and of their government and of the War Department itself to denounce these slanderous utterances reflects an indifference which is in itself shocking. As Doxey Wilkerson has written in the Daily Worker, "a Senate and a War Department that can tolerate such fascist racism as that preached by Bilbo and Eastland last week, without making vigorous and overwhelming protest, could easily accommodate themselves to the ranting of an American Hitler."

The returning Negro soldier faces other critical problems which he shares with the hundreds of thousands of Negroes who have helped man the home front. Cutbacks, chaotic reconversion, the hostile attitude of many AFL unions, the crass discrimination practiced by such enterprises as the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., place an undue share of the burden which the entire nation faces upon the Negro people. All of this is occurring in the midst of war, when the struggle against the Japanese fascists rises toward its climax. If such things can happen while the war is still on what can we expect when the discipline and restraint of war has been wholly removed?

The American people must rise in revulsion against the fascist racism in our midst. No slur upon the Negro people nor upon any other sector of American democracy can be left unanswered.

Our Negro Soldiers

Courier Journal Louisville Kentucky

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

I feel badly after reading Senator Eastland's tirade. My son belongs to the 92d Division. He was wounded in Italy October 11, 1944. I now have his Purple Heart, also his good conduct ribbon. I know he is far above the accusation that Senator Eastland made.

I also have a son in Hawaii, a machine-gunner. Both boys are highly recommended by the best white people here and in Memphis. They were both students at Le Moyne College and both worked in leading department stores in Memphis.

I am heartily sorry that such a slur has been thrown at our valiant Negro soldiers when their officers give them high praise. If the Senator had been facing what they have faced and enduring what they have endured, he would be praying instead of thinking evil of the Negro soldiers who were fighting and dying to save him and the rest of us. Many of our homes are saddened by this war as well as the homes of the white people. We have fine Negro boys in the war who deserve praise anywhere and everywhere and I trust that Senator Eastland will make his apologies both to God and the Negro race. 7-19-45

Hickman, Ky. Mrs. WILLI B. ROBERSON.

Here's More Proof That Senator Eastland Lied

Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.

More proof that Senator Eastland (Dem.) of Mississippi willfully and knowingly lied on Negro troops is furnished in a letter sent to Mrs. C. J. Williams of 3425 Erato Street by Major General E. M. Almond, commanding general of the 92nd. In the letter Gen. Almond highly commended the 92nd for its gallant accomplishments in the Italian campaign. The letter in full is as follows:

"APO 92
U. S. Army
8 May 1945

To the Officers and Men of the 92nd Infantry Division and Attached Troops:

The war in Europe is over and the enemy which Allied Forces vanquished here in Italy is imprisoned. 7-21-45

The 92nd Division and its supporting troops have performed splendidly; without the arduous effort and unselfish cooperation on the part of each of you it would not have been possible to secure the results obtained in so short a time. The speed with which our forces reached and occupied Genoa was a distinct surprise not only to the enemy but to our own high command. I am sure there exists in each of you a deep appreciation of a task well done and a satisfaction that will remain with you throughout your lives.

Following an arduous period of preparation and training, our units moved to the Italian Theatre and some six months ago entered active combat. Experience has taught us much and has enabled us, during the past month, to have a part in driving a resourceful, cunning and well trained foe from his chosen defensive positions. Great loss has been inflicted on the 148th German Division and elements of two Italian Fascist Divisions. Three German Infantry Regiments were driven disorganized from the field and the Fascist units were forced to flee in confusion, abandoning their arms. The enemy losses in killed and wounded were enormous and many have become prisoners.

Our great victory has not been achieved without cost to us. Many of our brothers-in-arms have given their lives for their country. I am confident that their sacrifice has not been in vain, because victory is ours! 7-21-45

In this hour of glorious victory, we must remember that the war is not yet over. Another enemy—JAPAN—must be subdued. Whatever may be the future mission of this Division and its attached units, I feel confident that you will all approach it with the same unswerving spirit and determination which you have so gallantly displayed in the past.

My warmest thanks and sincere admiration are extended to each officer and man of this command; I am proud to have led you in combat.

(Signed)
E. M. ALMOND,
Major General, U. S. Army
Commanding."

It goes without saying that the above letter explains many things that such bigoted political leaders as Senator Eastland would like to keep under cover, so that they could more easily put over their hatred for the Negro race. Our greatest hope is that Major General Almond's statement, "I am confident that their sacrifice has not been in vain, because victory is our!" will have a lasting meaning and that the effects of our boys' sacrifice will be felt upon returning to a true democracy, where prejudice and discrimination will not exist. 7-21-45

SEATTLE, WASH.
POST-INTELLIGENCER
Cir. D. 129,550—S. 251,253

JUL 6 - 1945

Loose Talk

SENATOR EASTLAND of Mississippi got himself far off base the other day when, in ranting mood, he asserted that Negro troops "would neither work nor fight."

The suspicion that the senator was moved by political considerations in loosing his ill-advised blast during a filibuster does not make his utterance any the less obnoxious.

The plain truth is that no authorized spokesman for the armed services has ever made any statement, at any time, that would tend to corroborate the Mississippian's irresponsible accusation in the slightest degree.

On the contrary, such statements as have come from accredited sources have had nothing but praise for the contribution of Negro troops to the war effort.

COLUMBUS, O.
OHIO STATE JOURNAL
Circ. D. 59,556

JUL 1 0 1945

Defends Negro Troops

Editor Ohio State Journal:

I regret to think anyone could be so selfish as to say that our Negro troops, or shall I say soldiers, were a failure in doing their part in the battles that were fought in Europe. I thank you for printing this article for perhaps I would never have known what was said as soon as I did. I can think of nothing so low as what one of our senators said about the Negroes that are soldiers and did their part so well.

I heard Ted Malone broadcast from Europe, telling what a grand job the Negro troops were doing. How can people be so ungrateful?

The Negroes have always been a humble, easy-to-understand people. They have never faltered at any task given them to save our country in wars. You know and I know that discrimination, the most deadly weapon, must die out of the white people's hearts before any peace can obtain here or abroad.

In your good conscience I know you hated to print that article in your paper. The way one feels, if our Negro troops haven't been any service in this war it isn't too late to send them home and let the white troops finish defeating Japan.

I think if we all counted our blessings a little bit more we all would be better off. We have no country to back us up, but you can rest assured we put our trust in no man but God. Some day the white people will not have to worry about their Negro citizens, for God will come and take what belongs to Him for He made this world and everything in it belongs to Him.

MRS. EDNA TILLMAN.

COLUMBUS, O.
OHIO STATE JOURNAL
Circ. D. 59,556

JUL 1 0 1945

Negro Troops Brave

Editor Ohio State Journal:

After reading the account of the speech delivered by Senator Eastland of Mississippi against the FEPC to the Senate, I felt it my duty as a Negro to voice my opinion of the vicious tirade publicly voiced by the "honorable" senator.

It is indeed regrettable that a man, elected to the U. S. Senate, should be so low in principle, so lacking in decency, as to utter words which every fair-minded citizen of the country should consider a gross insult. Even more lamentable is the realization that the thousands of Negro soldiers who have worked, fought and died, have made sacrifices so that men of Senator Eastland's class could remain free to revile and slander them.

I would like to know the names of the "high-ranking generals" who informed Senator Eastland of the disgraceful incidents he takes such obvious delight in reciting. I cannot bring myself to believe that there are any American generals who would make the statements attributed to them by Eastland, ignoring the record of Negro troops who built the Ledo Road, under the most dangerous conditions, who have fought valiantly and died bravely in France, Germany, Italy and the South Pacific.

Senator Eastland is desperately fighting to defeat the FEPC which would curb racial discrimination in industry. He has the nerve to say that he is not prejudiced; he only wants to keep the Negro from securing profitable jobs; he only wants the public to scoff at Negroes in uniform and he only wants to preserve the southern brand of "democracy" in regards to the Negro population.

I sincerely hope that the Senate passes the FEPC bill and soundly defeats Senator Eastland and his race-baiting colleagues.

EDNA M. STINSON.

Spreaders Of Hate

DAYTON, OHIO
Dayton Herald

To the Editor of The Herald:

Senator Eastland recently made a number of violent attacks on Negro soldiers. He claimed to get his information from army sources which he did not name. Eastland is preaching hate. 7-26-45

The complete refutation of his charges is contained in statements by our highest ranking generals. Eisenhower, Patton, MacArthur, Clark, Eaker, Truscott, Eddy and Almond have publicly testified to the valor and devotion of Negro troops they have commanded. Certainly these generals know more about the subject than Eastland or his informants (assuming that these latter exist). 7-26-45

Let the American people understand that purveyors of hate like Eastland do not spread false rumors just to hear themselves talk. Nor yet because they believe the rumors to be true. No, they are trying to sell a bill of goods to a public which they believe to be extremely gullible.

Such gentlemen have a purpose. It is to achieve exactly what would be achieved if the public swallowed their bait; namely, further disunity among the American people. Senator Eastland owes his office to the poll tax which, in turn, owes its existence to disunity created by spreaders of hate. The poll tax is of benefit to Eastland and his ilk but not to the big majority of Southern white people, for it disfranchises 50 per cent more of them than it does of Negroes.

It must be said that in the North, too, we have inciters to hate and they are not wholly unsuccessful in their search for dupes. These inciters consist in part of American fascists like Gerald L. K. Smith but also of a reprehensible minority of chiseling employers who know that if they can fan up enough hatred and separate the white and black populations far enough, then they can use each group as a club to beat down the wages of the other—hiring Negroes if the whites don't like those wages and threatening to hire whites if the Negroes complain.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.
JOURNAL
Cir. D. 25,026
JUL 17 1945

Points Out Work Done By Negro Soldiers

To the Editor of The Journal:

You are to be commended for your editorial taking Senator Eastland to task for his false and bigoted statements about the record of Negroes in the present war. How ridiculous his statements are will be clear to anyone who has read the thrilling account of the bravery and heroism of Negro stewards on the Franklin in those hectic hours, while she burned fiercely, after the Jap suicide attack.

The account was given by the chaplain on board the Franklin, Joseph T. O'Callahan, in his article: "I Was a Chaplain on the Franklin" (America, June 9.) This is what he says:

"There was a group of steward mates on board, Negroes, and every one of them who remained aboard (remember that many were blown overboard) did a really magnificent job. It was primarily due to their help that our executive officer was able to get a towline from the Franklin to the cruiser Pittsburg, which was standing by. The towline was a terrific weight. There the gang was, lined up shoulder-to-shoulder, officers and men, black and white, sweating and straining, and all afraid. The towline was not to be budged. I have read about things like this, and been rather blase and skeptical, but there on the deck of the Franklin that afternoon, it really happened. All of a sudden, uncertainly and slowly at first, but gathering volume until it pierced the roar of flames, those Negro men started an impromptu chanting, making up the words as they went along. It was almost a Negro spiritual and, as the rhythm of their voices found certainty, the rhythm of the gang's muscles and sinews started to work together, and that heavy towline we hadn't been able to budge, started to move, how, God alone knows; but it was certainly the Negro stewards who led the way to a really superhuman job. All through the day, and most of the night, those Negro men worked magnificently on the deck, and very few people know that when the early morning of the 20th came, a half dozen of them came with me below decks, a little more hesitant than I—and so more credit to them—foraging for food for the crew, groping in complete darkness in compartments that might well be a trap. They had worked all day and night as firefighters, in an extreme emergency; when the fires were partially under control they sank once more; unobtrusively and simply, into their humble role of providing food."

The above words speak volumes for the courage and loyalty of the Negro soldier. One great injustice of this war is that the press and movies have remained singularily silent when it comes to dishing out a little credit to our Negro soldiers.

—FR. MARTIN J. COLLINS.
Winston-Salem, N. C.
July 16, 1945.

EDITOR DEFENDS NEGRO SOLDIERS

Quotes Tributes Paid to Negro Troops in Italy by American Generals

Norfolk, Va., July 3.—(AP)—That "high ranking generals" furnished Senator Eastland (D-Miss) with information upon which he bases his charge that Negro troops have been "utter and abysmal failure" is difficult to imagine in view of the high praise which our top generals publicly have accorded those same fighters, P. Bernard Young, Jr., editor of the Journal and Guide, Negro weekly newspaper, said in a statement issued here.

He said Generals Dwight Eisenhower, George Patton, Mark W. Clark, Ira C. Eaker, Lucien K Truscott, M. S. Eddy and E. M. Allmond had "publicly furnished testimony on the valor and performance of Negro soldiers that repudiates the statements by the Mississippi Senator."

Young's statement was in answer to an assertion by Eastland, who said Friday that "high ranking generals" had told him that Negro troops "are utter and abysmal failures," and that the 92nd (Negro) Division "could not be placed in an important position in the line. If all our divisions had been like it, the Germans would have pushed us to the toe of the Italian boot."

Lem Greeves, Jr., one of the Norfolk newspaper's correspondents serving overseas with Negro combat units, quoted Lt. General Truscott in a Memorial Day interview at Anzio as saying that "Negro artillery, tank, reconnaissance, tank destroyer, combat engineer, ordnance and the quartermaster troops who have served in this theater under my command have done an exceptionally good job."

Greeves said that in another interview the general told reporters that the best general service engineer regiment in his command had been the 92nd Engineer Regiment. "These men were credited by the general with having made possible the Allied assault on Bologna which resulted in the quick ending of the war in Italy," the correspondent added.

Greeves also quoted Lt. General Eaker, acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces, as saying that he had followed the exploits of the 99th (Negro) fighter squadron based near Naples and he was convinced they were "qualified, capable and courageous.

"I have confidence that you can do any job we have to do here. I have arranged for you to be transferred to the 15th Air Force. I have given you the best airplane made and judging by the excellent record you have made, you will do a fine job." Greeves quoted the general.

DAYTON, O.
NEWS
Circ. D. 75,877 - S. 78,997
JUL 19 1945

Generals Defend Negro Troops' Valor

(P. Bernard Young Jr., Editor of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, in the Richmond Times-Dispatch)

Generals supposedly furnished Senator Eastland of Mississippi with the purported facts upon which he based his amazing charge that Negro troops in this war have been an utter and abysmal failure. This is an accusation that is difficult to imagine, in view of the high praise which our top generals, in all major theaters of operations, have publicly accorded those same fighters.

Senator Eastland's charge not only is refuted by famous American generals, but is rebutted by three war correspondents of the Journal and Guide, who, among them, have spent 28 months in active war zones.

Before the European war ended, or since they have returned to this country, Gens. Eisenhower, Patton, Clark, Eaker, Truscott, Eddy and Almond have publicly furnished testimony on the valor and performance of Negro soldiers that utterly repudiates the sweeping claim by the Mississippi senator. Was it these generals to whom Senator Eastland says he talked?

Gens. MacArthur and Lehman, Navy Secretary Forrestal and others have similarly rated the Negro soldier and sailor highly for performances in the Pacific.

The Journal and Guide's war correspondents, Thomas W. Young, Lem Graves Jr. and John Jordan, on the basis of their first-hand experience with our troops in combat, took sharp issue with Eastland's unqualified indictment. Each cited favorable appraisals of colored service men by famous combat generals.

In regard to the senator's direct reference to the Ninety-second Division, Correspondent Graves said: "Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, who commanded it, declared on the day after V-E day that his artillery, tank and engineer units had maintained throughout the final phases of the Italian campaign the same magnificent performance for which they were previously cited."

"The colored soldiers are doing a damn good job," Gen. Clark told Jordan in September, 1944. He was referring to the Negro enlisted men of the 370th regiment of the Ninety-second division, who were fighting Germans in the mud and mountains along Italy's west coast.

"Has the Mississippi senator," the correspondent continued, "ever glanced at the casualty figures of the Ninety-second Infantry division? Has he ever bothered to note how many enemy prisoners these colored troops were able to take while in their so-called unimportant position in the Fifth Army line?"

Correspondent Young called attention to the record of the 761st Tank battalion which fought with the Third, Seventh and Ninth armies through France, Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and Germany. He pointed out that several officers and men have had two and three tanks shot or blown from under them.

Maj. Gen. Eddy, commanding one of the army corps with which it fought, told Young: "I consider the 761st Tank battalion to have entered combat with such conscious courage and success as to warrant commendation. The speed with which they faced some of Germany's finest troops, and the confident spirit with which they emerged from their recent engagements entitle them surely to consider themselves the veteran 761st."

Maj. Gen. Raymond G. Lehman, commander of the Ninety-third Infantry division fighting on Bougainville island, said of his men:

"They have the same courage, the same fear and fighting spunk as any other soldier. They are quick to learn and eager to perform. They can give and take, and they are about the best disciplined in the army."

Young recalled Lt. James B. McCullin and Sherman White, who took off on July 2, 1943, at the controls of P-40 Warhawks protecting American bombers with white crews in the assault on Sicily—and Lt. Paul G. Mitchell, who flew from a field in Sicily, after the island was invaded, in August of the same year, to dive-bomb enemy troops and installations—and Lt. Sam Bruce, who fought so spectacularly in the air defense of the beachhead at Anzio in January, 1944—and Capt. Erwin B. Lawrence, who flew his fighter plane over Yugoslavia to strafe the nazis.

"These men would be surprised and a little bitter if they ever heard about the senator's statement, but fortunately they will be spared that suffering, because none of them returned from their missions," he said.

Equality Before the Law

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

May I side with Corporal Fred Peters, being, myself, a newly returned serviceman? "God never made a man to whom He did not give human dignity equal to that of any other man." Why should we not give, to all our country, equality before the law, "a fair start in the race for life"? Indeed, is not a people capable of giving to the world a Carver, a Booker T. Washington, a Robeson, an Anderson, a Wheatly, worthy the respect due any race capable of progress?

We base our government upon the "compact" theory of government; that we form a group for purposes of mutual protection; that we delegate, to persons within the group, a minimum of power assuring respect of what we deem to be mutual rights. It is not a question of the privilege of the few against the many or of the many against the few, but rather of the God-given rights of all.

Senator Eastland is to be forgiven for so great a thoughtlessness, capable—by virtue of one in a high position of trust—of so great a damage to progress.

SGT. HERRICK L. WILSON.
Langley Field.

More About Eastland

Sir: I am a sergeant in the U. S. Army, being redeployed in the staging area for an unknown destination. I am a great admirer of the "Stars and Stripes"—who thought that Nazism only existed in Europe. But, after reading the "Stars and Stripes," dated July 2, 1945, and regarding the remarks of Senator James O. Eastland, of Mississippi, I regret to say that Nazism is also practiced daily in a small colony called Mississippi. It is very difficult to understand why so many lives were lost to preserve Democracy and crush Nazism, when Negro smearing is going on in our own beloved country. If this is the only reward for those dead heroes, then I prefer death.

A Bewildered Sergeant.

GIs In Southern France Write Guide Their Thanks For Reply To Eastland

(See editorial, page 8)

NORFOLK—The appreciation of GIs for the Guide's widely quoted refutation of Senator Eastland's unproved and far fetched allegations against Negro servicemen was warmly expressed in a letter received Monday from "Somewhere in Southern France" and signed by seven soldiers "and many others."

The letter follows in full:

Editor, Journal and Guide: I am writing in regard to your response to the statement made by Senator James D. Eastland (D., Miss.) as to the "utter and abysmal failure of the Negro soldier in this war." I read the Senator's statement, and then yours, in our overseas newspaper (Stars and Stripes). I am a native of Suffolk and, prior to my induction in the service, I was a resident of Newark, New Jersey. In both places I was a constant reader of the Guide.

I am sure that I can express the sincere appreciation of the many colored troops all over the world, as well as myself, to the papers, our friends, and relatives back home for their protests in response to Senator Eastland's statement.

The Negro soldier, in every branch of the armed services, has tried to the best of his ability to do his part in order to help get this war over, so that he too can return to his family and loved ones. I am in a service unit, which is composed of fine officers, and a fine bunch of men. We all know the meaning of cooperation and unity. By this, we get along as one happy family, and have been praised more times than one for our "magnificent performance of duties."

Such praise as this makes a soldier more eager to jump in and give everything he's got toward winning the war. Praises from commanding generals and officers of many colored service troops caused many of the men to volunteer for combat fighting in the Battle of Europe. These men were highly praised by the white troops with whom they fought side by side.

When a man has thought he was doing a good job, and then reads a statement like Sen. Eastland's, he feels as if everything he has done was in vain. I am sure that Sen. Eastland's statement has affected the morale of every colored soldier all over the world. Right away he starts thinking: "If we have been a failure, why don't they let us all go home?"

There are many colored soldiers that have thought of making the Army a career after the war. Does Sen. Eastland realize how his statement makes these men feel? It is obvious that every soldier in the armed forces has the best equipment and gets the best of training. The 92nd Division didn't have special equipment or special training therefore there isn't any reason why they should be expected to outshine any other division.

In order to acclaim victory, every true American has to contribute some effort. So we hope that any statement that Sen. Eastland has to make in the future, he will refrain from making such a statement public.

Again I want to express my sincere appreciation to you and the folks back home for your cooperation in behalf of all of us boys who are trying to do, to the best of our ability, our part to help win this war so all of the soldiers can come home again. We are praying along with you for complete victory in the near future.

(Signed)
S. Pvt. Elson L. Freeman
Pfc. John Bolden Jr.
Pvt. Alvin N. Kearney
Pfc. John Nevins
Cpl. Louie B. Morris
Pfc. Louis Woodard
Pvt. William Webb
And many others. . . .

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
P M
Circ. D. 137,100 - S. 136,912
JUL 19 1945

In Reply to Eastland

Dear Editor:

Sen. Eastland says the Negro soldier is an "utter and abysmal failure." As an officer who has been with them for eight months, I would like to tell the Senator and the rest of America how these "failures" look to us. The Negro does not make as good a soldier as the white man, but the difference is not great and must always be qualified by the phrase "in general." The 92d Division and other colored Doughboys proved that the Negroes in general lacked sufficient education to be good front-line troops. Several tank and TD units performed splendidly, proving that many Negroes were excellent for that work. They were a success and, though far from perfect, I defy anyone to say that any unit which lived and fought up through the misery of Italy was a failure. They accomplished a lot. I think we still judge failure and success by what we constructively accomplish.

I know more about Service troops. I've seen my own men throw up buildings, build POW stockades and wire camps. They sometimes made mistakes (who doesn't) but they did the jobs. Other colored Engineers have done a great part of the ETO construction. Take the QM Truck outfits. They kept whole armies going with the Red Ball Express. They wrecked trucks, but you can't drive trucks as they had to and not have wrecks. Better men could have had less, but there were none to spare and our "failures" did the job.

We know that we don't have the best troops in the world, but to stand up in the Halls of Congress and condemn them as "failures" makes our job of improving them no easier. All of us, including the men themselves, welcome direct and constructive criticism, but the Senator's approach does a lot of harm. Before he condemns others as failures I suggest that he take stock of his own constructive accomplishments and see how his actions have furthered the winning of this war.

If I may conclude with a personal opinion, I am damn proud of any soldier who continues to work and fight as ours do in spite of such criticism. That goes for the Nisei and all the other butts of prejudice. They will go on because they know most Americans still believe in that mixture of decency, Christianity and democracy that makes us, in spite of the Eastlands, a community we can be proud to live in.

JOHN FAYERWEATHER, 2d Lt.
APO, N. Y.

* * *

I am a Negro, and it is an appalling find to have discovered at such a late date, almost two months after the cessation of hostilities in Europe, that the Negro GI failed in his efforts, work, blood, sweat and tears, and even death, to contribute anything to its successful culmination.

Just think, after having served 30 months overseas in a port battalion and a Quartermaster unit, my labor is termed as a recognized failure. Poor nonessential me. Why do I have to stay overseas so long as "an utter and abysmal failure?" Poor Negro GI, who trudged and crawled through the foxholes of Africa, who transported ammunition and supplies through the hellhole of Casserine Pass, who lost an arm or leg flying over Lampedusa, who bled at Cassino, and died at Anzio, has through some misfortune turned up a complete flop.

In honor of these Negroes, who have perished in the clefts of the rock, who have fallen beneath the grasses of the mountainside, who have floated as corpses upon the waters, we shall with a revitalized faith remain unshaken in our progressive stride. We shall exert more effort with a renewed spirit and determined continuity in a struggle to remove this cancer-like statement and combat the danger of its contagion.

France CPL. E. B.

Eastland Still Harps on Rape

Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) is determined that—despite U. S. Army denials and on-the-spot reports giving him the lie—"several thousand" German girls and women were raped in Stuttgart tunnels by French Senegalese troops.

Eastland got up on the Senate floor yesterday to repeat his charge, said he got it from "high and reliable sources" and claimed the Army was concealing the truth. Supporting him were Sens. Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.) Senatorial leader of prewar isolationists, John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.,) and Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.).

All said they also heard the same story from "high authorities" or "responsible sources." One of McClellan's sources was, he said, a general, whom he didn't identify.

Against Eastland's unsupported story, the French Press Agency reports sworn statements by seven U. S. liaison officers attached to the French forces that they had never heard of the supposed mass rape in Stuttgart or of any atrocities committed by the units to which they were attached.

A week ago, PM's Victor Bernstein went to Stuttgart to investigate Eastland's charges. He found:

¶ That no one there, not even the German chief of police, had ever heard of the mass rape described by Eastland.

¶ That there were only a few Senegalese troops in Stuttgart, the majority of French colonial forces there being Moroccan or Tunisian Arabs.

N.Y. Senators Refute Eastland's Slurs, Insert Evidence in Congressional Record

Baltimore, Md.

Afro American

WASHINGTON

The slurs of Sen. James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, upon the performance and conduct of colored troops were proved false on July 6 by Sens. Robert F. Wagner and James M. Mead, both Democrats of New York.

Terming Eastland's attack as unwarranted, the two Senators offered abundant proof that colored soldiers, and sailors as well, had served gallantly and courageously in the armed forces.

Their chief evidence was the statements of commanding officers of various theatres commending colored troops for their heroism in action, official citations, individual awards and decorations, and War Department press releases.

White GI's Appraisal Used

Also offered were articles concerning colored soldiers which appeared in service papers or were written by white service men and published in reputable magazines in this country.

Senator Eastland, whose attack occurred during the filibuster in the Senate against an appropriation for the FEPC, did not attempt to reply to Senators Wagner and Mead, nor did any of his colleagues.

Senator Wagner first pointed out that Eastland had offered no evidence to support his charge that colored soldiers were no good and had "no initiative, no sense of responsibility, very low intelligence, and were a failure."

Eastland's Lack of Proof

Eastland had said that "high-ranking generals," whom he did not name, had given him such reports while he was touring American Army posts in Europe.

"Now, if there were any factual basis to these charges, certainly the War Department and the commanding generals of the Army would know about it," said Senator Wagner. "What are the facts?" he asked.

7-21-45

Senator Wagner then read the statement made by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson at a press conference on July 5 when he was asked whether Eastland's charges represented the Army's views of the performance of colored troops.

War Department's Stand

In that statement, Mr. Patterson said, "The War Department is proud of its troops and that includes colored as well as all other groups."

Continuing, the Senator next quoted from the text of an interview with General Eisenhower at Supreme Headquarters in Paris on June 15.

7-21-45

At that time, General Eisenhower said that the 2,600 colored service troops who volunteered for front-line duty as infantrymen did excellent work and that colored service troops performed equally as well as other service units.

99th and 332nd Praised by Eaker

Citing the reliability of Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces, Senator Wagner read an excerpt from an address General Eaker made to the 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, Ky.

In that address General Eaker said that the 99th Fighter Squadron and later the 332nd Fighter Group carried out the missions assigned to them and "have won a place on the great Air Forces team.

Terming it "unfortunate" that Eastland did not consult the War Department or General Eisenhower or Lieutenant General Eaker before attempting to indict 13,000,000 American citizens," Senator Wagner defended the 92nd Division, which was made a special target of the attack.

Group, Individual Valor of 92nd

"By Apr. 9, 1945," Wagner said, "members of the 92nd Division had received 65 Silver Stars, 1377 Purple Hearts, 4 Air Medals, and 7 Legions of Merit. There were many cases of individual bravery in the regiment."

He then cited Capt. Charles Gandy, posthumously awarded the Silver Star for gallantry, and Lt. Theodore O. Smith of Washington, killed in action in Italy on Feb. 11, one month after he had been awarded the Silver Star.

The award to Lieutenant Smith, the Senator explained, was for his bravery in leading his 14-man patrol on a mission which netted two prisoners and four enemy dead and enabled the Americans to capture a strategically important point.

Charges Against French Hit

Moreover, he added, Eastland, in an effort to prove that all colored people are inferior, charged that Senegalese soldiers from Africa criminally assaulted several thousand German girls in the subway of the city of Stuttgart.

Not only did an inquiry made at the French Embassy and checked with the French High Command bring a categorical denial of this story, he said, but a dispatch from Supreme Headquarters, dated July 6, corroborates the denial.

Repeating that "the Senator from Mississippi charged that these girls were rounded up and placed in the subway in Stuttgart.," he concluded, "I have checked with the War Department and have been informed that Stuttgart has no subway."

Continuing the refutation, Senator Mead said he had talked with commanding officers in the United Kingdom, in North Africa, the Middle East, in the China-Burma-India theatre, in Australia and in the Islands of the Pacific.

Naval officers at Pearl Harbor, he declared, had told him of the heroic deeds of colored seamen when the Japanese made their surprise attack on this Naval base.

Explaining that he could not allow Eastland's attack to pass without saying something in defense—"if defense is necessary, and I thing it is not"—he stated:

Record in All Wars Cited

"I do so primarily because they deserve it, because the actions of the colored troops, all the way from Lexington down to the Battle of Okinawa in the Pacific, warrant the highest commendation of those in our military and civil life."

He then read from a War Department press release announcing the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to 1st Lt. Vernon J. Baker of Cheyenne, Wyo., who killed or wounded nine Germans while knocking out three enemy machine gun nests and an observation post in Italy.

Correction of Ills Recommended

Pointing out that colored troops are in the Pacific islands "waiting to strike the death blow at our common enemy," he termed Eastland's action "untimely and inappropriate, and in my judgment very distasteful."

Then reading briefly from statements by Generals Eisenhower, Patton, Simpson, and Clark, he asked that the statements, "commending colored troops for their heroism in action" be placed in the Congressional Record.

He then said further that instead of finding fault, we should study the problems so closely associated with the recruitment of a military organization and make every effort to correct them.

Biggest Liar in Congress

Afro-American

We actually feel a bit sorry for Mississippi's Senator James Eastland, whose recent slander upon the integrity, courage and morality of colored American and French Senegalese troops has accorded him the dubious honor of being dubbed the biggest liar in Congress.

7-21-45

We are sorry because Senator Eastland's education has been so sorely neglected that he doesn't know that he doesn't know the facts with which just about everybody else is familiar.

Baltimore, Md.

Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur, Patton, Simpson, Clark and Devers and Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson have all given the lie to Eastland's charge that colored American troops won't work or fight and that they have been an abysmal failure. Eastland's charges have been disproved one by one and he has yet to identify the "high-ranking U.S. officers" who allegedly gave him such a bum steer.

On top of this, his charges that Senegalese troops of the French Army had raped from 2,000 to 5,000 German women in the subway at Stuttgart, have been completely debunked by the facts.

First of all, there have never been more than a handful of Senegalese troops in Stuttgart at any time and there is no subway there. Even if Eastland was referring to underground shelters as a "subway," there has been no evidence produced to show that these were scenes of wholesome attacks—not even from the Germans themselves.

Most of the French troops in Stuttgart were white and a number were Arabs from French North Africa. Unquestionably there were a number of rape cases during the first few weeks of the French occupation but anyone knowing the intense hatred of the French for the Germans can understand this.

Jean de la Roche, French advisor on colonial affairs in New York City told the AFRO that "Eastland is not only a liar but is using Nazi tactics and doing the Germans a great favor." La Roche continued that he is positive that the alleged subway raping never took place. "This is the same sort of thing they said after the last war," he added.

It is regrettable that Senator Eastland's charges received such wide publicity but the avalanche of brickbats which they drew, however, has had its counter effect. He now knows that the next time he shoots off his mouth, he'd better have the facts.

Let's Shut Eastland Up

Afro-American

It seems a bit strange to see so many Congressmen rushing to the defense of the 16 white Army officers and enlisted men whom Rep. John Rankin (D., Miss.) sought to smear as Communists and such a comparatively small number sprinting to the defense of colored soldiers whom Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) is still seeking to label as rapists or cowards.

Baltimore, Md.

Not only were War Department officials quick to deny the charges, but Rankin's colleagues, among them Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) and Rep. Ewing Thomason (D., Tex.), the latter chairman of the subcommittee, were equally alert and vigorous in denouncing the Rankin smear which Sabath said smacked of Hitler and Goebbels.

7-28-45

Meanwhile, Senator Eastland, in spite of Army denials and on-the-spot reports, continues to spread the lie that several thousand German girls were raped in the tunnels of Stuttgart by French Senegalese troops.

Except for Senators Robert F. Wagner and James M. Mead, both Democrats of New York, there were few voices raised in Congress in answer to Eastland's slander that colored troops would neither work nor fight.

Had more Congressmen gone on record in answering Eastland's slurs, the matter would have been quickly silenced. Last week we said that Eastland was the biggest liar in Congress. Nothing has happened since to change our views.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Citizen-Times (Sunday)
Cir. S. 35,627

JUL 15 1945

THE RECORD REBUKES

When Senator Eastland of Mississippi delivered his scurrilous indictment of the Negro serviceman for "utter and abysmal failure" in war, it seemed hardly necessary to register more than perfunctory reproof of this obvious appeal to racial prejudice.

However, the charge has not been taken lightly in some interested but dispassionate quarters. In all probability, too, it is being seized upon by those who would serve Mr. Eastland's ends or who would employ it for their own devious purpose. After all, such studied and deliberate utterances gain currency and appear to borrow authenticity. In this instance, every word is a matter of record—in the Congressional Record which preserves the frenzied filibuster of Senator Eastland.

More than one newspaper in the deep South has come forward to rebuke the Mississippian in vigorous terms. The Macon (Georgia) News in an extended editorial calls it "a disgraceful performance that ought to shock, sadden and make ashamed every Southerner who loves his country and believes in fair treatment for all its citizens."

But it is the War Department itself which directly or implicitly refutes the charges which Senator Eastland essays to document. "The War Department is proud of its troops, and that includes Negroes as well as all other groups," said Undersecretary Patterson in a subsequent press conference. He did not know of any of the "high-ranking generals" to whom Mr. Eastland ascribed military contempt of the Negro soldier.

On the contrary, Mr. Patterson referred instead to Generals Eisenhower, MacArthur, Eaker and others who have praised the conduct of Negro troops. To offer the lie to Senator Eastland on yet another point, Supreme Allied Headquarters in Paris pointed out a few days ago that there were no Negro combat troops in Normandy, where, the speaker divulged, it was necessary "to disarm a good many Negro soldiers" because they broke into farmhouses and molested French women.

Doubtless there have been instances where the Negro soldier, like the white soldier, did not measure up to the demands of duty. Doubtless whole units have been involved—in both cases. Senator Eastland criticized the all-Negro 92nd Division in the Italian campaign, which was an arduous operation for all our troops. Beside this, however, can be set the record of all-Negro Air Forces fighter squadrons in the Mediterranean whose enterprise and daring have been remarked upon to this writer by Southern white pilots.

Yes, the blatant charge needs refutation, and refutation in the record. There can be documentation of a somewhat more dependable nature. Brooks Field at Fort Knox is named for the first armored force soldier—a Negro—killed in this war. The Distinguished Service Medal has gone to Negro Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis. Among Navy heroes on the battered aircraft carrier Bunker Hill were two Negro seamen.

No thoughtful person will countenance a blanket indictment of any race. No patriot will accept Senator Eastland's inference that 870,000 Negro men of the Army and Navy have "disgraced the flag of their country." No Southerner can look upon this miserable screed and fail to resent its injustice, its indecency, and its fearful potentialities for evil-doing.

Northern senators continue defense of Negro soldier

Los Angeles Tribune - Calif.

7-13-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—To further clear Negro servicemen of the "unwarranted attack" made upon them by Mississippi senators during the Fair Employment Practices Commission filibuster, Sen. Robert Wagner, of New York, took the floor July 12, defending the record of Negroes in the Army. Previously, his colleague, Senator Mead, of New York, had read at length from official records, citing heroic acts performed by Negroes in the Navy.

Sen. Wagner quoted from Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson who denied that any high-ranking generals had charged Negro soldiers with failure. He also read General Eisenhower's statement, "I have seen Negro soldiers in this war (as soldiers, not at Negro soldiers) and I have many reports on their work where they have rendered very valuable contributions and some of them with the greatest enthusiasm." He quoted Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker's opinion of Negro flyers, "By their efforts and performance they have won a place on the great Air Forces team. They came on the hard way".

Referring to the 92nd Division, Senator Wagner refuted Senator Eastland's charges against the all-Negro unit during the FEPC controversy. He specifically mentioned the heroism of Capt. Charles Gandy, Washington, D. C. who was posthumously awarded the Silver Star for gallantry, and of Lt. Theodore O. Smith, also of Washington, who won a posthumous Silver Star for bravery.

Concluding, Sen. Wagner asked that several official stories on the heroism of Negro soldiers be printed in the Congressional Record.

Later in the day, Sen. Mead commented, in reference to Sen. Eastland, "I know of perhaps nothing more destructive than to have a United States Senator rise on the floor of the Senate and speak in highly derogatory terms of the men who are baring their breasts and making the supreme sacrifice in the war . . ."

Sen. Mead also asked for inclusion in the Record of a press release on the heroism of First Lt. Vernon J. Baker, 25, Cheyenne, Wyo., "the second living Negro of three who have been decorated with the DSC in this war". He further asked to have included the list of 31 soldiers serving in all-Negro units who were awarded Congressional Medals of Honor between 1862-1926.

"It is unfortunate that the Senator from Mississippi did not consult the War department or General Eisenhower or Lieutenant General Eaker before attempting to indict 13,000,000 American citizens," the senator from New York said.

7-23-45

Telling of the 65 Silver Stars, 1,277 Purple Hearts, 1 Air Medals, and 7 Legion of Merit possessions would regard such a country exactly as all decent people regarded Hitler Germany. Far from defending it, he would do his utmost to destroy it. Let every American remember this whenever he hears the hate-mongers vomiting forth their poison.

8-12-45

Fortunately for us, the Eastlands are not America. Listen to General Eisenhower: "I have seen Negro soldiers in this war. They have done their job and they have done the job given them." Listen to General Patton: "The Negro soldiers are damn good soldiers, of which the nation could be mighty proud." Listen to Gen. Mark Clark: "They were glorious." Listen to Gen. W. H. Simpson: "Colored soldiers were magnificent in the historic crossing of the Rhine and the devastation of the Ruhr valley."

Either the generals are wrong and Eastland is right, or Eastland is wrong and the generals right. Obviously both cannot be right. Who then, is lying? Is it these four generals of proven integrity and love of country, or is it the ranting poll taxer who owes his office to the fact that the big majority of even the white adults of his state are denied the franchise.

When will we American people show enough social and political intelligence to make it unprofitable for the Eastlands and other spewers of hate to keep us on their sucker list?

—THE FOUR FREEDOMS CLUB.
Ethel Caulder, Secretary.

Senator Eastland's Slander

8-2-45 Afro Journal-Herald-Dayton

Editor of The Journal-Herald:

This much must be said for Senator Eastland in his slandering of Negro troops with falsehoods: he has a certain kind of consistency in that he is trying to create in life the same kind of Negro soldier that he conjured up in his mind and described on the floor of the senate.

It is inconceivable that any soldier, black, white, red or green, would defend in any way whatever a country whose attitude toward him was the attitude Senator Eastland is trying to create in the United States toward the Negro. On the contrary, any man in his

56n-1945

Sen. Eastland

In Reply to Eastland

Dear Editor: P.M.-N.Y.

Sen. Eastland says the Negro soldier is an "utter and abysmal failure." As an officer who has been with them for eight months, I would like to tell the Senator and the rest of America how these "failures" look to us. The Negro does not make as good a soldier as the white man, but the difference is not great and must always be qualified by the phrase "in general." The 92d Division and other colored Doughboys proved that the Negroes in general lacked sufficient education to be good front-line troops. Several tank and TD units performed splendidly, proving that many Negroes were excellent for that work. They were a success and, though far from perfect, I defy anyone to say that any unit which lived and fought up through the misery of Italy was a failure. They accomplished a lot. I think we still judge failure and success by what we constructively accomplish. 7-19-45

I know more about Service troops. I've seen my own men throw up buildings, build POW stockades and wire camps. They sometimes made mistakes (who doesn't) but they did the jobs. Other colored Engineers have done a great part of the ETO construction. Take the QM Truck outfits. They kept whole armies going with the Red Ball Express. They wrecked trucks, but you can't drive trucks as they had to and not have wrecks. Better men could have had less, but there were none to spare and our "failures" did the job.

We know that we don't have the best troops in the world, but to stand up in the Halls of Congress and condemn them as "failures" makes our job of improving them no easier. All of us, including the men themselves, welcome direct and constructive criticism, but the Senator's approach does a lot of harm. Before he condemns others as failures I suggest that he take stock of his own constructive accomplishments and see how his actions have furthered the winning of this war.

If I may conclude with a personal opinion, I am damn proud of any soldier who continues to work and fight as ours do in spite of such criticism. That goes for the Nisei and all the other butts of prejudice. They will go on because they know most Americans still believe in that mixture of decency, Christianity and democracy that makes us, in spite of the Eastlands, a community we can be proud to live in.

JOHN FAYETTEWEATHER, 2d Lt.
APO, N. Y. 7-19-45

I am a Negro, and it is an appalling find to have discovered at such a late date, almost two months after the cessation of hostilities in Europe, that the Negro GI failed in his efforts, work, blood, sweat and tears, and even death, to contribute anything to its successful culmination. N.Y.N.Y.

Just think, after having served 30 months overseas in a port battalion and a Quartermaster unit, my labor is termed as a recognized failure. Poor nonessential me. Why do I have to stay overseas so long as "an utter and abysmal failure?" Poor Negro GI, who trudged and crawled through the foxholes of Africa, who transported ammunition and supplies through the hell-hole of Casserine Pass, who lost an arm or leg flying over Lampedusa, who bled at Cassino, and died at Anzio, has through some misfortune turned up a complete flop.

In honor of these Negroes, who have perished in the clefts of the rock, who have fallen beneath the grasses of the mountainside, who have floated as corpses upon the waters, we shall with a revitalized faith remain unshaken in our progressive stride. We shall exert more effort with a renewed spirit and determined continuity in a struggle to remove this cancer-like statement and combat the danger of its contagion.

France CPL. E. B.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Atlanta Daily World

SOLDIERS PROTEST EASTLAND ATTACK

To the World Editor: 7-25-45

I am a native of Atlanta and I was a regular WORLD reader when I was home. I receive the paper over here now. In our ETO paper, Senator Eastland (D. Miss.) made a remark about the Negro soldier. Here is a letter that I wrote expressing our feeling toward him:

I am a soldier who never likes to complain about conditions but after reading what Senator Eastland has to say about the Negro soldier, I cannot help from expressing myself. Atlanta, Ga.

I am a married man and the father of a lovely daughter whom I have only seen once when she was five days old. I did not come over here or into the Army of my own free will, but since that is my fate I am making the best of it. I have seen quite a bit of action. I have seen comrades shed their blood. I have seen some lose their lives and those remaining to complete their missions successfully. Now, if this isn't work and fight I would appreciate the Senator's definition of WORK and FIGHT.

"They are as abysmal failure", says the Senator. What about the famed 92nd and 93rd Infantry Divisions? What about the 99th Fighter Squadron and many other Negro units together with individuals in all branches of the service who have done and are still doing all that is possible to help bring about a much longed for victory and peace for all? It seems that we will never be included in that group of AMERICANS, as the word is defined, or benefit by its policies of freedom for all. The war is only two-thirds over and such remarks certainly do not boslter one's morale to continue. 7-25-45

We are sincerely grateful for Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson's effort to defend us and trust that more breadminded Americans can and will do something to make this fight for freedom a lasting success. The defeated Germans have shown us more respect and have given us more raise than our U. S. Senator. What does than our U. S. Senator. What does this make to you?

SGT. M. H. JONES
CPL. H. L. GLOVER
and 50 others.

France.

(EDITOR'S Note —We can understand how unwarranted statements such as those expressed by Senator Eastland would not help the morale of Negro soldiers. However, it is hoped that the Negro soldier will do all within his power to bring the war to a successful conclusion. To do otherwise would play into the hands of men such as Eastland whose purpose is to try to minimize our contribution to the war effort. Boys, continue to do your best! When the war is finished over there, come home and help us with the intelligent use of the ballot to get out of office men of the Bilbo, Eastland stripe.)

Editorial Reprints

Southern Editors Come To Defense Of Race

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. 7-28-45

Praise the Negro Soldiers

From The Tampa (Fla.) Tribune

Under-Secretary of War Patterson has performed a distinct service for the Nation in correcting the record on Negro servicemen, which was so cruelly distorted by Senator Eastland of Mississippi during his recent filibustering speech against the Fair Employment Practices Committee. The Senator's cowardly use of sweeping assertions in attacking the courage and Americanism of an entire race called for a forthright answer. Certainly his conclusions are not supported by thinking white citizens of the South.

The average Southerner is fair-minded and tolerant. He believes in giving credit where credit is due. Senator Eastland's charges that the Negro's war record is a bad one, that he has been a cowardly soldier and has "disgraced his flag" do not appeal to Southern people as either accurate or just. Moreover, they act to stir up racial intolerance at the time when the efforts of responsible individuals are in the opposite direction.

. . . The record clearly refutes Senator Eastland and his mysterious informants. We'll accept the opinion of a great American like General Eisenhower any time in preference to the generalizations of a prejudiced Mississippi demagogue.

* * *

The Times-Dispatch

(Richmond, Va.) 7-28-45

. . . It is humiliating to the South for two Mississippi demagogues to misrepresent the Southern people with their unfair diatribes.

* * *

The Macon (Ga.) News

We conceive it to be the duty of every Southenrer to repudiate every appeal to racial prejudice. The white people of the South cannot live on terms of enmity and hostility with a racial minority constituting one-third of the population. Persons who fan the flames of racial hatred are enemies of the people and their free institutions.

This speech of Senator Eastland's is one of the basest appeals to such prejudice and hatred we have ever read. We hope that the entire South will repudiate it, and that the Senator's own State, at the first opportunity, will return him to the obscurity from which he came.

* * *

Courier-Journal

(Louisville, Ky.)

. . . The Senator himself is branded as a dangerous enemy of national unity in his cowardly use of sweeping assertions designed only to discredit a loyal American minority.

* * *

The Item

(New Orleans, La.)

"Truly there is no worse influence in high life than Senator Bilbo. He is a disgrace to Juniper Grove, where he was born; to Mississippi, which he represents; and to the Nation, of which, unfortunately, he is a citizen."

Mr. Eastland should take counsel with himself, unless he is courting a national reputation which reflects itself in such terms as those. Such repute is too high a price for a few votes that could be won by more respectable means than coon-shouting, on infirm and silly canards. Unless the junior Senator takes himself in hand betimes, he is likely to fall a hopeless victim to the ancient aphorism, "Evil Associations Corrupt Good Manners."

GI AFRO Readers Reply to Sen. Eastland's Tirade

Afro-American

Overseas—We have written Sen. Eastland (D., Miss.) that his statement about all colored troops being failures could only come from an ignorant Southern senator.

Baltimore, Md.

No human with a cultural background and intelligence would make such a statement at a time when the soil of Europe is still wet with the blood of all races. If the heart of the people of the worlds was as dark as Sen. Eastland's, then men would have died in vain.

7-28-45

Didn't Fail at Saar

Ask the white soldiers of the 90th Division if we were a failure when our smoke covered their operations for 16 days from the enemy on the Saar River in the heart of the Siegried Line.

Ask the boys of the 5th Infantry Division if we were a failure when our camouflage smoke prevented the enemy from breaking up the crossing of the Moselle River in their drive on Metz.

Ask the Engineer Groups with whom we worked in the building and protecting of vital bridges from the Mayenne River in France to the Main River in Germany.

Team Coordination Won

Victory has been won here in Europe but that perfect coordination of the best team in the world made this possible. How did the Armoured Divisions get much needed fuel to continue their drive in tough spots? Who brought food up to the front to feed the boys in the fox holes? How was the Infantry able to keep up with the fast moving armour? It was the work of a team in which colored soldiers are a large percentage. Our boys of the Port Battalions and the Quartermaster Corps kept them rolling all of the way from the beaches to the front line.

Battle of Bulge

Has the Senator ever heard of the 999th Field Artillery? Did the high ranking Generals give him a full account of the Battle of the Bulge? Does he know colored troops landed in France on D-Day and fought and died like other Americans? Does he know about the 92nd Division that fought in Italy or the 93rd now in the Pacific Theater?

The Senator's case is hopeless. We have met his kind many times here in Europe. They were Americans too, but we have the courage to fight them as we have fought Nazism here. We shall forever fight racial discrimination and racial hate in Sen. Eastland's State of Mississippi and the South.

A Corporal and Members of the U.S. Army.

EASTLAND HAD NO FACTS

Overseas—Sen. Eastland does not know the facts or else he would have given credit where credit is due—to the gallant colored soldiers who have done more than their part in this war.

PFC. WARREN H. COLN

EASTLAND UNGRATEFUL

In France — I was shocked at Eastland's statement. If we were such failures, why didn't the unnamed general who said we were, get some white Mississippians to come over here and fight the Nazis?

We have sweated and helped make victory in Europe possible and we don't appreciate any ungrateful attacks.

PFC. JAMES G. JOHNSON,
formerly of Baltimore

GET RID OF MENACE

Overseas—It will be disastrous if we come home and find the same prejudiced, inhuman standards of living imposed upon us. Do something before it is too late. Get rid of Bilbo, Eastland et al and their inhuman ideas. We have exterminated the Nazi menace over here, it is up to you at home to exterminate it there.

PVT. GEORGE KITTRELL

URGES EASTLAND APOLOGY

In the Pacific—I do not hesitate to tell you that we were all pretty much upset and hurt by Sen. Eastland's infamous remarks.

I don't know whether the Honorable (?) Senator Eastland has ever been a soldier in combat or not. I assume that he has been a civilian all of his life and doesn't know what it means to see mangled bodies, to be the target of rifle and machine-gun fire, to be bombed, to be strafed, and to be exposed to all the other horrible things which are inevitable in war.

7-28-45

His statement that the colored soldier is a failure has prompted me, in behalf of my company whose location is still secret, to lodge a formal protest. I request that you, in conjunction with your professional associates, conduct a campaign for a public retraction of Eastland's statements.

I write this letter with a lump in my throat. We had our baptism of fire and I have seen the results of what war really means with my own eyes. I have had numerous friends, and some relatives already lost in this struggle.

"Thoroughly Disgusted"

Thus far, I personally have been very fortunate, for which I thank God. There are so many boys that I knew and grew up with whom I shall never see again. I cannot feel any way but hurt and thoroughly disgusted when I find that there are people like Senator Eastland in authoritive positions tearing down all that we have fought to accomplish for nearly four years of war.

I have been in the army two and a half years and they have been anything but the happiest days of my life. I was separated from my family.

I have been pushed around so that at times I wanted to quit forever. If I don't see some results of all this suffering which I and thousands like myself are undergoing, I am going to be very interested in finding out why.

T/4 JAMES H. WATSON

A WASTE OF TIME

In Germany—Before the invasion, our company, the 3198th Qm., worked 16 to 18 hours a day preparing food for the troops who were to come over on D-Day. After victory, we worked the same number of hours supplying food for four armies.

Now I pick up a paper and read the Eastland insult. It makes me and a lot of other fellows feel it all was a waste of time.

CPL. ALBERT TILLERY

573RD LICK JAPS

Overseas—I am a member of the 573rd QM Railhead Co., that went through it all in the war against the Nazis. We thank God for victory over here but our job is not yet complete. Even those of us who get discharges will carry on at home until Japan is defeated.

Cpl. Taylor

CPL. RUDOLPH TAYLOR

DO WE FIGHT FOR THIS?

San Diego, Calif.—During a recent liberty, four of us went to the Mission Beach. As we started to enter the skating rink, we were stopped by the doorman and told that we could not enter because of our color.

7-28-45

We tried to get a Yellow cab to take us back to our base but the driver refused to take us. I looked at my sailor suit and wondered what are we fighting for. There may be victory over there but there's none for us over here.

SEAMAN H. F. W.,
Naval Repair Base

EASTLAND "RIDICULOUS"

W. Chester, Pa.—I wrote Senator Eastland and sent him clippings from the AFRO-AMERICAN showing the important part played by the colored soldier in this fight for worldwide democracy. Some of the clippings also showed the strong fight that is being waged throughout the country for FEPC.

I feel that your newspaper is doing a wonderful job in exposing and bringing to the public information on the types of men who are sent to Congress to make laws for this so-called democracy. This is the type of work that needs to be done by the colored press, and just how effective the colored press has been is revealed in the recent attempt of the colored voter to make himself felt as an integral part of the American scheme of things, by the use of his ballot in trying to send into public office the types of men who will champion the cause of democracy and justice.

The clippings which I have sent the Senator will do a lot to show him just how ridiculous he made himself before the world in his attempt to thwart progressive legislation in Congress.

CHARLES. G. THOMPSON
President, NAACP
West Chester, Pa.

WHY DO WE FIGHT?

Gotha, German — I arrived in England, March, 1944. After remaining there until shortly after the invasion, I noticed several cases of marked discrimination.

In one of the larger towns of England, in fact all of the towns where there were Red Cross recreation facilities for American troops, there were always separate clubs for the colored troops.

I am very sure that the money that has been contributed to the Red Cross by colored Americans was never given with the feeling that this money would be used in a segregated manner.

We came on the beach shortly after the invasion with the zeal and feeling that we were fighting for a true democracy. We suffered the hardships of warfare as the American white soldiers. Those hardships were not meted by the Germans by race, color or creed.

French, Belgians Poisoned

After the war, passes were issued to cities of interest in Belgium and France. Rest centers were established, but the minds of a great majority of the French and Gelgians had been poisoned against colored troops; those that were able to get passes were very uncomfortable because of this situation.

We feel that we have given and are still giving as much as any race to this war, but are we being treated the same? What recourse do we have?

I have read in papers that there were USO shows touring this theater of operation, but we have our first show to see. If this is considered a democratic principle, then I have misinterpreted the meaning of democracy.

Same Old Custom

We have hauled ammunition, food and other essential supplies to divisions of the front lines, when the shells were falling and bullets were flying. We fought with them side by side but when we came back to the rear, we met the same American custom of discrimination.

I had the desired occasion to talk with troops that just came on the Continent from America, their job was to guard prisoners. One soldier informed me that there were camps on this particular camp in the States where he had worked, with signs posted over the drinking fountain, "white" and "colored."

The American colored soldier, in the uniform of the United States Army, were not permitted to use the same fountain that the whites, but Germans that were prisoners of war, the Germans who killed the husbands, brothers or sons of American people were permitted to use these fountains.

Now that the war is over in Europe, we sit waiting for the green light for the Pacific, but we do not feel we are fighting for a purpose. What can the purpose be?

W/O C. E. JENKINS

92ND WAS NOT ALONE

New Guinea—Just before the war ended, the 92nd Division in Italy suffered a setback which was played up by the white papers. These same papers forgot that during the tough war against Hitler plenty of white units had to give ground too.

Seaman L. B. Edwards, Henry Epps and J. D. George, U.S. Navy

7-28-45

WHAT A GI WANTS

In France—The world I want after this war is one in which I can forget the mistakes of the past and enlist in a Army of Christian soldiers determined to carry the cross and the light of Salvation into the homes of every individual regardless of color, race or creed. A world that I will know is safe for my children to live in. We know you at home are proud that brave hearts like ours beat strong with the Christian challenge of tomorrow.

We want to meet again with one victory behind us, victory one victory behind us, victory that that will mean a truly democratic world.

T/5 JOHN H. WOODLIN

Stuttgart Rape Stories Part True Writer Says

Louisville Ky.

By PAUL GHALI.

The Chicago Daily News Service.

Courier Journal

With the American Occupation Forces In Stuttgart, Germany, July 23 (Delayed)—The widely publicized disclosures by Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) concerning the mass rape of Stuttgart women during the first days of the French occupation of the city are partly true, but contain certain misrepresentations, according to the best information available at the scene.

(General Jacob L. Devers, former commander of French and American troops in the area, denied in Washington Thursday that there had been any "mass" rape in Stuttgart, but said there were many cases of individual attacks.) 7-28-45

Senegalese Not Involved.

I decided to make a personal fact-finding visit to the city. Parts of the senator's "disclosures" obviously are not true, such as his allegation that the April rapes occurred in the subway of a city which has no subway, and his charges that the rapes were committed by Senegalese troops, when no Senegalese were among the French occupation forces.

I have talked with everyone I could find who was present when the French entered the city, including an American officer with the Fench Military Government, the local Burgomaster, the head of Stuttgart's most important hospital and three of the rape victims. This is their report:

As soon as the French First Army troops entered the town, Algerian, Tunisian and Moroccan troops began looting, pillaging and raping. This lasted four days, until the French General Guillaume ordered 11 "Africans" shot.

Devers' Order Disobeyed.

On April 27 General Devers visited Stuttgart and immediately ordered General Guillaume to evacuate the town. The French general bluntly refused. In fact, the French troops remained here up until two weeks ago.

Estimates of the number of women assaulted vary from 1,000 to 5,000. At any rate, 1,100 cases of rape were reported to police, but City officials say the real figure is nearer to 5,000.

However, the rapes were not as spontaneous as they might appear to a superficial observer. I was informed by one of the victims, a fraulein of 18 years, that a Gestapo agent brought six French African soldiers to her apartment, after plying them with drinks.

Some Germans apparently incited the troops to disorder, recognizing the opportunity to discredit the French.

Germans Philosophical.

German officials whose countrywomen were victims of the rapes have taken a far more philosophical view of the incidents than the American senators or American officers here.

Burgomaster Dr. Arnulf Klett described the bad conduct of the French as "something which the German population could well have expected after the tortures inflicted by the Gestapo on French Patriots."

Even French officers here admit numerous rapes were committed by French troops in Stuttgart, but they raise the question whether these were actually cases of rape, since, they report, the German women seldom opposed their "seducers."

Gen. Devers to Eastland.

Afro-American, Baltimore, Md

General Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Army Ground Forces, who was in command of the Sixth Army when Stuttgart fell late in April, said last week that he personally investigated and found no evidence of mass rape as charged by Mississippi's Senator James O. Eastland.

There were some individual cases of rape, however, he said. Answering Eastland's charge that Senegalese troops were involved in the rape of several thousand women, Gen. Devers added that, to his knowledge, there were only four Senegalese in the entire Stuttgart area. 8-4-45

Eastland has yet to identify the "high ranking" Army authorities who gave him his "information." Gen. Devers is certainly not one of them.

Fomenters of Disunity

Richmond Times Dispatch

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

It is unfortunate that the legislative body of our great government does not deem it advisable or expedient to discipline any member who delights in making charges based on imagination which tend to disunite our nation at this crucial hour when every American heart, brain and muscle must be strained for the final drive against Japan, our lone but vicious enemy. Va. 8-11-45

Senator Eastland's assertion that Negro soldiers are cowards under combat and rapists comes at a very appropriate time if he is concerned with furthering the interests of the Emperor. It requires no stretch of the imagination to assume that the Senator from Mississippi is held in high esteem in Japan because of his ridiculous utterances. Richmond Va.

The tan soldier in the South Pacific, stripped to the waist, salty sweat dripping from his tired body as he uncomplainingly loads supplies for his country, ponders many questions in his perplexed mind when he reads the diatribes of our so-called national leaders. Likewise, the Negro infantryman in his squalid foxhole, rifle poised, waits for the order to fire, unafraid, but wondering "what am I fighting for?" These questions cannot be answered honestly and sincerely by Bilbos and Eastlands. They must be answered by Americans who believe in this country and all its citizens. 8-11-45

In my humble opinion, there is none more dangerous to our country during these perilous days than the individual who veils himself with the silks of patriotism and then proceeds viciously to foment disunity and foster racial hatred throughout our glorious land. Va.

As an American Negro soldier, I joyfully anticipate the hour of victory on the fighting front, but I pray fervently for the day when God, in His divine wisdom, will strip the outer garments of these "statesmen" and reveal them for what they are. 8-11-45

CPL. JOHN KIRKPATRICK.
Camp Lee.

Richmond Times Dispatch

From Other Columns

Los Angeles Tribune (Calif.)

Eastland Eruption

From the Macon (Ga.) News

Senator Eastland's speech was a gratuitous ~~and slanderous~~ attack on the performance of colored people in this war. The colored soldier, the Senator said, has been 'an utter and abysmal failure' in the war. Colored officers could not be trusted, he declared, and added that colored divisions could not be placed in important positions in battle lines, because colored soldiers 'had no initiative' no sense of responsibility, and very low intelligence.' Also, he said, criminal conduct of colored soldiers all over Europe had 'disgraced the flag of their country.' 8-13-45

The Senator made no exceptions. As Marquis Childs characterized it, it was the most shocking speech ever heard on the floor of the Senate, slandering whole races and armies and damning them down to the last individual.

The Mississippian's authority for these outrageous defamations, he said, were 'high-ranking generals' with whom he talked on a recent junket to Europe; but, significantly enough, he refrained from identifying a single such officer, being content to particularize the helpless victims of his own slanders, but careful not to name as the original authors of them high Army officers who might bring him to book for his recklessness.

We don't believe a single word the Senator said; we don't see how he can believe it himself. It is physically impossible that such a blanket indictment of the 700,000 colored people in the Army and the 170,000 in the Navy can be true. 8-13-45

No doubt there are bad and stupid and untrustworthy colored men in the Army and Navy, as there are also bad and stupid and untrustworthy white men. But that they are all like that, none except a simpleton or a villain would suggest and none except a moron would believe.

Moreover, if the Senator's charges had any basis in fact, or were anything except the creatures of his own poisonous fancy, he would not allow the sources of his information to remain unrevealed. No man, Senator or not, damning in good faith a whole race of his fellow citizens would hide behind the anonymity of unnamed 'high-ranking generals.' In sheer self-defense, he would bring these generals out in the open to speak for themselves. In fact there are no such generals; Under-Secretary of War Patterson told his press conference Friday that he had never heard of any.

Aside from the facts that were available to Senator Eastland in the public records, it is beyond all reason that his sweeping charges can be true. 8-13-45

In March, 1945, Capt. Charles L. Thomas, colored commander of a tank destroyer company in France, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for 'extraordinary heroism in action.'

In an editorial published on April 11, 1945, we noted the fact that Sgt. Jerry B. Davis, a Macon resident, had been decorated with the Legion of Merit, the fourth highest decoration of the American Army for conspicuous bravery in carrying rations to his gun crews in Italy in the battle of the Arno River.

In the same editorial we noted a Reuters dispatch giving an account of one day's activities of our Middle East Air Force over Austria in which American colored pilots in fierce combat had shot down 12 German planes.

We conceive it to be the duty of every Southerner to repudiate every appeal to racial prejudice. The white people of the South cannot live on terms of enmity and hostility with a racial minority constituting one-third of the population. Persons who fan the flames of racial hatred are enemies of the people and their free institutions. 8-13-45

This speech of Senator Eastland's is one of the basest appeals to such prejudice and hatred we have ever read. We hope that the entire South will repudiate it and that the Senator's own State at the first opportunity will return him to the obscurity from which he came.

Even Dixie Can No Longer Stomach Eastland and Bilbo

Macon, Ga., Daily Blasts Senators; Defends Tan Yanks

Baltimore Md. Afro-American

SENATOR BILBO

SENATOR EASTLAND

WASHINGTON.

Even the deep South cannot stomach the tirades of Senator Eastland and Bilbo, it was proved this week when one of the strongest denunciations of the former was published in the Macon (Ga.) News which out PMed the liberal New York PM.

In a three-column editorial titled "Eastland's Eruption," the daily came to the defense of the colored soldier and his contribution to the war. The article said in part:

"Senator Eastland's speech was a gratuitous and slanderous attack on the performance of colored people in this war. The colored soldier, the Senator said, has been 'an utter and abysmal failure' in the war. Colored officers could 'not be trusted,' he declared, and added that colored divisions could not be placed in important positions in battle lines, because colored soldiers 'had no initiative, no sense of responsibility, and very low intelligence.' Also, he said, criminal conduct of colored soldiers all over Europe had 'disgraced the flag of their country.

Made No Exceptions

"The Senator made no exceptions. As Marquis Childs characterized it, it was the most shocking speech ever heard on the floor of the Senate, slandering whole races and armies and damning them down to the last individual.

"The Mississippian's authority for these outrageous defamations, he said, were 'high-ranking generals' with whom he talked on a recent junket to Europe; but, significantly enough, he refrained from identifying a single such officer, being content to particularize the helpless victims of his own slanders, but careful not to name as the original authors of them high Army officers who might bring him to book for his recklessness.

Don't Believe Senator

"We don't believe a single word the Senator said; we don't see how he can believe it himself. It is physically impossible that such a blanket indictment of the 700,000 colored people in the Army and the 170,000 in the Navy can be true.

"No doubt there are bad and stupid and untrustworthy colored men in the Army and Navy, as there are also bad and stupid and untrustworthy white men. But that they are all like that, none except a simpleton or a villain would suggest and none except a moron would believe.

8-4-45

"Moreover, if the Senator's charges had any basis in fact, or were anything except the creatures of his own poisonous fancy, he would not allow the sources of his information to remain unrevealed. No man, Senator or not, damning in good faith a whole race of his fellow citizens would hide behind the anonymity of unnamed 'high-ranking generals.' In sheer self-defense, he would bring these generals out in the open to speak for themselves. In fact there are no such generals; Under-Secretary of War Patterson told his press conference Friday that he had never heard of any.

Beyond All Reason

"Aside from the facts that were available to Senator Eastland in the public records, it is beyond all reason that his sweeping charges can be true.

"Thus this year Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, one of the colored officers of whom Senator Eastland speaks with unmeasured contempt, was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal for outstanding work in the field of soldier morale and troop discipline which the citation says 'has been of material assistance to the War Department and responsible commanders in the field.'

Tank Commander Cited

"In March, 1945, Capt. Charles L. Thomas, colored commander of a tank destroyer company in France, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for 'extraordinary heroism in action.'

"In an editorial published on April 11, 1945, we noted the fact that Sgt. Jerry B. Davis, a Macon resident, had been decorated with the Legion of Merit, the fourth highest decoration of the American Army for conspicuous bravery in carrying rations to his gun crews in Italy in the Battle of the Arno River."

In the same editorial we noted a Reuters dispatch giving an account of one day's activities of our Middle East Air Force over Austria in which American colored pilots in fierce combat had shot down 12 German planes.

Made Good in Navy

"Colored men have made such records also in the Navy, a number having been decorated for extraordinary heroism in naval engagements, the latest of these being two colored seamen aboard the aircraft carrier, Bunker Hill, which was turned into a blazing death trap by the attack of a Japanese suicide plane.

"We conceive it to be the duty of every Southerner to repudiate every appeal to racial prejudice. The white people of the South cannot live on terms of enmity and hostility with a racial minority constituting one-third of the population. Persons who fan the flames of racial hatred are enemies of the people and their free institutions

8-4-45

"This speech of Senator Eastland's is one of the basest appeals to such prejudice and hatred we have ever read. We hope that the entire South will repudiate it and that the Senator's own State at the first opportunity will return him to the obscurity from which he came."

Another Repudiation Of Senator Eastland

Philadelphia Penna Tribune

To the Editor:

Recently one of the Senators of Congress made a rather indicative and insulting remark as to the stability and capabilities of the Negro soldier. As for me originating from Philadelphia, may I take this opportunity to let you know just how the

Dixie Editors Do Not Approve Blast At Negro GIs

Southern editors are overwhelmingly opposed to the recent expressions of racial prejudice in Congress and feel such statements do not represent the true feeling of the South, the Southern Conference of Human Welfare has disclosed in revealing the results of a poll of 251 white newspaper editors in the thirteen southern states.

Eighty-seven and one-half per cent of southern editors agree that Mississippi's Senator Eastland was not speaking for southern editors when he stated that Negro soldiers had been an "utter and abysmal failure." Eighty-three per cent of the editors think that this statement by Senator Eastland was a hazard to the war effort.

Senator Eastland's statement, made on the floor of the United States Senate June 29 during the course of a filibuster against the Fair Employment Practices Committee was: "The Negro soldier was a utter and abysmal failure in combat in Europe. . . . He has disgraced the flag of his country. He will not fight. He will not work."

Of the 255 questionnaires and letters received, 23 (eight per cent) showed some agreement with Senator Eastland; 219 (86 per cent) disagreed; and 13 (six per cent) were neutral.

average Negro soldier here in the ETO feels. I'm quite sure that the following declarations are his sentiments and will meet his utter approval. 8-18-45

Ever since the war started here in Europe the Negro has played an important part in the ultimate victory that was achieved recently. We troops under hampered conditions toiled in the coldest weather that came. The boiling sun that beat down on our bodies and caused sweat to drop, did not stop us. Food conditions of which the average civilian knows little, did not cease our actions. Thousands of us did not get half enough to nourish our bodies, but in the regular manner we asked the Almighty's Blessings over what we had. Side-by-side we fought with the white soldier and in most cases he was the initial one to go down to defeat. All these facts, and numerous more, prove that Eastland is a DAMN LIAR. Wish God to my soul that he could glance upon battlefields of Europe and see what was done. Experience and personal survey are the remedies for his ailment.

The Negro has gained experience, knowledge and control that he lacked before the war started. He has learned to creep and crawl on his enemy and to strike with lightning speed before his victim can recover his senses. In civilian life opportunities are opened. Larger quantities of Negroes are attaining education that will surpass that of our forefathers. In industry we operate the vital machines that are mowing down and cover our enemies' planes. All these take their place in numerous convoys on this terrestrial ball. We like comparision, not condemnation. Even as the Almighty, only live to endure equipment, trucks in numerous ways, and anphibian, created man and died in his much sorrow and shame, and many behalf, just as he dominates the then when called before the judgment bar on that resurrection morning, spend the rest of his eternity in that everlasting place in brooks the roaring waves of the ocean, and the dew that lays on the blades of grass, so will He fire. May you, the Mediators of our stamp seas, help us. All down through the our troubles here in the Army, appreciates find some means to rectify this demnators, who, failing to carry out his fulfillings, and the equality of men, only live to endure much sorrow and shame, and then called before the judgment bar on that resurrection morning, spend the rest of his eternity in that everlasting fire. May you, the Mediators of our troubles here in the Army, find some means to rectify this

8-18-45

S. Sgt. FRANK R. BLAIR

56n-1945

To the People of Mississippi

The Nation

Dear Sirs: A recent issue of the Stars & Stripes has brought to our attention the statement of Senator Eastland that the Negro soldier in this war has been "an utter and abysmal failure." This statement was made by a man in high government office who is supposed to help carry the torch of liberty. Many of us are alarmed and saddened to know that the people of the state of Mississippi have entrusted to this man the honor and responsibility of representing them in the government of the United States. 8-18-45

By this statement, and the attitude behind it, Senator Eastland demonstrates that he neither comprehends nor believes in the principles behind this war. Otherwise he would realize that service toward the cause of human liberty can be, and is, performed just as ably by a black man as it is by a white man.

Senator Eastland has betrayed us. He has not represented the cause for which we sent him to Washington. He is not interested in human liberties and promoting human freedom. He is not interested in understanding and helping to eradicate the causes of war. What does he care about the young men of America who have died in Europe, and Africa, and the Pacific, in the past few years? What does he care about the cause of liberty and freedom for which they fought and died, for which men and women of all races and colors gave their lives? Their victories and their heritage are for everyone—for men and women of all races and colors.

We fought the Nazis and Fascists because they represented a threat to our freedom and to the freedom of all people. We fought them because they tried to put one group of people above all others. They were interested in freedom not for all peoples, but for the "Nordic" few. In America we have people like that, too. They also preach a doctrine of racial superiority—the superiority of the white man over the black man—and seek to curb the freedom of the man who does not belong in their little world of hatred and prejudice. These men are fighting America and what she stands for just as much as any Nazi who ever uttered "Heil Hitler" or turned an "88" on American soldiers. These men are just as much enemies of human freedom as were the Hitlers, the Goebbels, and the rest. Some of these men even manage to get into high government positions. Perhaps Senator Eastland is one of them—the people of Mississippi will be able to tell. Other Americans, and the millions of soldiers overseas, have faith in what the people of Mississippi will do to help the cause of free men everywhere. 8-18-45

SERVICEMAN FROM MISSOURI

Somewhere in Germany, July 12

Senator Eastland

Gen. O'Dwyer Blasts Bilbo And Eastland

Atlanta (Ga) Daily World

NEW YORK-(ANP)-Hitting indirectly, but never-the-less forcefully at Sens. Bilbo and Eastland for their recent vicious attacks upon Negroes, especially the Negro soldier, Gen. Wm. O'Dwyer, Democratic candidate for mayor, in a speech at Brooklyn's Holy Trinity church Sunday night not only praised the valor of the Negro soldier but declared that "injustice to Negroes must end and they must have equal opportunity with other Americans to earn a livelihood if American democratic institutions are to survive." 8-26-45

The general was guest speaker at a meeting that had been called by the Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Harten, dynamic pastor of Holy Trinity, to protest against the slanderous charges made by the two Mississippi senators that Negro soldiers couldn't and wouldn't fight.

RECOUNTS DEEDS

Gen. O'Dwyer, who served on special missions in the European theatre of operations, briefly recounted the deeds of some of the Negro units.

"The loyalty of the American Negro is proverbial," he said. "He has not sought to dodge his responsibility in the war. On the contrary, the only thing he asked for was the right to fight for his county alongside his fellow citizens and to be accepted and treated as an American.

"Negro men and women," the general said, " have served ably and heroically on every battlefront in this war--in the army, the navy and the marine corps. There are 7000,000 Negroes in our army alone. Over 500,000 of them have served overseas. They comprised about one 12th of the entire United States army.

"Negro units landed with the western task force at Oran in North Africa in November, 1942. They were on hand for subsequent landings in Sicily, Corsica, Salerno and Anzio, and in the drive into Italy, where I saw them when I was there." 8-26-45

CONQUEST ROLES CITED

O'Dwyer said Negro soldiers filled even bigger roles in the conquest of Normandy, in the invasion of Southern France and in the struggle which finally ended in complete capitulation of the Nazis.

"On V-E day," he said, "over a quarter million Negro soldiers were stationed in the European, Mediterranean, and African-Middle-East theatres of operation. Of these, the most remotely stationed Negro unit on V-E day was probably the 595th Quartermaster company at historic Pilsen in Czechoslovakia."

The general praised the accomplishments of the 92nd and 93rd divisions and the 24th Infantry regiments.

"It has always been one of my major and uncompromising obligations to curb intolerant elements in the community who would seek to draw dividing lines between our citizens of various creeds and colors," Gen. O'Dwyer said, adding that, "'Bilboism" has no place on American life. It must have no place in the life and thinking of the city of New York."

The general gave the answer to those persons who continuously argue that legislation cannot change people, when he said, "Perhaps a law cannot make a man think right, but it can make him behave better."

O'Dwyer declared that he favors wholeheartedly the fair employment practice acts, in the national, state and city governments. These acts, he said, should be permanent features of our public life. Their basic purposes, he said, must become the accepted attitude of practice in our city.

The War Department's 'Reply' to Eastland

Norfolk, Va. - Pilot

The War Department's report on the service record of Negro troops in the European Theater of Operations is the definitive answer to the irresponsible tirade of Senator Eastland during the filibuster against the FEPC. The report has no thesis to argue. It is concerned simply with facts. Those facts speak for themselves. 8-20-45

Some 259,000 Negroes saw active service in the ETO. They comprised 69 per cent of the personnel of the famed Red Ball Express which rushed supplies from the beaches and ports to the fighting fronts, hitting a peak of 6,000 tons a day in the critical periods. They handled 1,500,000 of the 6,000,000 tons of ammunition used by the American forces. Negro engineers built roads and bridges. Negro Medical Corps units cared for the wounded. Negro signalmen strung hundreds of miles of wire communications. Negro battalions of the Chemical Warfare Service laid down smoke barrages "often under heavy enemy fire."

Those are auxiliary, technically known as non-combat, services. That does not mean that the Negro units were not much of the time in the midst of the fighting. The 320th Barrage Balloon Battalion was very much in it when it stormed the Normandy beaches on D-Day in company with the 1st and 29th divisions and set up an effective balloon barrier against the Luftwaffe. So too were the 368th and 370th Quartermaster Truck Battalions when they pounded ashore with the first waves of troops on Omaha Beach.

Some 23,000 Negroes gave full combat service in every branch of the American land forces in the ETO. Many of them fought in platoons or companies scattered through the white divisions. The 969th Field Artillery Battalion was with Brig. Gen. McAuliffe's 101st Airborne Division in that stubborn stand at Bastogne that was accorded special Presidential citation. The 761st Tank Battalion battered across Europe with the 26th Infantry Division, receiving 40 Bronze Stars and 8 Silver Stars while 8 of its enlisted men won battlefield commissions. It was a Negro, Sergeant Edgar E. Zeno, who broke a blockade near Siedlinghausen in Germany when troops of the 39th Infantry Regiment were held by enemy machine gun fire. Armed with a Browning automatic rifle and grenades, he advanced over open terrain and rushed the emplacement, killing 7 Germans, wounding 3 more, and enabling his unit to capture 60 prisoners. 8-20-45

These are random examples from a report which contains many more and is confined to the one operational theater, making no mention of comparable service in the Mediterranean and the Pacific. It is a record to be noted with pride and by all Americans regardless of creed or color.

United for Common Interests and Common Needs

The Steuben News

REGISTERED U. S. PATENT OFFICE 1939

A NEWSPAPER FOR AMERICANS

Duty Justice Charity Tolerance

Vol. XVII. - No. 12 The PM August, 1945 New York, New York 10 Cents a Copy $1.00 Yearly

8-16-45

MASS RAPE OF GERMAN GIRLS

DOES HISTORY REPEAT ITSELF?

During the month of June there appeared in the columns of the press a news item to the effect that several thousand German girls had been rounded up and placed in the subway of the city of Stuttgart, and there criminally assaulted by French Senedelegation of which I was a member.

Senator Wheeler: It was a different delegation, yes. One Senator was talking with the general and called me over and said, "I want you to listen to this." The general told us the story. I am doctor's plea for asylum stated that the doctor went to him personally with that plea?

Senator Wheeler: It is my recollection that the doctor did come to him. I am not sure about that particular statement, but that is my recollection about it.

cerned. The action of the military authorities in trying to suppress the truth will, it seems to me, place our Government in the position of condoning the shameful deeds of those who perpetrate the crimes. The American people do not condone them, and I am sure equip, and clothe soldiers and place them in authority over helpless women and children, it is certainly incumbent upon the American Government to see that, so far as possible, American standards are maintained, and that there is no looting,

The Steuben Society is seeking sympathy for "poor Germany" by playing up the story—officially denied by the Army—of a mass rape of women in Stuttgart by French soldiers from Africa.

The PM New York, New York

of slavery which have kept the German people fettered hand and foot for 15 years." 8-16-45

Now Hoffman writes:

"Commitments made at Yalta and consummated at Potsdam have imposed upon the German people a punishment which, if carried out, will promote unrest and economic chaos in Central Europe. . . .

"We very much fear that the seeds of revenge and hatred have been sown, together with a repetition of what the Allies did to Germany in 1919. . . . Not only is the problem today parallel, but it is infinitely worse. . . .

"Swayed by bitterness at the results of the Nazi regime, the members of the (Postdam) conference prepared a reparations program, which on the whole will prove to be as unworkable as the plan adopted after the first World War. The emphasis today is on the tools and resources of defeated Germany, and Germany is to become an agricultural nation. Do we honestly believe that this will make the German people friendly?"

As a part of the campaign to win sympathy for Germany, the Steuben News devoted the entire front page of its August issue to quotations from Sens. James Eastland (D., Miss.) and Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.) supporting the tale (officially denied by Sixth Army headquarters) that French Negro troops raped 5000 German women in a Stuttgart subway.

Headline

The article was run under a streamer headline "Mass Rape of German Girls," and Hoffman appended a note recalling the alleged "dastardly deeds," "carnal lusts" and "acts of beastiality" of French African troops in the Rhineland after World War I. He demanded that the U. S. government punish the French troops responsible for the supposed mass rape in Stuttgart.

Hoffman and the Steuben News have exhibited no such indignation about Nazi atrocities; on the contrary, they have consistently sought to excuse, condone and explain away Nazi cruelties, beginning in 1933 with a denial that Hitler was persecuting the Jews. Right after its cry for punishment of French troops for raping German women, the Steuben News argued that the butchery of American fliers by German mobs was understandable and excusable, and that the butchers should not have been sentenced to death.

TRUTH About The 92nd

Journal + Guide

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright, Reproduction Forbidden)

Appeals, Va.

THE 92nd Division has had just one "all-out" test—the world-highlighted February attack. Early months of the division's history in the line were consumed in a very delicate operation, facts about which have never before been published. It was that touchy task which General Allmond refers to as "inserting units into combat."

5-12-45

Inserting a unit into combat, in cold Army terms, simply means "getting the men shot at; getting them used to their weapons; getting them to realize the power of those weapons when used correctly in actual contact with the enemy; and getting them to realize that there is no problem on the battlefield which cannot be overcome with the effective use of those weapons."

LEARN ONLY IN BATTLE

There is an old saying around the front lines that no matter how much previous training a unit has had it doesn't really learn to fight until it gets out there in that hellish fire that the Germans are famous for.

Technicalities of weapons and fighting are learned at training camps.

Application of this training must be accomplished under fire.

To be fully convinced, the individual soldier must see for himself that running away simply means, in many instances, that he will get shot in the back.

He must be convinced that it is better for him to "hit the dirt" and bring that good old M-1 rifle into action.

LEARN HARD WAY

Cruel experience has taught 92nd soldiers to dig in and use their weapons when they find themselves under fire. Many learned the hard way that this not only stops Germans; it also kills them.

5-12-45

Inserting units into combat was done carefully and without haste. General Allmond was careful not to insert a green unit into a spot that was known to be "too hot." Throwing a new unit into "hellish fire," would make them "gun-shy" before they started.

This task of "inserting units into combat" was something that even many of the officers and men of the 92nd were not aware of. It consumed nearly three months. During that time I had frequent interviews with General Allmond and I constantly visited units in the front line foxholes. I was extremely interested in the morale of the officers and men.

ATTACK PLANNED

Finally, after some successes and some reverses, the troops were considered to be about ready for anything the Germans could offer. The February attack was planned.

Problems arising in a division or a task force are numerous. When the problems arising from "racial sensitiveness" are added, the task of commanding such an outfit becomes involved and difficult.

5-12-45

Many believe that, being a segregated unit, the 92nd is handicapped. Leaders among Negroes and white liberals the world over contend that the ideal way would be to place American soldiers indiscriminately into the same units, leaving the promotions of officers and men to the just evaluation of their capabilities.

Be that as it may, the 92nd Division is now in combat. Its future lies in the hands of God and General Allmond.

I have often wondered which had the most problems. . .

The Truth About The 92d Division

The St. Louis Argus
St. Louis, Missouri

9-14-45

By Roy Wilkins with Permission of Michigan Chronicle and Los Angeles Sentine

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 — The papers have just announced that Major General E. M. Almond, commander of the 92d Division, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. The citation praises not only General Almond for his skill as a division commander, but also praises the 92d Division for its fighting in the difficult Italian theatre of the war. At least one paper, the Afro-American, sees the citation as a "vindication" of the 92d, emphasizing this in its headline.

From another source, a Negro officer who has just returned from Italy, this column has received a story which, if true, (and it sounds like the truth) completely vindicates the 92d Division of the smear charges made against it by Newsweek magazine and by an interview given to American correspondents in Rome last March 14 by Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Was Not In First Lines

The officer did not serve with the 92d, but with a unit of combat engineers, so that he cannot be accused of defending himself, although every man in the 92d has that right. His story is that the 92d Division DID NOT run away and was not knocked out, losing ten or twelve miles of valuable territory in the closing days of last December. The 92d did not run because the 92d WAS NOT IN THE FRONT LINE AT THAT TIME.

All three regiments of the regular 92d Division were taken out of the sector, he relates. One regiment was sent to another sector, miles away. One regiment was withdrawn to a rest camp for recuperation. One regiment was held in reserve, behind the front line.

Into the front line, designed to be held by a triangular (3-regiment) division, was sent ONE formant, was barely long enough for the men to be properly outfitted, to say nothing of being trained for combat. Bear in mind that this regiment had had no actual combat training to enable it to take a front line position against veteran German troops. They were spread thin, so thin that a German patrol could easily punch through their lines. Their Negro colonel was in the hospital at the time his men were suddenly ordered to duty and he is reported to have protested vigorously against the assignment, saying it was not fair to his men to place this duty upon them without training.

So the Germans, finding not only green troops before them, but very few troops, punched ahead, infiltrated behind the American lines, spread panic, and drove our men back a dozen miles. It was several days before the regular 92d men could be thrown back into the breach, but when they got under way they recovered all the lost ground, as reported in the daily papers here January 2.

If this is the true story, then the men of the 92d have a right to be boiling mad. My informant said: "I saw big strong men crying in frustrated rage when they read what Gibson had released to the newspapers. It was like putting a sand lot team in Yankee uniforms and then saying the Yankees got shellacked." Again, if this story is true it means that someone higher up was determined to bring discredit on Negroes as fighting men. This green regiment was deliberately given an impossible task to "show them up" and reflect on the race. In this war all the ju-jitsu and dirty fighting was not used on the enemy; the colored boys caught plenty of it.

92nd Hero, 1 Leg Missing, Tells How Nazi Felled Him

Afro-American - Balt, Md.

4-14-45

WASHINGTON

Pfc. Tom Robinson of Cambridge, Md., a machine-gunner of the 92nd Infantry Division, leaned forward in his bed at Walter Reed General Hospital last week—his right leg missing—and told how he was wounded by a German soldier in in Italian City.

He became a casualty when the Germans, evidently forewarned that they were due to attack at 7 o'clock on December 26, assaulted Robinson's unit an hour earlier.

He had set up his light machine-gun in a little stone house at the end of the street, commanding the only approach for the Germans, but he didn't figure on the church steeple off to his left.

Steeple Hid Nazi

A german bazooka man sneaked up a draw behind the church and climbed up into the steeple. Robinson didn't see him until the rocket struck him, the same time the enemy attack began.

His comrades had to withdraw, leaving him and the platoon sergeant trapped in the house. When the Germans took the town, they hid for five days, living on bread and wine supplied by the Italians, and were rescued when the Yanks recaptured the town, the soldier said.

The son of Mrs. Carrie Butts of Cambridge, Robinson is studying motor mechanics in preparation for the future. Inducted in April, 1942, he went overseas in March, 1944, with the 366th Infantry Regiment. He wears the Purple Heart and other combat decorations.

How Jim Crow Disheartened Negro Division

P.M. New York 6-10-45

Roi Ottley Looks Into Causes of 92d's Troubles

By Roi Ottley
Special Correspondent
(Copyright, 1945, by The Newspaper PM, Inc.)

PM Exclusive

ROME, June 9.—The war brought death to European fascism. But it also drove a nail into the coffin of an American brand of fascism—the all-Negro division within the framework of a white army.

Ottley

The unsatisfactory showing of the 92d Division, the all-Negro outfit commanded by Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, has documented clearly this development. But few have stopped to analyze the reasons.

Everyone I talked with, both Negro and white, were convinced that the division was one of the poorest in the Italian theater. Even some of its members said so.

I found no convincing evidence that the outfit was any worse than others in the theater, nor has there been any official statement as to the failure of the division. But the negative stories persist.

These stories say that Negro "patrols melted away under enemy fire," Negro officers were inefficient, the division had a high rate of AWOLs, it had no spectacular victories, it had the highest venereal rate in the Italian theater.

Magnification

Admissions by Truman Gibson, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War, concerning certain failures of the division have been magnified here. No one has bothered to quote the explanations he made for the poor showing. 6-10-45

It is almost an unwritten law among the Allied correspondents not to report any show of flinching. The High Command and war correspondents know white patrols have "melted away under enemy fire." They know that there are inefficient white officers. They also know that there are outfits without spectacular victories.

To be sure, much of the criticisms of the Negro division from white troops, is a form of sublimating. They are frustrated and homesick. The complex reasons for their being here escape them. Therefore, they seek a scapegoat. The Negro soldier seems to be the handiest whipping boy. So, with the flimsiest information, they gripe about the failures of Negroes.

Courage

No one here actually questions the courage of Negro soldiers. Their white officers are unstinting in praise of individual acts of heroism. The division's casualties have been high. Few ever were taken prisoner. Stars and Stripes, the GI newspaper, recently praised the men of the division. But all this has failed to offset the misinformation that is being circulated.

The 92d Division probably would not have been singled out for criticism if the War Dept. had not sent Truman Gibson to Italy. What the motive was seems vague at this distance, because no noticeable change has been made in the outfit. In any case, the expose has boomeranged. It has placed blazing focus on a disgraceful situation in the U. S. Army. Even the GIs are beginning to ask the reason. 6-10-45

I went up with the Ninety-second to gather some facts. The men had been fighting on the front for a long time, having been activated in October, 1943. They were moving swiftly toward La Spezia, the formidable naval base. They were taking a terrific shelling from the coastal batteries of the Nazis—but they were moving forward steadily.

What I learned saddened and discouraged me—but hardly more than the discouragement and frustration the men themselves were experiencing. For the press reports, particularly those appearing in Time and Newsweek magazines, in addition to their day-to-day problems, were hard to morale.

Comments

This is the sort of comments that punctuated their conversations:

"I know I'm not going to get a break when I get home!"

To which another would say, "Yeah, so I don't want to be a hero."

The general feeling was, "This is Mr. Charlie's fight"—meaning the war is a white man's affair.

A certain inevitability threaded through their comments: "When I return I'll have to fight this war all over again," was the way they put it.

"No matter what we do, nobody pays us any mind," was the final conclusion.

The fact is, even the most uninformed Negro GI I talked with questioned the usefulness of risking his life.

I asked one of the Negro chaplains what he said to the men to stimulate their morale. He shrugged helplessly.

When I talked with the Chief of Staff, Col. McCaffery, he offered no solution to this distressing morale. The Negro officers frankly admitted they were helpless, except to stir the men with "racial patriotism." They said the men would go to the death for each other, but not for any abstract slogan. They were clearly cynical about the announced objectives of the war.

As it turned out, what actually I discovered in the ranks of the 92d Division reached deep in the social patterns of U. S. life. Neither whites nor Negroes were ultimately responsible. They were all caught up, victims of an ugly condition. For what was wrong with the division could never be corrected in Italy. 6-10-45

So, with this discovery, I sought the facts. I know I have them and I will try to put into perspective a sad chapter in our military history—one that has embarrassed us with our troops, caused racial conflicts and misunderstanding among them, embarrassed us with our Allies, and produced a certain cynicism among the liberated peoples as to the ultimate meanings of America's participation in the war.

These were the first Negro troops to arrive in Cherbourg, France.

92nd Officer Put in Service Outfits

10-30-45

WASHINGTON

Following is the list of 92nd Division officers who have been transferred from combat units to general service and engineer units pending their shipment home:

First Lts. Gerald Walker, Arthur E. Wiggins, Robert L. Doyle, Robert B. Hill, Elridge T. Pankey, Samuel G. Morgan, Millard B Smallwood, George E. Bizzell George E. Pope Jr., Charles Thomas Jr., Noah F. Bradley, Cecil R. LaViscount, Richard W Hughes, Randall F. Brady, Charles W. Jones, George A. Johnson, Louis K. Hanks, and Ossie G Alexander; Second Lts. George H. Yeadon, Porter L. Baymon, George L. Dickson, Edward A. Johnson Jr.; Capts. John S. Raneo, Alvin P. M. Hall, Percy C. May, Albert A. Briggs, William F. Davidson, Hondon B Hargrove, and Clifford R. Moore; Chaplain (Capt.) John R. Wesley, and W.O. (junior grade) James C. Ball.

Reveal Casualties Of Combat Division

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

5th Army Head In Chicago Calls 92nd 'Valuable Asset' In Battle

6-9-45

A high tribute by General Mark Clark, commander of the 5th Army, to the valor and courage of the all-Negro 92nd Division was heard by thousands of Chicagoans in a moving Memorial Day welcome Wednesday for the hero of Italy.

Lined up along Michigan avenue five and ten deep, cheering Southsiders joined the entire city of Chicago in greeting the general who flew here from Paris. General Clark rode down the boulevard in the heart of the Negro community on his way from the airport and was applauded by the huge multitude that lined the streets.

Flying in with the general were three Chicago Negro veterans of the Italian campaign.

Lt. Thomas Jefferson, 6231 S. Wabash avenue, an Air Medal winner of the 332nd Fighter Group, and credited with shooting down the last enemy plane bagged on the Italian front.

Lt. Albert Loving Jr., 5327 Indiana avenue, a field artilleryman.

Sgt. Zachary Love, 6027 S. Michigan avenue.

Also in the party was Sgt. William C. Chaney, General Clark's Negro orderly.

The Negro soldiers were greeted by their relatives and friends at a reception downtown in the Loop, where General Clark spoke at the Congress Plaza and told some 60,000 Chicagoans: "Our Negro troops were among our most valuable assets."

6-9-45

He spoke of the "glorious 92nd."

Flying here directly from Paris with four Negro heroes among 52 hand-picked campaigners, General Clark refused to discuss the Truman Gibson report that units of the 92nd had "melted away" in face of enemy fire.

"I do not want to discuss the Gibson report," Clark said at his first press conference after admitting he had "heard of" the claim by the Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

6-9-45

"I have given you my account of the 92nd Division. I think that speaks for itself," Clark said flatly.

General Clark spoke openly and warmly about the activities of his lone Negro division, which he had watched carefully since their first entrance into Italy. While refusing to be drawn into any extended argument over tre Gibson report, made after the civilian aide's short visit to the Italian front, Clark definitely indicated that he did not share similar views.

"Many of our troops in Italy were at first confronted with inadequacies," General Clark said in detailing the record of the 92nd which was employed on the West Coast of Italy.

Test Offensive

He said that while the 92nd was not at first "strong enough for a full push," it had been decided "in order to confuse the enemy" and to test the strength of the Nazi Western defense zone to launch the 92nd on an offensive in that area.

6-9-45

"It was a tough assignment," General Clark said. "They did not succeed in taking their first objective—just as many other divisions have been stopped when running unexpectedly into heavy defenses. But they did succeed in accomplishing what they set out for. We wanted to know how strong the Boche were in that sector. We found they were plenty strong."

Delighted With Results

General Clark stated that he had then asked that the 92nd be given "more power to do the job" and to bring up the 92nd to full-scale fighting strength.

"They finally sent us an additional regiment from France," he said, after which the 92nd was launched on a preliminary assignment.

"They took La Spezia immediately," said General Clark, "much to my delight and surprise." He said they went on from there to take Genoa and other important Nazi strongholds.

General Clark's statement that he was "entirely satisfied" with the performance of the 92nd was the first official rebuttal of the highly-publicized report made by Gibson and used repeatedly to discredit Negro troops.

Asked concerning the performance of the 332nd Squadron based in Italy, General Clark referred the question to his Air Commander, Major General Nathan F. Twining.

6-9-45

"The 332nd gave an excellent account of themselves," Major Twining said. "Starting in June, of their first year, they scored repeated successes as escorts for our heavy bombers."

Twining cited Colonel B. O. Davis Jr., as an "outstanding flyer who had turned in a fine job as commander of the 99th Pursuit Squadron."

"At one stage of the fighting, Colonel Davis and his men flew 800 miles on a combat mission to Berlin—the longest combat mission flown during the war," he said.

General Twining also cited Lt. Thomas Jefferson, 6231 Wabash, for having shot down the last enemy plane to be downed during the Italian campaign.

6-9-45

Because of military security, reunions of the Negro soldiers with their families were out of the question at the airport where they arrived in three C-47's with other heroes of the Italian campaign. But at the Palmer House, there were happy moments for Lt. Jefferson who was met by his mother, Mildred, and Lt. Loving who was greeted by his parents.

CLOUD ON FIGHTING ABILITY LIFTED

Pittsburgh Courier Pgh., Pa.

6-9-45

CHICAGO—The man who should know the good points and faults of the Ninety-second Infantry Division has had his say. During a Memorial Day ceremony here in Palmer House, tall, tanned General Clark hailed the Division as "the glorious Ninety-second."

In the Windy City with fifty-two American heroes of the Italian campaign, four of them Tan Yanks, General Clark explained the battle behavior of the Ninety-second, but declined to enter into a controversy with Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, about the contributing factors that caused the Division's publicized retreat.

EXPLAINS "BLOODY NOSE"

Explaining the Ninety-second's "bloody nose," General Clark said the Division was stationed on the West Coast of Italy just before the battle of Bologna and his forces were faced with many inadequacies. The Canadian Corps had been moved out to help General Montgomery in another area, creating a need for reinforcements. He declared there was a movement of troop mobilization in the area and it was necessary to keep the enemy confused as the Germans already were worried about Genoa.

A West Coast attack was planned, the general continued, and the Ninety-second knew the area and was assigned to the objective. "Like many other outfits facing enormous odds, they failed to take that objective at that time. That's how they got the bloody nose."

6-9-45

SAYS HE NEEDED TAN YANKS

Addressing an army of newspapermen, General Clark said members of the Division accomplished "later objectives in splendid fashion. They jumped into LaSpezia, and with other Fifth Army units, took Bologna. Then they moved into Genoa and took it, much to the surprise of the enemy and Headquarters. I needed the Ninety-second and if anyone had tried to take it from me I would have protested loudly."

The General and his fifty-two heroes of the U. S. Fifth Army arrived here triumphantly in C-54 transport planes, accompanied by swarms of fighter ships. They were paid a great tribute. They were welcomed by a seventeen-gun salute and then wined and dined by the Mayor and City officials.

TWO TAN OFFICERS WITH GROUP

6-9-45

The quartet of Negro Gi's with General Clark were Lieut. Albert A. Loving, 5327 Indiana Avenue; Lieut. Thomas Jefferson, 6231 S. Wabash Avenue, and Sgt. Zachary Love, 6207 Michigan Avenue, all of Chicago, and M/Sgt. William C. Chaney of Washington, D. C.

General Clark admitted that the Ninety-second was an inexperienced fighting group and that what happened to the Division has happened to other inexperienced divisions. He also pointed out that the first assignment given the Ninety-second was tough and that the Division had all the elements of a fighting division, but lacked sufficient numerical strength to launch the attack. He said at that time he wrote General Marshall for another regiment to supplement the Ninety-second.

CLOUD OF DOUBT LIFTED

The to-the-point statement by General Clark, himself a Chicagoan, lifted the cloud of doubt that had befogged the performance of the Ninety-second Division in Italy. Already nursing a "bloody nose," the Division was given a black eye when newspapers distorted and twisted a report made by Mr. Gibson.

6-9-45

Also coming in for praise was the 332nd Fighter Group, commanded by Col. B. O. Davis Jr. Backing up General Clark's praise of the Tan Fliers was General Nathan F. Twining, commander of the Fifteenth Air Force. He said: "Those boys were excellent fighters and one of them shot down the last two Germans in the battle of Europe."

PRAISES YOUNG DAVIS

He also lauded Colonel Davis as an outstanding flier and praised his command of Tan Fliers on long range missions to Berlin.

General Clark spoke highly of the cooperation between twlve nationalities who fought together during the campaign against the Germans.

6-9-45

Lieutenant Loving was a forward aerial observer of headquarters battery of the 600th Field Artillery, Ninety-second Division. He was flown in 175 air missions and wears the Air Medal with a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster and three Battle Stars.

SHOOTS DOWN LAST NAZI PLANES

Lieutenant Jefferson, a P-51 Mustang fighter pilot of the 332nd, destroyed two of the last German planes credited to the Fifteenth AAF in a aerial combat. He wears the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters.

Sergeant Love was a platoon leader, mortar platoon. He wears the Purple Heart, a Bronze Star, Combat Infantry Badge and the ETO Ribbon with three Battle Stars.

Sergeant Chaney has been with General Clark for many years. His military decorations include the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star and six Battle Stars.

616 Missing In Action; Figures Compared With White Units

Chicago Defender

6-9-45

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The 92nd all-Negro infantry division suffered a total of 3161 casualties in the Rome-Arno campaign, it was learned officially from the War Department this week.

Preliminary figures on troop losses which began with the crossing of the Arno on September 1, 1944, and covering the battles of the Serchio Valley and the Cinquale Canal, give total casualties accounted for through April 30, 1945. These show 330 killed in action—2215 wounded in action—and 616 missing in action making a total of 3161.

Chi. Ill.

These figures are based on a normal division strength placed roughly at 15,000 men, and are subject to revision, the War Department said.

The 92nd Division, officered by approximately 600 Negro and 300 white officers was a part of the Fifth Army under the command of Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott. The Fifth Army was a part of the 15th Army Group commanded by Gen. Mark Clark.

6-9-45

Two Negro Officers

Two Negro officers in the division held command positions over units larger than company strength. These were Lt. Col. Wendell Derricks, commanding officer of the 597th Field Batallion, and Lt. Col. Marcus Ray, commanding officer of the 600th Field Artillery Battalion. Battalion strength is roughly 1000 men.

When the 92nd was committed to combat, on September 1, 1944, it was under the command of General Mark Clark, then commanding general of the Fnfth Army. Following its initial battle experience, the Negro doughboys were told by General Clark that the unit had fought well.

6-9-45

A comparable all-white infantry division in the Italian sector which also participated in the Rome-Arno campaign was the 10th Mountain Division under the command of Maj. Gen. George P. Hays.

Committed to action at about the same time as the 92nd, this division participated in approximately the same number of engagements suffering a total casualty loss of 3576 through April 30, 1945. Of this number 673 were killed in action—2749 wounded in action—and 154 missing in action. Most white divisions have Negro troops attached in some capacity.

6-9-45

In contrast, several white divisions on the western front suffered casualties which exceeded the total number of men in a divisions. Replacements were constantly sent into these divisions. The War Department explained rapidly, the acting secretary said, that men counted as "missing in action" may be dead, prisoners of war, lost, or absent without leave. Acting Secretary of War Robert Patterson said that more than 90,000 former prisoners of war have been returned to our military control, or, are believed to be in the hands of allied forces and in the process of being returned to our control in the European theatre. The return of the men to the United States is going forward rapidly, the acting secretary said. It is not expected that many of those who are carried as missing will appear later as prisoners of war.

Convicted 92nd Afro-American Capt. Now in U.S.

6-16-45

GREEN HAVEN, N.Y.—LeRoy A. Clay of Baltimore, former captain on the staff of the 92nd Division in Italy, is now confined at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks here.

Clay, convicted by court martial on a charge of failing to obey the orders of a superior, was first sentenced to serve 50 years and dishonorably discharged. This was cut to 20 following a review by the judge advocate of the Mediterranean theatre. 6-16-45

Seek Further Review

Efforts are being made for a further review on the ground that an important document was not admitted in evidence at the original trial and that the testimony of some of his superiors was at variance with the facts.

Under Army regulations, six months must elapse from the time a sentence is begun before the War Department will grant a review. After that, an annual review is possible.

Favorable action could result in one of two things, further reduction of sentence or a pardon from the President.

Reports are current that of 20 officers in the Mediterranean theatre, nine have faced court martial proceedings and sentenced to varying terms. Balt., Md.

Clay, who was graduated in 1931 as a second lieutenant from Howard University's ROTC, has been connected with the Army ever since, serving with the Maryland National Guard before it was Federalized. He is married and has one child.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUN
Circ. D. 277,172

JUN 18 1945

92D NEGRO DIVISION TAKES TRACK TITLE

Milan, Italy, June 18 (A. P.).—The Fifth Army's track and field championships wound up in a runaway yesterday for the runners and jumpers of the Ninety-second Negro Division.

They won nine of thirteen events, placed ten of thirteen competitors and finished one-two in four events. The division rolled up 65 points, paced by Pfc. William Dillard, onetime Baldwin-Wallace timber topper from Cleveland, who zipped to a pair of Mediterranean theater of operations records in taking the 100-meter high hurdles in 15.35 seconds and the 200-meter low hurdles in 25.2.

The Tenth Mountain Division finished second with 22 points, winning only the 3,000-meter walk, which John M. Huber, 39-year-old heel and toe specialist from East Orange, N. J., took in 16:41.5.

Hugh Short, onetime ace Georgetown University stepper from Hillside, N. J., now in the Eighty-fifth Division, shattered the M. T. O. record in the 400 meters with a 50.4 victory.

Pfc. Mitchell Williams, who captained Penn State's freshman cross-country team a few years back, captured the 1,500-meter run on a rain check in 4:16.4 after the Tenth Mountain Division's Dave Williams, former Georgetown miler and meet favorite who finished first, was disqualified.

In addition to Short and Dillard, other record breakers were three Ninety-second Division representatives — Sergt. Thenlo Knowles, Santa Monica, Cal. (formerly San Jose State), who won the 800 meters in 2:02.1; Pfc. Russell Jones, Lawnside, N. J., and Sergt. Lloyd Crable, Cleveland, who deadlocked at 6 feet 1 inch in the high jump—and Sergt. Mose Ellerbee, from Tuskegee Institute, former N. C. A. A. sprint champion, who won the 100 meters in 11.6 seconds.

All contestants wore sneakers instead of spike shoes.

Ottley's Probe On 92nd Indicts Democracy

Birmingham Ala. Weekly Review

NEW YORK — (ANP) — The un-Christian indignities heaped upon soldiers of the 92nd division, according to an investigation recently launched in Italy by Roi Ottley, stands as an ugly indictment against American democracy and human decency.

Ottley, who has served as war correspondent, found that both the whites and Negroes are victims of ugly social patterns of American life. What was wrong with the division, he discovered, could never be corrected in Italy. The blame for the division's battle failures must fall on its white commanders.

"If someone should insist on pinning the rap," he said, "the sole blame for the 92nd's poor showing ultimately would fall in the lap of the white command. Because, actually, the division is not an all-Negro outfit. The bulk of the officers are white. Every officer in the high command is white. Negroes therefore had no part in planning operations. If the plans failed, the fault lies with those who originated them."

Ottley said the 92nd division probably would not have been singled out for criticism if the war department had not sent Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the secretary of war to Italy. "What the motive was seems vague at this distance," he observed, "because no noticeable change has been made in the outfit."

That investigation, he said, turned out to be a bomerang against jimcrow by placing a "blazing focus on a disgraceful situation in the U. S. Army. Even the GI's are beginning to ask the reason. 7-7-45

"The indictment, then, must be leveled at the failure of American democracy," Ottley analyzed.

The war correspondent found that even the uninformed Negro GI questioned the wisdom of risking his life. Here are some of their comments:

"I know I'm not going to get a break when I get home," Another replied: "Yeah, so I don't want to be a hero."

The general feeling was: "This is Mr. Charlie's fight" — meaning the war is a white man's affair.

"When I return, I'll have to fight this war all over again," remarked one, while another said: "No matter what we do, nobody pays us any mind."

Among the indignities that the men of the 82nd suffered, one that amazed and even antagonized Italians, was the reprisals directed against Negro soldiers and the Italian girls.

"If you dance with Negro soldiers," one confided, "your permit to go to the offirecs' club (white) will be taken away."

Subtle reprisals against Italian girls for associating with Negro soldiers were particularly resented by members of the 92nd. They said that Italian girls who worked with the U. S. Army were threatened with dismissal for fraternizing with Negro troops.

Other grievances, Ottley discovered, were the mistreatment of Negro officers; their criticism of the use of service and labor battalion troops for infantry duty and the anti-Negro attitude of Maj. General Edward A. Almond, 92nd commander.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, fifth army referred to the 92nd as the "glor- radio speech in Chicago. But Ott- radio speec hin Chicago. But Ottley points out that the battle record of the 92nd, due largely to the morale of the men, is considered in many quarters as a failure and an indictment against American democracy.

36 Soldiers Of 92nd Killed In Italy By Nazi Mine Explosion

N. Y. Age

ROME — 36 Negro soldiers of the 92nd Division and 12 Italians were killed and 48 Negro soldiers and 8 Italian civilians were seriously injured, Wednesday, in the explosion of a store of German mines at Viareggio. N. Y. N.Y.

Names of the casualties were not released pending notification of next of kin. 7-28-45

An American Red Cross enlisted men's club was nearly demolished by the explosion, and 48 Negro soldiers in the club were seriously injured in the blast.

Miss Mary Leach, a Red Cross worker from Montclair, N. J., who was in a hotel seven blocks away, said the blast shook the building violently. Windows were smashed within a radius of five blocks.

All of the dead and injured soldiers were from the 92nd Infantry Division or attached units.

92nd Did Not 'Melt Away' Because It Was Not Even There at Time, Says Eye-Witness

The Call Kansas City, Missouri 9-14-4

NEW YORK.—The 92nd infantry division was not even at the front at the time last December when Newsweek magazine and Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, charged it with "melting away," according to a story told by a Negro officer just returned from Italy.

The officer told his story to Roy Wilkins who used it in his column appearing regularly in the Michigan Chronicle and the Los Angeles Sentinel.

The story as told by Wilkins is as follows:

"This officer did not serve with the 92nd, but with a unit of combat engineers, so that he cannot be accused of defending himself, although every man in the 92nd has that right. His story is that the 92nd division DID NOT run away and was not knocked out, losing 10 or 12 miles of valuable territory in the closing days of last December. The 92nd did not run because the 92nd WAS NOT IN THE FRONT LINE AT THAT TIME. 9-14-45

"All three regiments of the regular 92nd division were taken out of the sector, he relates. One regiment was sent to another sector, miles away. One regiment was withdrawn to a rest camp for recuperation. One regiment was held in reserve, behind the front line.

"Into the front line, designed to be held by a triangular (3-regiment) division, was sent ONE regiment of colored soldiers whose designation was simply that they were "attached to" the 92nd. This regiment was all-Negro, from colonel to the last private. It had been doing guard duty from the outbreak of the war, first on the Eastern seaboard of the United States, and later in Italy.

"In Italy it had been split up and various parts were guarding airfields, becoming known as air base security battalions.

"Suddenly, the parts of this regiment were ordered together and with ONLY TWO WEEKS of preparation, were ordered into the front line to hold a sector that had been held by an entire division. This two-week period, says my informant, was barely long enough for the men to be properly outfitted, to say nothing of being trained for combat.

"Bear in mind that this regiment had had no actual combat training to enable it to take a front line position against veteran German troops. They were spread thin, so thin that a German patrol could easily punch through their lines. Their Negro colonel was in the hospital at the time his men were suddenly ordered to duty and he is reported to have protested vigorously against the assignment, saying it was not fair to his men to place this duty upon them without training.

"So the Germans, finding not only green troops before them, but very few troops, punched ahead, infiltrated behind the American lines, spread panic, and drove our men back a dozen miles. It was several days before the regular 92nd men could be thrown back into the breach, but when they got under way they recovered all the lost ground, as reported in the daily papers here Jan. 2.

"If this is the true story, then the men of the 92nd have a right to be boiling mad. My informant said: 'I saw the big strong men crying in frustrated rage when they read what Gibson had released to the newspapers. It was like putting a sand lot team in Yankee uniforms and then saying the Yankees got shellacked.'

"Again, if this story is true it means that someone higher up was determined to bring discredit on Negroes as fighting men This green regiment was deliberately given an impossible task to "show them up" and reflect on the race. In this war all the jujitsu and dirty fighting was not used on the enemy; the colored boys caught plenty of it."

92nd Division Is Vindicated

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

Commander Decorated for Unit's Operations

ALMOND GETS DSM

9-8-45

Credit Given for Gains in Serchio Valley

WASHINGTON

Operations of the 92nd Infantry Division, whose performance in Italy has been alternately praised and damned, were successful, according to a citation awarding the Distinguished Service Medal to Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, its commanding officer.

The citation points out that the division entered combat under adverse conditions and that its troops were spread over a wide area on both sides of the flooded Serchio River, with small detachments scattered throughout the mountains on each side of the valley. Supply across the river was a tremendous problem and communications with the scattered units over bad roads and into the steep mountains were very difficult, the citation states. 9-8-45

Serchio Valley Gains Cited

General Almond is given credit in the citation for the advance which elements of the division made up the Serchio Valley in their first combat assignment in September and October, 1944.

The success with which he solved the problems of supply and communications, the citation states, "is indicated by the fact that the Serchio Valley was cleared of the enemy before the 92nd Division was moved to another sector in October," the citation also states: 9-8-45

Job a "Holding One"

"The division's assignment on the Fifth Army's left flank was a holding one, but he disposed his troops so expertly that the 92nd Division was able to tie down one Italian and two German divisions, preventing their use in more active areas where they were needed.

"With his troops deployed on a front of more than 40 kilometers throughout the winter months, he established an active defense and launched limited-objective attacks while preparing for future operations. 9-8-45

Took Two Cities

"In the initial phase of the Fifth Army's spring offense his division, attacking vigorously, seized the dominating terrain whcih constituted the right anchor of the Gothic Line on the Ligurian Coast and, in ensuing operations, captured La Spezia and the vital port of Genoa.

"Through his determined efforts, the advance of the 92nd Division and attached elements along the Ligurian Coast was conducted with such rapidity that German troops were captured in large numbers and were forcibly prevented from putting into effect their plans to demolish port installations in La Spezia and Genoa.

"His fighting spirit, aggressiveness and rare tactical ability were largely responsible for the success of his division's operations."

General Praises 92nd in Farewell

Afro-American 9-8-45

ITALY — "Always take pride in what you have done when you return to civilian life. Take credit for your accomplishments. You have enough to be proud of — remember that." Balt. Md.

Thus spoke Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond recently in his farewell address to men of the 92nd Division which he activated, trained and led into combat.

92nd's Action Brings Award

While leader of the 92nd, General Almond was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star he received during World War I 9-8-45

The cluster was for his planning and execution of an active defense on a broad front with a minimum number of troops throughout last winter's grueling campaign and for the whirlwind drive he led up the Ligurian coast to crush the last remnants of the enemy in that sector.

92nd Veterans Land in States

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Among 500 Troops to Arrive at Shanks

2 FROM BALTIMORE

Jap Surrender Halted Plans for Pacific Trip

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

CAMP SHANKS, N.Y.—Among the 500 colored troops arriving at Piermont Pier on the Sea Scamp Wednesday, were combat veterans of the 92nd Infantry Division who fought the enemy to a standstill in Italy. 9-15-45

Most of the men had at least three battle stars, Bronze Stars, good conduct medals, and quite a few had been decorated with the Purple Heart.

In Aviation Squadrons

Transferred only last July to the 480th, 483rd, 484th and 485th Aviation Squadrons, most of the troops had seen plenty of action as members of the 365th, 370th and 371st Infantry Regiments.

These soldiers were scheduled to go to the South Pacific and were in Naples staging area when the news of victory over Japan was announced. They went wild with joy on learning they would be heading back to the States.

Many Overseas 32 Months

The Sea Scamp left Naples on Aug. 25. Souvenirs brought back by the veterans include German Luger pistols, German P-38's, which are light pistols, and Italian berets. Some of the boys learned how to speak Italian well.

Most of the men in the 484th Aviation Squadron have been overseas 32 months or more and have at least 82 service points.

Among the men interviewed by the AFRO were six colored officers. They were:

Capt. Robert Hough of Catesville, Pa., Lts. Paul Adams of Greenville, S.C., and Stanley L. Braithwaite of New York City, all of the 484th Aviation Squadron and Capt. Robert W. Hainsworth Houston, Tex.; Lts. Oscar J. Young, Milwaukee, Wis., and Thomas Augustine, Oberlin, Ohio, all of the 485th Aviation Squadron. 9-15-45

Former D.C. Patrolman

A former D.C. patrolman, Capt. Hough, previously was with the 365th Infantry Regiment in the 92nd, has 3 battle stars, a Bronze Star, a Purple Heart, and a combat infantry badge.

"The men are darn glad to ge back," he told the AFRO. "The had a tough life and did a goo job."

Wanted to Stay in Italy

Lt. Adams, who once served as an intelligence officer with the "not too happy about coming back, as Italy is a beautiful country and a good place to live in."

Lt. Braithwaite, on the other hand, was "very happy to be back in the States."

He was wounded while serving with the 599th Field Artillery of the 92nd, has 3 battle stars, a Purple Heart and a Bronze Medal.

Baltimoreans in Group

Former 92nd enlisted men arriving on the Sea Scamp included: Cpls. Clarence Darden and Cecil Bolding of Baltimore; Christopher Blassingame, Philadelphia; Pvt. Joseph F. Booth, Washington; Pfc. Carol Bailey, Philadelphia, all of the 483rd Squadron, and Sgt. Earl Cabell, Newark, of the 484th.

Also with the 484th was Cpl. Richard Woodridge of Newark who served with the 909th Air Base Security Battalion attached to the 15th Air Force. He has four battle stars and has been in the service three years.

"Felt Free Again"

"I felt like a bird when the news of victory came," Corporal Blassingame told the AFRO. "I felt free again." He has three battle stars.

Pvt. Booth, who fought with the 371st Infantry and has 2 battle stars, said he considered the battle of Pietrasanta the toughest because of the heavy artillery fire and natural mountain barriers that had to be crossed.

"I really appreciate being back after going through such arduous battles," he said.

Pvt. Wardlow, who was with the 371st Infantry and has 3 battle stars said, "I feel great on being back. I'm going to call my wife from Camp Shanks."

Tells of Narrow Escape

Cpl. Clandes Marchbanks of Youngstown, Ohio, also of the 92nd, was almost captured during the battle of Pietrasanta, when an enemy patrol attacked the house in which he and 10 other men were staying.

The intruders, however, were frightened off, he said, when the officer in charge fired a carbine at one of the men who had crept into the room where Marchbanks and the officer were staying.

Given Steak Dinners

All the troops were taken to Camp Shanks upon debarkation and given steak dinners with all the trimmings, including double portions of ice cream and cake.

After 24-hour processing, they were sent to various reception centers nearest their homes.

Among other men from nearby and New York City aboard the Sea Scamp were:

NEWARK

Pfc. Robert H. Scott, 28 Avon Pl.; T/4 Otis T. Boatwright, 17 Rose St.; Pfc. James Evans, 37 Barclay St.; Pfc. Lester Mitchell, 42 Pennington St.; Pfc. Thomas Orr, 105 Waverly Ave.; Pfc. Charles D. Simmons, 531 Bergen St.; Pfc. John Burkhalter, 173 Howard St.; Pfc. Benjamin DeShazior, 118 Wright St.; Pfc. James H. Thomas, 32 Chester Ave.; Pfc. George Ingram, 365 Bergen St.;

Sgt. Earl C. Cabell, 274 Prince St.; Cpl. Samuel J. Donaldson, 416 Woodside Ave.; Cpl. Paris Gregory, 139 Fleming St.; Cpl. Richard Woolridge, 108 Warren St.; Pfc. James A. Clark, 70 Monmouth St.; Pvt. James Bell, 62 Barclay St.; Pvt. Gerald B. Spencer, 45 Crawford St.; Pvt. Herbert B. Jones, 29 Hillside St.;

NEW YORK CITY

Cpl. Cecil V. McAdams, S/Sgt. Austin G. Alexander, S/Sgt. Cieto Hewlett, Sgt. Punter W. Jack, T/5 Aldred H. Harrison, Sgt. Leviticus Bacon; Sgt. James W. Mitchell, T/5 Robert A. Bulger, Pfc. George Morgan, Pfc. Thomas Wilson, Pvt. Angel W. Castro, Pvt. LaGrain O. Garrett, Pvt. Francis Mitchell;

Cpl. Johnnie Young, Pfc. O. H. Hudmon, Pfc. Connie J. Smith, Pfc. Bishop C. Rouse, Pfc. Herbert E. Spears, Pvt. Leslie N. Foster, Pfc. John T. I. Smith, T/5 Stanley A. Smith, Pfc. Louis Ball, Pfc. Anderson G. Bell, Pfc. Clarence E. Thompson, Pfc. Boston A Wingate;

Pvt. Wardlow Desmond, Pvt. George Foster, Cpl. James T. Leak, Pfc. Charles W. Congress, Pvt. Leonard N. Nelson, Cpl. William Allen, Cpl. Lincoln Shufford, Pfc. Gerald O. Sewell, Pfc. Henderson Ward Jr., Pvt. Fred Killingsworth and Pvt. Arthur Williams.

BALTIMORE

Pfc. Mason A. Hawkins, 1532 Druid Hill Ave.; Pvt. Howard E. Garner, 1308 Myrtle Ave.; Pvt. Paul W. Speaks, 1341 N. Stricker St.; Pfc. David Collins, 503 N. Stricker St.; Pfc. George O. Frisby, 421 Foster Ave.; Pfc. Henry Jones, 30 Regester St.; Pvt. Irving Nelson, 1616 Bradley Ave.; Pvt. John A. Smith, 102 Fleming Dr.; Pvt. William I. Wells, 2515 Madison Ave.;

Cpl. Howard M. Wilks, 1029 W. Lexington St.; Pfc. Dalfield M. Jordon, 2228 Etting St.; Pfc. Charles E. Poole, 16 N. Bruce St.; Pvt. Thomas E. Williams, 556 Presstman St.; Cpl. Cecil A. Bolding, 908 Central Ave.; Cpl. Burford E. Monroe, 1155 N. Stricker St.; Pfc. James J. Allen, 4 N. Stockton St.; Pfc. Chauncey M. Davis, 1135 N. Gilmor St.; Pfc. Bruce A. Williams, 139 W. Preston St.;

First Sgt. Marion G. Evans, 1317 N. Central Ave.; Sgt. Atlas M. Adams, 921 N. Central Ave.; Cpl. Ralph W. Doran, 1218 Division St.; Pfc. Calvin N. Tinson, 1436 E. Madison St.; Pvt. Alfred Kidd, 1023 N. Wolfe St.; Pfc. Harry Dorsey, 514 Bloom St.; Pvt. Octavious Clark, 1025 Edmondson Ave.; Pvt. Theodore Donnelly, 1707 Llewelyn Ave.; Pvt. Elmer White, 508 Carey St. Cpl. Raymond Winkler, 522 N. Carey St.

PHILADELPHIA

Sgt. Frederick Vaughn, 3838 N. Cevier St.; Cpl. James H. Carter, 27 N. Peach St.; Cpl. Warren Ford, 672 N. 79th St.; Pfc. Walter Harlee, 2547 Ellsworth St.; Pvt. Wesley Roache, 754 S. 15th St.; Cpl. James Kelly, 44 W. Wayata St.; Pfc. John H. Bell Jr., 1530 N. 13th St.; Pfc. Emmitt K. Holland, 3111 Croskey;

Pvt. Freddie Carter, 1627 W. Morris St.; Pvt. Robert Dent, 8418 Bartram Ave.; Pvt. Leroy White, 701 Brooklyn St.; Pfc. Kenneth L. Baylor, 48 53rd St.; Pfc. Richmond B. Crim, 1746 Woodstock; Pfc. Alphonso Davis, 2405 Warmach St.; Pfc. Jesse Dawkins, 926 S. 11th St.; T/5 John Barr, 1110 Pine St.;

Pvt. Ralph N. Kyser, 132 Manton St.; Sgt. Marion Jones, 2700 W. Oxford St.; Pfc. Carol Bailey, 528 Dudley St.; Pfc. Frederick W. Bryant, 1323 Bouvier St.; Pfc. Floyd Hill, 2150 N. 21st St.; Pfc. Joseph Hughes, 22 E. Collom St.; Pfc. Kelly Beard, 2546 Grays Ferry Ave.; Pvt. William R. Douglas, 2118 Naudain St.;

Pfc. John W. Lee, 2115 W. Dauphin St.; Pfc. Raymond W. Wing, 2131 Earp St.; Cpl. Samuel E. Eastom, 5047 Haverford Ave.; Pfc. Clarence Gordon, 5509 Blackman St.; Pfc. Lawrence A. Thomas, 1505 French St.; Pvt. James C. Parks, 1914 Annin St.; Pvt. Franklin Richards, 4717 Runnard St.;

RICHMOND

M Sgt. William N. Dickerson, 1205 N. 1st. St.; Pfc. Samuel J. Briley, 1928 Jay St.; Pfc. Solomon Johnson, 2807 Nine Nile Rd.; Pfc. William Robinson, 1010 N. 1st. St. and Pfc. Phillip Thompson, 1321 N. 32nd St.; Pfc. Nathaniel Hunter, 1912 Wood St.; Pfc. Melvin Calvin, 30 Denny St.; Pvt. Henry J. Fisher, RFD-3.

WASHINGTON

Pfc. Rudolph V. Davis, 203 Myrtle St., N.E.; T/5 Harmon E. Pair, 734 Park Road, N.W.; Pfc. Henry J. Brown, 338 W. St. N.W.; T/4 Bethune Rollinson, 116 16th St., N.E.; Pfc. Charles Chandler, 728 19th St., N.E. Pfc. Ralph C. Coleman, 251 Eve St., N.W.; Pfc. Walter Sims, 502 Second St., N.W.; Pfc. Morris M. Hall, 1013 New Jersey Ave., S.E.;

Pfc. James Jackson, 1502 Kingman Pl.; Pfc. Harry M. Lane, 953 26th St., N.W.; Pfc. Clarence L. Medley, 4529 Dick St.; Pfc. Neal Harris Jr., 5500 Sheriff Road, N.E.; Pfc. Clifton Tyler, 2602 Bowen Rd., S.E.; Pvt. Charles T. Brown, 2812 13th St., N.W.; Pvt. Clarence E. Ford, 1345 28th St., N.W.; Pfc. Clyde G. Lessane, 812 Vernon St., N.W. Pfc. Calvin A. Pollard, 1743 Swan St., N.W.; Cpl. Harry T. Humphries, 950 Florida Ave., N.W. Cpl. Herman L. Jones;

WASHINGTON

Pfc. John E. Bailey, 800 44th St.; Pfc. Joseph F. Booth, 1531 6th St.; Pfc. John Powell, 30 K St., N.E.; Pvt. Louis W. Ferguson, 2226 G St., N.W.; S/Sgt. Ralph B. Gilmore, 1021 51st St., N.E.; Cpl. Jerome King, 14 Defrees St., N.W.; Cpl. Phillip L. Thomas, 4623 Hunt Place, N.E.; Pfc. John E. Dean, 24 B St., N.E.; Pfc. Robert L. Autry, 515 N. Peary St.

92nd Veterans Forced to Clean Ft. Benning Latrines

Afro-American

Former Prisoners of War Say Duty "Bitter Pill to Swallow"

Baltimore, Md.

(Continued from Page 1)

liberation, describe Fort Benning as worse than the Nazi prison hovels because of the "vicious" race discriminatoin at the camp and in the surrounding area.

"Bitter Pill for Combat Vets to Swallow"

In a letter to the AFRO this week, a member of the 92nd who has fought in every battle, was wounded and taken prisoner, writing for himself and other members, reports that their plight is "a bitter pill for combat men to swallow."

(Stories of similar mistreatment of white combat veterans hit the papers this week. At Santa Ana, Calif., 40 veterans and former prisoners of war, were placed on KP duty. Brig. Gen. Arthur E. Easterbrook, commanding officer, announced Monday, however, that the KP assignment was "an administrative error which I have corrected.")

The treatment accorded the 92nd veterans has been called to the attention of the War Department, which is investigating, a spokesman told the AFRO. 10-13-45

Following are excerpts from the letter to the AFRO:

"Many of our comrades we left lying in the dust of central Italy, many more in the ice and snow of the Appenines Mountains. Others moved on to capture key cities in the famous Po Valley offensive. And yet others like us rotted in German prison camps until the glad day of liberation.

No J.C. in German Prison Camps

"First of all, the front-line carries no discrimination. Neither, for that matter, did the German prison camps, but the prison camp that is called Fort Benning, Gt., is worse than Dachau or Nurnberg or Parma or Bologna or Luxembourg.

"When we returned to the States a grateful Government gave us a short furlough, a lovely rest in the Dennis Hotel on the boardwalk in Atlantic City. Obviously we were being fattened for the kill.

"Then the ungrateful Government sentenced us to Fort Benning, Ga. (Infantry School). Upon arriving we found that the Infantry School is a Service Battalion.

"Our main occupation is to wash pots, and keep the barracks and latrines clean for officer candidates.

"We have many pass privileges to Georgia, a State whose theme is suppression and degradation. It is a bitter pill for a combat man to swallow. We've trained hard.

"Regardless of popular opinion, General Almond (Ma Gen. Edward M. Almond, 92nd C.O.) deserves laurels for the strict training we received. It made hardened soldiers out of raw recruits. We were prepared to accept all hardship with a grim sort of logic, but now we're in a labor section, service battalion.

"What Crime Have We Committed?"

"Why should ex-prisoners of war be treated thusly economically, so they palm this fear off as race hatred. When What crime have we committed? Yesterday I observed I see people afraid to walk the streets, afraid to talk or speak German cutting grass. Today I observed an American soldier, colored, cutting grass in the same area. It is obvious for their rights, I shudder.

S.S. Troops No Worse Than Georgia Cops

"Hitler is no more a war criminal than Sen. Eastland. The S.S. Troops are no more vicious than the city police of Columbus, Ga.

"The Gestapo is a religious fraternity compared to the people of Georgia. And the German prison camp at Munichsburg is much better than the guardhouse here in Fort Benning.

"We ex-prisoners of war have made every sacrifice to further the war effort, hoping that some of the conditions that existed in this country might be changed. We have hoped in vain. We have suffered in vain and your friends, fathers, husbands, sons, sweethearts have died in vain."

743rd Vets Told to Police Grounds at Fort Dix, N. J.

FORT DIX, N.J.—Members of the 743rd Military Police unit, veterans of two years service in Africa and Italy, who arrived in the States September 21, were assigned to police the grounds when they reported here two days later.

Why Should Race Baiters Live in Peace?

"How are we to be justified for fighting the Jew 'haiters' when the Negro 'baiters' live in peace in our own backyard? We don't advocate anarchy, but we would gladly attack Georgia as readily as we attacked Lucca or more so.

"We can't see why clear sighted people can't realize that here is the most potent case of slave-labor ever conceived.

"The Georgia 'crackers' are afraid of colored people

56n-1945

6-Month Record of 92nd Reviewed by War Dept.

Balt. Md. 4-14-45

238 Win Merit Awards; 1377 Purple Hearts; 7 Commissioned; Heroes, Artillery Praised

ITALY—Since their first combat team crossed the Arno River last September to capture the City of Lucca, men of the 92nd Infantry Division have won 238 merit awards and 1377 Purple Hearts, the War Department announced Monday.

The former included 7 awards of the Legion of Merit, 65 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, and 4 Air Medals.

7 Commissioned

At the end of their first six months in combat, the "Buffaloes" had received 5,991 Combat Infantryman Badges. Altogether, 7,000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy.

Seven men who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot and many others were being considered.

Little Change in Position

Regarding operations, the War Department report said that the 92nd Division had seen only negligible changes in its front-line positions.

It pointed out that one major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed much in men and materiel in pushing the division back to its original starting point.

3 Officers Among Heroes

Listed as heroes of the division's first half-year of combat were Capt. Charles F. Gandy and Second Lt. Theodore O. Smith of Washington, D.C.; Sgt. Rodger Holmes of Hodges, S.C.; Maj. Willis D. Polk, Philadelphia; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Pfc. James Robinson, Atlantic City, N.J., and Pvt. Jake McInnis, Prentiss, Miss.

Those commissioned as second lieutenants while on the battlefield were First Sgt. Gilbert Boothe, Forsythe, Ga.; First Sgt. Joseph Bracy, Boston, Mass.; T/Sgt. Frank Whisonant, Washington, D.C.; T/Sgt. Joseph Fry, Homestead, Pa.; T/Sgt. William Hicks, Cleveland, Ohio; T/Sgt. Caesar O. Rucker, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.; S/Sgt. Ernest L. Carlton, NYC, and T/Sgt. John Birdsong, Washington, D.C.

Pricking of the German lines by patrols, which constantly probed for weak points in the coastal ramparts of the Gothic Line, characterized the chief activity of the 92nd Division, the War Department stated.

Baltimorean Cited

In the course of one patrol action, S/Sgt. Mansfield Mason of Baltimore, Md., notably distinguished himself by heroic conduct.

Acting on information that some Germans had been seen to enter a house near a certain village, Mason's patrol, under the command of Second Lt. Wilbur E. Ledbetter of Washington, D.C., surrounded the building and effectively covered all its approaches.

S/Sgt. Mason then crawled to within 30 feet of the dwelling in the face of withering machine gun fire. He hurled three hand grenades into the building and shifted his position slightly. Out walked five Germans, including an officer, to surrender.

Artillery Praised

Among men of non-combatant units who also won their share of awards was Pfc. Walter L. Gillis of Jonesboro, N.C., a member of a medical detachment, who administered first aid to members of an attacking platoon while intense enemy fire created havoc with the terrain.

The War Department report included comments from Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, 92nd commander, who describes his division's artillery as "magnificent," and from Chief of Staff George C. Marshall, who after inspecting the division, said that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

92nd Advances on Italian Front

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(By Cable) — This whole Italian front swung into action Monday, opening a large-scale spring offensive which is designed to annihilate larger forces of German troops now trapped in Northern Italy.

The majority of the fighting to date by the 92nd since the jump-off last week, including the capture of the towns of Massa and Carrara on the Ligurian Sea coastal sector of this Fifth Army front, has been done by 442nd and 473rd Infantry Regiments, both of which are now operating with this division. 4-28-45

370th In Action

The former is a Japanese-American unit and the latter is a white American unit recently converted from an ack-ack outfit. The 92nd's 370th Infantry Regiment participated in the jump-off and fighting prior to the fall of Massa.

Following the Eighth Army's action ten days ago in an Adriatic costal sector and the 92nd push two days later, other Fifth Army troops launched an attack Monday marking the first time this entire front has been active this year. 4-28-45

Allied units fighting side by side in this new offensive across this peninsula include Americans of both races, British, South Africans, Brazilians, Polish, Indians, Italians, and Jewish brigades.

The Allies on this front are facing some of Hitler's best trained divisions. These troops have been blocked by our air force from escaping through the Brenner pass back to Germany, and as a result have had many months to prepare excellent defensive positions and thoroughly mine vulnerable areas.

Pilots Support Drive

Fighter pilots of the 15th Army Air Force have for past week operated in direct support of preparations for this new Italian front offensive.

Aided by perfect weather, these pilots have escorted 15th AAF heavy bombers striking at enemy installations against which spearheads of attack were aimed. On other occasions the group strafed similar jerry installations.

Few troops here, even recently captured German prisoners queried on subject, believe President Roosevelt's death will have much bearing on the length and outcome of the war.

It is generally conceded that offensive plans have long been laid minutely and will be followed regardless. 4-28-45

Mention of the post war period in Europe, though, is subject for much controversial discussion among GI's here at present.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, 15th Army group commander, conducted services in Florence Sunday in honor of the late President drawing attendance from all races on this front. Throughout the 92nd, chaplains included similar observances in their services in this forward area.

Foreign Service-

92nd Division

Sergeant Emerges A Hero

The Call Kansas City Mo.

Nazis Surrender When Grenades Find Hiding Place

1-26-45

By MAX JOHNSON
NNPA War Correspondent

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY. — The heroic action of S-Sgt. Mansfield Mason of Baltimore resulted in the capture of an entire German patrol, Mason's feat being the outstanding one Among many reconnaissance thrusts made by both sides over the week-end.

The captured German patrol included a German lieutenant, a sergeant and three enlisted men.

Reports reached S-Sgt. Mason's company at an advanced command post that a German patrol was seen to enter a house shortly before daybreak.

Second Lieut. Wilbur Ledbetter of Washington, one of the officers stationed at this front line area, was immediately dispatched with a small patrol of which S-Sgt. was a member to capture or kill the Germans.

Moving across the mined area up a hilly slope, Lt. Ledbetter's patrol surrounded the house where the Germans were hiding at 8 o'clock. The enemy outlook spotted them in the breaking daylight and opened fire.

The 92nd patrol realized the exchange of fire would accomplish little and the question arose of somebody's attempting to approach the house close enough to try to rout the Germans with hand grenades. 1-26-45

S-Sgt. Mason promptly volunteered for this assignment and slowly began crawling toward the house, which was over 150 yards away. While the rest of his patrol attempted to cover his approach by concentrated fire on the house, one of the Germans spotted Mason and opened fire on him with an automatic pistol.

Mason continued his slow crawling forward despite the fire until he was within 30 feet of the house. Then he suddenly raised on his knees and hurled three hand grenades in quick succession inside the house through a window, miraculously escaping the bullets from the German's automatic pistol which was still firing at him. 1-26-45

Mason's grenades fell with such deadly accuracy that the German officer deemed it wise to surrender himself and his four men immediately.

One of the Germans stuck his rifle with a white piece of cloth on it through the doorway and a few seconds after Ledbetter stopped his patrol's fire, the Germans filed outside, hands raised in surrender.

Fall Of La Spezia To 92nd Actual End Of War In Italy

Pittsburgh Courier 5-12-45 Pgh., Pa.

By COLLINS GEORGE, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN GENOA—(Via Cable)—V-E Day came as an anticlimax to men fighting in this theatre as the debacle of German troops has long been apparent to men who, for more than a week, followed in the wake of the fleeing Germans. Negro troops were on nearly all sections of the Fifth Army front at the end of fighting in Italy but did very little in the way of fighting as Jerry did not stop to fight.

Following the fall of La Spezia the war was over and there remained for the Ninety-second Division only the problem of taking over cities and towns liberated by Partisan revolution and German evacuation. Leaving other correspondents at La Spezia, I hitchhiked to Genoa, joining the hub to hub movement of men and materials and vehicles that lined the road there.

RIDES TANK, JEEP

5-12-45

I had no trouble hitchhiking. First Lieut. Henry L. Mills of Detroit, and his driver, T/4 McKenna Jordan of Rand, W.Va., both of the 758th Tank Battalion, picked me up and riding both in tank and jeep, I heard the story of the 758th spearhead push into La Spezia.

Changing cars at Chiavari, I rode into Genoa with Capt. Thomas G. McFall of Charleston, S.C., and First Lieut. Richard A. Granger of Corona, L.I., medics of the 758th. From here into Columbus' birthplace was a triumphal procession as Italians lined the road tossing flowers of all descriptions at every vehicle that passed. Arriving at Genoa at nightfall we ran into street fighting between Partisans and Fascists, the latter making a futile last ditch stand.

T/3 Aldric Allen of Port au Prince, Trinidad, loaned me his cot for the night and I fell asleep while discussing Oklahoma school days with Capt. Jaun Tero Bennett whom I taught at Langston.

Next morning I met two men from the Air Force, both of whom served with Partisans after being shot down in Northern Italy and both of whom escaped from the Nazi prison camp in Genoa during the Partisan revolt. When I asked them about men of Col. B. O. Davis Jr., 332nd Fighter Group, they told me it was a Nazi boast that no Negro pilot was ever taken prisoner but the cemetery in the Udine area of Northern Italy was the billet for all Davis' men who fell into Nazi hands.

5-12-45

That evening I went to Allesandria which the Ninety-second Division had taken over, and leaving there went on to Turin, which a few hours before recon troops of the Ninety-second had taken over from Partisans who had overwhelmed Negro GIs of the division with enthusiastic welcome. On the way back from Turin to Genoa I met Brazalian troops on their way to take over the city but it is an incontrovertible fact that Negro troops of the Ninety-second Division were the first Allied troops in Turin.

GIVEN WARM WELCOME

The following day Captain Taylor and his driver, T/5 Ernest L. Jackson and I set out to find a shorter route to Savona into which units of the white 473rd Regiment, attached to the division, moved into the day before. Riding over precipitious mountain trails we entered villages into which no Allied troops had been at all. Partisans with guns leveled at us feared we were hated Germans fleeing in American costume until we produced identifications.

Once they recognized us, however, flowers, applause and all manner of blessings were showered upon us. Mustering every bit of English they knew, they would say "God bless you," "Welcome" or "You should have come sooner."

Rumors of peace had been flying in the air for days and the wholesale surrender of Jerry units trapped in mountains and upper Po Valley made official announcement of the end of fighting anticlimactic. Men who had chased Jerry for days knew that all fighting had gone and the great question was "What's to become of us now?"

5-12-45

On other parts of the front two battalions of the 370th cleared Serchio Valley and gave chase after Jerry. In some places the regiment was so close upon Germans that they crossed wooden bridges set afire by Jerry before flames had a chance to work destruction.

GUARD PRISONERS

Deeper in mountains east of Serchio Valley the 365th Regiment had the same experience but when the Po Valley was reached, men of the unit were put to guarding an enormous bag of Jerry prisoners and now one battalion is reported serving as port battalion in Naples.

Still farther to the east the 371st Infantry Regiment upheld the flank of the Tenth Mountain Division but later joined the ranks of those guarding Nazi prisoners when the Po Valley rout began.

While no Negro combat units fought in or near Bologna, on the day following capture of that town I saw truck loads of men of the 224th Engineers, whose enlisted men were drawn from the defunct 366th Infantry Regiment, on the way to Bologna to begin important work of reconstruction.

QUESTIONS FUTURE

War is now over in Italy for these men but they are just beginning to worry over their future.

5-12-45

"Will we go home?" "Will the division be put back together again?" "Can I go back to the South after the democratic kindliness of the Italians?" are just a few of the queries men ask me. I can tell them nothing as I don't know. But events of the next few weeks will give them all the answers.

Some observers express the opinion that the division will be broken up, inasmuch as many of the members will be released from service under the new point system, and because of the "inadequacy of training as a complete fighting outfit."

It is believed, too, that selected regiments which saw considerable combat action in Italy will be shipped to the Pacific theatre.

Another theory is that portions of the Ninety-second will be shifted from infantry to service units.

C. O. Praises His Men

'92nd Performed Splendidly'—Almond

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45 Pgh. Pa.

GENOA, Italy—"The Ninety-second Division and its supporting troops have performed splendidly," Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, commanding general, declared in a special message to officers and enlisted men who staged a surprise in the last stages of the war by beating back the Germans and taking several important Italian cities.

"Without the arduous effort and unselfish cooperation on the part of each of you, it would not have been possible to secure the results obtained in so short a time," General Almond continued. "The speed with which our forces reached and occupied Genoa was a distinct surprise not only to the enemy but to our own high command. I am sure there exists in each of you a deep appreciation of a task well done and a satisfaction that will remain with you throughout your lives."

In the pointed message, the general said:

"Following an arduous period of preparation and training, our units moved to the Italian theatre, and some six months ago entered active combat. Experience has taught us much, and has enabled us, during the past month, to have a part in driving a resourceful, cunning and well-trained foe from his chosen defensive positions. Great loss has been inflicted on the 148th German Division and elements of two Italitn Fascist divisions. Three German infantry regiments were driven disorganized from the field and the Fascist units were forced to flee in confusion, abandoning their arms. The enemy losses in killed and wounded were enormous, and many have become our prisoners."

6-2-45

The Ninety-second Division, now a part of the U. S. Fifth Army, is expected to be one of the outfits to return to the United States at an early date. Although not made official, it has been reported that personnel of the division will report to the home station at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., after individual furloughs are completed.

Future of the Ninety-second as a unit has caused much speculation. Nazis on the west coast of Italy were strong and the division lacked the numerical strength to launch the attack.

Admitting that the 92nd, supplemented by another regiment, had been driven back with "a bloody nose," he said that the same thing had happened to other inexperienced divisions and that the 92nd later was able to take all of its objectives.

Against Removal of 92nd

The general, who also expressed belief that he and his men would be assigned to Australia, declared, "There were reports about taking the 92nd from me, but if they had, I would have protested loudly."

Lieutenant Loving, a forward aerial observer of headquarters battery of the 600th Field Artillery, 92nd Division, was flown in 175 air missions. A former clerk-typist, he wears an Air Medal with a Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster and three battle stars.

Got 2 of Last Nazi Planes

Lieutenant Jefferson, a 332nd pilot, destroyed two of the last Nazi planes credited to the 15th AAF, getting 2 ME-109's on April 6. Commissioned a flight officer on Feb. 26, he has the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters.

A former garage mechanic, Sergeant Zachary T. Love, mortar platoon leader with the 371st Infantry, has a Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Combat Infantry Badge, and ETO ribbon with three battle stars.

Master Sergeant Chaney, who has been with General Clark for many years, has served in England, North Africa and Italy. His military decorations include the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, and six battle stars. He was a machine operator in civilian life.

Gen. Clark Proud of 92nd's Record

After American Baltimore, Md.

Praises Tan Warriors on Tour with Heroes

FOUR IN PARTY

5th Army Expected to Go to Australia

6-9-45

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Fresh from the Italian campaign, Gen. Mark W. Clark, speaking during a Memorial Day ceremony here, credited the defeat of the powerful Nazis to his all-American Army, hailing the 92nd Division as "the glorified 92nd."

The general, who also paid tribute to the 332nd Fighter Group, arrived here with fifty-two heroes, four of whom were colored, in C-54 transport planes accompanied by swarms of fighter planes.

6-9-45

The colored members of the party were 1st Lts. Albert A. Loving and Thomas W. Jefferson and Sgt. Zachary T. Love, all of this city, and M/Sgt. William C. Chaney of Washington, the Fifth Army commanding general's orderly.

Explaining the battle behavior of the 92nd Division, General Clark said that its first assignment was tough inasmuch as the Wounded 92nd Heroes In Va. Hospital Tell Courage Of Div.s on Under Fire

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

5-5-45

CAMP PICKETT, Va. — As each new train load of casualties arrives at the huge U.S. General hospital here, a new chapter is written in the combat history of the Negro 92nd Infantry Division front in Italy. Each train brings one or more men from the 92nd; each man brings new material for the chronicler.

Each page has a different plot—each plot its own odd twist—but the time and place are always the same—Somewhere in Italy.

Men of the 92nd had to have guts. Take the case of Captain Edgar B. Felton, of Washington, D. C., CO of Company A, 371st Infantry regiment. After having one of his kidneys ripped out by shrapnel, Captain Felton refused medical aid for himself and ordered the medics to care for his wounded men. He then staggered unassisted back to his command post to report that his forward platoons were pinned down in a German minefield.

And the "Buffaloes" had to have grit. Pfc. C. V. Hudson of Wagoner, S. C., a rifleman with Company L of the 371st Infantry, lay in the snow near Gallicano with a bullet through his chest and listened to a searching party from his own company as they frantically called his name—a call he couldn't answer because each time he tried to speak his mouth choked up with blood. He was forced to lay there helpless and unnoticed as his only means of rescue passed within a few feet.

Crawls Through Snow

Hudson lay there all night choking and bleeding in the snow and when morning came, unable to crawl because of his gaping chest wound, he sat up with his back in the direction of his command post. His feet dragging behind him, looking over his shoulder in the direction of his own lines, he literally pushed his near lifeless body backward across the snow for a quarter mile before he was spotted by aid men and picked up.

Fast thinking is necessary in battle. Private First Class Dugar Lee, of Columbia, S. C., though wounded by mortar fire and cut off from his company by the Germans, stayed three days inside the German lines and is living today to add his bit to the story of the 92nd Division.

5-5-45

A member of Company G of the 366th Infantry, Lee was on an outpost near Borgia, Italy, when he and members of his squad were cut off from his company and trapped in an Italian house.

They fought off all German attempts to drive them from the dwelling and finally forced Jerries to call for artillery.

Watches Germans

When the artillery barrage came, most of the men got out of the house but Lee was seriously wounded by shrapnel. Unable to go with his buddies, he unselfishly insisted that they leave him and save themselves.

That night, Lee crawled from the house and dragged his wounded body to the building where his command post had been, only to be told by a woman Italian Partisan that the Germans were now in possession of the town. Crawling into the basement of the house, the wounded infantryman lay there for three days watching the Germans prepare for a counter-attack by the Allies.

On the second day, Allied planes flew over and gave the town a terrific pounding, blowing up the house next to the one where Lee lay. At one time the Germans actually entered the house to set up an antiaircraft gun but changed their minds.

5-5-45

On the fourth day, the Allies attacked and retook the town and the wounded rifleman was saved.

How Gandy Won Star

It's hard to get Sergeant Roscoe Thompson, of Norfolk, Va., to tell you how he got wounded fighting with the 92nd Division in Italy, because the husky Virginia Union graduate always ends up by telling you what a great guy Captain Charles G. Gandy was.

Captain Gandy was Thompson's commanding officer in Company F of the 370th Infantry Regiment, which was the first unit of the 92nd Division to cross the Arno River last fall. For his "gallantry in action" while leading Thompson and his company, Captain Gandy was posthumously awarded the Silver Star on March 5, 1945.

"Captain Gandy was a brave man," spoke Thompson admiringly. "When he got killed, he was 75 yards out in front of the company. He always took the lead when we were attacking. A sniper got him first with a rifle shot and when we started up to get him, we got pinned down with machinegun fire. The Jerries turned a machinegun on him as he lay there on the ground—just to make sure they had him."

Announce Citation

The citation accompanying the award of the Silver Star to Captain Gandy provides official concurrence to Thompson's eulogy. Released this week by the War department, the citation, in part, reads as follows:

"Captain Gandy was ordered to deploy his company in reinforcement of another company in position on difficult mountainous terrain. He personally led his company out in broad daylight and, through further reconnaissance and by personal example of leadership, succeeded in getting his entire company across a canal with an abrupt twelve-foot wall. This was accomplished in rain and under extremely heavy enemy fire.

"Halting the company at its intermediate objective, Captain Gandy went forward alone to reconnoiter the route of the next movement. While engaged in this activity, he was mortally wounded by enemy machinegun fire. His outstanding gallantry and leadership in combat exemplifies the heroic traditions of the United States army."

Lauds Medics

You can't forget the medics, either, when you are talking to Sergeant Thompson. "Those guys really deserve a lot of credit," he asserted. "They come right up in the lines where the bullets are flying and carry men out. The day I got hit, a medic drove a jeep right up on that hill to the front and got me, and in 45 minutes I was at the head aid station getting treatment."

5-5-45

"How I got hit? Oh, it was just one of those things, I guess," said Thompson. "I left my foxhole to go down to the command post to get the password for the night and was about three feet from my foxhole on my way back, when the Jerries fired a mortar from the reverse side of the hill. It landed next door to me."

Sergeant Thompson was wounded by shell fragments in his back, chest, throat and legs.

Scientist Defends 92d from Newsweek Attack

Afro-American Balt. Md.

[The following letter was sent to the editor of Newsweek Magazine by Dr. Percy L. Julian, director of research and manager of the Fine Chemicals Department at Glidden Company, Chicago.]

3-24-45

"Editor, Newsweek: Your report entitled 'The Luckless 92nd' (Newsweek, February 26) is an unhappy and luckless bit of writing. Psychologically it is a distortion of two 'must' grace to the intelligence of News week's reporting, for on the surface it not only reads like hitting a man when he's 'down' but mauling him when he's 'out.'

"The 'supersensitivity' which Milton Bracker ineptly ascribes to the colored press is shared by every thinking colored person, and indeed should be shared by every thinking white, with regard to the colored people in the U.S. Army. There is hardly a colored person alive who does not consider the Army's segregation principle as 'insult No. 1' to his dignity and self respect.

"Every high school youngster knows the story of how, here in Chicago, Filipinos and Chinese were enlisted on the day after Pearl Harbor and colored boys in the same line of volunteers were turned back 'because provisions haven't yet been made for Negro Divisions.'

Southern General

"Yours and other reports talk of Patton's men, Hodges' men, etc., but you neglected to mention that the 92nd 'belonged' to a Southern white general, put over it, we are told, because he 'understood the boys from the South.'

3-24-45

"How does our understanding Southern gentleman take the defeat? Does he acknowledge any of it as his fault or is it merely further proof that 'Negro soldiers are not fit for front-line combat?'

"From Fort Huachuca where the 92nd was trained, many of us have veritable volumes to prove that they fought a war against home intolerance long before they reached the front.

"That 'casualties were high,' according to your report, shows that they did die. Some of us wonder how a man can gladly die for so little in return and your reporting certainly makes one wonder even more.

3-24-45

Hypocrisy

"Do you really believe that the Army has yet made a 'most extensive and wholehearted effort to give colored American troops a role in the war equal to that of white troops?' Shame on you for such hypocrisy!

"The colored man will never believe this and will probably never put his heart and soul completely into his task until the Army accepts him in the same way it accepts any other American, leaving him to fight, die and be forgotten alongside and just like other Americans. Why not face the facts honestly?

"As a scientist I have invent-ions at the base of two 'must' products for the Army and Navy. In our village my wife and I sold in the Sixth Bond Drive twenty times as many bonds as were ever sold in our section of the community.

3-24-45

"The colored press (not Newsweek) tells us that thirty colored fliers on that same Italian front as the 92 have won the Distinguished Flying Cross, that 25 per cent of the famous Burma road was built by colored soldiers, that colored men were commended for bravery at Bastogne.

"I have talked with several of the brave boys who held on Bouganville; I've looked at their decorations for bravery and heard of those who died there.

"On the home front and 'out there' we're doing our darndest under the stinkiest situation any people ever faced in history. And so the 92nd fails and the casualties are high. Let's remember the casualties and hope for better military luck next time.

"Please cancel my subscription to Newsweek. I can't bear to see it any longer in my home. Very truly yours, PERCY F. JULIAN, 152 S. 14th Avenue, Maywood, Ill."

Maybe the Army can learn things by example, which seem not to dent its consciousness in theory. Take, for instance, the theory that Negro officers are better for the morale of Negro soldiers than white.

Los Angeles Tribune

As long as there is going to be a segregated Army, it is common sense to conclude that Negro soldiers, segregated from the whites, would feel the insult to their personalities less keenly if the leadership qualities of individuals within the race were recognized in the staffing of segregated contingents with Negro officers. 3-5-45

But apparently that's too obvious a conclusion for the Army, too simple a deduction, too much "like folks", just the sort of reaction white soldiers would have to a similar situation. So the Army insisted on white officers, and southern ones at that, for Negro outfits.

Then the 92nd Division was sent overseas, to join the Fifth Army in Italy. And gradually the Army, from necessity, began to promote enlisted men, began to request that Negro officers, cooling their heels in the States, be sent over.

SAME.

Now, the 92nd's officer personnel is two-thirds Negro. There are three Negro lieutenant-colonels, two of them in command of all-Negro field artillery battalions, in addition to others.

And the 92nd Division, taken as a whole, is one of the "fightingest" divisions in Italy. Contained in the words of Cpl. Charles Orrett, quoted in the Army newspaper "Yank", is the reason. Said Cpl. Orrett:

"My outfit is . . . the 92nd Division, and I couldn't do better. I know what I'm talking about because I came to the 92nd from another outfit. I've felt like a different man since I got into the 92nd". 3-5-45

92nd Div. Officer Fights Sentence

AFRO-AMERICAN

Questions Interpretation of Disobeyed Order

4-28-45

PERSECUTION HINTED

Court-Martial Followed Cinquale Canal Disaster

BALT., MD.

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY. (By Cable) — The case of Capt. Leroy A. Clay of Baltimore, 92nd Division staff officer, who recently received a sentence of fifty years and dishonorable discharge as a result of a court-martial, is expected to come up for review within the next ten days by the judge advocate of the Mediterranean theater of operations. 4-28-45

Captain Clay was court-martialled for allegedly failing to carry out an order and failing to obey a direct order. He was convicted on both charges.

Confirmed by Gen. Almond

The sentence was confirmed by the division commander, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, who reviewed the case recently, and review by theatre judge advocate is the last resort here prior to shipment to the States for review there if upheld.

The charges grew out of the 92nd Division's Cinqualle Canal operation last February, when Clay, then serving as assistant divisional operational officer, was sent forward to Cinqualle to take charge of stragglers and reorganize them to carry on the attack. 4-28-45

While acting in this capacity, Clay received a call from a superior officer at division headquarters to contact the commanding officer across the canal and determine what he needed to carry on.

Used Radio

Clay made the contact by radio because the Germans were shelling the beach heavily at the time and tanks refused to carry him across.

The first charge grew out of this, because it was alleged that the telephone orders to him: "Get over to the colonel and find out what he needs," were meant for him to make the trip personally, rather than get the information by radio. 4-28-45

Interpretation Challenged

Clay contended that he did not interpret the orders in this light. He argued that he got the required information by raido and afterwards decided to cross the canal for a further check, but enemy fire was heavy on the beach then and no tank would take him across.

The second charge came two days later when Clay was ordered to the field with one of the 92nd Division's regiments to assume command of a rifle company and division officials contended he failed to comply.

Clay argued that after receipt of this latter order he called the adjutant of this regiment and received permission to report the following day, rather than immediately, and that he was arrested before the following day.

Hints at Persecution

He contended that he had had no field work as rifle company commander since 1936, and that his request to have a short period to arm and familiarize himself with this duty was denied.

He laso contended that this latter charge grew out of the first in that the order to take the rifle company was punishment for his alleged refusal to cross Cinqualle Canal when ordered. There was no denial of this. 4-28-45

His defense was quoted from the Bulletin of the Judge Advocate General 165, paragraph 462, subparagraph 4: "It is an established doctrine of military law that military duties will not be degraded by imposing them as punishments."

On that Clay, who is confined to the Fifth Army stockade here, pins hope for having the case thrown out and being returned to duty.

Long Military Career

Commissioned a second lieutenant in 1931, when he was graduated from the Howard University ROTC, Clay has been connected with the Army ever since, serving with the Maryland National Guard until it was taken into the Regular Army.

He since has attended several Army schools, including the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., and the General Staff Command Schools at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and came to the 92nd Division as an attache to the division's staff as assistant operations officer.

92 Division Unit Denied Chance to Enter Massa

AFRO-AMERICAN BALT., MD.

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

4-28-45

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION, Italy. (By Cable).—After spearheading the attack and fighting valiantly to the outskirts of the town of Massa on the Ligurian Sea's coastal sector of this Fifth Army front, colored troops of the 92nd Division did not participate in the occupation of the town late Tuesday. 4-28-45

This town, the Nazi hub of an important road network in this sector, was captured by elements of the 442nd and 473rd Infantry Regiments, both of whom are operating with the 92nd.

The former is composed of Japanese-Americans and the latter is made up of white Americans.

370th Ignored

The 370th Infantry Regiment of the 92nd, which was denied entrance, with exception of two, has all white company commanders.

After moving to the outskirts of Massa, the 370th was shifted late Monday west to the extreme coastal sector where it fought forward to within several hundred yards of the Frigido River, which flows northeast and southwest from the north of Massa to the Ligurian Sea. 4-28-45

With some elements of the 442nd having capture Mount Belvedere and others having taken several villages northeast of Massa, the town was flanked by our troops. Late Tuesday, the 473rd pushed forward through Massa to cross Frigido River.

Resistance Still Strong

4-28-45

There was strong Nazi resistance, principally from small arms and mortar fire with some artillery fire from enemy guns based at the nearby town of Punta Brianca. The whole area is heavily mined, and many of our casualties have been as result of them.

The failure to participate in the capture of Massa came as a bitter disappointment to troops of the 370th who had shared in the 92nd's attack last February which was designed to move to this town. 4-28-45

"Attack Clicked"

This time, the attack clicked beautifully and prior to their shift those troops I encountered had high expectancy of having the honor of taking this town.

Previously this unit fought its way to the outskirts of the town of Porta, southeast of Massa and was shifted further west prior to its capture.

The only colored troops in Massa, Tuesday, were some 92nd medics and military police.

56n-1945 Foreign Service- 92nd Division

"I Thought of Farm and of Mom . . ."

(Musings of a GI When Wounded)

AFRO-American 2-13-45 Balt., Md.

PRIVATE RICHARD LOW of Chatham, Va.
". . . The shell stayed in my leg for ten hours."

By LOUIS LOMAX

WASHINGTON — How he was pinned to the ground by a German mortar shell for ten hours before he was rescued was revealed this week by Private Richard L. Low of Chatham, Va., now confined to Walter Reed Hospital here.

Private Low is one of the first members of the 92nd to come home. 2-17-45

Describing his experience in Italy while serving with the 92nd Infantry Division, Private Low declared:

Couldn't Go Back

"As we were taking Hill 31 in Northern Italy, the fighting was fierce, and many had died during the night. I was worn and tired, but we had to go ahead. We couldn't go back because there was nothing to go back to.

"I was throwing everything I had at the Germans," Low continued, "when suddenly there were a screaming noise, a cloudy flash and a stinging pain.

"I was still conscious although a mortar shell was through my left leg and I was pinned to the ground. 2-17-45

For Ten Hours

"I couldn't move, so I lay still. For ten hours the shell stayed in my leg—so long that the hurt left.

"I thought of home and the farm and of my pets around the house.

"I wondered whether Mom was okay and whether Papa had been able to gather the crop alone.

"I thought of my buddies who are in the Army. 2-17-45

"I did anything I could to keep my mind off myself.

First Aid

"Ten hours later, first aid came. A friend of mine picked the skin from around the shell and pulled my leg free. The shell was still stuck in the ground. Then I fainted." 2-17-45

Private Low was then taken to an advance hospital base where his left leg was amputated.

On January 15 he was placed in the amputation ward at Walter Reed Hospital, where he has made such articles as belts, bracelets and rings.

In Italy

Private Low reports little concern in Italy over domestic issues. The men were more concerned about the Germans, the veteran said. The Italian people were fine but the white soldiers made every effort to influence them against us. They resented our soldiers mingling with Italian women, Private Low stated.

He served in the company with Chaplain Douglass Hall, former AFRO reporter. When he is discharged, he plans to return to his father's farm.

Shoots 14 Germans in One Day, Awarded Silver Star

The Call Kansas City, Mo.

By MAX JOHNSON
War Correspondent in Italy

2-2-45

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY. — T-5 Jefferson H Hilliard of Brooklyn, N. Y., was awarded the Silver Star last week for singlehandedly accounting for 14 German casualties during the enemy thrust at 92nd division lines in the Serchio River valley sector on Dec. 26.

Eleven others in the division received bronze stars for heroism in this and other recent engagements with the enemy. They are Sgt. Orva Snelling of Barnwell, S. C.; T-5 William H. Lewis of Arista, W. Va.; T-5 Joseph Hill, Saint Stether, S. C.; Pvt. Williel Wheeler of Clairton, Pa.; 1st Sgt. Frank Clendening, Pvt. Julius Poole, Pfc. Vernon M. Alexander, all of Cleveland; Pvt. Willie F. Teal, Buena Vista, Ga.; Pvt. Frank Walker of Dallas, Texas; Pfc. John Nealy of Chicago; T-Sgt. Charles A. Pulliams of San Antonio, Texas.

Kansan Holds Record

Hilliard's efforts in the Serchio affair made him the 92nd division's second highest scorer in enemy casualties during a single day's activity. Pfc. Ollie V. Ammons of Lonoke, Kas., credited with 15 during a patrol clash last November, holds the record Pvt. Jack McInnis of Mount Olive Miss., is third with 13 in the same month. 2-2-45

Hilliard, member of a Cavalry reconnaissance unit, was holding a flanking strong point when the Germans struck the Serchio area on the morning of Dec. 26.

This strong point was one of the enemy's objectives. Hilliard's citation recounting this experience reads in part, "During this activity he accounted for a least 12 enemy casualties while he and his assistants were targets of intense mortar concentration.

When maneuver and superior forces of the enemy made his position untenable, T-5 Hilliard was ordered to cover withdraw with the other men. He removed his machine gun from its tripod, fired from his hip, carrying the belt on his shoulder while his assistant carried the tripod. He fired in this manner until his ammunition was exhausted. He accounted for at least two more enemy casualties."

Pvt. Teal was Hilliard's assistant in this action and received a bronze star for his gallantry. Hilliard is 26. 2-2-45

Sgt. Snelling won a bronze star when serving as ambulance driver Dec. 5, he evacuated 17 wounded men under such extremely heavy enemy fire that the task was offered only to volunteers.

T-5 Lewis, T-5 Hill, Pvt. Walker and Pfc. Nealy were cited for evacuating wounded men under similar circumstances on other recent occasions.

Pvt. Poole won his star for volunteering and successfully repairing communication wires under enemy mortar fire at one forward artillery observation post Nov. 12 at a time when communications were critically needed for the safety of men in that area.

Pvt. Wheeler was cited for sticking to his observation post Nov. 16 in the face of heavy enemy fire and directing successful artillery fire on German strong points. 2-2-45

Pfc. Alexander was cited for performing similar duty on November 5.

T-5 Pulliams, a member of 92nd quartermaster unit, and 1st Sgt. Clendening won stars for being outstanding examples of the character of men the 92nd division and the Army desires.

Promotion of the week was that of 1st Lt. Millard D. Smallwood of Washington, from second lieutenant. A recent Bronze Star recipient, Smallwood is combat infantry officer of the 92nd.

Apart from the 366th Infantry Regiment of Negroes, the department has identified three infantry regiments comprising Negro and white soldiers and two similar companies. The former are the 309th, 310th and 311th regiments, with the 78th Infantry division. There is also one company with the 66th infantry regiment and one with the 38th infantry regiment.

Combat Outfits

So-called combat outfits of Negroes include five tank destroyer battalions, two tank battalions, five field artillery battalions and one anti-aircraft battalion.

There are 28 engineer regiments and battalions and eight ordnance units, 18 port companies, 32 ordnance companies, four chemical smoke generating companies, three signal construction battalions, two medical sanitation companies, and one company or detachment each of the following: amphibious truck, general hospital, medical service detachment, transportation and special service.

92nd Infantry Division Now In Austria

N.Y. Amsterdam 5-19-45

N.Y.

332nd Fighter Group, Under Col. B. O. Davis, Also Operating There

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—The war department was not prepared to say last week which units in Europe are going to be deployed to the fighting in the far east, nor was it ready to say anything of the order in which any of them might be brought home. The department did disclose, however, the identity of the great bulk of Negro units that are now in that theater. 5-19-45

Perhaps the largest outfit of Negro soldiers is the 92nd Infantry division which is now in Austria with the Fifth Army. Operating from this area also is the 332nd Fighter group under the command of Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr.

This Week in Pictures

People's Voice N.Y.

THE RUGGED AND courageous all-Negro 92nd Division met its first general set-back last week when the Germans drove its men back in four days of heavy fighting near Massa, where the doughboys had penetrated as much as a mile on a five-mile front to within 2½ miles of the town. Previously, infantry and tank units of the division had scored great gains against heavy odds. (See story on this page.)

2-24-45

MEN OF THE 92nd INFANTRY on combat duty in the Serchio Valley last week. At left a doughboy directs motor fire with the aid of a walkie-talkie while the man in center gives his attention to a wounded comrade, at right, hit by machine gunfire.

2-24-45 People Voice

TROOPS OF THE 92nd advance toward German positions on the vaunted Gothic Line a couple of months back. The ruined bridge in the background once spanned the famous Arno River.

2-24-45 People Voice

INFANTRYMEN OF THE 92nd marching through Lucca, Italy, last Fall after they had just captured the town.

92nd Division Suffers First Great Set-Back

People's Voice 2-24-45

ROME—Soldiers of the 92nd U. S. infantry division suffered their first great setback last week-end when a large number of the warriors went down under enemy fire in the Ligurian coastal sector of the Italian front. The action was the 92d's first full attack as a division. According to a report from Lt. Gen. Clark's headquarters, "no net gains in terrain were made, and the division was compelled to relinquish the hold it had secured north of the Cinquale Canal and at Strettoia and to fall back virtually to its original position." 2-24-45

Further probing the encounter it is revealed that the 92nd Infantry division suffered adverse weather conditions which effected not only the Negro doughboys but the enemy attack as well. Four enemy aircraft were destroyed while but three allied planes were missing.

HEAVY FOG

Due to a heavy fog which hung low over most of the 8th Army's front, allied troops were forced to withdraw from an outpost on the east bank of the Senio River. Action of the 92nd near the south shore of the Fiume La Foce, a small stream south of Massa, was limited to patroling.

The division's great losses were due also to a series of small scale counter-attacks by the enemy in the Serchio Valley about 15 to 20 miles inland, while south of Bologna the Nazis used smoke screens to shield parties digging strong points and laying mines.

The division's initial setback was tragic in many respects as people on the homefront, both Negro and whites, had cast watchful eyes over the colored boys who many times distinguished themselves as fighters.

Official dispatches earlier had tended to discount as minor this attack of the division, which was launched on the morning of February 8. The doughboys had penetrated as much as a mile on a five-mile front to within two and one-half miles of Massa before the Germans recovered and drove them back in four days of fighting.

56n-1945 Foreign Service 92nd Division

Summarize Activities of 92nd In Combat

The CALL

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy.—Since their first combat team crossed the Arno river last September to capture the city of Lucca, men of the 92nd Infantry division have won seven awards of the Legion of Merit, 65 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals and 1,377 Purple Hearts, the War department announced today. 4-13-45

At the end of their first six months in combat, the "Buffalo" had received 5,991 Combat Infantryman badges. Altogether, 7,000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy. Seven men who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot and many others were being considered.

Regarding operations, the 92nd division had seen only negligible changes in its front line positions. One major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed much in men and material in pushing the division back to its original starting point. Sharing the assignment of pinning down Wehrmacht divisions in Italy, the 92nd was confronted by the loftiest peaks and mountains in the Apennines.

Many heroes, whose exploits earned the praises of high ranking Army leaders emerged from the division's first half-year of combat. Daring fighters like Captain Charles F. Gandy and Second Lt. Theodore O. Smith of Washington, D. C.; Sgt. Rodger Holmes of Hodges, S. C.; Major Willis D. Polk of Philadelphia; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Pfc. James Robinson of Atlantic City, N. J.; and Pvt. Jake McInnis of Prentiss, Miss., have lived up to the finest traditions of the United States army. 4-13-45

Receive Quick Recognition

Quick recognition, in the form of commissions as second lieutenants, came to the following men while on the battlefield: First Sgt. Gilbert Boothe, of Forsythe, Ga.; First Sgt. Joseph Bracy of Boston, Mass.; Tech. Sgt. Frank Whisonant, Washington, D. C.; Tech. Sgt. Joseph Fry, Homestead, Pa.; Tech. Sgt. William Hicks, Cleveland, Ohio; Tech. Sgt. Caesar O. Rucker, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas; Staff Sgt. Ernest L. Carlton, New York city, and Tech. Sgt. John Birdsong of Washington, D. C.

Pricking of the German lines by patrols, which constantly probed for weak points in the coastal ramparts of the Gothic Line, characterized the chief activity of the 92nd division. The wily Jerry, who used natural mountain barriers masterfully, made all maneuvering for the attacking elements just about the toughest in modern warfare.

In the course of one patrol action, Staff Sgt. Mansfield Mason of Baltimore, Md., notably distinguished himself by heroic conduct. Acting on information that some Germans had been seen to enter a house near a certain village, Mason's patrol, under the command of Second Lt. Wilbur E. Ledbetter of Washington, D. C., surrounded the building and effectively covered all its approaches. Staff Sgt. Mason then crawled to within 30 feet of the dwelling in the face of withering machinegun fire. He hurled three hand grenades into the building and shifted his position slightly. Out walked five Germans, including an officer, to surrender. 4-13-45

Kill German Officer

First Lt. William E. Porter of Indianapolis, Ind., who was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action, exposed himself to enemy arms while his company advanced on its objective under a hail of machinegun fire. With his unit pinned to the ground, Lt. Porter succeeded in eliminating the machinegun nest, killing the German officer in command, and forcing the gun crews to surrender.

Men of non-combatant units also won their share of awards. Pfc. Walter L. Gillis of Jonesboro, N. C., a member of a medical detachment, administered first aid to members of an attacking platoon while intense enemy fire created havoc with the terrain. Although he was in full view of the Germans, he did not falter in his efforts to see that all who needed medical attention were treated. He then assisted in evacuating the casualties. 4-13-45

"Magnificent" is the way Major General Edward M. Almond, Commander of the 99nd, describes his division's artillery. Time and time again, "Buffalo" infantrymen, sweating out a tight spot, have seen perfectly placed artillery fire shatter hostile emplacements and break up repeated and determined German counter-attacks. "Boy, that artillery was great," said many 92nd doughboys upon return from skirmishes with the enemy. 4-13-45

General of the Army George C. Marshall was the first five-star general to inspect the 92nd division. In an official statement, the Army Chief of Staff said that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

92nd Chasing Crack German Unit In Italy

Kansas City, Mo. N.Y. Amsterdam News 4-28-45

Spearheads Attack Near Nassa As Enemy Puts Up Formidable Resistance

By MAX JOHNSON
War Correspondent
(Amsterdam News and Afro-American)

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—Fighting valiantly in pursuit of thousands of crack German soldiers fleeing in disorganized retreat toward the Northern Po River line, our boys in the Fifth Army opened up with a large scale spring offensive this week and it was believed that the enemy had been hopelessly trapped.

Units of the 92nd spearheaded the attack near Massa, but the Nazis put up a formidable resistance when we arrived at the Frigido River, where the enemy guns blasted back at us in an obviously futile effort. 4-28-45

As we push forward, we are supported on one side by a Japanese-American unit: on the other side by an all-white outfit. The attack now going on marks the first time this year that the whole front has been active at one time.

In retreating, German troops have seen to it that mines should be placed everywhere possible.

Reactions to FDR's Death

News of the late President Roosevelt caused some of our men to predict that his death would have some bearing on the length and outcome of the war in Europe, but nearly all the men are convinced "that it won't be long now."

Memorial services, attended by soldiers of every race and creed, were held at Florence last Sunday

1,615 Men of 92nd Div. Earn Awards in First Six Months of Combat in Italy

Afro-American Balt., Md. 5-12-45

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—Since their first combat team crossed the Arno River last September to capture the city of Lucca, men of the 92nd Infantry Division have won seven awards of the Legion of Merit, 65 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals and 1,377 Purple Hearts, the War Department announced recently.

The statistics covered the first six months of combat, beginning with initial action of the combat team, commanded by Col. Roger G. Sherman, which had its first scrimmage against the Germans on August 24, 1944.

At end of their first six months in combat the Buffaloes had received 5,991 Combat Infantryman Badges. Altogether, 7,000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy. Seven men who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot and many others were being considered.

Fight in Peaks 5-12-45

Regarding operations, the 92nd Division had seen only negligible changes in its front-line positions. One major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed much in men and material in pushing the division back to its original starting point.

Sharing the assignment of pinning down Wehrmacht divisions in Italy, the 92nd was confronted by the loftiest peaks and mountains in the Apennines.

Daring fighters like Capt. Charles F. Gandy and 2nd Lt. Theodore O Smith of Washington, D.C.; Sgt. Rodger Holmes, of Dodges, S.C.; Major Willis D. Polk, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Pfc. James Robinson, Atlantic City, N.J.; and Pvt. Jake McInnis, of Prentiss, Miss., have lived up to the finest traditions of the United States Army.

7 Commissioned

Quick recognition, in the form of commissions as second lieutenants, came to the following men while on the battlefield:

First Sgt. Gilbert Boothe, of Forsythe, Ga.; 1st Sgt. Joseph Bracy, of Boston, Mass.; T/Sgt. Frank Whisonant, of Washington, D.C.; T/Sgt. Joseph Fry, of Homestead, Pa.; T/Sgt. Jake Hicks, of Cleveland, Ohio; T/Sgt. William Hicks, of Washington, D.C., T/Sgt. Caesar O. Rucker, of Fort Sam Houston, Tex.; S/Sgt. Ernest L. Carlton, of New York City, and T/Sgt. John Birdsong, of Washington, D.C.

Pricking of the German lines by patrols, which constantly probed for weak points in the coastal ramparts of the Gothic Line, characterized the chief activity of the 92nd Division. The wily Jerry, who used natural mountain barriers masterfully, made all maneuvering for the attacking elements just about the toughest in modern warfare.

In the course of one patrol action, Staff Sgt. Mansfield Mason of Baltimore, Md., notably distinguished himself by heroic conduct. Acting on information that some Germans had been seen to enter a house near a certain village, Mason's patrol, under the command of Second Lt. Wilbur E. Ledbetter, of Washington, D.C., surrounded the building and effectively covered all its approaches.

Staff Sgt. Mason then crawled to within 30 feet of the dwelling in the face of withering machine gun fire. He hurled three hand grenades into the building and shifted his position slightly. Out walked five Germans, including an officer, to surrender.

Md. Sergeant Thus 2-45

First Lt. William E. Porter, of Indianapolis, Ind., who was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action, exposed himself to enemy arms while his company advanced on its objective under a hail of machinegun fire. With his unit pinned to the ground, Lt. Porter succeeded in eliminating the machine gun nest, killing the German officer in command, and forcing the gun crews to surrender.

Medical Men Tops

Men of non-combatant units also won their share of awards. Pfc. Walter L. Gillis, of Jonesboro, N.C., a member of a medical detachment, administered first aid to members of an attacking platoon while intense enemy fire created havoc with the terrain.

Although he was in full view of the Germans, he did not falter in his efforts to see that all who needed medical attention were treated. He then assisted in evacuating the casualties.

"Magnificent" is the way Major Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the 92nd, describes his division's artillery. Time and again, Buffalo infantrymen, sweating out a tight spot, have seen perfectly placed artillery fire shatter hostile emplacements and break up repeated and determined German counter-attacks.

"Boy, that artillery was great," said many 92nd doughboys upon return from skirmishes with the enemy.

General Inspects

General of the Army George C. Marshall was the first five-star general to inspect the 92nd Division. In an official statement, the Army Chief of Staff said that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

Dixie Echoes 92nd Slurs;

Chicago Defender Ill.

India Troops Hit Slander

Ill.

By FRED ATWATER
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

ANNISTON, Ala. — Hateful echoes of Truman K. Gibson's statement that Negro soldiers "melt away" in the face of enemy fire thundered through the South this week.

Dixie's rabble-rousing "white supremists" greedily pounced upon the Gibson utterance. 4-7-45

Leading the hate parade was that seasoned veteran of race-baiting campaigns, Judge Horace C. Wilkinson of Birmingham, founder of the infamous League for White Supremacy. In a speech entitled, "Preserve White Supremacy," at the Civitan club here and reprinted in Hamner Cobb's anti-Negro Southern Watchman, Wilkinson had this to say of Negro fighting men:

"The Negro (traditional Dixie small 'n' throughout) is running say, 'let the people rule,' but we must remember that the objective of all good government is to establish, to create, to construct, to develop, not destroy.

For 'Lily-White' Party

"I object to the Democratic party in Alabama holding out any inducement or encouragement to Negroes to vote, no matter what they may profess to believe. If the Democratic party in the South is kept 'lily-white,' it can elect a southern Democrat President of the United States while the two major parties in the North battle for the Negro vote.

"Our schools, colleges and universities may educate the Negro until he can recite Virgil backwards and outdo Einstein in discussing the laws of relativity, but they will never educate any appreciable number to the point where they will willingly part with $5.00 to enfranchise themselves.

"Peoples who have traveled and compared the contented southern Negro with the pernicious, agitating type that dominates and disgraces the Negro race wherever Negro voting is permitted, are ready to testify that the best way to ruin a Negro is to get him in politics.

"The time has come when we cannot trust every candidate in Alabama to spurn the Negro's support. If we are to take the Negro to the bosom of the Democratic party in Alabama, let's take the white supremacy from the emblem of the party in this state and replace it with something more appropriate such as, 'a jubilee of coons, goons and octoroons.'"

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

CALCUTTA, India — Negro troops in the India-Burma theater are incensed and angry over the recent stories appearing in the New York Times and Newsweek "slurring" combat troops of the 92nd Division. 4-7-45

"Let us make mistakes and the papers play them up, but let us do a good job and they never report it," one truck driver who carries supplies to China along the Ledo Road, disgustedly exclaimed.

Though the offensive articles appeared more than a month ago, the GI's stationed out here did not know about them until overseas copies of Newsweek carrying the Times clipping arrived here last week.

Troops at camps stationed along Ledo Road circulated the copies true to form in this war. Read the Newsweek of February 26, 1945, on the 'Luckless 92nd,' the Negro division in Italy that has repeated the experience of the same Negro outfit in the last war and that is being absent when the Germans attacked.

Compares Negro to Mule

"It is no reflection on the Negro to say that he cannot be made a combat soldier; neither can a mule, and yet a mule plays an important role in military and civilian life.

"But it is foolish for the white man to count the Negro as a combat asset. That is not the case. Enough money has been spent at Tuskegee (Army Air Field) to float a battleship in a misguided effort to train Negro fliers. Where would we be today if we were dependent on Negro fliers? Not everyone capable of driving a truckload of gas to an air field will make a flier.

"There are some things a Negro cannot do. His racial constitution will not allow him to do these things. God Almighty has placed limitation on him that man cannot remove. General Bullard told the government forcibly and truthfully after the close of the last war that we cannot make a combat soldier out of the Negro. You might read his book on the subject with profit."

The fascist Wilkinson, pointing out to 'lily-white' Alabamans the need for a $5 poll tax in the state to pay for the financing of a Southerner's candidacy for the Presidency of the United States, went on to say:

"It sounds all right to say that a person who has sense enough to fight for his country has sense enough to vote in it, and that if a voter wants to wreck the country with his vote, he should have a right to do so. It sounds good to

The 92nd Under Fire

DETROIT TRIBUNE

The 92nd Division of colored soldiers in Italy, which recently had to surrender some ground during a vicious German counterattack, has received some rather unfriendly criticism in the February 26th issue of News Week magazine. We quote from the magazine as follows:

Detroit, Mich.

"The 92nd was intended to demonstrate that Negro troops could be used in front line combat, and also to meet criticisms that Negroes were always given menial tasks. Last year, therefore, the 92nd moved into the line on the Italian front. It rapidly acquired a bad reputation among other troops. They claimed that the men of the 92nd were 'trigger happy,' that it was impossible to send out patrols near the 92nd, because they shot at even their own patrols and at Italian civilians as well. 3-3-45

"Then, last December, the Germans launched a strong attack on the Serchio River line. Part of the line a few miles inland from the Mediterranean coast was held by the 92nd. It crumbled under the Nazi assault and another division had to be hastily thrown into the gap."

We do not know how much if any of this criticism against the 92nd division is authentic, but we do know that fighting men of other racial and national groups in this global war have had reverses at times and have had to make temporary withdrawals. This is no disgrace, nor does it indicate inefficiency or lack of courage.

On the Western front, for example, the Germans not long ago launched a terrific counterattack against the Allied armies under General Eisenhower and forced them back for many miles and with serious losses. This reverse, however, was not due to any lack of courage on the part of the Allied soldiers, as subsequent events have demonstrated. 3-3-45

Soldiers at the front do occasionally fire by mistake upon their own patrols. Bombardiers also at times accidentally drop bombs upon their own ground troops, also upon non-combatant civilians, but such accidents are not confined to soldiers of any one race.

22 Wounded 92nd Vets Returned From Italy

Pittsburgh Courier Pa

2-17-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Wounded while battling the Germans in Italy, twenty-two veterans of the Fifth Army's famed 92nd ("Buffalo") Infantry Division have been returned to the United States for hospitalization, the War Department reported. They were received at Stark General Hospital, Charleston, S. C., where they were processed for transfer to other medical installations.

Following is a list of the returned Infantrymen who were wounded during 1944 in actions ranging from the Arno River sector to the Serchio Valley:

Pvt. Shan Z. Brooks, 21, of 23 East Forty-seventh Street, Chicago, Ill.; first saw action in Italy in October at Mt. California; wounded on Nov. 9, near the Po Valley, by both machinegun and mortar fire, while attempting to knock out three enemy machineguns that were halting the advance of his night patrol; transferred to Kennedy General Hospital, Memphis, Tenn.

S/Sgt. Samuel Carlisle, 22, of Route 1, Box 24, Brent, Ala.; wounded on Nov. 15, near Mount Belvidere by small arms fire; wounded again same day during enemy counter-attack as he walked back to aid station and lay in bushes unable to move and unattended for four days, while enemy troops passed over him; wears Combat Infantrymen Badge, Purple Heart and Silver Star; transferred to Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, Colo. 2-17-45

Pfc. Leon Byrd, 21, of 625 Lenox Avenue, New York City; entered combat Nov. 22, and wounded next day by hand grenade, while holding an outpost position; transferred to Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Pfc. Nathan Smith, 22, of Jackson, Ala.; first saw action in Po Valley and wounded Nov. 8 near Gerezzio by mortar fragments while attacking enemy pillbox; wears Purple Heart, theatre, and Good Conduct ribbons; transferred to Lawson General Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.

Sgt. Henry Powell, 21, of 1509 Tremont Street, Selma, Ala.; first saw action in Arno River sector and was wounded Sept. 14 in vicinity of Lucca after leading platoon to new position; transferred to Oliver General Hospital, Augusta, Ga.

Sgt. Eugene Larkins, 25, of 64 Grant Avenue, Jersey City, N. J.; first saw action near Lucca, wounded near Pisa by machinegun fire while attacking enemy position on hilltop; wears Purple Heart, Good Conduct, theater and American Defense ribbons; transferred to Woodrow Wilson General Hospital, Staunton, Va.

S/Sgt. Sherman Fisher, 32, of 1513 West 10th Street, Chester, Pa.; first saw action outside Pisa on Dec. 1 and was wounded Dec 5, near Lucca, by fragments from hand grenade when enemy left position and zeroed-in with everything that could shoot; transferred to Lawson General Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.

First Lieut. Arcilous E. Jackson, 35, of 745 Macon Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.; first saw action Nov. 3 at Pisa and wounded Nov. 20 by artillery fragments; wears Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge and theater ribbon; transferred to Woodrow Wilson General Hospital.

Pfc. Leo Watson, 24, of Kershaw, S. C.; first saw action in November and was wounded while attacking enemy lines; transferred to Kennedy General Hospital.

Pfc. Kenneth E. Layne, 31, of 133 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.; wounded Nov. 26 between Lucca and Bologna when his anti-tank gun drew fire from German .88; transferred to Cushing General Hospital, Framingham, Mass.

Pfc. Lawrence Chapman, 26, of West B Street, Easley, S. C.; first saw action along Arno River on Aug. 15 and was wounded Oct. 16 near Mount Belvidere when enemy patrol attacked his party; transferred to Woodrow Wilson General Hospital. 2-17-45

Pfc. Clifton Traylor, 28, of 1922 East 103rd Street, Los Angeles, Calif.; first saw action in August near Lucca and was wounded Oct. 4 while attacking a hill; transferred to Woodrow Wilson General Hospital.

Pfc. Ray Penn, 19, of Rome, Ga.; entered line of combat in August, wounded Oct. 26 by fragments from mortar shell; transferred to Oliver General Hospital.

Pfc. Isaac Jemison, 27, of 1508 Cedar Street, Chattanooga, Tenn.; entered combat Oct. 31 above Leghorn and was wounded Nov. 27 by machinegun fire; transferred to Kennedy General Hospital.

Pvt. Flander McElway, 22, of Crampron, Ark.; first saw action in October and was wounded north of Lucca Nov. 8, while returning from checking artillery communication lines; transferred to Kennedy General Hospital.

First Sgt. Jack A. Ellis, 29, of 245 Dunbar Street, Dayton, Ohio; first saw action Aug. 26 along Arno River; his regiment broke the Gothic Line and was the first to reach Lucca; wounded by .88 fragments at Guggio just beyond Mount Belvidere while on patrol; transferred to Kennedy General Hospital.

Sgt. Frederick D. Thornton, 27, of Coaldale, West Va.; first saw action near Lima di Sota and was wounded on Nov. 18, near Bologna, while attacking enemy positions; transferred to Ashford General Hospital, White Sulphur Springs, West Va. 2-17-45

Pfc. William D. Henins, 22, of Luxora, Ark.; entered combat late in October, was wounded Nov. 26 by artillery shell fragments; transferred to William Beaumont General Hospital, Fort Bliss, Texas.

S/Sgt. Forrest G. Manning, 24, of San Marcus, Texas; first saw action in Arno River sector, wounded Oct. 7 by enemy heavy artillery fire near Cerezzio; transferred to Hammond General Hospital, Modesto, Calif.

Pfc. Travis L. Johnson, 24, of 712 Forty-first Street, Newsome Park, Newport News, Va.; entered combat Aug. 24, and was wounded the same day near Pisa; transferred to Woodrow Wilson General Hospital.

Pfc. Elzie Timmons, 24, of Route 1, Ellabelle, Ga.; first saw action in the Arno River sector, wounded Oct. 6 while attacking machinegun nest on hill near Leghorn; transferred to LeGarde General Hospital, New Orleans, La.

Pvt. Leroy Cox, 22, of Cortelyou, Ala.; entered front lines Oct. 10, wounded Nov. 9 while attacking the enemy; transferred to Oliver General Hospital.

92nd Division Casualties Are Heavy In Italy

New York Age N.Y. N.Y. 2-17-45

(EXTRA — A full page of pictures of wounded veterans of the 92nd Division recently returned to the U. S. for hospitalization, appears on page twelve.)

ROME—The 92nd ("Buffalo") Infantry Division, principal U. S. combat ground unit with the Fifth Army in Italy, and its supporting armor were mauled severely in weekend fighting attendant upon their abortive attack in the Ligurian coastal sector, 15th Army Group headquarters anounced Tuesday. 2-17-45

A special report from Lieut. General Mark W. Clark's headquarters concerning the attack, which official dispatches earlier had tended to discount as minor action, said:

"Casualties and tank losses were relatively high and no net gains in terrain were made."

Sharp German counterattacks, supported by a concentrated artillery and mortar fire, repulsed the Negro fighters after they had gained as much as a mile on a five-mile front. The 92nd's first full attack as a division was launched last Thursday and penetrated to within two and one half miles of Massa before the enemy recovered from surprise and drove them back in four days of fighting.

Peoples Voice

92nd Division In Headlines

Peoples Voice N.Y. N.Y. 3-24-45

A Record of Heroism and Gallantry

[NOTE: The highly commendable combat record of the all-Negro 92nd Division, now operating with the Fifth Army in northern Italy, is known to all who have followed the daily and weekly press during the past year. Just as a reminder, PV reproduces below a few headlines from on-the-spot stories sent to the Norfolk "Journal and Guide" and the "Pittsburgh Courier" by their foreign correspondents.]

Sept. 2, 1944—92nd WITH 5th ARMY

Sept. 16—92nd SMASHES INTO GOTHIC LINE

Sept. 23—92nd SLOWED DOWN BY GRIM NAZI DEFENSE OF TOUGH GOTHIC LINE

92nd WINS PRAISE FOR SUCCESS AT LUCCA

Sept. 30—92nd AIDS GOTHIC LINE BREAKTHROUGH

Oct. 7—92nd CAPTURES KEY HILL

Oct. 14—92nd LEADS 5th ARMY DRIVE

Oct. 21—INFANTRYMEN IN FIERCEST BATTLE

Oct. 28—3 SILVER STARS WON BY 92nd 3-24-45

Nov. 11—92nd DRIVES TO WITHIN 8 MILES OF BOLOGNA

Nov. 18—92nd LIQUIDATES 2 DIVISIONS

Nov. 25—DECORATE 16 92nd HEROES
14 GET STARS FOR GALLANTRY IN 92nd DIVISION

Dec. 2—92nd SOLDIERS PAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING PRAYER
NO MAJOR GAINS BY 92nd; ATTACK IN ICE AND SNOW

Dec. 9—MYSTERY — VEILED PEAKS FACE 92nd
92nd TAKES 1,000 NAZIS

Dec. 16—RAIN STEALS SHOW ON 92nd FRONT

Dec. 30—25 HEROES OF 92nd DIVISION HONORED
NAZI PLANES BOMB 92nd

Jan. 6, 1945—92nd HALTS GERMAN OFFENSIVE
92nd BREAKS OUT OF NAZI TRAP

Jan. 13—STIMSON LAUDS 92nd's STAND AGAINST NAZIS
92nd RAIDS BEHIND NAZI LINES

Jan. 20—92nd CAPTURES FIRST LINE NAZI OFFICER

Feb. 17—GERMANS HALT 92nd ATTACK 9-24-45

Feb. 24—ALMOND PINS 92nd HEROES
92nd UNITS LICK WOUNDS AFTER

Special

Negroes can't fight. Negroes can't fly. Negroes are temperamentally unsuited for combat—unable to master the intricacies of modern machines and weapons—fear the dark—spooks—fry chicken better than any other people—are always grinning. These and many other lies have become popular American lore over a period of decades. Serious attempts have been made to find scientific reasons for these peculiarities. They were circulated widely. Other attempts were made to disprove the existence of basic racial traits. Circulation was usually forbidden. Adolph Hitler shaped a program of world conquest on a pyramid of similar racial beliefs and being a rather fundamental character began to liquidate various stratums of inferior races. 3-24-45

Pittsburgh Courier N.Y. N.Y.

A recent dispatch from Rome, joyously forwarded by correspondents to their newspapers and radio commentators, discloses the fact that Truman Gibson, a civilian aide to the Secretary of War, had been packed off to investigate charges that Negroes can't fight—the Negroes in this particular instance being members of the 92nd Infantry Division.

NEGROES CAN FIGHT

Mr. Gibson has finally solved the question. The solution, boiled down to a thick paste, seems to run along these general lines. Negro troops can fight. Or, if there are instances which might tend to prove that they can't it is because there are so many illiterate GIs in the 92nd Division.

To be more specific Mr. Gibson adds these observations. The 92nd Division shows 17% of its personnel in Class 5 of the Army literacy tests. Class 5 is the lowest class there it. Seventy-five per cent of the Division is in Class 4, which is very low, too. General Army figures show 46.4% of Negroes in Class 5 and 35% in Class 4.

Mr. Gibson concludes: "You can't apply the same training schedules where that many men are illiterate as where only 4% are."

DUG INTO RECORD

We had certain misgivings about the whole affair and went back into the record. Our findings were interesting. We discovered among other things that Negroes had fought constantly since Pearl Harbor for a chance to fight in America's armed forces. Negro youths, young men and women from all parts of our country, answered the call to arms—just as black Crispus Attucks did a long time ago at Bunker Hill. They asked for a chance to fight in the air, in infantry, and at the guns of our mighty warships.

But there were no places in most branches of the services for them. Because of certain racial tendencies (as it is usually implied), they almost inevitably found themselves sweeping, digging, or lifting. In our proud fleets they could only wait tables or "buist suds." Dorie Miller shot his way to glory at the hot breech of a gun whose crew had been levelled by a strafing Jap plane. Under his life-jacket he wore his usual waiter's jacket. We wonder where he would have wound up on the all-important Army literacy tests.

Back in 1941 some daring soul wanted to know if the Army Air Force would train Negro pilots. When all hell had died down, after Bilbo, Rankin, Talmadge, and many others had regained their composure after such an unheard of question, a few more voices wanted to know 'why not?' The answer was the same time-worn one. Negroes just weren't suited temperamentally or intellectually for such things.

NEGRO PILOTS 3-24-45

The War Department was thoroughly exasperated when William Hastie, then civilian aide to the Secretary, resigned over the disgraceful situation. Finally, in the face of a storm of protest, training for Negro pilots was reluctantly instituted —at a completely jimcro base. According to reliable reports many brass-hat diehards assumed the attitude of "All right, put the 'Niggras' in airplanes and let 'em break their necks." Fortunately for a hell of a lot of hard-pressed infantrymen on the Anzio beachhead in January 1944, they didn't break their necks.

HARRINGTON REPORT

But back to the 92nd Division. Not so very long ago we attended an extremely interesting lecture at the Schomburg Collection. The speaker was Oliver Harrington, Pittsburgh Courier war correspondent and ex-PV art editor, who had just returned from Italy. As a matter of fact he'd just left the 92nd Division. He had spent two months or more with the battalions and patrols of the division, crossing the Arno River with them and driving into the stoutly defended hill positions of the Gothic Line. He had gone out with their patrols, feeling at the empty lines gingerly, leaping into ditches to escape the machine gun and mortar fire of the Nazis. His talk was as good as his cabled dispatches had been and it was our first authentic report from the front. But we can't remember his having mentioned the term illiteracy.

He spoke of a world beyond our comprehension. A world of miserable, wet, suffering men who spent their days and nights shooting, stabbing, or clawing the Nazis. There was no rest in this world. Only a bullet or a whining shell fragment brought rest. In the darkly ominous Italian hills reverberating with the chatter of angry machine guns and the awful crunching of heavy shells, it was difficult to distinguish the skin coloring of the silent, helmetted men, moving relentlessly into the Nazi positions.

CALLED ANIMALS

He'd seen them turn and run too. Groups of frightened boys moving up a black hill which suddenly blossomed with a cone of orange flame. Yes, they'd dropped their arms and ran—those who could run. And he'd been at Cassino, where the same thing happened many times. And at Anzio. But there were no Negro infantrymen there. Yet in the rear areas white GIs and their officers too, spoke of Negroes—and how frightened they were under fire.

They also printed pamphlets telling the Italian people that Negroes were animals who lived only to rape white women. And the Italian people were told that in America Negroes were not allowed in restaurants, street cars, buses, or theatres. And that they could not live in white communities. They were criminals and they were lynched and tortured by Americans because they were criminals. But the pamphlets never mentioned illiteracy.

Seriously, we wonder just how important it is, up there in those hills the correspondent talked about, to be able to wind up in the top classes of the Army literacy test. The fiercest fighters in Italy, judging from all reports, were the Goums, from North Africa, and the British colonial Ghurkas. These grim fighters filled the Nazi ranks with terror and their night fighting exploits became legend in Italy. It would be extremely difficult to find a Goum or a Ghurka who could write his own name.

Take Objective Despite Dangers

Atlanta World - Ga.

AAF REGIONAL AND CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL, MIAMI, Fla.—Blinded in both eyes and with his left leg cut off below the knee as a result of German land mines, S.-Sgt. James H. Brown, of Pulaski, Tenn., lay in his bed here at the AAF Regional Convalescent Hospital and related one of the grimmest stories yet to be told of the bloody struggle which the 92nd Infantry Division is waging against the Germans in Italy.

On February 8, when the 2nd Battalion of the 370 Infantry Regiment received orders to attack, the 21-year-old Negro infantryman was a squad leader in Co. F, spearhead of the assault. What happened later is best told by Brown himself.

MISSION WAS HILL

"Our mission was to take a hill beyond Pietrasanta and we were told that when our objective was won we would be close enough to throw small arms fore into 'Maine' Brown began.

"The Germans had laid mines all over the hill but the engineers quickly cleared a trail which they marked off with tape, and we jumped of at 1500 (3 p. m.

"About the time we reached the end of the cleared are the Jerries hit another part of our line and my platoon got orders to withdraw But our platoon sergeant, Technical Sergeant Fred Rose ,of Louisiana, who loved to tangle with the Jerries, said. We're not going to withdraw. We're going to bulid up a line and stay right here and fight.'

STEPS ON MINE

'He then ordered me to set up my BAR. (Browning Automatic Rifle) and told the other squad leader to do the same. We had built a fireline when the order again came for our platoon to fall back to the battalion line. Sergeant Rose reluctantly decided to withdraw.

"As we started to fall back, I stepped on a land mine and set it off. The explosion knocked me down and my left leg was broken in two places. Pvt. Robert Cheney crawled over to me and said he was going to get me out of there. Just as he put his arms under mine and started to move me, his foot struck a mine and it went off breaking his leg and blinding me in both eyes. He fell down beside me.

"It had been getting dark when the first mine got me and although I couldn't see, I realized that it must be very dark by this time and that the men could not see. So I issued orders that no man was to come up near us and try to get us out until daylight, because I was afraid they would step on a Jerry mine. However, one of the men sneaked up to me and tied a tourniquet o my leg. After that Cheney and I lay there all night. The next day the aid men from my company picked us up.

CASUALTIES HEAVY

"Our casualties were pretty heavy in that action. Sergeant Rose stepped on a mine that night, next day the CO., Lieut. Miles had, his leg blown off by a mortar shell, and the following day Sergeant William Smnth, our first sergeant was killed by a mortar shell that landed in his foxhole."

"Nevertheless," smiled Brown "we took our objective.

92nd Division In Hard Fight With Germans In Italy

Nashville Globe - Tenn.

With the Fifth Army in North ern Italy—For weeks now the 92nd Division famous American Negro outfit, has been fighting steadily on this bitterly contested front. Gains have ben slow, small and hard fought for. Mines, mud misery of cold, and the menace of extraordinarily heavy enemy shell fire have impeded progress.

Today, nowever, the men of the 92nd have much that will help them at least to grin and bear it much that they did not have when they first went into the line. For the 92nd has gone all out for the services of the American Red Cross and the men are delighted and proud of these newest aids to their comfort and well-being.

When these fighting men first arrived in this theatre from the States, their knowledge of Red Cross services had been gained from the activities of the four Red Cross field men attached to the division. They saw to it that men in the ranks had the advantage of small emergency loans, of welfare reports on their families, of honest man-to-man advice and counsel on personal matters, of emergency supplies of toilet and comfort articles, and of recreation facilities whenever possible.

Chief of the quartet is Field Director Francis I. Long, 319 Fair St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga., who holds an M. A. degree from the University of Atlanta, and possesses an exceptional background in music education and the social science that makes him especially well equipped for his present welfare work with the division.

One of Mr. Long's three assistant field directors is Ernest Hemby, 50 Morningside Ave., New York City, also a musician, prominent in the work of the Urban League and for several years a worker in the New York City Department of welfare and in various other branches of the city government.

The other two Red Cross men are Daniel Lang, 131 Spruce St., Buffalo, N. Y., and Alexander R. Belden, of 659 East 41st St., Los Angeles, California.

56n-1945

Foreign Service- 92nd Division

Losses Heavy in Men, Equipment

AFRO-American
Balt. Md.

Infantrymen Pushed Back After Offensive

HOLD OLD POSITION

2-24-45

Unit Trapped as Others Fail to Take Objectives

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON

Secretary of War Stimson revealed at his press conference Thursday that "strong enemy resistance" was encountered by the 92nd Division troops in their recent unsuccessful advance in Italy.

WITH 92D DIVISION IN ITALY—Launching its first major attack since being assigned to this 5th Army front, the 92d Division has just been beaten back to its original jumping-off positions by German counter-attack, suffering heavy casualties and losses of equipment.

The failure of this attack operation, which began last Thursday and ended Sunday, is not officially disclosed, if yet determined. 2-24-45

Nazis Surprised

It is known that the operation had the benefit of complete surprise to the enemy. Preparations were so secretively that correspondents working with the division were not alerted to the operations before their launching.

Elements of the 92d assigned to secure a beachhead between the Cinquale and Marro Canals at the edge of the Tyrrhenian Sea reached their objective.

However, they were later forced to relinquish this gain when other elements failed to take their objectives in the nearby Apennines and the Germans there turned heavy artillery on the beachhead, making our troops there the target of enemy shelling from three sides.

Fifth Army officials made releaseable today a 336-word communique on the 92d's action. This first full-text release is the first I have ever seen in such complete detail on similar operations either in the French or Italian campaign. The communique stated:

"After four days of action characterized by some advances against enemy resistance, regiments of the 92d Infantry Division operating in the Fifth Army's coastal sector were compelled to yield ground in face of repeated counter-attacks and yesterday (Feb. 12) were consolidating their positions approximately along their original line.

Struck February 8

"The attack, with tank, artillery and air support, started on the morning of February 8. The initial gain was made in the area of Mt. Canala and Strettoia. In the extreme coastal area, tank-supported infantry advanced across the mouth of the Cinquale Canal, reaching a general line some 800 yards north of the jumping-off position. "During the night of February 8-9, the coastal sector was relatively quiet.

Mine Fields Encountered

"The attack was resumed February 9, but only slight improvements in positions were made. Anti-personnel mine fields and mortar fire were encountered in the Mt. Canala-Strettoia areas as well as numerous small counter attacks.

"The unit made slight advances, suffering some tank losses, and encountered artillery and mortar fire.

"On February 10 the attack was again resumed, but only limited gains were made. Enemy resistance increased, with small arms fire developing. Leading elements of the 92d dug in and attempted to hold its positions, extending generally from the northern slopes of Mt. Canala, just south of Strettoia and thence about 100 yards north.

"Mortar and artillery fire caused the withdrawal of 92d Division forces all the way back to the southern side of the Cinquale Canal, and additional tank losses were sustained.

On February 11, our forces withdrew. The consolidated positions of 92d Division in the coastal sector were substantially the same as those from which the attack was started on February 8."

During the operation, the 92d took over 200 German prisoners and inflicted more casualties to enemy forces.

Retreat of the 92nd

AFRO-American

War Secretary Stimson, in a press conference last week, emphasized the stiff opposition facing the 92nd Division in Italy.

He pointed out that the Nazis opposite the advancing colored division defended an important communications center in force and pushed the 92nd back to its jumping-off position. 2-24-45

The battle lasted from Thursday to Sunday of last week and the defeat came, according to the AFRO's war correspondent, Max Johnson, when other elements in the advance failed to take their objectives, so that the enemy's heavy artillery was able to shell the 92nd from three sides.

Mr. Johnson says the original offensive was a surprise so secretive that correspondents with the troops were not advised beforehand, and that never before have they been permitted to publish such a detailed text of infantry operations.

Milton Bracker, white, New York Times correspondent, explained the unusual publicity Wednesday in a cable to his newspaper in which he said that headquarters was troubled by the "super-sensitivity" of some colored papers. Bracker then attacked the whole colored press because, as he said, one newspaper stole one of his dispatches and misquoted it.

The AFRO is not interested in quarrels between war correspondents of the Times and other newspapers.

The AFRO has its own correspondents overseas and, so far as we know, they and the editors of this paper observe the ethics of their profession. Balt. Md.

If the Times or Bracker want to accuse other papers of larceny or mayhem, let them name the papers and omit any general references to the colored press as a whole.

No matter what the real reason for the publicity on the 92nd, we are obliged to Mr. Stimson for acknowledgement that the 92nd is up against tough opposition.

We know it will take its reverses just as the First Army took similar defeats. We don't think these boys of ours want any special favors. They can dish it out and they can take it.

92d Suffers Severe Losses On Italian Front

Louisville, Ky.
Courier-Journal
2-14-45

Rome, Feb. 13 (AP)—The U. S. 92d Infantry Division and its supporting armor suffered "relatively high" casualties and tank losses when its week-end attack in the Ligurian coastal sector of the Italian front was repulsed, 15th Army Group Headquarters disclosed today. 2-14-45

Official dispatches earlier had tended to discount as minor this attack of the Negro division, which was launched last Thursday. It was the 92d's first full attack as a division.

A special report from Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's headquarters said "no net gains in terrain were made," and the division was compelled to relinquish the hold it had secured north of the Cinquale Canal and at Strettoia.

General Marshall Reviews 92d Div.

AFRO-American
Balt. Md.
2-24-45

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92ND DIVISION, Italy—Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U.S. Army, reviewed 92nd Division installations today, but accorded no interviews to war correspondents. 2-24-45

In a 2-hour-and-45-minute stay at 92nd headquarters, the general accompanied by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Allied armies in Italy; Lucian K. Truscott, Fifth Army chief; and a host of other military lesser greats in a twenty-jeep convoy, was observed by this correspondent viewing a field artillery battalion where Lt. Col. Marcus H. Ray of Chicago had his men fire six rounds from 105's.

Correspondents Barred

Whatever else was included in General Marshall's activities prior to the luncheon at division headquarters — from which correspondents were also barred — was not observed by me who, along with other newsmen, took seriously the umpteenth warning from pro officials not to stick in the vicinity of General Marshall's party, giving up in disgust.

The reason for the exclusion of correspondents was not made clear, particularly in view of the fact that amateur as well as acond, he had goten rid of some credited photographers dashed about unrestricted.

After it was all over and the general had departed, a broad statement was issued to the effect that what he had seen on the Fifth Army front "was reassuring" because, among other things, "a large German force has been held in Italy and prevented from bolstering the enemy's hard-pressed troops on the Eastern and Western fronts."

As far as I could learn, he made no direct mention of the 92nd Division.

Norfolk, Va. Journal & Guide
4-21-45

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE 92ND

Why Did Unit Withdraw At Serchio
By John "Rover" Jordan

In some ways the 92nd Infantry Division, with its Negro enlisted men and mixed officers seems to be growing into a problem child.

The division started its hectic combat history with the eyes of the world focused on it. Early it became a "story" for America's newspapers. Some carried stories of its contributions. Others noted its faults. On every move, the segregated outfit found itself on trial before the world piercing eyes.

The 92nd Division has had its ups and downs. But, so much emphasis has been placed on its downs that some observers have wondered if there wasn't something wrong with the outfit; indeed, if the colored soldier actually had the courage to fight.

GIBSON MAKES TOUR

With this situation in mind Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, recently spent a week on a tour of inspection of the 92nd Division, which is fighting with the Fifth Army in Italy.

After his inspection tour, Mr. Gibson held a press conference in Rome in which ed told correspondent that the 92nd was in effect, "good and bad."

He pointed to the discriminations against the soldiers in southern training areas before they came overseas, indicating that this might have affected their will to fight. He told of the high rate of illiteracy among enlisted men of the division being a handicap to their combat efficiency. In spite of these handicaps, however, he stated that the outfit was far from hopeless.

"MELTED AWAY" STORM

In the course of the press conference Mr. Gibson allegedly asserted that on occasions some units of the 92nd had "melted away" in the face of enemy opposition. Use of the "melted away" term has drawn criticism from certain colored leaders who contend that it was an insult.

The term may be brutal, but Mr. Gibson might not have been as wrong as some would like to believe that he was. At times certain units of the division, or its attached units, have "melted away." Situations arise on the battlefields in which such maneuver seems to be the natural thing to do, especially to green troops.

Army news releases, however, carefully refrain from the use of such terms as "melting away." Instead, the official communique would read that "our troops withdrew to lines they could b better defend," or something of that tactful nature.

92ND WITHDREW

Perhaps the best remembered instance in which 92nd units allegedly "melted away" came when the Germans attacked our positions in the Serchio River Valley sector of Italy last December 26. Using about three battalions, the Nazis struck hard to rupture lines held by the colored troops. This little attack came as electrifying news because it coincided with the famous "Belgium bulge" enem thrust on the Western front.

When the enemy overran our positions in the Serchio area, the official communique said simply that our units had withdrawn to previously prepared lines.

Why did our troops withdraw when the Germans attacked at the Serchio?

There were many reasons for the withdrawal, among them being:

(1) Our line across the sensitive Serchio sector was thin. It was comparatively easy for the Germans to score limited gains at any point where they concentrated strength.

(2) Units which bore the brunt of the Nazi attack were comparatively new troops, lacking the experience of fierce combat. Attacking German troop were veterans who were executing a carefully planned attack

(3) The superiority of numbers in the attacking force, coupled with their method of attack, made it evident to f frontline men that withdrawal was in order. And some of them lost little time doing it.

Even in this highly publicized retreat, not all of the 92nd units in the sector withdrew without a fight. Some of its squads and platoons fought valiantly. Many soldiers have been decorated for heroism growing out of the deeds accomplished during the German attac in the Serchio Valley.

The 92nd Division learned valuable lessons from the Serchio attack. Weakness were found and in later weeks were corrected. Our troops have vastly improved since those bleak days of December 26-27. Now they are more "combatwise."

Experience being a good teacher, the 92nd Division might not give Mr. Gibson further opportunity to use that "melted away" termc come future operations.

The Troops' Own Story of the 92d Division's Record

P.M. N.Y. 6-11-45

(This is the second of two articles on the fate of the Negro 92d Division.)

By Roi Ottley

Special Correspondent

(Copyright, 1945, by The Newspaper PM, Inc.)

ROME, June 11.—The campaign in Italy has closed with a distressing aftermath. The 92d Division, the Negro outfit commanded by Maj. General Edward M. Almond, has been pronounced a failure by certain elements of the press. I discussed in yesterday's story the charges and rumors for which no convincing proof has been produced.

Ottley

6-11-45

To be sure, the morale of the 92d was poor. The bad press devastated it. But no one yet has questioned the bravery and courage of Negro soldiers.

What fundamentally was wrong with the division was the direct result of the inconsistencies in American life—perhaps magnified. Hence I point no finger at individuals. Negroes were in no position to do anything about the situation. Whites were caught up in the snarls of prejudice and misinformation.

The indictment, then, must be leveled at the failure of American democracy.

To put the whole situation into perspective, it must be recognized that the 92d Division is a Jim Crow outfit with all the faults inherent in Jim Crow. Everyone knows that Jim Crow—a vestige of the bourbon South—has been a failure.

Yet this archaic concept—the artificial racial separation of men from the same country—was carried over into a modern army—fighting, ironically, a war for the liberation and freedom of all peoples.

Army brass hats explained that it was not their job to change the social patterns of the country. In this, they were aggressively passive.

If someone should insist on pinning the rap, the sole blame for the 92d's poor showing ultimately would fall in the lap of the white command. Because, actually, the division is not an all-Negro outfit. The bulk of the officers are white. Every officer in the high command is white. Negroes therefore had no part in planning operations. If the plans failed, the fault lies with those who originated them.

Actually, the 92d did carry out its assigned tasks—but at tremendous cost in life and materials.

The troops lacked confidence in their white command. Hence, even ordinarily trivial matters were heightened sharply by racial misunderstanding. Translated into effect—the men felt, almost with a passion, that they often were being sent forward to be slaughtered.

There were those white officers—in and out of the division—who believe Negroes are inferior to whites. This belief was translated into an attitude which betrayed itself in their dealings with Negro troops.

Negroes felt this keenly, and resented it. Negroes expected the simple dignities and recognitions that are accorded men in uniform.

One of those rights—and a vastly important one—was social freedom. They thought it right and just that they be allowed to associate with whom they chose—without being threatened with subtle reprisals and humiliations.

This was the background. Specifically, the men overwhelmed me with instances to illustrate what they called the incompetence, prejudice, lack of sympathy and understanding, viciousness, and sometimes sheer stupidity on the part of some of their white officers.

I only report those that seemed to me to have solid validity. Many of the white officers with whom I talked refused to be quoted. But in off-the-record conversations they gave me sufficient documented information to form a background.

They claimed there had been wholesale courts-martial of men without proper investigation, and on at least one occasion, the men were given long detentions without trial. These men were held in confinement from one to three months; at a place under harassing enemy artillery fire. P.M. N.Y.

The men complained against this treatment, but more than one officer, they related, who complained was discharged or transferred.

When units were pulled off the line for rest, they often were assigned to areas where all recreational facilities were "off limits" to Negro troops. This was offered as one reason why men went AWOL.

Particularly did the men resent the reprisals against Italian girls for their associations with Negro soldiers. They said Italian girls who worked for the U. S. Army were threatened with immediate dismissal. 6-11-45

One girl told me, "If you dance with Negro soldiers, your permit to go to the Officers' Club (white) will be taken away."

The Italian people were harassed to the point where they concluded the association with Negroes was not worthwhile. This eventually confined Negro troops to the worst sections of town.

Even men without combat training have been sent forward, as well as limited-duty men. The use of quartermaster and service troops, without previous basic training, has discouraged many Negro officers. One told me of being under fire with his men and one man saying to him, "Say, Lieutenant, how do you work this damn thing!" The soldier was fumbling with a rifle.

The troops feel keenly about what they describe as the unfair treatment of their Negro officers. I found this to be a fact and well known in the Italian theater. They say Negro officers often are not permitted to remain long enough with an organization to attain seniority necessary for promotion. Some have been in grade as long as 20 months without promotions.

Indignity was added to this. In at least one group of officers, the whites barred Negroes from the Officers' Club. There were differentials in the allotment of whisky, beer, Coca-Cola and cigars.

Any Negro who lifted his head above the crowd was slated for some form of reprisal.

Even their combat duty came with a veiled threat. The men quote Maj. Gen. Almond as saying that the Negro press had demanded combat duty for Negro soldiers—and now they were going to get it. The implication was strong that they were given combat duty as a penalty for the aggressiveness of the Negro press.

This distressing situation amply documents the reasons why a Jim Crow army is a failure—for the racial misunderstanding inherent in such a setup never can be eliminated.

National self-interest demands the end of Jim Crow in the U. S. Army and Navy.

Blame Officers In Showing Of 92nd In Italy

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Despite Gen. Mark Clark's words, "the glorious 92nd," during a Memorial Day radio speech in Chicago, the division's showing in the Italian campaign is considered in military circles as a failure, which Roi Ottley, war correspondent, sees as an indictment on American democracy.

Ottley found that both white and Negro soldiers in Italy were victims of ugly social patterns of American life. What was wrong with the outfit could not be remedied in Italy. The blame for the battle failures must fall on its white commanders.

The 92nd would not have singled out for criticism had not the War Department sent Truman Gibson civilian aide to the secretary of war, to Italy. The motive for Gibson's visit is still vague, for there has been no noticeable change in the unit, Ottley writes. 6-23-45

Among the indignities that the men suffered and one that amazed and antagonized the Italians was the reprisals directed against Negro soldiers and Italian girls.

Subtle reprisals were taken against the girls for associating with colored men, namely the threat of withdrawal of their passes to the officers club (white), if they dance with the Negro soldiers.

Other grievances, Ottley discovered, were the mistreatment of Negro officers; their criticism of the use of service and labor battalion troops for infantry duty and the anti-Negro attitude of Major General Edward M. Almond, 92nd Division commander.

TRUTH About The 92nd

Journal & Guide

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

If there have been failures of the 92nd Division, they do not necessarily reflect unfavorably on the courage of its enlisted men.

4-28-45 Norfolk, Va.

Many things have contributed to certain "reverses" allegedly suffered by the highly publicized outfit—some things which security censorship hid from the public and other things which might have been overlooked in the national discussion of the division's early history in combat with "race sensitiveness," this writer believes that the 92nd Division is, as Mr. Gibson put it, "not hopeless." It has been proved that the 92nd men will fight heroically when led by good officers.

The 92nd Division has many problems which are peculiar to a segregated outfit that has mixed white and colored officers, not the least of these being the so-called "race problem." It is very easy for the officers, white and colored, to bring out the old race angle as an alibi for their own failures.

MIXTURE OF ATTITUDES

There are many efficient officers in the division, colored and white. There are some officers which might not be classified in the top bracket of efficiency—white and colored. There are some white officers who have shown no racial sensitiveness in the performance of their duties and are apparently doing their utmost to promote the advance of the division.

There may be some white officers who have shown prejudices on certain occasions. This mixture of attitudes has probably done more to hinder the progress in the division than any other single factor.

If there have been failures in the 92nd Division it will be shown in unit histories that these were no reflection on the courage of enlisted men generally. Time and again individual units of the division have displayed the acme of courage in combat. These displays of courage and gallantry have come consistently when soldiers were inspired by the officers who led them into battle.

Maj. Gen. E. M. Allmond, commander of the 92nd Division, has repeatedly emphasized during interviews with this reporter that "my chief aim is to make this a good fighting outfit—to see to it that the squads and platoons are led into battle by the best men available. . . 4-28-45

The best of battle plans must fail unless the junior leaders carry out their orders efficiently, Gen. Allmond contends.

"RACE SENSITIVENESS"

Despite the fact that it is a segregated unit with mixed officers, many of whom are haunted by good officers.

On at least one occasion the news releases on 92nd operations have been definitely on the "cool" side. This came in mid-February when the division had just completed an "all-out" attack against Germans on the left flank of the Gothic Line, where the formidable Nazi defenses are anchored to the Tyhrennian Sea. The 92nd fighters were badly mauled in this struggle and were forced to yield early gains and to retire to lines which they occupied prior to the offensive.

SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE

Shortly after "the battle of the Cinquale Canal" was over, the Public Relations Section of the Fifth Army released a special communique stating in effect that the 92nd Division had made an all-out attack, had lost a lot of men and equipment, and had failed to gain any ground.

This was an extra sort of a news release, aside from the usual daily communiques which had carried running accounts in a general way of activities along the Fifth Army front, including the area in which the 92nd was operating.

It was a release which left no doubt to the world's waiting editors that the 92nd had failed in its first imp[illegible] test.

92nd Finds Unburied Bodies Of Comrades

4-28-45

By LEM GRAVES JR.

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION, Italy—When Negro soldiers of the 92nd Division scored advanced along the Ligurian coast line last week they came upon the bodies of many of their comrades who were slain during the ill-starred all-out division attack last February when our troops were forced to yield their ground gains after suffering heavy losses in men and material.

The bodies of colored soldiers have been resting on the ground north of the Cinquale Canal with no apparent attempt being made by the Germans to bury them.

These Negro soldiers will not soon forget this potent violation of human decency on the part of the Germans.

92nd Finds Ashes of Columbus

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
6-15-45

Return Urn to Resting Place In Genoa, Italy

By MAX JOHNSON

GENOA, Italy.—Troops with the 92nd Division on Wednesday returned the urn allegedly containing Christopher Columbus' ashes to its pre-war resting place in the municipal building here in the beautiful city of Genoa, during one of the most colorful and impressive ceremonies ever held in this theater with allied participation.

Over 400 92nd troops with another 1,000 British troops and sailors took part in this memorial ceremony held in the city's two block square piazza, Della Vittoria, while an estimated 10,000 Germans in the ridged area witnessing the affair from every possible vantage spot, including windows and roof tops. 6-15-45

92nd Returns Win

The urn said by Italians to hold a portion of the ashes of Columbus, famous 15th century explorer and discoverer of America had been taken by partisans into the hills for safe keeping along with a small silver box containing some of his letters and documents after the initial bombing of the city in the early stages of the Italian campaign.

At 2:05 Wednesday afternoon, a special guard of honor composed of personnel from the second battalion with the 92nd and 370th Infantry regiment with "B" battery in divisions 598th field artillery unit filed into the beautiful piazza Della Vittoria at slow pace with the funeral march played by the 92nd band.

They were escorting the urn carried on a caisson drawn by six horses. Halting in front of the walkway leading up to the arch in the center of the square erected in honor of King Victor Emmanuel, six enlisted men from the 598th former honorary bearers and escorts of the urn to the marble pedestal beneath an archway for the first phase of the ceremony. 6-15-45

Impressive Ceremony

Carrying the urn was Pfc. H. I. Zackary of Legrange, Texas, and escorting him were: Sgt. Sylvester Austin of St. Louis, and T-5 Hardy W. Wilcox of Tennille, Ga. Carrying the silver box and Columbus documents were: Pfc Floyd Miller of Florida escorted by Sgt. Worth Dallas of Virginia and Pvt. William House of Texas.

These men had been selected as the results and the winning of the highest good soldier ratings in their unit in a contest conducted by 1st Sgt. Carl Lynon of Lexington, Ky., an officer helping to arrange the affair.

After the urn was placed on the pedestal six soldiers stood at attention beside it. The 598th B. battery under Lt. Garland Borden of Chicago fired an 11-round salute from four 105's. Major General Edward M. Almond, division commander placed a floral wreath against the pedestal and Lt. Col. Louis J. Beasley of Florence, Ala., division chaplain gave invocation.

Wings Over Jordan chorus of 21 voices under the Rev. Glynn T. Settle of Riedsville, N. C., with Miss Hattie E. Easley of Guthrie, Okla., conducting, sang "God Save America." The chorus is in this theater. 6-15-45

Memorial Address Given

Major General Almond followed with a memorial address and said in part "I am restoring this symbol of your distinguished son, just as our troops restored your city to peace and security little more than a month ago. I perform this service in all humility with great pride in the accomplishments of our troops. May this symbol of Columbus never be driven from your city again."

Following the firing of volleys by the firing party and the blowing of taps, six enlisted men took the urn and the box of documents back to the caisson and the procession filed slowly through the street to the municipal building where the urn was placed on the pedestal it formerly occupied before the war.

Appreciation expressed

Vanduccio Paralli, Genoa's mayor, then expressed appreciation of his city's population by bestowing honorary citizenship upon General Almond and formerly offering freedom of the city to his troops.

The Mayor said "I hope free movement of your troops here will be a token and fraternization among our peoples which springs up, and gets strong in the common effort for actuation of ideas of universal peace, freedom and welfare." 6-15-45

Then at 5:6 o'clock the affair was over but Genoas', as well as, the 92nd troops continued to make the holiday an occasion with various lesser celebrations.

It is claimed that this urn was given to the city of Genoa by Giuseppe G. B. Cambisso to his brother, Lugi, general consular of Italy at Santa Domingo, July 24, 1878.

The 370th infantry officers participating as part of the processials guard of honor included: Capt. Raymond Montgomery Jr., 318 Third S.W., 2nd Lt. Frank Whisnot, 1418 Way, both of Washington; 2nd Lt. Richard Pippen of New York City, Lt. Harold Jenkins of McKeesport, Pa., and 2nd Lt. James Gilliam of Baltimore, Md.

Army Hospital Staffed by Negroes Is Highly Rated

Black Dispatch Okla. City, Okla. 3-17-45

LANCASHIRE, Eng.—(ANP)—The 168th U. S. Military hospital here is rated highly. The hospital is manned by an all-Negro staff under the command of Capt. Marry Petty.

"The experiment of staffing a military hospital with Negro nurses has proved a real success," said Patricia Strauss, a white daily newspaper correspondent. "I must record that I saw one of the operating rooms 45 minutes after the last operation of the day was finished. It was not just clean and tidy. It looked as if it had never been used. It might in fact have been an exhibition operatin room in a windor of Macy's.' 3-17-45

The bulk of the operations is skin grafting. With the use of the modern dermatone, which cuts one-100th of an inch thin, no scars are left on the patient's face nor the donor's face. No stitches have to be removed any more because the skin is pasted on with a paste made of plasma and a leucocytic extract.

Fifty-four of the nurses have managed to survive the dampnes of the English climate although Capt. Petty is reported to have been confined recently by pneumonia. Many of the girls are reported to have purchased bicycles and take rides around the English countryside. 3-17-45

Second Lt. Alice Ismael, New York City, is among those who hope they will be able to spend leaves in Paris soon.

Birmingham News 5-20-45

TALENT. Fighter Bob Robertson entertains fellow patients in France

The Negro Soldiers In Italy

Daily Worker 3-8-45

Manhattan

Editor, Daily Worker:

An officer friend of mine in Italy sent me a clipping of an editorial from the Stars and Stripes entitled We Are Not Amused. It has to do with a humorous Italian weekly, Pettirosso's attitude towards the Negro soldiers and says in part: "For the possible benefit of the editors of the Pettirosso, a few simple facts might be made clear. The thousands of Negro soldiers in Italy are citizens of the United States. Many of them are living in the cold and discomfort of the Italian front and some are being wounded and killed. The Negro soldier is fighting like all other Americans against fascism and Nazism and for a peaceful democratic world. He is fighting and dying to help liberate the rest of Italy. The American Negro is not a stranger to shoes, nor to literacy, to ideas, to democracy. If Italians don't have shoes it is certainly not because any Allied soldier has them." 3-8-45

I hope that you may find this worth noting in your paper.

E. S.

1st, 7th ARMIES ABOLISH JIM CROW POLICY

Pittsburgh Courier 3-24-45

European

PARIS — Negroes and whites are now fighting shoulder to shoulder in the same outfits in both the First and Seventh Armies, marking a break in the United States Army's traditional policy of segregation, Stars and Stripes recorded this week from the First Army front.

Negro platoons have been assigned to rifle companies of infantry divisions in both armies in response to the repeated requests from the Negroes themselves for a chance to fight for their country as well as work for it, the Army newspaper reported.

GROUP REACHED RHINE RIVER 3-24-45

They were chosen from thousands who answered a special appeal Dec. 26 from the Communications Zone commander, Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, to the service troops in his command.

In one engineer company, 171 men out of a total of 186 volunteered to fight. Four first sergeants accepted reductions to privates to qualify for infantry training, the paper reported. In one Quartermaster Laundry company, 100 out of a total of 260 volunteered for the front lines, but only thirty-six were allowed to go.

About 2,500 in all were accepted, Stars and Stripes reported, and two platoons were attached to the company which crossed the Roer and helped take the Rhine.

"I came to the Army to fight, not to labor," Pfc. George Freeman Dunning told Stars and Stripes.

"We are all in this thing together now, white and Negro Americans in the same company," said Pfc. Leroy Douglass Kent of Atlantic City, N.J. "That's the way it should be . . . we've been giving a lot of sweat. Now I think we'll mix some blood with it."

The Army newspaper quoted Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Service of Supply commander, as telling the Negro volunteers: 3-24-45

"It is planned to assign you without regard to race or color to units where your assistance is most needed. Comrades at the front are anxious to share the glory and victory with you.

"Your relatives and friends are urging that you be granted the privilege. The Supreme Commander (Gen. Dwight Eisenhower) is confident that many of you will take advantage of this opportunity to carry on in keeping with the glorious record of colored troops of former wars."

AMAZING FACTS ARE EXPOSED BY AIDE

Pittsburgh Courier Pgh., Pa. 3-24-45

Truman Gibson Reveals War Department Used Large Percentage Of Illiterates in Division

"You can't train a man to be a fighting soldier for eight hours a day, then slap him in the face with his race when he leaves camp at night."—TRUMAN K. GIBSON.

By COLLINS GEORGE
Courier War Corespondent 3-24-45

ROME, Italy—(Via Cable)—Stressing the fact that every combat soldier needs proper training and motivation, and that any generalizations on the Negro soldiers' fighting ability based on race are false, Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, concluded his tour of Negro units in the Italian theatre with a press conference here last Wednesday.

Mr. Gibson opened his talk to reporters by reading part of a letter to him from Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy, sending him abroad for the specific purpose of observing the performance of Negro troops and studying attitudes of both officers and men. He pointed out that his trip was evidence of the flexibility of the War Department, which wants to know the underlying reasons behind the good or bad performance of Negro fighters.

MORE ILLITERATES THAN OTHER DIVISION 3-24-45

Mr. Gibson stated that it is too late to expect any major change in the racial policy of the War Department, but that questions of the disposition of Negro soldiers will play a large part in any Congressional legislation for universal military training.

Much of Mr. Gibson's discussion dealt with the 92nd Division, which, because of reverses in Serchio and in Cinquale is acquiring a name as a "poor" outfit. In this discussion he pointed out the fallacy of racial generalizations concerning Negro soldiers.

The 92nd, which was activated three years ago, is composed of enlisted personnel mainly from Southern States with poor educational opportunities. The proportion of men in the division in the two lowest education classes are many times higher than in other divisions of the Army.

92 PER CENT IN LOWEST CLASSES

Mr. Gibson felt that the high percentage of illiteracy accounted for part of the trouble in the division and was the key to its poor combat record. Ninety-two per cent of the 92nd is in Class 4 or Class 5 in Army literacy tests.

Seventy-five per cent of the 92nd Division soldiers were in Class 4, semi-illiterate, according to division records. Class 5 is the worst classification.

Normally, he declared, men in Class 5 had a special period of basic training, but at the time of activation of this division lack of facilities for Negro soldiers caused men of the division to miss thirteen weeks of infantry basic training, now required of all soldiers.

In the matter of replacements for the division, only a small proportion are from infantry trained outfits.

BLAME DIXIE CAMPS FOR ATTITUDES 3-24-45

Mr. Gibson stressed that the low learning level of the division had no connection with the native intelligence of soldiers, but that because of makeup and training the 92nd Division cannot fairly be compared with other divisions.

In discussing motivation of troops, Gibson pointed out that the super-sensitive attitude of the Negro GI and officer concerning race is a definite factor in the development of combat troops and that their racial anger began in Southern training camps back home.

"You can't train a man to be a fighting soldier for eight hours a day, then slap him in the face with his race when he leaves camp at night," Gibson declared.

In a review of the racial grievances of the 92nd Division, Mr. Gibson mentioned the segregated officers club at division headquarters and run-ins with white MPs who resent the sight of Negro officers with Italian girls.

PROMOTIONS CAUSE FOR DISCONTENT 3-24-45

He added, however, that much of the racial grievance is sheer super-sensitivity to race, as when, in a recent reorganization of the division, a so-called crack regiment was thoughtlessly given all white company commanders, with the immediate results of charges of racial discrimination arising.

The question of proper motivation of men, who have always been well treated by the better white officers of the division, is now receiving increased attention throughout the division, Mr. Gibson pointed out. "In spite of occasional bad reports, particularly in the number of 'stragglers' in combat, the division is still doing its job and will continue to do so. But the problem of poor attitudes of both white and colored in the division is yet to be solved," he stated.

Mr. Gibson also mentioned the system of promotion of Negro officers in the 92nd, which has caused widespread discontent. He stated that he thinks it may be changed to a more satisfactory system.

REFUTES CHARGE OF COWARDICE 3-24-45

Reminding the correspondents that in no instance was the courage of the division in question, Mr. Gibson said: "Its record of casualties and of decorations is refutation of any charge of cowardice on the part of Negro soldiers."

Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commander of the 332nd Fighter Group and a roommate of Mr. Gibson at the University of Chicago, attended the press conference.

Mr. Gibson will make his report to the War Department's advisory committee on special troop problems.

Nazis Pull Blackface Stunt; 4 Killed

Informer Houston Texas

With The American 5th Army In Italy—(ANP)--Four black face Nazi soldiers were killed here last week when they attempted infiltration into positions of the famous 92d division. The "minstrel show" infiltration marked the latest unsuccessful Nazi stunt.

Aware of facing a Negro division, the Germans decided to black their faces. They were armed with regular GI carbines and wore American uniforms. The trick failed and all four were cut down by the guns of Negro soldiers.

Combat Engineers Are Tough

Pittsburgh Courier P2.

Officers Proudly Pay Tribute To Their Men

Pittsburgh Courier 3-3-45

By COLLINS GEORGE, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY—It is the proud boast of the combat engineers that "we lead the infantrymen into battle," and in the recent battle of the Cinquale Canal the combat engineers attached to the Ninety-Second Division, not only lived up to that boast, but served as rifleman as well. Paving the way for the initial assault wave, clearing minefields of the deadly schu-mines and the tank-destroying demolition mines, building bridges to aid the movement of men and supplies, establishing strong points, their platoons were under continuous enemy fire for four full days.

HEROES OF CINQUALE CANAL—Two of the innumerable heroes of the Ninety-second Division's recent action in the vicinity of Cinquale Canal are S/Sgt. Joe N. Dozie and First Lt. John W. Bailey of Easton, Md. Dozie, with a soldier's modesty, has refused to accept the recommendation of his superior officers that he be granted a battlefield commission.

Typical of their effort is the story of one engineer company under the comman of First Lieut. Robert L. Ward of Memphis, Tenn., whose mine-clearing units not only preceded the infantry in the initial crossing of the canal, but also cleared a way through the mine-strewn beach for the spearhead of tanks. 3-3-45

First Lieut. Edward W. Williams of Albany, Ga., followed in the wake of the first assault wave to aid in the endless task of mine-clearing and to establish a strong-point. By this time Jerry had zeroed the beach in with his artillery and mortar fire and under cover of that had organized a severe counter-attack. Joining forces with the infantrymen, the engineers aided in repelling the counter-attack and accomplished their mission.

Lieutenant Williams says much of the credit for the success of his unit should go to First Sgt. Benjamin K. Boone, Durham, N. C., who, aided by S/Sgt. Leroy Smith of Ossining, N. Y., took charge of the platoon whenever the lieutenant's absence was necessary and who organized and carried out the evacuation of the platoon's casualties. 3-3-45

MICHIGAN MAN TOPS

Heading another platoon, whose double mission was to serve as flank guard for the assault waves and to establish a strongpoint, was Second Lieut. John Kitzmiller of Battle Creek, Mich. By the time Kitzmiller's platoon was to cross the canal, the enemy shelling had become so severe that only half his men could make the crossing. Determined to accomplish his mission, Kitzmiller returned to lead the remainder of his men across and himself pinned down by artillery fire for so long that his men had listed him as "missing in action." When he returned, he found that without him his men had established their strongpoint and were engaged in defending it.

Kitzmiller, however, reserved his highest praise for Sgt. Morris Upshaw of New Jersey, and T/5 John Moncreary of Mississippi, for their feat in evacuating a wounded officer through heavy shelling in full daylight from the spot now known as the Ninety-Second's "Little Anzio."

NEGRO UNIT AT BASTOGNE

New York Times

969th Field Artillery Battalion Filled Heroic Role 1-29-45

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The 969th Field Artillery Battalion, with Negro enlisted men manning its 155-mm. howitzers, has fought all the way from Normandy to Bastogne.

The War Department reported today that the battalion stuck to its guns and helped beat off waves of German attackers at Bastogne, where for a time American forces were isolated in the German breakthrough push. 1-29-45

In the heaviest fighting at Bastogne all except the actual cannoneers fought infantry fashion, taking thirty or forty prisoners.

The battalion set up its guns under the direction of the 101st Airborne Division, to which it was attached. Enemy tanks and infantry approached. With the help of a few scattered tanks, the battalion poured out fire that held the enemy at bay. Casualties became heavy before the tide turned with the appearance of supply planes and armored forces from the south.

Reporter Sees Only One Tan GI In Berlin

The Informer Houston, Texas

By OLLIE STEWART

Afro-American-Informer War Correspondent

Copyright. Reproduction prohibited

BERLIN—At long last I met my first and only colored GI in Berlin. He is here by accident since the present policy calls for whites only in this area, but his presence makes true saying that you find one, notwithstanding there are Army police everywhere. 7-14-

Meet Pvt. Carl Honesty who can tell his grandchildren he was the first tan yank in the Reich capital and made it by getting lost.

I hopped from a jeep at the Second armored finance office and there stood Carl on the back of a truck unloading coal. He belongs to the 365 quartermaster company which is somewhere in south Germany. Carl was lost and picked up but hopes to rejoin his outfit when it is found. 7-14-45

GI Weds French Heiress in Nice

(Afro-American) Baltimore

SOUTHERN FRANCE — The marriage of Sgt. Willie Johnson of Enfield, N.C., to Miss Elsa Truse, wealthy real estate heiress, in the Cathedral de St. Reparate in Nice on April 10, was announced recently. 7-14-45

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. Belgrand, before a candle-lit altar.

Plan to Live In New York

The bride wore a powder blue Parisian sports ensemble, carried the traditional Catholic prayer book and held a bouquet of lilies of the valley and lace fern, entwined with white ribbon which cascaded to her right.

Following the rites, the newlyweds were honored with a reception at the bride's home. The Johnsons plan to live in New York City after the war.

Sergeant Johnson, is a member of the 41st Engineers now on duty in France, is the son of Mrs. Rosa Scott of Enfield.

The Negro Soldier Betrayed

Louisiana Weekly

From The Crisis.

THE Truman K. Gibson report on the 92d Division in Italy marks a betrayal of the Negro soldier in this war. For Mr. Gibson, wittingly or unwittingly, has carried the ball for a War Department policy on Negroes that was certain to result in the confusion now evident in Italy.

That policy has been (a) that the army is not concerned with the race problem but with training soldiers; (b) that combat services of Negroes should be restricted and most Negroes placed in service and work units; (c) that Negro officers shall be held to junior ranks and in no case promoted to where they will outrank and command white officers or troops; (d) that while segregation is not the "official" policy of the army, it shall be left largely to individual commanders.

After so-called "disappointing" reports had come on the performance of the 92d Division, Mr. Gibson was sent over in his capacity as civilian aide to the Secretary of War to make an investigation. He called a press conference of correspondents in Rome March 14 and on March 15 the principal daily papers in America carried stories saying Mr. Gibson had declared (a) whole platoons of the 92d had "melted away" in the face of danger; (b) the performance of the 92d presented a "dismal picture" and that this was due to the fact that the division has 92% illiterates or semi-illiterates, plus the fact that it was given inadequate training before being placed in the front line; (c) a large percentage of 92d officers killed was Negro and that their deaths "reflected more credit on their courage than their judgment." 4-28-45

In passing, according to the New York Herald Times, Mr. Gibson remarked upon the block system of promotions for Negro officers being "unfair to individuals," and also upon the officers' club for "white only." The Herald Tribune writer thus sets down his impressions of the remarks on segregation:

"A mixture of white and Negro officers in the same units causes hard feelings because . . . separate officers' clubs develop and incidents of race prejudice tend to be exaggerated." (Bold face ours.)

Milton Bracker of the New York Times says Mr. Gibson's appraisal "must be taken most seriously because he is the official representative of the War Department and is a Negro."

That completes the picture. The policy was instituted and allowed to work toward the accomplishment of a desired result, namely, the plain indication that Negroes, as a whole, are unsatisfactory as combat soldiers. The final touch of artistry was to have a Negro spokesman place his observations into the record.

If the 92d Division is made up of 92% illiterates and near-illiterates, whose fault is it? Certainly not the Negro's. The War Department knew the type of men who went into the 92d. It knew the commanding officers. It must have known that the 92d, when it was slated for the Italian front, was to be the "test" of the Negro soldier in combat. Why would the War Department, if it really wanted to give a fair test, send a division into the front line with 92 out of every 100 men in the two lowest classifications in the army? The 92d was licked before it started. Its men were betrayed, not in Italy, but in Washington even as they trained under the Alabama sun at Ft. McClellan and on the sloping mountains of Arizona at Ft. Huachuca. 4-28-45

But the cards were not stacked against them solely because the army placed Phi Beta Kappas and college and high school graduates in trucking companies, quartermaster outfits and other service units. The treatment they received from their white officers and the whole atmosphere in which the Negro soldier was trained constituted a major factor in the situation.

You cannot separate a man from his fellows at the induction center, train him in a separate unit, send him, even, to a separate all-Negro isolated training post (Ft. Huachuca, Arizona), humiliate him with all manner of little differentiations and then expect one day that he will "join the team" after a little pep talk and give a superlative performance. It must be remembered that these men were beaten up by bus drivers, shot up by military and civilian police, insulted by their white officers, denied transportation to and from the post, restricted to certain post exchanges, and jim-crowed in post theatres. Everywhere they turned there was a rule for a white and a rule for a black. At Ft. Huachuca they saw their Negro commissioned officers denied admission to the officers' club and shunted to a "Negro" officers' club. They took orders from a Dixie-born general who had his own conception of the place of the Negro as a man, a citizen, a soldier.

No one knows (unless a transcript was made) all that was said in the Rome interview. The paragraph quoted above from the Herald Tribune suggests that Mr. Gibson brushed aside, or even offered an apology for the "sensitiveness" of Negroes on segregation and prejudice. The Journal and Guide correspondent, friendly and cooperative, stressed that Mr. Gibson had praised Gen. E. M. Almond, and defended the white officers of the division and the War Department. The Crisis does not believe that Mr. Gibson would deliberately cast slurs on our soldiers. The righteous resentment of Negro citizens must not be misdirected and wasted against him. 4-28-45

The fight is to make the War Department realize that the race problem is important in the making of Negro soldiers, and that their experience in civilian life cannot be separated arbitrarily from their training. Moreover, while it has made some moves to improve conditions, the War Department itself has contributed to the low morale of Negro fighting men. It should never have permitted the establishment of a "Negro" officers' club at Ft. Huachuca. It should have abolished at the outset—instead of last August—segregation within army posts. It should have abandoned its morale-crushing system of promotions for Negro officers, for not only are the officers affected, but formerly enlisted men as well. It should now, without delay, direct that the insulting and humiliating "white" officers' club of the 92d in Italy be closed, or Negro officers admitted on a par with others. 4-28-45

Above all, the War Department ought to move as rapidly as possible to wipe out segregation of fighting men according to color. A step has been made in the armies on the western front where a few thousand Negro volunteers, for in supply and service units, have been re-trained and assigned to fight along with white troops. The pattern of slander and rumors and lies about Negro which came out of the last war must not be repeated. The Negro soldier must not be betrayed by the War Department or any of its spokesmen. He can fight as well as any man and is proving it every day. What he needs is a War Department behind him whose policies, however strict, are not shaped along the color line.

Notable Record Being Made, Says Encyclopedia

Memphis World
Tenn
4-20-45

CHICAGO—(SNS)— More than 800,000 American Negroes were serving in the armed forces by the end of 1944, according to an article on this subject in the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1945 Book of the Year to be published early May 11. Of these, the article states, 701,678 were in the army and of them more than 425,000 were overseas; 148,769 were in the navy; 5,702 in the marines, and 3,556 in the coast guard.

"In addition to numerous individual citations, a notable general record in both the combat and service branches was recognized in an official army release," the article says, "with special mention made of the combat records of the 93rd division in the Pacific, the 761st tank battalion in France, the 92nd division in Italy and the 99th pursuit and 332nd bomber squardron air corps units under the command of Major George Roberts and Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., and many members of these units, received the distinguished flying cross and other decorations."

28 ENSIGNS

4-20-45

The Navy commissioned twenty-eight Negro ensigns and lieutenants during 1944; and on presidential order open the ranks and commissioned ranks of the WAVES to Negro women, according to the Book of the Year.

The Book also says that on the industrial front nearly 2,000,000 Negroes were reported in war jobs, with considerable increase in skilled and semi-skilled employment also in union, particularly CIO membership.

Hitler's Secret Weapon:

Journal & Guide
4-28-45

"Divide And Conquer!"

4-28-45

By John "Rover" Jordan

JOURNAL AND GUIDE WAR CORRESPONDENT

That is an old, old proverb that worked well for the Nazis during the early stages of World War II.

It was a strategy that was as old as the Alps, but it remained for Adolph Hitler to really bring out its effectiveness with his new streamlined version during the thundering thirties: "In Division lies Salvation!"

Using race hatred and class hatred as principal wedges for dividing innocent peoples, it, then, became easy for the powerful Nazi war machine to roll ruthlessly over the troubled nations of Europe. Even powerful France, pitifully divided, fell easy prey to Hitler's hordes.

Racial Unrest The World Over

4-28-45

Flushed with this success, the Nazi propagandists got busy on America, England, Russia and the rest of the world that was not yet under Axis domination. And the Germans achieved some success. There was a marked racial unrest the world over.

The Allied leaders, however, succeeded in exposing the Nazi propaganda tricks and set about to execute effective counter measures.

When Allied armies invaded North Africa and Italy, the Nazi propaganda machine went to work on the soldiers of the international armies.

One of their notorious features was a radio broadcast, featuring "Axis Sally," a personable feminine vendor of the Nazi speel. "Sally" would call our soldiers by name and tell them some gross untruths about their "loved ones" on the home front. But the Nazi gossip didn't work. "Sally's" broadcasts proved to be a backfire. Instead of causing despondency among Allied soldiers, it brought amusement. Laughter provoked by "Sally" has served to enliven many a lonely evening on the fighting fronts of the Mediterranean Theatre.

The Girl Left Behind

For more than a year now the Kraut propaganda gang has been showering our front-line positions with leaflets, all carrying messages designed to lower the morale of soldiers. The enemy sought to create discord between the homefront and the soldier with leaflets such as the series on "Joan Hopkins."

These were entitled, "The girl you left behind you" and told a sad story of Joan, who worked at a 3rd avenue dime store until fiance Bob Harrison went overseas. Then Sam Levy, wealthy pal of slick-haired bureaucrat Mordecai Ezekiel, hired Joan as his private secretary. Sam, the louse, wooed her with wine and fine clothes.

Negro GI Special

Months passed. Then one day Joan stepped from a swanky club towards Sam's limousine—to be confronted by a betrayel Cpl. Bob Harrison, back from Italy a cripple. The "Joan Hopkins" series carried illustrations that a burlesque barker would call "spicy bedroom scenes."

When colored soldiers of the 92nd Infantry Division joined the Fifth Army in Italy, the German propaganda boys had a field day. Special leaflets with appeal to colored troops were scattered around frontline positions.

One of the first of the special series carried pictures of the Detroit riot, showing a colored man being flogged by race-crazed white people on a street of that great American city.

The reverse side of this Detroit mob leaflet carried an appeal to colored soldiers, denouncing America's treatment of its colored citizens, and urging the tan yanks to desert the Army and come over to the German side where "jerry will give the colored man a square deal."

4-28-45

In a few days the Nazis followed up with more leaflets, this time picturing a colored soldier playing a saxophone under the caption. "Way Down Upon the Swanee River."

"Come Over To Us"

On the other side of this leaflet was this message: "What wouldn't you give to be at home with the old folks again? There is hardly a chance of your seeing them again. A shell may tear you to pieces or leave you bleeding to death thousands, of miles from them. But wait a minute. There is a way of getting out of this damned war and returning safe and sound. Come over to us!"

At studied intervals the Germans have pounded away on America's delicate race problem through a varied and amusing assortment of leaflets.

One batch of leaflets featured the pictures of two very cute and appealing colored children which were captioned: "TINY TOTS WANT DADDY HOME." The reverse side carried a reminder that the soldiers had "loved ones" back home and that there was a mighty slim chance of the tan yanks ever seeing them again. That is, unless they came over to jerry's side.

Captives Pictured

And then, one unfortunate day the Germans were able to capture a couple of colored soldiers during fierce clashes in those Apennine mountains. Of course, the propaganda boys exploited that feat to the fullest extent.

It wasn't long before the Nazis deluged our frontline positions with leaflets carrying the smiling pictures of two of the captured men. "Why Is He Smiling?" one of the leaflets was captioned.

Then, on the other side, it went on to say: "He Is Out Of It! That's Why He Is Smiling. He and his pals have found out that the Germans give the colored man a square deal. If you should be captured you'll see for yourself. In a POW camp you enjoy PEACE and SAFETY under the supervision o the International Red Cross."

On this same leaflet was a reproduction of what was inferred to be a personal note from the captured men, in their own handwriting. The note said simply, "I have been treated very nicely by the Germans since I have been captured" and it was supposedly signed by two colored soldiers who were identified by name and unit.

"Get Home Alive"

4-28-45

There was a little footnote at the bottom saying. "Remember, the most important thing in a war is to get home alive."

Why did those captured tan yanks allow themselves to be photographed in that smiling, happy-go-lucky pose? Why did they sign that note praising the hospitality of the Germans?

When a man has a machine pistol jammed into his back, he is in no position to argue. He has to do what he is told to do!

Jerry continued his propaganda until the last. But he has found that the poison which warped the minds of peoples of once-conquered Europe had no effect on fighting yanks. His scheme to "divide and conquer" has failed.

Allied soldiers, however, were glad that the Nazis did distribute so many of those leaflets. They are perfect as souvenirs of World War II.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Cir. D. 356,512 — S. 539,023

JUL 6 - 1945

Patterson Says Negroes Are Doing Well in Army

Knows of No High Generals Who Have Been Critical

WASHINGTON, July 5 (AP).—Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said today the Army is proud of its Negro soldiers and that he knows of no high ranking general who has condemned their performance.

Mr. Patterson thus took issue with Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat, of Mississippi. The latter declared last week during Senate debate on the Fair Employment Practices Committee that high ranking generals told him on a recent overseas trip the Negro troops "would neither work nor fight." Senator Eastland called them an "utter and abysmal failure."

Asked at a news conference whether Mr. Eastland's views represented those of the Army, Mr. Patterson replied that he had no knowledge of any high ranking general making such a statement and that the expressed opinions of Generals Dwight D. Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur and others "do not support any such conclusion."

"The War Department," Mr. Patterson added, "is proud of its troops and that includes Negroes as well as other groups."

He added that General Eisenhower had commended volunteer Negro platoons in Europe and that the Army's inspector general had praised the work of the 24th Infantry Regiment, a Negro outfit, in the Marianas.

Colonel Rowny's Story Proves

Race Prejudice Surest Way to Advancement in 92nd Division

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

By COLLINS GEORGE
Formerly Attached to the Ninety-Second Division

12-1-45

(LAST OF A SERIES)

The quickest and surest way to win advancement in the Ninety-second Division, if you were white, was to exhibit the fact that you subscribed to all the anti-Negro prejudices established by Southern tradition and sanctioned by the racial reactionaries of the Army and the Ninety-second Division high command. That fact is nowhere better illustrated than in the case of Lieut. Col. Edward Rowny.

Colonel Rowny, a West Pointer whose original home is Baltimore, Md., first attracted attention to his racial bias when, in 1942 before coming to the Ninety-second, he, a second lieutenant at the time, attempted to enforce segregated services on a transport carrying a Negro engineer unit to Liberia. In this he was aided by the present Brig. Gen. Wood, who commands the division at this moment.

MEN MUTINY

Following the Liberian trip, Colonel Rowny was brought to the Ninety-second Division where he commanded the 317th Combat Engineer Battalion. I know little of the colonel's activities at Fort Huachuca, but I doubt that they were popular for his outfit mutinied against him at Camp Patrick Henry as they were about to embark for Europe. The mutiny was short-lived, however, and the men were persuaded to obey their sailing orders. 12-1-45

Frightened by the near success of his men's revolt, Colonel Rowny attempted to curry favor among his Negro officers by staging a party for them on board ship. Not a single Negro officer attended. Absolutely furious at this turn of events, the colonel then sent an order about the ship demanding that the Negro officers attend the party. The refusal continued.

Once in Italy, Rowny attempted to enforce segregated tables in his mess for white and colored officers. In this he was thwarted by Capt. Cary Freeman, the battalion medical officer, a Meharry graduate, of Washington, D. C., who, in spite of the colonel's insults, insisted upon his right as a staff officer of the unit to eat at the "white" staff officers' table. In this he was upheld by the division command which would not sanction that particular type of discrimination. 12-1-45

In the meanwhile, resentment against the command had become so great in the 317th, that the Negro officers and men organized a plot against the life of the colonel. In some manner Rowny is reported to have got wind of the plot. At any rate, on the night it was to take effect, the colonel's bed was occupied by his close friend, the battalion adjutant. Sleeping in a position the reverse of that customary with the colonel, the adjutant received the bullet meant for Rowny's head in his feet.

ASKED ROWNY'S REMOVAL

The division command was by no means ignorant of the manner in which Rowny's racial prejudices made his work ineffective and lowered the morale of his men. The division chaplain and the assistant chaplain, Lieut. Col. Louis Beasley and Maj. George Bowser petitioned the division command in person asking the removal of the man from the division as necessary for both the effectiveness of the division and for its morale. Their request was ignored.

In February 1945, Colonel Rowny was placed in charge of the task force operating along the beaches in the Cinquale attack. At one time, during the most vicious period of shelling, the enlisted men whose duty was to go out onto the beach to nearly certain death, heard the colonel urge them on with this cry, "Go on out there (across the Cinquale canal) and get those men. They are your people, not mine."

The reaction of the enlisted men was immediate when this statement became known. "Let's go back there and kill that s— o--b— before we go out here to get ourselves killed," and they were restrained in this resolve only by the efforts of that splendid fighting man of God, Major Bowser, and another Negro officer. 12-1-45

Following this period, I asked the division chief of staff, Colonel McCaffrey, why a man of such known racial prejudices had been used in such a position in the attack in the first place, and particularly why had he been used to command troops of the 366th Infantry Regiment, a unit inordinately proud of its colored command.

Colonel McCaffrey replied: "Colonel Rowny has proved himself a good soldier."

GOOD SOLDIER?

I should have asked the chief of staff what constitutes a "good soldier." In this instance it seems to have meant a man who had the respect neither of his men nor of his officers, and whose forces in attack received great publicity for their failure.

Of the men and officers who served in Coloney Rowny's task force at the Cinquale, seventy-five were court-martialed for various reasons, so bitter was the division command at its own failure. Among them was Capt. Leroy Clay, who, under a more reasonable command, might have become the division G-3, operations officer. Colonel Rowny was not among them, instead, he was awarded the Silver Star (which caused several Negro winners of the same award to lose their respect for the award and pocket the decoration) and promoted to the position of Division G-3.

SUCCESS STORY 12-1-45

Despised by his own men and officers, leader of a disastrously mis-planned attack . . . but an open Negrophobe, a West Pointer and friend of the West Pointer division chief of staff, Coloney Rowny found the surest way to success in the division, race hate and political coddling.

In these four articles I have attempted to show the absurdity of giving a "Negro" unit white commanders whose racial beliefs are those of Bilbo and Rankin, the equal folly of the use of all-Negro outfits which must inevitably run up against racial discrimination in the larger outfit to which they belong.

The performance of the Ninety-second Division shows only that Negro soldiers as individuals are exactly like any other individual soldiers, and if given the same treatment as other soldiers, will perform in the same manner. They do not intend to perform well under the command of people who are motivated by racial prejudice and selfish political ambitions.

As civilians, the Ninety-second enlisted men and officers, typical of Negro soldiers in all outfits, will oppose with the bitterness of experience any attempt at future conscription of Negro citizens into a U. S. Army which continues its traditional policy of separation.

FOR ARMY DEMOCRACY

In equal measure, the Negro soldier of this war, as American citizens, will support with enthusiasm any measure which will make of the army a truly American army in which, as in America's cities, one will find side by side in every capacity, Americans of all description . . . no longer separated into Japanese-American, Negro-American, or any other kind of American units.

Famed 92nd Disbanded

Division Won 12,096 American, Foreign Awards for Valor

The Pittsburgh Courier 48 Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON—On Nov. 22, 26 and 27, the Ninety-second Infantry Division came home. Four thousand men debarked at Boston, New York and Norfolk. These four thousand were all that was left of the once 12,000-strong "Buffaloes" whose ranks, like that of other divisions that fought overseas, had been thinned by death, transfers and discharges.

At Boston on Nov. 22, the last of the Divisions' Field Artillery units were landed, also its Medical Battalion and Company M of the 371st Infantry Regiment. At New York City, on Nov. 26, the Division's Headquarters and Special Troops—Ordnance, Signal, Military Police, and band—landed. At Norfolk, Va., on Nov. 27, the last of the division's combat units, the 365th and 370th Infantry Regiments landed at Hampton Roads.

With forty-eight hours after their arrival at the three large Eastern ports, the 4,000 men—with the exception of those who elected to re-enlist—were on their way to the twenty-three centers throughout the country—from Fort Devens, Mass. to Camp Beale, Calif.—to be separated from the service. Colors and standards of the division and its regiments were furled and put away, ending the one Brazilian War II.

LAST COMBAT UNIT SERVING IN ITALY 12-1-45

The 370th also was the first combat team of the division to go into action. Attached to the Fifth Army on Aug. 24, 1944, it served continuously in frontline action until the termination of hostilities in May 1945. The men of the 370th wear three Battle Stars on their European Theatre Ribbon, one more than is worn by other units of the Ninety-second.

These were the last units of the Ninety-second to return from overseas. The division itself was next to the last combat unit serving in Italy.

the period of May-November, the division operated from Genoa back to the vicinity of Pisa.

After the first World War, the Ninety-second Division went out of service in February of 1919; it was reactivated for World War II on Oct. 15, 1942. 12-1-45

WON 12,096 AWARDS

Under these colors, according to figures not yet final, 623 men had died, 6,293 were wounded in action, and still listed as "missing in action." Under these colors, 12,096 American and enlisted men, including twelve Distinguished Service Crosses, one Distinguished Service Medal, sixteen Legion of Merit awards, ninety-five Silver Stars, six Soldiers Medals, 723 Bronze Stars, 1,095 Purple Hearts, and 7,996 Combat Infantryman Badges.

Men of the division won forty-eight additional foreign awards, the 370th also was the first combat team of the division to go into action. Attached to the Fifth Army on Aug. 24, 1944, it served continuously in frontline action until the termination of hostilities in May 1945. The men of the 370th wear three Battle Stars on their European Theatre Ribbon, one more than is worn by other units of the Ninety-second.

These were the last units of the Ninety-second to return from overseas. The division itself was next to the last combat unit serving in Italy.

Under these colors, in early October 1944, the famed division was formed as a unit on the Ligurian Coast and took over the sector from the vicinity of Bagni Di Lucca, approximately forty-five miles.

It operated in this sector from October until the conclusion of hostilities in May, which included the April offensive in the winter lines to a point near Torino, which was highlighted by the capture of Genoa on April 27, 1945. This represented a depth of about 180 miles. From 12-9-45

The Pittsburgh Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

12-9-45

HEROES OF NINETY-SECOND RETURN TO STATES—Among the first of the 1,800 officers of the 365th and 370th Infantry Regiments of the Ninety-second Division to land in the States at Hampton Roads after seeing action in Italy were the men pictured in photo at left. They wear three battle stars and the ETO Ribbon. Kneeling, left to right: 1st Lieut. Edmund H. Oxley, 1st Lieut. Benjamin L. Davis, Chief Warrant Officer Edward Millinder, 1st Lieut. Everett W. Johnson, 1st Lieut. Howard B. Campbell and 1st Lieut. Charles Bracy. Standing, left to right: 1st Lieut. Joseph H. West, 1st Lieut. William P. Jones, 1st Lieut. Hiawatha W. Harris, 1st Lieut. Jack D. Phoenix, 1st Lieut. John W. Holland, Red Cross Director Nelson A. Long and 1st Lieut. Charles E. Dobson. Center photo shows commanding officers of companies of the 365th, Ninety-second Division. They arrived Nov. 27, aboard the SS Frostburg Victory. Kneeling, left to right: Capt. Waino L. Estola of Detroit, 1st Lieut. Andrew W. Walker of Tuskegee, and Capt. William S. M. Banks of New Orleans. Standing, left to right: Capt. Elroy F. Whitlock, Texarkana, Ark.; Capt. James E. Ray, Quincy, Fla.; Capt. John W. Robinson, Yonkers, N. Y.; Capt. William D. Davidson, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Capt. Clyde A. Worthen, Chicago. Photo at right shows sixteen of the Ninety-second's 1,891 wearers of the Purple Heart. These men returned to the States Nov. 27, also.—U. S. Signal Corps Photos.

92nd Vet, Former PW, Must Do KP

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland 10-13-45

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland

Pfc. Nathaniel H. Evans, who is among the 92nd Infantry Division veterans and former prisoners of war who are forced to do KP duty, clean latrines and wash pots at Fort Benning, Ga., where they have been stationed since their return to the States. This exclusive AFRO photo shows him on KP duty. Evans, who hails from McRoberts, Ky. and has been in the Army three years, was wounded twice in action – and later taken prisoner by the Nazis. 10-13-45

Ex-Captain Clay Freed from Prison

The Afro American Baltimore, MD

Twenty-Year Sentence Remitted by War Dept.

12-15-45

RE-ENLISTS AS PVT.

Term Cut for ex-92nd Officer Had Been Asked

GREEN HAVEN N.Y. — Leroy A. (Hickey) Clay, former captain of the 92nd Infantry, was released from the General Prison here this week following announcement by the War Department that the unexecuted portion of his 20-year sentence had been remitted.

He will be re-enlisted as a private on Wednesday, and after a seven-day furlough at his home in Baltimore will report to Fort Hancock, N.J., for assignment.

The former 92nd officer was originally sentenced in Italy last April by a court-martial to 50 years and dishonorable discharge for allegedly disobeying an order from a superior officer, but the term was later cut to 20 years.

Cut to Year Asked

Last month, it was revealed that the War Department had been asked to reduce Clay's sentence to one year and grant him the privilege of "parole-induction."

In a letter to Andrew Johnson, president of the Baltimore Social Workers' Rountable, Col. George J. Schultz, commandant of the Eastern Branch, U.S. Disciplinary Barracks here said: 12-15-45

Called "Victim of Circumstance"

"These recommendations were made since it was felt that Clay fell victim of an unfortunate circumstances while in combat, and that there was absolutely no intention on his part to violate military law. It is also believed that he is of excellent character and possesses high patriotic ideals."

At the same time a clemency review of the case was pending before the Army Board of Review, with Clay being represented by Thurgood Marshall and Robert Carter, NAACP attorneys. 12-15-45

A native Baltimorean, Clay is a graduate of Howard University and served as an officer with the Maryland National Guard until it was taken into the Regular Army. He served as assistant operations officer with the 92nd.

12-15-45

LEROY A. CLAY

A Little "Secret" About The Brazilians In Italy; Morale In The Much-Discussed 92nd

The Journal and Guide Norfolk, Va.

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN

The notebooks of war correspondents usually were spiced with many little "secrets" of war which were not suited for publication while our fighting men were still on the field. Some of those items in print would have caused the units a little embarrassment at the time. Others would have surely been blue-penciled by censors. Now that the war has been won, many of these little "secrets" may be harmlessly told.

QUITE A BATTLE

Here's a little "secret" on the Brazilian unit which was fighting with the Fifth Army in Italy, in a sector adjoining the 92nd Division area: 12-29-45

One night early last winter, two units of the Brazilian task force, mistaking each other for enemy troops, opened fire, and a spirited fire-fight ensued. The thing developed into quite a fracas, the battle raging practically all night.

When things were finally brought under control, it was found that they had inflicted over 150 casualties on one another!

(The Brazilian incident was unfortunate, but not unprecedented. Unseasoned troops have often been known to fire on one another out there in that weird place known as "No-man's land." This correspondent on several occasion, for instance, barely missed being shot by American sentries who didn't recognize me in the dark!)

SECRET OF MORALE

And, here's a little "secret" of why morale was low at times in some companies of the 92nd Division:—Some of the white officers in positions of command did not have confidence in the colored soldiers. And the soldiers in turn, did not have confidence in some of the officers. The result was that these disgruntled units sometimes made an unfavorable showing in combat.

It was the old, old story—You can take a white man out of the South, but too often you can't take the South out of him!

Then, there were the little "secrets" of the war correspondents at the Seventh Army press Camp during the Southern France invasion. The war reporters on this operation were a devilish lot, always planning some daring scheme for a story.

You will probably recall the three correspondents who made their way through the German lines, finally winding up in neutral Switzerland. That was quite a shock to the Army big-wigs, and the three reporters were "expelled" for 30 days! 12-29-45

Well, John C. Smith of the New York Herald Tribune and this reporter had cooked up a similar scheme. Only, we had planned to go through the German lines to Paris. In other words, we had planned to make our own private junction with the Normandy forces, days ahead of the rest of the Seventh Army.

Only reason we didn't attempt it was because the Fifth Army in Italy was planning to "jump" and reach objectives AHEAD of the Army! 12-29-45

SECRET WEAPON

Speaking of "War Secrets," the secret of the success of many of our military operations was the uncanny efficiency of colored truck drivers, who hauled up the ammo, come hell or high water! Correspondent Lem Graves Jr., of the Guide, used to say that America's secret weapon was "a Negro in a six-by-six truck."

56n-1945

92nd Painted As Unit With Grit

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

5-1-45

U. S. GENERAL HOSPITAL, Camp Pickett, Virginia —(SNS)—As each new train load of casualties arrives at this huge U. S. General Hospital, a new chapter is written in the combat history of the 92nd Infantry Division on the Fifth Army Front in Italy. Each train brings one or more from the 92nd; each man brings new material for the chronicler.

Each page has a different plot—each plot its own odd twist—but the time and place are always the same—Somewhere in Italy.

They come from all walks of life, these casualties of the 92nd Division. Some were clerks, filling station operators, mechanics, lithographers, dental technicians, lumbermen and factory workers — a good cross section of American manhood.

HAD TO HAVE GUTS

Men of the 92nd had to have guts. Take the case of Captain Edgar B. Felton of 727 Harvard St., N. W., Washington, D C, CO of Company A, 371st Infantry Regiment. After having one of his kidneys ripped out by shrapnel, Captain Felton refused medical aid for himself and ordered the medics to care for his wounded men. He then staggered unassisted back to his command post to report that his forward platoons were pinned down in a German minefield.

3-1-45

And the "Buffalos" had to have grit. Private First Class C. V. Hudson of Wagoner, South Carolina, a rifleman with Campany L of the 371st Infantry, lay in the snow near Gallicano with a bullet through his chest and listened to a searching party from his own company as they frantically called his name—a call he couldn't answer because each time he tried to speak his mouth choked up with blood. He was forced to lay there helpless and unnoticed as his only means of rescue passed within a few feet.

LAY IN SNOW

Hudson lay there all night choking and bleeding in the snow and when morning came, unable to crawl because of his gaping chest wound, he sat up with his back in the direction of his command post. His feet dragging behind him, looking over his shoulder in the direction of his own lines, he literally pushed his near lifeless body backward across the snow for a quarter mile before he was spotted by aidmen and picked up.

Fast thinking is necessary in battle. Private First Class Dugar Lee, of 1020 House Street, Columbia, South Carolina, though wounded by mortar fire and cut off from his company by the Germans, stayed three days inside the German lines and is living today to add his bit to the story of the 92nd Division.

A member of Company G of the 366th Infantry, Lee was on an outpost near Borgia, Italy, when he and members of his squad were cut off from his company and trapped in an Italian house.

They fought off all German attempts to drive them from the dwelling and finally forced the Jerries to call for artillery.

WOUNDED BY SHARPNEL

When the artillery barrage came most of the men got out of the house but Lee was seriously wounded by shrapnel. Unable to go with his buddies, he unselfishly insisted that they leave him and save themselves.

5-1-45

That night, Lee crawled from the house and dragged his wounded body to the building where his command post had been, only to be told by a woman Italian Partisan that the Germans were now in possession of the town crawling into the basement of the house, the wounded infantryman lay there for three days watching the Germans prepare for a counter-attack by the Allies.

On the second day, Allied planes flew over and gave the town a terrific pounding, blowing up the house next to the one where Lee lay. At one time the Germans actually entered the house to set up an antiaircraft gun but changed their minds.

On the fourth day, the Allies attacked and retook the town and the wounded rifleman was saved.

There are others like Private Leander Robinson of 35 N. 8th Street Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, BAR man, Sergeant Francis Thomas, of 1305 Q Street, N. W., Washington D. C., a heavy weapons platoon leader, Private First Class Raymond Dantzler, 134 Peabody Street

Regular Army 92nd Division

Orangeburg, South Carolina, infantry lead scout and Private First Class Calison Roache of Swanson, South Carolina, rifleman—all brove, hard-hitting men, all wounded in action against the Nazis.

Report on the Negro Soldier

Time - N.Y. 3-26-45

From a sympathetic observer last week came a report on an infantry division which the U.S. Army has watched with keenest interest: the Negro 92nd. The man who made the report was Truman K. Gibson, Negro civilian aide to War Secretary Stimson. The essence of what he had to say: the 92nd's battle performance had been something less than good.

Censors have never permitted correspondents to tell the whole story of the 92nd. It is recorded that the division was activated in October 1942 and, under its white commander, Major General Edward Mallory Almond, and key white officers, packed off to Italy last summer. Three weeks after their arrival in Italy they were assigned to the front, east of Pisa.

After that, few stories of the 92nd came through; those that did were wistfully played up by the U.S. Negro press. Gibson, on a special assignment to Europe, made his report from firsthand sources. In an interview in Rome he told some of the things which correspondents have never been allowed to cable.

3-26-45

He cited many instances of personal bravery on the part of the men of the 92nd. But, he admitted, units of the 92nd have too often "melted away" before the enemy. Certain units have been thrown into "more or less panicky retreats, particularly at night when the attitude of some individual soldiers seemed to be, 'I'm up here all alone; why in hell should I stay up here?'"

Gibson said he had found cases of panic in other units of the polyglot Allied outfits on the Italian front, but these were mostly individual cases. With the 92nd, he admitted, "the disintegration was likely to be the behavior pattern of . . . patrols or platoons."

Said Gibson, commenting on his own account: "It does not prove that Negroes can't fight [see below]. There is no question in my mind about the courage of Negro officers or soldiers and any generalization on the basis of race is entirely unfounded."

3-26-45

His chief explanation for the 92nd's poor showing: 17% of the division's men are illiterate; 75% are semiliterate. (Among white troops only 4% are in the illiterate class; only 16% are semiliterate.) The bewildered blacks, according to Gibson, were never given the psychological preparation they needed.

U.S. Army Signal Corps

CAPTAIN CHARLES THOMAS
First in World War II.

Report on a Hero

3-26-45

The mountain road out of the Alsatian village of Climbach was crawling with German supply trucks. Climbach had to be taken; a task force of infantrymen, tanks and tank destroyers of the 103rd Division set out to do the job. In a scout car, jouncing along at the head of the little column, was Lieut. Charles Thomas, a Negro company commander in the Negro 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion.

Thomas' car was on the crest of a hill when the Germans opened up on them. Thomas was wounded, but he grabbed the car's .50-caliber machine gun and raked the woods and the buildings ahead while his wounded companions crawled away. When Thomas followed them, he was struck again in the chest, legs, arms.

Badly wounded as he was, he ordered the emplacement of two antitank guns, called his junior officer and gave him cool and careful directions for bringing other guns into position to blast out the enemy. Only after he had everything in order did he allow himself to be carried from the fireswept hilltops. Climbach was taken.

3-26-45

Last week 24-year-old Charles Thomas, of Detroit, Mich., onetime metal pourer and molder at Ford, now a captain, became the first living Negro to get the Distinguished Service Cross in World War II. The only other Negro to get the D.S.C. in this war: Private George Watson, who gave his life helping men to safety from a sinking boat off New Guinea two years ago.

When reinforcements finally arrived, their dead bodies were found outside the wrecked building which they had given order to shell.

Ability to inflict high casualties upon the enemy and willingness to die for their own men attest the high degree of resourcefulness and sacrifice of our own fighting men on all fronts.

In no other war has the nation been so quick to recognize the gallantry of its colored fighters nor has the War Department ever before been so helpful in making it possible for correspondents to tell folks back home of their exploits.

Wherever the story of the 92nd Division is told in this war, the names of Lt. Graham Jenkins, of Philadelphia, and Lt. John R. Fox, of Ayer, Mass., must be listed among its heroes.

Heroes of the 92nd Division

AFRO-American - Balto., Md.

War Correspondent Max Johnson's cable from Italy last week announcing the decoration of T/5 Jefferson Hilliard for killing fourteen Nazis with a machine gun brought surprise and joy to the Brooklyn home where Mrs. Hilliard lives with their 6-year-old son.

The Hilliard award was one of twelve decorations pinned on members of the 92nd Division fighting in Italy.

In later editions of the AFRO was featured another war, the Johnson cable reciting the heroism of two 92nd Infantry officers who, when surrounded by a superior force of Germans, directed heavy artillery fire upon their observation post so that their command might have a chance to retreat and reorganize.

War Department reports on 92nd Division, finally

Los Angeles Tribune 4-7-45

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—Before the bitter counter-charges made by the Negro press against the report of Truman Gibson, No. 1 Negro public relations man for the Army, on the unsavory combat record of the 92nd Division in Italy had subsided, the War Department came forward this week with slightly watered 'carte blanc' for the division's combat behavior in an obvious attempt to quiet matters. Said the department: 4-7-45

"Since its first combat team crossed the Arno River last September to capture the city of Lucca, 92nd Division infantrymen have won seven awards of the Legion of Merit, 5 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals and 1377 Purple Hearts.

CALIF.

"At the end of their first six months in combat, the "Buffalos" had received 5991 Combat Infantryman Badges. Altogether 7000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy . . . Seven who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot, and many others were being considered.

"Regarding operations, the 92nd Division had seen only negligible changes in its front-line positions. One major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed many men and materiel in pushing the division back to its starting point. Sharing the assignment of pinning down Wehrmacht divisions in Italy, the 92nd was confronted by the loftiest peaks of the Apennines. 4-9-45

"Many heroes, whose exploits earned the praises of high-ranking Army leaders, emerged from the division's first half year of combat. Daring fighters like Capt. Charles F. Gandy and 2nd Lt. Theodore O. Smith, of Washington, D.C.; Sgt. Rodger Holmes, of Hodges, S.C.; Maj. Willis D. Polk, of Philadelphia, Penn.; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Pfc. James Robinson, of Atlantic City, N.J., and Pvt. Jake McInnis, of Prentiss, Miss., have lived up to the finest traditions of the United States Army."

As if to say the 92nd Division wasn't really all that bad, the well intended War Department mentioned the fact that Five-Starred Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, had inspected the division, had officially reported that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

Jimcrow Can't Inspire Men of the 92nd

Daily Worker reporter Eugene Gordon was himself a member of the 92nd Division in the first World War. He went to France as a sergeant of an officers' training school in April, 1918, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in July. His first published story in any daily newspaper was an account of two daylight raids made by patrols he led behind the German lines on Nov. 6 and 7, 1918, when he commanded a platoon of Co. C, 367th Infantry. The whole First Battalion was commended for these feats.

Daily worker N.Y.N.Y.

By EUGENE GORDON

The War Department, according to news dispatches from Rome, is making a special effort to find out why the 92nd Division and other all Negro combat units have been making "unsatisfactory showings" and to work out methods of solving this problem." 3-17-45

What is the "problem"? It is the problem of making men behave like full-fledged men when they are treated like creatures less than men.

We Negro officers and men of the 92nd Division in 1918 used to say bitterly that a segregated outfit was an inferior outfit. Regardless of what you may think to the contrary, the men of that division today feel and say precisely the same thing. 3-17-45

Negroes from such relatively progressive centers as New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit, men whose native intelligence is buttressed by formal schooling, are segregated into jimcrow outfits, deprived of the ranking Negro officers who trained them as National Guardsmen, and are otherwise treated as inferiors. They take it all in their sritde, however, though resenting it deeply. They take it because they know that, even as they fight Hitler they are fighting jimcrow. 3-17-45

Negroes from the heart of the jimcrow country, on the other hand—from the rural areas of backward Mississippi, for instance never having realized their dreams of schooling or the right to belong to a National Guard outfit with Negro officers, are a special "problem" to the War Department.

TREATED AS INFERIORS

Truman Gibson, the Secretary of War's civilian aide, quotes War Department figures to show that 17 out of every 100 men in the 92nd Division in Italy cannot read or write and that 75 out of every 100 can barely read or write. These men, largely from the most unenlightened sections of the South, cannot be expected to see this war as benefitting them as they believe it will benefit their white fellow soldiers. They were treated as inferiors back in Mississippi and they are treated as inferiors in the front lines facing the Nazis. 3-17-45

Stories about the "problem" of the 92nd Division will continue to be written until something is done to solve it. What? Abolish second-rate gradings as applied to Negro troops!

The men of the black 92nd Division of the black 777th Field Artillery, of the black 784th Tank Battalion and of black Col. Benjamin O. Davis's Fighter Group are sons of people who know they must win this war.

Heroes of the 92nd Division just last week were awarded 11 silver and 27 bronze stars. They got these prizes not for running away from but for killing just such Nazis as those who, at the Camp Swift, Texas, regional hospital, enjoy what the Negro press calls "food priority over Negro soldiers."

The 777th Field Artillery fired the first gun of the 9th Army 16th Corps into Mehrun across the Rhine. It was black 784th Tank Battalion of the 9th Army which spearheaded the attack for white 35th Infantry Division into the Nazi town of Sevelen. It is the flying outfit headed by Col. Davis which was recently decorated by Col. Y. H. Taylor, commanding officer of the wing to which this group is assigned, for "meritorious achievement and heroism in combat against the enemy."

The "trouble" with the 92nd, as with every other all-Negro outfit, is jimcrow and discrimination. Get rid of those anti-democratic evils, at home and in the armed services, and you get rid of all such "troubles."

Attorney Urges Magazine Ban for Attack on 92nd

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt. Md

PHILADELPHIA—John F. William, attorney, cancelled his subscription to Newsweek magzine on February 27, in a blistering letter of protest aganist the "contemptible" article of February 26 on the heroic 92nd Division of the U. S. Army. 3-10-45

In addition to this action of resentment aganist the magzine's charge that "so far, the outfit's record has been a disappointment and failure," Mr. Williams told Malcolm Muir, president and publisher, that he is leading a fight to have Newsweek put on the blacklist of colored families.

Plans Campaign

"Iam going to undertake a personal campaign with the NAACP and other organizations throughout the country to eliminate Newsweek from the homes of colored people to the fullest extent" he said." 3-10-45

"You have shown by this article that you are most biased and prejudiced, and underseving of the patronage of the 13,000,000 colored people of this country, and I might say also, of other fairminded Americans."

He called the article a "brazen attempt to discredit on of the country's most loyal and persistent elemnts of its population," "which is not only unpatiotic and disgusting, "but fails to square with either the facts or the truth."

No Segregation Wanted

Mr. Williams reminded Mr. Muir that the colored American did not have to wait until this war to show his valor and devotion to this country, and also his fighting ability." 3-10-45

"Colored people do not want any separate segrated army", he added "but desire to fight along with their other fellow American. "The lawyer cited praise for colored soldiers by Southerners and blated the magzine's "gross ignorance" of the true situation.

All 92nd Wounded Not In Mississippi

Chicago Defender Ill. 4-7-45

WASHINGTON — Reports that all casualties of the 92nd Division stationed in Italy were being shipped to an army hospital in Mississippi have been denied by a War Department spokesman.

Alluding that men are dispersed according to wounds he said that nine enlisted men and one officer of the 92nd had been sent to the Foster General hospital in Jackson, Miss.

56n-1945

Truman Gibson and the 92nd

Gibson Denounces Afro-American Army Segregation

Balt., Md. 4-14-45

Holds 4-Hour Press Conference; Denies He Said 92nd Division Failed

WASHINGTON

Despite a constant refusal to participate in public criticism of War Department policies, Truman Gibson, Jr., spotlighted the complete failure of Army segregation practices at a press conference held Monday.

The civilian aide to the Secretary of War opened the conference with a glowing account of the performance of colored troops transferred from all-colored service outfits to mixed combat units in the European theatre.

Later he discussed the 92nd Division, the doubtful performances of some of its units, and his recent press conference held in Rome.

Men Used Where Needed Most

"In France," he said, "I visited some of the colored platoons before they left for the front and talked with men being trained at the reinforcement training center.

"What I saw and heard was evidence that the supreme command in SHAEF was following in racial matters what must be the basic policy of any army in any war, namely that of utilizing most efficiently all available resources of men and material to defeat the enemy."

Under the barrage of questions from colored and white reporters which lasted for four hours and a half, Mr. Gibson denied having stated that the 92nd Division was a failure or that colored troops could not, would not, or can not fight.

He said that while there have been instances of "melting away" of 92nd units under fire, this has happened before and is not by any means "the sole prerogative of members of the 92nd Division or of colored troops."

Differences Not Due to Race

"If there is any general conclusion to be reached," he said, "it is that there is no difference in soldiers (because of color). Train them properly, treat them right, and they can and will fight."

Attributing much of the 92nd's difficulty to the training, motivation, and environment of its men, Mr. Gibson said that conditions harmful to the efficiency of the unit had been found and that steps had been taken to remedy them. He declined, however, to describe or elaborate upon the "steps."

Evades Query on Illiteracy

Asked whether the effectiveness of the unit had been hampered by the high number of illiterates among its personnel, he replied that the question was a difficult one to answer, but that the difficulties had been presented to the theatre commander and it was his problem to work out the unit's most effective use. 4-14-45

He also declined to comment upon whether the theatre commander's problem might not have been easier had the Army followed a policy of integration in the training and use of the men.

"I will leave that one for the editorial writers," he said, "but there are a lot of factors involved."

Mixed Units "Big Question"

While denying that the integrated use of colored and white troops on the European front was in the nature of "an experiment," he said that whether or not the new practice would be developed into general Army policy was "a big question."

"It was begun by Generals Eisenhower and Lee," he said, "and is working, which will have a tremendous effect upon future policies. The use of the new plan in Europe shows that a real effort is being made to find a plan that will work."

Reason for Rome

Questioned concerning the reason for his holding of the Rome press conference, he said that the conference had been arranged by the Army after he had agreed to talk to correspondents in order that they might obtain accurate information concerning the conditions in the 92nd.

He also said that for the most part the reporters had presented a truthful account of the conference, although no one correspondent wrote all that was said, while different correspondents emphasized different parts of what was said in keeping with the attitudes and background.

The text of Mr. Gibson's prepared statement follows:

"The press has already reported that colored and white infantrymen are now fighting side by side in Germany.

"In France I visited some of the colored platoons before they left for the front and talked with the men being trained at the Reinforcement Training Center.

"What I saw and heard was evidence that the Supreme Command in SHAEF was following in racial matters what must be the basic policy of any army, in any war, namely, that of utilizing most efficiently all available resources of men and materiel to defeat the enemy.

Citations on Army Policy

"Such a policy is working. At the training center a white non-commisioned veteran, who was assisting in the training program, said graphically, if ungrammatically, about the colored trainees:

"'Sure they'll get along all right. It don't matter who's firing next to you when you're both killing Krauts.'

"The Texan-born, battle-scarred commanding officer of the center was confident that the trainees, all of whom volunteered for the training course with all non-commissioned officers taking a reduction to the grade of private, would do well in combat.

AWOL, Return to Fight

"He said: 'These men will fight because they have been trained and treated just like the other soldiers here and they know they are going to be used in the same manner, the same divisions.

"'They want to fight. When the first group went out, we had only two cases of AWOL among all the colored soldiers in the center.

"'We found out where the two men were when we received a wire from a front-line division commander informing us that they had reported to him to fight.'

Mistakes Not Racial

"The estimate of this officer has been confirmed by the report of an official observer who spent time with some of the platoons in the fighting around Remagen, where the first of the units was committed to combat.

"He reported that the colored soldiers fought as well as any others and that the mistakes they made were the same as those made by other troops lacking battle experience.

"This policy of making the best use of all soldiers is further evidenced in the excellent performance of the Service of Supply troops throughout the theater.

Supply Soldiers

"These troops, a large percentage of whom are colored, regard themselves as soldiers performing vital jobs. They had a very real identification with the fighting front.

"In one quartermaster depot, manned by colored personnel, the first sergeant, when questioned as to why the men were working voluntarily around the clock, replied:

"'We have got to keep the supplies moving and all of us want to do our part.' The officers in this unit were white and were enthusiastic about their men and their work. 4-14-45

Nurses and Wacs

"Discussing their men, colored officers in a quartermaster truck company said that, on many occasions, their drivers had insisted on delivering white infantrymen into dangerous territory late at night far in advance of the debarkation points because 'they hated to see the "Doughs" walk.'

"In the European Theater of Operations are the first units of colored nurses and Wacs to go overseas. The nurses, stationed at a hospital in the North of England, are busy treating American soldiers who have been wounded in action.

"They are described by the commanding officer as being the equals, professionally, of any nurses in the area. The Wacs officer and man the Central Postal Directory for the entire European Theater of Operations.

"Their efficiency has drawn repeated praise from the commanding officer of the United Kingdom base section. They have adjusted exceptionally well in the short time they have been overseas to their work and the community in which they are situated.

Discrimination Unofficial

"Generally, on both the continent and in England, it was apparent that the attitude of the Supreme Command that there should be no discrimination against any soldier on account of his race had reached all elements of the command.

"Discriminatory acts and incidents that have occurred where regarded by the soldiers as being individual in nature.

"As a result of my trip to the Mediterranean and European theaters, I am impressed that such differences as exist between soldiers are not due to racial characteristics but to such factors as training, motivation, and environment.

"The fact that the commands in these theaters believe this is encouraging. Certainly the record being made by colored soldiers gives the lie to any charge that they cannot and will not fight."

92nd Fights 2 Battles-Gibson

AFRO-AMERICAN

3-24-45

Obtaining Justice in Own Unit a Problem

TRAINING SCORED

War Department Aide Reports on Probe

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

3-24-45

ROME — Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, gathered some fifteen war correspondents about him in a press conference here Wednesday to talk about the 92nd Division.

Having just returned from spending six days with the 92nd and already possessing inside background of its history since its activation, Gibson said he had been sent to Italy to observe colored troops, particularly the 92nd.

He said his visit to this theatre where he has been for the past seventeen days, was part of a previously planned tour and not a result of the 92nd's recent setback. He added that he planned to leave Italy immediately for the European theatre to continue the tour.

"Far from Reassuring"

Indicating that the situation he found at the 92nd was far from reassuring, Gibson said he believed the division's commander, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, would move to correct some situations pertaining to strained race relations between the division's colored and white personnel.

Eight out of nine 92nd replacements are men from port battalions and quartermaster units, sent into the line after a short period of intensified training in infantry tactics.

Balt, Md.

Training Criticized

Adding to the overall picture of ill training, Gibson observed, is the point that the 92nd, since its activation, has been composed of high-rate Class 4 and Class 5 men, according to army literacy ratings.

3-24-45

The second major problem Gibson brought out was that of motivation — the too apparent lack of willingness on the part of 92nd Division men to fight. Most of them have a "what the hell am I over here fighting for?" attitude.

Citing some instances to illustrate the abuses of colored soldiers stationed in Southern States, where they were taught to soldier and fight to protect their country for eight hours of the day and then faced with the race question for the other sixteen, he said colored troops here are still aware of this and other injustices still alive at home.

Two things at the 92nd base which help keep this type of racial injustice before the division's men are the segregated club for white officers and the fact that General Almond, who has whites in all top jobs, will not add colored officers to his staff or promote one to a key position.

Ruse Used at Club

Formerly operated by a white tank unit which is not now connected with the division, the controversial club is now operated by the division under the guise of this unit's name, right in the midst of the 92nd Division's headquarters' busiest area. A majority of General Almond's white officers frequent the establishment. The division's band plays there often. Colored officers are denied admittance on the subterfuge that the club still is operated by the tank unit, which prefers to invite non-members.

Thus these main faults of the 92nd, none of which can justly be attributed to its colored personnel, really prove that the division is doing a good job by holding its own on the Fifth Army Front under the circumstances. "If the 92nd is proving anything," said Gibson, "it isn't proving that colored soldiers won't fight. Any generalities on the basis of race are unwarranted."

9-24-45

Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commander of our group of fighter pilots and long-time friend of Gibson, accompanied him to the conference, answering several questions of newsmen about his group, where points of motivation and the overall racial picture are significant determining factors also.

Gibson Statement May Do Good

Ch. Ill.

Chicago Defender

Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide on Negro affairs to Secretary of War Stimson, perhaps unwittingly did the American people a service when he made his statement that Negro troops melt away under fire.

There are two important questions raised immediately by Mr. Gibson's remarks. Is it another link in the chain of propaganda against Negroes? Is the army sending soldiers unfit for combat duty overseas?

4-21-45

No one in his right mind is able to believe that the stunning American victories could be achieved by men unable to stand the rigors of modern war. This automatically knocks the latter question into a cocked hat and even if it was true, it is no criterion as to the courage and fighting ability of any man when he is facing death.

The publicity given Mr. Gibson's statement in the daily press will benefit white and Negro Americans greatly. The people have become more interested in dispatches relating to the conduct of Negro service men in combat areas—around the world. Even if only one-tenth of the heroic exploits of Negro soldiers are made public it will give the lie to the tale that one's race is a determining factor in the behavior of trained soldiers under fire.

4-21-45

The statement of Truman K. Gibson, Jr., has been refuted by Dorie Miller, Charles David and other Negro heroes of World War I and II. The 92nd Division has won the praise of Field Marshal Montgomery who is better qualified to judge first class fighting men than Truman Gibson. The result of this unkind smear against men fighting for democracy will be to focus attention not only on the conduct of Negro troops, but also on the treatment they have received while wearing the uniform of their country. Already a better understanding is emerging between Negro and white soldiers serving together. Let us hope that it will be carried over into civilian life.—Seton Beresford Eversley, New York.

STIMSON'S AID HAILS NEGROES' RECORD IN WAR

Chicago Tribune-Ill

Washington, D. C., April 9 (AP)—Truman K. Gibson, War Secretary Stimson's civilian aid on Negro affairs, asserted today "The record being made by Negro soldiers gives the lie to any charge that Negroes cannot and will not fight."

4-10-45

Gibson, a Chicago attorney, told a news conference that as a result of his recent inspection trip to the Mediterranean and European theaters "I am impressed that such differences as exist between soldiers are not due to racial characteristics but to such factors as training, motivation, and environment."

Asked about allegations that elements of the 92d division, a Negro outfit on the Italian battleline, had "melted away" under attack, Gibson replied that the 92d is still in the and is still fighting."

92d Corporal Answers Slur

People's Voice N.Y.

[Editor's Note: The following article came in the form of a letter from a well-known Harlemite, now a corporal with the 92nd Division, who wears the Purple Heart. It was dated March 14, 1945, before the Truman Gibson report was issued. It is extremely significant now when the 92nd Division is under attack.]

By a Corporal in the 92nd

That article entitled The Luckless 92nd in the February 26 issue of News Week should be called The Stab In the Back. Its implications are treasonable. It must be answered back home.

3-31-45

It implies that Negro troops are no good for combat; quotes a group of mysterious and anonymous white troops that "the 92nd is a bunch of scared trigger-happy soldiers who kill their own patrols and Italian civilians"; calls the attack of early February, which did not lose any of the original ground we held, a complete failure; and infers that the reason for this is that all of the men and two-thirds of the officers are Negroes.

What it doesn't mention is that the command positions, 99 per cent of them, are held by whites but that is only a small part of it. I say that because it is not a Negro issue, but an issue for all America. It is evident that a concerted attack or counter-offensive is in progress against the unity achieved at Yalta and also within America.

It's aim is to spread disunity, nullify democratic progress and create the grand illusion that this war is not a people's war. All of this is to achieve the strategic goal of salvaging some remnants from the crash of fascism's death in Europe.

The publication of this article in a supposedly pro-administration, win-the-war magazine is a dangerous signal. German propaganda leaflets fired to our troops have had little effect—attributable to the deep-rooted anti-fascism of the Negro soldiers. But this article is having its effect because it comes from America without the Berlin trade-mark and this catches our men with their guard down.

I was in that attack mentioned and worked communications under mortar and shell fire to within 200 yards of one of our spearhead companies. I saw men's bodies lying on our path or being carried back to the aid station while other men, Negroes, would look at the result of the destruction before them, brace their shoulders and march into that destruction. They were and are heroes. The men who died are heroes. They gave their lives so that America would live, so that the world would go forward out of this stinking hell.

3-31-45

The tongue-in-cheek reporters, the editors, the other people who committed or fostered this filth of journalism should be ferreted out of their holes.

All the hullabaloo over the fighting ability of the 92nd Division, which came to light following an "investigation" of the division in Italy by War Civilian Aide Truman Gibson, continues to have its reverberations this week. Reports from Walter White in the Pacific area, point to the conviction of many that recent doubts expressed concerning the 92nd's efficiency in combat are part of a well-laid underground propaganda plan to smear all Negro combat troops and thereby halt progressive trends recently shown by the army.

3-31-45

Mr. White, secretary of the NAACP, in a report from Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, where he interviewed General Douglas MacArthur, proves almost conclusively that something is rotten in Denmark, as far as the criticism of Negro combat troops is concerned.

General MacArthur spiked rumors going the rounds that the 93rd Division, the other full-colored division, had failed at their posts. "Recent developments in the attempt on the part of certain persons to brand Negro combat troops as failures and cowards may backfire," White's report stated. He referred to recent publicized rumors that the 93rd had been broken up into port battalions and other labor units because its reported cowardice at Bougainville resulted in heavy casualties in the white division next to it.

General MacArthur told Mr. White, "Any man who says that another man's fighting ability can be measured by color is wrong. I learned that in serving as a junior officer with the famous 25th Regiment. One of the greatest armies I have ever commanded was a Filipino one."

3-31-45

"In the first place," White's release states, "the 93rd has never been assigned as yet to any beachhead action anywhere. The assault on Bougainville took place late in November, 1943. The 93rd was not ordered to Bougainville until the following April. Even Japanese air activity over the beach had by then been stopped to such an extent that movies were being shown on the beach.

3-31-45

"Instead of failing in the assignments given it, the 25th Combat Team of the 93rd, roughly one-third of the division, which was the only part given combat duties, performed in such creditable fashion as to elicit high praise from officers of the America and 37th Divisions. This was particularly true of the artillery, which was commended officially by Brigadier General W. C. Dunckel."

Although Mr. Gibson pointed out in his report to the War Department last week that intolerable jimcro conditions facing the members of the 92nd on the fighting fronts in Italy and the persecution they had undergone on the home front before they left for battle were the real reasons behind demoralization of the troops, he emphasized the high ratio of illiteracy existing in the division. For this, he was roundly criticized by the Negroes who believe that emphasis should have been put upon denial of any lack of combat ability and on jimcro conditions.

So John Jones who lives in a Tedeschi mine field with both legs blown off is "trigger-happy"! 3-31-45

So Bob Smith who knocked out a machine gun nest single-handed is better at "shooting his own patrol or Italian civilians"!

This is terrible, my blood boils; yet I have an ice-cold hatred for these liars. This damnable article is the epitome of all the slanders, insults and scurrulous attacks on America in the guise of war reporting. The truth must be told about the 92nd. It must be found out.

The focal point of the relationship of the Negro to this war is his participation in it; the measure of his progress, and, therefore, of all oppressed peoples, particularly the colonials, rests on the 92nd. The 92nd is the largest token of the Negro's contribution to the war. It is the American Negro representative in the United Nations' front. The American Negro, as the vanguard of all colored peoples in the struggle for democracy is therefore the guide to the colonial peoples and the standard by which they will judge this war.

Negro Soldiers

D.C. Washington Post.

Truman K. Gibson, jr., civilian aide to Secretary Stimson, who has just returned from Italy, is refreshingly frank in his comments on the reasons for the unsatisfactory record of the Ninety-second Infantry Division—an all-Negro combat unit on the Italian Front. The proper handling of problems that arouse racial or religious antagonisms is all too often hampered on the one hand by well-meant efforts to soft-pedal unpalatable facts and on the other hand by vicious attempts to prejudice the issue. Since Mr. Gibson is himself a Negro, his candid admission that the Negro combat troops in Italy have not acquitted themselves well cannot be waved aside as prejudiced evidence. A whole Negro platoon, he says, will frequently "melt away" in face of the enemy, panicky conditions developing especially at night. By thus facing up to the facts, Mr. Gibson is able to concentrate on the causes of demoralization and to look for remedies. 3-18-45

Personal courage is not the exclusive possession of any race or people, but, indeed, is a common attribute of mankind. Individual Americans, white and black alike, have given abundant proof throughout our history of their fine fighting qualities. And in this war Negroes have in numerous instances displayed a heroism under fire that has caused them to be singled out for distinctive honors. "There is no question in my mind," Mr. Gibson says, "about the courage of Negro officers or soldiers, and any generalization on the basis of race is entirely unfounded." Only yesterday, indeed, The Post published a dispatch from its own war correspondent, Shirley Povich, praising the splendid fighting record of an all-Negro infantry regiment of the Regular Army, at present engaged in a mopping-up job on Saipan. 3-18-45

The qualities that make good soldiers, white and Negro, and keep them steady and dependable under the terrifying conditions of modern warfare are a product of training and mental discipline of a rigorous kind. Fear is known to everybody, and it requires more than physical courage to prevent that fear from degenerating into contagious panic in times of great stress and danger. It is lack of education and lack of training that, in Mr. Gibson's opinion, provide clews to the poor performance of the Ninety-second Division. More than 90 per cent of its members are either wholly or nearly illiterate. Furthermore, many of them went straight from reception centers into the division without preliminary basic training. The blame for the poor record of Negro combat troops in Italy, therefore, is clearly attributable to the shocking deficiencies of State educational systems that have failed to provide even the rudiments of an education for a large percentage of their Negro populations. The training of these illiterates and semi-illiterates presented a problem that the Army was not ready to deal with when the National Service Act was passed. Consequently, Negro units were organized without adequate preliminary training of a kind suited to their special needs. 3-18-45

Apart from these educational handicaps, Mr. Gibson acknowledges the existence of a feeling of resentment by many Negro soldiers engendered by racial slights, and, above all, by the policy of segregation upon which the Army insists. From the Army viewpoint, segregation is regarded simply as a means of avoiding frictions that would seriously retard the war effort. Nevertheless, this separatist policy points to the existence of racial antagonisms that do not jibe with our professions of belief in the equality of all men without regard to race. To Negroes who are thus set apart, the fight against the forces of intolerance abroad may sometimes seem less important than the battle against the foes of racial equality at home. Not all Negroes share this aversion to segregation and many of them, of course, realize that the Army cannot undertake to effect a revolution in our social institutions. It has to take conditions largely as it finds them and adapt its policies to the structure of our society and, within limits, to the customs and prejudices of the great masses who make up a citizen army. 3-18-45

By his frankness, Mr. Gibson has contributed to a better understanding of the problems of the present war as they affect the Negro. Only by getting at fundamental facts as he does and not hesitating to draw logical deductions can the Army hope to develop training programs adapted to the special needs of a generally under-privileged group.

56n-1945 Truman Gibson and the 92nd Foreign Service

Gibson Slurs On 92nd Division Draw Heated Fire From Nation's Leaders

Ill. Chicago Defender 3-24-45

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—"Gibson must go!" 3-24-45

That angry demand reechoed through the nation's capitol this week in the wake of a slanderous, open attack on the fighting ability of Negro soldiers by Truman K. Gibson Jr., of Chicago, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Negro leaders here were aroused by Gibson's statements at a Rome, Italy, press conference in which he said that the all-Negro 92nd Division had turned in an unsatisfactory showing in combat.

What particularly angered several outstanding liberals who have been fighting to get Negroes out of labor battalions was Gibson's bland declaration that Negro troops so often "melt away" in the face of the enemy. 3-24-45

Panicky Retreats

Reports of Gibson's sniping at the 92nd were published in the New York Times and Chicago Sun in detail. The Times account by War Correspondent Milton Bracker, who recently leveled an attack at the Negro press for overplaying the deeds of the 92nd, was used to reinforce his contention that Negro newspapers were inaccurate in reporting news of the 92nd.

Bracker quoted Gibson as conceding that certain units had engaged, in Gibson's words, in "more or less panicky retreats, particularly at night when the attitude seemed to be 'I'm up here all alone; why in the hell should I stay here." 3-24-45

Bracker quoted Gibson as declaring that in white divisions, retreats were by individuals while

Five Negro Illinois state legislators this week planned a conference with U. S. Senator Scott Lucas to ask that Truman K. Gibson Jr., be relieved of his duties as civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

The Illinois lawmakers joined with prominent religious, political and labor leaders in denouncing the former Chicago attorney for his statement in Italy that the 92nd Infantry Division "melts away" in the face of enemy fire.

Rep. Charles Skyles of the Illinois Fifth District made it known that he and fellow-members of the Illinois House of Representatives do not intend to stand idly by while Negro fighting men were being made objects of a slanderous attack. 3-24-45

Said the vigilant young legislator: "I do not believe that there is any truth whatsoever in the statement made by Truman K. Gibson Jr., that Negro troops in combat melt away. The 92nd Infantry Division has one of the most glorious records in the history of the American army. Plans by a group of Illinois legislators, including myself, are already under way to bring about the resignation or removal of Gibson as civilian aide to the Secretary of War."

Dr. E. A. Welters, Illinois State Representative from the First District said:

"Anyone who makes such a statement as Mr. Gibson is credited with in regard to the Negro soldier is working toward the detriment of not only the Negro people but the nation as a whole. Liberal whites and Negroes are well aware that the Negro has been as honorable a fighter as any since America was settled. Every Negro member of the Illinois House of Representatives will undoubtedly renounce Gibson."

Hastie Comment

Capitol leaders were incensed over Gibson's statement.

Judge William H. Hastie, dean of the Howard university School of Law and former civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson, had this to say:

"I don't know what the facts are about the 92nd Division, but I do protest against the disposition shown in the recent 92nd Division stories in New York metropolitan newspapers to generalize about Negro combat troops on the basis of a single unit in a single campaign.

"If this sort of thing is to be done, we can cite the Negro Airbase Security Batallion in the North African campaign which, after the rout of our white frontline troops stopped the German break-through and held tenaciously to its position against vastly superior forces until this lone Negro batallion was relieved, and the sector which it had defended was assigned to an entire division.

"Or, why not cite the 969th Field Artillery Batallion, the only artillery unit at Bastogne which neither gave ground nor slackened fire when the Germans were in machine gun range of its 155 mm. howitzers intended for firing at 10 or 15 mile range were being fired horizontally over open sights at the advancing enemy.

Cites World War I Case

"Or, why not cite 'Taskforce Blackshear' of the Seventh Army as its story is told in 'Yank," the Army newspaper, where Negro tank destroyers, engineers, and whoever else could shoot, and kill, and die, took the town of Climbach by assault when everyone agreed that only a crazy man would try.

"In World War I the failure of one batallion of the 92nd Division in one small operation, probably because of the failure of command—this commander being white—was used as proof of the combat worthlessness of Negro soldiers. The heroic records of the 369th, 372nd, and other Negro infantry regiments were forgotten. They don't even appear in the official War Department records."

Judge Hastie then issued a sober warning when he said, "We must guard against the repetition of this sort of thing with the ignoring of combat successes and the exaggeration of combat failures."

Congressman William L. Dawson of Illinois said, "Soldiers in war fight on their morale—their esprit de corps. The statement attributed to Truman K. Gibson brings out clearly the result of the lack of planning on the part of leaders of the various branches of our national defense.

Gibson and the 92nd

Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, who has been pilloried by some of our leaders and certain segments of the press for statements concerning the 92nd Division attributed to him in a Rome press conference, has returned to his desk in Washington.

To a reporter on Monday, he said:

"It is hard for me to see how some people can, on the one hand, argue that segregation is wrong, and, on the other hand, blindly defend the product of that segregation."

Mr. Gibson was speaking of those individuals who charge that he slandered the 92nd by admitting that the division had suffered some reverses, at the same time pointing out that the War Department, not the men themselves, is solely responsible for the conditions making such reverses possible.

Afro-American

The Army system of jim crow and discrimination is indefensible and, besides, it is tactically unsound.

What Mr. Gibson said about the 92nd is not new. Those newspapers having correspondents with the division had such reports long before Mr. Gibson went overseas. The men in the line are certainly in a better position to know the facts than are the armchair-warmers back home.

We hold no brief for Mr. Gibson and certainly anyone reading these columns should know our emphatic opposition to the Army's segregated pattern. We believe that Mr. Gibson has made, and is still making, an effort, within the limits of his sphere of authority, to have these conditions remedied.

For this reason we are not willing to agree with any critics who charge that he deliberately slandered the 92nd Division. Reports from the front are sufficient evidence that the 92nd has acquitted itself in such a way as to merit the confidence of General Mark Clark who said that he has no intention of taking it out of the line. 4-14-45

The decision of the Army to integrate colored and white soldiers into elements of the First and Seventh U.S. armies demonstrates that the Army, faced with a problem, recognizes that success is dependent upon making the most effective use of the men and materiel available. This is certainly a step forward and we are optimistic enough to believe that the success of this experiment will ultimately lead to its spread.

Balt. Md

At a time when we are seeking unity at home as well as abroad it is distressing, but not disheartening, to witness the attempts among us to breed disunity and distrust. We can ill afford any such cleavage in times like these.

We like to think of a quotation from The Letters of Junius, which says:

"The injustice to an individual is sometimes of service to the public. Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles."

The Gibson Report

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

When Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, now visiting the Italian front, attemped to explain the fighting record of the 92nd Infantry division during a press conference in Rome last week, he demonstrated that he had as much courage as any man in the Italian theatre of war. 3-24-45

Many reports, official and unofficial, have reached this country impugning the gallantry of the members of this so-called all-Negro division. The official reports sent in last fall were so bad that a decision was reached in the War Department to send Mr. Gibson to Italy so that he might observe, at first hand, the conditions under which the division is fighting. By last week, Mr. Gibson thought he had seen enough to do some talking.

Some of the reports which tend to reflect discredit upon the division are unquestionably true. There have been times when the men of the division have not held the line. The pictorial record of engagements supports such a claim.

Pgh. Pa.

There have been some attempts to explain away this part of the record. It has been said that the division has had to defend a wider expanse of terrain than is ordinarily assigned to a unit of its size and that, therefore, it has been spread out thin. In respect to the Serchio valley and Cinquale canal reverses in February, it is reported that the 92nd division moved ahead to capture its objectives, but supporting white divisions on its flanks failed to move ahead. As a result, the 92nd, according to these reports, was caught by fire from its flanks where it expected its supporting divisions to be, and from the front. Both these explanations may lack merit.

Mr. Gibson in Rome attempted to probe more deeply into the record and the causes. He could not dispute certain bad, isolated facts which, he insisted, were of such a nature that they should not be used for sweeping generalizations concerning the courage of Negro troops. He asserted that there was more in the record to prove the gallantry of these soldiers than there is to support the charge that they are cowardly. 3-24-45

The civilian aide then developed two main theses as causes for the lack of perfection in fighting ability of the 92nd division. The first cause, as he saw it, was the illiteracy of a large percentage of the enlisted men of the division and the lack of Army policy and program in respect to this problem. The second cause was the operation of color prejudice in an army where the practice of segregation prevails.

It is apparent that Mr. Gibson chose the factor of illiteracy and lack of Army policy in respect to it and Negro soldiers because he wished to focus attention on the neglect of the education of Negroes by certain States and the blunders which the Army has made in handling these illiterates, white and black. Mr. Gibson knows the facts. Of nearly a million Negroes drafted, 550,000 came from the rural sections of the South, where their chances for an education were meager to say the least. Their unpreparedness is a serious indictment of the fitness to rule of the so-called superior whites of the South. He is right in asserting that until war came, the Army had no positive policy for the constructive use of Negro soldiers. It had a policy, a negative policy, under which Negroes were to be used largely as laborers. 3-24-45

However, Mr. Gibson errs diplomatically in placing first emphasis upon the Negro's illiteracy. The figures which he uses are absolutely correct, but they lack meaning to the people Mr. Gibson serves. Most Negroes don't know what Classes IV and V are and they have no understanding of what they have to do with fighting ability.

Mr. Gibson is right in holding the Army accountable for the fact that these illiterates were not given specialized and basic training and were rushed to the front unprepared. But such a charge involves factors which will doubtless mean more to War Department policymakers than it will to the lay public, white or black.

Among Negroes there is not the slightest scintilla of doubt that their failure to measure up in any Army situation is due almost solely to color prejudice and discrimination in the Army. When it comes to fighting, Negroes discover no relationship between reading, writing and figuring and the red badge of courage. They feel that they can be brave if they have never seen a book. And they are right. The education of the modern soldier is only a prerequisite to his more efficient use of the modern instruments of war. It does not embolden him.

But no Negroes, educated or illiterate, can stomach the kind of prejudice which haunts and maddens them in the Army, at home and abroad. This is the principal factor so far as they are concerned. They don't want Mr. Gibson telling the world that they are super-sensitive on this point, for sensitivity can be a fault and they know that the fault of prejudice is not theirs. 3-24-45

Each Negro soldier knows, from the day he is inducted into the Army, that he is subject to different, discriminatory treatment, growing out of the Army's policy of segregation. This is the big, loud-speaking fact. He doesn't have an American's chance in this Army. He is given a Negro's chance, a chance of lower, restricted order. By day and by night, this plague of prejudice pursues him. It is like a barking dog that cannot be chased off. The Negro soldier, no matter how well he does his job, no matter what kind of an exterior he may carry, is rankled in his soul by this discrimination.

Mr. Gibson reminds us of the inadequate training of the 92nd division in this country. He ignores the fact, well known to him, that segregation and prejudice tore the division apart before it was sent abroad and, according to dispatches released after his interview, glossed over the outrageous jim-crow practices prevailing in the 92nd division on the battlefront today. Elsewhere in this newspaper, Collins George, Courier correspondent, describes the jim-crow officers' club of the 92nd, from which all Negro officers are barred. Mr. Gibson noted the fact that most of the Negro officers are depressed into and kept in the junior grades where most deaths occur.

The unit is described as an all-Negro division. The description is both inept and untrue. All the top officer personnel of the division is white—and largely Southern white at that. There is no spiritual unity between the black and white components of the division. The whites hold the choice and commanding positions. This creates upper and lower strata based on color. In addition, these whites do everything they can to make the American color pattern stick in the cities and towns of Italy. They instill prejudice and incite distrust of these Negro soldiers among the Italian people.

Small wonder is it, therefore, that the Negro soldier in battle wonders what he has to die for. Small wonder is it that sometimes he may answer the question logically and conclude that the treatment he receives behind the lines is not worth the sacrifice of his blood.

Negro units and Negro soldiers and sailors have distinguished themselves for gallantry all over the world in this war. 3-24-45

But the chances are that, in every case, the individual or the members of a unit have been able to convince themselves that it was worthwhile to do so.

The experience of the 92nd division has been rotten from the beginning.

Part of the blame belongs with the Army's training program for these men, as Mr. Gibson asserts.

But most of the blame resides in the fact that the Army has permitted flagrant race prejudice to exist in Negro units according to the whims of particular commanders.

This is the fact that we wish Mr. Gibson had emphasized to the world. We don't think there is anything super-sensitive about it. 3-24-45

Gibson Won't Quit

People's Voice N.Y.N.Y.

War Civilian Aide, home from Europe, hits back at critics of his report on the 92nd Division; takes position that he criticized Army officials, not Negro troops; defends use of phrase, "melted away." Critics demand his resignation.

4-14-45

In this first press conference since his return from overseas, Truman G. Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, expressed bewilderment at the reception of his report on the 92nd Division, given in Rome last month. He expressed surprise that he had been censured by Negroes for severely criticizing the War Department in its training and handling of Negro troops in an official statement.

Questioned concerning the words "melted away," which he used in connection with some platoons and patrols of the 92nd, Mr. Gibson said that the phrase was a regular War Department term, that it cast no particular reflection on Negro troops, and had also been used in connection with similar action by white units.

4-14-45

Declaring that he could not be responsible for the reports of his interview which appeared in the New York Times and the Herald-Tribune, the Civilian Aide said that reading his report which appeared in a number of the Negro papers, which had correspondents abroad, would give the complete idea of what he said.

92nd STILL IN LINE

Gibson declared that he had criticized the War Department for improper training of the men of the 92nd, three-fourths of whom had attended Southern schools, where they did not have the same educational opportunities of those in the North, and pointed out that this indictment was of the War Department and the Southern schools, rather than Negro soldiers.

"As a result of my trip," he said, "I am convinced that such differences as exist between soldiers are not due to racial characteristics, but to such factors as training, motivation, and environment."

The 92nd is still in line and fighting, Gibson said, in answer to a question concerning the activities of the division. He also said that after he had pointed out the deficiency in its training, remedial steps had been taken immediately.

In a previous statement to a daily press reporter, Gibson declared that he would not resign, as requested by some elements of the press. "Not on your life!" he said. "It's a little difficult for me to understand all the to-do," he continued. "I said that you can't train a man eight hours a day to be a soldier and treat him like a dog the rest of the day and expect him to be a good soldier. I still say that. . . . When you treat them the same as any other men, they fight as well as any other men. The splendid record of the mixed Negro-white units on the Rhine has shown that."

SOLDIERS 'MAD' 4-14-45

Among the letters received at PV's offices concerning the demand that Gibson quit his post was one of an old veteran now at Soldier's Home in Washington, whose army service dates back 52 years. He declared that from correspondence with Gibson two years ago, he decided that his continuance in office "bodes no good for the Negro." 4-14-45

From Camp Claiborne in Louisiana writes a sergeant, who says that the soldiers at the post are "boiling mad" over statements made by Gibson concerning the 92nd Division. He calls Mr. Gibson a "morale buster not only to the 92nd, but to every Negro soldier in the Army."

The Rev. Henry Deas, now at Harvard Divinity School, who served overseas with the 92nd, also took the positions that Gibson should resign, in a telegram to PV.

The Maryland State Conference of Branches of the NAACP, in a letter to President Roosevelt, requested his personal investigation of Gibson's report on the 92nd Division. At the time the 92nd was preparing to go overseas, the letter stated, the Negro press raised a cry about the lack of preparation of the troops for combat duty. At this time, it added, the charges were discredited by the War Department.

4-14-45

Some observers point out that both Gibson and General Benjamin O. Davis inspected the 92nd Division at its training center at Fort Huachuca, before it was sent overseas. The educational level of the men and the lack of training, to which Gibson called attention in his Rome report, should have been reported then, they point out.

TRUMAN K. GIBSON, Jr. AGAIN

IT seems that ever since Judge William Hastie resigned as civilian aide to the Secretary of War in protest against the Army's anti-Negro policies, his one-time assistant and successor, Truman K. Gibson, Jr., has been constantly kept in the middle.

Now for the War Department, Mr. Gibson as civilian aide, serves the same purposes as do any of the other Negro special advisers in the various governmental agencies. They are buffers, between the Negro public and the agency head, and they are the persons to whom the finger of scorn and suspicion and responsibility is pointed when anything goes wrong.

Mr. Gibson is not an unusual gentleman. He holds down a job; he gets a nice salary; he has security. Everyone wants a job, a nice salary, and security. It is just unfortunate, in this instance, that Mr. Gibson has a job with the War Department which has been known for years to be anti-Negro and dominated by Southern whites.

Mr. Gibson is not an unusual gentleman, but he has an unusual job.

Mr. Gibson would be an unusual gentleman, if he followed his predecessor and one-time boss, Judge Hastie, and resigned in protest against what the War Department does with Negro soldiers. Instead, Mr. Gibson, when last heard from, was in Italy because the War Department wanted him to find out why the 92nd Infantry Division and other Negro combat units have made unsatisfactory showings.

It seems as though the 92nd Division received unfavorable publicity in the country's newspapers because it received a setback in one sector of the Italian front. When an all-white division is thrust back, the news of the setback is just accepted as one of those things. After all, all armies cannot always win, as the Germans and the Japanese are now finding out to their sorrow. There are always factors involved in any military victory or defeat.

Way back in the Civil War, a general attributed his victory to the fact that he "got thar firstest with the mostest". He meant that he reached his objective before the enemy, and he had superior numbers and superior supplies. That philosophy has been proven true time and time again in all subsequent wars. The armies that have had the most men and the superior equipment have been the armies that triumphed. It is just elemental. There is no mystery involved.

In the case of the 92nd Division, it ran up against superior forces from the standpoint of men, materials and experience, and naturally had a setback. Moreover, it was not backed up behind the lines. Now Negro soldiers have been known to accomplish miracles in other wars. They have turned in almost unbelievable performances under great handicaps. So much so that more is expected of a division of Negro soldiers than from a division of white soldiers.

Mr. Gibson in a conference with the press in Italy is quoted as having talked very frankly on the 92nd Division's case. He is quoted as having said he had found illiteracy to be the answer to the 92nd Division's problem. It was activated three years ago, before the Army's special training program for illiterates was developed, and many in the division did not benefit by it. He said that 92 per cent of the division were in class 4 or class 5 in Army literacy tests. Class 5 is the worst. 75 per cent of the division were in class 4 — semi-literate.

"You can't apply the same training schedules where that many men are illiterate as where only 3 per cent are," Mr. Gibson told reporters. Normally, he said, all class 5 men would have had a special period of basic education but the men in the 92nd Division were not given this advantage because the division was being activated at the time they were called up and they were sent to it immediately.

If all this was known to Mr. Gibson at the time the 92nd Division was sent overseas to go into active combat as a divison, then he is guilty of a gross disservce to not only the men of the 92nd Division, but also to the War Department and the whole war effort. While it is inconceivable that the 92nd Division's setback cost the United Nations victory at a sooner date, yet the mere fact that it was sent into combat unready and unprepared for it, is not a reflection on the Negro soldiers but on the War Department and those who were not covered himself with glory. As the civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and therefore, as the buffer between the Secretary and the public, Mr. Gibson is in an unenviable position right now. If the wrath of Negroes, Jr., by his "trouble-shooting" in the case of the 92nd Division and those who were not covered himself with glory. As the civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and therefore, as the buffer between the Secretary and the public, Mr. Gibson is in an unenviable position right now. If the wrath of Negroes.

generally, and especially of the families of the men of the 92nd Division who have been killed or wounded, falls on the head of Truman K. Gibson, Jr., he has no one but himself to blame, because he must have been, or should have been aware of what was going on. If he didn't know what was going on, then he is guilty of not thoroughly doing his job; if he did know, and didn't do anything about it, he is guilty of something far worse, and should be not only severely censured but also condemned.

Gibson Returns To Stand Pat On Slander Of Italy Division

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

Civilian Aide Ducks Reporters' Queries At Press Meet

4-14-45

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON— Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, returned from the European front last week to stand pat on his slander of the fighting men in the all-Negro 92nd Division.

Reiterating his belief that Negro units "melted away" in the face of the enemy, Gibson was faced by a barrage of queries at a War Department press conference Monday and spent an uncomfortable morning ducking, dodging and apologizing for army policy.

But he made clear that he was not misquoted at his recent Rome parley with reporters and again emphasized that he believed illiteracy responsible for the "poor showing" of the 92nd. Gibson declared outright that he would not resign, as demanded by Rep. A. Clayton Powell and in hundreds of letters that have flooded the War Department.

'Substantially Correct'

Gibson admitted his statements on the 92nd as reported in the metropolitan press were "substantially correct."

At the end of an hour long press conference he refused to answer a direct question from the Defender as to his position on a segregated army. 4-14-45

To the question by the Defender, "Mr. Gibson, what is your position on the War Department's segregated units and its effect on the performance of Negro troops," Gibson said, "I will not answer."

He said he did not believe he would be quoted correctly. When assured his reply would be carefully written down and he could read it, he said that he had no reply to make.

Gibson said his impressions gathered on the 92nd came as a result of his talk with members of the general staff in the Mediterranean theatre, Negro junior and senior officers, enlisted men, and non-commissioned men. He said these impressions were later confirmed after he had seen the 10th Army front and other terrains. He said he visited every unit in the division except one battalion. The impressions he gathered on the troops and consequent recommendations have been conveyed to General Joseph McNarney, commanding general, Mediterranean Theatre of Operations. 4-14-45

Admits 'Melt Away' Quote

Commenting on the press conference which he held in Rome, Gibson said it was arranged by the army at the request of the correspondents in the theatre.

"I have no personal desire to talk to the press on a matter as controversial as the 92nd," Gibson said, and added, "Facts about the 92nd were well known by all the correspondents in the theatre."

He stated that the Milton Bracker statement appearing in the New York Times was "just about the opinion of all the newspapermen in the theatre, they knew the facts but did not know the reason."

Gibson said his statement to the press "included all the things that had been told the army."

He admitted stating with reference to the 92nd that Negro troops "melt away" in the face of the enemy. He said that this was "not the exclusive property of the Negro soldiers." He said that his statements had referred to patrols, usually about 32 or more, sometimes of company strength.

Men Can Fight

"I was reporting what I saw to men who knew, and it was nothing that would justify any racial generalizatoin. Men have to be properly trained, motivated and led to make good soldiers," Gibson said but refused to state whether he considered members of the 92nd had been properly, trained, motivated and led.

He claimed the only generalization to be made was "The men will fight, can fight, and are fighting." He hedged behind such vague terms as proper training, and proper leadership to explain the War Department's fundamental segregation policy.

When questioned as to whether he had been quoted correctly in the metropolitan press, he said the reporters "were acting in good faith as they were sincerely interested in getting at the basic factors."

Gibson said his scheduled press conference in Paris was called off because of the airborne invasion which took place on that day. He stated emphatically "the 92nd has not failed."

To Make Recommendations

On the question of the morale of the members of the 92nd and whether or not any steps would be taken by the War Department, Gibson declared, "I am fully prepared to make recommendations on the morale of the men," but did not state what recommendations.

When he replied to a question as to whether the War Department has any record of any Negro troops performance in mixed units, Gibson referred to the more than 2,500 Negro troops, formerly service units, now fighting with the First and Seventh armies. He said, "The thing is actually being determined by actual experience in combat." He wound up his conference by issuing a formal statement which continued in his same apologetic vein.

"Generally, on both the continent and in England, it was apparent that the attitude of the Supreme Command that there should be no discrimination against any soldier on account of his race had reached all elements of the command. Discriminatory acts and incidents that have occurred were regarded by the soldiers as being individual in nature.

"As a result of my trip to the Mediterranean and European theatres, I am impressed that such differences as exist between soldiers are not due to race but to such factors as training, and motivation. The fact the command in these theatres believes this is encouraging. Certainly the records being made by Negro soldiers give the lie to any charge that Negroes cannot and will not fight."

Colored Troops Face Heavy Nazi Fire In Offensive

Chicago Ill.
4-14-45
Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—Writing in blood their resounding reply to slanders of their fighting ability, the all-Negro 92nd Division launched a powerful offensive on Italy's west coast this week.

The Negro troops, who have been accused by War Secretary Stimson's civilian aide, Truman K. Gibson Jr., of "melting away" under enemy fire, advanced in the face of heavy Nazi mortar and small arms fire to capture two important towns, Montignoso and Strinato.

Opening its attack on Wednesday, the 92nd pushed off at dawn just below German-held Massa and 20 miles from the former Italian navy base of La Spezia.

The initial 92nd assault gained up to 3,000 yards and outflanked an important height three miles from Massa. By Monday the big push was well on its way and had stabbed its way into the outskirts of the Porta, two miles below Massa. 4-14-45

Stubborn Opposition

For the first three days of the attack, the identity of the 92nd as the unit carrying out the attack was not permitted by army censors.

However, it was announced that the new Italian offensive was sprung from the town of Strettoia, which was the scene of the 92nd's last big attack on the Nazis last February. On Monday it was confirmed by the army that the 92nd was bearing the brunt of the fighting on the Ligurian sea coast while Japanese-American units were battling through the mountains further inland. 4-15-45

The most stubborn opposition was faced by the 92nd trying to punch through on the direct road to Massa while the Nisei were working around the famous Italian marble center from the east.

Big German coastal guns on Ponta Bianca—a promontory jutting into the Ligurian sea eight and a half miles west and slightly north of Massa—opened up against the advancing Negro soldiers. In the early phases of the drive north of Strettoia, the colored doughboys were driven back by counter-attacks in heavy fighting.

The 92nd later rallied, however, and hammered its way onto high ground overlooking the village of Porta. Sharp German resistance both frontally and on the flank was encountered.

Foreign Service- Mixed Units

43 of 100 Whites OK Mixed Armies

AFRO-AMERICAN 4-21-45

CHICAGO (ANP) — The colored soldier's faithfulness and stability have won for him equality with whites in the U.S. Army, say 50 per cent of returned overseas white veterans from the South and 33 per cent of those from the North. 4-21-45

While the consensus of the affirmative was that the only difficulty lies in the fact that neither race has come to know the other well enough, the negative felt that the actions of a few illiterates would make such a move unwise.

These questions were asked by Pvt. Elmer L. Clark, Tulsa, Okla., and Cpl. Norman S. Ellington, Fulton, Mo., both white, in a poll conducted for the ANP among 500 white soldiers returning from foreign service to obtain their views of racial issues.

Other Questions Asked

The replies were given in answer to the question: "Has the stability and faithfulness to the colors warranted the colored soldier a place in a mixed unit? Southerners dividing 50-50 and Northerners, 67 negative and 33 positive replies. 4-21-45

Asked "Do you feel that subscribing to current colored literature (fiction, journals, periodicals) can be constructive," the replies of both groups were 100 per cent in the affirmative, the consensus being that the color of the writer is of no consequence.

m)e rsD4 ..gsP moar hoar mo

Asked "You have served with the colored soldier; in post-war America will you accept him as a co-worker and union member? To this 100 per cent of the Northerners and 83 per cent of the Southerners answered "Yes."

Urge More Mixed Combat Units

Defender Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK.—Mixed Negro and white combat units in every branch of the armed forces were urged this week by more than 50 civic, government, labor, religious and fraternal leaders.

These colored and white leaders joined with Cong. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Henrietta Buckmaster in a declaration to President Harry Truman and the Secretary of War praising the Army's organization of mixed combat units on the western front. The extension of this policy was asked. 5-5-45

Among other signers of the declaration, according to the National Negro Congress, were Rev. Stephen H. Fritchman, Lewis Merrill, Max Yergan, Howard Fast and Arthur Huff Fauset.

Negroes and Whites Mixed on Front Line

P.M. N.Y. 4-10-45

Gibson Reports Such Units Spearhead Drive on Berlin

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who can't be bothered with the petty prejudices of desk-driven Washington, has mixed white and Negro troops in front-line units which successfully are spearheading the drive into Germany. 4-10-45

The unorthodox comingling of white and Negro soldiers was disclosed by Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, just returned from a tour of European battlefronts.

Volunteer platoons of Negro soldiers, recruited from service units, are shoulder-to-shoulder with white forces on the road to Berlin, Gibson told a press conference. It is not an experiment, he declared. Eisenhower authorized it with full awareness that the mixed fighting groups "would work." Gibson was not prepared to talk about further expansion of the mixing of white and colored troops.

Win Stripes

The Negro platoons on the European front lines were organized as rifle companies. All non-commissioned officers in the Negro units lose their stripes when they become members of front-line combat troops . . . however, Gibson related, many have won back their stripes in battle.

The reason for stripping insignia from non-coms who have been members of service units is that it is unfair to send a sergeant who may qualify for that rank as a service soldier into battle as a combat man with the same rank—which he might not rate. 4-10-45

That Negro troops "will fight, can fight, and are fighting is evidenced by the return of stripes to many of them," Gibson said.

Gibson made a special trip to Italy to investigate complaints against the 92d Division, all-Negro division in the front line on the Peninsula. In a press conference in Rome, Gibson told war correspondents that it was true many patrols, platoons, and individuals of the 92d have "retired to the rear in a disorganized manner."

He was questioned closely by representatives of the Negro press on the truth of the reports from Italy. The Army, he said, had discarded the "easy reason" of racial fighting ability to explain the poor record of the Negro division. It is a question of "motivation," he explained.

In the first place, the division is made up in great part of almost illiterate soldiers—whose training, although intensive, was not adequate. Second, individual experiences had given them the idea of questioning "what are we fighting for, anyway?" The result was mild chaos.

Now Doing Well

However, discarding the idea that the Negro race can't or won't fight, the Army has adopted "corrective measures," and the 92d still is in the front lines. And doing well, according to War Dept. reports of the large number of decorations passed out to its personnel. Gibson seemed to think that the unfortunate situation with respect to the 92d was licked.

"What I saw and heard (in France) was evidence that the Supreme Command in SHAEF is following in racial matters what must be the basic policy in any Army, in any war, namely, that of utilizing most efficiently all resources of men and materiel to defeat the enemy," Gibson said.

When the first group of Negro volunteers went out to fight, he said, they had only two cases of AWOL. They later found the two men in the front lines, where they had reported "to fight."

An official observer told Gibson that around Remagen, where the first Negro platoons went into action, the Negro soldiers "fought as well as any others, and the mistakes they made were the same as those made by other troops lacking in battle experience." 4-10-45

The service troops in the area, a large percentage of whom are Negroes, regard themselves as soldiers performing vital jobs. They have real identification with the fighting fronts. Negro WACS and nurses in England are described as the equals professionally of any women soldiers, Gibson told newsmen.

"Generally, on both the continent and England, it was apparent that the attitude of the Supreme Command that there should be no discrimination against any soldier on account of his race has reached all elements of the Command," Gibson said positively.

Stars, Stripes Asserts Change Was Necessary

Memphis World 4-6-45

General Lee Responsible For Better Policy

BY RUDOLPH DUNBAR
(Associated Negro Press War Correspondent)

PARIS — (ANP) — Allan Morrison's article entitled "Negroes Fight At Side Of West Front Whites" has been given great prominence on the front page of the "Stars and Stripes," army newspaper. Another sub sitle over a photograph illustrating the commanding officer telling two infantrymen one white and one colored) what to expect in combat action read thus: "Color is No Barrier to Service in the Line." There was a whole page of pictures. Another title read: "Americans All-They're in the War Together." It was the largest feature of Negro activities on the western front that has appeared in Stars and Stripes.

This is particularly gratifying because it is only recently I wrote in defense of this paper due to an unjustified attack by some Negro GIs.

WORK TOGETHER

It is a traversty to say that white and colored cannot work together in harmonious association in the U S. army. I have written repeatedly in these columns about that ridiculous question. There is a change of thought among high ranking officers of whom Gen. John C. Lee is the leader pertaining to equal rights for Negro soldiers in every branch of the army.

The speed or it is put into force would be better for all concerned for color prejudice is becoming an ancient institution; and moreover it is a dangerous doctrine to preach now. 4-6-45

Allan Morrison has written an excellent article which has been the subject of considerable comment among the big time journalists at the Hotel Scribe in Paris. I have a reasonable confidence in the future success of Allan Morrison as a great journalist. He is truthful and sincere and possesses a gift of lucid expression. I reproduce his article published in the "Stars and Stripes."

BREAK WITH TRADITION

"White and Negro infantrymen and fighting shoulder to shoulder in the same units against the Germans. This break with traditional U. S. army policy of separation of units according to race became a reality with the assignment of Negro platoons to rifle companies of infantry divisions of the first and seventh armies.

Long contemplated, the plan of mixing white and colored doughboys in fighting units was launched not as an experiment in race relations, but as an answer both to the needs of the military situation and repeated requests by Negro service troops for an opportunity to get into the war as combat men.

SPECIAL APPEAL MADE

"Negro recruits for infantry training were drawn from thousands of troops who applied in response to a special appeal issued last December 26 by Lt. John C. H. Lee. At that time, Gen. Lee offered Negro troops, who had infantry training, the privilege of joining veteran front-line divisions as reinforcemets. 4-6-45

'It is planned to assign you without regard to color or race to the units where assistance is most needed,' the general told Negro soldiers. 'Your comrades at the front are anxious to share the glory of victory with you. Your relatives and friends everywhere have been urging that you be granted this privilege.'

'The supreme commander, your commanding general, and other veteran officers who have served with you are confident that many of you will take advantage of this opportunity and carry on in keeping with the glorious record of our colored troops in our former wars.'

TROOPS VOLUNTEER

"Thousands of applications were received from men in port battalions who had for many months been unloading material for combat troops and GIs in truck companies who had hauled the stuff up toward the front. In one company of one Negro Engineer GS regiment, 171 men out of 186 volunteered to fight. Four first sergeants in the unit accepted reductions to privates to qualify for the training plan. In another unit, a QM Laundry Company, 100 men out of 260 wanted to fight, but only 38 were allowed to go. The original quota for Negro trainees was quickly exceeded. Hundreds were rejected.

2,500 were accepted and given a refresher infantry court, with emphasis on weapons training. "During the latter half of the six-week course, the men were given group training as platoons under combat-experienced noncoms and platoon officers sent from divisions in the line to which they were to be assigned.

of the record of Negro combat troops in other wars and of the responsibility they would bear as the first troops of their race to fight along-side their fellow white soldiers without differencompletion of their training, the Negro trainees were received by Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, the army's first Negro officer, who reminded them of their responsibility as the "Shock Troops" of the army's integration.

DAVIS SPEAKS

"At present, Negro reinforcements have joined a number of first army down ranking Negro infantry divisions, and in many instances are already in action. Two platoons were attached to a company which crossed the Reer river It is commanded by Capt. Seth Worthington of Prospectville, Pa., a C. O. admired and respected by his men, wounded in action and an experienced infantryman.

WANT TO FIGHT

'The company's white doughboys talked readily when asked about the new platoon. 'I don't give a damn what color a man is as long as he's up here helping to win this war,' said Private Harold Cothran, of Greenwood, S. C., an, assistant squad leader. 4-6-45

"The company's Negro doughboys gave different reasons for wanting to get into the infantry. 'I came into the army to fight, not to labor. That's why I volunteered for this,' said Pfc. George Freeman of Dunn, N .C., a bar-man. Pfc. Leroy W. Kemp, of Atlantic City, formerly worked in an ordnance ammunition company Now he's a bar-man and proud of it. 'We're all in this thing together, now, white and Negro Americans in the same companies,' he said. 'And that's how it should be. That's why I volunteered. Most Negro troops are in service outfits. We've been giving a lot of sweat, Now, I think we'll mix some blood with it.'

General Davis Praises GI's in Mixed Combat Unit

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis (standing) of the Inspector General's Office, ETO, congratulates colored troops of the 104th Timberwolf Division on their fine combat record, at a decoration ceremony in Germany. "You have proved white and colored soldiers can serve—and fight side-by-side," General Davis told them. "You have won the friendship and respect of your comrades." 6-25-45

56n-1945

Negro Infantrymen O.K.

OPINIONS OF WHITE OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN IN COMPANIES WITH NEGRO PLATOONS.

QUESTION: "How did you feel at first about serving in a company that had white platoons and colored platoons?"

	White Officers	White Non-coms
Relatively unfavorable ("Skeptical," "didn't like it," "thought it'd cause trouble," etc.)	64%	64%
Relatively favorable ("Willing to try it," "made no difference," "didn't mind," etc.)	33%	35%
No answer	3%	1%
	100%	100%

The Call

QUESTION: "Has your feeling changed since having served in the same unit with colored soldiers?"

Kansas City, Mo.

	White Officers	White Non-coms
No, my feeling is still the same	16%	21%
Yes, have become more favorable toward them*, ("feel more respect for them," "like them better," etc.)	77%	77%
No answer	7%	2%
	100%	100%

*NOTE: No cases were found in which an individual reported his attitude had become less favorable.

QUESTION: "How well did the colored soldiers in this company perform in combat?"

11-2-45

	White Officers	White Non-coms
Not well at all	0%	0%
Not so well	0%	1%
Fairly well	16%	17%
Very well	84%	81%
Undecided	0%	1%
	100%	100%

NOTE: In commenting on this question, respondents frequently gave detailed accounts of combat performance. Positive qualities stressed were aggressiveness in attack, effective use of fire-power, adeptness at close-in fighting, team-work in battle. Negative qualities reported in a few instances were that at first the men sometimes went forward too rapidly—too far in attack. Some officers stressed the fact that these colored soldiers, being volunteers, may have had exceptional combat qualities. Others mentioned that in their units there had not been an adequate test under the most severe type of fighting, such as sustained attacks under heavy mortar or artillery fire. It should be noted, however, that the performance of the colored troops was rated just as high, if not higher, by the white officers and non-coms in those companies in which the colored platoons have had severe fighting as by respondents from other units.

QUESTION: "With the same Army training and experience, how do you think colored troops compare with white troops as infantry soldiers?"

	White Officers	White Non-coms
Not as good as white troops	5%	4%
Just the same as white troops	69%	83%
Better than white troops	17%	9%
No answer	9%	4%
	100%	100%

QUESTION: "How have the white and colored soldiers gotten along together?"

	White Officers	White Non-coms
Mixed units
Not well	0%	0%
Not as well in garrison as in combat	14%	4%
Fairly well	7%	36%
Very well	73%	60%
No answer	6%	0%
	100%	100%

After Protest

VOLUNTEERS GET COMBAT UNIT RATING

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
11-24-45

WASHINGTON — Negro volunteers who were pulled out of their respective units and sent to service companies after fighting with mixed combat groups during the final stages of the European campaign finally found themselves reclassified as combat troops after protests had been filed with the War Department, it was learned this week.

Congressman Adam C. Powell Jr. of New York protested to the War Department last September after receiving signed complaints from several of the Negro volunteers who said they had been shifted to service units. A reply to his protest came this week from the War Department, stating that Negro volunteers had been taken out of service units and reassigned to other combat groups.

1,291 VOLUNTEERS

"A total of 1,291 Negro soldiers who volunteered for infantry training and who served with white infantry units were located after a thorough theatre-wide canvass," the reply reads. "High scores (sixty and above) were returned to the Zone of Interior in September and low scores (fifty-one and below) were assigned to the 350th Field Artillery Battalion in order that they would be together in a combat unit and thereby maintain their integrity as combat soldiers." 11-24-45

The volunteers were broken down in this wise:

High score returned with Sixty-ninth Infantry Division	668
High score returned under Green Project	94
Low score assigned to 350th FA Bn.	529
Total	1291

"It would appear from this report that steps were taken in the theatre to rectify the situation about which the soldiers complained in their letters to you," the reply to Congressman Powell read.

The report went on to explain that "those with service in infantry units as volunteers are not transferred to service units. High score of this category are shipped to Zone of Interior and low score assigned to a colored combat (other than infantry) unit.

BREAKDOWN EXPLAINED

"Those with service in combat units (other than infantry volunteers) are retained in these units insofar as possible or reassigned to other combat units and in some cases service units to meet the colored ratio required for occupational troop basis."

First news of the reconversion of Negro volunteer combat troops into service troops was made known early in September. Victims of this action sent signed complaints to the States after their executive officer failed to halt the move that sent them to service units and construction battalions.

"At the end of the fighting all of the Negro volunteers were pulled out of their respective units and sent to various replacement depots, where they learned that they were to be used in rear echelon service units," the complaining troops wrote.

ONLY 10 PER CENT USED

Others complained that only 10 per cent of those who volunteered for frontline duty were given a chance to fight with mixed units.

The soldiers contended that they were pushed around at the end of the war because they were no longer needed as combat troops and there was a big howl when members of the 104th Timber Wolf Division (composed of mixed units) sailed for the States and left the colored troops behind.

SOME LEFT BEHIND

They were left behind, they were told, because when a company in a battalion went overseas with four battalions, it could not return with more than four.

Many of these Negro volunteers who saw action were awarded the Purple Heart, Bronze Star and Silver Star. One Tan Yank received the Distinguished Service Cross.

Mixed Unit Experiment Was a Success, Say Vets

Afro-American 7-7-45

"We Thought Only of the Common Objective," Heroes Report Proudly

Baltimore, Md.

By SGT. PEYTON GRAY

FRANCE—The War Department's experiment of training and using in combat a mixed Infantry unit proved a huge success.

This was the opinion of two battle-scarred, decorated veterans of the European war whom I met in a Reinforcement Depot here. Along with the rest of us, they were "sweating out" routine processing preparatory to getting a plane for home and civilian life.

The opinion of both was that if they had to return to war, they preferred joining their former buddies in the 121st Infantry Regiment, 8th Division, known as the Grey Bonnets, former Georgia State National Guards.

Race Forgotten

The two recalled that the members of the unit appeared skeptical at first, but after a short while the newness wore off and the newcomers were accepted as regular infantrymen without any apparent thought of race. 7-7-45

"We lived, ate, slept, fought and played together, thinking only of the common objective, winning the war as soon as possible," the two vets stated.

They were Pfc. Emmet Jones Jr., 23, 1738 First St., N.W., Washington, D.C., and Sgt. Lacy Cox, 22, Jamaica, Long Island, N.Y.

Battle Experience

Pfc. Jones's prize experience concerns the time he, along with 13 buddies, captured a town near Dusseldorf, Germany, in the rich Ruhr Valley sector and were awarded Bronze Stars "for gallantry in action."

They had to face hot enemy fire in crossing a stream, open field, and railroad along which route many snipers were hidden.

Pfc. Jones is one of six brothers in the service, who, in turn, are sons of a military father.

A Military Family

The brothers are:

Harry Jones, 29, a first lieutenant in th 25th Infantry in the Southwest Pacific; Charles, 27, a technical sergeant in the 24th Infantry, and three others, John, 25, in a tank unit; William, 30, in a field artillery unit, and Frederick, 21, in the infantry. Three sisters are Federal employees in Washington.

The family trail blazer was their father, Emmitt Jones Sr., whose military career began in 1906. In World War I, he fought in France with the 25th Infantry, and upon discharge obtained employment as an engineer-draftsman in the War Department.

Recalled to the service in 1942, he was given his former rank and assigned to an Infantry Service Unit at Fort Meade, Md., training new troops.

Promoted to Major

Subsequently, he was transferred to Fort Huachuca and elevated to the rank of major which rank he now holds.

Emmet Jones Jr., graduated from Armstrong High School in Washington in 1938, then matriculated at Virginia Union University. Two years later, however, he left school and received employment at the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington.

Drafted in February, 1943, he has served with the 366th Infantry, a QM Truck unit, was stationed at the Armored Division Training Center at Fort Knox, Ky., and belonged to the famed 95th Engineers.

Discharge Plans

Pfc. Jones has 105 points and plans to return to his former government job after taking a short vacation with his wife, Mrs. Maude Jones, an English teacher at Washington's Dunbar High School.

The other hero, Sgt. Cox, wears three battle stars, a Purple Heart, Silver Star, and two theater ribbons.

The battle stars for participation in major battles in Europe; the Purple Heart for a hip wound; the Silver Star for gallantry in action, and the ribbons for service in the European and Alaskan theatres.

Alcan Highway Vet

A former electrician, he volunteered in April, 1941, was assigned to the 95th Engineers' Regiment at Fort Belvoir, Va., and one year later left with the unit for Alaska where it built approximately 900 miles of the famous Alcan Highway. 7-7-45

The 95th was returned to the States approximately 14 months later, and was soon on its way to Europe where it built bridges, railroads, hospitals, and did general engineering construction.

While the unit was stationed at Liege, Belgium, in December, 1944, an invitation was extended to rear echelon troops to volunteer for a mixed infantry unit. Cox jumped at the opportunity, along with approximately 3,000 other Tan Yanks.

Join Mixed Unit

Sgt. Cox and Pfc. Jones were put in the Fifth Platoon, Co. F., of the 121st Infantry Regiment, Eighth Division. The platoon leader was T/Sgt. Sydney Hall, New York City; the platoon guide, S/Sgt. Ernest Johnson, Washington, D.C., and the squad leaders were:

S/Sgts. Gilbert Sherman, New York; Samuel Thompson, Bluefield, W.Va., and Rudolph Proffitt, Washington, D.C.

The most thrilling experience of Sgt. Cox's infantry life occurred when he, along with Sgt. Proffitt and Sgt. Ralph Dunlap of Chicago, knocked out a German 78-ton tank that had been harrassing Yank troops for three days in the Ruhr Valley pocket early this spring.

The tank, Germany's latest, carrying an 8-man crew, had unintentionally been maneuvered into position for Cox to send home a lucky shot with his Panzerfaust (German bazooka wapon).

The shot crippled the tank, and later it was learned, had killed four of the Krauts inside. As two of the Jerries climbed out of the turret in an attempt to flee, they were halved by another shot.

The last two managed to get away. This was the incident that brought the Silver Star to Cox and his buddies.

Deisel Mechanic

Cox, trained as a mechanic for Deisel motors, plans to seek additional schooling on this type of motor and to eventually become employed handling them.

He has one brother, Irving, 19, a technical fifth grade in a Quartermaster Unit at Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Their father served in the British Merchant Marines during World War I. He happened to be sailing under a British flag when war was declared and was automatically switched to the British service.

Mixed Units Fraud

It now develops that the report that Negro troops fought in mixed units during the final phases of the conflict on the Western Front in Europe was a fraud and our jubilation over this supposed change in Army policy was ill-timed. Pittsburgh Courier

Actually the colored soldiers from engineer and port units who volunteered to drop their picks and shovels and exchange them for guns and mortars were not assigned to the ranks of white units, but were gathered into separate companies and battalions which could be easily detached when the danger was over.

It appears that the praise given the Army for a forward step was unmerited and a careful reading of the statements of General Eisenhower and other officers of high rank in congratulating these Negro soldiers reveals this fact. Pittsburgh, Pa.

This revelation is most depressing in view of the heroism and sacrifices of these colored soldiers.

They risked their lives and many were wounded and killed, and yet there was no real change in the Army's jim-crow policy.

Even in the heat of battle when Allied victory was in the balance, the Army High Command was unable to arise above the petty jim-crow policy that has been traditional in the Army from the earliest days.

It would have been a wonderful thing if the U. S. Army, pressed hard and threatened with defeat at the hands of Rundstedt's armies, had abandoned this racist policy and thrown Negro soldiers into the breach alongside their white fellow Americans, but this was not to be.

Even with victory almost in the grasp of the Germans, those directing the campaign could not bring themselves to alter the traditional pattern.

Let it be written in history that even in the darkest moment of defeat, America could not rise above Hitlerian racism. 7-28-45

For what can we hope in the years of peace if these generals would not give up their prejudices in time of war?

How So-Called Mixed Units Worked in SHAEF

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Integration a Myth, Colored Became "Provisional" Battalions

7-31-45

By CRISPUS ATTUCKS

Contrary to widespread belief that colored volunteers were integrated into various infantry divisions engaged in the final defeat of Germany, the colored troops were held in separate companies, fighting ahead of or in support of white companies, but never "side by side."

According to official sources in Paris, the original plan was to have had a colored volunteer fill the ranks of any company that needed a replacement. Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, who strongly supported the volunteer program, gave this impression to the first group of service troops to volunteer for combat.

However, many organizations that direly needed replacements after having suffered severe losses in manpower during the hard winter and as a result of heavy casualties during tne Battle of the Bulge, refused to accept the colored soldiers on a flat "mixed" basis.

Separate companies were added to battalions, not as permanent parts of the battalions but as what the Army designates "provisional" battalions.

For instance, the 12th Armored Division absorbed four companies of colored volunteers, these making up a "provisional battalion" which can be detached and deactivated whenever the tactical situation permits.

Practically every infantry division in the 1st, 7th and 9th Armies had a company or platoon of colored infantrymen attached during the last days of the fall of Nazism. Two armored divisions, the 14th and 12th, used colored soldiers in infantry battalions.

Men Highly Commended

The men, volunteers from rear echelon service organizations in what is called the Communications Zone, have been highly commended on their battle conduct.

However, the current curiosity piece is whether or not the "provisional companies" will now be deactivated and the men transferred to other service units or sent back to their old units. In such an event, the colored soldiers would be denied redeployment throughout the United States to the Pacificb as is the procedure with the majority of ETO combat units.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Accordnig to Vincent Tubbs, AFRO war correspondent just home from Germany, this is just what happened.]

Letter From Manila

Dear Editor:

The following is an excerpt from a letter from my husband stationed in Manila: P.M

I wanted to tell you about one of the more important sidelights of life here in Manila. 8-4-45

In this world full of talk about race riots, prejudice and discrimination, I've seen something good develop. Not an abstract, but something real, as real as any hatred.

You can see it any day by looking over our wall here in Rizal Stadium, down onto the athletic field next door. Down there, GI teams are playing ball. White teams are playing colored units, and it doesn't seem to make a lot of difference to the players what race their opponents are. N. Y.

The scene might include any sport—football, boxing, basketball, or ping-pong. And when that lanky black end catches a touchdown pass, it's somehow right that it's his white teammates who are the first to slap him on the back and hug and cheer him. P.M.

Scenes like this, and a realization that the soldiers in the grandstand are for the most part applauding courage, ability and stamina and not the color of a man's skin, are the things that are adding up to good.

I'm not glossing over the fact that racial prejudice and hatred do exist; the Army is corrupt with them. But when you realize that many of these white soldiers have never before spoken to a Negro on equal terms, much less played, laughed and fought side by side with them, then you have a new feeling of hope.

New York MRS. SAUL TUBELL

56n-1945

Mixed Units

Highest Recommendation

Patton Approves Mixed Units; Lauds Negro GI

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

PHOTOS ON PAGE 4

By HERMAN HILL, Pacific Coast Bureau

6-23-45

LOS ANGELES—Unequivocally giving approval to the use o: platoon-sized racially mixed units in the Army, Gen. George S. (Blooc and Guts) Patton Jr., colorful commander of the Third Army, gave The Pittsburgh Courier's current campaign for racially integratec units in the Pacific Theatre of war, added impetus last Tuesday at an exclusive intervew with Courier reporters at his picturesque residence in San Marino. 6-23-45

Unlike the hardboiled and awe-inspiring pictures painted of him by press and radio, General Patton proved to be most gracious, thoughtful and considerate. He spoke freely and to the point . . . giving the impression of talking "to," rather than "down," to his listeners.

PRAISES COURIER

He told us early that he was acquainted with The Courier, held it in high esteem and felt that, along with other papers of its type, it had a tremendous responsibility in the education and the development of the American Negro.

The general exhibited no inhibitions regarding the race question freely discussed the pros and cons of the Negro soldier. He told The Courier flatly that the use of Negro-white infantry units in Germany was occasioned by the lack of replacements, and that colored soldiers had given an excellent account of themselves in earning the respect of their white comrades.

Answering a direct question concerning a hitherto published report, he said that he actually did tell Negro troops he didn't care what color they were as long as they "got in there and killed those d....n krauts." 6-23-45

SUPPORT UNIT INTEGRATION

There had never been any race friction or trouble between Negroes and whites in his command and he even went so far as to say that he was of a mind to recommend the continuation of the racially integrated units idea in Washington when he reported back to general headquarters.

Lauding the ability of a Negro tank battalion attached to his command, General Patton spoke warmly of the individual bravery of the men, and especially of the exploits of a Negro sergeant whose name he could not recall. This particular tankman advanced under fire, hooked his tank chain to a barricade which materially hindered the progress of American units and opened the way for troop advance.

"These men fought bravely in the critical battle of Bastogne," said the General. Negro truck drivers in the Tunisian campaign also came in for the hard hitting commander's unstinting praise.

"We needed ammunition badly up front and they brought it to us in a hurry. They operated under miserable road condition day and night, and were exposed to shell fire and air straffing. They toiled so long and hard that some of them fainted at the wheels of their trucks."

The General said that he felt qualified to speak authoritatively concerning the Negro soldier because he had formerly commanded the Ninth Cavalry and a detachment of the Tenth. During his twenty-minute interview he advanced the following opions formed from his own observations, prefaced with the reminder that the Pacific area might well prove a further experimental ground for integration of units:

That Negro soldiers are harder to discipline than whites, but once this has been done they make just as good Army men as any;

That Negro soldiers showed a tendency not to take commands from officers of their own race;

That Negro units tended to "get lost" in large bodies. This was true in the cases of both tank outfits and foot soldiers, he said. And that Negro soldiers were poor map readers, but ranked among the most efficient radio operators in the service. 6-23-45

He also said that social diseases among colored troops was higher than among whites because of "plain carelessness."

OKAYS DAVISES

General Patton spoke highly of both Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr. and his son, B. O. Davis Jr., commander of the 332nd Fighter Group. He said the 332nd had been well selected and his knowledge was that they had done a first-class job.

Closing his interview, the commander of the Third Army explained that he was leaving for Washington via plane that same afternoon and was returning to his first love—war!

Across The Desk

By LUDLOW W. WERNER

New York Age

FROM OVERSEAS, from a soldier-friend whose identity I shall not reveal for obvious reasons, come an interesting letter from a former newspaper man who turned fighter when his number was called by Uncle Sam. The letter is particularly interesting because the sender was one of those who volunteered to go into a mixed fighting unit when the Army let down its barriers.

New York N.Y.

The letter directly contradicts what some of our contemporary Negro newspapers are editorially saying about mixed units being a gross disception and a fraud perpetrated on Negroes at home. The letter was written by this soldier early in June, so he could not have been aware of what some of our editors would be writing the end of July. 8-4-45

"Just to let you know," the letter opens

"that by being extremely lucky, I'm still alive here in Germany on the border of the Danube River. I'm in the infantry, 9th Div. Go Devils, now a part of Patton's 3rd Army but we did our fighting with the 1st Army. Was at the famous Remagen bridgehead on the Rhine where they threw everything but Berlin at us. Battled in the Ruhr Valley pocket and in the Hartz Mts. Some of the experiences we had are fantastic.

"I know you've heard about these mixed units. They added about one platoon of Negro riflemen to just one company in each regiment. We got a big hand when we came up to our company; the boys gave us all the dope, shared cigarettes, candy and food. We weren't with the company 30 minutes before we were the leading platoon in an attack. Naturally we were great. We had the zip, speed and snap. In no time we became the talk of the division. Our casualties were extremely light, but later on when the going got tough, we fought side by side in the same foxholes, ate and slept together.

"Now that the war is over, we are quartered in the same barracks and there's never been the slightest hitch. We play ball, swim, eat and sing together. The boys from the deep South are even O. K.

"I landed overseas in Glasgow in April, 1944, with a port battalion. Was in camps in Liverpool, Newport, South Wales, and Bristol. We landed at Normandy October, Friday, 13th, in mud and rain and passed through Monteburg, Valognes, St. Loo. Was stationed at Cherburg where we guarded prisoners. Volunteered for infantry with the first call, gave up a sergeant's rating and went into combat training at Noyons, France. We had eight weeks of the coldest, toughest training. I don't know how I made it. Gen. Davis came over to see us a couple of times. Our course finished, they gave us a trip to Paris where we knocked ourselves out. Within a week we were at Viviers, Belgium, a replacement depot from where we jumped across the Siegfried line into Germany.

"I am in the town of Ingolstadt at an airport, 45 miles north of Munich and about 65 miles from the Czech border. We are sweating out whether its Army of Occupation or C. B. I. Meanwhile they are boring us to death with more combat training and G. I. routine."

That is about as much of the letter which is of general interest, because the rest is personal, and therefore of little concern to anyone else. But, the interesting part is that my G. I. friend reveals that he was among those pioneering youths to give up a sergeant's rating in a port battalion to get into the real fighting as a combat soldier, and his enthusiastic report of the success of the integration.

True, as some critics say, the Army has been late in following public demand for mixed units, but the fact remains that Negroes and whites did fight together, eat together, live together, and sleep together and enjoy doing it. All recognized that bullets are no respecter of persons or color, and that an enemy bullet strikes down a man no matter what his color if it finds its mark. 8-4-45

True, the introduction of one Negro platoon in one company in one regiment is but a small beginning. But, the indisputable fact remains that the beginning, no matter how small it was, was made. And that, in itself, is a radical departure from the traditional Army policy of separation of the races.

I'm glad that my G. I. friend wrote me the letter because he was one of the "guinea pigs."

is all the comment and what he said above is a necessary.

Mixed Units Are Favored

Chicago Call

White Soldiers Say Attitudes Changed MADE LAST SPRING

Defender
Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Somervell Kept Good Record Suppressed

10-27-45

WASHINGTON

Suppressed by the War Department since last spring, a report showing that colored soldiers in mixed units performed "very well in combat" under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has just been made public.

Based on official Army interviews with white officers and non-coms in seven infantry divisions that had volunteer colored platoons, the report also showed that the majority of men questioned favored the Eisenhower setup to complete segregation.

This information was contained in a restricted report to Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, by Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Chief of the Army Service Forces, who recommended its suppression.

Changed Attitudes Recalled

While most of the white enlisted men said that their initial attitude toward colored soldiers was that of apprehension, reluctance or dislike, three-fourths reported a changed feeling since fighting with them.

The report pointed out that two of the divisions polled were "predominantly Southern in background," and that officers and men from the deep South were among others questioned.

10-27-45

84% Given High Rating

In no instance, according to the interviewers, was the performance of colored troops rated poor. Eighty-four per cent of the officers said the Tan Yanks did "very well," and the remainder said "fairly well."

They also admitted that the effectiveness of the colored platoons was at least equal to that of the white platoons, and that relations between white and colored GI's were better than had been expected.

Both officers and enlisted men endorsed the idea of having colored soldiers as infantry troops and reported that the combat volunteers got along well with the white soldiers.

Survey Made in May

The report noted that white enlisted men who have fought with colored troops are much more likely than other men to favor their use as infantrymen and to favor having a colored platoon in their own company.

10-27-45

The survey was made late last May and early June and results were compiled from 250 interviews in 24 rifle companies and from filled out questionnaires which did not have to be signed from 1700 other soldiers.

White Infantrymen Find Negroes 'Good Fighters

Majority in Favor of Mixed Army Outfits

The Call

WASHINGTON. — A "restricted" government document made public last week gives proof positive that Negro infantrymen who volunteered to serve in mixed infantry outfits in Europe last year gave excellent performance.

The proof is given by white officers and enlisted men who served with the Negro combat infantrymen.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commanding general of the European Theater of Operations, ordered the survey which was made in May and June, 1945, by the Research Branch, Information and Education division, ETO.

The report was made in July, 1945, but the information contained therein was suppressed by the government until last week when it was taken off the "restricted" list.

11-2-45

Asked Eight Questions

Eight questions were put to 250 officers and platoon sergeants in 24 companies containing Negro platoons in several infantry divisions, the 1st, 2nd, 9th, 69th, 78th, 99th and 104th.

In all except one of the companies visited by interviewers, the standard organization of three rifle platoons and one heavy infantry platoon had been augmented by one rifle platoon of colored soldiers.

The Negro troops were men from rear echelon units who volunteered for combat with the infantry and were trained for approximately six weeks in reinforcement depots, usually by a white officer or non-com who later led them into battle.

Kansas City Mo.

Performed 'Very Well'

In answer to the question "How well did the colored soldiers perform in combat," 84 per cent of the white officers answered "Very well" and 81 per cent of the non-coms gave the same answer.

Sixty-nine per cent of the white officers and 83 per cent of the white non-coms said that colored troops with the same training and experience compared "just the same as white troops." Seventeen per cent of the officers and 9 per cent of the non-coms said that the Negro infantry performed "better than white troops." Only 5 per cent of the officers and 4 per cent of the non-coms thought that the performance of Negroes was not as good as white troops.

Most of the officers and the non-coms admitted that they were skeptical when Negro troops joined their outfits. Sixty-four per cent of the officers and 64 per cent of the non-coms didn't like the idea of mixed units and "thought it would cause trouble."

After serving in the same outfit with Negro soldiers, 77 per cent of the officers and 77 per cent of the non-coms admitted that their opinions had been changed and that they "felt more respect for Negroes" and liked them better. It is significant that no cases were found in which an individual reported that his attitude had become less favorable.

This official document offsets the unfavorable comments made last year when the 92nd infantry division failed to hold a position.

Why the results of the survey were held secret until now has not been learned.

56n-1945

NEGRO AND WHITES FIGHTING SIDE BY SIDE WITH 1ST, 7TH ARMIES WIN PRAISE OF ARMY

Louisiana Weekly

New Orleans 3-31-45

(By The Associated Negro Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY.—First reports on Negro infantry men placed in white divisions in this sector are favorable.

That statement was issued by Capt. Edward Finnegan, New York City, T/Sgt. Casper F. Koch of Beaver Dam, Wis., however, praised the men for their work. He told of leading a Negro platoon into action several days ago against Borghausen, a small German town. 3-31-45

"We didn't want to give them too tough a job in their first fight," he said, "so our platoon went down a street where there were only about nine houses. We didn't think there would be many Germans in them.

"In the first house", he continued, "the Negro boys captured 11 Jerries and killed two. By the time they'd gotten to the end of the street they had captured 53 prisoners and killed I don't know how many." 3-31-45

Sgt. Koch said they "worked perfectly. They are eager to learn and ask a lot of questions. When you tell 'em to take an objective they want to know what to do after they get there."

These are the men who asked for a chance to fight, some even sacrificed ratings. They have have been formed into platoons and are fighting under white officers who have combat experience. In breaking its long established policy of keeping white and Negro units separated, the army is now feeding the Negro rifle platoons into divisions gradually, with one platoon to each regiment now in action.

They received the same welcome given white re-enforcements when they arrived at one veteran division's location. Each member got a personal letter from the commanding general along with the divisional shoulder patches and were greeted personally by regimental commanders. 3-31-45

No replacement pool has been set up for them but it is understood that when their fighting strength is reduced to such a level that they are unable to function as units remnants of two or more units will be reorganized into a full strength platoon.

They are the first Negro infantry troops to be used on the western front and are engaging in maintaining the army's bridgehead east of the Rhine.

Negro, White Yanks Fight Side By Side

Courier-Journal 3-20-45

Races Mix In Infantry 1st Time In U. S. History

Paris, March 19 (U.P.)—Negro and white troops are fighting side by side—for the first time in American history—in the infantry companies of the U. S. First and Seventh Armies, it was disclosed today in a front-line dispatch by the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes.

The mixture of the races in unified commands was made after repeated requests by the Negroes that they be permitted to enter combat units, the newspaper said in a dispatch from the U. S. First Army. 3-20-45

The Negro infantrymen were picked from the thousands of applicants who had been working as service and supply troops and who volunteered after a special appeal by Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, who told them:

"It is planned to assign you without regard to race or color to units where your assistance is most needed."

Many Volunteers Rejected.

The original quota quickly was exceeded and hundreds of volunteers were rejected, Stars and Stripes said. Some 2,300 were accepted and given a refresher infantry course. 3-20-45

Applications came from port battalions unloading materials as well as the famed Negro truck companies. The newspaper said that 171 men out of the 186 in one Engineer regiment had volunteered and four first sergeants in another unit accepted a lowering in rank to private in order to qualify for training. From one laundry unit, 100 out of 260 men volunteered but only 36 were chosen.

Mixed Units-

Negro, White MP Team Hits Black Market

Atlanta World 2-1-45

Nab Operators In Cherbourg Harbor Area

CHERBOURG, France—(SNS)—Members of a provisional detachment of Negro Military Police, patrolling the huge harbors of Cherbourg along wtih veteran white soldiers of the GI gendarmerie, discovered and later smashed a black market ring here on the first night of operations, it was announced today. 2-1-45

The detachment is formed largely from Negro port battalions, quartermaster and amphibious truck companies.

Pfc. Wilson Forbes, Waco, Texas, and his patrol mate, Pfc. Harry Werner (white), of St. Louis, Mo., detected suspicious activity in a side street here where headquarters of a small-time black market gang were set up. Working closely with French police, the two MPs kept a close vigil of the neighborhood until the time was ripe for a full-scale raid.

Resultant arrests were numerous and a considerable swag of looted American Army supplies was recovered. 2-1-45

The Military Police Commanding Officer here praised both men, stating, "Despite the fact that both Pfc. Werner and Pfc. Forbes were but recently assigned to Military Police duty, they handled the situation in an efficient and thorough manner and are to be highly commended for their alertness and efficiency."

It has been found that patrol is more effective when Negro and white MPs are paired off together. "The whole task of patrolling is aided by this system, which was previously used in England," stated Captain Arnold S. Kemp (white), of New York City. "The men work together easily and their job of enforcement is made a lot simpler."

New Times

Daily Worker

WITH the establishment of mixed—Negro and white—combat units in the U. S. armed forces in the European theater of war, a great and far-reaching victory has been won, the full implications and extension of which are not yet to be seen. It immeasurably enhances the decisive, striking power of the military forces of the United States and of the United Nations. It is a guarantee of the democratic postwar world; for we are determining the postwar world as we fight the war. It raises the whole principle and practice of American democracy to a higher level. It shatters one of the principal irritants to the Negro people in respect to the war, and uplifts the status of Negro Americans as citizens. It confirms the democratic approach of the High Command of the U. S. armed forces, and in the first place of President Roosevelt, our Commander-in-Chief.

3-25-45

There should be the broadest expressions and outpouring of support to the American general staff, under the leadership of Gen. Eisenhower, particularly from the Negro people and all their labor and progressive supporters. The American general staff, with their minds foremost on the speediest victory, has resisted and even overcome the pressure from the civilian white supremacists like Rankin and his ilk who have the same attitude toward Negroes as Hitler, and who oppose all democratization of the armed forces.

by Benjamin J. Davis, Jr.

3-25-45

3-25-45

THIS step is a terrific blow to segregation—the last refuge of the Jimcrow system. Many confused, well-meaning people are against discrimination, insofar as it denies equality to Negroes—but have felt that segregation is harmlessly acceptable. The U. S. High Command now confirms the fact that segregation is itself discrimination and a danger to the most efficient fighting force. Segregation must go, all over America. It is going.

The principal complaint of Negro troops is that they're not permitted sufficiently to fight. Mixed units is the first step toward correctly solving that complaint.

This achievement confirms the sound and responsible perspective of Communists, and tears to shreds the isolationist and dangerous policies of those Negro leaders influenced by Dubinsky. It again demonstrates that the argument—disproved so many times—that this is an "imperialist" war, is a criminal stupidity, dangerous and misleading to the whole fight for Negro rights. This victory shows that the way to full citizenship lies in the main current making for the defeat of world fascism and all its works, that the Negro's deep, well-founded aspirations for free and equal citizenship lies in unequivocal support of the policies of President Roosevelt, one of the draftsmen of Crimea. Victory for the Negro lies not in isolating himself from all the national and internationally progressive forces, but in an alliance with those forces of all classes, races and creeds. Isolationism is dead for the Negro, as it is with all humanity. 3-25-45

The Revolution Is Here

* * *

A REVOLUTION is in process with respect to Negro rights, sometimes moving with breath-taking rapidity. Everywhere the forces of national oppression and discrimination are being overthrown, in proportion that we approach the defeat of Hitler and Hirohito. As a part of this revolution, we must apply ever-increasing violence to the military citadels of fascism. On the home front, we must apply ever more pressure of the people to prevent violence, to achieve the fruits of this people's war through the stronger bonds of national unity between all classes and races and creeds, to achieve peacefully at home what our boys are fighting for violently abroad. This process is no less revolutionary.

The establishment of the New York State FEPC is part of this peaceful overthrowing of the white supremacy myth at home. Next on the order of business is the establishment of a permanent national FEPC. It is a big struggle to cleanse our country of Jimcrow but is there any doubt that it can be done?

Is there any doubt that a new and better world is in the making?

Motor Transport Service Completes Work in Iran

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-6-45

Tan Yanks Played Major Role in Pushing Through Tons of Supplies to Russia

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA War Correspondent

TEHERAN, Iran — By Courier, Delayed — I am now leaving the Persian Gulf Command after a 3,000-mile tour of this pulsating supply artery where American and British soldiers have by their combined efforts contributed in no small way to the success of Russian armies.

Also ending its all important mission here is the Motor Transport Service of which the all-colored 114th QM Truck Company (formerly the 26th QM Trucking Company) is a part.

Drove 97 Million Miles

From March 1, 1943, until the order officially ending the tenure of the MTS came out, this service handled a total of 624,342 long tons of freight, of which more than 400,000 tons went to the Red Army.

Added to this is the fact that American truck drivers have reeled off more than 97,000,000 miles of driving through one of the most arid and difficult countries in the world.

White GI's Operate Trains

By rail and truck transport, Russia has received more than 4,380,440 tons of war supplies from American factories since the latter part of 1942.

Included in this tonnage figure were some 143,000 vehicles of all types and some 3,387 planes which were both assembled and tested here in Iran. All the troops working on the railroad are white.

Port Units Speed Work

In January, 1943, when the U.S. Army took over the operation of the gulf-ports of Bandar Shahpur and Khorramshahr, the monthly capacity was only 95,000 tons and it took over fifty days to unload a vessel and turn it around for the voyage home.

With engineers taking over the expansion of the docks and with the help of four port battalions, two of them colored — the 380th and the 482nd — the capacity of the twin ports had by October, 1944, been increased to 265,000 tons, while the turn-around time for vessels in port had been lowered to seven days.

Weather a Handicap

Troops have worked here in a country where the terrain ranges from zero elevation at the gulf ports to 7,250 feet above sea level in the mountains of the Iranian Plateau.

They have fought temperatures ranging from zero in some of the mountain ranges to the 170-degree sun readings of the desert and gulf areas, and weathered the ravages of dysentery, sandfly fever, and malaria.

Engineering outfits constructed, maintained and bettered hundreds of miles of highway. They produced sufficient gravel for these operations, and maintained snow removal teams to keep the roads open during the winter months.

Included in these operations were tan Yanks of the 352nd Engineer Regiment, and the 435th and 436th Engineer Dump Truck Companies.

The 4,000 colored soldiers who have "sweat out" two summers here in Iran have upheld the best traditions of American soldiers and have added to the prestige of our men now serving with the armed forces. They have had a hand in practically every major operation of this supply line.

Mercury Hits 179 in Iran During 1943

AHWAZ, Iran—The highest sun temperature recorded at theMasjidi-Sulaiman oilfield in 1942 was 183 degrees Fahrenheit and in 1943-44, 179 degrees on July 31, 1943. The section is 54 miles from here and is 1000 feet above sea level.

In an official communication to Colonel Bates, commander of Quarry Camp in the Gulf district, it was pointed out that these temperatures are about as high as would be obtained anywhere in the country.

New 5th Army Head with 92nd Honor Guard

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-13-45

Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott ,Jr., new commanding general of the Fifth Army, talks to members of an infantry battalion which formed part of the guard of honor during special decoration ceremonies at Viareggio, Italy. The general was making his first tour of the 92nd Infantry Division sector.

Negroes 'Pass Ammunition' in European Theater

Miami Herald

13,118 Ordnancemen In ETO Handled 75 Per Cent Of Ammunition

WITH U. S. ORDNANCE FORCES IN EUROPE—Of the 6,600,000 tons of ammunition handled by Ordnance ammunition companies on the continent between D-Day and VE-Day, more than 4,500,000 tons passed through the hands of Negro Ordnancemen, it was announced today by Maj. Gen. Henry B. Sayler, chief ordnance officer.

In reporting the figures on the amount of ammunition made available for use by our fighting men, Gen. Sayler paid high tribute to the 14,323 Negro enlisted men who made up 11 per cent of the total Ordnance personnel on the Continent. 7-21-45

"Not only did these Negro troops 'pass the ammunition,'" said Gen. Sayler, "but on numerous occasions many of them fought the Germans, participated in patrols, and took prisoners."

The forward ammunition supply points operated by these Negro Ordnancemen were the retail source for all tyes of ammunition, bullets, shells, fuzes, and propelling charges, served directly to infantry, artillery and armored units. As such, these ASPs were directly behind the front lines and on several occasions, in front of them, especially during periods of fluid fronts.

Men of one ammunition company—the 626th — although they had moved into their new location, were unable to operate until the infantry had cleared the enemy artillery from a hill less than two miles away. They stuck to their position, however, and the day the Nazis were cleared out the men received their first trainload of ammunition and issued it directly to the men chasing the Germans.

Of the 14,323 Negro Ordnancemen participating in the ETO campaign, 13,118 were ammunition handlers. They made up 76 out of the 101 Ordnance ammunition companies, about 75 per cent of the total. 7-21-45

They received the peak of ammunition handling shortly after the Germans were repulsed in their Ardennes breakthrough. During the period that followed, the 101 ammunition companies received and issued up to 24,000 tons a day, or seven to eight thousand tons over the average of 15,000 tons a day established in the European campaign. In carrying out their mission of supplying ammunition to the men behind the guns, the Negro Ordnancemen displayed courage time and again, Gen. Sayler declared.

An example cited by Gen. Sayler was the bravery demonstrated by the members of the 655th Ordnance Ammunition Company which unloaded a trainload of white phosphorus mortar shells on December 26, near Soissons, France, while shells were exploding around them. Their acts of heroism saved the French city from complete destruction.

Another non-combat Negro Ordnance ammunition company earned the title of the "Fighting 57th" when its members engaged 51 German SS troops near the Belgian border early in September. When the shooting was over, 36 Nazis were killed, three wounded and the rest taken prisoners.

While handling ammunition was the principal job for these Negro Ordnancemen, 560 of them made up five medium automotive maintenance companies. Of these, one was with the 12th Army Group and four with the Communications Zone, repairing vehicles of all types for the fighting men.

Of the 20 Ordnance motor vehicle distributing companies in the ETO, two of them were manned by 480 Negro Ordnancemen. These distributing companies in the ETO, two of them were manned by 480 Negro Ordnancemen. These distributing companies furnished the combat troops with armored vehicles and service troops with the trucks necessary to keep the frontliners supplied. 7-21-45

The remainder of the Negro personnel, 165 in number, were acti in the administrative divisions of battalion headquarters.

Major General Hails Work Of Ordnance Troops

Atlanta Daily World

More Than 75 Per Cent Handled By Our Fighters

BY GEORGE COLEMAN MOORE

ARLES, France—(A N P)—More than 75 percent of all ammunition used in the ETO war against Hitler's Nazi Wehrmacht was handled by tan Yanks. 8-11-45

Major General Henry B. Sayler, chief ordnance officers for the ETO, revealed this information recently in a tribute to Negro ordnance troops.

Of six million tons of ammo transported between D-Day and V-E Day, over 4,500,000 tons were handled by tan enlisted men who comprised 11 percent of ordnance personnel in the theater.

"Not only did these Negro troops 'pass the ammunition' but on numerous occasions many of them fought the Germans, participated in patrols and took prisoners," said General Sayler.

Specific units cited were the 655th Ordnance Ammunition Company, which unloaded a trainload of white phosphorus shells December 26 near Soissons, France, with Germans shells exploding in the area, the 57th Ordnance Ammunition Co., which earned the appelation "Fighting 57th" with part of its members engaged SS units on the Belgium border in September killing 36.

(Strangely missing through an official oversight was mention of the famous 626th Ordnance Ammunition Co., that raced across France with General George S. Pattons' cocky third army frequently operating on an around-the-clock schedule two to five miles behind the lines. M/Sgt. John W. London, of Houston, 626th depot chief, was the first third army master sergeant to win the bronze star medal. He was declared, "the best ammunition master sergeant in the entire third army" by Lt. Col. Walter D. Ferry, Tulsa, 150th Ord. Bn., who made the presentation after 626th had distinguished itself in Luxembourg during the Battle of the Bulge.)

Negro ordnance soldiers operated forward ammunition supply points (ASPs) close to the front lines where all types of ammo, infantry, artillery and armored was issued. They totalled 13,118 of the 14,323 ordnance personnel. Seventy-six of the ordnance ammunition companies or over 75 per cent were Negro units.

Negro ammunition companies from the Ardennes breakthrough in December to V-E Day alone received and issued the astronomical figure of 24,000 tons of explosives daily.

Other Negro ordnance groups consisted of five automotive maintenance companies one working with 12th army and four in Comz (rear echelon), and two motor vehicles distributing (MVDs) companies.

Our Boys Supply Occupation Troops

The Memphis World 9-11-45

Memphis, Tennessee

ANTWERP, Belgium—(SNS) — After nearly two years' service in Europe and the Middle East, Headquarters Company and Medical Detachment, 114th Quartermaster Battalion is set up in this Belgium port city to handle supplies for U. S. Troops remaining in Europe. The organization supervises the work of what is believed to be the only Negro Diesel trucking unit in the U. S. Army.

Before coming to Antwerp the 114th Quartermaster Group operated the Red Ball supply highway in France and participated in the crossing of the Rhine.

In Iran the 114th organized and ran an entire dispatch system for the rapid delivery of Russian lend-lease supplies through the Persian Gulf corridor.

TOUGH ROUTE

This was a route which led for almost 1,000 miles over hot trackless deserts, and through snow-covered mountain passes 10,000 feet high to the borders of the Russian Transcaucasia. Here, at the city of Kazvin, the convoy was met by Red Army units and American supplies were rushed to the Eastern Front. The men of the 114th speak with pride of their contribution to the battle of Stalingrad, which was considered vitally important.

Stationed in mud huts at Andimeshk, one of the hottest cities in the world where the temperature reaches 185 degrees, the men had to combat the additional hazards of malaria, dysentery and fever. Throughout these trying months the physical condition and the morale were kept at such a high level that the unit received numerous oral and written commendations for its work.

DANVILLE, VA.
REGISTER
Circ. D. 14,580 - S. 15,175
AUG 15 1945

THE NEGRO IN ETO

Accounts of the Negro in the European Theatre of Operations brought home too often have dealt with the phenomena of uninhibited racial relations between the American Negro and his British and French Allies and among the people of occupied areas. These have overshadowed the exploits of Negro soldiers in the work which took them to Europe.

A recent attack on the Negro as a fighting man by U. S. Senator EASTLAND provoked quick defenses from a large part of the "white" press as well as from high officials in the War and Navy Departments.

The best refutation of EASTLAND's charge that Negroes failed as soldiers is contained in an editorial in the Baltimore Sun. We reprint it today and hope that readers of these columns will take the two or three minutes required to gain the information therein.

This war, better than any other in history, has demonstrated that no race has a monopoly on qualities that make a good soldier. Armies differ in the quality of training, equipment and leadership but the individuals composing armies, whatever their color or race, have about the same characteristics. They all have the courage to fight to the death for causes in which they believe and a skill measuring their training and equipment more than their aptitude.

As for raw courage, our boys in the Pacific tell some phantastic tales of Japanese courage. We do not have to disparage the fighting qualities of even an enemy to underscore the greatness of our own triumph. The converse is true. The better fighting men we beat, the higher is praise for our own fighting qualities.

As for our Negro soldiers, they had a big part in beating the Germans—long recognized as superior soldiers. The Baltimore Sun tells a few of the actions contributing to the great part of the American Negro soldier in achievement of victory.

Tan Yanks Totaled 58% of OM Personnel in Europe

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

EUROPEAN THEATRE — The Office of the Chief Quartermaster of the European Theatre of Operations recently reported that total quartermaster personnel in the theatre on March 31, had reached 133,354. and of them 77,348, or 58%, were colored.

The colored QM troops served in nearly all categories of QM units. Large numbers were in mobile and non-mobile QM battalion headquarters units which control, administer, train and supply QM companies or various types.

27 Mobile Bakery Units

Between D-Day and V-E Day there were 27 mobile bakery componies, baking fresh bread under field conditions and also roasting coffee. There were 252 service companies which provided general labor for all arms and services."

Other QM units were:

Three base depot companies one depot supply company, 16 fumigation and bath companies 45 gas supply companies, 22 laundry companies;

Thirteen railhead companies, 11 salvage collecting companies, 10 salvage repair companies, 10 laundry sections and one refrigeration company.

3 Landed on D-Plus

Three colored QM units, the 30th QM Railhead Company, the 3168th and 3279th QM Service Companies landed in Normandy on D-plus-1.

One QM bakery company, the 4351st, which landed in France on Aug. 3, 1944, baked over 4,000,000 pounds of bread, and roasted and ground half a million pounds of coffee for U.S. Troops in France, Belgium and Holland.

RESIGNS NAACP POST

NEW YORK—Miss Consuelo C. Young Aug. 15 resigned as the NAACP's director of publicity and has returned to Chicago.

List 23 Negro Soldiers Killed In Explosion At Viareggio, Italy

The New York Age
New York, New Yorke
8-25-45

U. S. ARMY FORCES, Mediterranean Theater of Operations—

The names, organizations and next-of-kin of the 23 Negro soldiers who were instantly killed as a result of an explosion of mines in a nearby building which partially demolished the Ameri- partially demolished the American gio, on July 18, 1945, follow:

Technician Fifth Grade Rudolph Strickland, 92nd Reconnaissance Troop: mother, Mrs. Lucy Strickland, 573 Macon street, Brooklyn New York.

Private First Class Revis Collins, 92nd Military Police Platoon father, Mr. Wilson O. Collins, Winburn street, Houston, Texas.

Private First Class Robert L. Montgomery, 597th Field Artillery Battalion; mother, Mrs. Annie Montgomery, Route 2, Box 35, Atmare, Alabama.

Private Otis L. Collins, 365th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Laner Collins, Route 1, Ganner, North Carolina.

Staff Sergeant Maurice O. Burt, 365th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Maude H. Burt, 11 1-2 Gainsboro street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Private First Class Henry Banks, 365th Infantry Regiment; father, Mr. Samuel Banks, 2611 Locust street, St. Joseph, Missouri.

Etaff Sergeant James E. Knight, 365th Infantry Regiment; wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Knight, 252 Farnsworth, Detroit, Michigan.

Sergeant Willie A. Reed, 365th Infantry Regiment; father, Mr. George Reed, 1047 Overton street, Memphis, Hennessee.

Technician Fifth Grade Jasper Peevy, 365th Infantry Regiment; uncle, Mr. Joe D. Peevy, 609 North 9th street, Munroe, Louisiana.

8-25-45

Private First Class Arria Shaw, 370th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Annie Shaw, 1321 Potomac street, Bakersfield, California.

Private First Class Lloyd W. Gordon, 370th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Alverta H. Gordon, 501 West Landvale street, Baltimore, Maryland.

Private First Class Thomas E. Robinson, Jr., 370th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Jennie C. Robinson, 319 Ashley avenue, Charleston, South Carolina.

Staff Sergeant Milton Smith, 370th Infantry Regiment; mother, Mrs. Pearl Smith, 153 Wayne street, Jersey City, New Jersey.

Private Enoch Hanna, Jr., 371st Infantry Regiment; wife, Mrs. Sara Hanna, Route 2, Box 117, Lake City, South Carolina.

Technician Fifth Grade Leo Whitfield, 371st Infantry Regiment; father, Mr. John Whitfield, 3721 Cook avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

Private First Class Haywood Robertson, 371st Infantry Regiment mother, Mrs. Mary Robertson, Victoria, Virginia.

Staff Sergeant Willie Cooper, 371st Infantry Regiment; wife, Mrs. Ethel E. Cooper, 1022 Odeon street, Route 1, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Private First Class Gus Marshall, 371st Infantry Regiment; wife, Mrs. Mary E. Macshall, 48 Entwist Le avenue, Nutley New Jersey.

Technician Fifth Grade James Alford, 679th Tank Destroyer Battalion; mother, Mrs. Minnie Alford, General Delivery, Calvert, Texas.

Technician Fifth Grade Clarence L. Smith, 679th Tank Destroyer Battalion; mother, Mrs. Mary A. Smith, 110 East Brainard street, Pensacola, Florida.

Sergeant William E. Foster, 679th Tank Destroyer Battalion; mother, Mrs. Geneva Foster, Route 2, Creme, Virginia.

Private William E. Sexton, 758th Tank Battalion; aunt, Mrs. Annie V. Timmons, 205 Jenkins street, Savannah, Georgia.

Private William E. Sexton, 758th Tank Battalion; aunt, Mrs. Annie V. Timmons, 205 Jenkins street, Savannah, Georgia.

Private First Class Sidney Green, 758th Tank Battalion; sister, Mrs. Cara Roundtree Route 2, Box 70, Milan, Georgia

A twenty-fourth casualty of the explosion was Private James Beggs, Sr., white, of 119 Kenilworth road, Marion, Pennsylvania.

Injured Vet Quits Picket

The People's Voice
New York, New York 9-15-45

The disabled veteran, Edward Bykowski, who picketed Sen. Theodore Bilbo's office for two weeks in an effort to gain an interview and in protest against the Mississippian's hate spiels, was forced to give up last week when his injured leg begar bothering him. Bykowski, down but not out, immediately began plans for interesting veterans' organizations in the anti-Bilbo campaign and thinking of a possible vets' trip to Mississippi to carry ont the fight down there.

Before leaving Washington for his home at 38-60 43 av, Woodside, Queens, Bykowski told he press what he would have said to Bilbo, had the interview been granted:

"I remember first aid work on the heavy cruiser Vincennes," he said. "We had a colored boy whose arm was blown off at the elbow. There was very little I could do about it except put on a tourniquet, a battle dressing and give him a shot of mrophine. Other casualties were coming in, so I told him to lie down in a corner and take it easy.

"Two minutes or so passed by before I checked up on the colored boy. When I looked around, he wasn't in his corner but was standing helping the boys pass ammunition with his good right arm. Is he one of the boys you want to send back to Africa?"

Bykowski cited the sacrifices made by all Americans. "These boys didn't ask about race or religion. They were together for one thing. All I wonder now is whether you could say the things you do if you had a son who was also a battle casualty. I don't think you could, Senator."

Lone Negro Crew Held 16 Nazi Tanks At Bay

Atlanta Daily World
8-11-45

WITH THE 761st TANK BATTALION IN EUROPE — The war is over now, and slowly the stories of the exploits of the members of the 761st Tank Battalion, pioneering of the act of Staff Sergeant, then Sergeant Henry H. Conway, husband of Mrs. Lucille Conway, 4733 Southmany Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

When the 761st went with other units of General George S. Patton's Third Army to the "Battle of the Bulge" last winter, it had one of its toughest encounters at Tillet, Belgium, above Bastogne.

It was here that Sergeant Conway, with his tank standing alone on a hill, held 16 Germans at bay, while the enemy shelled him from all sides. He held until other tanks of the 761st reached his position.

Even after the rear compartment door grill had been shot off his tank, Sergeant Conway continued to hold on for another hour, firing at the enemy. The Germans did not take that hill.

Sh-11-8

NORFOLK, VA.
VIRGINIAN-PILOT
Cir. D. 77,505—S. 79,630

JUL 19 1945

Europe Foreign Service

A reader points out the useful and often dangerous nature of the work of Negro service troops in this war.

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

In your July 14 issue, "Fair Play," writing in your letters to the Editor column, said that according to an Army headquarters report there were no Negro combat troops in the Normandy campaign, and hinted that "the Army may be guilty of violating regulations set forth by the FEPC."

We don't know whether "Fair Play" meant to be serious or sarcastic, but we gather that there is a misunderstanding concerning the role of Negro troops in the Normandy campaign, as well as a lack of understanding of the importance of service troops in any campaign. For that reason I quote below part of a report on the performance of Negro service troops by Private Irwin Ross, (white) published recently in The New Republic:

"Criticism is sometimes heard that the bulk of Negro soldiers have been assigned to service rather than combat forces. This is true, but there is a tendency to underestimate the crucial contribution they have made as service troops. Negro soldiers came ashore with the engineer brigades on D-day; Negro troops in the Transportation Corps, Engineers, Ordnance, Quartermaster played an outstanding role in winning the Normandy supply battle; Negro truck drivers in the crucial weeks after the St. Lo break-through, hauled the bulk of the supplies to the armies sweeping across France.

"In the last war, supply and transportation were a relatively safe rear-echelon activity. In this continental campaign—a hazardous amphibious operation developing into an unprecedented war of movement—the men at the wheels of the amphibious ducks, the stevedores unloading cargo on the beaches, the truck drivers straining to get the last mile out of their 2 1-2-ton GMC's, have frequently found themselves in the front line trading blows with the enemy.

"In the Corps of Engineers, Negroes staff dozens of aviation engineer battalions, which construct airfields, fire-fighting platoons, and general-service regiments. These last build just about everything—roads, bridges, hospitals, air strips, railroads. The chronicle of one regiment since D-day: It set a speed record of clearing a minefield near La Haye du Puits. In 3 weeks, the regiment built the first 1,000-bed hospital in France. The men had to demine the area first, then pour the concrete—all the time keeping patrols out against snipers".

PHILLIP BARKAS.

Norfolk, July 14.

Colored Troops Scattered All Over Occupied Europe

Baltimore, Md.

afro-American

BY OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent in the European Theatre of Operations

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

PARIS—With the removal of restrictions on the designation of units that have contributed toward victory in Europe, it would seem simple to draw up a list of outfits and say, "Here they are. These are the units that helped bring victory."

Only it isn't simple at all. In the first place, many units which saw service prior to V-E Day, no longer exist. Some have been deactivated. Some have been swallowed up in larger organizations.

Always Attached

And, in the case of colored units on the Continent, all were small—a regiment here and there, and not too many battalions. The rest were companies, detachments and platoons. Unlike white organizations which have been easy to identify and keep up with, colored troops were usually attached to something—here today and gone tomorrow.

There hasn't been a single colored division in France, and searching for an outfit smaller than a division is, as any correspondent can tell you, a good bit harder than finding a needle in a straw pile. 8-4-45

If this was true during wartime, it is much more difficult now when everybody is on the move—either to the Pacific, to the States, to the army of occupation, or to redeployment centers.

No Color Designations

Furthermore, you can't tell the color of a unit on paper. You have to catch up with it to know, for the Army simply sets down a list of outfits in a certain area, with no marks to designate white, black or blue.

However, with the above as a bit of background, a partial list of colored units that have fought and served in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, is presented. Others will be added as they are found, with the hope that eventually every outfit will be included. Here they are:

The following units are known to be on the Continent at present:

WAC's—6888th Central Postal Directory; Army Postal Unit—122nd; Medical Sanitation—703rd and 723rd; Ordnance—646th, 596th, 600th; Engineers—41st, 829th, 923rd, 377th (regiment), 1698th (combat); Quartermasters—123rd and 532nd (battalions), 3992nd, 3555th, 3216th 3658th.

MANY STILL HERE

The following units have been on the Continent, and the chances are many are still here:

Artillery — 333rd, 969th, 578th, 777th battalions; Tank Battalion—761st; Tank Destroyer—614th; Anti-aircraft—452nd; Barrage Balloon—320th; Chemical Warfare—402nd; 87th, 83rd, 162nd.;

Signal Construction—447th, 448th, 268th, 459th, 269th, 40th, 41st;

Engineers—95th combat, 364th and 365th general service regiments; Ordnance — 84th battalion, 510th depot, 583rd ammo., 3420th medium maintenance;

Quartermasters — 457th laundry, 237th and 238th salvage collection, 3010th bakery, 3185th and 4086th service;

Quartermaster Trucking — 4251st, 4252nd, 4253rd, 4254th, 3864th, 3981st, 469th group, 394th, 4023rd, 91st battalion, 3966th, 446th, 447th, 2016th, 3981st, 1585th, 309th, 260th, 273rd battalion, 3327th, 3326th, 3512th, 4042nd, 3173rd, and 37th S.S. detachment.

Either awaiting redeployment or constituting elements of the armies of occupation, these troops were assigned to posts in France, Italy, England, Wales, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Algeria, Morocco, Liberia, Corsica, Scotland, Holland, Egypt, Belgium and Luxembourg. 8-4-45

Units Widely Distributed

Probably the most remotely stationed colored unit in Europe on July 1 was the 595th Qm. Laundry Company, at historic Pilsen in Czechoslovakia.

The 701st Sanitary Medical Co. was in Newport, Wales; the 4247th QM Service Co. at Heliopolis, Egypt; the 167th Chemical Warfare Co. at Maastricht, Holland, while the 3879th Gasoline Supply Co. was in Furiani, Corsica.

The most distant advance made by colored fighting men came when the 761st Tank Battalion battled its way to the shores of the Enn River at Steyr, Austria, where it linked up with the Soviet Army under Marshal Ivan Konev.

In Italy, Tan Yank units range from southernmost Bari, where the 647th Military Police Co. was maintaining order, in July 1, to Genoa, present headquarters of the 92nd Infantry Division.

The following were among the combat units which saw service in Europe (with stations as of July 1):

FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALIONS: 333rd, Bamberg, Germany; 349th, Le Havre, France; 350th, Yvetot, France; 351st, also at Yvetot; 686th, Keskastel, France; 777th, Maastricht, Holland; 969th, Hardheim, Germany, and the 999th, Berthelming.

TANK BATTALIONS: 761st, Sulzbach, Germany; 784th, Venlo, Holland.

TANK DESTROYER BATTALIONS: 614th, Bouxwiller, France; 643rd, Buttigen, Germany.

Daniel A. Reed (R. 45, Dunkirk).

COMBAT ENGINEER BATTALIONs: 183rd, Eschweiler, Germany; 184th, Hockneukirch, Germany; 1695th, Garat, France; 1697, Darmstadt, Germany; 1698th, Viersen, Germany; 1699th, Arolsen, Germany, and the 1700th Herzogenaurach, Germany.

FIGHTING UNITS IN ITALY

These were among the combat units which saw service in Italy (with stations as of July 1):

365th (San Michele), 370th (Cavi), 371st (Reggio) Infantry Regiments; 758th Tank Battalion (Gassina), 679th Tank Destroyer Battalion (Balzanetto); 99th, 100th and 301st Fighter Squadrons (all at Ramitelli); 92nd Reconnaissance Troop (Acqui); to); 99th, (Acqi); 597th (Isola), 598th (Aranzeno), 599th (Tietrasanta), and 600th (Compomoiare) Field Artillery Battalions.

Negroes Made Up 58 Percent of QM Units in Europe

Des Moines Iowa Bystander

Headquarters, U. S. Forces, European Theater—The Office of the Chief Quartermaster of the European Theater of Operations, this week reported that total quarermaster personnel in the theater on March 31, had reached 133,354, and of this total 77,348 were Negro troops.

These Negro QM troops served in nearly all categories of units in the Quartemaster Corps. Large numbers of the personnel were in mobile and non-mobile QM battalion headquarters units which control, administer, train and supply QM companies of various types. 8-25-45

There were 27 Negro mobile QM bakery companies serving at one time or another in the theater between D-Day and V-E Day. Their function was to bake fresh bread under field conditions, and also to roast coffee.

There were 252 Negro QM servce companies which provided "general labor for all arms and services."

There were also three QM base depot companies, one QM depot supply company, 16 QM gas supply companies, 22 QM laundry companies, 13 QM railhead companies, 11 QM salvage collecting companies, 10 QM salvage repair companies, 10 QM laundry sections, and one QM refrigeration company. 8-23-45

Three Negro QM units, the 309th QM Railhead Company, the 3168th and 3279th QM Service Companies landed in Normandy on D-plus-1.

One QM bakery company, the 4351st, baked over 4,000,000 pounds of bread, and roasted and ground half a million pounds of coffee for consumption by U. S. Troops in France, Belgium and Holland. The unit landed in France on August 3, 1944.

32 Combat Units Among 1240 Tan Yank Outfits That Helped Defeat Germany

afro-American 8-4-45

Baltimore, Md

WASHINGTON

Serving with every arm and service of the Army, colored soldiers assigned to 1,240 organizations contributed immeasurably to the success of Allied arms in the war against the Germans, the War Department reported this week.

These included 32 combat units serving in France, Germany, Holland and Italy.

Colored units landed at Oran in North Africa with the western task force in November 1942, were on hand for subsequent landings in Sicily, Corsica, Salerno and Anzio in the drive into Italy.

They filled even bigger roles in the conquest of Normandy, invasion of Southern France and in the struggle which finally ended in complete capitulation for the Germans.

Over 250,000 in 3 Theaters

On July 1, 1945, over a quarter million colored soldiers were stationed in the European, Mediterranean and African-Middle East Theaters of Operations.

1241 Units Helped Bring Victory In European War

Pittsburgh (Pa.) Courier

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Serving with every arm and service of the Army, Negro soldiers assigned to 1,241 organizations, varying from highly technical rear echelon units to front-line assault battalions, contributed immeasurably to the success of Allied arms in the war against the Germans, the War Department reported this week.

Negro units landed at Oran in North Africa with the Western Task Force in November, 1942, were on hand for subsequent landings in Sicily, Corsica, Salerno and Anzio in the drive into Italy. They filled even bigger roles n the conquest of Normandy, invasion of Southern France, and in the struggle which finally ended in complete capitulation for the Germans.

ALL OVER EUROPE

On July 1, 1945, over a quarter million Negro soldiers were stationed in the European, Mediterranean and African-Middle East Theatres of Operations. Either awaiting redeployment or constituting elements of the armies of occupation, these troops were assigned to posts in France, Italy, England, Wales, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Algeria, Morocco, Liberia, Corsica, Scotland, Holland, Egypt, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Probably the most remotely stationed Negro unit in Europe on July 1 was the 595th Quartermaster Laundry Company at historic Pilzen, in Czechoslovakia.

As an example of their geographic dispersal, the 701st Sanitary Medical Company was in Newport, Wales; the 4247th QM Service Company was performing duty at Heliopolis, Egypt; the 167th Chemical Warfare Company was at Maastricht, Holland, while the 3789th Gasoline Supply Company was stationed in Furiani, Corsica.

JOIN RUSSIANS

The most distant advance made by Negro fighting men came when the 761st Tank Battalion, first Negro Tank Battalion ever to enter combat with the U. S. Army, battled its way to the shores of the Enn River at Steyr, Austria, where it linked up with the Soviet Army under Marshal Ivan Konev.

In Italy, Negro units range from Bari on the heel of the peninsula, where the 647th Military Police Company was maintaining order, on July 1, to the top of the peninsula at Geneva, present headquarters of the all-Negro Ninety-second Infantry Division.

The following were among the Negro combat units which saw service in Europe (with stations as of July 1):

Field Artillery Battalions: 33rd, Bamberg, Germany; 349th, Le Havre, France; 350th, Yvetet, France; 351st, also at Yvetet; 686th, Keskastel, France; 777th, Maastricht, Holland; 969th, Hardheim, Germany, and the 999th, Berthelming, France.

Tank Battalions: 761st, Sulzbach, Germany; 784th, Venlo, Holland.

Tank Destroyer Battalions: 614th, Bouxwiller, France; 643rd, Buttigen, Germany.

Combat Engineer Battalions: 183rd, Eschweiler, Germany; 184th, Hochneukirch, Germany; 1695th, Garat, France; 1697th, Darmstadt, Germany; 1698th Viersen, Germany; 1699th, Arelsen, Germany, and the 1700th, Herzgonaurach, Germany.

8-4-45

These were among the combat units which saw service in Italy (with statistics as of July 1):

365th (San Michele), 370th (Cavi), 371st (Reggio) Infantry Regiments; 758th Tan Battalion (Gassina-, 679th Tank Destroyer Battalion (Balzanetto); 99th, 100th and 301st Fighter Squadrons (all at Ramitelli); 92nd Reconnaisance Troop (Acqi); 597th (Isola), 598th (Aranzeno), 599th (Tietrasanta), and 600th (Compomoia) Field Artillery Battalions.

Victims of Mine Blast

Afro-American

ROME, Italy—(By Cable)—Listed below are names and next of kin of 23 92nd Division enlisted men and one white soldier killed in Viareggio on July 18, when stored mines exploded in a building adjacent to one housing the division's Red Cross Club:

PFC. LLOYD W. GORDON, mother, Mrs. Alberta G. Gordon, 1501 W. Lanvale St., Baltimore.

S/SGT. MAURICE BURT, mother, Mrs. Maude H. Burt, 363 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

Baltimore, Md.

S/SGT. MILTON SMITH, mother, Mrs. Pearl Smith, 148½ Union St., Jersey City, N.J.

T/5 RUDOLPH STRICKLAND, mother, Mrs. Lucy Strickland, 573 Macon St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

PFC. GUS MARSHALL, wife, Mrs. Gus Marshall, 48 Entwhistle Ave., Nutley, N.J.

PFC. THOMAS ROBINSON JR., mother, Mrs. Jennie Robinson, 319 Ashley Ave., Charleston, S.C.

8-4-45

PFC. HAYWOOD ROBERTSON, mother, Mrs. Mary Robertson, Victoria, Va.

PVT. ENOCH HANNA, wife, Mrs. Cora Hanna, Box 17, Route 2, Lake City, S.C.

SGT. WILLIAM E. FOSTER, mother, Mrs. Geneva Foster, Route 2, Crewe, Va.

PVT. WILLIAM SEXTON, aunt, Mrs. Anna Timmons, 20 Jenks St., Savannah, Ga.

S/SGT. WILLIE COOPER, wife, Mrs. Ethel F. Cooper, 1022 Odeon St., Box 81, New Orleans, La.

S/SGT. JAMES E. KNIGHT, wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Knight, 252 Efransworth Ave., Detroit.

S/SGT. WILLIE REED, father, George Reed, 1047 Overton St., Memphis, Tenn.

T/5 JAMES ALFORD, mother, Mrs. Minnie Alford, Calvert, Tex.

T/5 JASPER PEEVY, uncle, Joe Peevy, 609 N. 9th St., Monroe, La.

T/5 CLARENCE L. SMITH, mother, Mrs. Mary E. Smith, 110 Edrainerd St., Pensacola, Fla.

T/5 LEON WHITFIELD, father, John Whitfield, 3721 Cook Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

PFC. ARRIA SHAW, mother, Mrs. Annie Shaw, 1321 Potomac St., Bakersfield, Calif.

PFC. HENRY BANKS, father, Samuel Banks, 2611 Locust St., St. Joseph, Miss.

PFC. ROBERT MONTGOMERY, mother, Mrs. Annie Montgomery, Atmore, Ala.

PFC. SIDNEY GREEN, sister, Mrs. Annabelle Patterson, Route 3, Box 75, Louisville, Ga.

PVT. OTIS E. COLLINS, father, Wilson Collins, 3210 Winburn St., Houston, Tex.

JOHN J. BEGGSTARION, white, of Pennsylvania.

Units on Western Front

Afro-American

WASHINGTON

As of July 1, a breakdown of the types and kinds of colored units then in the European (ETO), Mediterranean (MTO), and African-Middle East (AMETO) Theatres of Operations, or en route therefrom, included:

Baltimore, Md.

	ETO	MTO	AMETO	TOTAL
Armored Units
Tank Battalions	2	1	0	3
Cavalry
Reconnaissance Troops	0	1	0	1
Chemical Warfare Service
Decontamination, Smoke Generating and Service Companies	17	3	0	20
Engineers
General Service, Combat, Dump Truck, Fire Fighting, Maintenance, Water Supply, Heavy and Light Pontoon Companies	83	22	0	105
Field Artillery
Division and Group Artillery, 105-mm, 155-mm, and 8-inch Howitzer, and 4.5-inch Gun Battalions	12	5	0	17
Infantry
Division Headquarters and Regiments	0	4	0	4
Medical Department
Battalions, Companies, Platoons, Station Hosptials, General Hospital Complimentary Units, Detachments	21	3	3	27
Corps of Military Police
Companies and Detachments	1	9	1	11
Miscellaneous
Army Bands	12	2	1	15
Special Service Companies	1	1	0	2
WAC Units	1	0	0	1
Ordnance Department
Ammunition Companies, Vehicle Assembling and Distributing Companies, Battalions, Depots	61	7	0	68
Army Postal Units
Base Censor Office	7	0	0	7
Quartermaster Corps
Mobile Battalions, Truck Railhead, Salvage Collecting, Gasoline Supply, Fumigating and Bath, Pack, Laundry, Depot, Service, Bakery, Refrigeration, Sterilization, and Car Companies	610	89	7	706
Signal Corps
Heavy and Light Construction Battalions	9	1	0	10
Replacement Units	0	3	0	3
Tank Destroyer Units
Battalions (Towed)	3	1	0	4
Transportation Corps
Port Battalions	22	2	0	24
Port Companies	104	8	0	112
Army Air Forces
Air Engineering Squadrons	0	2	0	2
Air Materiel Squadrons	0	2	0	2
Fighter Squadrons	0	3	0	3
Air Base Security Battalions	0	3	0	3
Chemical Warfare Companies	0	1	0	1
Aviation Engineer Regiments, Battalions and Companies	8	2	1	11
Aviation Ammunition Companies	3	7	0	10
Air Corps Quartermaster Battalions and Companies	47	16	0	63
Signal Corps Heavy Construction Battalions	4	0	0	4
Service Companies	1	0	0	1
Totals	1,029	198	13	1,240

8-4-45

56

969th Guards Trial of War Criminals

The Pittsburgh Courier

WEISSENBURG, Germany — (ANP) — The 969th Field Artillery battalion, stationed here, is performing security guard duty at the trial of the German war criminals starting here in Nurenberg, Nov. 20.

The 969th distinguished itself in Italy and at Bastogne.

Tan GI's In Germany Find Little Prejudice Except That of Fellow Americans

Savannah, Ga.

DELEGATION LEAVES MONDAY FOR DETROIT

Savannah, Ga.

Berlin. (ANP)—"Negro' troops are almost unanimous in saying that the dominant fact in the racial picture in Germany today is that Naziscreated anti-Negro feeling is not a deep, living thing, but that the most serious source of racial propaganda against the Negro people originates with certain bigoted members of their own army," says Allen Morrison in a special article titled "The Negro GI in Germany" appearing in the Aug. 12 issue of the Stars and Stripes magazine, official U. S. army publication.

Morrison's complete article follows: 8-30-45

"Germans, who once were exhorted to think themselves as a master race, now gladly wash the clothes of American Negro soldiers, a racial group the Nazis taught them to despise. Children play with Negro soldiers, girls fraternize with them. If the Germans ever wholly believed Nazi racial theories, the war certainly has put still another complexion on social life in Germany.

"From the inception of the Nazi movement color was carefully and cleverly woven into the fabric of fascist race theories which found their definite expression in the notorious Nuremberg laws.

"In 'Mein Kampf,' Hitler described Negroes as 'semi-apes' and derided the democracies for allowing them to have any human rights and opportunities at all. At the 1936 Berlin Olympics, Hitler refused to personally congratulate Jesse Owens—who won four titles—and other individual Negro victors on the U. S. team.

"Long before he came to power, Hitler promised to 'avenge' the national 'insult' given Germany during allied occupation of the Rhineland following Germany's defeat in World War I. At that time France stationed thousands of Senegalese troops in the French zone of occupation. The Nazis never allowed the Germans to forget that the peace of Versailles resulted in African Negroes being billeted in German homes.

"Hitler promised the Germans that one of the first acts of the Nazi government would be the sterilization of hundreds of racially mixed children produced by unions between Senegalese soldiers and German women. He also promised that Negro troops would never again set foot on German soil.

"Concentration camps received their quotas of Negro prisoners. These were Negroes at Buchenwald and Dachu when these camps were overrun by advancing American forces. In the Berlin area, a recent survey showed, most Negroes or near-Negroes living there had been imprisoned by the Nazis, usually for being member of an 'inferior' race. Like the Jews, Germans of color were refused employment. 8-30-45

"Today Germans see thousands of Negro troops in the U. S. zone performing duties ranging from straight occupational tasks to technical engineering operations. How have Germans reacted to these Negro troops in their midst? How have Negro GIs reacted to the German people? In the larger cities of Germany the racial myth seems buried beneath the rubble of the Nazi order. In Nuremberg, the seat of Nazi racism, American troops speak of friendly relations with civilians who are far too busy reconstructing their shattered lives to revive the Hitlerian theories that brought their country to ruin. In Munich, Schweinfurt, Frankfort and Augsburg Negro troops speak of friendly relations with civilians who are far too busy reconstructing their shattered lives to revive the Hitlerian theories that brought their country to ruin. In Munich, Schweinfurt, Frankfort and Augsburg Negro soldiers say that civilians attach more importance to the growing problems of food and shelter than to hating and fearing dark-skin Americans.

"In one town the daughter of a colonel in the Wehrmacht stoutly maintained that her Nazi teachings would not permit her to associate with Negro men. But personality proved stronger than propaganda, and by the time the non-fraternization policy was relaxed, she was holding nightly 'conversations' with a Negro soldier.

"Generally the pattern of new Negro-German relations has been like this: A Negro unit moves into a town. At first, the men encounter coolness, suspicion, even fear from the local inhabitants. Friendly contact starts with the small children. The next day the children start getting bigger. Before a week has passed the adults who feared the worst are talking with the soldiers and before long 'fraternization' is normal.

"'Talking to Germans in public places' is being pretty liberally interpreted by most Americans in Germany and Negro troops are no exception to this. In one Negro QM truck company stationed near Augusburg it was learned that 85 per cent of the men had won 'homes' of their own. That is, they were 'talking' to Germans (usually frauleins) in public places (and private) on a regular and intimate basis. 8-30-45

There is, of course, a practical aspect.

"'The Germans we've met are a hungry people,' explained S-Sgt. George Handy, a Negro from Washington, D. C. 'But they are also very realistic. Their hunger has made them very objective on such matters as racial attitude. It didn't take long for them to see that there is no difference between food, chocolate, cigarets and soap in the hands of white Americans and similar items possessed by Negro Americans.

"'To get these things,' he said, 'they wash our clothes and do other things for us.'

"But Negro soldiers point out that Germans who never saw Negroes before the arrival of the Americans have adjusted themselves to the sensitive feelings of the American Negro toward racial insult and slight. For example, the German word for Negro is 'Neger,' which sounds like the offensive 'nigger,' a word which Negroes strongly recent. Negro GIs report that many Germans in their communities studiously refrain from using this word, replacing it with such expressions as 'brown man.'

"Some Negro members of the American Army of Occupation, however, report having heard Germans mutter 'schwartzer teufel,' which means 'black devil,' another Hitlerian carryover. 8-30-45

"'When we first arrived here seven weeks ago many of the people seemed afraid of us,' said Cpl. Sidney Dickerson, from Beckley, W. Va., a member of a Negro tank battalion stationed at Bissingen. 'But after a week or so the people found us quite different from what the Nazis had evidently told them about us. I think we have shown these people the falseness of Hitler's racial propaganda.'

"Capt. William Bruce, of Winston-Salem, N. C., a Negro army physician, told of his attempts to assist a German woman in the throes of childbirth.

"'She wouldn't let me touch her,' Bruce said. 'But things have changed in this community . . . Now there's a constant stream of Germans coming into my dispensary for medical treatment.

"Negro troops are almost unanimous in saying that the dominant fact in the racial picture in Germany today is that Nazi-created anti-Negro feeling is not a deep, living thing, but that the most serious source of racial propaganda against the Negro people originates with certain bigoted members of their own army.

"They say that certain prejudiced white Americans have carried their ideas into Germany and that Germans notice it. Negroes condemn this as 'fascism in another form.' It is no new experience for them. Similar campaigns were conducted in England, France, Belgium and Italy by the same minority of Americans. 8-30-45

"Remarking on the similarity between Nazi anti-Negro propaganda and anti-Negro stories circulated by American Negro-phobes, one Negro sergeant said bitterly.

"'You ask about relations between American Negroes and German civilians. Well, as far as we can see, they are normally good. But there are a few members of our own army who still are playing the Nazi game of hate-your-fellow-man-because-he's black. Sometimes I wonder if we have really defeated Nazism."

Faculty, Students Mixed

The Pittsburgh Courier

Democratic Spirit Prevails At Army College in Florence

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

10-13-45

UNIVERSITY STUDY CENTER, Florence, Italy—Attending classes at the first full-time Army college to be established overseas are 354 Negro enlisted men and seventeen Negro officers. Forming approximately 13 per cent of the University Study Center's 2,240 students, these men are spending their time in educational pursuits while awaiting redeployment.

In the group registered for the previous term which ended Sept. 8 were men from thirty-one States and the Territory of Hawaii.

One Negro officer and one enlisted man are found among the university's 161 hand-picked instructors. Teaching classes in college algebra, First Lieut. Theodore A. Love, former suprevising principal of Laboratory Schools, Alabama Teachers College, was one of the first instructors to arrive before the University Study Center opened last July 1. T/Sgt. John L. Stewart who teaches biological science, was formerly an instructor in the Alcorn A. and M. College at Alcorn, Miss.

STUDENT SPIRIT HIGH

"The spirit of the student body is good," Stewart said. "Their only complaint is about the tempo of the course."

Terms at USC are one month in length, but a student whose grades are satisfactory may apply for a second term. Certificates are awarded for satisfactory completion of a minimum of twenty hours of work in any subject. While these certificates will be considered for credits by American universities, actual credit allowed rests with the school in which the student desires additional work toward a degree.

Pfc. Benjamin Scrutchions, Chicago, Ill., who is now in his second term at USC, has applied for a third. Scrutchions, planning to continue his education under the GI Bill of Rights after release from the Army, said, "Courses taken over here will not only give me college credit, but they will also eliminate refresher work when I return to the States."

The twenty-five-member Student Council, on which Scrutchions serves, has two other Negroes on its roster for the current term. They are T/Sgt. William H. Fields, Newark, Ohio, and Sgt. Harold Brown Jr., Denver, Colo.

T/4 James L. Lucas of Canton, Ohio, editor of the campus weekly, "U. S. Collegian," describes life on the campus as ideal. "There is no attempt at segregation," he said. Lucas comes from the 600th Field Artillery Battalion of the Ninety-second Infantry Division.

Typical opinions voiced by 100 men picked at random in a survey conducted on the USC campus recently indicated that the Negro GI's were unanimous in their praise of this democratic educational opportunity.

"This institution is one of the most democratic ever set up by our Government—all the principles for which democracy stands are portrayed here in every phase of both the campus life and the classroom," is the way T/5 Flotilla Watkins of Puebla, Colo., expresses it. Watkins is married and has spent fourteen of his thirty-five months in the Army overseas.

LAUDS DEMOCRACY

Corp. Leslie R. Anderson of Pittsburgh, Pa., who saw action with the 599th Field Artillery Battalion of the Ninety-second Division, describes the atmosphere of the University Study Center's campus as "a state of complete assistance and fraternity. It has done much toward racial understanding and the propagation of tolerance," he concluded.

10-13-45

"If all institutions in the United States were like USC—well, it was worth fighting for!" says T/4 Harold L. Carter, holder of a Purple Heart and former cannoneer with the 600th Field Artillery of the Ninety - second Division. Carter, who is married, hails from Springfield, Ohio.

THOUGHT THEY FOUGHT FOR DEMOCRACY.

Birmingham Ala.

Weekly Review

HOBACK, Germany — There we got our first taste of the Sigfried line in Germany. In order for us to put our guns in position it was very necessary to look for mines and open the gate of the Sigfried at that particular place. We were successful in cleaning out Mines and opening that death trap which was put there to destroy man.

10-13-45

Moments later our large guns were in position. While we were getting ready to fire ten Germans were raining shells down on us from their Artillery and Airplanes. We began to fire back. This hell on earth went on for days and nights. Many of our boys were injured and many went crazy from the screaming shells of the German artillery and air force.

Throughout Germany we had to go through the same thing, in many cases worse.

The 777 fought in all the Major Battles of Germany. Our communication section was in a lot of danger. At night in the cold snow and rain, communication had to go on, without it our guns were useless. At all times those lines were repaired under gun fire from the Germans Can you visualize that picture? Men crawling in the cold at night too dark to see, too cold for a dog, too dangerous for a light. The only light we had was from a German's shell that landed near by, but WE THOUGHT and hoped we were fighting for democracy. SO WE FOUGHT UNTIL WE WON.

Racial Clashes

Between White And Negro GIs In Italy Unconfirmed

Informer Houston Texas

10-20-45

MARIANA di PISA, Italy — (ANP)— No evidence has been uncovered to verify recent newspaper reports about racial clashes between white and Negro troops in Italy.

Major Walter H. Dabney, of the 226th Engineers regiment, identified the 92nd division as the Negro unit closest to white troops. They are at Pisa and white troops are about 20 miles away, he said.

"We are three miles from Pisa and see white and colored troops going about their business in an orderly and friendly manner," he explained. "It is conceivable that there might have been a drunken brawl between a couple of soldiers, white or colored, or a couple of civilians. But a riot—nuts!"

The major, who is scheduled to return to the states soon with his outfit, reported that the 92nd has one of "the best beaches in all of Italy and it is possible that an Italian did openly resent his women going with soldiers, not Negro soldiers, but soldiers of any foreign nation."

10-20-45

He said it is rare to see an Italian woman talking to a soldier on the streets for over two seconds, regardless of whether the soldier is "white, black, green or pink." Italian women will invite you to their homes and treat "you royally or they will come to your parties or dances or clubs, but they know that if they persist in talking to soldiers on the street the local police will grab them and stamp their identification card 'prostituta' (prostitute) or they will be molested by some local band of hoodlums.

Major Dabney denied that racial clashes between white and Negro troops, similar to the recent outbreaks in England, have occurred in Italy.

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Va. 10-27-45

THE FIRST NEGRO soldier to be assigned to the Armed Forces Network overseas, Pvt. Adolph Baxter Jr., 199 Lake street, Pontiac, Mich., twirls a dial on a transmitter in Paris, France.

Three members of the 666th Qm. Co. (top) which arrived from overseas yesterday enjoy their first sip of coffee after landing. The occasion calls for a little music. Below, Bronze Star winners pose with their commanding officer. From left to right (squatting) Cpl. Junius W. Spencer, Cpl. Warren G. Stocker, T/5 Eugene Poindexter; back row (standing) Capt. William P. Crawley (C.O.); Lt. Rollo M. Nesseth, M/Sgt. Adonis B. Bess and Cpl. Kenneth C. Kennedy. The decoration on the lower right arm is Me rious Service Plaque worn by entire unit. Decorations were won while the unit served with American and British forces north of Aachen and within Germany.

—Daily Worker Photos

Negro Heroes of 4 Campaigns Arrive Living Answers to Racist Slanders

By ABNER BERRY

One hundred and thirty-seven Negro veterans of four campaigns in Europe stepped down the gangplank of the SS Abraham Clark yesterday morning—living answers to racist slanders of Sens. Bilbo and Eastland.

The soldiers, members of the 666th Quartermaster Trucking Company, won for their unit the Meritorious Service Plaque by their examplary conduct and bravery under fire.

After one year of combat duty during which they served in the Ardennes, Northern France, Rhine and Central Europe campaigns they were back for rest and deployment, proudly wearing their star-studded campaign ribbons.

Master Sgt. Adonis B. Bess, the acting first sergeant, steered us around the ship finding the men who had won the Bronze Star in addition to the unit citation. In the mist on deck he wore his raincoat. But a white lieutenant unbuttoned it while we were talking, helped him off with it, and pointed proudly to his decorations which included the Bronze star.

WON BRONZE STAR

Other men who had won the Bronze Star were: Cpl. Kenneth C. Kennedy of Birmingham, Ala., who, though wounded when a convoy of eight trucks was set afire by enemy bombs in Holland, drove two blazing trucks to safety; T/5 Eugene Poindexter of Washington, Arkansas, who was severely burned when enemy bombs hit three trucks and killed two of his fellow-drivers but made his way through the enemy lines to an American hospital; Cpl. Junius Spencer, Washington, D. C., for taking members of the 82nd Airborne Division to the front lines under fire, sustaining wounds; T/5 Warren G. Stocker, Arkansas, for outstanding performance last winter maintaining vehicle tires while under fire and many times within sight of the enemy.

Sgt. Bess wouldn't talk much about his own decorations and acts but the men who crowded around said that he had earned them through his general attention to duty and his services in keeping the convoys moving under all conditions.

COMPANY OUTSTANDING

Captain William P. Crawley, white, of Littleton, North Carolina, was in command of the company. The captain joined with his motor officer, Lieutenant Rollo M. Nesseth, a South Dakotan in declaring "hats off" to these men. When asked at first if there were any outstanding soldiers in the outfit the Lieutenant said, "Why, hell, this whole outfit is outstanding and it always was." Lt. Nesseth also won the Bronze Star Award.

As the 137 men lined up on the dock before boarding busses for Camp Kilmer they drank coffee and chatted of their war experiences and their expectations of the future. Yes, they had heard some of the gripes from colored soldiers over being transferred from combat units. How did they look at the future in America? "Wel, there's one certainty," one man answered, "we sure don't expect it to be the same as it was when we left. It's got to be a damn sight better."

In hauling men, food and ammunition to the front under fire they had seen the face of the enemy and felt his sting. They had helped to bring the promise of democracy to Europe. And they wanted it to be more than a promise at home.

They had no answer in words for Bilbo. ("We've heard about him and you know how we feel.") But they had 137 answers in their personal and unit records. They were not boastful, not overly gay. Their tone was prideful, hopeful, modest and determined.

Few Fighters Left in Europe

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

Tan Yanks Assigned Menial Occupations

LIVE IN TENTS

761st Tankers One of Few Combat Units

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent in the European Theatre of Operations

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

MANNHEIM, Germany—After almost two weeks visiting occupation troops in Germany, I am now only able to give a fairly accurate picture of the situation, and on the basis of information and indications, it seems certain that the Tan Yanks to be retained with the Army of occupation will be those in service units.

Passing through southern Germany en route north I visited Munich, Darmstadt, Frankfurt and neighboring cities. Everywhere units were being resuffled and regrouped, but out of the welter of confusion, only general service outfits and quartermasters were really working and seem destined to stay. 9-16-45

Prepare to Go Home

Others are being rapidly alerted for shipment home. To the best of my knowledge, the only combat units remaining now are the 761st Tank Battalion, the 452nd Anti-aircraft Battalion and scattered combat engineer outfits.

On the other hand, hundreds of trucking companies, many signal construction outfits, numerous ordnance units and a hundred or more service companies are still here and the best indication that they will remain is the fact that they are being filled with low point men.

Perhaps those who have sons or husbands here in Germany are wondering what occupation duty that no American will stay buried on German soil.

"Really a Bad Job"

"The bodies buried in boxes are not difficult to handle, but those in mattress covers are beginning to disintegrate and it is really a bad job," said Lt. James Stamps of Chicago.

Second Lts. Frank Bradley, Chicago, and Edward Jones of Denver complete the staff.

S/Sgt. Robert Carter, brother of the AFRO's Art Carter, is trying to decide on accepting a direct commission and remaining another year in Germany, or to come home in the near future.

The medical detachment of the 46th QM group in Mannheim has three colored captains: Capts. W. H. Pitts, New Haven, Conn.; and Thomas Edwards, Jersey City, both dentists; while Capt. C. L. McGee of 1807 W. Berks St. Philadelphia, is the chaplain.

Capt. McGee formerly pastored the Trinity Presbyterian Church, Bloomfield, N.J., and received the Bronze Star in Mannheim in May.

Summary of Negro GI's part in Europe war issued by war dept.

Los Angeles Tribune Los Angeles, California

9-10-45

WITH U. S. FORCES, Europe—If anybody needs further proof that the Negro soldier was actually sweating and spilling blood, fighting and dying in the war against Germany, the summary of activities of the Negro soldier in the European theater of operations since D-Day, just issued by the War dept., is it—16 closely typed pages of overwhelming proof.

The summary includes reports on the Negro soldier in combat troops, the infantry, chemical warfare units, and the signal, ordnance, medical, engineer, and transportation corps, many of which made military history.

One of the units outstanding in the beginning of the invasion was the 320th barrage balloon batt., the only American unit of its type used in Europe, and the only Negro combat unit to be in on the Normandy landing. Several casualties were suffered by it, and the 33rd and 96th field artillery battalions, the latter the only Negro artillery in Europe to receive a Presidential Distinguished Unit citation; also the 777th, 999th, and 578th field artilleries, who took part in bloody battles all the way from Normandy beachheads to the final conquest of the Rhineland. The 777th distinguished itself by firing the first American artillery round across the Rhine, near Munchen-Gladbach.

Considered the most brilliantly performing Negro unit in Europe was the 761st tank batt., the first colored tank unit to go into action, which the War dept. reports as being "consistently outstanding" in battle and excellence of morale. Another unit, the Third Platoon of Co. "C" of the 615th TD batt. received the Distinguished Unit citation for its capture of the town of Climbach, France, near the Siegfried Line, where it suffered over 50% casualties.

Twenty-two combat units, comprising under 9% of the 259,173 Negro troops who reported in Europe just after V-E Day, were used against the Wehrmacht.

INFANTRY

Nearly 3,000 Negro soldiers had but those who remained to provide screening for bridge-building operations across the Moselle, Roer, Saar, Neckar, and Rhine rivers won praise for work often done under heavy enemy fire that inflicted many casualties.

One of the greatest artificial fogs in military history was created last December by the all-Negro 161st chemical smoke co., when it shrouded the upper Saar river valley with a dense cloud of fog for two weeks, completely obscuring the movements of the entire 90th infantry.

ORDNANCE

Negro ordnancemen handled more than 4,500,000 of the 6,000,000 tons of ammunition on the continent between invasion and victory, and their 14,323 members made up 11% of the total ordnance personnel in Europe. They also participated in combat and in patrols. One non-combat ordnance co. earned the title the "fighting 56th," when its members engaged 51 German SS troops near the Belgian border early last September and killed 36 and wounded three Germans, and took the rest prisoner.

MEDICAL CORPS

Negro medical corpsmen at the front were "particularly outstanding" in their performance, the War department reports. Their 5,482 members formed 2.2% of the total ETO medical service strength.

Exemplifying their efficiency are the 428th medical battalion which evacuated over a million patients to rear lines, and the 592nd ambulance co. which hauled 230,000 patients and lost only two.

ENGINEER CORPS

Over one in every five of the 259,173 Negro troops in ETO was an engineer, making for 54,500 enlisted men, 320 officers, and 54 officers in a total of 337,000 in the theatre's engineer command. There were 165 engineer units, including general service regiments, engineer dump trucks cos., engineer fire-fighting units, aviation engineer battalions, and separate battalions, who participated in all of the main operations requiring engineering, from D-Day to the German surrender, Impressive also was the contribution by Negro transportation corps units which listed a total of 69,916 troops, or 44% of the total 157,327 transportation troops. Thirty-two of the 41 port battalions were Negro, while 38 out of 50 port companies in the theater were Negro, making a personnel total of 31,763 in all-Negro port units. Negro companies also comprised 316 of the 453 quartermaster truck companies.

What eventually became the greatest supply operation in military history was helped to its start by Negro troops of the transportation corps who came ashore with engineers brigades on D-Day. Units arriving early in the beachhead fighting were the 490th, 494th, and 502nd port battalions, who worked incessantly under direct artillery fire and strafing to unload cargo. "The job of unloading cargo at the beaches and the ports never stopped," the War department summary states. "Tonnage schedules were reached and exceeded. Unloading records were broken week after week."

By V-E Day, total U.S. Army cargo discharged by port units amountd to 20,432.368, and it is estimated that 77% of all port units operating at this time were Negro. 9-10-45

Negro port units also helped to develop Cherbourg and minor ports north of the Normandy peninsula. On Aug. 15, 10,000 long tons were discharged at Cherbourg in a single day by an unloading force that was "overwhelmingly Negro."

Sixty-nine percent of all truck drivers in the transportation corps' motor transport branch in ETO were Negro, a survey last May showed. This average remained much the same since the invasion, and some units have operated continuously since then.

The first motor express — the famous Red Ball Express — began in August, and drivers worked an average of 36 hours without sleep. At its peak Red Ball contained 67% Negro personnel, and carried 6,000 tons daily. Later established were the White Ball, ABC, XYZ, Yellow Ball, Green Diamond, Red Lion, B-B (Bayeux to Brussels), and Yellow Diamond lines, all important truck routes which combined to form the world's greatest to be rejected last December, because the response to a general appeal for volunteers to train as infantry riflemen exceeded the quota set for Negroes. Some 2,500 volunteers from Negro units were trained near Noyons, France, and went into action with the First and 7th armies.

Fighting alongside white troops, these men gave "an extraordinarily fine account of themselves in combat," earning many decorations for frontline heroism and winning respect from their white fellow-infantrymen, the War dept. summary states.

Lt. C. Hind of Los Angeles led a Negro platoon from the 273rd infantry regiment across the Elbe on V-E Day, as part of the first American unit to make contact with Russian forces. At least two members of this platoon received the Silver Star for gallantry in action. 9-10-45

Brigadier Gen. Charles T. Lanham, assistant commander of the 104th infantry division, paid tribute to these men after presenting combat decorations to 11 of them. "I have never seen any soldiers who have performed in combat than you," he said.

SIGNAL CORPS

Negro signal corps outfits, laying wire from Normandy, across France, Luxembourg, and Belgium. and deep into Germany, "made communications history." The 5,500 signal outfits comprised 7½% of the total corps personnel in Europe, and set up over 10,000 miles of open wire, over 500 miles of field wire, and over 500 miles of rubber and lead cable.

CHEMICAL WARFARE

Excellent performance is also recorded for the 2,422 Negro men and officers in the chemical warfare service troops stationed in Europe as of V-E Day, as well as for the 24th, 32nd, and 34th chemical decontamination units. Several of the smoke generator units were strafing were routine dangers for supply operation.

The Fighting 969th

Nashville Globe and Independent Nashville, Tennessee 9-7-45

"Among the heroes of the Bastogne fighting of last December were the members of the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, then attached to the 101st Airborne Division. It was this division which held the surrounded road junction for nine days during the 'Battle of the Bulge,' until General Patton's armor could open up a corridor for their relief. Their spirit was expressed in the famous reply of Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe to the German demand for surrender—the one word, 'Nuts.' For nine days these gunners, fighting as infantry, short of food and finally almost out of ammunition, helped stand off three German divisions. Yesterday the 969th received a Presidential citation. Soon, no doubt, they will be returning to this country, where, one hopes, their valor will be recognized as generally it was abroad. The 969th, though commanded by white officers, is a Negro outfit. If prejudiced persons continue to say that the Negro does not make a good and brave soldier the rank and file of the 969th will now have a ready answer. Officers and men, they all did honor to the land of their birth." (New York Times, August 3. 1945.)

969th Helped Make Bastogne History

Artillerymen Stuck To Guns; Made Jerry Keep Distance

Pittsburgh Courier - Pa.
2-3-45

WITH U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE—So close to German infantry that mortar bombs fell on them "like rain," men of the 969th Field Artillery Battallion, a Negro 155-mm. howitzer outfit, stuck to their guns and fired all around the compass during the defense of encircled Bastogne. The battalion, which landed in France last July, was attached to the 28th Infantry Division at the time of the German attack.

On the morning of Dec. 17, the battalion was informed by its forward observer that the Germans were moving in to attack. There was heavy artillery fire. "Then," said Capt. William J. Wood, communications officer, of Wichita Falls, Texas, "our communications went out. Jerry artillery knocked out damn near all communications in the whole sector. He seemed to know the location of every switchboard."

2-3-45

Unaware of the situation, the battalion moved back toward La Roche, where it was attached to an infantry group and ordered toward Neufchateau. Enemy tanks and infantry attacked from the east and south. Twice the battalion went into firing position to repel threats to the column.

MADE JERRY KEEP DISTANCE

Mortar fire and enemy artillery grew heavy. Other battalions in the artillery were knocked out. Under direction of the 101st Airborne Division, the 969th moved to Villeroux, where it set up its guns. Enemy tanks and infantry approached. With the help of a few scattered tanks and a handful of infantry, the 969th made Jerry keep his distance.

At one time the enemy was so close that the battalion commander ordered all classified material destroyed.

2-3-45

Enemy mortar fire grew even more intense. Small arms fire rained on the gun positions. Individual exploits were many. The battalion medics evacuated both German and American wounded under Jerry rifle fire. When the battalion aid station was destroyed by mortar fire, the aid men succeeded in rescuing all except the hopelessly wounded.

Corp. Mitchell Miles of Chielton Street, Montgomery, Ala., will never forget Villeroux. Standing beside his loaded gun, he narrowly escaped being killed by three mortar shells which exploded on the truck and set it on fire. Miles ran to a weapons carrier some distance away, brought it back, and while under heavy small arms fire, disengaged a loaded trailer from the burning kitchen truck and drove away.

It was well that he did. The contents of the trailer were badly needed by the artillerymen, who lived for several days afterwards on one-third of a K-ration per man per day.

The list of individual exploits is a long one. First Sgt. Mayo Crook, Hammond, La., did the work of ten men, his officers reported. He helped evacuate the wounded, destroyed classified material, rescued vehicles, and finally was cut off from his outfit by enemy fire, having to find his way out of town himself. He rejoined the battalion hours later.

Enemy pressure increased and casualties became heavier.

All except the actual cannoneers fought infantry fashion, and even succeeded in taking thirty or forty prisoners.

At last the battalion commander decided that the position at Villeroux was untenable. The batteries displaced to near Senonchamps. As the outfit began to pull out, one of the radio trucks was disabled by mortar fire. Through a hail of small arms fire, Sgt. Donald Corzo, Hodeenfield, N. J., went to the truck and destroyed all the signal equipment to prevent its falling into Jerry hands.

At Senonchamps the battalion prepared for a last stand. Because of casualties, all gun crews were reduced to the minimum. By this time it was obvious that the enemy was on all sides.

FIRED IN ALL DIRECTIONS

The battalion guns were set up to fire all around the circle. "We made two-gun platoons," explained Maj. James W. Melville, operations officer of Broken Bow, Neb, "and fired in all directions. We had targets everywhere—would have fired more ammunition than we'd used at Brest—if we'd had the stuff."

The guns were firing at ranges 1200 to 1500 yards—guns which normally have a gun range of 12,000 to 15,000 yards. The enemy was that close. "We took everything the Germans had to throw," said S/Sgt. Lloyd Wilkinson of Brooklyn, N. Y., "tanks, mortars, small arms fire. That mortar fire was like hail. I never thought that a 155 howitzer outfit would get that close to mortar fire. I don't know what we'd have done if it hadn't been for the help we got from that airborne infantry outfit. They're hot stuff; best outfit I know." A nondescript dog found shivering near the battalion CP was one factor which helped keen the men's spirits up. "Kaput," as he was christened, adopted the battalion at first sight. He is now the official mascot.

But while "Kaput" did his level best to keep morale up, constant Jerry pressure, combined with three terrific air bombardments—one on Christmas Eve—put the mettle of the battery to a severe test. It was hazardous to survey in the gun positions. On one occasion when Jerry machine-gun fire penned down the survey section, S/Sgt. Harry Quintyne, 295 W. 150th Street, New York City, crawled back, got a machine gun, destroyed one Kraut machine gun, and effectively pinned down the other until the survey was completed.

DESTROYS GUNS, TAKES PRISONERS

On another occasion, Sgt. Fred Colman, Messina, Ga., out of patience with an irritating Jerry machine gun, crawled out with one infantryman, destroyed the gun, and brought back five prisoners.

"The German fire was constant," said Capt. R. C. Coddington, S-2, of Sparta, Wis. "There was even a sniper whose special job seemed to be to try to pot one of us when we went to the latrine."

Amunition was a serious problem. Finally only clearly observed targets were fired upon, and one gun was used in place of a battery. And still Geran pressure increased. The trapped soldiers, infantry and artillery, fought on stubbornly.

Then the tide turned. C-47s appeared, dropping supplies of food and ammunition. The battalion displaced again, this time to the outskirts of Bastogne, to be in a position closer to the infantry. And then one morning, several days after Christmas, the battalion commander went to the 101st Airborne Division CP and found several of the Fourth Armored Division tanks there. The German ring had been broken, and broken by an outfit with whom the 969th had fought in the breakthrough across France.

The battalion, with its complement of white officers and Negro enlisted men, hit the Normandy beach on July 9 at part of VIII Corps artillery. Commanded by Lieut. Col. Herbert D. Barnes of Milwaukee, it supported the Eighth Infantry Division around La Haye du Puits, helped the Fourth Armored Division in the breakthrough near Rennes, then fired in support of the Eighth Division on the Brest Peninsula.

F. MUTE KILLED BY COPS IN LOUISVILLE

Afro-American

LOUISVILLE—(ANP) — Wil H. Johnson, 36, a deaf-mute, fatally shot while fleeing two policemen last week.

GI's Don't Understand Why They Can't Kiss Gretchen

Balt, Md.
Afro-American

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WEIMAR, Germany—The subject of fraternization is red-hot right now. Wherever soldiers—officers or enlisted men—gather for any length of time, somebody gets around to this delicate topic before long.

The sight of an attractive girl passing by may start the ball rolling. It may be the sight of a woman on the roadside, loaded down with all her worldly possessions, who begs for a ride.

Then again, it may be an invitation given a home-sick soldier by a German to eat a meal or have a drink.

Unfair Rule

But whatever the immediate cause of the discussion, the resulting conclusion is always the same—if the men I've listened to are to believed.

Every soldier who expressed an opinion to me said the non-fraternization rule should be rescinded! They say it is unfair. They say it is illogical because it cannot be enforced—like prohibition.

Perhaps by the time this reaches print, the soldiers may be allowed to fraternize to their heart's content. Perhaps, if the ruling is not lifted, the whole thing may in time work itself out satisfactorily.

But at the moment, here are the basic reasons for its unpopularity:

Penalizes Obedient

1. It penalizes the obedient soldier. In other words, a majority of GI's in the occupied zones will fraternize. Everybody knows it because everybody does it except a few conscientious men with amazing self-control.

The guys who don't care make the good soldiers look silly. They find girl friends; visit them every night; get smiles, cookies, wine and attention. The good guy gets laughed at.

2. The non-fraternization rule is said to have a direct bearing on the rise in VD cases. What happens is that a man who slips out for an evening of fun will not report to the prophylaxtic station when he slips back in.

German Opinion

Naturally not, because he would be offering himself for a court-martial. So he keeps whatever disease he has picked up, well hidden until he can hide it no longer and his health suffers.

Under ordinary circumstances, he would have gone to the PRO station and taken necessary precautions.

3. The fact that there is a rule and that the Germans see soldiers breaking it, lowers the civilian opinion of the whole allied army.

Since fraternization is going to take place, the sneaky way in which it is done certainly doesn't speak well for the ability of occupation authorities to maintain discipline.

7-21-45

"Why not let us take a walk with a girl, openly, instead of clandestinely?" the soldiers argue.

Morale Lowered

4. Morale is lowered by the non-fraternization rule, the officers say. The men are a long way from home, they are experiencing an emotional reaction after the strain of battle.

They feel that somebody high up has a conspiracy against them by forbidding them to speak to and mingle with civilians.

What it all amounts to, in my opinion, is that the men need to blow off steam. They want to celebrate. They want attention. They want to show off. They want a change, now that the war is over.

And they will tell you straight away that you can't celebrate, show off or feel you're getting attention unless you have women mixed up in the deal somewhere.

GI's Dissatisfied

So, it's the women—or the lack of women—that you can blame for the wholesale dissatisfaction.

In passing judgment on them, it should be remembered that many American GI's here now would be in high school or college at home if they were not in the Army.

They are young. They are so young they do not yet know how much peril lurks beneath the sweetness of the female of the species. In time they will know as we old-timers know.

But what good has it done us? A poll would reveal that the old-timers want a little fraternizing too.

7-29-45

Point System Means Little to Tan Yanks in Italy

Afro-American

By FRANCIS YANCEY
AFRO War Correspondent with 332nd Fighter Group in Italy
[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ITALY—To most tan yanks that I have talked with in and around this area, redeployment, the point system and discharge from the Army are just so many words they heard or read in service newspapers. 7-21-45

At the present time not more than 10 per cent of American troops leaving this sector are colored.

Most of the colored outfits here are general service units or engineering or quartermaster trucking companies, all with more than 20 months overseas service, but on a whole lacking enough battle participation stars points to hit the 85-point discharge mark.

Some to Return

This is particularly true of attached units servicing the 332nd Fighter Group. A few men from these units with over 85 points are being attached to a fighter group returning to the United States. 7-21-45

When the group returns this fall their original units will probably go direct to the Pacific.

The 332nd Fighter Group is now in a very slow process of being returned to the States. The 99th Fighter Squadron is still overloaded with enlisted men who have 110 points or over and have not as yet been alerted to go back to the rear redeployment staging areas for shipment home.

Kept Overseas

Although more than 100 enlisted men from the group have been returned to the States, latest reports show that over 90 per cent of the men in the squadron have enough points to go home yet instead of being detached and shipped home, these men are still being held along with the rest of the men in the 332nd, who, due to the relative short period of time overseas, lack the needed number of points for return to the States unattached and will be returned when the entire group is sent.

Deals Low Blow

Such a move will be a low blow to the 99th Squadron men, who deserve to be returned first for they have been through the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, whereas the 332nd Group men came into Italy from the length of overseas service as the States and do not have the same 99th. 7-21-45

The 332nd Fighter Group will soon move to a new field near Lucera in the Foggia area of Southern Italy. While in this staging area enlisted men with over 85 points from 910th Airbase Security Battalion, 1901 Quartermaster Trucking Company, and the 523rd Air Service Group will be attached to the 332nd for shipment to the States.

The following men from this area have left for the staging area, prior to their shipment home:

Sgts. Muron Blake, 4408 South St., Philadelphia; Herman Sharp, 1966 125th St., New York; William Roberts, 307 Grady St., New Haven, Conn; Ira Bryant, Portland, Maine; Jose Ireland, 428 108th St., New York; Milton James, Richmond, Va.; Herman Sutton, Dover, Del.; Roberts Whitman, St. Louis, Mo.; Oliver Cleveland, Chicago; Norman Johnston, Detroit, and Robert Littley, Newark, N.J.; Rise Williams, Bowling Green, Ky.; Howard Tucker.

Patton Refutes Eastland Slur

Atlanta Daily World

Officer Says Nothing Wrong With Our Boys

Georgia

7-19-45

MUNICH, Germany — (ANP) — Negro soldiers converted the two and one-half ton trucks into one of the army's best weapons during the struggle against Germany.

That praise was included in a letter written on May 10, by Gen. George S. Patton, 3rd army commander, to Col. Theodore J. Krokus of New York and men of the 514th QM group, of whom 80 percent are Negro soldiers.

FOLLOWS ATTACK

The letter was revealed by a white southerner officer following Sen. James O. Eastland's attack against Negro soldiers in the U. S. senate. He exhibited the letter because he wants "the folks back home" never to forget that it was the "colored boys like mine who drove that truck."

Gen. Patton's letter read:

"The tasks which have been placed upon your shoulders during this history-making campaign have been almost superhuman. You have rolled your trucks through mud and snow and sleet and rain.... You have fought side by side with the armor. You never failed me.

"Only by your most steadfast devotion to duty and your untiring effort was it possible for our long supply to keep pace with the units at the front. Your valiant efforts during the closing six months of this conflict have fully confirmed my statement t you of last October—the two and one-ralf ton truck is our most valuable weapon."

Most of the 9,000 men of the 514th Quartermaster group drive trucks, the officer said. Of that number, 80 per cent or over 7,000, are Negroes. He estimated that at least five of the trucking companies in this group are composed entirely of Negroes, including officers up to the rank of company commander. There are other all-Negro companies with white officers. 7-19-45

VOICES AGREEMENT

"There is nothing wrong with the colored soldier that decent education and decent education and decent treatment couldn't fix," he said in voicing his disagreement with Sen. Eastland's stand.

The Mississippi senator also charged that Senegalese troops raped 5,000 German women in a subway but an intensive probe has proved that no official record exits of such a mass rape.

Army officials have disclosed that stern methods were used to discourage rape after the American break-through into Germany. At Frankfurt, 1,2000 men were imprisoned at a stockade there on rape charges but only 20 were Negroes. Most of these charges were dismissed for lack of evidence.

French Officers Debunk Eastland's Attack Story

Balt., Md.

Afro-American

STUTTGART, Germany (ANP) —French Army officials here have completely debunked Sen. James O. Eastland's charges that Senegalese troops criminally assaulted German women in a local subway.

First of all, there is no subway here and no report has been made of a mass attack in the huge unfinished tunnel that is capable of holding 12,000 to 15,000 people.

Charges Fantastic

Lt. Gen. Augustin Lion Guillaumo, the French officer in command here, termed Senator Eastland's charges against the Senegalese troops "irresponsible and fantastic."

Stating that this place was the capital of the Nazis' Association of Germans Abroad, an organization devoted to spreading discord among the Allies and peoples of Allied nations, the general said he wondered whether Senator Eastland had been "a belated victim of this association's propaganda."

Only 1500 Cases on Record

Investigation revealed that this city was captured by a large body of Tunisians and Moroccans, and that there were only a few Senegalese among them. 7-20-45

Max Weber, local German police chief, said that only 1500 attack cases were on record and these involved white French troops as well as colored. He also said that the people of Stuttgart have no resentment against colored American soldiers.

British Girls 'Hysterical' As Negro Troops Depart

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Sunday Pictorial in a front-page story today reported a "hysterical" demonstration by British girls over the departure of American Negro soldiers from Bristol.

A Bristol police information official said "an incident occurred" when "a number of young women crowded the railroad station to say good-by to their friends." Army public relations in London said the "matter was purely social and was not reported to us."

The Pictorial story said:

"The scene was Bristol, most English of all English cities. The time was 2 a.m., yesterday. The actors were a mob of screaming girls aged between 17 and 25.

4 Companies Leave.

"Their hysteria was caused by the news that four companies of American Negro soldiers in the city were leaving for home.

"The girls besieged the barracks where the soldiers were and began singing 'Don't Fence Me In.'

"This was too much for the colored men, who began to break down the barbed wire surrounding their quarters. In a few minutes hundreds of girls and U. S. soldiers were kissing and embracing."

Girls Sob In Rain.

The story related that the girls sobbed as trucks took the soldiers to the station, and police attempted to persuade the girls to go home.

"Most of them had been waiting since 7 p.m., the night before, and although it was pouring rain they decided to wait," the story said.

"'I don't mind getting wet,' said one 18-year-old girl. 'I intend to give my sweetie a good send-off.'"

56n-1945 European Foreign Service

'OUR BOYS' FOUGHT IN ALL MAJOR BATTLES

Pittsburgh Courier Feb. 27.

5-12-45

NEGRO AMERICA . . . 15,000,000 strong . . . played an important role in the "unconditional surrender" of Germany, officially announced Tuesday morning of this week by President Truman in Washington, D.C., Marshal Stalin in Moscow and Prime Minister Churchill in London. On the home front they have worked in the mills, in the factories and on the farms. They purchased War Bonds and proudly sent their sons and sweethearts abroad to fight for a "living democracy." And these lads acquitted themselves nobly.

From North Africa through Sicily and into Italy . . . from the Normandy Beachhead to the historic Elbe River . . . Negro troops have fought and toiled, bled and died, to wipe out the insult of Adolf Hitler and to purge the world of the Nazi philosophy of a "superior race."

(Playing a major part in the final capitulation of Germany were Felix Eboue's "Black Devils," who stormed through the snowcapped Alpine crags to be the first troops of the Allied Nations to reach Hitler's 'eagle's nest' at Berchtesgaden . . . poetic retribution!)

5-12-45

On land, on sea, and in the air, Negro troops joined in the all-out war . . . a war which saw Benito Mussolini, the "Sawdust Caesar," return to the gutter, in ignoble death, from which he had risen. Negro troops wrote glorious chapters in the names which are now legion for World War II.

OUR BOYS WERE WHEREVER THE FIGHTING WAS TOUGH 5-12-45

Remember Bastogne, the Ardennes, St. Malo, St. Laurient, Metz, Tunis, Salerno?

Remember Naples, the Roer, Rhine and Mosselle river offensive, Brest, the Elbe?

Wherever the fighting was heaviest, wherever the sacrifices were greatest, there you would find our boys!

Of the officially announced Negro strength of 690,282 in the Armed Services, the War Department stated 497,566 are overseas. It is believed that a major portion of these men are on European soil.

And of those fighting on European soil, The Courier files reveal the following pertinent information:

578TH FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION:

Participated in the battle of the Ardennes.

969TH FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION:

Played a major role in the fall of St. Malo and the Bastogne breakthrough. One gun in Baker Battery knocked out an entire town, shot by shot, house by house.

333RD FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION:

Suffered heavy casualties in the battle of the Ardennes, as they helped stop General Rundstedt's offensive last December. This was the first FA unit to land in France on June 29, participating in the Normandy campaign, La Haye de Puits, citadel of St. Malo and St. Laurient and the siege of Brest.

758TH LIGHT TANK BATTALION:

This was the first such group activated in the USA and they saw plenty of action in the European Theatre.

761ST TANK BATTALION:

First to be committed in the war on the Western Front. On Oct. 21, 1944, they were attached to General Patton's Third Army. They helped to relieve the pressure on beleagured Bastogne.

614TH TANK DESTROYER BATTALION:

They saw action from France to the Rhine. They fought with General Patton's Third Army and General Patch's Seventh Army.

320TH ANTI-AIRCRAFT BARRAGE BALLOON BATTALION:

First Negro offensive unit to be decorated as a unit by General Eisenhower. They provided protective cover in initial D-Day invasion. Also aided General Hodges' First Army in Hurtgen Forest and Roer river offensives, which broke through Siegfried line.

452ND ANTI-AIRCRAFT ARTILLERY:

Attached to the Third Army under General Patton, they put up a terrific flat trajectory fire to pulverize pill boxes on the Siegfried line.

514TH QUARTERMASTER GROUP:

Composed of thirty-five Negro companies, they supplied General Patton's fast-moving Third Army and did a magnificent job in keeping supplies rolling. They won battle praise and made transportation history.

999TH FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION

They fired the huge "Long Toms" with the Fifteenth Corps of the Seventh U. S. Army.

777TH FIELD ARTILLERY:

They played an heroic role in the crossing of the muddy Roer river. 5-12-45

Also commanding special attention was the work of the chemical smoke generator units which laid down blanket-like man-made fog to protect Allied forces during the fighting around Metz, during the crossing of the Moselle, the Roer and the Rhine rivers. These units, always under intensive German shelling, suffered heavy casualties.

FAMOUS 92ND DIVISION

Then there is the famous 92nd Infantry Division under Gen. Mark Clark. Fighting on talian soil under severe handicaps, both as to terrain and as regards morale, this division (second all-Negro combat division of World War II), they collected seven awards of the Legion of Merit, sixty-five Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals, 5,991 Combat Infantrymen Badges and 1,377 Purple Hearts. They have been in continuous combat since October, 1944.

Standing as a monument of progress and achievement is the 99th Pirsuit Squadron, first all-Negro air unit sent overseas. Under the command of Colonel B. O. Davis Jr., with the eyes of the entire world world upon them, left the States April 2, 1943, flying its first combat mission two months later.

BAG 12 PLANES IN TWO DAYS 5-12-45

Their biggest day came early last year in action over the Anzio-Nettuna beachhead, when they bagged a total of 12 planes in two days of flying.

Shortly after this, they were absorbed by the 332nd Fighter Group, the first All-Negro fighter group, still under the command of Colonel Davis. This group flew its 300th mission just a few days before hostilities ended. They have destroyed more than 100 planes in aerial battles, wiped out twice that number in strafing sorties. Their biggest day was 17 enemy planes shot down during the invasion of Southern France. Sixty-five of the men wear DFCs, one member wears the Legion of Merit Award and 300 others wear the Air Medal and Oak Leaf Clusters.

When they heard that the war in Europe was over, one of the members asked:

"How soon do we go to China!"

SERVICE UNITS DESERVE CREDIT

Also coming in for well-deserved recognition are the great number of service units, including the soldiers who manned the amphibious trucks that brought supplies ashore on D-Day; those who unloaded ships, the truckers who hauled ammunition, the engineers who built the bridges and the roads over which the combat troops passed.

Notable among these quartermaster units was the illustrious "Red Ball" truck convoy group, cited by General Eisenhower. 5-12-45

FOR COURAGE AND VALOR

These men and many others were among those who heard these words: "For courage and valor in action, above and beyond the call of duty" . . . "Distinguished devotion to duty" . . . "Disregard of personal safety" . . . "Conspicuous gallantry" . . . "Meritorious conduct."

And these citations proved only too clearly how our fighting men conducted themselves during the war in Europe.

It gives added proof to the justice of the fight which Negro newspapers carried on for full integration of the Negro soldier into every branch of the armed services.

The Pittsburgh Courier takes pardonable pride in the part this newspaper played in that epochal fight. 5-12-45

Well do we remember the morning in April, 1938, when the late Robert L. Vann, then editor-publisher of this newspaper, visited the White House and sought the aid of the late President Roosevelt in abolishing jim crow in the ranks of the Army.

As long ago as that . . . more than seven years now . . . The Pittsburgh Courier sensed that there would be another World War.

And we were determined that Negro boys must not be subjected to the treatment they had received in the other world war. Then, with the exception of three artillery regiments (the 349th, 350th, 351st), all other Negro troops were relegated to infantry outfits.

Those who remember World War I will remember that the Ninety-second Division was composed of the 365th, 366th, 267th and 268th Regiments. The division was under the command of Maj. Gen. C. C. Ballou. They were activated at Des Moines, Iowa, and went overseas for further training.

Of the other famous Negro outfits, the 369th (Fifteenth of New York) were brigaded with the French, carried their own colors into battle, saw the longest service and suffered sixty per cent casualties. The 370th was brigaded with the Belgians. This was the old Eighth Illinois. The 371st and the 372nd were also brigaded with the French.

What happened?

We fought for a Negro division. (President Roosevelt gave us two . . . the Ninety-third, now in the South Pacific, and the Ninety-second.) 5-12-45

We fought for the advance of Negroes above the role of messmen in the U.S. Navy. Result? Today we have Negro naval officers and Negroes serving in all branches of the Navy, including the Coast Guard and the Marines.

We fought for Negroes in all branches of the Army. As the war in Europe ended, a glance at the units listed above will show how complete our victory was.

And so . . . with V-E Day come and gone, we celebrate with the rest of these United States, firm in the belief that "our boys" have proved that courage knows no color and that valor is without prejudice.

Negro GIs Bask in Riviera Sun

Detroit Free Press

ON THE RIVIERA—Each week more than 1,500 Negro troops arrive at Nice, capital of the Riviera, for a seven-day vacation as guests of the United States Army.

Coming straight from bomb-shattered buildings and scenes of reconstruction in Berlin's suburbs, Belgium, Holland and France, these soldiers find themselves living in dazzling white palace hotels, visiting the gay spots and going on interesting sight-seeing tours of historical interest. 7-29-45

A city most GIs have seen on tour is Grasse, a sweet-scented town known for its perfume industry, where over 62,000 acres of the countryside are devoted to the cultivation of violets, tuberoses, mignonettes, jonquils and carnations.

Detroit, Mich.

AFTER TYPICALLY French meals, soldiers perch themselves under beach umbrellas and watch the crashing waves of the Mediterranean, take evening rides through the city's boulevards in horse-drawn taxi-carriages, or paddle down the avenues on French bicycles.

Tank Unit, 24th Win High Praise

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45

WASHINGTON — Two Negro units were cited by Undersecretary of War Patterson in his press conference last Thursday for their success in combat.

As an example of the success of Negro troops Undersecretary Patterson read an excerpt from a report of Corps Commander Maj. Gen. M. S. Eddy, on the activity of the 761st Tank Battalion in Europe, which stated:

"The speed with which they adapted themselves to the front line under most adverse weather conditions, the gallantry with which they faced some of Germany's finest troops, and the confidant spirit with which they emerged from their recent engagements in the vicinity of Dieuze, Morville Les Vic and Guebling entitle them surely to consider themselves the 'veteran 761st'." 6-2-45

TWENTY-FOURTH INFANTRY OUTSTANDING

Explaining that it was unusual to single out any one outfit, the inspector general's report, as read in part by Undersecretary Patterson, declared that "the conduct of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment as observed on Saipan was so meritorious as to be deemed worthy of special mention."

The report said that the Twenty-fourth Infantry is undertaking the task of clearing Saipan in a mopping up procedure during which it has "killed or captured an impressive number of the enemy, and even today is engaged in continuous patrolling and jungle fighting.

"The morale of this regiment is high, its discipline is excellent, and it has definitely demonstrated what can be accomplished with Negro soldiers," according to the report as read by Undersecretary Patterson.

An interesting sidelight on the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment is the course of its movement in this war. Chronological history of this movement is as follows:

TROOP CHRONOLOGY

Dec. 2, 1941—Departed from maneuvers, Carolina area, arriving next day at Fort Benning.

May 4, 1942—Arrived at New Hebrides, South Pacific.

July 17, 1943—(Less First and Second Battalions). Transferred to Guadalcanal, and assigned to Fourteen Corps, Third Battalion, embarked at Havannah Harbor; remainder at Vila.

July 21, 1943—Eleven officers and 182 enlisted men as cadre, returned to Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

October 18, 1943—Reorganized (less Cannon Company).

May 1, 1944—Third Battalion reorganized at New Georgia.

May 15, 1944—Second Battalion reorganized at Guadalcanal; First Battalion reorganized at Bouganville.

June 27, 1944—Arrived Russell Island.

Dec. 19, 1944—Regiment (less First Battalion) arrived Saipan.

Dec. 20, 1944—First Battalion arrived Tinian.

March 15, 1945—Assigned Pacific Ocean Area.

Negroes fight with 78th East of the Rhine river

Los Angeles Tribune Calif. 4-30-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The volunteer Negro Infantrymen who joined the 78th "Lightning" division, crossed the Rhine and entered the hot battle then in progress, have established themselves as fighting men no less courageous or aggressive than their white comrades, according to a War Department release today. 4-30-45

The "Tan" doughs welcomed the opportunity to fight alongside their white buddies of the 78th, the War Department said. The 78th is the outfit that gained no small share of fame by smashing all the way through the Siegfried Line to capture Schmidt and the Schwammenauel Dam. It was the 78th which leaped from the Roer to the Rhine where the First battalion of the 310th regiment crossed the Ludendorf bridge to secure and enlarge the trans-Rhine bridgehead.

The 78th, as did several other infantry divisions on the Western Front, recently received three platoons of Negro doughboys. One platoon was assigned to each of the 78th's infantry regiments, the 309th, 310th and 311th.

Among the first Negro troops to engage in combat east of the Rhine, men of these platoons came from quartermaster, engineer, and transportation corps units. Most of them took reductions in grade to become fighting privates in foxholes. 4-30-45

Following is the War Department Public Relations bureau's own account by regiments of the activities of these platoons:

"The platoon assigned to F Company of the 309th regiment did a swell job in the capture of Honnef, on the west and south banks of the Sieg River, deep in the Remagen bridgehead.

"They followed tanks into the city and wasted no time in cleaning up their assigned objectives.

"Lt. John M. Green, platoon leader from Nashville, asserted, 'They are aggressive and eager, and when they see a Jerry they want to go after him. I'm well pleased with their performance under fire.'

"Pvt. William Blackwell, platoon runner from White Plains, N. Y., shot a running German with his M-1 from a distance of 500 yards.

"Lt. Green, who helped with the training of the platoon, said he had difficulty in confining his men to their objectives. Seeing there were Germans still in front of them they wanted to go ahead even after they had captured and cleaned out all sections of the town that they had been assigned.

"Pfc. Harold Chandler, of New York City, who took a break to private from staff sergeant, volunteered to go and get an unknown number of Germans spotted in dug-in positions near a house.

"Armed with grenades and his M-1, Chandler advanced alone while his men covered him. Six Jerries, armed with Burke guns, gave up and came back with Chandler.

"Pfc. Vincent R. Malveaux, who took a reduction from first sergeant to private, drew praise from his platoon leader for cool-headed work in helping to get the men out from under a mortar barrage. Malveaux was an attorney in Washington before entering the service.

"Negro troops assigned to A Company of the 310th Regiment won the praise and respect of officers and enlisted men fighting with them in the Remagen bridgehead, the War Department release said. 4-30-45

They are referred to as 'the fightingest sons-a-guns you ever saw.'

"Lt. Millard G. Durham, company commander from Steger, Ill., says, 'The colored troops, in all engagements, proved to be as courageous and aggressive as the veterans of any other company.

"Their first engagement was a terrific small arms battle. They never faltered. On the contrary, they were hard to control. Their sole desire seemed to be to close with the enemy, regardless of the scheme of maneuver. It was difficult to hold them on the company objective when there was an enemy in front of them.

"After fighting for two days the platoon suffered its first serious casualty when one member was killed in a fire fight.

"The platoon assigned to G Company of the 311th Regiment also has done well.

"At the end of a week's fighting one had been killed and nine wounded out of the original platoon strength of 43.

"Pvt. George Hutchinson, of Brenham, Tex., who had been overseas for 18 months, said, 'The infantry is a heck of a lot better than some of the service outfits we have been in. Here a man's a man.'

"Most of the men of G Company, fifth platoon, have had from 14 to 24 months' service overseas. All have received the combat infantryman badge.

"Capt. George Foelsch, company commander from Astoria, L. I., said, 'They're making out all right. I told the colonel if he had any more I'll surely take them'."

Germans Urge Men To Desert

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. 3-10-45

Not A Single Man Leaves Battle Post; Home Front Blamed

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—The Nazis continue to shower frontline American Negro troops with propaganda leaflets playing on America's touchy race question, but still as far as our troops are concerned the leaflets are merely more amusing souvenirs.

JORDAN

For about six months the Germans used its cleverest propaganda on Negro infantrymen, but there's no record of an American Negro soldier ever deserting to the enemy.

'JERRY" PROMISES

Twice last week the Germans dropped leaflets deploring the treatment of Negroes in America and pointing to the wisdom of the Negro soldier coming over to the German side for peace and happiness and claiming, 'Jerry gives all colored men a break and treats them square." 3-10-45

The resistance of the Negro soldier to Hitler's propaganda is another proof of the Negro's faith in American principles and reflects his hope for a future share in true democracy.

SOLDIERS BITTER

Soldiers denounce the War Department's policy of segregating units from the same country. In the infantry discrimination complaints are more prevalent among Negro officers who insist they are promoted too slowly and that they are transferred on account of policy to positions where advancement is most difficult.

Officers also gripe about the disadvantage of the old policy of not having a Negro officer outrank white officers serving in the same units.

BIAS CHIEF GRIPE

To say there is no race sensitiveness among Negro troops in the Mediterranean Theatre of Operations would be inaccurate. The fact remains that the chief gripe among Negro troops is alleged racial discriminations. This holds true for all the many Negro units this correspondent visited in the past nine months.

Infantry officers point to many court martial cases against Negro officers. Complaints are not confined to a disgruntled few but are voiced by a majority.

No definite assertion can be made that racial friction has impaired fighting efficiency in battle, but there is no telling when it might, especially if it continues to grow.

Meanwhile Negro troops continue fighting—handicapped by Germans in front and race trouble in the rear.

BLAME HOME FRONT

The soldiers largely blame the home front, realizing "you can't turn old racial customs off and on like a light bulb."

Despite the racial situation, German propaganda continues and will continue to fall on deaf ears for Negro troops know too well Hitler's race policy.

Joe Louis once neatly summed up the situation: "There is nothing wrong with America that Hitler can fix."

Negro Soldiers, British Officials Honor Lincoln

2-24-45 Daily Worker N.Y.

American Negro soldiers of the Air Service Command's Combat Wing joined with ojcials of the city of Manchester, England, on Feb. 12 to commemorate the birth of the "great emancipator," President Abraham Lincoln, 136 years ago.

Laying a wreath before the Lincoln statue in Platt Fields Park, the soldiers recalled a demonstration by Lancashire citizens which Lincoln called "an instance of sublime Christian heroism which has not been surpassed in any age or in any country." 2-24-45

That was when thousands of Manchester cotton workers on New Year's Eve, 1862, although unemployed because of the union blockade of the Slave South during the Civil War, drafted a letter to Lincoln affirming "the secred and inalienable right of every human being to personal freedom."

The wreath the Americans placed on Lincoln's statue bore the inscription, "Inspired by your zeal and leadership in the cause of freedom, we shall maintain the fight to liberate the world from tyranny."

Pictured above, left to right, are the Mayor's messenger; Pvt. Hurdie A. McPherson of Atlanta, Ga.; George Armstrong, American Consul in Manchester; Cpl. George L. Jackson, Martins Ferry, O.; the Lord Mayor, Councilor W. P. Jackson; Sgt. Powell Woodson, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Pvt. First Class John N. Johnson, Pittsburgh.

Commenting on the action of the Manchester workers in support of the North in the Civil War, Karl Marx wrote: "This is a new, brilliant prof of the indestructible excellence of the English popular masses, of that excellence which is the secret of England's greatness. . . ." (The Civil War in the United States—page 141.)

Daily Worker New York 2-24-45 p. 4

SHELL FLEEING NAZIS IN SMALL RHINE POCKET

Chicago Defender 2-10-45

Defender Scribe Sees Crack Gunners Blast Foe In Alsace

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE FIRST FRENCH ARMY NEAR COLMAR—The Negro heroes of Bastogne have done it again!

Here in the bitter cold and deep snows just above the Swiss frontier I have watched the 969th field artillery battalion, fresh from the courageous defense of Bastogne in mid-December, closing in on the city of Colmar which is now in Allied hands.

They were one of the two Negro artillery outfits that aided in the final freeing of the big Alsatian city and the cleaning out of the last large pocket west of the Rhine held by the Germans.

The units were part of an American artillery group supporting the 3rd and 28th Infantry Divisions operating with the French army.

Cut Off Germans

Out on the open plain of Alsace, the 969th has its 155 mm. howitzers trained on bridges and escape routes eastward across the Rhine, cutting off completely Germans fleeing the pocket.

I watched the defenders of Bastogne, who turned their guns in all directions when they were besieged in the Belgian city, as they shelled the outskirts of Colmar while infantry approached the city. It wasn't long before the city was ours.

The other artillery outfit here is the 999th battalion, whose effective firing aided in the lightning drive at Mantes and Gassicourt, establishing and holding a bridgehead at the Seine River in late August while three other Negro artillery battalions were blasting Brest.

Little Sleep

From vantage points in the Vosges Mountains and foothills, I watched our shells cascading down into the tableflat snow-covered Rhine plain. That's just how close we were.

The night before we moved up, Pvt. Russes Nesbitt of Kansas City, Mo., a graduate pharmacist from Kansas university and I shared a loft in an Alsatian farmhouse which was blasted windowless, five hundred yards in front of the battery.

Between the battery shaking the loft and the blasting of enemy shells dropping around, there was no sleep.

The "Triple 9" battalion landed in France last July and has seen continuous action since.

Accompanies Patton

Its first conflict with the enemy occurred south of St. Lo in the Normandy hedgerow land in late July. Subsequently it pursued the Germans across France, being the only Negro artillery outfit making the galloping trek with General George Patton's Third Army.

The sole officers are Capt. Harmon Perry, medical officer, of Port Chester, N. Y., and two warrant officers, William P. Smith of East Orange, N. J., and Herschel A. Davis of New Orleans, La.

Chicagoans seen were Sgt. Roy Woods, William Sledge, 223 E. Fifty-third street; Philip M. Gant, 6400 Indiana avenue; David M. Collier, 5300 Michigan avenue; Lorenzo Smith, 5243 South Parkway.

How effective the unit has been is expressed in the words of Cpl. Joseph Taylor of 700 Oakwood boulevard, Chicago, former Florida A. and M. college instructor, who said: "Our service have been requested from every unit and shortly after we arrive, it's not long before we have finished the job."

Bearing out this statement, a French courier came into the command post with greetings from Colonel Gerolamic, commanding the second corps of the First French Army.

"When the 999th leaves, I must tell you all the satisfaction I have had to have you as the most effective firing eye I have had under my command," said the message.

Truck Route Gained Fame Through Feat of Tan GI's

AFRO-American Balt., Md. 2-10-45

Unsung Heroes Literally Lived in Jeeps, Braved Enemy Fire to Keep Army Supplied

By SGT. PEYTON GRAY

FRANCE—Finis to the colorful career of one of the most important units featured in World War II was written recently when an official Army edict ordered the disbanding of the famed Red Ball Express trucking route in France.

At all hours of the day and night, through rain, dust clouds, heavy, fog and more recently, thousands of GIs "pushed" their 6 x 6s over the 700 mile priorty road network rushing food, gas and ammunition from the French coast to the Eastern Front.

Driving was not all these men had to do with trucks. These heavy rumbling vehicles meant just about everything to their masters who actually lived in them.

Many a cat nap was caught in the cab of a 6 x 6 parked under a tree for protection from strafing enemy planes. Many an hour's sleep was obtained in the cold steel trailers behind. The men carried their duffle bags, crammel to the top "with all I own" fastened on a front fender.

Literally Lived In Trucks

These trucks were also the kitchenette. Ofttimes a driver heated his can of c rations under the closed hood over the motor. At other times they munched K rations while perched on the running board or tail gate as their vehicles were being loaded, unloaded or primed for another run.

In addition to checking his gas, oil and tires before starting on a trip, the average driver also tightened the ropes on his duffle bags and saw to it that a can of water and a box of either C, K or 10-in-1 rations were on the truck.

True, driving is not as hard as performing some of the other Army duties. But's it's tiring. The oil and gas fumes, the constant bumping along French second-grade roads does not at all give one the feeling of riding in a luxury car back home.

Open to Enemy Attack

Added to these discomforts are the personal dangers attached to trucking in a war-swept country. Many a convoy has been strafed by Jerries darting out of the skies in an effort to sever the supply lines of the fast advancing Allied forces.

Innumerable times German artillery shells and boms fell a few yards behind or in front of a line of trucks loaded with vital necessities.

But few have been the awards or letters of commendations given these unsung heroes who in their own way were giving as much to win the war, their all, as the infantryman, armored tankman or dive bomber pilot.

Many Narrow Escapes

For narrow escapes, take the story of Cpl. Sam Penn, 25, of Mobile, Ala., who while operating a rolling ammunition supply stock between a tank unit and infantrymen thought his time was up. Cpl. Penn said he had just crossed a bridge in the Aranches area when a Nazi shell dropped about fifty yards away in a field.

Penn is married, childless, has been in the Army 21 months, a year of which was spent in the States. He had driven over 8,000 miles of French roads hauling Nazi prisoners, ammo and rations.

Pvt. Charles Anthony, Syracuse, N.Y., also had a narrow escape during the same Allied drive in the Normandy campaign. His convoy, strafed one night, Anthony seized his rifle leaped from the truck and headed for the cover of a nearby tree. En route, a bit of bursting shrapnel cut the leather rifle strap. Anthony, however, was not touched.

Some Colored Officers

Some of the Red Ball Express have colored officers, and one, I learned, has a complete staff of colored officers from the commanding officer, Capt. Henry T. Twigg, Tennessee, on down. His staff includes First Lts. Reed S. Banks, Miss., and David Howard, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Second Lts. Bertram C. Bland, Newark, N.J., and Richard Boyd, Indianapolis, Ind.

The outfit I visited turned out to be one of the first Army units I wrote up back at Camp Holabird, in Baltimore, three years ago. Since then they've been stationed in Long Island, Fort Meade and then were shipped to England in the spring of 1944 where they hauled troops and supplies up to the D-Day invasion.

The C. O., Capt. C. M. Morris, 29, white, is a former Brooklyn, N.Y., insurance man. His four colored officers and the enlisted men have the greatest respect for him and he for them.

his crackerjack New Jersey baseball team. 2-10-45

The other officers are First Lts. Fred J. Dorsey, 23, Pittsburgh, and Harold N. Arnold, 29, Atlanta; Second Lts. Bedford T. Bentley, 27, Chicago, and Wiley T. Brown, 24, Bridgewood, N. J.

Willing to furnish info about Captain Morris boasts of having "made" the AFRO several years ago when as adjutant of a quartermaster battalion, he posed with Function-n a job to do. o-operation and has resulted in t martials? and morale.

Other Officers in Unit

s in Unit

the unit, but reluctant to talk about himself, Lt. Arnold, I learned, graduated from Morehouse College in 1937 with Vincent Tubbs, AFRO war correspondent. He belongs to the Omega Psi Phi fraternity and was an outstanding tennis player.

Brother, Sister in States

His brother, Marshall, is a present physical director at Morehouse, while a sister, Miss Edith Arnold, is Girl Reserve secretary at the Wilmington, Del., YW. She was at one time the girls' interscholastic tennis champion.

The unit's topkick is 1st Sgt. William H. Brooks of Bronx, N.Y., a veteran of eighteen years' service, having soldiered with the 25th Infantry in Texas, served in Arizona and also put in two years in the Philippines. He expects to retire on a pension in a few years.

Sgt. Brooks' closest shave of World War II came when a Jerry sentry halted him late one night while jeeping along a wrong road. Recognizing the German accent, cut loose with a few rounds from his .45, ducked low and mashed the accelerator to the floor with Nazi bullets whizzing over his head. 2-10-45

Capture Nine Germans

On another occasion he aided in the capture of nine Germans surrounded in a patch of woods. More than 50 per cent of the original men are still in the unit. I learned that the company has sent three men to OCS.

Two of the non-coms, S/Sgt. William H. McMorris, 25, Glen Cove, L.I., a platoon sergeant, and Cpl. James M. Suddeth, Akron, O., have been recommended for the Bronze Star Award. Final action is pending. 2-10-45

The unit has five "old soldiers" with a total of 80 years' service. In addition to Sgt. Brooks, they are Sgt. Peter Thomas, 38, Washington, D.C., 20 years' service, 10 as chauffeur for the chief of engineers in Washington; T/4 Kelly V. Daniels, 34, Coffield, N.C., 15 years; T/5 D. H. Forbes, 37, Kansas City, Kansas, 15 years, and Pvt. Leonard B. Johnson, Boston, Mass., 12 years.

Brother-team honors are held by T/4 Kelly Daniels and T/5 Albert Daniels, 29, both of whom served in a Fort Belvoir engineer unit. Albert has six years of service in his record.

Includes Many Easterners:

An outstanding musician is T/5 Harry R. Bond of Philadelphia, who as a guitarist had a 5-piece band in the city.

I found 51 volunteers and regular Army men from 23 States and the District. 2-10-45

The easterners:

DELAWARE

Pfc. Frank Williams, Seaford; Sgt. Wilburn L. Hawkins, Wilmington.

LONG ISLAND

Pvt. John R. Stancil, Glen Cove, Pvt. P J. Armstrong, Ranville; S/Sgt. William H. McMorris, Glen Cove.

MASSACHUSETTS

Pvt. Leonard B. Johnson, Boston

MARYLAND

T/Sgt. Richard C. Harris, 1314 Mc. Culloh Street., Baltimore; Cpl. Ralph M. Gibson, Annapolis; Cpl. William S Taylor, Salisbury; Cpl. John E. Teagle, Baltimore; T/5 Charels H. Ambush, Frederick; T/5 Henry J. Brown, Baltimore; T/5 Walter E. Jones, Baltimore; Pfc. Althomas McDowell, Baltimore; Pvt. Warren Dailey, Frederick; Earl W. Simms, Cumberland; T/5 Charles E. Hurd, Frederick.

NORTH CAROLINA

T/4 Kelly V. Daniel, T/5 Albert D. Daniel, Coffield; T/5 Oscar Lee, Littleton; T/5 Ithel Sharpe, Ranlo; Pvt. Jethro King, Warrenton; Pvt. Hugh E. Cassady, Southern Pines; Pvt. James P. Shipman, Clarkton; Cpl. Julian B. Foster, Greensboro.

NEW JERSEY

Pvt. Gary Grant, Jr., Plainfield

NEW YORK

T/5 Edward Williams, NYC; First Sgt. William H. Brooks, Bronx; Cpl. John E Hurt, Cpl. Lewis H. Stafford, and T/5 Robert E. Holland, all of NYC.

PENNSYLVANIA

T/5 Wilson E. Pearle, Washington; T/5 Preston L. Pope, Phila.; T/5 Ralph Stroud, Pittsburgh; T/4 Madison Williams, Philadelphia; Pfc. Edward Acrie, Pittsburgh; Pfc. John D. Davis, Harrisburg; Pfc. Ben R. Williams, Philadelphia; Pvt. Cromwell Alston, Pittsburgh; Pvt. Leroy Bingham; Pvt. Lou Garrison, both, Philadelphia; Pvt. Eugene Grooms, Pittsburgh; Pvt. Lester Kennedy, Philadelphia;

/Sgt. Edward Drudup, Jr., Philadelphia; Sgt. Henry W. Hayes, Sgt. Charles E. Lewis, T/4 Charles T. Dennis, T/4 Enos S. Hill, Jr., Cpl. Arthur Bagley, Cpl. William T. Davis, Cpl. Arthur V. Hughes, T/5 Harry R. Bond, T/4 Joseph T. Carvolko, T/5 Theodore O Harris, all Philadelphia; T/5 Abraham Irvin, Pittsburgh; Cpl. Robert S. Leftwich, Cpl. Ralph Rob, T/5 Moses R. Dixon, all Washington; Newton E. Stoner, Sr., Makersburg.

SOUTH CAROLINA

T/5 Charlie Sims, Union; T/5 James Walker, Fountain Inn; T/5 Samuel D. Watson, Greensboro; Pvt. Eugene S. Walker, Greensboro; Pvt. Leff Welchell, T/5 George Gorce, Newbury.

VIRGINIA

S/Sgt. Gilbert Mays, Lawrenceville; T/4 Alfred W. Slaughter, Draper; T/5 Adolphus L. Williams, Richmond; Pfc. Raymond Harris, Pfc Albert T. Hockaday.

T/5 Albert Barnes, Bluefield; T/5 Earl M. Hoover, Glen White; Pvt. Paige M. Beckwith, Franklin.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

S/Sgt. Lewis A. Stevenson, Sgt. James E. Cook, Sgt. Peter Tymas, T/4 Henry Martin, Cpl. Eugene M. Scott, T/5 Delton Boyd, Jr., T/5 John H. Medlock, Pfc. Horace Baanette, John W. Belk.

Belgium—Comfort in Color

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-13-45

Ollie Stewart's cables from the Belgian front last week told of the confusion occasioned by Von Runstedt's advance through the American lines.

When Nazis captured American GI's, robbed them of uniform and dog tags, and sent German soldiers in U. S. clothing against our troops, we were at great disadvantage.

Germans in U.S. tanks and jeeps, in U.S. uniforms were riding up to our sentries and into our lines before we knew whether to shoot them or hail them.

Every single soldier who passed a given point had to stop and pass an examination before proceeding.

It is not every day a colored person can feel comfortable in his coolr. But in Belgium last week he was somebody. He was the safest GI in the United States Army—one soldier whose appearance was welcome anywhere.

It was only necessary for a sentry or a jittery trooper to look at him. Then he could be certain here was one real American doughboy rather than a Nazi spy in an American uniform.

Engineers Move Airfield from England to Continent

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-6-45

Balt, Md.

ENGLAND — Helping to build communications for the German onslaught, engineers of Company A, 1349th Engineer Regiment, in four days saved 3,000 of an estimated 26,000 manhours in dismantling a fighter airfield here and shipping the equipment to the continent.

Several crews began the job by pulling steel clips from thousands of landing mats with pointed hooks, others removed the mats from the ground and stacked them in bundles of thirty, while another group bound them together.

Sets Swift Record

The bundles, each weighing a ton, were loaded on trucks by crane and conveyed to a depot, then transported closer to the front lines.

The project was supervised by First Lts. Robert W. Patterson of Denver, Colo.; Bernard Levere, Jersey City, N.J.; Charles D. Parker, Hampton, Va.; Second Lts. Wlliam W. Funk, Polk, Neb.; and Philip R. Wells, McCombs, Neb.

Among the men who helped to dismantle the airfield were:

DELAWARE

Cpl. Walter L. Comer, Lewes.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Pfc. Randolph Robinson, Washington. 1-6-45

MARYAND

Cpl. Richard B. Hall, Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS

Pfc. Eddie Ash, Port Gibson.

NEW JERSEY

Pfc. Levy M. Farmer, Atlantic City; Cpl. Otha Dowdell, Newark; and Pfc. Lee E. Toney, Orange.

NEW YORK

Pvt. Lawrence Breland, Brooklyn; Pvt. Robert T. Schumpert and Pvt. Eddie Barnett, Jamaica, L.I.; Sgt. Fred A. Crawford, Sgt. Durley Brown, Sgt. A. Anderson, Pfc. Waverly V. Askew, Pfc. James Moss and Pvt. Lester Baker, New York City; Pvt. Nelson F. Thomason, Waterlist; and Pvt. Will L. Webb, Yonkers.

NORTH CAROLINA

Pfc. Horace Brown, Ahoskie; Rossie Williams, Four Oaks; Pvt. Eddie Ricks, Jackson; Pfc. Minor Jordon, Monroe; Pvt. Vance Jones, Raleigh; Pvt. Thomas Robinson, Jr., Reidsville; Pvt. Isaac Chestnut, Rocky Mount; Pvt. Joseph C. McClure, Tayon; Cpl. Milton Credle, Washington; and Pvt. Raleigh Freeman, Woodard.

PENNSYLVANIA

Cpl. William A. Peterson, Jr., Ardmore; Sgt. Wilbert Massey and Pvt. Hugh Cooper, Philadelphia; Pvt. Charles E. Frost, Pittsburgh; Pfc. Howard M. Harmon, Westchester; Pfc. Robert E. Durnell, Media.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Pvt. Donie E. Harkness, Anderson; Pvt. Christopher Williams, Jr., Cathwood; Pfc. Robert Brown, Charleston; and Pvt. Samuel Lee, Jackson.

VIRGINIA

Pfc. Emmett M. Harris, Blackstone; Pvt. Chester W. Nottingham, Cape Charles; Pfc. Thomas L. Coleman, Richmond; and Pfc. Erskine Fox Subletts.

Engineers Clear Highways in Iran

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-13-45

Balt. Md.

Iran — (By Courier, Delayed)—A part of the force charged with maintaining highways on the Russia supply route. The 352nd General Service Engineer Regiment has served well in the most rugged areas of the Persian Gulf Command for almost two years.

Aided by the heat which often registered 170 degrees, dysentery malaria and sandfly fever, have crushed and hauled gravel, black-topped road, handled road equipment, driven trucks and pulled guard duty.

Major annozanies during the summer months, were the sand which gets into everything and sinks deep into the pores, and which infested the cots and bedrolls which the soldiers drench with water at bedtime.

Although at first, they worked in two ten-hour shifts, with the development of the highways, many are able and have more time for the limited recreation.

Although mobile movies and post exchanges are brought to the GIs as often as possible, mail is the greatest morale builder. Their main concern is employment in the post-war era.

Although General Units do not as a rule handle specialized equipment, members of the Northwest Shovel, the Hydraulic and Northwest Drags, the 2D-8 caterpillar tractor, the clam shovel, and the rock crusher.

Members of the regiment include: Sgts. Harold Beard of Philadelphia, and Ollie Christian of Columbia, Mo., who are quite adept at the mechanics of maintaining roads under such severe climatic conditions; Cpl. Robert Rivers of Los Angeles, one of the best operators of special equipment;

First Sgts. Robert L. Griffin, of Augusta, Ga., Marvin C. Bridgeforth, Chicago; David R. Hilton, Winston-Grange, Ga.;

From All Sections

S/Sgts. William Peace, of Pittsburgh, Owen White, Richmond, Ky., and Robert Pearley, of Liberty, Mo.; Cpls. Robert Ratliff, Mesa, Ariz.; Marvin Heard, Pittsburgh, and James L. Hooper, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; T/5 Gr. Reuben Vaughn, Detroit; George P. Nelson, Philadelphia; Forrest Jones, Clarkesville, Tex., Henry Allen, Oakdale, La., and Curtis Jackson, of Okmulgee, Okla.;

Pfcs. Joe Mitchell, Pittsburgh, Samuel Mathes, Colbert, Okla., Nathaniel Austin, Palatka, Fla., Joseph Holmes, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Billy Myers, of St. Louis, and Pvts. Jacob Thompson, Chicago, Harold Augusta, St. Louis, and Thomatra N. Scott of

Walter White in MacArthur's Area

Kansas City Call 1-5-45 Mo.

NEW YORK.—The probability is that Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary and war correspondent, spent Christmas in the Pacific theatre of war under command of General Douglas MacArthur. In a letter received from Mr. White in the New York office of the N. A.A.C.P. written from Honolulu on Dec. 20, he stated that General MacArthur had just approved his accreditation to that theatre of activity. 1-5-45

While in Hawaii, Mr. White conferred with Admiral Chester W. Nimitz on two occasions, with Lt. Gen. Blount and others, as well as with many enlisted men.

According to a clipping from the Honolulu Advertiser, more than 200 colored servicemen attended a public forum meeting Dec. 18 where White was the principal speaker. A lively question period followed in which the soldiers asked about FEPC and post-war employment, the Port Chicago explosion and "mutiny" trial, the courts martial of Negro soldiers at Fort Lawton, Wash. and racial tensions in the United States. 1-5-45

In the letter to his office Mr. White stated that from first observation, there have not been as many incidents of friction in the Pacific "as there have been in other theatres I have visited." He also stated that some of the 200,000 military and civilian whites from the mainland have "created problems" in a land which had very little, if any, race prejudice before their arrival, but that officials were working earnestly on the situation, assisted by many whites, including southerners.

56n-1945

Jordan Tells How Snowstorm Made Nazi Attack Possible, Almost Pained 92nd Division

Norfolk Va. Journal - Guide

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide Staff Writer

NORFOLK—Now it can be told. This is the story of an American attack that didn't jump; a German attack that did; and how a snow storm gave the 92nd Infantry Division a black eye. . . . The Fifth Army in Italy had been alerted to jump off at dawn on Christmas morning on an attack. Each unit of Major Lucian K. Truscott's army had assigned roles in this operation, with the main effort to be centered in the sector around Highway 65, north of Florence.

The role of the 92nd Division was to hit the Germans in limited-objective attacks in the west coastal sector of the Fifth Army line. Theirs was to be a very noisy attack that was scheduled to go no place in particular; just a feint to help cover the major effort around Highway 65. 12-8-45

Pre-campaign work was just about completed and Fifth Army men were ready to jump. Then the weather, long a plague to the Allied Armies in the mud and mountains of Italy, stepped in to wreck the carefully planned operation.

DID NOT JUMP

One of the worst snow storms in history choked up traffic around Highway 65. Tanks and heavy equipment couldn't be moved up in time.

The Fifth Army had to put off its surprise attack!

Soldiers, all geared up for a hell-bent attack, suddenly found themselves observing a comparatively quiet Christmas Day in their foxholes.

Then it happened! The Germans sprang a surprise attack in the Serchio River Valley sector, near the west coast, where soldiers of the 92nd Division task force had set up a thin line. The Nazis, using at least two battalions, struck suddenly in force, over-running our forward positions. 12-8-45

UNIT HARD HIT

Company G, commanded by Captain Roger Kyles, of Portsmouth, Va., and Washington, D. C., bore the brunt of the German attack. Captain Kyles was wounded and his unit suffered many casualties.

There was plenty of reasons to suspect that the Germans had sensed that we had planned to attack them, and they had decided to hit our thin lines in the Serchio sector in an effort to throw the poised Fifth Army off balance. If that was their strategy, it worked like a charm!

CRITICAL LINE

The Serchio attack by the Germans at dawn, Dec. 26, scared the daylights out of the Allied command, for if the Krauts had succeeded in advancing down the Serchio Valley—well, the great Allied supply port of Leghorn might have been endangered.

For the next immediate weeks, ther ewasn't any more talk of an American offensive in the coastal sector. Reinforcements were shifted over to the 92nd sector. Men hurriedly constructed defensive positions extending back miles behind our forward positions.

The German attack turned out to be nothing more than a quick jab. They ran rough-shod over our front lines in an advance of not more than a couple of miles. Then they went back where they came from.

92ND WATCHED 12-8-45

Through no fault of their own, the German thrust served to give the colored soldiers of the 92nd a sort of doubtful reputation as combat men. Unfortunately, the Negro infantry troops went into the battle line with the eyes of the world upon them.

Knowing the racial sensitiveness that thrived in America, it was openly wondered if the colored men would be in a mood to give their all for a country which gave them a second-rate existence.

Some observers, who had never been sympathetic toward colored troops, used the German Serchio attack as an example of what to expect of colored soldiers. They began to whisper around that the colored soldiers would "melt away" in face of opposition.

After that, the 92nd Division received some unfavorable publicity as a combat outfit. It was unfair publicity, inspired by prejudiced minds. Those of us at the front knew that what happened to the colored soldiers in the Serchio Valley could have happened to any other group.

The plain and simple truth of the matter was: Our line in that area was too thin to stop two battalions of attacking Germans. The Germans, being very smart strategists, knew this. That's why they struck there!

And so, if it wasn't for a Christmas Eve snow storm, which stalled a planned attack by the Fifth Army, the Germans in all probability would not have had time to attack in the Serchio Valley, or anywhere else. That would have saved men of the 92nd task force a lot of casualties, and a lot of embarrassment.

Jack Ettinger, ski instructor at the Davos, Switzerland, ski school, with two GI pupils from New York. P.M. N.Y. N.Y. 12-3-45

Tan Yanks Refuse to Let Filipino Girls Bring 'Guard'

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

KAWASAKI, Japan (Via Air Mail)—"They said they couldn't come to our dance unless there was a white man along, a pfc. or a captain, but just some kind of white man; so they didn't come. We wouldn't have them," declared a 18th Signal Battalion soldier discussing the refusal of some Filipino girls to accept an invitation.

The incident occurred in San Fernando, stated the soldier, who said that the girls confided to him they had heard so many stories about the behavior of colored soldiers that they were just a little reluctant to risk attending the outing. 12-8-45

Furthermore, he continued, the girls said that a soldier of Gen. Walter Kreguer's Sixth Army told theim "the bad things about colored GI's. 12-8-45

Ask Negro GIs Marriage Rights

Daily Worker N.Y. N.Y.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—A request that the War and Navy departments lift the ban on marriages between colored men in the armed services and women of the countries where they have served overseas has been made of Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The letter read: 12-26-45

"This association has recently received several communications from American Negro servicemen and several from fiancees of Negro servicemen in France, Italy, England and other places reporting that American Army and Navy officers have refused permission to these individuals to marry. In some instances these servicemen are the fathers or prospective fathers of children. These men have sought to legitimatize these children by honorable marriage but have been prevented from doing so.

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People hereby requests that the War and Navy departments issue orders and take steps to see that such orders are enforced

Now the Young Ladies Are Fat and Happy

Tan Yanks Shared Their Food And Won Hearts of German Girls

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
12-8-45

By RIO OTTLEY, Special Correspondent

PARIS—The unblushing association of the blond German and Austrian girls with the American Negro troops has caused a mild scandal in white American military circles in Europe. The German reaction, according to all surface manifestations, is one of indifference—though German girls who associate with white American GI's have been the victims of reprisals from the German youths. Perhaps the reason that the issue has become one for discussion among white Americans is because the behavior of the German and Austrian women has been so open and contrary to the tenets of the Nazi teachings. Naturally white Americans expected that some of the overtones of Nazi thunder about race would be heard during the occupation in the form of prejudice to blacks. It has failed to materialize, much to everyone's surprise.

FEARFUL AT FIRST

The associations between Negro soldiers and German girls began when the American forces swept into Germany in the great offensive of last winter. The Negro GI's admit that in many towns they entered the inhabitants refused to emerge from their homes for days, fearful that the black troops would assault them. For the Nazi leaders had told them of dire things that would happen if Negro troops once broke through.

But within a week of the occupation of a town, the Negro troops had broken the ice and developed binding relationships which persist to this day. This was accomplished not according to plan. The Negro troops simply were coldly cordial but very friendly with children, sharing their chocolate and candy rations with them. This quickly won the hearts of their mothers and sisters. Eventually, as the American forces pushed deeper into Germany, hundreds of girls were trailing behind the Negro troops. Those girls unable to follow weeped and wailed as the troops left the area. 12-8-45

EVEN SURPRISED FRIENDS

The reasons for the attachment are normal and natural. Negro troops have behaved in a manner that would surprise even their friends at home. They have been kind, considerate, and friendly. Negro troops have never acted the roles of conquerors, running roughshod over these people as so many of the white troops have done.

In social relationships they do not approach women with the "Will you, or won't you?" attitude. Rather they have moved easily and with patience, allowing a relationship to develop naturally. Moreover, they have been generous to these girls, even to a fault. They have demonstrated much interest in children and old folk, which the bulk of white troops ignore.

EXPECTED RAPE, PLUNDER

These qualities have won the hearts of the German girls. For, being a conquered people, the Germans expected roughhouse tactics from the Americans, particularly in affairs of sex. Rape, plunder, and brutality have historically been the actions of the victor. But quite the contrary has been the role of the American Army, and obviously the Negro troops included.

But the most profound reason for the affection of the German girls for the Negro troops is that the bulk of the German people are without food and the Negro soldier shares his rations with them. Thus, to the German girl, winning a Negro soldier means eating regularly.

From what I could see, when visiting Negro units in Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia, the bulk of the girls moving across Europe with the Negro troops are getting mighty fat on the diet the boys are giving them. Moreover, they seem emotionally balanced, content, and happy.

Negro Soldiers Have Done Good Job In Spreading International Goodwill

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By JESSE O. THOMAS

PARIS—(ANP)—There is no question but that the Negro soldier has made himself felt from a social standpoint here in Europe. In every place I visited the Negro soldier had a better rating with the civilian population than his white comrade. This condition represents a rather peculiar twist of fate. In the first place, the average white American soldier is pretty conscious of his status. In towns of per capita wealth, the American white man is about the top man in the world you know. Added to that fact, the prestige of his army which has not lost a war in 300 years, plus his knowledge of America's part in the liberation of the countries on the European continent, he feels that whatever he wants the Europeans ought to be glad to give to him or make available without reservation. 12-22-45

NEGROES SPEAK LANGUAGE FLUENTLY

Take the question of native languages for example. While there are a good many American white soldiers who are studying French and Italian at Red Cross installations, the majority of them seem to feel it would be admitting a certain kind of inferiority if they submitted to French or Italian people teaching them anything. They are Americans; therefore whatever they want they should have. This explains why the average Negro soldier has developed a much larger vocabulary in foreign languages and speaks more fluently the language of the natives than is correspondingly true of the average white soldier.

Another reason is that the Negro soldier was denied the opportunity of participating in the combat aspect of the war on many fronts and was limited to convoying materials and handling supplies.

Germany had taken most of the food away and the primary need was for something to eat. The Negro mess sergeant therefore automatically became the commissioner of supply. Through this medium the Negro soldiers ingratiated themselves among the natives. They think of the white man as their conqueror, as the man who is the overlord, but they think of the Negro as the humanitarian and friend.

SEEK TO PREVENT MARRIAGES

This fact has stimulated an aggressive anti-social attitude among some white soldiers who cannot understand why in many instances a Negro private is preferred over a white major or some other brass hat.

There are a number of women, British, French, Italian, and German, who have been and will be the mothers of children whose fathers are Negro and white American soldiers. Some of them are permitted to marry these women, more whites than Negroes. Some commanding officers have taken the position where a Negro comes from a State in the Union whose laws operate against intermarrying on the part of whites and Negroes, of refusing to approve an application from the Negro soldier to marry a white girl with whom he has fallen in love and who apparently has fallen in love with him. 12-22-45

This is a matter which should be brought to the attention of the military authorities because it should not be in the province of any C. O. to determine who shall marry whom and no one is able to determine at this point where this soldier will live when he returns to the United States.

SOLDIERS HAVE SPREAD GOODWILL ABROAD

There are instances where the welfare societies have differentials in the type of relief given these mothers or expectant mothers when the fathers are Negroes as against that given those whose fathers are white.

It is little less than pathetic and would be difficult for any person to believe who has not actually seen what happens when Negro soldiers are moved from a town. I have seen native women of good background who had fallen in love with a Negro soldier, hitch-hiking from one town to another because of the difficulty in obtaining transportation. I have talked with dozens and dozens of women who are trying to discover the new location of soldiers who have left their cities.

The average Negro has done a job of public relations on an international level from which the Negro people will benefit for years to come. It will not be possible for anybody to convince these people in the future that the Negro is barbaric or socially awkward, criminally inclined, dumb or mentally inferior. 12-22-45

Of course there are a great many social hazards. Children have been born and will be born to women who had hoped and planned to marry these soldiers. Overnight these men have been uprooted or replanted in some foreign area or put on the boat to return to America. It is pathetic to see these women, victims of economic insecurity because of the hazards of war. At least they were able to get something to eat through these soldier contacts. Now they find themselves totally dependent upon charity or sympathetic consideration of a few soldiers left behind.

Lesson for U.S.

Congressman Lauds GIs In Mixed Battle Units

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.
12-15-45

WASHINGTON—(NNPA)—Colored and white soldiers who fought shoulder to shoulder in mixed units in the European Theatre of Operations "point a great lesson for America," Representative Hugh De Lacy, Democrat, of Seattle, told the House last Tuesday.

Mr. De Lacy was commenting on a survey made during May and June in the European Theatre of Operations by white soldiers in the armed services into the opinions of white infantry platoons separate companies — been following about colored infantry platoons which served with white company-ed," he said, "this experience would les in seven Army Divisions. never have been given these soldiers." The survey, he said, was deeply revealing not only of the courage of the colored soldiers but worked in the Army in the European and ability of colored soldiers but worked in the Army in the European of the fact that when white soldiers were given an opportunity to Theatre, Mr. DeLacy said: "Not all the prejudices which witness the performance and share block-by-block true acceptance of the practices were overcome in the same company tice of democracy in America were experiences in the same company tice of democracy in America were with colored troops, their preju-dissipated by the experience of dices melted away. these soldiers in the European Theatre. They had not time, nor was the situation ideal for the complete disintegration of all prejudices. But it does point a great lesson for America."

56n-1945 Foreign Service Europe

One Half Wear Purple Hearts

First Combat Volunteers Return; Resent Treatment

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 9-29-45

Returning to the United States after covering themselves with glory, 143 of the more than 5,000 Negro service troops who volunteered for infantry combat service with white divisions in the ETO arrived in New York Sunday morning with more than 45 per cent wearing Purple Heart medals, a score or more wearing the Bronze Star, five wearing the Silver Star, one wearing the Distinguished Service Cross and two others awaiting decorations of medals similar to the latter.

These men, who have an average of two years and eighty-four points toward discharge, had only one question to ask:

"How did our people feel when they heard that we had volunteered for combat duty with white organizations?"

DEPRESSED AT "PUSHING AROUND"

All were depressed because of the way they had been pushed around after the war in Europe had been won and they were no longer needed in combat units. At one point while overseas, three non-commissioned officers called on General Eisenhower without permission to ask him what could be done about that situation.

The story of how many Negroes volunteered and how many were accepted for combat duty was told. According to the men who arrived here Sunday, of all the Negroes in the ETO, 90 per cent asked for combat duty, but only 10 per cent were accepted.

TIMBER WOLVES

Some of the men who had served with the 104th Timber Wolf Division were among the returnees. They declared that they had been told the reason for their being left behind when that outfit sailed for home was due to the T. O. (Table of Organization); that if a company in a battalion went overseas with four platoons, it could not return with more than four.

Staff Sgt. Edgar Zeno, 462 Madison Avenue, Brooklyn, was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action when, last April 4, he knocked out two machine-gun nests and captured sixty-five prisoners and in turn, was wounded.

TOOK 70 PRISONERS

Staff Sgt. T. C. Williams of Seattle, Wash., was awarded the Silver Star when he and one other man in his platoon knocked out a machine-gun nest and took seventy prisoners who had been holding up the advance of his company for hours.

Pfc. Henry Settle of Reidsville, N. C., was awarded the Silver Star when he and Pfc. Julius Lawrence of Chicago (killed in the same action) knocked out two enemy half tracks with small arms. Lawrence has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross, which will be awarded posthumously.

Also awarded the Silver Star were T/Sgt. Elmanus Stark of Washington, D. C., and S/Sgt. Emanuel Henderson of Thomasville, Ga. Henderson, with some thirty-odd men, captured more than 100 prisoners in March of this year and saved his company from complete annihilation.

STORM TROOPERS

The returning troops also told of the German SS forces not wishing to face them in battle and referring to them as Roosevelt's SS. They told of the cowardice of white infantrymen and how they would not advance on a strong point unless Negro tank crews were in support. This, they said, was because at the first signs of pressure the white tankmen would "turn tail" and run, while Negro tank crews would bore forever forward.

White GIs Protest Racism To Soldiers

Atlanta Daily News
Atlanta, Georgia 9-18-45

BERLIN, Germany—(ANP)— Two white GIs, members of America's occupation force here, lodged a complaint against color barriers affecting Negro soldiers in a recent issue of Yank magazine.

T/Sgt. Willie Jones, a Mississippian, backed the right of Negroes to have the democracy they fought for. His letter to Yank, a service magazine, read:

"I received a copy of your magazine and read that the AMG (Allied Military government) is letting the Germans go back to school. After that I read in Mail Call about the jim crow treatment of colored American soldiers.

FROM MISSISSIPPI

"Now I am from Mississippi. Until I came into the army I hated Negroes. It wasn't anything they did to me, I just didn't like them. Since I have been in the ETO I have fought from D-day to VE-day with Negro soldiers. I was wounded twice in one foxhole and a Negro saved my life by using his first-aid kit on me. Then he carried me to where a doctor could work on me. This was under heavy fire. Later he died. He was from New York and he knew I was from the south where he had no freedom.

"Many Negro soldiers have died on the front for American soldiers who thought jim crow was right. So if Germans can have freedom after they have caused so much suffering and destructions, why not let the Negro race have what they fought for? I feel that they should and a lot of southern GIs feel the same way." 9-18-45

PROTESTS ORDER

Pvt. David Icheson, whose background was not revealed, loudly protested a military order that forbade white troops from associating with Negro soldiers.

"The other night we had a jam session with some colored boys from a quartermaster trucking outfit quartered near us," he wrote. "This morning we were read an order which prohibits us to associate with the colored troops except on business.

"'A colored tank outfit fought side by side with this regiment clear to Steyr, Austria, and we were never ordered not to fight alongside of American troops of the colored race, so why should we be for American soldiers because of color?

Few Fighters Left in Europe

Afro-American
9-15-45

Tan Yanks Assigned Menial Occupations

LIVE IN TENTS

Baltimore, Md.

761st Tankers One of Few Combat Units

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent in the European Theatre of Operations

Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

MANNHEIM, Germany—After almost two weeks visiting occupation troops in Germany, I am now able to give a fairly accurate picture of the situation, and on the basis of information and indications, it seems certain that the only Tan Yanks to be retained with the Army of occupation will be those in service units.

Passing through southern Germany en route north I visited Munich, Darmstadt, Frankfurt and neighboring cities. Everywhere units were being reshuffled and regrouped, but out of the welter of confusion, only general service outfits and quartermasters were really working and seem destined to stay.

Prepare to Go Home

Others are being rapidly alerted for shipment home. To the best of my knowledge, the only combat units remaining now are the 761st Tank Battalion, the 452nd Anti-aircraft Battalion and scattered combat engineer outfits.

On the other hand, hundreds of trucking companies, many signal construction outfits, numerous ordnance units and a hundred or more service companies are still here and the best indication that they will remain is the fact that they are being filled with low point men.

Perhaps those who have sons or husbands here in Germany are wondering what occupation duty really means. Well, for white infantry and armored units, it means guarding American installations and enforcing restrictions imposed on civilians by the Allies.

Do Guard Duty

It means military police duty at Seventh and Third Army headquarters. It means clerking and typing in offices and running hotels and furnishing transportation for Allied officers on trains and buses. 9-15-45

After work hours it means strolling with German frauleins, drinking coke and coffee and doughnuts at Red Cross clubs, while dreaming of the day when you have enough points to go home.

For colored troops it means something else. Wherever possible, Tan Yanks are put in tents along the highway and in the woods, even though the war is over.

Propaganda Spread

For colored troops occupation means also the guarding of ration dumps, hauling construction material for roads and bridges. If they get to town, American propaganda which has been spread all over Germany, keeps most girls from speaking to them.

At General Eisenhower's headquarters in Frankfurt, not a single colored soldier has been given a job in any installation. All offices are completely lily-white.

Since I was the first colored person they had seen in the officer's mess, the German waitress audibly voiced objections to waiting on me.

Officers Spread Poison

So you find Tan Yanks near small towns where their officers go from door to door telling Germans to shun them at all times, but as always, German girls tell the soldiers what their own officers have said about them.

One thing certain is that all soldiers want to get home as soon as possible. Few have sufficient work to occupy their time even with the education program in full swing. The men will accept a trip to Paris or the Riviera or to England, but now with the chance to go home, few are enrolling in the various courses. Mainly they sit around reading, gambling or making plans for the post-war world in the States.

Technically, the fraternization ban still exists, but practically every soldier I talked with had at least one girl he could visit when off duty.

Kept Out of Easy Jobs

The occupation is still in the trial and error stage. But it is safe to say no more colored troops than is absolutely necessary will stay in Germany. Certain jobs have been designated for them and certain jobs in the administration of military government have been completely denied them.

The military government has power over the civilians for granting passes, taking over houses, automobiles and doing extensive counter espionage, but not once have I seen a colored man with such power in Germany.

The Quartermaster Unit with the most interesting job was found in Mannheim. It has colored officers, with Lt. Clyde McDaniel of Richmond, Va., as company commander. This outfit digs up and hauls across the German border bodies of Americans killed during the war, since the Army has a policy all over the area and is aggravated where club workers are from the South.

J.C. Swimming Pool

Despite orders from home, he added, there is an Army jim-crow swimming pool in Calcutta across the street from a British swimming pool, where all races and both sexes, including high caste Indians, bathe without a color line.

Colored soldiers barred from the U.S. pool on certain days go across the street to swim with British Tommies and Waves. Responsible for this jim crow is Col. Boy Neyland, former football coach at the University of Tennessee.

The returned correspondent pointed out that colored troops constituted 65% of the U.S. force which built the Stillwell Road from India through Burma to China after the British said it couldn't be done.

They laid the 6-inch pipe line (censored up to now) to carry oil and gas to the Chinese. Everybody out that way, Bolden says, expects the British Shell Oil Company to get the pipe line which Americans laid and for which they provided the pipes. 9-15-45

Took a Beating

Colored troops, he said, took a beating from the white Southern officers who were in the majority.

The average colored soldier has been in the area 28 months and all he wants now is to get out.

Bolden, whose wife met him in New York, says that he is going to rewrite all the dispatches the censors held up and refused to transmit when he was overseas, and then get a little rest.

Atlanta Daily World - Atlanta, Georgia

9-29-45

AT SHRIVINGHAM AMERICAN UNIVERSITY, ENGLAND — Sgt. John A. Moss of 266 Fort St., NE, Atlanta, Ga., a member of the 573rd Port Company is one of the many students enrolled at SAU. Sgt. Moss is taking courses in insurance, typing and small business at the American University here.

Atlanta Daily World 10-10-45

Atlanta, Ga.

CARTOGRAPHER — The only Negro soldier in the Historical Section of the Theater Service Forces, European Theater Headquarters, is cartographer S/Sgt. Charles W. Young 2634 Macomb street, Detroit Mich. He is pictured here at his drawing board in St. Germain, France. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo from Bureau of Public Relations.)

HIS ARMY DAYS ARE AT A CLOSE

New York Times N.Y., N.Y.

10-7-45

10-7-45

Sgt. Nathaniel Pruitt, who is on his way home to Junction City, Kan., after having been in action in World War I and World War II. From top to bottom his patch and stripes read: Communications Zone, ETOUSA; sergeant, 30 months' service in World War II, two years overseas service in World War I, service stripes for twenty years' service. He wears medals and ribbons for the Bronze Star, expert marksman, American Defense Ribbon, Victory Ribbon of World War I and five battle-participation stars on ETO ribbon. His last assignment was at Marseille, France, with the 447th Ordnance Ammunition Company.

Negro GIs Resent Demobilization Mess

The Worker

Belgium.

Editor, The Worker:

We are three of the many Negro soldiers in the ETO who would like to know why the process of demobilization is so inaccurate. There are several GIs with 70 or more points over here when they should be home with their families.

N.Y., N.Y.

Upon leaving our regular outfit we were told we were going to outfits to be placed in different categories in which high pointers would be separated from low pointers in order to return to the States. However, this plan has not been carried out as far as the Negro troops are concerned. We are being transferred from outfit to outfit and country to country. Above all we are outnumbered at least 50 to 1 by white troops returning to the U.S.A. 12-16-45

The government, in our opinion, is enticing troops to sign up for another three years. Many troops have already signed up but not for the love of the Army. It is more or less a speedier return home as far as the individual GI is concerned. Why are we being delayed? Is this part of the Army policy delaying the enlisted men to secure reenlistments in the regular Army? 12-16-45

There are men in our midst who have from three to five battle stars and points ranging from 60 to 79. These men have distinguished themselves in battle. If these men continue to be delayed by false excuses they will be of little (if any) benefit to themselves or their families.

We beg of you, dear Editor, to look into this matter before it is too late. Up to now we have been trying to conceal our emotions towards the government but this is one time that our emotions have completely overflowed.

THREE OF MANY.

56n-1945

Foreign Service Europe

To Study in London and at the Sorbonne

Left to right, Cpl. Roderick E. Warren, Detroit; T/Sgt. Harold K. Logan, Tuskegee Institute, and W/O James E. Gavis, Englewood, N.J., shown receiving travel orders for university attendance from Maj. William H. Haight, Oise section information and education officer. Corporal Warren will study architecture and civil engineering in London, while Sergeant Logan and Warrant Officer Gavis will enter the Sorbonne.

THE ROAD TO ROUEN

White Skin No 'Must' In France

ROUEN, France—The U.S. was never like this.

This is the general feeling of Negro GI's stationed in and around this bomb-shattered French city, who have learned that the petite mademoiselles and the men of Rouen have no racial prejudices.

Chicago Tribune correspondent Hal Foust in a story from Rouen this week tells how Tan Yanks from the south as well as the north are treated by the French people, young and old, with a tolerance and friendliness seldom accorded them in the United States.

"One sees Negro soldiers and French girls walking with their arms around each other in the city's streets," wrote Foust.

To witness a colored soldier playing with tots on the streets of Rouen or chatting with a young lady's parents at the threshold of her home is a common sight, according to Foust.

Naturally, Dixie-disciplined white American GIs comment on such scenes but their comments are seldom made public because it is considered a "delicate" subject. The French do not share the American view on what is delicate and what is not and therefore, people are people, just as science has proven. Personalities are determining factors in Rouen, color or not.

In a statement to Foust, 26-year-old Lt. George Woody of Danville, Va., said:

"I know from personal experience as well as from observation that the French family makes no distinction between colors in inviting United States soldiers into their homes. It is a contrast to the general custom in America which has a different cultural background.

"Unless conditions are changed in the United States, we have lost the war for world-wide freedom."

Woody has a master's degree from Fisk university and is an officer of the 490th port battalion, a thousand Negro stevedores who landed at Utah beach on D-day and were awarded the croix de guerre and the bronze arrowhead for their service to assault troops. The outfit remained on the beach until last November when it moved to its present assignment of loading and unloading canal barges and Liberty ships here.

WAC Major Comments

Maj. Charity E. Adams, Columbia, S. C., colored commander of 855 Negro WACs at the central postal directory here, also was solicited for counsel in telling America of interracial relations here.

"It is regrettable," she said, "that Americans are so race prejudiced that anything you write will offend many, each in the light of his own prejudices. Yet the story should be written, as part of the history of the European war, as part of the current news of America's army still in Europe.

"It is regrettable that Americans socially accept foreign Negroes but not American Negroes.

"In the army postoffice my WACs work with German prisoners of war, men of the people whose nazi leaders preached their racial excellence. The office relationship is without racial consciousness."

No Resentment Shown

"Do Negro WACs resent Negro soldiers going with French girls?" the major was asked.

"I have not observed any resentment and have had no occasion to inquire," she replied, "but I believe the WACs grant that the Negro soldiers have the privilege of doing as they please."

Maj. Adams was doing post-graduate work at Ohio State university when she enlisted three years ago. She spent three months in England with her organization before she came here with it in May.

Capt. Victor S. Kendall, white commander of a port company which includes 27 white officers and two Negro warrant officers, states that relations between the Negro and white officers and enlisted men were good. Kendall is a native of Louisville, Ky.

Being Transferred To Labor Outfits

614th Tank Destroyers Moved Despite Feats

MEN BITTER

Artillerymen, 2nd TD Unit Also Broken Up

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent in the European Theatre of Operations

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

MARSEILLE—The breaking up of combat units over here is like death in the family.

The breaking up of the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion with an excellent record of action from Metz to the Brenner Pass, not only has most of its personnel sitting around cursing the terrific heat, and wondering what is next, but has cast a gloomy pall over other troops in this staging area.

Here's the record of the tank destroyers. Capt. Charles Thomas of Detroit holds the Distinguished Service Cross. His unit, "Company C," received the Presidential citation for capturing Climbach, France, on Dec. 14, in which action Lt. George Mitchell received the silver star; Lt. Floyd Stallings, San Francisco, received the bronze star and seven enlisted men got bronze stars.

Won Many Awards

A total of nine silver stars, 28 bronze stars and 79 Purple Heart Awards have been given men in the unit. Posthumous silver stars have gone to Lt. Joseph Keeby, Chicago; Pfc. Lucius Riley, Capt. Peter Simmons, and Pfc. William Phipps, all of North Carolina.

Others went to Capt. Walter Smith, Kansas City, Kans.; Lt. Christopher Sturkey, Detroit; Lt. George Mitchell, Gary, Ind.; Lt. Serreo Nelson, Omaha, Neb., and Pfc. Leon Tobin, Caster, La.

Only 21 Captured

Only one officer and 20 enlisted men were captured by the Germans, but are now released and sent home. One officer and 16 enlisted men were killed in action and 5 officers and 57 enlisted men were wounded.

The unit fought with the Ninth, Third and Seventh Armies in Northern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe, giving personnel three campaign stars.

When I found the outfit at this staging area, Capt. James Carf of Washington and Lt. Floyd Stallings were playing dominoes. They were so unhappy about the unit's breaking up they would not discuss it, but Lt. Edward Carey of Kansas City, Kans., kept repeating "very bad for morale of enlisted men."

Bad for Officers

Lt. Jesse Hickman, Riverhead, N.Y., said the situation was also bad for the morale of the officers. Lt. Robert Brooks, Albemarle, N.C., expressed it this way:

"We learned many tricks against the Germans which would be very valuable against the Japs and we don't mind facing the Japs as tank destroyers because we know our job. In another branch of service we would have to waste time learning all over again. That's waste that could be avoided."

Cpl. Avery Blackley, 1723 Madison Ave., Baltimore, just wants to get back home as do First Sgt. Warren Glapion of New Orleans and S/Sgt. Lazarus Gerrett of Fort Worth, Tex., but all are in need of more points.

Men Go to Pacific

In the same area, the 777th Field Artillery Battalion is already sending men to the Pacific in service units. They had only one colored officer.

Another tank destroyer outfit, the 827th, only fought a few weeks, and then was used to guard pipelines and ammunition dumps near Strasbourg. This unit had two colored officers, Capt. A. C. Leamus and Lt. Aubrey Aspey, Bronx, N.Y. It is also being broken up.

The over all picture at this port shows staging facilities for 200,000 men at one time. French have 200,000 here for shipment back to Africa. All of these plus heavy civilian population means a jammed city with Americans, British, Senegalese, Russians, Moroccans, Navy men and Merchant Marines thronging the streets, making a colorful sight nad a babel of many languages.

Capt. James Robinson of the 777th Field Artillery, whom I saw with very bitter about the prospect of going to the Pacific in labor outfits.

The former combat men are bitter about the prospect of going to the Pacific in labor outfits.

Pfc. Aubry Rollins, Ironton, Ohio, driver for the medics, agreed with him and the same sentiment was expressed by men in the other tank destroyer outfits.

Cpl. Joseph Wynn, Roper, first aid man with the tank destroyers, "I don't mind going to China with the old unit, but it is a dirty shame to send us to the Pacific after we fought all over Europe."

Men Embittered

It seems as if these battalions are being broken up and the colored officers either sent home or kept in France with new outfits.

Without this added worry over being broken up, the men have a normal dislike of going to the Pacific when certain other troops are going home.

Then, too, the weather is very hot here, and staging areas not ideal places anyway. Add it all up, and the result is thoroughly unpleasant.

Under the circumstances, the staging areas are doing a good job. When the troops arrive, each man has his health, teeth, clothing and equipment checked and whatever needed supplied.

While in the area, the men are well fed, entertained and given talks on future operations and tactics in the Pacific.

There are, in addition, two Red Cross clubs operating in Marseille plus movies and canteens with American beer. The most popular club is that directed by Mrs. Henrine W. Banks of Chicago, now in her third year overseas.

Sees Lt. Koger

Almost the first officer I saw in Marseille was Lt. Linwood Koger, 1619 Division St., Baltimore, looking jaunty and unworried about his early departure for the Pacific.

With him were Lts. Carl Hill, Chicago; Melvin Goolsby, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Douglas Starks, Alliance, Ohio, and Ralph Frazier, New York.

Baltimoreans I encountered included:

First Sgt. Wilbert Armstead, 337 Calhoun St.; Sgt. David Poole, 123 N. Aisquith St.; Pvt. Clarence Christian, 541 Wilson St.; Cpl. William Jones, 886 Booth St.; Cpl. Julius Holmes, and Pfc. Fred McClain, 227 N. Schroeder St.

Washingtonians seen were Cpl. Ernest Waddy, 5237 Ames St. N.E., and Sgt. Christopher Ford, 730 Lamont St., N.W., whose art work adorns Red Cross club walls.

Others seen were T/Sgt. Walter Hunt, Cpl. Hesse Sailes, Los Angeles; First Sgt. George McCormick, Schenectady, N.Y., and Pfc. Ralph Dentler, New York City.

Texas, Louisiana

The Informer

Yanks Promenade Riviera

Huston, Texas 9-22-45

ON THE RIVIERA IN SOUTHERN FRANCE —Many troops which include Texas, La., and Mississippi boys are on rest leaves and are now promenading along the famous palm-covered boulevards of Nice, France— the picturesque Riviera capital and the GI Paradise— which spread along the beaches of the Mediterranean.

Entertained

Here, Negro troops are entertained in sidewalk cafes, elegant hotels, amid sunshine and gardens where the world's multi-millionaires used to spend their summer vacations. Available also are bathing in the sea, bicycling along the walks, basking in the warm sunrays and enjoying the balmy ocean breeze.

The United States Army Recreational Area has been organized to afford troops luxuries, comforts and pleasures of the pre-war top-hat visitor. Restees are relaxing in some of the world's most lavish hotels.

They dine and dance in such world-renowned places as the Hotel Negresco, the La Plaza and the Ruhl— whose Dome, Crown and Copacabana Rooms feature the best in French and American entertainment. They are night-lifing in clubs where dazzling chorus girls and French "Sinatras" do their stuff with the American slant.

Share Alike

War-worn and work-weary soldiers of all races are seen sharing the same tables in hotels, the same suites, the same seats in theatres and opera houses.

Those on recent furlough were:

Louisiana: Shreveport — S. Sgt. Elmo D. Jones, 1064 St. John St.

Mississippi: Louisville — Pfc. Melvin Hinton; McComb — S. Sgt. Levi Hill, St. Augustine St.; Pass Christian — Sgt. Godfrey Benoit, 235 Seals street.

Texas: Gonzalus — Sgt. Charles T. J. Smith; Dallas — Pfc. Woodie Wade; Beaumont — Sgt. Lester Charles.

Converted to Laborers

Pittsburg Courier, Pa.

Famed Combat Unit Disbanded Overseas

9-8-45

MARSEILLE, France—Elements of the first Negro combat outfit to reach Germany, the 777th Field Artillery Battalion, recently rolled into a redeployment camp on the outskirts of Marseille where it was disbanded. The 777th Field Artillery Battalion, whose former members are now being redeployed to the United States was the only unit of its kind to participate in one of the largest mass field artillery barrages in the history of warfare.

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The vicious pattern of reducing heroic Negro combat soldiers to status of service troops before they are returned to the United States is continuing. Latest victims are the members of the 777th Field Artillery Battalion in France. The battalion has been disbanded. Some of the members, with high point scores, are now being redeployed to the United States, and an outfit of 400 men who spent 7 months on the firing line have been assigned to waiting Pacific-bound convoys of Signal, heavy construction, Quartermaster, Engineer, Ordnance and Transportation Corps battalions. 9-8-45

An outfit of 400 men who spent seven months on the line were assigned to waiting Pacific-bound convoys of Signal, heavy construction, Quartermaster, Engineer, Ordnance and Transportation Corps battalions, which were ready for immediate shipment to the Pacific Operations Area. 9-8-45

IN FIRST RHINE ASSAULT

In proportion to the time that the 777th was in action, it fired more rounds than any other battalion in the XVI Corps.

They were commanded by Brigadier General C. C. Brown, who pulled the lanyard when the first shot was fired across the Rhine River last March 25. The unit was one of the 104 Field Artillery battalions of 1,248 guns which fired 200,000 rounds in the first assault on the Rhine.

The 777th's gun crews fired seven rounds in 36 seconds. These men fired so fast and their pieces became so hot that guns fired automatically. The guns had to be pulled back as a precautionary measure.

WITH 9TH ARMY 9-8-45

During the battalion's participation in the Rhineland and Central European campaigns, two officers and no men were killed. Eight Bronze Stars, twenty-four Air Medals, twenty-three Certificates of Merit and eight Purple Heart Medals were awarded to the individual members of the unit. The unit's heaviest battle was during the crossing of the Rhine River with the 9th Army.

The 777th was formerly commanded by Lt. Col. Russell Harris, Atlanta, Ga., with the following Negro officer personnel: Captain James H. Robinson Jr., 2021 Melrose Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio; Chief Warrant Officer James D. Walters, 323 Braddock Avenue, Bradock, Pa.; and Warrant Officer (Junior Grade) Royal T. Elliott, 6221 Frankstown Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Negro Runs German Town

Pittsburg Courier

9-8-45

WITH U. S. FORCES IN GERMANY—First Lieut. Theodore R. Barnes, Detroit, Mich., Commanding Officer of the 136th Army Postal Unit which has followed the combat troops from shortly after D-Day to the middle of Germany, not only directs the delivery of mail to some 30,000 troops, but commands the small city of Beuern, Germany. Pittsburgh Pa.

The postal unit of eleven men now handles three times the normal volume of mail required for such a unit and, in addition, it has to solve civilian problems of food and lodging for the inhabitants of Beuern.

Two men, S/Sgt. Otis Preston of Vicksburg, Miss., and Sgt. Virgil J. Dansby of Santa Monica, Calif., were presented with the Certificate of Merit by Brig. Gen. Ewart G. Plank for devotion to duty during operations in Trier, Germany. They also have earned five battle stars.

Negro Gunners On Okinawa Shot Down Last Nip Planes Of War

New York Age 12-8-45

OKINAWA — Confirmation of the claim of the 503rd Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion gives this Negro organization the distinction of having shot down the last two Japanese planes destroyed by land-based antiaircraft artillery in World War II, the War Department reported Monday. N.Y., N.Y.

This claim was based upon the two kills made by Batteries C and D of the 503rd, on the morning of August 6, 1945. Records from higher headquarters established that no other Japanese planes were shot down by land-based antiaircraft after that date.

At about 2 a. m. on August 6, the antiaircraft on Okinawa was alerted to the approach of enemy aircraft. At 2:32 a. m., Battery D, commanded by Captain William R. Bulloch of Lakewood, Ohio, picked up on its Radar an enemy flight previously unreported. The four 90-mm guns of the battery opened up at extreme range and the Jap plane went out of control immediately and crahed into the sea in flames about 9,000 yards off-shore.

One minute later, Battery C, commanded by Captain Charles K. Wolz, of Salem, Virginia, picked up another flight headed in from the opposite direction and immediately opened fire. Five rounds burst around the target and the last Japanese plane destroyed by antiaircraft in the Pacific disappeared into the East China Sea, off Okinawa.

The 503rd Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion was activated in Camp Stewart, Georgia in February, 1943, and trained there and at Richmond, Virginia and Fort Bliss Texas. The nucleus of this battalion was the cadre from 'Harlem's Own"—the 369th Antiaircraft Artillery Regiment, formerly commanded by Colonel Chauncy M. Hooper who now is serving in Washington, D. C. 12-8-45

Shipped overseas in January, 1944, the battalion was assigned to the anti-aircraft defenses of the Naval Air Station on Maui in the Hawaiian Islands and later in the defense of Pearl Harbor on the Island of Oahu. The organization later moved to Okinawa and took part in the antiaircraft defenses of the Ryukus, where it was stationed at the end of the war.

Enlisted personnel of the 503rd are from Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Florida, and New York. 12-8-45

The battalion is commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Lawrence H. Calloway, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Negro Soldiers Praised and Called America's Best Goodwill Ambassadors

Call - Kansas City, Mo.
1-5-45

By FRANK D. GODIEN

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN ITALY.—(ANP)—In the "Stars and Stripes," the armed forces' daily papers, Lt. William H. Venn, a member of the army air force, praised the American Negro soldier.

"Deportment of American colored soldiers in public as well as on duty is quite worthy of emulation and warm commendation," he wrote. "These men are a decided credit to their race and a profound asset to their country or any country and their integral importance should be more openly recognized and accredited."

While in Africa, I was told by a British soldier that American Negro soldiers are America's best goodwill ambassadors. They are kind, sympathetic and generous. The Italian people have discovered that Negro soldiers are sympathetic and of course, they play upon that good nature.

However, I do believe that the world's future peace will be based upon small deeds done by soldiers in these conquered countries.

TAN GI'S JOIN WHITE UNITS IN RHINE CROSSING

Chi. Ill.
Chicago Defender

Colored Infantrymen Win Praise For Bravery In First Test

3-31-45

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — The Rhine river, Germany's life-line, was stormed this week by an American army that perhaps for the first time in World War II practiced as well as preached democracy.

Cracking into the vaunted fortress of "Ayran supremacy," in the greatest military operation since D-Day, Negro troops fighting alongside white soldiers charged through German towns in their first test, killing and capturing hundreds of Nazis.

Writing history at Remagen, Mainz and Worms, Negro infantrymen who but several weeks back were shovel brigades, truck drivers and cooks showed their mettle with rifles and grenades in combat against Hitlerites making their last stand.

Win High Tribute

Everywhere they went into action, they won high tributes from white commanding officers who were observing how the new integration policy of the army was working.

Reports ranging from "magnificent" to "perfect" on the Negro soldiers in action refuted widely circulated claims that Negroes "melt away" in face of enemy fire.

Negro soldiers were assigned to white units in both the 1st and 7th armies.

3-31-45

Typical of the reports coming in was that from Tech. Sgt. Casper F. Koch of Beaver Dam, Wis., who helped lead a Negro platoon into action against the town of Berghausen.

Take 53 Jerries

"We didn't want to give them too tough a job in their first fight," Koch said, "so our platoon went down a street where there were only about nine houses. We didn't think there would be many Germans in them.

"In the first house the Negro boys captured 11 Jerries and killed two. By the time they'd gotten to the end of the street they had captured 53 prisoners and killed I don't know how many.

"They worked perfectly. They are eager to learn and ask a lot of questions. When you tell 'em to take an objective they want to know what to do after they get there."

Asked Chance To Fight

The Negro doughboys asked for the chance to fight, many of them voluntarily gave up their stripes as staff sergeants and technical sergeants to get into the fighting. They are fighting as platoons under white officers who have had combat experience.

The army has moved cautiously in breaking its long established tradition of keeping white and Negro units separated, and the Negro rifle platoons are being fed into divisions gradually, with one platoon to each regiment now in action.

When the Negro platoons arrived recently at one veteran division's location, each member got a personal letter from the commanding general along with the divisional shoulder patches. They then were greeted personally by regimental commanders. This is the identical welcome given to all white reenforcements.

As yet the army has set up no replacement pool for the Negro platoons. When their fighting strength is reduced to such a level that they are unable to function as units, then remnants of two or more units will be reorganized into a full strength platoon.

The army is keeping close check on the Negro platoons, since this is the first time they have been placed in the same divisions with white soldiers on the fighting front. Weekly reports are to be made on their morale, fighting ability, casualties, and the number of Germans they capture.

"All our reports so far have been good," said Capt. Edward Finnegan of New York City.

Save Company

Negro infantrymen did a "magnificent job" on their very first day in the line, according to battalion commander, Lt. Col. Norman Moore. Moore credited them with saving a company in a tight spot.

Thomas R. Henry, war correspondent of the Washington Evening Star, reporting the praiseworthy performance of the Negroes, said:

"I checked the situation in two divisions today. The best story is that of an infantry company getting a platoon of colored men, mostly Sicily and Africa veterans in behind-the-lines jobs, eager to prove their worth as fighting soldiers. The colored platoon trained hard for months for the new roles.

"The white regiment was stalled before high ground commanding approaches to Honnigen, Germany. Its advances in the previous 24 hours had cost a high price and the remaining men were exhausted. The colored troops were sent in with no idea of the job ahead. They took off through the woods, their objective a Jerry machine-gun nest which had pinned the company flat.

Take Ack-Ack Post

"Sparked by Pvt. James Oliver of Nyack, N. Y., the new men slivered up in back of the enemy guns and captured them with their crews intact. The platoon then was fired on by a 20-millimeter flak gun. The men QUIETLY deployed and concentrated their rifle fire o nthe Jerries. They threw grenades and sprayed machine-gun fire from every position They captured the ack-ack position with four prisoners.

"These men deserve mention as colored heroes of war: Willie Pace of Columbus, Ga.; Preston Williams of Mobile, Ala.; Ellis Butts, Smithfield, Va.; Robert Decasseres, New York City; Harold Robinson, Buffalo; Harold Shaw, Canton, Texas; Raymond Randsom, Detroit, and Donald Skeeters, Baltimore.

"That night, two had more important business—Arthur Holmes, former night-club entertainer, and Tom Williams, both of Los Angeles. They led a squad THROUGH INKY DARKNESS and disposed of three Germans with knives before the rest fled.

"The next day the colored men were given the job of flushing out two houses suspected of harboring German artillery observation posts, this under murderous artillery fire. They advanced up the hill to their objectives, peppering the target with their rifles. They took 26 prisoners and a signalling set."

Jarboro Sings For Soldiers

The Call

Entertains GI's On New Year's

Kansas City, Mo.

By MAX JOHNSON
(War Correspondent in Italy)

ALLIED FORCES HEAI QUARTERS IN ITALY. — A ne USO unit, headed by Caterin Jarboro, concert singer of radi fame, is provided a specail New Year's treat tor troops in the vici ity of Naples. Rome, ith the first overseas presentation in this the ater of an all colored show of this type.

1-5-45

Advertised extensively as a musical treat "concert time," Miss Jarboro's show is USO unit No. 384 and her supporting cast includes Sylvia Medford violinist; George Dosher, basso; Maurice Graham, pianist; Bruce Howard, soprano and Marshall Haley, tenor.

This musical, according to Don Byrnes, USO field director in this area, will tour the entire front, touching the fighter pilot group and the 92nd division as well as rear echelons.

Byrnes, highly enthusiastic, expects outstanding receptions to the unit's offerings.

Byrnes said that more colored USO units are needed in this theater. He stated that one built around Willie Bryant's breezy type of showmanship would be ideal. The first all-colored USO unit headed by Doc Wheeler, now returned to the States, made a creditable showing, he said.

Christmas activities were wide and varied for the troops in this theater. All had turkey dinners except those in the extreme front line positions where it was impracticable to reach. These men will get turkey later.

The only evidence of snow came in the Midsector of the 5th Army front where some elements of the 92nd were holding. The weather elsewhere was similar to a brisk, sunny fall day.

The 92nd front line activities remained quiet with limited reconnaisance patrols. We spent Christmas Eve and the following day covering 425 miles to Italy by plane and trucks, checking the activities.

1-5-45

In Rome, religious services, conducted by Pope Pius, furnished the most attractive Christmas observation. I met Captain Raymond Montgomery Jr., of Washington, a 92nd division officer, enjoying his first leave after four months on the front lines.

With him was Lieut. Marion H. Thatcher of Kansas City, Kas., supply officer with the the 92nd division, also on his first leave.

In Naples, Sgt. Robert Witter of Anawalt, W. Va., told me that this was his third Christmas overseas. Witter, a chauffeur from the 12th Air Force Chief of Staff, volunteered to drive me about Naples to check the activities of our troops.

The only semblance of Christmas I found was at a Fighter Group rest camp where Lieut. William B. Womack, officer in charge, gave a party for 150 neighborhood children and at a Red Cross club where Clifford E. Minton, former Little Rock Urban League secretary, and his staff had a similar affair for orphan children and GI's.

1st Lieut. Hugh S. Warner of New York received the most envied Christmas present among those I met. He received orders to return home. A pilot with the Fighter Group, Warner completed 41 missions, scoring one victory, one probable and six on the ground since his arrival overseas last March.

1-5-45

Lieut. Warner holds the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters.

GI's, experiencing their first leaves in Rome and Naples, were still buying Christmas cards and presents for home folks on Christmas Eve. I observed countless such purchases and made one myself.

'Fightingest Tank Outfit In ETO'

Pittsburgh Courier Phila. Pa.

784th Wins Battle Honors In Capturing German Towns

3-31-45

By THEODORE STANFORD, Courier War Correspondent

IN THE FIELD WITH THE U. S. NINTH ARMY—(By Cable)—The 784th Tank Battalion, crack Negro unit, which recently received its first real baptism of fire during savage offensive action against Nazi bastions in Holland and Germany, has won for itself the general reputation of being "the fightingest tank outfit in the European Theatre of Operations."

Accounts of the kind of fight these men put up at such bitterly contested towns as Sevelen, Straeelin, Kamperbruck and Rheinburg have become favorite topics of conversation among hard-bitten soldiers whose day-to-day lives are filled with the whiplash of snipers' bullets and the sudden terror of artillery fire and the strangely sickening odor of newly spilled blood. 3-31-45

MOST MEN FROM DIXIE

Most of these tankmen are of very ordinary education, coming chiefly from towns deep in Mississippi, Alabama, the Carolinas and Texas. They handle their cumbersome and complicated vehicles with the ease and sureness of a middle-aged matron trundling a baby carriage. Intensely conscious of the special role which the Negro soldier must play in this war, they have left a trail of goodwill behind them on their passage through five countries.

I have seen sober-faced Europeans of all ranks and ages remove their hats and stand respectfully at attention as the armored battlewagons manned by these tankmen thundered by.

I was the first Negro war correspondent to drop in and eat chow with the tankmen of the 784th, and to most of them, I was the first war reporter of their race they had seen. They received me with the calm reserve of men who have seen their best friends killed at their sides amid all the din and horror of modern military combat.

OFFERED GIFTS 3-31-45

When I left them a few days later they tried to force on me gifts of chocolate, cigarettes and souvenirs hoarded from their wanderings and battles. Most of these gifts I refused with a friendly handclasp. I was profoundly impressed because I knew that the actual cost of those gifts could be estimated only in the coin of agony and blood.

The story of the hotly fought battle for Sevelen already had been reported in the American newspapers. It was a good story although war reporters realize how limited words can be when they are used in an attempt to describe such scenes. Sevelen, however, was not an isolated encounter. It was merely typical of the brutal opposition which these Negro tankmen have faced with gallantry and honor. The shell fire of other conquered towns still haunts their thoughts. 3-31-45

ATLANTAN IS HERO

Corp. James Rice of Atlanta, Ga. told me of his experience during the battle for Rheinburg, Germany. Said he: "We were moving up into the town when something suddenly hit our tank and our tank commander fell down, striking me in my back. I looked around and saw that he had been shot. I tried to keep him from falling down into the edge of the turret and held his head in my arms.

"Since we were under terrific small and heavy arms fire at the time, I rested the commander against my leg as carefully as I could. This allowed me to look through the turret so that I could tell the cannoneer what kind of ammunition to use. Continuing to fire, we backed our tank up to the edge of the woods. We had no sooner reached there when our gun jammed and we were forced to stop firing. We pulled back into cover of the woods and I think that is the only thing that saved us.

"The medics came and removed our tank commander who died shortly afterwards.

"He had been shot in the head and his brains and blood had splashed on my back when he fell."

CORPORAL TAKES COMMAND

The shot which hit the tank commander had immediately rendered him speechless and Corporal Rice, the tank gunner, took command of the vehicle throughout the rest of the action.

Sgt. Barney Ross of Dunbar, S. C., one of the battalion tank commanders, also participated in the conquest of Rheinburg. "We were the second tank in the leading column," he said, "and when we were about 500 yards from the town we drew fire from eighty-eights, mortars and small arms. For about twenty minutes we were pinned down behind a couple of small buildings. Then we pulled out, advanced about 250 yards and opened up with all we had. Bazooka shooters and automatic riflemen among the Germans continued to make it pretty hot for us, but we were able to advance about seventy-five yards under fire before we were pinned down again. It was about this time that one of our light tanks was knocked out by an eighty-eight shell.

PINNED DOWN NINE HOURS 3-31-45

"The Nazis kept us pinned down in that spot from ten o'clock in the morning until seven o'clock that night. However, during that time we killed quite a few of the enemy with our 37-mm. and small calibre guns. The Germans came out by the hundreds and surrendered to us. We waved them back to our infantrymen in our rear.

"We had entered the town with infantrymen on our tanks but the heavy fire had forced the doughboys to take cover in cellars of houses along the way. Finally the artillery fire got so hot that we were forced to withdraw. After we withdrew I set up a radio control station and called for more support. When I failed to get support I called back for further orders and was told to use my best judgment.

"I withdrew to the rear and that ended the part which my tank played in the action."

CHICAGOAN PRAISED

Sgt. James Mines of Chicago was one of the several men whom the commanding officers of the battalion pointed to with particular pride. In the assault of a small German town, Sergeant Mines led the attack column in the first tank. As his tank entered the town it was knocked out by the first round of fire from a concealed enemy anti-tank gun. Sergeant Mines remained in the turret of his tank and continued to fire on the anti-tank gun until his platoon leader ordered him to dismount and to set up a machine-gun outpost.

DIRECTED FIRE 3-31-45

After dismounting and consulting with his platoon leader, Sergeant Mines went to his platoon's leader's tank and directed fire on the enemy anti-tank gun until it was silenced. This accomplished, he accompanied his platoon leader on a foot reconnaissance of the town. They were under constant sniper fire. Returning from the reconnaissance, they boarded the platoon leader's tank and moved into the town. The tank they were in was knocked out by another anti-tank gun. The platoon leader ordered the crew to dismount, covered them with machinegun fire and instructed them to seek shelter inside a building while he returned to the rest of his tanks for help. Disregarding his own safety, Sergeant Mines again set out with his platoon leader until ordered to take rest and cover.

OUTSTANDING COURAGE 3-31-45

His courage, alertness and attention to his mission greatly contributed to the ultimately successful effort of the task force.

T./4 Robert Smith of Detroit is another tankman of whom the battalion is especially proud. During the action in Straelen, Germany, a tank in his company was set on fire by enemy mortar shells. Sergeant Smith, who was riding with the maintenance crew of his company, was ordered to set up a defense. This having been accomplished, he assisted his maintenance sergeant in fighting the fire and in evacuating a wounded tankman who had been left behind for dead by the tank crew.

FIRES FROM HIP

While assisting in aiding the wounded crew member, Sergeant Smith was fired on by an enemy sniper from a nearby house. Grasping a 30-calibre machinegun, he fired it from his hip, spraying the house with bullets and killing one sniper. Directing the removal of the wounded man to a safer place, Sergeant Smith covered the movement of the rescue crew with continuous machinegun fire until the snipers were silenced. His hand was severely burned from holding the barrel of the overheated gun.

During an hour of holding the crossroads, Sergeant Smith alternately helped by firing various small arms and by assisting in the direction of 37-mm. fire against approaching enemy bazooka teams. His tank was withdrawn to a roadblock outside of Straelen where the rest of the task force was pinned down. There he helped to cover the repair of the roadblock by alternately firing and directing the 37-mm. machinegun fire from his tank.

PATTON'S BODY CARRIED TO CHURCH—Pallbearers carry the casket containing the body of the late General George S. Patton, Jr., from Villa Renier to Christ Church in Heidelberg. The pallbearer at the left foreground is Master Sergeant William G. Meeks, Patton's orderly for eight years.

Russians Laud Tan Yanks For Aid In Pushing Supplies On Iran Road

Chicago Defender — Ill.

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
(NNPA War Correspondent)

TEHERAN, Iran. (By Courier—Delayed)—What are the Russians like? This had been the sixty-four dollar question which had pricked my curiosity for quite a number of years. 1-13-45

During the course of my stay here in the Middle East I have had the opportunity of satisfying some of that curiosity. I have met some of the sons and daughters of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and I have found them to be a people that you can immediately feel at home with upon initial introduction.

I have seen the men and women of Soviet Russia working with deadly earnestness and skill. I have eaten sturgeon, herring, and caviar from the Caspian with them, as well as salami and hard bread. I have enjoyed a cup of tea, and quaffed toasts of vodka, that favorite Russian drink which has all of the subtlety and charm of a block-buster, with them.

I have seen and heard tow-headed men of the Red Army sing American and Russian songs without colored GIs. I have seen friendly, blonde Moscow maidens dance with our tan Yanks. And we have exchanged mutual praises for each other's country's contributions in this war against aggression. 1-13-45

This young stripling nation of twenty-six years, which has rejected the poison of racial discrimination and whose ideological hope is to reach that stage in economic development where at the minimum everyone will get something, has replaced Germany as the greatest power on the continent of Europe, and has emerged as tomorrow's strongest military and industrial force in Asia. It is the new colossus of the twentieth century. 1-13-45

You cannot help but be impressed by the well-disciplined, big, healthy-looking, almost perpetually-smiling troops in gray-green, smock-bloused uniforms and red tabs of the Red Army.

You get the full meaning of total mobilization when you see the Russian women looking neat and amazingly fresh in their plain uniforms or simple dresses, which have been designed more for utilitarian value than for style, working at such tasks as railroad engineers and oilers—jobs which we back home generally reserve for the manual skill of men. Almost all of those whom I saw had well-developed figures. They carried themselves straight and walked extremely well.

No Mistakes

Observing these men and women at work here on the supply line, you get a feeling of organization, purpose, and efficiency. They are painstakingly thorough. Every carload of supplies is carefully checked and weighed by their own checkers before Russian authorities will accept it. There must be no mistakes. The Russians do not tolerate such. They are exacting in their prosecution of this war and mistakes are considered as crimes against the State. 1-13-45

Husky men of the Red Army load and unload supplies, drive trucks and trains, fly planes, and in general keep an over-all eye on their throbbing lifeline. Healthy, determined-looking women from the shores of the Caspian, who are quite adept at the use of firearms, serve as road guards; and others perform such duties as checkers at supply dumps, interpreters, stenographers, and chauffeurs; while still others work on the railroad.

I had interviews with Lt. Cols. Vladimir Sokolov and Victor Semenchenko, of Moscow, both of whom have seen colored troops in action here on the supply line. Through their respective interpreters, Miss Nila Nordstein and Lt. Vladimir Glouskine, we were able to exchange conversation with consummate ease.

Laud Tan Yanks

Said Lt. Col. Sokolov, "Negro troops here on the docks, who have been unloading supplies, are very good workers, and soldiers. They are some of the best I have seen. They are deserving of much praise. We judge men by their ability to produce and not on the superficial basis of color and the like. Yes, they do well."

Lt. Col. Semenchenko, who has observed the work going on at another gulf port here in the Command, remarked to this correspondent that, "Your Negro troops are very hard-working men. They know what to do and like to do it." 1-13-45

"You know," he continued, "In Russia that is how we judge a man, by his productivity—his ability to do work. He deserves an opportunity to prove himself. This is a constitutional right and privilege in the Soviet State."

He concluded with the remark that, "We, who have observed your men at work here on the supply line, think that they have done a good job."

66th Armoured Has Reasons to Boast

AFRO-American 5-26-45

Took First Bridge Across Danube; 4 Wounded, Va. G.I. Killed in Action

Balt., Md. 5-26-45

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent

(GI's from Va., N.Y., and Pa., are mentioned in this story, which also tells how Pvt. Thomas Riddick of Portsmouth died.)

IN GERMANY—(Via Air Mail—Delayed)—When the boys come home and are talking about the rivers they crossed as Fortress Germany crumbled, the gang in the 66th Armoured Infantry will be among those who can boast of taking the first bridge across the Danube—if you can pull it out of them.

Vincent Tubbs

The bridge is at Dillingen, a little town on the banks of the Danube some 70-odd miles northeast of Munich, the big objective that made the bridge important.

The 66th, which works as a part of CCA (Combat Command A) of he 12th Armored, pulled up to the bridge at such a rapid pace that German troops in the town were caught in chow lines and lolling along the streets.

Dog Company was one of the first infantry units across—even before the tanks that traditionally spearhead every move of an armored column. 5-26-45

Four Are Casualties

Their job was to get across and make it safe for others to cross. They did, but a price had to be paid. Four men became candidates for the Purple Heart in the action in Fritsingen and the wooded areas surrounding it.

S/Sgt. William G. Whitehead, 353 N. 60th St., Philly, was shot as he led his squad forward. Sgt. George Hooker of the Bronx was also hit by enemy gun fire and his assistant squad leader, Sgt. Phineas Clemons of Pittsburgh, was wounded by an exploding mine. Pvt. Willie Hairston, Draper, N.C., was stopped by an enemy bullet as the unit advanced toward the hills.

Pvt. Riddick Killed

He was a short, slight-built youth with a kind face and easy voice. The day before I had talked with him and asked if he was related to a Norfolk undertaker. He said no with a faint show of embarrassment, as if he was ashamed not to be. 5-26-45

When the mine exploded in the smooth green grass of the plain, just short of the hills, this little guy just doubled up and died without uttering a cry or saying a word. He was Pvt. Thomas Riddick of Portsmouth, Va.

A few steps to the left and in front of him was Pfc. Wesley Potier of St. Martinsville, La. Fragments from the mine that killed Riddick hit Potier, but he was from under the doctor's care before we missed him. He told me now quickly and quietly Riddick had died.

"He was a nice little guy too," Potier said. "And he went out the best possible way—quick and without suffering."

In the assembly area after Fritsingen was cleared, something in the air tugged at your insides. The men moved with slow, sluggish steps as if they were philosophers instead of just "doughfoots"; you'd have said their faces showed a deep sense of the tragedy of humany destiny. 5-26-45

Pa., N.Y. Men Seen

Some of the men talked glibly about how they had cleaned out a Kraut machine gun nest. S/Sgt. Winifred King of Burgettstown, Pa., was one of these. Some men were almost hysterical in their description of blasting Germans who fired bazookas at them. Pfc. Danny Fisher, NYC, was one of these. Others lay down and slept as if all the world was at peace.

Pfc. Potier talked to me about Pvt. Riddick and I began to feel more sorry for him than the soldier dead out in the field, for it must be very fortunate to be killed suddenly in the flush and pride of life . . . killed by a blow that brings an instant ending.

But the slow rot of continuing . . . when the blood flows thin in the veins and the fibers of the brain open like a leaky bucket and hold nothing, the bad or the good, the true or the dream. Only a few instincts remain—the purest and the most simple, and I guess that's why Potier kept saying: "He sure was a nice little guy."

Negro GIs Respond To Friendly Russians

Daily Worker New York

Negro troops with the American occupation forces in Vienna are enjoying the warmest fraternal relations with Red Army troops, says Roi Ottley, Negro author and correspondent, in a dispatch to the Negro press in this country. 11-29-45

The author of New World Coming describes the "considerable affection displayed between Negro GIs and Soviet soldiers as stemming from the Negro understanding of the Russian attitude toward minority problems. The Soviet soldier's eager display of fraternalism toward the Negro soldier, writes Ottley, "springs from their knowledge of the Negro's position in the United States. Ottley's conclusions are that Soviet troops "never discuss Communism" with the Negro Americans, "so it cannot be concretely said that the Russians are attempting to propagandize the Negro troops. Rather," he observes, "Their attitude seems only to show in every way that they are allies. Moreover, the anti-Russian attitude so prevalent among American troops does not seem to have trickled down to the Negro troops. So, in their day-to-day contacts with the Russians, they are relaxed and friendly and thus bring out the best in the Russians."

CONTRASTS IN VIENNA

In contrast, Ottley tells how American white soldiers reflect the prejudices and misconceptions about the Soviet Union in their attitude toward Russian troops.

"Relations between Russians and the white Americans are very bad," he declares, "completely the reverse" of relations between Russians and Negro GIs." 11-29-45

Whereas instances of clashes between the two zones are "daily and frequent," Ottley reports, "Negro troops go about Vienna with the complete assurance that they will not have to come to grips with the Russians."

"Americans even talk of war against Russia," he writes. "When I first arrived in Vienna I was shocked by the armed-camp atmosphere between these allies. Everywhere the opinion seemed to prevail that the Russian was dangerous and thus was to be watched." 11-29-45

He tells of the day when his white GI jeep-driver "surprised" me by strapping his revolver to his side" as they started on a trip. The GI explained that he might have

German Paper Creates Terror, Fright Of Group

Atlanta World

5-31-45

Resent Insulting Reference To Negro Fighters

Atlanta Ga.

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY IN GERMANY — A N P) — Negro troops are facing some of the Nazi's poisonous race propaganda here.

Recently, several members of the 7th army were called together and had an article read to them about Negro troops. The article, apeparing in the Nazi Eight O'clock News, a party organ formerly published in Nuremberg, was headed "Americans bring black insult to German territory."

"TERROR AND FRIGHT"

Negro troops have reported encountering anti-Negro propaganda before in Germany but this time the newspaper story described the capture by the 12th Armored division of the town of Eupoven. The arrival of the Negro armored infantrymen, the Nazi said, had filled the inhabitants with "terror and fright." Other Nazi anti-Negro propaganda stories tell German civilians that Negro troops come to attack, rob and murder them. Some terrified Germans refuse to come out of their homes when colored GIs arrive in a town.

"I killed two of the supermen this morning while we were combing out some woods," said Pvt. Bennie Player, Washington, D. C. "Frghtenng civilians isn't our line. nocking out those Wehrmacht guys it."

Pfc. Otis Brown, also of Washington, openly resented the German reference to Negro soldiers.

PROUD OF WORK

5-31-45

"We don't like being called names by anybody anywhere," he commented, "but if killing and capturing Krauts is insulting to Nazis then we're proud of it and are going to keep on doing that kind of insulting."

But Pfc. Will Lindsay made a contribution toward counteracting some Nazi propaganda against Negro GIs when he sat down to a grand piano in a luxurious German home. Lindsay, who hails from Hattiesburg, Miss., had German necks craning by the mellow notes of "Pine Top's Boogie Woogie."

Separate Recreation Centers For Troops In Belgium

Pittsburgh Courier — Pa. 5-26-45

5-26-45

TAN YANKS PROTEST 'WHITE ONLY' ORDER

5-26-45

SOMEWHERE IN GERMANY—The sting of prejudice has been felt again by our boys in this theatre of operations. Old Man Jim Crow reared his ugly head shortly after the total surrender of the Germans to Allied Forces. Members of the 183rd Engineer Combat Battalion . . . Tan Yanks who played an important part in forcing the Nazis to their knees . . . are on the outside—and not even looking in.

The Tan Engineers felt the sting of prejudice early this month when a recreation center was set up for white troops in Eupen, Belgium, and headquarters of the 1133rd Engineer Combat Group announced that a "recreation center for colored personnel is to be opened in the very near future."

TAN YANKS PROTEST

A petition proesting the action was signed by each man in the 183rd Engineer Combat Battalion and addressed to the commanding general of the European Theatre of Operations. It reads in this wise:

The following memorandum from Headquarters 1133rd Eng. Combat Group . . . U. S. Army is quoted for your information:

11. Recreation: 5-26-45

1. Tricolor Recreation Center will be opened in Eupen, Belgium 10 May, 1945. Attendance at the recreation center is for three (3) days. When allotments are received from the Corps Commander they will be sub-alloted to units by this headquarters.

2. A Tricolor Recreation Center for colored personnel is to be opened in the very near future.

3. It is anticipated that sometime this month there will be allocated to this unit a quota of three (3) day passes to Paris and Brussels.

By Order of Lieutenant Colonel Broad:
/s/t/ Thomas V. Denney
1st Lt., 1133rd Engrs.
Adjutant.

CALL ACTION UNFAIR

Protesting the action, the Tan Yanks declared:

"It is our opinion that you directed no segregation or discrimination in the European Theatre of Operations. Is it not unfair that those of us who worked and fought consistently during the long months of inclement weather without even a three-day rest should be barred from the doors of the rest centers simply because our faces are black?

5-26-45

"Is this one of the causes for which we fight? Is this democracy? . . . No! It is impossible for American leaders to preach a gospel which rationalizes a legend of 'equal opportunity for all,' while at the same time there is a demonstrated incapacity on the part of democracy to do with race prejudice. 'Blood and Guts' treated us like men . . . He sent us all to the same recreation centers . . . Why should we be separated . . . We were men as long as the fight lasted . . . Are we still men?

"IS ANOTHER BATTLE NECESSARY?" 5-26-45

"We are soldiers! Soldiers in the Army of the United States! Now that the war here is finished, will we be continuously confronted with this problem? Will we have to take part in another battle here in Europe and back home? A battle against our own people?

92nd Troops Disgusted

Humiliated By Story In Newsweek Magazine

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

5-24-45

By COLLINS GEORGE, Courier War Correspondent

WITH FIFTH ARMY, Italy—Intense fury has swept through enlisted men and officers of the Ninety-second Infantry (Buffalo) Division because of the Newsweek article of Feb. 26 entitled, "Luckless Ninety-second." The article reached the Division last Thursday and was circulated among the men both in the overseas edition of the magazine and in mimeographed copies. 3-24-45

Their immediate reaction was: "What Is the Negro Press Going to Do About It?"

The troops appeared very bitter after discussing the magazine article point by point. They say the contents of the article "equals any of Jerry's propaganda crap that has been shot at us."

HAPPENED BEFORE, THEY SAY

They declare that "trigger happy" and "shooting of our own men on patrol" charges are applicable to any organization newly in combat and of every other division in line when new.

Chief anger was aroused by the magazine statement that said "the Ninety-second crumbled under Nazi assault in the Serchio."

Members of the Division said Newsweek referred to the four-day battle as a two-day affair. The Newsweek article, picked up from an earlier story by Milton Bracker in the New York Times, contradicted an earlier story carried by The Pittsburgh Courier.

CHECKED BY CORRESPONDENT

5-24-45

That report was personally checked by me from Naples to the front and the main thesis of the story says that racial difficulties of the Division began when the general staff arrived in Italy following their exploits of combat teams. This was unanimously confirmed by every Negro officer and enlisted man I have talked with.

In regards to the Newsweek article, enlisted men of the Divi-

56n-1945

Foreign Service- Europe

Face Stiffened Nazi Resistance As Battle For La Spezia Rages

Journal & Guide

4-14-45

Norfolk, Va.

Advances Costly As Japanese-Americans Team Up With 92nd Troops To Oust Germans From Key Positions

By LEM GRAVES JR.

Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden

Fight Rages On Outskirts Of Massa

ROME—The regular Fifth Army communique on Monday said the Germans on the left flank of American troops had showed signs of weakening as our troops drove within two miles of Massa, on the road to La Spezia.

However, later Allied radio reported that the Germans had stiffened as our troops fought in the outskirts of Massa, where a major battle was shaping up. La Spezia is the Italian naval base town on the West Coast with a fine harbor and dock facilities.

4-14-45

Meanwhile the Eighth Army opened up on the East following a terrific bombardment by 12th and 15th Air Forces in what appeared to be a major effort aimed in the direction of Ferrara. The two drives have taken on the appearance of a major effort to break the Nazi lines.

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION, FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—The 92nd Division is on the move again—this time elements of the colorful Negro outfit joined with the 442nd Japanese-American regiment to capture stubborn mountain heights and sections of Italy's vital Route One in a spectacular but costly operation which began last Thursday morning.

GRAVES

The "Buffaloes" and the Japanese-Americans jumped off in simultaneous attacks in the region along the coast of the Ligurian Sea, and by Sunday the 92nd elements, moving along Route One, captured Montignoso, about two miles southeast of the long-sought objective of Massa.

The 92nd fighters also chased the Krauts out of the small town of Strinato, just below Massa.

Meanwhile, the Japanese-Americans, widely recognized as an able outfit as a result of their achievements when attached to the Fifth Army last year, pushed ahead from Belvedere, which had been captured in an earlier action, and continued to clear the Germans from Mt. Folgorito East of Route One.

4-14-45

A small enemy counter-attack was repulsed northeast of Mt. Belvedere.

92ND TROOPS HELD UP TWO DAYS

92nd Division troops, advancing to Porta along Route One with tank support and behind brilliantly-laid artillery barrages, stormed Montignoso, north of Mt. Strettoia, which proved to be a stumbling block in the early phases of the operation.

Strettoia held up the 92nd troops for two days, but units pressed on to smash through to Montignoso. 4-14-45

With the 92nd holding positions two miles to the south and the Japanese-Americans pressing forward two miles to the east, the important objective of Massa seems to be well bracketed and facing immiment capture.

Enemy coastal guns located at Punta Bianca shelled our positions steadily throughout the attack as the slow costly advance was carried out. Artillery fire slackened on Sunday as the enemy was pressed closer and closer to Massa, and as our units and Japanese-American troops seized control of heights from which Jerry had looked down on our troops and mercilessly shelled them.

WATCHED SHOW FROM OBSERVATION POINT

Watching phases of this spectacular military show from an advanced observation post. I saw all branches of the service cooperating magnificently to achieve victory. While the Krauts tried vainly to locate our observation post with 88 shells, we watched artillery, ground troops, naval guns from destroyers off shore and close-supporting airplanes all coordinated toward victory in this engagement.

Using field glasses when the naked eye proved inadequate, I sat for hours atop the highest point in the advanced area, watching action enchanted by the accuracy of our artillery pieces. These big guns were firing from behind us and from all around us, dropping their shells along the rugged mountain sides directly in front of us.

It was a magnificent pattern of fire, beginning at the top of the mountain and working methodically downward, leaving not an inch of uncovered space in an effort to blast the enemy from his prepared fortifications, which our troops advanced in behind the mountain to cut off the retreat route.

The nightmarish noise of our own guns drowned out the noise of enemy guns for me, but not for other observers here who always seemed to hear enemy guns go off with shells aimed in our direction. Jerry's aim was bad, as only one shell hit in the immediate vicinity, crashing into the heart of the small town where our observation post is set up.

This blast was uncomfortably close for me, but men accustomed to being under artillery fire thought that one was a long way off. Other shells hit in a field three to four hundred yards away, near a road which I had to pass on the way back to the rear.

"ROVER JOE" COMES INTO BATTLE PICTURE

While I was watching the drama unfold, "Rover Joe" came in on the wings of P-47 Thunderbolts, laid his eggs on the target, returned to fire rocket projectiles into target area, then dove down to strafe enemy positions time and again.

After blasting the enemy with every weapon possible, the plane formations would move out to make room for other "Rover Joes" as the dauntless flyers continued to provide an impressive air umbrella throughout the day.

And then, to make the attack completely coordinated, two British destroyers pulled up just off shore and laid anchor. I saw them steam in with four escorts and I wondered what warships could add to the magnificent battle drama being unfolded before my eyes. But I didn't have to wonder long.

The guns on the destroyers dropped shells on enemy troops concentrations, gun positions and communication's centers. It was no "one-service" show as everybody pitched in to help our team win.

One of the most effective players on our team was our artillery which kept up constant thunder and made the hills in front of us untenable for Krauts.

INITIAL PHASES OF THE BATTLE

During the initial phases of the battle, when the enemy held dominating heights looking down our throats, it was extremely tough for our infantry. However, conditions are now considered greatly improved.

Already men of the division, who have thought longingly of the important naval base of La Spezia, barely 15 miles to the north, are beginning to look forward to entering this city and other key points along the Ligurian coast.

The famed hill called "Georgia," near the coast, which has been taken and lost by our troops several times previously, was taken by the Japanese-Americans during this operation.

"GEORGIA" JINX RUNS TRUE TO FORM

But the old "Georgia" jinx ran true to form and the Japanese-Americans were forced to retire from the hill. They tried again and finally retook the cruel peak. As this goes to press they are still holding it.

Lightning advances threatened to expose the flanks of our troops at Strettoia but later advances in the sector brought our forces into position.

Our troops were threatening Massa by late Sunday.

Hope U. S. Will Lower Barriers

Pgh., Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

5-19-45

By COLLINS GEORGE

(Courier War Correspondent)

ROME, Italy—In a letter to Stars and Stripes, published Saturday, James Lucas, field artillery sergeant, expressed the fears and hopes of every Negro GI and officer who has seen overseas service.

It is not an optimistic letter, as it warns that returning colored soldiers who hope "America will welcome us back by lowering some of the barriers raised against us" will be disappointed sadly.

SEES HOPES FUTILE

Lucas points out that "There are few people indeed who fight for a cause as unrealized, or, with such dismal prospect of realization as does the American Negro." Full text of the letter follows:

"Many colored soldiers who are fighting Jerries as hard as other Americans are voicing hopeful opinions that when the war is over we will return to an America which will welcome us back and show appreciation for our efforts toward winning the war by lowering some of the barriers raised against us and giving us a better deal. Those of us who so hope will be sadly disappointed. 5-19-45

"The practice of segregation and discrimination in all phases of American life is fundamentally based on fear of the self-raised bogey of Negro competition in all those phases. It does not stand to reason that a Nation which has built itself into the greatest world power of our time; which has intelligence to lead the world in scientific and industrial enterprise, could actually believe the absurdities of racial inferiorities.

COMPLEX DEEP-SEATED

5-19-45

"Fear of Negro competition, intelluctually, economically, politically and socially, puts American treatment of colored people beyond a superficial dislike of them as such. It becomes a deep-seated psychological complex burying itself within subconscious motivations from American whites.

"By his achievements the Negro arouses fear of his potential in whites who dread 'Negrozation' of their society. Few will admit it but it is there.

"There is no hope of democracy for Negroes in America as long as this fear of us resides in the American mind. It is a problem for psychiatrists to solve. Democracy for us will not come, cannot come, until we are seen not as competitors but as ordinary citizens.

CITES FLAT FUTILITY

5-19-45

"The Negro fighting man who hopes for a turnover in American traditions in dealing with him indulges in wishful thinking. There are such few people indeed who fight for a cause as unrealized, or, with such dismal prospects of its realization as does the American Negro."

TAN YANKS RETAKE TOWN IN ITALY TO ROUT 'MASTER RACE'

Pittsburgh Courier

1-6-45 Pgh., Pa.

By HASKELL COHEN

Courier War Correspondent with the 92nd Division in Italy

[Reproduction In Whole or In Part Expressly Forbidden]

ROME ITALY—(Via Cable)—In a surprise attack last Thursday the Germans launched a full-scale offensive against the Italian line sector held by the 92nd Division and rolled three and one-half miles before being checked. The "Master race" strategists had apparently assumed the Negro troops holding the Ligurian costal sector, which has been relatively quiet for the past two months, were no match for Hitler's Herronwolk and that Field Marshal Von Kesselring could score a break-through.

Mr. Cohen

The colored troops of the Fifth Army were not found wanting. And, although the speed and power of the Nazi drive bent the 92nd line . . . it did not break. The Negro troops gave up the villages of Barga and Gallicano before stopping the German "super-men."

Then, sucessfully beating off the enemy armored division and knocking out scores of tanks, the Nazi drive collapsed before the withering fire of the Tan Yanks. The Germans hastily withdrew their armored divisions and the 92nd immediately went on the offensive and retook the town of Barga and drove to the commanding hills overlooking Gallicano. The Negro division is now poised to retake this village and push the Germans out of the Serchio river valley. 1-6-45

(Fifth Army high ranking officers and War Department officials in Washington are loud in their praise of the 92nd Division which, when tested in battle, was not found wanting.)

The colored troops conducted themselves like seasoned veterans under the heavy German pressure, and stopping the Nazi attack before it could get rolling is termed one of the brave feats of this war.

(The German radio proudly boasted that all the American prisoners taken in the attack were Negroes and asserted Fascist forces had inflicted heavy "losses of men and material on the Fifth Army" and advanced to Fornaci, south of Barga.)

The heroic 92nd was aided in stopping the Wehrmacht by the 22nd Tactical Air Command which flew well over 4,000 sorties.

MASSED FORCES FOR BREAK-THROUGH

Allied headquarters has released a few details of the fighting and has not indicated in what strength the Germans started their drive. There were indications that Nazi Marshal Kesselring has massed a large force behind his attacking army for the purpose of exploiting any break-through achieved by the surprise onslaught.

The Germans attacked along a six-mile front on both sides of the Serchio valley and the adjoining mountain terrain on Thursday last. The suddenness of their attack enabled them to push the American line back some three and a half miles. The Tan Yanks fought fiercely and bitterly contested every inch of ground. It was this bold and courageous defense which prevented the Nazis from exploiting their surprise.

HEROIC TALES TO BE TOLD LATER

By the third day the 92nd had recaptured most of the ground lost. 1-6-45

Barga is a town of less than 2,000 inhabitants and lies two and a half miles east of Gallicano and was about two miles behind American advanced positions.

The Nazi opened their attack with concentrated artillery barrages and the drive southward reached a greater intensity than had been seen in this theatre since the assault on the Gothic lines.

The men of the 92nd added many pages to the various annals of fighting men, but these stories of herioc deeds cannot be told at this time for security reasons.

Roi Ottley Says:—

Combat Troops Win Respect For Race

Pittsburgh Courier

Pgh., Pa.

NEW YORK—The soundness of the position of the Negro press in fighting for more combat troops is being forcefully brought to the fore, is the opinion of PM War Correspondent Roi Ottley, just recently returned from two war theatres. "Negro troops in actual combat," Ottley told The Pittsburgh Courier last week, "have gained a respect and dignity in the eyes of white soldiers that they haven't gotten elsewhere. Unhappily, however, the labor troops in many quarters are still regarded as porters in civilian activities."

Seven months in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, England, North Africa and Italy as a roving reporter for both PM newspaper and Liberty magazine, has been a "dream assignment," Ottley said. He has not had to confine his work to the reporting of Negro activities. For example, he reported on the Italian cabinet crisis. More significantly, however, there has been no differential of his evaluation of the foreign picture. 1-13-45

KEEN INSIGHT

Among other things, Ottley found that his experiences abroad broadened his vision of the political and racial picture and gave him a keen insight into racial questions there as contrasted with racial questions in the United States. In England, he observed, Negroes are free and are recognized for their worth. There are, however, the same strict lines drawn between varying social strata—as it is practiced among the white peoples there. The 10,000 Negroes in France, Ottley said, are totally free from social prejudice, but the French in North Africa, he said, are as anti-Negro as most Southern Americans.

Ottley will soon return to the fighting areas for PM. Before he leaves he will do two stories for Liberty. PM, incidentally, is particularly proud of the fact that their correspondent is the only one overseas to have interviewed distinguished leaders of all the Allied Nations. 1-13-45

The future will bring another book from Ottley, who wrote "New World A-Coming." This one will present the Negro problem against an international background and will dwell on the roles of all colored peoples in the war.

COLORED TANKERS WERE IN ON CAPTURE OF GEORING'S CASTLE; GERMANS PUT UP STIFF BATTLE

Black Dispatch

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Black Dispatch 2-7-45

When Attack Order Was Given Negro Division to Flank Town, Nazis Gave Up

FABULOUS LOOT FOUND

By TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON

WITH THE 761ST TANK BATTALION IN EUROPE.—(ANP)—It has now been officially revealed that Negro tankmen of the 761st Tank battalion were in the thick of the fighting which ended in the capture of Reich-Marshal Herman Georing's castle, high atop a bluff overlooking the German town of Neuhaus, in April.

Two platoons of Capt. Charles A. Gates' Company C were the firing units which operated with the 1st and 2nd battalions of the 66th Infantry regiment of the 71st division in taking the town and bringing into American custody the fabulous loot of the former luftwaffe chief.

The platoons were commanded by 2nd Lts. Frank C. Cochrane, Beacon, N. Y., and Moses E. Dade, of Washington.

When the attacking elements approached the town, they met stiff resistance from Nazi troopers who seemed determined to hold on to the redoubt of the Nazi chieftain. Heavy concentrations of 155 mm howitzer and chemical motar fire softened up the resistance, and the platoons were ordered to take the high ground beyond the town. 2-7-45

Lt. Dade's platoon hit the town from one side and Lt. Cochrane's platoon hit it from the other. They were slightly defying the usual principles of attack warfare because it was late in the evening, but the town had to be taken and so the order was to attack.

The attack took place at half past eight that evening, and the suddenness and viciousness of the attack dazed the German defenders, and the tankers shelled the town, and the infantry elements moved up the bluff towards the residence of the fat man.

Messerschmidt Captured By Negro Soldiers

Chicago Defender 5-26-45

PARIS — A Chicago Negro soldier, Sgt. James A. Faust, 6627 South Rhodes avenue, was revealed this week as the soldier who captured the famed German plane expert, Baron Willie Messerschmidt, now being held in England.

Accompanied by three other Negro soldiers, Sgt. Faust was sent to rescue several French fliers in the vicinity of Staffel See, near Murnau. When the Negro infantrymen reached the rambling estate, they were met by the son of the Nazi plane engineer who designed the fastest German fighters. He requested that his father be taken in custody for protection from roving SS men.

A 7th Army statement said that Messerschmidt was with a blonde who also requested to be "liberated" but she was left behind by the Negro soldiers.

KILLED IN ITALY—T-5 James I. White (above), 24, of Florence was killed in action April 6 in Italy where he was on duty with the infantry. In service since 1942, Corp. White had been overseas since June, 1944, and had been awarded the Combat Infantryman's Badge. A native of Tuscaloosa County, he is survived by his mother, who lives in Florence, two brothers and six sisters.

5-26-45

Birmingham News

MISSING IN ACTION—David T. Albet (above), has been reported missing in action while on overseas duty with the Navy. He is the fourth son of the Will Albets, Trafford, to enter the service. His brothers are Sgt. Robert L. Albet and Pfc. Willie James Albet, both serving overseas, and Edward Albet, who has just entered the Army.

Birmingham News 5-26-45

KILLED IN ITALY—T-5 Thaddeus L. Sharpe, 34 (above), was killed in action April 6 in Italy after serving overseas 18 months. He was on duty in Trinidad for 10 months with an Army band, and had been in combat eight months at the time of his death. Surviving him are his mother, who resides in Montgomery; three sisters, and eight brothers, two of whom are overseas, Sgt. Nathan Sharpe, France, and Pvt. Burnice Sharpe, Aleutians.

BLAZE BLOODY PATH FOR WHITE INFANTRYMEN

Chicago Defender 4-7-45 Ill.

Big 7th Army Attack Spearheaded By 614th And 761st

By EDWARD TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH U.S. FORCES IN GERMANY—Breaking loose last week like unleashed tigers, the U. S. Seventh Army's 614th Tank Destroyer Hellcats, famed for that "Climb to Climbach" into Germany last December, continued to break up Nazi "supermen" dreams.

But this time, they had company! It was the 761st Tank Battalion and together the two Negro units blasted their way through German towns as a spearhead for a white infantry division.

It was a quiet night in the vicinity of Bobenthal, Germany, when Task Force Bates (named for Lt. Col. Paul Bates commanding the tank battalion) set out on its mission to take and hold forward territory 30 miles distant. The force, consisting of a 614th TD platoon commanded by Lt. Forrest Walker of Kansas City, Kans., a tank company headed by Capt. John Long and a reconnaissance platoon led by Lt. Serrec Nelson of Omaha, got under way with Lt. Nelson's platoon of scouts preceding the rest. White infantrymen atop tanks and trucks brought up the rear. 4-7-45

First obstacle was an anti-tank ditch, 12 feet wide and six feet deep which white combat engineers spanned in three hours. Hardly an hour after the trek had started heavy resistance was encountered in the form of enemy small arms, 88 millimeter pieces and anti-tank guns but the force's units made short work of it and tore on towards the destination.

All night long, the force was fighting a savage battle with tanks and three-inch guns covering infantrymen so that the advance could be made. Although the white infantry division suffered heavy casualties, Task Force Bates achieved its objective.

For meritorious service in the bitter battle, Lt. Serrec Nelson of Omaha was awarded the Bronze Star near Waldsee, Germany last week.

Negro Gunners Set Record In 3rd Army Drive

Atlanta World 3-21-45

Deadly Fire Gets Nazis In The Air And On Ground

BY GEORGE COLEMAN MOORE

SOMEWHERE IN LUXEMBOURG — (ANP) In a one-month period the crack 452nd AAA Battalion has been officially credited with the highest "batting average," of all non-self-propelled units in the 3rd Army. The figures are based upon percentage of planes knocked down of total aircraft engaged.

This all-Negro gunnery units assigned to protecting artillery areas of the 4th Armored division has operated closer to the front than is the normal expectation of AA men according to a Stars and Stripes dispatch appearing under Alla Morrison's signature.

30 NAZIS KILLED

3-21-45

Besides playing havoc with the Luftwaffe in the air the 352nd has demonstrated its devastation on the ground. During the push across the Moselle river into Arracourt one battery aided the Nazis rout by depressing its guns and resorting to small arms. A total of 30 Germans were killed and captured.

Heroes of this incident were 1st Sgt. William Harris, Chicago; Staff Sgt. M. M. Malone, Rochdale, Tex.; T/5 Isaac Gabriel, Miami; and T/5 Shirley Reed, St. Louis. They were led by Lt. Angelo Brigge of Sommerville, N. J.

When another gun crew was attacked by a Nazi patrol in the Moselle valley its members took 42 Germans and brought down three ME 109's. Starring in this engagement were Pvt. Benjamin Harrison, New Orleans; Cpl. John Smith, Richmond, Sgt. Verge Riley, Malden, Me.; Pvt. Calvin Jamison, of Houston and Cpl. Huston Hill of Kansas City, Mo.

CAPTURE COLONEL

3-21-45

Cpl. George Gray of Houston and Pvt. Arthur Newsome highlighted an all-night fight outside Arracourt by capturing a Wehrmacht colonel. Still another set of gunners led by Cpl. Warren Barker Mermentau, La., shot down a ME 109 with only four rounds.

With machine gun fire the 352nd AA is also credited with bringing down a JU 52 transport, surrounding the damaged plane and leading 17 "master racists" and nine women nurses to POW cages.

Racial Friction Is Forgotten Around Foxholes

Richmond Times 3-1-45

WITH THE THIRD ARMY—Mutual diving from foxholes when bullets and shrapnel fly may not be a practical antidote for any racial friction on a nationwide scale, but it worked wonders for the 452nd Antiaircraft Artillery Battalion, one of the best Negro combat units. 3-1-45

"We had our share of differences with white soldiers when we were sitting around England," said Sergeant Leo G. Edwards, of Battery A, "but since we have all been over here getting shot at together, we have gotten along fine."

The battalion, which has four firing batteries and one service battery, was activated in August, 1942, and now has seven and one-half confirmed plane kills to its credit plus three probables and several other pending claims. It has had several men killed and has earned more than a dozen Purple Hearts.

It was sent to Britain in November, 1943, after training at Camp Stewart, Ga., and Fort Sheridan, Ill., and came to France 18 days after D-Day. It was set to work protecting the beach where the landings had been the toughest. It later moved into the Cherbourg peninsula.

When the Third Army went into action August 1, the 452nd was attached as a part of the Twelfth Corps Artillery and participated in Lieutenant-General George S. Patton's drive across France.

The standard army formula of hard work and strict discipline used by Lieutenant-Colonel Lamar Ratcliffe, a firm-jawed professional soldier, is shaping his battalion into one which frequently has won the praise of white units it has been assigned to protect from air attacks. All battalion commissioned officers are white and the remainder of the personnel is Negro. 3-1-45

Summing up battle front racial relations as they have found them since they have been a fighting unit, Sergeant Edwards said: "We get along very well, particularly with the field artillerymen, whose batteries we now are assigned to. Now that nights are getting cold, we sit around campfires with them and talk about home and getting on with the war so we can get back there.

"When we start diving for cover, no one ever looks to see what color the other fellow's skin is when two of us pile in at once as the shells come over."

GIs Push Through Liberia Jungles To Build First Road Across Republic

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

By SGT. OSSIE DAVIS

MONROVIA, Liberia—The men of the 899th Engineers are building a road in Liberia. They are sweating, digging, blasting, clawing, and scratching their way along 86 miles of the God-awfullest country that ever improved a GI's cuss vocabulary.

4-7-45

The road is being developed over a stretch of several miles simultaneously. Thus, on a stretch at a time you hear the bark of the caterpillars and the groan of the tournapulls, huge, awkward metal beasts of burden. They echo back from hills only little less steep than sheer walls.

4-7-45

Here and there like a tangle of frightened ants, the graders and scrapers, bulldozers and big trucks, jeeps and scoops, are busy digging, slicing, hauling, loading, dumping, grinding and chopping, filling in and smoothing out, coaxing this long red scar into a passable road.

Road to Sea

Liberia is bound on the north-west by French Guinea, the two countries being separated by the St. John River. When this road is finished, a bridge will be thrown across the river linking the new road with one that runs through French Guinea. Thus a continuous trade route will be laid from the northern country through the southern one to the sea.

The terrain is by no means uniform. It ranges from one real mountain to numerous hills and stony knobs, and to lowlands, marshes and swamps. But every foot of the way is covered with high bush and jungle undergrowth; stuff so dense that a crew of 20 native laborers, working all day blazing a footwide trail, may walk back in 30 minutes over the trail it took them a whole day to blaze.

In addition, 32 bridges, ranging from 20 feet to 150 feet in length, will be built. There will be concrete abutments and piers for each bridge. And steel beams will be laid with floors of thick wooden planks lashed to them. Gaps and draws will be spanned by logs carried into place on the heads of natives united into gangs 50 or 60 strong.

4-7-45

TNT Blasts Trees

A number of the heavier timbers used on the bridges are cut from the tall tropical trees studding the jungle through which the road is passing. These trees, some of which stand 100 to 120 feet high, are sometimes so large at their base that TNT must be used to blast them out of the way.

There are no accurate maps of the Liberian interior because it has not been fully surveyed. All the mapping and planning that preceded the actual trail-blazing for the road from Salala had to be done from scratch.

Every care and precaution is used to protect the engineers from the dreaded tropical diseases which are ripe among the native populations.

Seasons in Liberia come in extremes. Extremely dry, or extremely wet. In the dry season the heat is almost unbearable. Dust hangs over the road like a thick cloud of smoke, and all the drivers and catskinners are forced to wear goggles and oftimes a dust filter to keep the fine red particles from their eyes and lungs.

During the seasons of torrential rains, the average rainfall on the coast is 180 inches a year, and last year, July alone brought a 56-inch rainfall—a record said to surpass the record for Burma or Alaska. Streams swell into floods, threatening incompleted bridges. Often when culverts are too small, roads are swamped with water. The highway becomes a mass of slimy mud, and heavy equipment must operate in conjunction with tractors or not at all.

4-7-45

Link Hinterlands, Coast

The Salala-Baila road will average about 25 feet in width when it is finished. It will link the Liberian hinterlands with the coastal areas, thus facilitating trade, communication, and travel. For centuries all trade goods brought to the coast from the interior, or vice-versa, had to be head-loaded in.

Rice, the country's most important staple food product, ivory, gold, skins, cloths, basketry, mahogany, and other stuffs were brought in by porters carrying prodigious loads on their heads. Visitors were carried into the interior in hammocks. Due to these conditions, development and trade have been retarded. The new road will change all that by opening a trade route clear across Liberia, from French Guinea to the coast.

No one can safely predict when the important task of building this road will be finished. So many imponderables are to be considered, weather conditions, lack of replacements and supplies, etc., that even a good guess is hazardous. But soon—a year, or more, or less—tired and grimy-faced engineering GIs, who have sweated out nearly three years in Liberia, will throw a one hundred and fifty foot truss span across the St. John River. The first load of trade goods, this time by truck, will start its journey across Liberia—the first such trip in the history of the republic.

Men Ignore Exploding Shells To Save Loaded Freight Cars

Atlanta World Ga. 3-1-45

WITH U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE Members of the 655th Ordnance Company, and the 784th Tank Destroyer Battalion, operating in the Oise Section, Communications Zone, France, recently distinguished themselves during an attack by a German bomber upon a large railway ammunition supply depot by braving exploding shells to move scores of loaded freight cars out of the danger area.

Hundreds of railroad cars loaded with shells and gasoline were standing on the sidings when the air raid alert sounded. Suddenly the German plane appeared, circled overhead twice and dropped a cluster of delayed-action incendiary bombs. The plane next strafed a few cars and departed. The bombs exploded shortly afterwards starting huge fires, and large shells and powder charges began bursting in the railway cars.

3-1-45

Private Alvin Pierson of 2340 7th Avenue, New York City, and Bordentown, New Jersey, got a steam engine operating and helped pull several cars away from the fire. During the holocaust, the French trainmen departed hastily, leaving the engines without operators.

Members of the tank batttalion, on its way to the front lines, led by Captain Marcus B. Whitt of Colgate, Oklahoma, and First Lieutenant John T. McNutt of Pudacah, Ky., were called upon to help save the flaming cars. Hitching their tanks to the box cars, the battalion towed 160 cars to a place of safety and continued on to the front.

3-1-45

Sergeant William Fulp of 1224 North Jackson Avenue, Winston Salem, North Carolina, recaptured a German prisoner of war who had armed himself with a rifle during the disturbance and attempted to escape.

Negro, White Vets Touring War Plants

The Pittsburgh Courier

Texas Hobson

3-10-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA)—The inclusion of six Negroes in a group of 56 front-line veterans of the epic battle for Bastogne during the German counter-offensive last December is admittedly the resut of criticism in the Negro press of the exclusion of Negroes from a similar group a few months ago.

The men were returned to represent General Dwight Eisenhower in a speaking program for factory workers on the urgency of speeding up the output of badly needed military supplies.

One Texan

All six of the Negroes included have performed heroicaly in the war, and four of them are wearers of the Bronze Star Medal for valor. The six are: First Lt. Walter J. McDowell, of Charlotte, N. C.; Sgt. Samuel B. Hendrix of Claxton, Ga.; Sgt. Frederick Wheeler, of Charleston, S. C.; Sgt. Franklin D. Hendricks, of South Boston, Va.; Sgt. Sandy Wyatt, of New York City; and Sgt. Hugh D. Thompson, of Lufkin, Texas.

As was the case when the going was tough at the front, no racial lines will be drawn during the tour of factories in this country.

Nazis Lose 'Complex' In Prison Camp

Prisoners Drop Their Arrogance, Learn To Admire Negro Nurses

CHICAGO, (ANP)—Nazi war prisoners show no arrogance of supermen and are very much impressed by Negro Army nurses.

According to Lt. Ora D. Pierce, one of the 30 Negro Army nurses stationed at the German Prisoner of War Camp at Florence, Ariz., they display none of the anti-Negro attitude that Herr Hitler instilled into them. Lt. Pierce made her revelation here last week, where she is spending her 21-day furlough with a sister, Mrs. Harriet Rogers, and twin brother, Otis Pierce.

"They show no resentment toward Negroe nurses," she said. "In fact, they seem to be very much impressed."

"Cherished Memories"

Frequently one of them will give details about his experiences with Negroes in a letter to Germany. Some of them have very cherished memories of the kind treatment they received from Negro troops she remarked. She believes the contact Negro nurses and the kindness of Negro soldiers to them will serve to give Germans a true understanding of Negroes.

Lt. Pierce, a graduate of General Hospital No. 2 at Kansas City, Mo., has four years of service to her credit. She was one of the first nurses at Ft. Huachuca, where she was stationed for more than two years. She served also at Camp Livingston, La., for a year before being assigned to her present post at the German Prisoner of War camp in Arizona

56n-1945

Foreign Service Europe

AUGUSTA, GA.
HERALD
Circ. D. 20,458 - S. 19,616
JUN 9 - 1945

A PERSONAL NOTE

SECRETARY OF WAR IN SPECIAL REPORT ON NEGRO TROOPS

With the war in Europe at an end, a war that brought finis to the greatest military machine in all history, it seems in order now to give praise and credit to those whose contributions counted for something in bringing about the enemy's crushing defeat. And, in reading these fine citations and encomiums heaped upon our soldiers white and colored, many of whom made the supreme sacrifice for the cause, one can but help feel proud of the men who entered the service of their country.

At his press conference a few days ago, the Acting Secretary of War, in reviewing the war situation, took time out to give a special report on Negro troops. "I have a special report," he said, "here on Negro troops of our 24th Infantry Regiment in the Pacific. This report of the Inspector General gives to these soldiers the credit they have fully earned. It reads as follows:

"'Occasions seldom arise where it is appropriate for Inspector Generals to single out and comment upon any one unit during an overall inspection. However, the conduct of the 24th Infantry Regiment as observed on Saipan was so meritorious as to be deemed worthy of special mention.

"'Upon arrival at Saipan, the 24th Infantry was given the task of clearing the island of all Japanese not previously subjugated. Since then this Regiment is credited with having killed or captured an impressive number of the enemy, and even today is engaged in continuous patrolling and jungle fighting. The morale of this Regiment is high, its discipline is excellent and it has definitely demonstrated what can be accomplished with Negro soldiers'."

Including some of the historic background of the Regiment, the report said: "The 24th Regiment was established as one of four Negro regiments in the Regular Army i 1869, its original organization dating back to 1866. As early as 1889, two enlisted men of the 24th had been awarded the Medal of Honor. The 24th participated in the Indian, Spanish-American, and World Wars.

"Another example of the success of Negro troops is contained in the 76th Tank Battalion in Europe. The gallantry with which they faced some of Germany's finest troops, and the confident spirit with which they emerged from their recent engagements in the vicinity of Dieuze, Morville Les Vic and Guebling entitle them surely consider themselves the veteran 761st'.'

"This Battalion is officered by seven white and 32 Negro officers," the report said.

It might also be interesting to point out that there were many Negroes in the First Army, now on the move from Europe to the Pacific by way of the United States. Of course, the Divisions and Army Corps that will fight with the First Army against Japan will not necessarily be the same as those that fought in Germany. But there is the assurance that enough veteran Negro units and veteran personnel will take the field under General Courtney H. Hodges to insure the same rigorous assault against the Japanese as was made by the First Army against the Germans.

In Europe, Negro doughboys fought side by side with whites of the First, Second, Ninth, 78th, 99th and 104th Infantry Divisions of the First Army. Assigned to white platoons several months ago, after the War Department approved the integration, Negro doughboys distinguished themselves in action alongside their white comrades.

One Negro platoon, fighting with Company K of the 394th Infantry Regiment of the 99th Infantry Division, led the company assault on the town of Honnigen on the Rhine and captured 250 German prisoners while clearing about one-fourth of the area. Another platoon of the 393rd Infantry, in its first action near Jahrfeld on March 25, advanced in marching fire order and routed the Germans, knocking out a Mark IV tank and a flak wagon, killing 48 of the enemy, capturing 60 and gained their objective on Hill 373, after being cut off by 150 Germans.

Speaking of integration, and what do Negro GIs think of it, according to Pvt. Robert McCullum, of Franklin, Tenn., a veteran of 25 months in Africa, Italy, France and Germany, who was wounded fighting with the 78th "Lightning" Division on March 22, now at Stark General Hospital, Charleston, S. C.:

"At the front a man lived or died on his own merits."

CLEVELAND, O.
NEWS
Cir. D. 122,094
JUN 20 1945

Eisenhower on Negro Troops

No student of the history of this greatest war should fail to absorb the hour-long interview General Dwight Eisenhower, our returning hero of today, gave to the war correspondents last week-end in Europe. He talked more freely than ever before about his opinions of the fighting of the European war, both in terms of the Allied and the enemy efforts.

One of the most colorful assertions by the general was in answer to a query about the American Negro troops sent to Europe, a large part of them as service of supply troops, a smaller number to be combat troops. This, too, is something that historians should not miss.

"I would like to say this at the start, that I do not differentiate between soldiers," General Eisenhower declared. "I do not say 'white soldiers' or 'Negro soldiers,' and I do not say 'American soldiers' or 'British soldiers.' To my mind, I have had a task in this war that makes me look upon soldiers as soldiers.

"Now, I have seen Negro soldiers in this war and I have many reports on their work where they have rendered very valuable contributions and some of them with the greatest enthusiasm.

"In late November, when we were getting short of reinforcements, replacements, some 2,600 Negro soldiers volunteered for front-line service. And they did good work. All my commanders reported that those volunteers did excellent work.

"But their major job has been in services of supply, engineer units, quartermaster units, ordnance units. There, so far as I know and certainly as far as any official reports, they have performed equally with every kind of ordnance battalion, quartermaster battalion and engineer battalion. They have done their job. They have done the job given them."

There is not much finer thing to say of any man's service than that he has done the job given him.

SHEAF Denies Eastland's Indictment

Norfolk, Va. Journal and Guide

PARIS, France — Supreme Headquarters said Saturday it had "no knowledge" of the alleged incident at Stuttgart to which Sen. Eastland (D-Miss) referred last Friday in a Senate debate, when he said that French Senegalese troops had locked 5,000 German girls in a subway for five days and criminally assaulted them. 7-7-45

SHAEF also had no comment on Eastland's statement that it was necessary to disarm "a good many Negro soldiers in Normandy" because they broke into French farmhouses and attacked French women.

It was pointed out, however, that there were no Negro combat troops in the Normandy campaign.

The only Negroes used there were service troops.

SHAEF Exposes Slur On Negroes

N.Y. Daily Worker

PARIS, July 6 (UP).—Allied Supreme Headquarters, after a weeklong investigation, today denied a charge by Sen. James O. Eastland, (D-Miss) that French Senegalese troops herded 5000 German women into a Stuttgart subway and attacked them. 7-7-45

The Senator's allegation was not founded in fact, SHAEF said.

"All American liaison officers with the French Army Corps and lower units which have been in or near Stuttgart at any time have submitted written reports to this headquarters that to their knowledge and belief incidents such as allaged did not take place," the announcement said. 7-7-45

13,118 Negro Ordinancemen In ETO Handled 75 Per Cent Of Ammunition

High Tribute Is Paid Enlisted Men

Atlanta Daily World Ga.

WITH U. S. ORDNANCE FORCES IN EUROPE—Of the six million tons of ammunition handled by Ordnance ammunition companies on the Continent D-Day and VE Day, more than 4,500,000 tons passed through the hands of Negro Ordnance men, it was announced this week by Major General Henry B. Sayler, Chief Ordnance Officer.

In reporting the figures on the amount of ammunition made available for use by our fighting men, Gen. Sayler paid tribute to the 14,323 Negro enlisted men, who made up 11 percent of the total Ordnance personnel on the Continent. 7-14-45

DOUBLE JOBS

"Not only did these Negro troops 'pass the ammunition," said Gen. Sayler, "but on numerous occasions many of them fought the Germans, participated in patrols, and took prisoners."

The forward ammunition supply points operated by these Negro Ordnancemen were the retail source of all types of ammunition, bullets, shells, fuzes, and propelling charges, served directly to infantry, artillery and armored units. As such, these ASPs were directly behind the front lines and on several occasions, in front of them esppecially during periods of fluid fronts.

Men of one ammunition company—the 626th—although they had moved into their new location, were unable to operate until the infantry had cleared the enemy artillery from a hill less than two miles away. They stuck to their positions, however, and the day the Nazis were cleared out the men received their first trainload of ammunition and issued it directly to the men chasing the Germans.

75 PER CENT OF TOTAL

Of the 14,323 Negro Ordnancemen participating in the ETO campaign, 13,118 were ammunition handlers. They made up 76 out of the 101 Ordnance ammunition companies, about 75 percent of the total.

They reached the peak of ammunition handling shortly after the Germans were repulsed in their Ardennes break-thru. During the period that followed, the 101 ammunition companies received and issued up to 24,000 tons a day, or seven to eight thousand tons over the average of 15,000 tons a day established in the European campaign. In carrying out their mission of supplying ammunition to the men behind the guns, the Negro Ordance men displayed courage time and again, General Sayler declared. 7-10-45

An example cited by General Sayler was the bravery demonstrated by the members of the 655th Ordnance Ammunition Company which unloaded a trainload of white phosphorus mortar shells on December 26, near Soissons, France, while shells were exploding around them. Their acts of heroism saved the French city from complete destruction.

Negroes are 10 percent of occupation troops

Los Angeles Tribune Calif.

7-2-45

Negro troops to include 10.4% of occupation and discharges

PARIS—The Army plans to carry through with the congressional apportionment of 10.4% for Negro troops in all U. S. War Department activity, Stars and Stripes, the daily newspaper of the U.S. armed forces in the European theatre said this week. 7-2-45

This percentage will apply to the U.S. Army of Occupation in Germany and to the demobilization of Negro troops, as well, the Army paper said. Negro troops, primarily service units "performing their primary mission," will remain in Germany as occupation forces; and under redeployment plans, the Army intends that 10.4 percent of all U.S. personnel returned to the United States for demobilization shall be Negro.

Although the 10.4 percentage is standard, set by Congress and used by the War Dept. in computing the proportions of Negroes in the Army, the proportion is not standard for all theatres, Stars and Stripes pointed out.

The proportion in the European Theatre has averaged 8.4 and remains that at present, the paper said.

As of May 15, there were 259,173 Negro troops in Europe, of a grand total of 3,082,142. This figure does not include the Mediterranean theatre where there was a higher percentage of Negro combat troops, including one infantry division, the 92nd.

Church Bells, Once Tip-Off to Nazis, Ring Again in Italy

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

By CAPT. DOUGLASS HALL

ITALY—The church bells here are ringing again after they were silenced during the war by Capt. Harold (Monty) Montgomery of Washington, because the bells seemed to be a signal for the Germans to shell Yank lines.

Capt. Montgomery noticed that when the bell rang, the shelling began. He talked with the priest and had the bells silenced. The shelling stopped.

I saw my first mule butchered today. He was killed as he fell down a hill. Several Italians butchered him for future meals. Later I passed their homes and smelled the mule already cooking in the pot.

Sees 4 Baltimoreans

Four Baltimoreans are among the men I've seen over here. They are: 7-14-45

Pfc. S. J. Tinsley, Pvt. Robert Lofton, T/4 Charles Trayhan and Fielder C. Moreland of Lothian, Md., was also in this area. New Yorkers include Pfc. Paul Humphrey and Pvt. Robert J. Evans of Brooklyn; Sgt. George L. Jefferson and Sgt. Eyen Davison of NYC, and Pvt. Horace Perryman Sr., of Schenectady.

Two Pennsylvanians are Lt. Charles E. Greenlee of Pittsburgh, and T/4 Rufus Roberts of New Castle. Others include Warrant Officer Robert R. Wilson of East Orange, N.J.; Pfc. John Goodman of Columbia, S.C.; Pfc. Clyde Bates of Penhook, Va.; Pvt. Charles E. Stokes, Hilltop, W. Va.

BERLIN FRIENDS COST PLENTY

Chicago Defender Chi, Ill

Negro GIs Fraternize—But Wisely!

Chicago Defender

By EDWARD B. TOLES

BERLIN.—What price fraternization? It's a $65 question to GIs here in Germany and an extremely heavy fine and possible reclassification for an officer.

But the problem of "Boy meets girl" here in Berlin takes on a different status with Russians, British and Americans in Europe's largest and most devastated capitol.

Each army of the Big Three occupying their respective zones here in Berlin has a non-fraternization policy which is substantially similar in meaning and in intent, [illegible] the Co[illegible] can policy is plain but has been altered recently to exclude children.

But GIs in Germany have their own views all the way from total abstention to constant promiscuity. Negro GIs are no different in their views than other GIs but they complain that when caught "fraternizing" the application of the law takes a different turn with their being charged with rape.

7-21-45

Now that there is to be occupation for a long period in Germany, GIs and others are wondering what's going to happen to the "non-sex law" as they have dubbed it. Actually, here's how it reads: "Fraternization is the avoidance of mingling with Germans upon terms of friendliness, familiarity, or intimacy, whether individually or in groups, in official or unofficial dealings. However, non-fraternization does not call for undignified or aggressive conduct, nor insolent overbearance which has characterized Nazi leadership.

All over Germany Yanks, white and black, utterly disregard strictly this mandate but when they are caught they get the limit and GIs as well as officers have been punished. The best example of what not to do I heard from a white officer lecturing to Negro troops recently in Germany.

He said: "You WILL NOT visit German homes; shake hands with them; play games with them; give or accept gifts; attend German dances or other social events; accompany Germans on the street, in theaters, taverns, hotels, or elsewhere except on official business!" And after hastily scanning his prepared manuscript, he hastily blurted out, "Oh, yes, absolutely no kissing or sexual intercourse; diseases are prevalent in Germany!"

And in Berlin, Yanks saw their Russian Allies practicing to the utmost the un[illegible] principle exhibited on the thousands of posters in bright red letters all over Berlin that all Germans are not guilty but only the Hitlers. Obviously, in deference to the American and British policy they have unofficially announced that Russian soldiers guilty of fraternizing shall be confined to the guardhouse for five days and in case of officers, confinement to barracks with loss of pay.

But any evening at "Femina," the biggest and most pretentious night club in Berlin, Russian officers may be seen waddling around in their heavy boots with comely German frauleins to "tea for two" just as casually as if they were in Downtown Cafe Society and they were standing in line Saturday night with no more aplomb than if they were in a queue in front of the Moscow Art theater.

"Femina," das ballhaus berlins," is located on Nuremburgstrasse and resembles any first-class New York or Chicago night club. By some miracle it escaped partially the terrific bombing in this vicinity; across the street there are nothing but shells of buildings but all this dance club got was a blast from the rear which wrecked the 1,500 capacity dance floor.

Its two night clubs were uninjured; upstairs there is a 10-piece orchestra with a five-act floor show; a huge half moon bar serving a sickly red wine at about two bucks a glass; meals may be had for about $3. 7-21-45

A huge picture of Stalin was hanging above the orchestra until a newspaper correspondent decided that he would snap a photo of the orchestra while the acrobatic dancer was doing the split standing upon her head with limbs swinging wildly akimbo. They took the picture down after that.

At "Rio Rita" a huge colored doorman lets many Russians in with or without dates but they all come out dated, he said. There are only one or two other clubs in Berlin and at all of them the Russians swing and sway nightly and Yanks and British are taking up the cue too. However, rumor has it that none of these clubs will remain in operation long and will be closed by the respective armies in the particular zones. The clubs are in British and American zones. 7-21-45

But speculation is that the non-fraternization ban will not be repealed for too many are now either confined or are presently paying the penalty but it may be winked at like speakeasies back home, but however it is done, Yanks say, do something quick!

British Open Homes to GI's With No Thought of Race

Baltimore, Md.

Afro-American

BARNSTAPLE, England—With the mayor taking the lead, this community, designated as one of four recreational areas, is extending a hearty welcome to all the American forces.

Boys, regardless of race, have had invitations into the homes of local citizens for tea. Others have been entertained with walks, at the churches and theatres.

Given Auto Rides

Many have been extended auto rides with members of a large number of families, in this, the oldest borough in England.

Hub of the entertainment is Barnstaple Red Cross Club of which Jesse M. Chiles of Cincinnati is director. The club accommodates 200 men, has showers, and is equipped to furnish them with hot meals.

Dance with Britishers

A series of dances with English girls serving as hostesses is given each week. Horseback riding, sporting events, motion pictures, tennis and golf all serve to provide Yanks of all color—badly needed rest. 7-21-45

Among those enjoying Barnstaple's hospitality were:

Pvt. Edward Dawson, Birmingham Ala.; Cpl. Zollie Gray, Pvt. E. Dawson, Waco, Texas; Cpl. James Martin, Camphill, Ala.; Sgt. Harold Lambert, Sheridan, Ark.; and Cpl. Johr Davis, Eagles Mills, Ark.

SOMERVILLE, N. J.
MESSENGER-GAZETTE
Cir. W. 4,830

JUL 12 1945

NEGRO FIGHTING MEN

To the Messenger-Gazette:

I recently read in the New York Daily News an article written by one of our country's lawmakers which was very uncomplimentary to the Negro soldiers of this war. The following is from a letter I just received from my brother, Sergeant Walter B. Clark:

"We were plenty of hell for the Germans. They called us the 'Black Russians.' There were three Field Artillery battalions that played quite a role and I am proud to say the 777th was included. The 283rd, with whom I took my basic, fought with Patton in France in such places as Cherbourg, St. Lo and Metz. Then the 969th, another Field Artillery battalion from Oklahoma, Camp Gruber, fought in the Battle of the Bulge. I know you heard of them. They had very high casualties, as did the 333rd. Last but not least, the 777th. I am sure you must have seen the story War Correspondent Ollie Johnston wrote of us. On the second day of November we fired our first shell in combat. We were the first Negro battalion to fire on German soil. Also the first troops, including white, to fire across the Ruhr River, and the first negroes to fire across the Rhine. We participated in the Battle of the Bulge, and we fought in two major battles which allows us two battle stars. Without rest, we stayed in combat unti they said it was all over. And that is the story of us."

Would you print this, please, so that others may learn of the good part the negro soldier is playing in this war?

MRS. E. CLARKE, R. N.
Hamilton street.

French Women Fired for Befriending Colored GI's

Baltimore, Md.

Afro-American

French women working at a rest camp at Nancy, France are "reported and immediately fired" for befriending colored soldiers, according to a report received by the AFRO this week from a corporal stationed there.

He is Theodore E. Carter who has been stationed seven months with the 865th Quartermaster Fumigation and Bath Company attached to the all-white center. His unit services men returning from the front by bathing and sterilizing men and clothing.

No-Talking Order

Cpl. Carter said that an order had been issued by the commanding officer "not to talk to colored boys; to talk only to the boys of the rest center.

"Some of the women took heed, while others still continued to talk and go out with boys in my outfit. If they were seen in the streets with us after working hours they were reported and immediately fired." 7-21-45

Race Myths

The rest camp recently has been designated all-white, the corporal revealed. Colored soldiers are now sent to Strasbourg, and if they are sent to Nancy by mistake they are told there is no room.

Several soldiers had to spend their rest period with the fumigation and bath company,

Cpl. Carter said that racial myths of colored soldiers with tails, uncivilized actions and murder complexes which the white soldiers had spread are being rejected by some of the French civilians. 7-21-45

Army's 'Bungling' Hurts Morale of Volunteer

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By OLLIE STEWART, AFRO War Correspondent

PARIS (By Cable)—On the basis of information from several sources, together with contraditions and evasions, I am forced to the conclusion that the story of what is happening to some 2,000 colored soldiers formerly in white divisions is one of the most significant developments of the entire war.

The men themselves, wearing Purple Hearts, Good Conduct Medals and Infantry Badges, are the coolest of all concerned in this controversial postwar episode.

The outstanding exception is a GI in the reinforcement pool, who after fighting with the Eighth Division, was left behind when the division went home, wrote in the Stars and Stripes that he preferred going back to truck driving if that was all the gratitude he could expect.

Situation Involved

The entire situation is so involved, it is unwise to generalize, but some facts protrude so prominently it is easy to fill in the gaps for a fairly complete picture.

Without a doubt no one situation during the war has offered an opportunity to do more real good or more real harm than this one.

7-28-45

Nothing touches more colored soldiers, nothing is watched with more interest by both white and colored soldiers than the way the Army is handling these men who volunteered for combat last winter and made good.

Bungling Can Hurt Morale

Just as the acceptance of these men and their integration into white units was the biggest morale booster for colored soldiers during the entire war, so will the bungling of their future service prove to be the biggest repressive agent for the rest of the war among all colored soldiers.

Even civilians in France and Germany know what is happening and they, too, are watching. Several have spoken to me about the outcome.

Just 2,000 men, yet they are a barometer. The Army has a complete report on their conduct, courage, fighting ability and capacity for getting along with white troops.

Were in High Gear

It would not be pleading their case one way or another for me to state that from some of these vets and their officers I hear a unanimous story, "Seems that we got in high gear when we stopped fighting each other and ganged up on Hitler."

What the Army does on the basis of its findings cannot be predicted, but unofficially I can truthfully state that some division commanders let it be known that they want to keep their colored complements.

7-28-45

Briefly here is what has happened so far. During the war the Seventh Army had two provisional colored battalions.

Detached From Division

One, the 66th colored armored infantry battalion, which served with the 14th Armored Division has been reported already detached from the division. Several of these men are going home for discharge.

I talked with four of these high point men, Pfc. Charles Carson, 2712 W. Oxford St., Philadelphia, 105 points, who has plans and money for a cleaning and pressing shop; Pfc. Clarence Johnson, Chicago, 96 points, who is going back to school; Pfc. Leon Browdee, Dallas, Texas, 90 points, and Pfc. H. H. Knowles, Fort Worth, Tex., 103 points.

Was With Quartermasters

Knowles volunteered from a quartermaster unit and fought with the Armored from March 7 until July 12, leaving the division at Ellwangen, Germany. There were 207 colored men with the division, but 16 are now en route home for discharge.

7-28-45

Knowles has five battle stars and was formerly with the 366th Infantry. He studied two years at Coney and wants to be a mortician.

Colored Men Left

The First Army had colored platoons assigned to the 1st, 2nd, 8th, 9th, 69th, 78th, 99th and 104th divisions. When these divisions returned to the States, the colored soldiers were left behind.

When you asked what happened to them, the routine answer "They are being treated like all other soldiers," has truth up to a certain point.

It is true that attention is being paid to four categories after men are detached.

Eliminating category 4 which is for high point men, you have colored soldiers detached or slated for separation from units doing occupation duty which covers category one.

Most for Redeployment

Categories two and three for redeployment and supply pools seem to be getting the bulk of colored combat veterans.

In these pools or depots the colored soldier is treated no worse than white ordinarily, but in case of combat veterans their mental state is very jittery.

One vet told me "White boys look at us like we are part of an experiment that failed. They think we couldn't make the grade."

Colored boys ask questions about "why didn't we stay with our divisions?" We can't answer that because we don't know.

(Continued on

Marked Contrast

This contrasts with a statement from Knowles who goes home straight from the 12th Armored Division to be discharged.

Said he:

7-28-45

"I just feel good when guys look at my infantry badge. We had white officers, but they were satisfied with what we did. I would hate like hell to be sent back to the Quartermasters."

That is the biggest worry among these combat boys now in reinforcement pools. Will the Army send them back to driving trucks or handling rations or gas cans?

The Deciding Issue

Somehow they realize that the whole case of colored men in the war depends on recognition given the colored combat soldier who fought in Germany. If what he did is repudiated and he himself converted back to service units, it will never be lived down here. That's why veterans are worried and why all other colored officers here are watching intently what happens to the combat veteran.

NEGRO SOLDIERS IN FRANCE FIND NO RACE BARRIER

Chicago Daily Tribune

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ROUEN, France, July 29—America's Negro soldier is teaching mademoiselle to jitterbug. You see it at street dances in this bomb shattered city on the lower Seine, and you see it at dances in village squares wherever there are United States Negro troops. Rouged little girls with short skirts try to follow the swinging feet of lanky, grinning army men from Harlem or Georgia.

It is part of the scene of the American army lingering in Europe. One sees Negro soldiers and French girls walking with their arms around each other in the city's streets. One sees khaki clad colored men playing with white children or chinning with the old folks at the threshold of a French girl's home.

7-30-45

Such scenes receive much comment from United States white soldiers, especially those from the south, but it seldom gets into print because it is considered a "delicate" subject. The French do not consider it such.

Make No Distinction

"I know from personal experience as well as from observation," said Lt. George W. Woody, Danville, Va., "that the French family makes no distinction between colors in inviting United States soldiers into their homes. It is a contrast to the general custom in America which has a different cultural background.

"Unless conditions are changed in the United States, we have lost the war for worldwide freedom."

Woody, a Negro, has a master's degree from Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn. At 26 he is an officer of the 490th port battalion, a thousand Negro sevedores who landed at Utah beach on D-day and were awarded the croix de guerre and the bronze arrowhead for their service to assault troops. The outfit remained on the beach until last November when it moved to its present assignment of loading and unloading canal barges and Liberty ships here.

WAC Major Comments

Maj. Charity E. Adams, Columbia, S. C., colored commander of 855 Negro KACs at the central postal directory here, also was solicited for counsel in telling America of inter-racial relations here.

"It is regrettable," she said, "that Americans are so race prejudiced that anything you write will offend many, each in the light of his own prejudices. Yet the story should be written, as part of the history of the European war, as part of the current news of America's army still in Europe.

"It is regrettable that Americans socially accept foreign Negroes but not American Negroes.

"In the army post office my WACs work with German prisoners of war, men of the people whose nazi leaders preached their racial excellence. The office relationship is without racial consciousness."

No Resentment Shown

"Do Negro WACs resent Negro soldiers going with French girls?" the major was asked.

"I have not observed any resentment and have had no occasion to inquire," she replied, "but I believe the WACs grant that the Negro soldiers have the privilege of doing as they please."

Maj. Adams was doing post-graduate work at Ohio State university when she enlisted three years ago. She spent three months in England with her organization before she came here with it in May.

Capt. Victor S. Kendall, white, Louisville, Ky., commands a port battalion which has 27 white officers and two Negro warrant officers. He said that relations between the Negro and white officers and enlisted men were good.

Captures Nazis, Thwarts Damage To Powder Train

Atlanta World

1-14-45

Florida Youth Commended For Resourcefulness

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEARTRE OF OPERATIONS — (SNS) — Thwarting of possible sabotage of an ammunition-laden train speeding toward the front and capture of two Germans were recently chalked up to the credit of Sergeant Ernest D. Jackson, 1734 Emerson Courts, Jacksonville, Florida here. He is a member of the 1210th Engineer (General Service) Regiment.

The incident which earned for the stocky sergeant the commendation of his superiors and of his entire outfit occurred recently when he was in charge of a guard detail on an ammunition train.

SEES SABOTEURS

With three men under him, Jackson, sergeant-of-the-guard, had detailed himself to walk a post in order to have a two-man shift and relief. At about eleven o'clock one night the train stopped two miles outside of a large French town.

1-14-45

Sergeant Jackson and his fellow guard, Private Eddie Scott, left the train to patrol outside. Walking near the engine, Sergeant Jackson heard a faint rustling in the hedgerow. Noiselessly he halted, melt in the shadow of a large box car and listened intently. Five minutes passed, then ten, then twenty.

The brakeman's "all aboard" signal call rang out. Jackson hesitated momentarily and caught his breath as two shadows-obscured figures came to life from the hedegrows rushing toward the train.

LEVELS CARBINE

"Halt!" the Sergeant cried, springing up, his carbine levelled. The pair halted, about-faced and stood motionless a few feet from him. To his challenge in English they gave no reply. The sergeant asked in French: 'Who goes there?' "No compris, Meester," came reply.

The "Meester" did it. Sergeant Jackson knew he had a couple of Germans on his hands. He ordered his captives to advance. He summoned the guard and placed his prisoners under arrest. They were later turned over to authorities at the Nomandy Base Section in Section in Cherbourg.

Negro Unit Mauls Nazis In Germany

Atlanta Constitution

3-5-45 Ga.

By WES GALLAGHER

SEVELEN, Germany, March 4. (AP)—With a bridge blown behind them, a negro tank battalion task force staged a miniature "Bastogne" in Sevelen today, mauling Nazi parachute units in savage street fighting while cut off for 18 hours.

3-5-45

The 784th Tank Battalion was fighting its first offensive action beside the 35th Infantry Division. The battalion won a place in the hearts of the men of the battle-hardened 37th Division, who had fought from St. Lo to Venlo and beyond, by the battle it put up here and the spearhead fighting it did to get here.

Sgt. Walter "Pop" Half, a 47-year-old veteran of the last war from Little York, Ill., who came back to this war as the commander of a tank bulldozer, was called out under fire to fill craters in a road. He went on to knock out a German 88-millimeter antitank gun.

3-5-45

Sgt. Ambrose Hicks, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., an artillery mechanic, was sent back to help bring a supply convoy through. He saved three trucks parked near a burning ammunition truck loaded with 2,300 pounds of TNT.

There were negro tank men who climbed out of the shelter of their tanks under mortar and shellfire to refuel.

Yanks Advance Along Rhine In Berlin Drive

Atlanta World

3-6-45 Ga.

Iwo Jima Fight Furious As Japs Battle To Death

BY THE S. N. S.

American First Army troops were battling inside Cologne Monday night, while fleeing Germans blew up bridges across the river from Neuss to Homberg and left their one railroad crossing at Wesel in operation. The whole First Army front moved forward from one to four miles. Ninth Army tanks fought into Orsoy, 10 miles south of Wesel and shelled Germans trying to ferry the river. Along the whole Rhine front the Yanks were on the move toward Berlin.

3-6-45

Meanwhile, to Germany's East Marshal Gregory Zhukov's forces threw the Nazis back upon the gates of Stettin Monday, capturing Stargard, fortress junction 19 miles east, and began shelling the suburbs of Berlin's chief Baltic port.

STARGARD FALL TOLD

The fall of Stargard was announced by Russian Premier- Marshal Stalin and the Germans. Advanced units already were in sight of Stettin Bay. Russian penetrations to the Baltics had snapped a triple lock of an estimated 200,000 Germans caught in three coastal pockets extending 150 miles from Kolberg and Danzig. Powerful new drives threatened to sweep the Germans out of Pomerania in short order.

West of Danzig, the Germans said the Russians opened a fresh drive on Danzig.

NEW JAP DEAD 3-6-45

Washington reported that hopeless counterattacks and Filipino guerrillas added new thousands to Japanese dead on Iwo Island and the Philippines as the increasing tempo of the American air onslaught forced Japan to close primary schools in Formosa and organize Tokyo students into full-time fire brigades.

3-6-45

Tokyo announced the school closures shortly after waves of Superfortresses struck the capital through snow clouds Sunday morning and all types of bombers rakes airdromes the length of Formosa. The Japanese said ten more B-29's raided Tokyo again Monday.

The Americans seized two more islands, Ticao and Burias, off the southern tip of Luzon.

Brazil in the Fighting

Richmond Times

WE READ with a great deal of satisfaction that Brazilian troops participated, with United States mountain troops, in the blows in Northern Italy which knocked the Germans off of the last heights from which they had dominated a long stretch of highway from Pistoia to the battle fronts southwest of Bologna. This is described as the first major victory of the war for the Brazilian Expeditionary Force. Our South American allies captured 3,000-foot Monte Castello on Wednesday, after which United States troops took the summit of 3,500-foot Monte Della Toraccia near by. From these two heights, the Germans had harassed our troop and supply movements along the highway for months.

Most of us, probably, have been prone to think of Brazil and our other Latin-American allies as furnishing help in the war chiefly in the form of materials. We have not visualized them as fighting allies on the battle fronts.

2-26-45

Of course, Brazil is not a strong military power, although she is a vast country and has a large population. None of our other Latin-American allies can put much military strength in the field. But it is good to have this reminder in the war news that Brazilian troops are in the thick of the fighting and are giving a good account of themselves, even though their numbers are limited.

This Brazilian victory in Italy comes at a propitious time, too, in view of the Inter-American Conference now in session in Mexico City. It helps us to appreciate the value of our Southern neighbors as allies not only in terms of economic and political warfare, but also in the actual fighting. It heightens the significance of the discussions in Mexico City, where plans are under way to strengthen the ties making for solidarity and security in the Western Hemisphere. Comrades in battle should make stronger comrades in peace.

Behind The Headlines

Norfolk, Va.

By P. B. YOUNG, SR.

Norfolk-Journal & Guide

AN EXCELLENT example of the goodwill being spread by our troops among the people of Italy came recently with an official commendation lauding the "exemplary conduct" of a veteran overseas infantry regiment from the mayor of a great Italian port city.

1-6-45

The Italian people have found our soldiers tolerant and sympathetic in this critical period in Italy's history, when its women and children are in want. The same sentiments expressed in the letter of commendation from the mayor, are those of thousands of Italians who have come to know and love the boys.

The letter of commendation has received endorsements of several commanding generals, including Lt. Gen. McNarney, deputy commander of Mediterranean Theatre of Operations, and Lt. Gen. Mark Clark, commander of 15th Army Group.

Translation of the commendation, addressed to the Commanding General, U. S. Army, is as follows:

1-6-45

"In my position as mayor of this town, I feel I should call the attention of your command to the exemplary conduct exercised by the Negro troops of the U. S. Army.

"Under wise guidance of the colonel commanding, all the components of the unit—officers and soldiers—have demonstrated the finest expressions of human solidarity by giving aid and assistance, particularly of a sanitary nature, to the whole civilian population. These attentions and the medical care granted have left in the hearts of all my citizens the most profound feeling of gratified thoughtfulness — especially among the poor people who need the most attention.

1-6-45

"Therefore, I desire, General, to make known to you these expressions from our hearts for such extreme solidarity and also to express best wishes for the victory of the Allied Armies. (Signed) the mayor."

FIFTH ARMY COMMANDER CHATTING WITH MEN IN ITALY

Foreign Service New York Times 1-9-45

N.Y., N.Y.

56

Lieut. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott talking with soldiers of the Ninety-second Infantry Division after their heroic stand in the hills above Viareggio.

The New York Times (U. S. Signal Corps)

Negro Combat Engineers Make Enviable Record

People's Voice N.Y.

1-13-45

With the recent War Department announcement that one-seventh of the Negro troops in the Army are in the Corps of Engineers much interest has been aroused as to the types of services which they perform. Aside from the back breaking jobs of construction, demolition, bridge and road building, many are assigned to technical jobs which require training and skill in the operation of machinery. Bulldozers, pneumatic drills, paving breakers, graders, compressors, cranes and power shovels are a few of those types of machines which Negro Combat Engineers are operating efficiently in every theatre of war. They are also manning mobile machine shops for vehicle maintenance.

1-13-45

During the past year, Negro Engineers have been an integral part in every task of major engineering importance. In January they constructed a vital "springboard" from England to Nazi Germany, working in three 8 hour and two 10 hour shifts and completing the job in record time, according to a War Department announcement.

LEARN FRENCH

In March without the use of bulldozers or other heavy, high speed equipment, a unit in Great Britain completed the construction of a huge Army camp in two weeks. In April a full squad of an Engineer battalion in England were taught French, anticipating its use when the Allies stormed the beaches of Hitler's fortress Europe.

1-13-45

In India, a Negro battalion taken from their work on the Ledo Road built a large parking apron for B-29 Superfortresses in one month, an engineering feat because of the intense heat preceding the monsoon season and the shortage of materials and water.

In September, the 1316th Engineer Regiment, then stationed at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, was selected by the Engineer Board at Fort Belvoir, Va. as the most proficient Bailey Bridge building crew in the Army and a training film, widely used for Army teaching purposes, was made of this unit during construction.

In November mine detector squads of a general service regiment operating on the Normandy beachheads removed the amazing total of 2,742 mines and booby-traps in eight days, the War Department announced.

1-13-45

In December, although hazards were great, Negro Engineers in the 1349th Regiment in England, without a single casualty, inspected and removed live mines, booby-traps, hand grenades and Bazooka, howitzer and rifle shells from 10,000 acres in six weeks.

New Yorkers in this unit include: Brooklyn—Sgt. June McNair, Pfc. Danny Ekins, Pvt. Lawrence Breland; Jamaica, L. I.—Pvt. Robert Schumpert, Pvt. Eddie Barnett; New York City—Sgt. Fred A. Crawford, Sgt. Durley Brown, Sgt. James A. Anderson, Pfc. John Akridge, Pfc. Waverly V. Askew, Pfc. Roy L. Waters, Pfc. James Moss, Pvt. James Edward Bell, Pvt. Lester Baker; Waterlist—Pvt. Nelson F. Thomason; Yonkers—Pvt. Will L. Webb.

Recently 188 Purple Heart Awards were made to members of the 855th Aviation Engineers in the South Pacific, the New Yorkers among them being: New York—T/4 Marshall James, Sgt. Sidney A. Johnson; Auburn—Pvt. Robert S. Copes; Jersey City—Cpl. Earl L. Daniel; Jamaica—T/4 Reuben R. Carter, T/5 Iverson Carter; Geneseo—Staff Sgt. Francis J. Simms; Ossining—T/3 Alfred I. Jordan; Brooklyn — Pfc. James Farrow and Pfc. Joseph Holland.

BLACK ARTILLERYMEN PROVE HEROES AGAINST GERMANS AT CLIMBACH; DEFY NAZI BIG GUNS

Black Dispatch Oklahoma City

Six Receive Medals While Many Others Are Still Fighting or Will Never Fight Again

3-3-45 OKLA.

BREAK SIEGFRIED LINE STRONG POINT

By SGT. RALPH MARTIN

(Released Through Associated Negro Press Through Courtesy of Yank Magazine

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY, WESTERN FRONT.—(ANP)—The generals had some medals to hand out, but not all of the guys could come. Some of them were still up in front digging in their three-inch guns, some of them were in the hospital, some of them were dead.

The six who were there stood stiffly at attention in their war-dirtied combat suits, their tired faces drained of feeling, their eyes staring straight ahead. The general was telling them why they were getting the medals.

3-3-45

They knew why. You don't forget things like Climbach.

Because you had to be crazy to move in on Climbach—everybody said so. You just don't try to position your guns in a flat valley when you've got big Kraut guns sitting smuggly on two rugged ridges flanking the town 300 yards away, and when you've got Nazi 88-gunners parked on the town's high ground right next to some Mark IV tanks, and when you've got the nearby woods lousy with mortars and machine-gun nests—and all of it, the whole German artillery book, zeroed in on a single road, waiting for you to come out so the Germans can start pulling lanyards.

But somebody had to do it. In this 103rd Division sector, Climbach was the last Nazi strongpoint before the Siegfried Line. And the Nazis told everybody they liked Climbach; they planned to stay there for the winter.

So the 103rd Division created Tack Force Blackshear, consisting of a platoon of Engineers, a company of Infantry from the 411th Regiment, seven medium tanks and a platoon of towed three-inch TDs from the 614th. The tactic for for the TD platoon of four guns to keep all the German batteries occupied while the Infantry infiltrated into the town around the flanks.

Leading the task-force column through the woods was the CO of C Company of the TDs. He wasn't supposed to be there; he just wanted to be. Somebody said it was because he was self-conscious about being a Negro. But somebody else said it was just because he was that kind of a guy; because he had lots of guts.

It wasn't long before some of his guts were spilling into the sticky mud near the thin road. Not only did his vehicle run over a mine but it also got smacked square by an 88. Then a machine gun opened up on him. When his executive officer raced through this shellfire to evacuate him minutes later, he was still alive, somehow.

Down in the valley, the medics were soon just as busy as the gun crews.

Ten-man crews can't last long when they're sitting in an open field getting so much fire that nobody knows what's coming from where.

They didn't last.

Less than an hour later, single soldiers were doing full crews' work—loading, aiming, firing and then racing back to a half-track to hop behind a .50 caliber to cut down Krauts trying to sneak thru the woods. One of these single soldiers was Platoon Sgt. William Tabron. (He got the Bronze Star.) Tabron kept going until a tank shell knocked out his gun. It wasn't until the next morning that he noticed his foot had been bloodied by shrapnel.

But Tabron was lucky; he's still alive.

Maybe 30 minutes later (nobody looks at his watch during a battle), there was only one gun still shooting. It was 75 yards from three other knock-out guns, and the Krauts couldn't seem to get at it because it was in a slight draw. Shells kept plopping all around it, just missing. One near-miss blew up a half-track 25 yards away.

It was hot and close, and everybody kept wondering how much longer—who would be next? Still sweating it out was the gun commander, Sgt. Dillard Booker from the Bronx, N. Y. So was his CO, 1st Lt. Thomas Mitchell, and so were a couple of other boys. (Booker got the Bronze Star and Mitchell the Silver Star.) Mitchell was racing around as fast as he did when he broke the Alabama track record for the quarter-mile dash back in his days as a college athlete. He was helping shoot guns, evacuating wounded, pointing out enemy gun positions.

Somehow (call it a mild miracle if you wish), this three-inch gun crew kept shooting. They silenced two loud-barking tanks at the town's outskirts. Then they picked up a muzzle blast from a camouflaged house and threy in three rounds of HE until the gun stopped firing. Before the three other guns were knocked out, they had accounted for some 88s and had swept the woods fairly clean of German MG and motar positions. But there was still plenty of small-arms fire, coming much too close.

Then the TD boys ran out of ammo.

"We felt stark, stripped naked," said Booker. "We figured this was it."

But it wasn't. The tanks were still hopelessly mired in the mud, too far in the rear to do any good, but three BAR boys from the infantry company volunteered to come up and act as flank security for the gun. (Two were soon casualties.) The crew flattened out and popped away with their MIs and carbines into the sniper-filled woods. They killed lots of Krauts in this interval.

Meanwhile T-5 Robert Harris of Kansas City, was getting ready to move out his ammo truck and head toward the front in a hurry. He was waved down by the task-force commander.

"You can't go up there right now," said the colonel. "The artillery fire is too heavy."

When a colonel talks like that to a corporal there usually is no room for argument. But T-5 Harris didn't argue; he didn't have time. He just yelled: "Get the hell out of my way. I'm taking this up to my buddies." The colonel laughs when he tells the story now.)

Driving straight through shellfire, Harris got his truck within 25 yards of Booker's gun before it bogged down in gooey mud. Then Harris, soon joined by others, made trip after trip lugging 54-pound ammo boxes to the gun position.

By dusk, all anyone could hear was the splattering of small-arms fire within the town itself. The stiffest fighting the doughfeet had was in the graveyard where the Germans had dug themselves in. When the short pitched battle was over the Germans were still in the graveyard, now waiting to be covered up.

If you asked the doughfeet about it, they'd tell you the TDs deserve credit for taking the town.

If you asked the TD's 3rd Platoon CO, Lt. Col. Frank Pritchard of Lansing, Mich., he'd tell you, "If you only knew how goddam proud I am of my boys." He was one of the six white officers—all the rest were Negroes. In the last war, Pitchard was a buck sergeant.

They're all proud of the 614th, from the division CG down. The division CG is supposed to have said he'd fight like hell if anyone tried to take the 614th TD away from him.

This isn't just words. And it isn't just top brass. Hitler would have a hemorrhage if he could see the white boys of the 411th Infantry bull-sessioning, going out on mixed patrols, sleeping in the same bombed buildings, sweating out the same chow line with Negro GIs.

And the white boys of the 411th are mostly Southern boys.

The Negroes come from the South, too. Not only that, but the C Company CO, 1st Lt. Walter Smith, will be the first to tell you that his boys aren't specially picked as in some outfits, that most of them are uneducated farmhands from North Carolina.

He'll tell you, too, that a few of his boys are trouble-making screw-ups who drink too much, that lots of his boys were almost scared into constipation during their first baptism of shellfire when they fought in Germany alongside the 3rd Cavalry Group. In other words, he'll tell you that his outfit is just like any other outfit. He's got a small percentage who were never meant to be soldiers, but most of the boys are good boys—and good soldiers, with plenty of guts.

"You get used to war," he said slowly. "You get used to everything."

He was no longer talking about Climbach and Germany; he was talking about back in Cherbourg. He was remembering all those Negro port battalion boys who came to him and begged to be transferred into a fighting outfit. They were willing to take busts—anything. They didn't want to hear any more white soldiers ask why there weren't more Negro soldiers in the front lines.

"I thought every soldier knew that it's up to the Army to decide who goes where," said Smith.

"Maybe if people just didn't worry about us being something special." He was groping for words. "Maybe if somebody could come up here and see how we've been fighting and killing and dying, how it doesn't seem to matter a damn what your color is--"

Smith broke off quickly. There was a short, strained silence, and then he laughed. It was a warm, rich laugh. He remembered that had happened only last week when the outfit was moving toward the front. He had noticed quite a liberal sprinkling of white soldiers in several of the trucks and asked the first sergeant if they were hitchhikers.

"No, sir," said the sergeant. "They're part of our gun crews."

After he finished the story the lieutenant sat there quietly for a minute, with a wonderful smile on his face.

"You know," he said, "maybe we're just a bunch of battle virgins compared with some outfits, but we've been sure been learning a hell of a lot of things about people."

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla.
3-3-45

Aids Smashing Of Rundstedt's Armor In 11-Day Slugging Match

Pittsburgh Courier Feb. 10 2-3-45

2-3-45

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY, France—Swapping punch for punch with Nazi Tiger tanks, Tan Yanks of the 827th Tank Destroyer Battalion shared in a great victory for the Allies during a hectic eleven-day battle in the two small Maginot Line villages of Hatten and Rittershoffen. High praise was heaped upon Second Lieut. Robert F. Jones, Caspar, Wyo., a platoon leader. The young officer was supposed to trip the machine gun trigger with a string, but when the first Nazi Tiger poked his nose around a bend during one of the night attacks, he couldn't resist the temptation of getting in the open and letting Hitler's boys have it . . . full force. He got right out on the steps and held the trigger down, spraying the Tiger with hot steel. The enemy tank opened fire and blew the steps right out from under Lieutenant Jones, but he wasn't hurt. 2-3-45

HELD FULL WEIGHT

Small units of the 827th Tank Destroyer Battalian and tankmen were giving support to the Thirty-first Infantry of the Seventy-ninth Diviison and armored infantry of the Fourteenth Armored Division. During the eleven days, these warriors parried and held the full weight of Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt's offensive against the two small towns. 2-3-45

The men fought like wildcats, although the entire group of Americans was barely equivalent to the full strength of a regiment. Nearly half the men in this regiment are casualties, but they battled the crack German Twenty-first Panzer Division, the Twenty-fifth Panzer Grenadier Division and an entire regiment of the Seventh Parachute Division. For every American casualty there were five to ten dead or wounded Germans.

The two German divisions attacked Jan. 8 and overran one American regiment in Hatten. The 315th rushed up to restore the situation the next day.

The colored tank units moved in Jan. 10 and they "were wonderful," declared commanding officers. One even went so far as to recommend the Silver Star for the heroic Lieutenant Jones. 2-3-45

KNOCKS OUT THREE TANKS

With the Germans gaining ground and pressing our men at dusk of Jan. 10, remnants of the Americans were ordered to withdraw from Hatten. But many refused to leave and another score stayed at Rittershoffen. That night at least half of one German division pinned down a second battalion at Hatten in the biggest attack against Rittershoffen. Another Tan Yank climbed to the heroic rank at this point. Sgt. Spencer Irving, Yanceyville, N. C., jockeyed his tank around and with three shots knocked out three German tanks.

For the next 48 hours the Nazis attacked three isolated American companies with tanks, flamethrowers and bazookas.

The Americans held out and continued to match the German fire. Help arrived Jan. 16, 17, 18, when tanks and armored infantry poured into the two towns. In two hours, the Americans stopped the attack, and on Jan. 20, the beate Germans had fled.

Campaign in Italy Picks Up Speed

AFRO-AMERICAN

4-28-45

Pilots Share Honor of Bologna's Capture

MINES BIG DANGER

Balt., Md.

Castelnuovo Taken by 92nd Unit Without Fight

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

4-28-45

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY—(By Cable)—Our troops on Sunday continued forcing enemy withdrawals along this Fifth Army front, pressing forward in the Po Valley over 20 miles northwest of the city of Bologna in the Eastern sector.

Advances were also made in other areas westward, including the capture of the town of Castelnuovo in Serchio and probing nearly six miles northwest of Carrara on the Ligurian seacoast.

Elements of one 92nd Division infantry regiment, now in the Serchio Valley sector, jumped off Wednesday and by late Saturday had advanced four miles and taken without opposition Castelnuovo, an important road center in that sector. 4-28-45

Enemy Leaves in Haste

Fascist Italians previously holding forth in Serchio were still withdrawing hastily in the face of each new onslaught Sunday, destroying their artillery installations which were too heavy for quick movement.

Some idea of the extent of this withdrawal can be gathered from the fact that the only casualty by late Saturday when I left thsi unit was one lieutenant who stepped on a mine and had his foot blown off .

Many Deserters Taken

These troops had taken over 250 deserters and there was serious expectation that an unusually large number of Italians would desert en masse within the next few days. 4-28-45

A small uhit of this regiment is fighting with altillery units attached to the 92nd Division in the extreme western coastal sector in the vicinity of San Zana, northwest of Carrara, where enemy resistance is still extremely heavy, with evidences that Germans are using sailors and former airforce personnel to bolster their ground forces.

With teh exception of colored combat engineers, artillery, light tankers and tank destroyer units, most of the fighting in this coastal sector in this vicinity of route 1 has in reality been done by white American infantry troops now operating with the 92nd.

Advance 10 Miles

East of Serchio, other colored troops, fighting in the difficult terrain of the Apennine Mountains, pushed forward over ten miles after fleeing enemy troops to enter the town of Pieve Pelago.

These troops are also facing Fascist Italian divisions, one of which is Monte Rosa and the other Italia. The latter was once Mussolini's crack troops.

I have just left this unit of our troops and they had made no contact with fleeing Italians or been able to catch up with them early Saturday.

The only form of resistance encountered were a few mines and blown roads at intermittent spots.

Moving Toward Modena

Another regiment of colored troops in this area is also pushing forward through the Apennines in the general chase of the enemy that has developed on this front in the past three days. I hae not visited this unit since its recent attack, but will leave immediately to enter the field with it. 4-28-45

Our troops are among those moving forward in general direction of the Modena in the Po Valley which is also an important road center connecting Bologna with points in northwestern Italy.

It is not quite clear whether our troops pushing up through Serchio will link up with the 92nd moving up Ligurian seacoast to La Spezia and Genoa.

Sharing honors in the fall of Bologna is the Fighter Group commanded by Col. Benjamin O. Davis, whose pilots escorted the 15th Army Air Force heavy bombers over German installations in that vicinity and have strafed moving stock and strong points since the launching of the new Italian offensive.

Field Marshal Sir Harold R. W. Alexander, supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean, said in part concerning the fall of Bologna:

"The capture of Bologna is a ictory that belongs to every Allied fighting man—soldier, sailor and airman—in the Italian theatre."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN

Circ. D. 12,360

JUL 23 1945

Valor of Negro Troops

This is a condensation of an article printed in the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, written by the editor of another southern newspaper, the Norfolk (Va.) Journal and Guide.

By P. BERNARD YOUNG, JR.

Generals supposedly furnished Senator Eastland of Mississippi with the purported facts upon which he based his amazing charge that Negro troops in this war have been an utter and abysmal failure. This is an accusation that is difficult to imagine, in view of the high praise which our top generals, in all major theaters of operations, have publicly accorded those same fighters.

Senator Eastland's charge not only is refuted by famous American generals, but is rebutted by three war correspondents of the Journal and Guide, who, among them, have spent 28 months in active war zones.

The Journal and Guide's war correspondents, Thomas W. Young, Lem Graves, Jr., and John Jordan, on the basis of their first-hand experience with our troops in combat, took sharp issue with Eastland's unqualified indictment. Each cited favorable appraisals of colored servicemen by famous combat generals.

In regard to the senator's direct reference to the 92d division, Correspondent Graves said: "Maj-Gen E. M. Almond, who commanded it, declared on the day after V-E day that his artillery, tank and engineer units had maintained throughout the final phases of the Italian campaign the same magnificent performance for which they were previously cited."

"The colored soldiers are doing a good job," Gen Clark told Jordan in September, 1944. He was referring to the Negro enlisted men of the 370th regiment of the 92d division, who were fighting Germans in the mud and mountains along Italy's west coast.

"In my 10 months of roving around the European theater," the correspondent continued, "I have never come upon an American outfit, white or colored, that could be described as an utter failure, either in service or in actual combat.

"Has the Mississippi senator ever glanced at the casualty figures of the 92d infantry division? Has he ever bothered to note how many enemy prisoners these colored troops were able to take while in their socalled unimportant position in the 5th army line?"

Correspondent Young called attention to the record of the 761st tank battalion which fought with the 3d, 7th and 9th armies through France, Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and Germany. He pointed out that several officers and men have had two and three tanks shot or blown from under them.

Maj-Gen Eddy, commanding one of the army corps with which it fought, told Young: "I consider the 761st tank battalion to have entered combat with such conscious courage and success as to warrant commendation. The speed with which they adapted themselves to the front line under most adverse weather conditions, the gallantry with which they faced some of Germany's finest troops, and the confident spirit with which they emerged from their recent engagements entitle them surely to consider themselves the veteran 761st."

Maj-Gen Raymond G. Lehman, commander of the 93d infantry division fighting on Bougainville island, said of his men:—

"They have the same courage, the same fear and fighting spunk as any other soldier. They are quick to learn and eager to perform. They can give and take, and they are about the best disciplined in the army."

Young recalled Lieut James B. McCullin and Sherman White, who took off on July 2, 1943, at the controls of P-40 Warhawks protecting American bombers with white crews in the assault on Sicily—and Lieut Paul G. Mitchell, who flew from a field in Sicily, after the island was invaded in August of the same year, to dive-bomb enemy troops and instalations—and Lieut Sam Bruce, who fought so spectacularly in the air defense of the beachhead at Anzio in January, 1944—and Capt Erwin B. Lawrence, who flew his fighter plane over Yugoslavia to strafe the Nazis.

"These men would be surprised and a little bitter if they ever heard about the senator's statement, but fortunately they will be spared that suffering, because none of them returned from their missions," he said.

Correspondent Graves related that Lieut-Gen Truscott, commanding the 5th army in Italy, told him that Negro artillery, tank, reconnaissance, tank destroyer, combat engineer, ordnance and the quartermaster troops "who have served in this theater under my command have done an exceptionally good job." On another occasion Gen Truscott told correspondents that the best general-service engineer regiment in this command had been the 92d engineer regiment.

Graves also quoted a revealing statement of Lieut-Gen Ira C. Eaker, acting commanding general of the army air forces, concerning the contributions of Negro airmen to the victories of this war. Speaking to the officers of two Negro fighter groups in Naples in the late spring of 1944, the general said he had followed their exploits since they were first committed to combat, and that he was convinced that they were qualified, capable and courageous.

of Brattleboro, Vt., a former resident of this town, will be held Monday afternoon at the Bartlett funeral home. Rev Harold T. Sharpe of the Methodist church will conduct the service. Burial will be in the family plot in the Main Street cemetery.

56n- 1945

Foreign Service Europe

332nd Pilots, 92nd Doughboys Tell Of Indignities As Nazi Prisoners

Chicago, Ill.

Chicago DEFENDER

NEW YORK PORT OF EMBARKATION, Camp Shanks, N. Y.—Four Negro Mustang fighter pilots of 332nd Fighter Graup and two hardened Doughboys of the 92nd Infantry Division, who had distinguished themselves in combat against the Nazis until they were captured in spirited engagements, arrived here May 29, the War Department announced today. They were included in a shipment of 2,675 American soldiers liberated from German prison camps by the surging Allied armies.

6-9-45

These veterans of the Italian campaign, whose numerous decorations were indicative of their war-winning endeavors, had suffered indignities and deprivations while in the hands of the Germans. But their hardships of the past were only unpleasant memories today as they cheered enthusiastically the announcement that they would receive 60-day furloughs.

Interesting stories were related by the repatriated Americans. First Lieut. Roger B. Gaiter of 136 Sheridan avenue, Seaside Heights, N. J., a graduate of New Jersey State Teachers' college at Glassboro, took the lead in the recitation of experiences. He enlisted in the Army in October 1942, and subsequently joined Col. Benjamin O. Davis' 332nd Fighter Group.

6-9-45

Went Over in 1944

Shipped overseas in July, 1944, the handsome 23-year-old lieutenant went to Italy by way of Oran. He flew 37 missions over France, Germany and the Balkans, destroying five Nazi planes on the ground. But misfortune overtook him late in November on his 38th mission while he was engaged in low level bombing and strafing of Wehrmacht installations in the Lake Balaton area of Hungary. Flak riddled his plane, forcing him to parachute out of his burning craft with an injured knee.

After eluding his pursuers for four days by keeping under cover during the day and crawling toward Allied lines at night, Lieut. Gaiter finally was captured. He recounted what followed:

"I was taken to Gyor in Hungary along with six other captured airmen, all of whom were white. As we were being marched to the Gyor railroad station for shipment into Germany, a mob of civilians gathered in the streets and began to assault us. The guards did little to stave them off, and we were beaten up pretty badly. A captain from St. Louis was clubbed on the head with a brick and knocked unconscious.

6-9-45

Abused by Germans

"Cut and bleeding, we arrived at the Gyor station and took the train to Vienna. People spat at us and cursed us there, and when we got to the prison camp in Germany, the living conditions were extremely bad. We got practically nothing to eat, and were fortunate in being rescued by Allied armies in time."

Lieutenant Gaiter wears the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, the Purple Heart and the European Theater of Operations ribbon with three battle stars.

A typical example of the treachery and deceit employed by the Germans in Italy for propaganda purposes was described by Pvt. Rothacker C. Smith of 10226 Delmar street, Detroit, Mich.

A former student at Emmanuel Missionary college in Michigan, Private Smith battled with the 366th Infantry Regiment of the 92nd Division until the outfit reached a position near Pisa. A tremendous enemy artillery and mortar barrage shattered a building in which Private Smith and his squad had taken positions, leaving him unconscious with a fractured arm, smashed shoulder and deep lacerations of the face.

March 35 Miles

But despite his weakened condition and multiple injuries, the Nazis forced him and his buddies to march 35 miles in the freezing weather of late December. Then, after receiving treatment at a hospital, he was interned in a prison camp.

"Shortly after I arrived at the POW camp," Smith recalled, "the Germans handed me a form similar to a radiogram and told me I could send a message home to my parents saying that I was treated well, healthy and not lacking in comforts. I was happy as a lark to let my father and mother know of my safety, so I filled it out.

"About three months later, when some captured Doughfeet of my old outfit were brought to the camp where I was kept, I got the surprise of my life. One of the boys came over to me and pulled a four-page newspaper from his pocket. Right on the front page was the radiogram I thought I had sent to my parents.

"The Germans had never sent the message but had used it for propaganda purposes. They took my message and others like it and printed them in a newspaper. They then shot these papers into the American lines to tell the boys how well they treat men who surrender to them. But the trick didn't work because not a single GI surrendered without a fight."

Flew 90 Missions

First Lieutenant Walter L. McCreary of 509 South Pine street, San Antonio, Texas, went overseas in January, 1944, and was attached to the 100th Fighter Squadron of the 332nd Fighter Group. He flew 90 patrol and strafing missions over Italy, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Rumania, Germany, Hungary and France.

6-9-45

On McCreary's 90th mission on October 12, 1944, flak disabled his plane over Hungary and he bailed out at 7,000 feet west of Lake Balaton. He landed uninjured, but the mob of civilians which gathered about struck and reviled him.

As the Germans retreated before the indomitable Soviet Armies, he was forced to march through the bitterest weather of the winter. He recalls one particular 90-mile forced march which many prisoners did not survive. His last POW camp was located near Nuremberg, the shrine city of Nazism.

Second Lieut. Richard D. Macon of the 332nd Fighter Group's 99th Fighter Squadron, took his Air Corps training with Lieutenant Gaiter at Tuskegee, Ala., and went overseas with him. He was strafing German radar equipment in France in his fifth mission when his plane was shot down. Suffering from a fractured neck, he was taken prisoner by the Nazis and hospitalized for three months.

Red Cross a Saviour

The food served him was as vile, he asserted, as the prison accommodations and survival was possible only with the aid of the Red Cross parcels he received weekly. He was marched long distances from one camp to another, and was finally freed from Moosburg on April 29 by units of General Patton's Third Army. Lieutenant Macon's home is at 524 South 63rd street, Birmingham, Ala.

First Lieut. Charles T. Williams of 1669 East 113th street, Los Angeles, Calif., was assigned to the 301st Fighter Squadron of the 332nd. Arriving overseas last July 27, he flew nine missions before engine trouble forced him down in central Yugoslavia. He eluded enemy searching parties for four days but was seized at Sarajevo.

Subjected to several forced marches, he finally wound up in Moosburg. Said Lieutenant Williams: "On April 29, General Patton's troops freed us. Fighting for the town began at 0915 and the Krauts quit at 1145. The best sight I've yet seen was Old Glory flying over Moosburg. It's a feeling you can't describe."

Pvt. James V. Gray of Dixie, Ga. also was a member of the Buffalo division. A veteran of 10 months overseas and 120 days of combat fighting in Italy, Private Gray was taken prisoner after he had been knocked unconscious by a shell concussion and pinned to the groun by a fallen tree. He was placed in a box-car jammed with 50 other prisoners and taken to Moosburg.

6-9-45

The journey lasted 17 days, the Georgian declared, during which time the prisoners were locked in cars for as long as seven days at a stretch. The food rations consisted of one loaf of bread a day for 12 men and a thin, watery bowl of soup.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUN
Circ. D. 277,172

JUN 14 1945

Negro Troops to Help Occupy Germany

Paris, June 14 (A. P.).—The United States Army will try to have 10.4 per cent Negro troops in the total American occupation force in Germany and apply the same ratio of troops sent home for eventual discharge, it has been disclosed at ETO headquarters. That is the standard percentage used by the War Department wherever possible in fixing the proportion of Negro troops.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Cir. D. 641,194—S. 1,067,857

JUN 14 1945

Keep Negroes in Reich

PARIS, June 14 (AP).—The U. S. Army will try to have 10.4 per cent Negro troops in the total American occupation force in Germany and apply the same ratio to troops sent home for eventual discharge, it was disclosed today.

Negro GIs Humiliated In Germany

People's Voice

N.Y.

In a letter to PV this week, five sergeants revealed the humiliation they suffered in Germany recently, when white officers attempted to pin a case of rape on members of their unit, the 660th Quartermaster Truck Co., stationed in Munich. The men were saved from the charge by the action of their white commanding officer.

Excerpts from their letter follow:

6-23-45

"Now that the war against Germany is ended, it appears that elements of our Army are turning their efforts to making the lives of Negro troops as miserable as possible . . . Hardly more than a month ago, we were awakened in the middle of the night by an American major (white) accompanied by a number of armed enlisted men.

"He informed one of our men that a German woman had been raped, and said that if he couldn't find the 'nigger' who did it that he was going to kill all the 'niggers.' . . . The following day the supposed victim was brought to our company by the major to identify the attacker. Fortunately no one was selected by the woman. . . .

"Today we were called to a company formation to be inspected by another supposed rape victim and two other German witnesses. This time one of our boys was selected as the attacker. Our commanding officer saved him from a possible tragedy by digging up company records to prove that we were not operating in the place where the incident occurred.

Fighting Together

Negro Platoon Aided 69th Division In Wiping Out Last German Pocket

Pittsburgh Courier 6-9-45

Pgh., Pa.

WITH THE 69th INFANTRY DIVISION IN GERMANY—Spearheading the crossing of the Mulde River, north of Leipzig, the Negro platoon of K Company, 272nd Infantry Regiment, helped the 69th Division wipe out the Eilenberg pocket of resistance.

It was Hitler's birthday when T/Sgt. William Peklinsky, 3560 West Street, Holiday Cove, W. Va., a white veteran, who gave up a cracker-jack platoon to lead the crack Negro soldiers, assembled his men for the patrol just behind a hill crest.

The mission of the patrol was to cross the river and find out the strength and the location of the fortifications of the pocket.

HELL BROKE LOOSE

The only bridge standing over the Mulde in the area was controlled by two German guards armed with machine guns, rifles and hand grenades. Two Negro doughboys, Pfc. Albert Barthell of Cordele, Ga., and Pfc. Amos Grice of Selma, Ala., scouts, worked their way up to the bridge, wounded the two Nazi guards with rifle fire and then finished them off with bayonets. The patrol followed across and then all hell broke loose.

6-9-45

Immediately, the Nazis opened up on the patrol, still on the banks of the river, with all they had. The Negro doughboys, who by this time had over a month of combat, hit the ground. Five of the patrol were wounded, but they accounted for twenty Germans and took thirty-four wounded prisoners.

Returning by way of the bridge was impossible as mortar shells had demolished it, so Pvt. Edward H. Rhynes of Chicago, Ill., ducked and dodged down the river bank until he found a fording spot and crossed the river to get Pvt. Bill Bayless, the white medic of San Francisco, Calif., to take care of the wounded. Private Rhynes then led the patrol and the wounded back across the ford to safety behind the Sixty-Ninth's lines.

After the declaration of VE-Day, they helped guard a portion of the Reich Autobahn that the Generals of the Allied armies used to meet the Russians.

PLATOON MEMBERS

Among members of the platoon are:

6-9-45

First Lieut. James P. Van Schaeck, Manasquan, N. J. (white).
T/Sgt. William Peklinsky, Holiday Cove, W. Va. (white).
S/Sgt. James C. Foster, Jacksonville, Fla.
Pfc. Melvin Floyd, Chicago, Ill.
Pfc. B. H. Bayless, San Francisco, Calif. (white).
Pvt. Rudolph Mays, Coatesville, Pa.
S/Sgt. Lorenza Davis, Milwaukee, Wis.
Sgt. Charles L. Simms, Los Angeles, Cal.
Pfc. Alumnus N. Stewart, Chicago, Ill.
Pfc. Vernon Hopkins, Chicago, Ill.
Pfc. Albert Barthell, Cordele, Ga.
Pfc. Amos Grice, Selma, Ala.
Pvt. Moses C. Jackson, Chicago, Ill.
Pvt. Edward Rhynes, Chicago, Ill.
Pvt. Johnnie B. Nunn, Chicago, Ill.
Pvt. William Aldrich, Pocatello, Ind.
Pvt. Wilbert Jackson, Los Angeles, Calif.
Pvt. Booker T. Miles, East St. Louis, Ill.
Sgt. Henry G. Bergagne Jr., New Orleans.
Sgt. Clarence L. Richardson, Bownemont, W. Va.
Pfc. David C. Jackson, Houston, Tex.
Pfc. Richard C. Tucker, Detroit, Mich.
Pfc. Alphonza Windley, Philadelphia, Pa.
Pvt. Thomas Swain, Mound City, Ill.
Pvt. General S. Easlly, Nashville, Tenn.
Pvt. Ozie Dubose, Senica, S. C.
Pvt. Robert R. Sampson, Clinton, N. C.
Pvt. John H. Brown, Greensboro, N. C.
Pvt. Crisp Cooper, Philadelphia, Pa.
Pvt. Norman King, Coconut Grove, Fla.
Sgt. Eric F. Jones, Philadelphia, Pa.
Corp. S. C. Kirkland, New York, N. Y.

GI Combat Volunteers Take Nazi Town By Storm

Chicago Defender Ill.

4-28-45

WITH THE U. S. 1ST INFANTRY DIVISION, EAST OF THE RHINE.—These Negro GIs said they could fight. They volunteered for a chance to prove it. They took a German town in the space of a few minutes, and now no one doubts their word.

That's what the men of Company B of the 16th Infantry Regiment claim, and from the story they tell it seems reasonable to believe that the Jerries would echo a fervent "Amen."

On March 20, with Company B poised to jump off in the attack against Oberpleis on the east banks of the Rhine, the Fifth Platoon, composed entirely of Negro personnel, was about to get its battle initiation.

Lieutenant Vincent J. Kachnik of 4715 South Loomis street, Chicago, the platoon leader, oriented his men carefully and explained in detail what was expected of them after zero hour. He emphasized that speed and aggressiveness were essential—and apparently his audience took the words to heart.

Came zero hour and the fifth platoon took off, but fast. Throwing care and caution to the winds and quickly out-distancing their lieutenant, the Negro GIs headed for the objective. Ignoring the first burst of fire from the amazed German, they completely overwhelmed the opposition and in the space of a few minutes were astride the objective and looking for new towns to conquer. 4-28-45

When Lieutenant Kachnik finally caught up with his fighters, the first sight that greeted him was that of a Negro soldier emerging from a house leading a most willing German whom he had by the arm. Spying his platoon leader, the soldier shouted, "Look, Sir, I've got another Heinie."

First Negro Tanker Class Graduate From The Armored School

New York Age 6-30-45 N.Y.

THE REPLACEMENT AND TRAINING COMMAND, Italy — The increasingly important role of the Negro soldier on the fighting front was highlighted recently when the first class of Negro tankers was graduated from the Armored School, an installation of The Replacement and Training Command of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations.

Forty-nine Negro enlisted men, selected for their ability and leadership, completed the rigorous course in Armored tactics.

Chosen from branches of the service such as Coast Artillery, Quartermaster Corps, Field Artillery, Engineers, Transportation Corps and Air Force, the men were given basic training in tank operations, gunnery and tactics while attending the Armored School.

Praise was given the group of Negro graduates by Brigadier General L. C. Jaynes, Commanding General of The Replacement and Training Command and himself a former tanker. 6-30-45

"These men demonstrated unusual interest during their training", General Jaynes said. "They are to be commended for their proficiency."

The graduates from the New York area are Cpl. Owen M. Beckles, 65 Wickham avenue, Middletown; Cpl. Norman Hoyte, 161-07 72nd avenue, Flushing; and Pvt. Elmer H. Bigham, 125 North Sea road, Southampton.

SO WHAT? — — — — By Jay Jackson

"Nein, Fraulein, their country has trained them for non-fraternization since birth!"

56n-1945

Foreign Service Europe

800,000 Tan Yanks Cited in Britannica's '45 Annual

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

More than 800,000 colored Americans were serving in the armed forces by the end of 1944, according to an article in the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1945 Book of the Year to be published early May 1. 4-21-45

Of these, the article states, 701,678 were in the army and of them more than 425,000 were overseas; 148,769 were in the navy; 5,702 in the marines, and 3,556 in the coast guard.

"In addition to numerous individual citations, a notable general record in both the combat and service branches was recognized in an official army release," the article says.

Special Citations Made

The release, the article adds, made special mention of the combat records of the following:

Ninety-third Division in the Pacific, the 761st Tank Battalion in France, the 92nd Division in Italy;

Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron and 332nd Fighter Group, commanded by Maj. George Roberts and Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., who, with many members of these units, received the Distinguished Flying Cross and other decorations." 4-21-45

d maor mear moar mead oa

Progress in Navy Branches

The navy commissioned twenty-eight colored ensigns and lieutenants during 1944; and, on Presidential order, opened the ranks and commissioned ranks of the WAVES to colored women, according to the Book of the Year.

The book also says that on the industrial front nearly 2,000,000 colored persons were reported in war jobs, with considerable increase in skilled and semi-skilled employment and also in union, particularly CIO, membership.

Presidential Citation Is Awarded Unit

Atlanta World
4-22-45
Atlanta, Ga.

French Recognize Distinction In Battle Of Colmar

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

WITH U. S. SEVENTH ARMY IN GERMANY—(ANP)— In Germany where I am now installed, I have been given a special assignment with the 7th army to cover a Negro tank outfit that had distinguished itself in the battle of the Ardennes. When I arrived to find this outfit, I was informed that it had been shifted, to another Army sector. Instead, I found that the famous 969th Negro artillery of Bastogne fame was fighting with the 7th army. I immediately attached myself to this unit and was happy to be with it again, more so to learn about the true story of Bastogne which brought the outfit so much recognition. 4-22-45

The first thing the commander told me was that the battalion had been awarded the Presidential citation for the heroic defence in the "Battle of Bastogne. This citation was included in the same order as the 101st Airborne Division. Thus far there has been no official ceremony because the battalion was in continuous action since the Bastogne triumph. In actual fact, the 969th has been in action continuously since its appearance on the western front last July.

ALWAYS CALLED TO DESTROY ENEMY POCKETS

This battalion is always called upon to destroy surviving traces of enemy pockets after a big battle. This is the first time a Negro combat unit has received such distinguished recognition. 4-22-45

The 969th has received double honors. In the "Battle of Colmar" the battalion distinguished itself again supporting the 1st French infantry, and the 2nd and 5th French divisions that were fighting in the city of Colmar in the Alsace pocket. In recognition of the battalion's brilliant exploits, the mayor has conferred the honor upon the battalion to use the coat of arms of the City of Colmar. The commanding officer, Lt. Col. Hubert D. Barnes, told me that the battalion would incorporate the arms in the insignia.

TWENTY EIGHT BRONZE STARS RECOMMENDED

The total amount of decorations the battalion has received amounts to 14 Bronze stars, one Silver star and one Croix de Guerre. These decorations cover the Normandy, Brest and Bastogne campaigns. In addition 28 Bronze stars have been recommended.

The record of the 969th has been so outstanding that it is safe to say the battalion will at the close of the war emerge as one of the most formidable combat units to have appeared on the western front. 4-22-45

The Battalion commander, Lt. Col. Hubert D. Barnes from Wisconsin, Mass., is a proud man—and justly so-at the inextinguishable glory of his unit. It is due to his skill and coolness in the sombre and terrible moments that the battalion has achieved such a distinguished record. In the outfit, it is the concensus of opinion that during the exciting days of the Bastogne battle, Col. Barnes was cool calm and collected. He is remarkable for his friendliness of manner and the absence of those petty jealousies which are apt to irritate Negro soldiers. 4-22-45

UNDERSTANDS NEGRO PSYCHOLOGY

In actual fact, Col. Barnes understands Negro psychology. If there is any undercurrent of discontent among [illegible] due to race, he would [illegible] to arbitrate. His method in dealing with such an affair is simple and effective. Col. Barnes would prevail upon the most enlightened member of the battalion to talk to the men who are dissatisfied, and to present a true picture of the situation. He would purposely select a full-blooded Negro in order that the men would not think that they are being deceived or "sold out."

NEGROES' COURAGE UPHELD IN INQUIRY

New York Times
N.Y.

Gibson Lays Difficulties of 92d Division in Italy to Its High Illiteracy

3-15-45

By MILTON BRACKER

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, March 14—The circumstances surrounding the American Ninety-second Division and its combat record present "a rather dismal picture," but one that may contribute greatly to working out the difficult Army race problem in the future, it was asserted here today by Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

All the enlisted men in the Ninety-second Division are Negroes. The Division's accomplishments so far in the Tyrrhenian sector of the Italian front have been limited in terms of the map and highly controversian in terms of general discussion throughout the Mediterranean theatre. 3-15-45

Largely because of this controversy, spread to the general and Negro press at home, Mr. Gibson came here at the end of February. He has visited most Negro units, as well as high Army officers. His appraisal must be taken most seriously because he is the official representative of the War Department and is a Negro. He also is the first Government official to make a candid publishable appraisal of the situation.

To understand the situation it must be realized that the generalization that "Negro troops can't fight" has been depressingly prevalent on and behind the Italian front virtually since the Ninety-second Division arrived. As usual it has been picked up by the worst elements in the Army, but too often it has been repeated by high officers of unquestioned integrity, although often they are men whose knowledge of the Ninety-second Division is not first hand.

Defends Negroes' Courage

Mr. Gibson denied this generalization on the basis of his inspection. 3-15-45

"If the division proves anything," he said, "it does not prove that Negroes can't fight. There is no question in my mind about the courage of Negro officers or soldiers and any generalization on the basis of race is entirely unfounded."

Mr. Gibson then frankly went into the touchiest aspect of all. He conceded that certain units of the Ninety-second Division had engaged in "more or less panicky retreats, particularly at night when the attitude of some individual soldiers seemed to be "I'm up here all alone; why in hell should I stay up here?'"

But, he added, "not all the straggling and running has happened in the Ninety-second Division."

In other divisions, he said, it seemed to be that it was more often the case of some individuals falling back in every unit while with the Ninety-second "the disintegration was likely to be the behavior pattern of some patrols or platoons as units."

High Illiteracy Is Blamed

In the relatively high percentage of illiteracy of the division Mr. Gibson felt lay the key to the trouble and certainly a reason for making unfair any comparison of it with veteran whitie outfits like the Thirty-fourth Division. Ninety-two per cent of the Negro Division were in Class 4 or Class 5 in Army literacy tests.

Class 5 is the worst. Seventy-five per cent of the Ninety-second's men were in Class 4, semi-literacy.

"You can't apply the same training schedules where that many men are illiterate as where only 3 per cent are," Mr. Gibson commented. 3-15-45

He said that normally all Class 5 men would have had a special period of "basic education" but that the men in the Ninety-second were not because the division was being activated at the time they were called up and they were sent to it immediately.

General Army figures show 46.4 per cent of Negroes are in Class 5 and 35 per cent are in Class 4, against 4 per cent of whites in Class 5 and 16 per cent in Class 4.

Mr. Gibson said that when the usual type of racial incidents occurred around the division many Negroes were likely to resent "fighting two wars" and fall back on the familiar, "what the hell have we got to fight for here anyway?"

But he declared he was encouraged because he felt the War Department has "a flexible attitude in trying to find its future policy." He will report to the advisory committee on special troop problems.

Col. Benjamin Davis Jr., commanding the Negro 332d Fighter Group, who was a roommate of Mr. Gibson at the University of Chicago, attended the press conference.

News-Dispatch
Ala.

KILLED IN BELGIUM — Sgt. James Keith, 25 (above) whose wife and 3-year-old son reside at 417 12th Street, Ensley, was killed in action Jan. 14 while fighting in the Army in Belgium. In service two years, he had been overseas one year. His widow has received the Purle Heart award posthumously to Sgt. Keith. In addition to his wife and son, he is survived by his parents, who reside in Helena. 3-17-45

White GI Tells Of Courage Of Negro Soldier

Negro News
2-17-45

WARREN, Ohio—The kind of unselfish devotion and courage being experienced between Negro and white GIs in this war is revealed in a letter from a Pfc. (now recovering from an attack of sciatic rheumatism in a hospital in England) who tells the story of James Alvin Wilson, who weigh about 176, at the time I was, as they say, under its column ABOUT PEO-PLE. This time it is William Gil-soaking wet. But it evidently camarad-lespie, white private formerly "in spite of the rain and snow, didn't make much difference to me. I was a white soldier, who had volunteered to take me back to the foxhole and gently lift me to station 3-10-45 aid the pain in my hips was at the edge.

that time quite acute, and Jim was always asking if he was hurting me. As I laid my head upon his chest, I could hear his deep breathing and the laboring of his heart. He carried me a little over a mile to the aid station, and it was then that I learned Jim had 'trench feet,' and had carried me all that distance through snow. Every step must have been torture. 3-10-45

"We were together from then on, sleeping in cots close together, because Jim told them that he would take care of me.

"The care he gave me became a legend with the other patients. At night when I awoke from the pain, Jim was there with water, talking to me telling me to 'take it easy', bringing me a cool towel and wiping my face. He would bring cigarets every day, and I had the best of everything.

"And then came our parting. Jim back to his outfit and myself to a general hospital. He carried one end of my litter to the ambulance and when they drove away his parting words were, 'I'll see you in the States kid,' and we pulled away. As I looked back the sun was shining, and Jim stood there waving his big powerful hand, and as the sun hit his combat helmet, it seemed to glow into a halo, and I could see he was crying as I was. 3-10-45

"Thus was my friendship with a fellow named Jim. I wondered as the days passed why he didn't write as he promised. Then one day I had my answer as I was reading the 'Stars and Stripes.' I came across an article something like this:

"'James Alvin Wilson, colored, 24 Lenox Avenue, New York, N. Y. Killed in action November 23, 1944.'."

Negro Infantrymen Save Whites in Tight Spot

The Kansas City Call

Combat Troops Do 'Magnificent Job' On Rhine, Side by Side With Whites

Kansas City Mo.

By HARRY McALPIN

3-30-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Negro infantrymen who volunteered for transfer from service troops to combat infantry and are serving side by side with white troops on the Rhine did a "magnificent job" on their very first day in the line, according to reports reaching here from their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Norman Moore. Moore credited them with saving a company in a tight spot. 3-30-45

This heroic performance occured about the same time the jim-crowed, segregated 92nd Division —all-Negro except its top command of white officers and staff —was being maligned in the white press as result of a press conference in Rome with Truman K. Gibson, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War. Gibson was quoted as saying the Negroes of the 92nd "melted away" in the face of combat fire. 3-30-45

Thomas R Henry, war correspondent with United States Troops on the Rhine for the Washington Evening Star, reporting the praise-worthy performance of the Negroes, said:

"I checked the situation in two divisions today. The best story is that of an infantry company getting a platoon of colored men, mostly Sicily and Africa veterans in behind-the-lines jobs, eager to prove their worth as fighting soldiers. The colored platoon trained hard for months for the new roles. 3-30-45

"The white regiment was stalled before a high ground commanding approaches to Hennigen, Germany. Its advances in the previous 24 hours had cost a high price and the remaining men were exhausted. The colored troops were sent in with no idea of the job ahead. They took off through the woods, their objective a Jerry machine-gun nest which had pinned the company flat.

"Sparked by Pvt James Oliver of Nyack, N. Y., the new men slivered up in back of the enemy guns and captured them with their crews intact. The platoon then was fired on by a 20-millimeter flak gun. The men quietly deployed and concentrated their rifle fire on the Jerries. (They did not break or run.) They threw grenades and sprayed machine-gun fire from every position. They captured the ack-ack position with four prisoners.

"These men deserve mention as colored heroes of war: Willie Pace of Columbus, Ga.; Preston Williams of Mobile, Ala.; Ellis Butts, Smithfield, Va.; Robert Decasseres, New York City; Harold Robinson, Buffalo; Harold Shaw, Canton, Tex.; Raymond Randsom, Detroit; and Donald Skeeters, Baltimore. 3-30-45

"That night, two had more important business—Arthur Holmes, Holmes, former night-club entertainer, and Tom Williams, both of Los Angeles. They led a squad through Inky Darkness and disposed of three Germans with knives before the rest fled. (They did not break "especially in the darkness of night".)

"The next day the colored men were given the job of flushing out two houses suspected of harboring German artillery observation posts, this under murderous artillery fire. They advanced up the hill to their objectives, peppering the target with their rifles. They took 26 prisoners and a signalling set."

WOUNDED IN FRANCE—Sgt. Nathaniel J. Todd (above), who was wounded in France Sept. 22 after serving 17 months overseas has recently returned to the States. He is now stationed at Bushnell General Hospital after spending a month's furlough with his parents, the Joseph Todds, who reside at 1613 First Street, South. 3-17-45

Negro GIs in First Action Wipe Out SS

Daily Worker

By ANN STRINGER

WITH THE 104TH (TIMBERWOLF) DIVISION, South of Paderborn, Germany, April 5 (delayed) (UP).—Moseley's "Dusky Devastaters"—an all-Negro platoon — saw action for the first time today and their record would make any veteran battle group sit up and take notice. 4-6-45

Within a few hours, these eager infantrymen from the north, south and midwest, armed only with Sten guns and rifles, captured or killed 40 crack Nazi SS troopers.

The green platoon, led by S/Sgt. Harvey Moseley, of Mansfield, O. was ordered to clear the Germans from two hills inside the Hardahausen forest. They did the job quickly and competently and came back tired, hungry, muddy

"We'd heard there were SS men in these woods, we'd been told that many times," said Pfc Bent T. Brown, Charlestown, W. Va., known to his comrades as "Big Slim."

"We didn't know exactly what they were, but we found out mighty quick." 4-6-45

Big Slim was the hero of the day, but it was his buddy, Pfc James Ira Hayes, 592 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., who revealed the details of his heroism.

"We were just making the attack across the hill," Hayes said. "Slim and another guy took the right flank. Big Slim did about one of the bravest things I ever saw —so did the other guy."

"Yes, that guy was a pretty brave man all right," Big Slim agreed. "I was walking along beside him when he suddenly shouted at me to drop. The Germans had opened up on us. Then I saw he was wounded. I started firing faster than ever then." 4-6-45

"The wounded man started crying out for someone to put a tourniquet on his left arm," said Hayes, taking up the story. "Then we saw Big Slim start toward him. The wounded guy stood up — how I'll never know—but he stood up and with his good arm sprayed the Nazis with lead, covering Big Slim.

"It was a good thing he did, too, for just about then a German shell hit Slim's rifle and knocked the shell clip completely off his bar. But that didn't stop Slim. He kept right on going."

KILLED IN ACTION—Corp. Marvin W. Miller (above), whose parents reside in Woodstock, was killed in action Jan. 27 while laying a land mine in Italy, according to word received by his family from the War Department. In addition to his parents, he is survived by three sisters and five brothers, two of whom are in service, Hosie Miller, stationed in France, and Earsey Miller, Camp Wallace, Tex.

Negro Troops, Britons Clash

Detroit Free Press

HULL, England—(AP)—Hull police reported American Negro soldiers and British civilians clashed Friday night in a saloon and the efforts of 50 policemen were required to end the fight.

Police reported one civilian was seriously hurt, but said they had made no arrests, leaving the investigation to American military authorities. 6-24-45

The trouble stemmed from an incident Thursday night, an Army spokesman said, when a Negro soldier was struck on the head with a beer bottle. 6-24-45

Reveal Heroic Epic Of Negro Gunners In Defense Of Beseiged Bastogne

Chicago Defender Ill. 2-3-45

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY IN FRANCE—So close to German infantry that mortar bombs fell on them "like rain," men of the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, a Negro 155-mm. howitzer outfit, stuck to their guns and fired all around the compass during the defense of encircled Bastogne, it was revealed this week.

The battalion, which landed in France last July, was attached to the 28th Infantry Division at the time of the German attack.

On the morning of December 17, the battalion was informed by its forward observer that the Germans were moving in to attack. There was heavy artillery fire. "Then,' said Captain William J. Wood, communications officer, of Wichita Falls, Texas, "our communications went out. Jerry artillery knocked out damn near all communications in the whole sector. He seemed to know the location of every switchboard."

Unaware of the situation, the battalion moved back toward La Roche where it was attached to an artillery group and ordered toward Neufchateau. Enemy tanks and infantry attacked from the east and south. Twice the battalion went into firing position to repel threats to the column. 2-3-45

Made Jerry Keep Distance

Mortar fire and enemy artillery grew heavy. Other battalions in the artillery were knocked out. Under direction of the 101st Airborne Division, the 969th moved to Villeroux, where it set up its guns. Enemy tanks and infantry approached. With the help of a few scattered tanks and a handful of infantry, the 969th made Jerry keep his distance.

At one time the enemy was so close that the battalion commander ordered all classified material destroyed.

Enemy mortar fire grew even more intense. Small arms fire rained on the gun positions. Individual exploits were many. The battalion medics evacuated both German and American wounded under Jerry rifle fire. When the battalion aid station was destroyed by mortar fire, the aid men succeeded in rescuing all except the hopelessly wounded.

Narrow Escape

Cpl. Mitchell Miles of Chielton street, Montgomery, Ala., will never forget Villeroux. Standing beside his loaded truck, he narrowly escaped being killed by three mortar shells which exploded on the truck and set it on fire. Miles ran to a weapons carrier some distance away, brought it back, and while under heavy small arms fire, disengaged a loaded trailer from the burning kitchen truck and drove away.

It was well that he did. The contents of the trailer were badly needed by the artillerymen, who lived for several days, afterwards on one-third of a K-ration per man per day.

All except the actual cannoneers fought infantry fashion, and even succeeded in taking 30 to 40 prisoners. 2-3-45

At last the battalion commander decided that the position at Villeroux was untenable. The batteries displaced to near Senonchamps. As the outfit began to pull out, one of the radio trucks was disabled by mortar fire. Through a hail of small arms fire, Sergeant Donald Corzo, Hodeenfield, New Jersey, went to the truck and destroyed all the signal equipment to prevent its falling into Jerry hands.

At Senonchamps the battalion prepared for a last stand. Because of casualties, all gun crews were reduced to the minimum. By this time it was obvious that the enemy was on all sides.

Fired in All Directions

The battalion guns were set up to fire all around the circle. "We made two-gun platoons," explained Major James W. Melville, operations officer, of Broken Bow, Nebraska, "and fired in all directions. We had targets everywhere—would have fired more ammunition than we'd used at Brest—if we'd had the stuff."

The guns were firing at ranges of 1200 to 1500 yards—guns which normally have a range of 12,000 to 15,000 yards. The enemy was that close.

"We took everything the Germans had to throw," said Staff Sgt. Lloyd Wilkinson of Brooklyn, New York, "tanks, mortars, small arms fire. That mortar fire was like hail. I never thought that a 155 howitzer outfit would get that close to mortar fire. I don't know what we'd have done if it hadn't been for the help we got from that airborne infantry outfit. They're hot stuff; best outfit I know."

A nondescript dog found shivering near the battalion CP was one factor which helped keep the men's spirits up. "Kaput," as he was christened, adopted the battalion at first sight. He is now the official battalion mascot. 2-3-45

Destroy Guns

But while "Kaput" did his level best to keep morale up, constant Jerry pressure, combined with three terrific air bombardments—one on Christmas Eve — put the mettle of the battery to a severe test. It was hazardous to survey in the gun positions.

On one occasion when Jerry machine-gun fire pinned down the survey section, Staff Sergeant Harry Quintyne of New York City, crawled back, got a machine gun, destroyed one Kraut machine gun, and effectively pinned down the other until survey was completed.

On another occasion, Sgt. Fred Colman, Messina, Georgia, out of patience with an irritating Jerry machine gun, crawled out with one infantryman, destroyed the gun and brought back five prisoners.

"The German fire was constant," said Captain R. C. Coddington, of Sparta, Wisconsin. "There was even a sniper whose special job seemed to be to try to pot one of us when we went to the latrine."

Ammunition was a serious problem. Finally only clearly observed targets were fired upon, and one gun was used in place of a battery. And still German pressure increased. The trapped soldiers, infantry and artillery, fought on stubbornly. 2-3-45

Then the tide turned. C-47s appeared, dropping supplies of food and ammunition. The battalion displaced again, this time to the outskirts of Bastogne, to be in a position closer to the infantry.

And then one morning several days after Christmas, the battalion commander went to the 101st Airborne Division CP and found several of the Fourth Armored Division tanks there. The German ring had been broken, and broken by an outfit with whom the 969th had fought in the breakthrough across France. 2-3-45

The battalion, with its complement of white officers and Negro enlisted men, hit the Normandy beach on July 9 as part of VIII Corps artillery. Commanded by Lieut. Colonel Herbert D. Barnes of Milwaukee, Wis., it supported the Eighth Infantry Division around La Haye du Puits, helped the Fourth Armored Division in the breakthrough near Rennes, then fired in support of the Eighth Division on the Brest Peninsula.

10 Volunteer Infantrymen Take Town, Liberate 200

AFRO-American 4-28-45

Balt. Md.

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

4-28-45

SEVENTH ARMY FRONT, Germany. — Ten colored volunteer infantrymen, led by Sgt. Clyde Howard of Savannah, Ga., took a whole town and liberated 200 prisoners of war near Schweinfurt, last week.

When Colonel Wells's Twelfth Armored Division called to see whether they had reached the outskirts of their objective town, he was startled to learn that the 66th Battalion had taken that town and were fighting on the far side of the next. 4-28-45

I joined them, hot on heels of the rabid Jew and race-baiter, Julius Streicher, former publisher of der Stuermer, as they cleared Cadolzburg, where Streicher was last reported hiding, and moved onto the outskirts of Nuernberg. 4-28-45

Reports of Nuernburg's fall were premature. We've entered and freed 13,000 DP's and PW's, but street fighting continues. However, Streicher had been the nicest possible plum for these volunteer infantrymen, since he supposedly was more Nazi than Hitler and edited der Stuermer, which published the world's most revoltingly obscene race-baiting cartoons. 4-28-45

"We'll Catch Him Yet"

He wasn't around Cadolzburg because Sgt. William Dillard of Bordentown, and I made a personal search. It is assumed he had fled to Munich because SS Man Neumeister had taken his job as head of Nuernburg, but he's going to run out of places to hide soon and if he doesn't jump off the Berchtesgaden Mountains, we'll catch him yet.

There infantrymen are about the meanest, roughest, hardest hitting and most effective in the Twelfth Armored. They work in spearheads alongside 43rd Battalion tanks and when they hit a town, it's really hit.

Sergeant Howard and his unit took a town near Schweinfurt last week, but the prettiest sight I have seen was their work a Cadolzburg, April 17.

Stalk Nazis Likes Rabbits

They moved along in squads, hugging the sides of buildings, peering around corners, scooting across streets and brazenly entering any house from which they drew fire.

After the squads were in the houses, we waited interminable seconds until there were either sharp rifle reports or two supermen came stumbling out with their hands up.

Down at the far edge of the town, the Germans had a squad pinned down by machine-gun fire for two hours. We were worried about them, but when they came back fingering souvenired German sidearms, S/Sgt. Wilbur Gex, Chicago, said they hadn't been worried at all. 4-28-45

"They couldn't hit us and we know they'd run short of ammo, so we just played it cool until we thought it time to stop that foolishness, then let them have it," the sergeant said.

Two white platoon sergeants, T/Sgts. Harl Cummings, Winfield, Kans., and E. Arthur Reilly, NYC, say: "They're the fightingest crowd we ever saw and the sooner more of them are set up, the sooner the war will be over." They indicated that reinforcements are needed. Cummings was with the 70th Division, and Reilly, the 100th, before joining the Dog Company, 66th.

12th Hit and Run Outfit

Behind them these men have victories as part of the conquering hordes that overran Kaiserslautern, Ludwigshafen, Worms, Wurzburg, Schweinfurt, and the Ustadt. Innumerable smaller towns are among their personal booty, but they don't remember names. The 12th moves too fast. Hit it this morning, clear it this afternoon, move out tonight.

They're swinging now to join the 45th Infantry Division clearing Nuernberg and its Grosser Dutzendteich where Hitler ranted and strutted. He won't' like it but Tan Yanks have plans for a little strutting of their own in the birthplace of Nazism.

Easterners in Outfit

Personnel I am with includes: Sgt. George Hooker, Bronx; Preston Hopewell, Cleveland; Eddie Sim

Negro-White Heroes Maul Nazi Tiger Tanks

Daily Worker

By CLINTON B. CONGER

WITH SEVENTH ARMY, Jan. 22 (Delayed) (UP).—For 11 days a magnificent American infantry regiment parried and held the full weight of Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt's offensive against the Little Maginot line villages of Hatten and Rittershoffen, sending 2½ Elite German divisions reeling back broken and mauled.

The regiment was the 315th infantry of the 79th Division, supported by units of the Negro 827th Tank Destroyer Battalion and tankmen and armored infantry of the 14th Armored Division. 1-27-45

Nearly half the men in this regiment are casualties, but they battled the crack German 21st Panzer Division, the 25th Panzer Grenadier Division and an entire regiment of the Seventh Parachute Division, and for every American casualty there were five to 10 dead or wounded Germans.

The two German divisions attacked on Jan. 8 and overran one American regiment in Hatten. The next day the 315th, commanded by Col. Andrew J. Schriver, Jr., Mount Holly Springs, Pa., rushed up to restore the situation.

LOG OF THE BATTLE

Here is the log of the 315th's achievements:

Jan. 9—The Second Battalion sent F and G companies into Hatten. Lt. Morris W. Goodwin, Jacksonville, Fla., of F company, said:

"We got a foothold on the town and sent out patrols where friendly troops were supposed to be, and found Germans everywhere. But we found scattered and disorganized groups from that original battalion, and put them in our own platoons and managed to get a patrol to the center of town.

Jan. 10—"Next morning, when we started to try to clean up the town, E company and four tank destroyers came in. 1-27-45

"Several of those colored boys really were wonderful, standing right there swapping punch for punch with Tiger tanks. Their platoon leader, 2d Lt. Robert F. Jones, Casper, Wyo., deserves the Silver Star. They found an abandoned M-10 tank destroyer there in good condition and decided to use it instead of their own. At our forward positions, the main street bent so that they could not see German tanks coming—particularly at night. Jones took a machinegun for signalling, and laid it on the steps of the forward house, with a tank destroyer further back, and zeroed on the bend.

"Jones was supposed to trip the machinegun trigger with a string, but when the first Tiger poked its snout around the bend at night he just didn't have any sense. He got right out on the steps and held the trigger down, spraying the Tiger. The tank opened fire and blew the steps right out from under Jones, but he wasn't hurt. His gunner, Staff Sgt. Harry Johnson, opened fire and drove the Tiger back."

At dusk on the 10th, remnants of the battalion originally overrun at Hatten were ordered to withdraw, but, according to Goodwin, about 20 refused to leave and another score stayed at Rittershoffen, where they fought with a third battalion of the 315h. 1-27-45

That night at least half of one German division pinned down a second battalion at Hatten in the biggest attack against Rittershoffen. Sgt. Spencer Irving, Yanceville, N. C., Negro, jockeyed his tank destroyer around, and with three shots knocked out three German tanks circling to the southwest of Hatten.

Jan. 13-14-15—For three days of incessant attack the two battalions in Hatten and Rittershoffen clung to the slim wedges in each town, neither larger than a baseball park. They fired mortars at "impossible" ranges of 75 to 150 yards. They fired bazookas over housetops, lobbing them like mortars.

Jan. 19—The Germans made a final try the morning of the 19th, preceding a full regimental assault with a half-hour barrage of 3,000 shells into the tiny holdings of the 315th in Hatten. Then the Americans rose from their burrows, and when the Germans came in too close for mortars and machineguns and bazookas the Yanks used pistols, carbines, grenades and bayonets. In two hours they stopped the attack.

The enemy finally gave up the two towns.

Jan. 20—The Americans, who had been ordered to withdraw the next night, marched out victors.

77 Units Aided In European Victory

Pittsburgh Courier 5-19-45

By JOHN H. YOUNG III
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — On the ground and in the air — the outstanding contribution made by Negro troops in the winning of the war in Europe is revealed in a study of official statistics and records of the War Department. These documents reveal in detail, the deployment of Negro troops in both the European and Pacific theatres and give some indication of the part that they will play in the ever-increasing tempo of the war in the Pacific.

According to the official listing of Negro troops overseas, there were 110 units in both theatres at the close of the war in Europe (since there is a lag between the time of arrival of overseas troops and the War Department announcement of that arrival, it is correct to assume that there are actually more units than those already listed by the War Department). 5-19-45

ELEVEN IN COMBAT

Of these 110 units, seventy-seven were in the European theatre and thirty-three in the Pacific. In Europe, Negro troops constituted nine per cent of all American troops on the continent during the invasion.

A breakdown shows that of the seventy-seven units in Europe, eleven were deployed in combat. These were 332nd Fighter Group, 969th, 333rd and 777th Field Artillery Battalions; 452nd Anti-aircraft Battalion, Ninety-second Infantry, 761st Tank Battalion, 82t7h, 614th and 784th Tank Destroyer Battalions and the 366th Infantry Regiment (broken up and made Engineer units prior to the end of the war in Europe). 5-19-45

Of the remaining sixty-five units of Negro troops in the European theatre, forty-five were used as Engineer and Quartermaster units, nine as Specialized units, seven as Ordnance units and four as Port units.

Detailed breakdown of these sixty-five non-combat units is as follows:

ENGINEER—1221st Fire Fighting Platoon, 1232nd, 1229th, 1233rd, 1235th and 1234th Fire Fighting Detachments; 375th General Service Regiment; 134th, 1313th, 360th, 389th and Ninety-fifth Regiments; 390th General Service Regiment; 823rd Aviation Battalion; 392nd and 354th General Service Regiments; 791st Dump Truck Company; 812th, 822nd, 827th, 856th, 859th, 837th, 838th, 823rd, 829th, 847th, 848th, 858th and 949th Battalions.

QUARTERMASTER — 3264th, 3170th and 3229th General Service Companies; 4089th, 3241st and 4198th Service Companies; 4042nd, Truck Company; 3103rd QM Company; 272nd and 260th Battalions; 523rd and 524th Car Companies; 4353rd and 3033rd Bakery Companies; 960th QM Service Company, and the 999th Collecting Company.

ORDNANCE — 607th, 647th, Fifty-seventh, 651st and 656th Ammunition Companies; Seventy-first Group and the 655th Company. 5-19-45

PORT—483rd Battalion; 577th, 535th and 658th Companies.

CHEMICAL — Eighty-second and Eighty-seventh Smoke Generating Companies.

MEDICAL—318th Service Detachment and 711th Sanitation Company; 686th General Hospital Unit.

SIGNAL — Twenty-ninth and Forty-first Construction Battalions; 259th Heavy Construction Company.

SPECIAL—Seventeenth Special Service Company.

FIGHTING ABILITY WINS CITATION

Typical of the heroism of the Negro fighting man in this war was that of the glorious action of the 969th Field Artilelry Battalion which won a Presidential citation for its courage in defense of encircled Bastogne. Of this outfit an official War Department release said:

"So close to German infantry that mortar bombs fell on them liket rain, men of the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, a Negro 155-mm howitzer outfit, stuck to their guns and fired all around the compass during the defense of encircled Bostogne."

The 969th hit the Normandy beach in early July of 1944. It supported the Eighth Infantry Division around La Haye du Puits; helped the Fourth Armored Division in the breakthrough near Rennes, then fired in support of the Eighth Division on the Brest peninsula.

SPECULATIONS IN PACIFIC THEATRE

In the dying moments of the war in Europe, it is to be remembered that probably the last shots were fired when the famed Ninety-second took La Spezia in Italy.

* * *

The scene now shifts to the Pacific. With this shifting, speculation is rife as to when and how Negro troops, now in the European theatre, will be arrayed alongside Negro troops already in the Pacific theatre.

The nature of the allied military requirements in the Pacific at this stage of the war there, along with detailed knowledge of the composition and deployment of Negro troops in Europe, does portend how and when Negro troops in the European theatre will be shifted to the Pacific. 5-19-45

NEGRO TROOPS TO BUILD INSTALLATIONS

At present we do not have sufficient large base installations from which to launch a large-scale land offensive in the Pacific. (Infantry assignments, at this time, are devoted to "clearing the decks for action" by wiping out Japanese pockets of resistance in Burma, New Guinea, New Britain, the Solomons, the Carolines, the Paluas, the Marianas, New Ireland, the Philippines, the Volcanoes and the Ryukus.) Until these large installations are built there probably will not be any great transfer of combat units to the Pacific. Since only a small minority of all Negro troops in the European theatre are in combat units, plus the problem of replacement, it is not likely that many Negro combat units will be shifted to the Pacific at an early date.

This should not hold true, however, for the vast majority of Negro troops who have been concentrated in non-combat units in the European theatre. These troops have been performing the jobs that are now desperately needed in the Pacific theatre; to build great staging bases, airdromes and naval stations to accept the vast flow of men and material from Europe.

Once again it seems that it will be the Negro soldier who will throw up huge depots, push highways through barren wildernesses, construct hospitals, lay down rail lines and perform, for the most part, by the sweat of his brow, at those necessary but inglorious tasks demanded for the staging of a modern offensive.

ONLY FIVE COMBAT UNITS IN PACIFIC 5-19-45

Thus, it is believed that the vast majority of Negro troops, deployed in Engineer and Quartermaster units, probably will be among the first troops shifted to the Pacific. Moreover, an examination of Negro troops already in the Pacific theatre gives credence to this belief.

Of the thirty-three units of Negro troops now in the Pacific theatre, five are combat units. These are 207th and 369th Coast Artilleries; Ninety-third Infantry Division; Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment (remnants) and the 742nd Antiaircraft Battalion (the only unit in the Pacific theatre commanded by a Negro—Lieut. Col. DeMaurice Moses).

The remaining twenty-eight units of Negro troops in the Pacific theatre are deployed as follows:

ENGINEER — 811th, 813th, 839th, 855th, 856th, 867th, 868th, 869th, 870th, 939th, 828th and 857th Battalions; 1225th Fire Fighting Detachment; 855th Aviation Battalion; 771st Dump Truck Company; 810th Regiment; 890th, 891st, 892nd and 893rd Companies.

QUARTERMASTER — 992nd General Service Company; 3460th QM Company; 490th Battalion and the 1998th, 3667th, 1954th and 3523rd Trucking Companies.

CHEMICAL — The 101st Processing Company. 5-19-45

It is believed that a vast majority of Negro troops in the above groups will be immediately transferred to the Pacific. Accompanying them will probably be a large contingent of the 738 Negro Wacs now stationed in the European theatre.

THE RECORD SPEAKS

So runs the official record. Accounts of individual and group heroism, bravery and courage on the part of the Negro soldier are star-studded pages in the irrefutable records and documents of the War Department.

As the final chapter of the war in the West closed in victorious tribute to the Negro troops who fought and died there, thousands of them prepared to "go East," but not to "grow up with the country."

Valiant Race Truckers Keep Supplies Rolling To Airmen

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

5-2-45

Deliver Bombs, Gasoline, Munitions To Ninth Units

A IX AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND UNIT IN FRANCE — (ANP) — A company of Negro "truckers" landed in the British isles during the hectic month of September, 1942. Several months later in England their commanding officer, Captain Charles E. Jones of Monrovia, Calif., led them in review before Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who commended them highly. Since that day this company of truckters has led the way for IX Air force service command quartermaster truck units in the European Theatre of Operations.

The men call themselves "Buck Jones' Rough Riders". a name given them while they were fighting across France with Gen. Patton's Third army tank forces after the St. Lo break through.

ROLL INTO FRANCE

After outstanding service in the British isles, where they hauled thousands of tons of bombs, munitions and supplies for Ninth Air Force fighter-bomber and medium bomber fleets blasting the invasion coast of France, Capt. Jones and his "rough riders" rolled from LST land craft onto the "Omaha Beach" in Normandy shortly before the historic allied dash across France.

Unloading the Ninth Air Force supplies they carried across the channel, the truckers raced in convoy up behind the Third army to St. Mihiel. Here they worked on a round-the-clock timetable, hauling men and material to build airstrips, and later, the bombs, munitions and gasoline used by these advance 9th air force units.

5-2-45

Under the Third Army jurisdiction at the time, and within range of enemy artillery fire, the truckers worked day and night, short in personnel and equipment and meeting every obstacle. They resalvaged trucks and burnt-out parts; slept and eat on the road in convoys for days at a time. Enemy snipers took a toll of men and machines.

HAD TO BE TOUGH

"They had to be tough," Captain Jones remembered. "No job was too tough. We kept morale high by showing 'we'd get it there if we had to carry it on our backs.' "

Currently Capt. Jones' truckers are hauling bombs, munitions, gasoline and supplies to ninth air force strips in France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany. The "rough riders" have received verbal commendation from ninth air force headquarters on three occasions, and from Gen. Patton's Third army headquarters, for their timely and skillful work.

On one occasion they were removed from the path of the German Ardennes counter-offensive airstrip personnel and equipment under fire, and have won recognition in army trucking circles for being on the spot when they were most needed.

Claim They're First On German Soil

Chicago Defender

While reading the Defender, I have read of several Negro troops and their activities in combat. As yet I have not seen anything about our outfit. We were the first Negro troops to fire on German soil. We are a field artillery battalion with the Ninth Army.

4-21-45

It will certainly help the morale of the men in our outfit to know that we are getting the credit due us on the home front. Recently the battalion was given the honor of being the best in the group.

The chiefs of the four gun sections are Sgt. Wallace P. Bruce of Atlantic City, N. J., S-Sgt. Garland E. McAfee of Metropolis, Ill.; Sgt. Sidney P. Gilmore of New York.

4-21-45

We crossed the German border November 1, 1944, and are making stepping stones to Berlin. The boys of this outfit realize they have a great task before them and are making every effort to accomplish the task. So far we have been very successful in battles and have kept our casualties very low.—Sgt. Bruce for Men of Battery "A," Somewhere across the German Border.

NEGRO INF'RY. COMES THRU BIG

Savannah Tribune Ga.

by Harry McAlpin

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AAPA) Negro infantrymen who volunteered for transfer from service troops to combat infantry and are serving side by side with white troops on the Rhine did a "magnificent job" on their first day in the line, according to reports reaching here from their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Norman Moore. Moore credited them with saving a company in a tight spot.

This heroic performance occurred about the same time the jim-crowed, segregated 92nd Division—all Negro except its top command of white officers and staff—was being maligned in the white press as result of a press conference in Rome with Tumman K. Gibson, JJ., civilian aide to the secretary of war. Gibson was quoted as saying the Negroes of the 92nd "melted away" in the face of combat fire

3-29-45

Thomas R. Henry was correspondent with the United States troops on the Rhine for the Washington Evening Star, reporting the praiseworthy performance of the Negroes said:

"I checked the situation in two divisions today. The best story is that of an infantry company getting a platoon of colored men, mostly Sicily and African veterans in behind-the-line jobs, eager to prove their worth as fighting soldiers.

The colored platoon trained hard for months for the new roles.

3-29-45

"The white regiment was stalled before high ground commanding approaches to Honnigen, Germany. Its advance in the previous 24 hours had cost a high price and the remaining men were exhausted. The colored troops were sent in with no idea of the job ahead. They took off through the woods their objective a Jerry machine-gun nest which had pinned the company flat.

"Sparked by Pvt. James Oliver of Nyack, N. Y., the new men silvered up in back of the enemy guns and captured them with their crews intact. The platoon then was fired on by a 20-millimeter flak gun. The men quietly deployed and concentrated their rifle fire on the Jerries. (They did not break or run. They threw grenades and sprayed machine-gun fire from every position They captured the ack-ack position with four prisoners.

"These men deserve mention as colored heroes of the war: Willie Pace of Columbus, Ga.; Preston Williams of Mobile, Ala Ellis Butts of Smithville, Va.; Robert Decasseres of New York City; Harold Robinson of Buffalo, N. Y., Harold Shaw of Canton, Texas; Raymond Randsom of Detroit and Donald Skeeters of Baltimore.

3-29-45

"That night, two had more important business—Arthur Holmes, former night club entertainer, and Tom Williams, both of Los Angeles. They led a sqaud Through Inky Darkness and disposed of three Germans with knives before the rest fled (They did did not break "especially in the darkness of night").

"The next day the colored men were given the job of flushing out two houses suspected of harboring German artillery observation posts; this under murderous artillery fire. They advanced up the hill to their objective, peppering the target with their rifles. They took 26 prisoners and a signalling set."

Negro Field Artillery Rose To Great Heights In Battle of Ardennes

Philadelphia Tribune 4-14-45 Pa.

BY RUDOLPH DUNBAR
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

PARIS—(ANP) — The 578th Field Artillery Battalion suffered heavy casualties in the battle of Ardennes last December. Although three months have elapsed since the attack, there is still no accurate confirmation about the casualties of this battalion. It is known, however, that the battalion has lost many of its guns. There is reason to believe that the men who were taken prisoners are now freed by the rapid sweep of our victorious armies into Germany.

Commander of the Battalion was Lt. Col. Gilbert C. Barnes from Wisconsin, Mass. He is the brother of Lt. Col. Hubert D. Barnes who is now in command of the famous 969th, another Negro field artillery battalion. 4-14-45

This battalion has also written glorious pages in the history of artillery firing. It was equipped with eight inch howitzers which fired a 200 lb. projectile. It played a major and important part in the fall of St. Malo which was contested so fiercely by the Germans. "A' battery, of which most of the men were from New York, was the best in the battalion. This battery received the bronze plate for having consistently established the highest firing record which dates back from their inception in the States.

I once met a major at the officer's clothing store in Paris who approached me and immediately asked if I knew anything about the 578th. "Yes", said I, "I've been following them and have reported all of their big battles from Normandy into Brest." With gleeful enthusiasm he exclaimed, "They are marvellous gunners; and I am proud to tell you that I have assisted in their training. They can shoot a button off your coat at a distance of 12 yards." 4-14-45

At this tragic moment I completed my mission with the 578th. This battalion had a well trained and highly skilled medical detachment. I am therefore positive that they have rendered excellent service to their wounded comrades. These are the names of the group: S/Sgt. Albert G. Hubbard from Kansas City; T/3rd Daniel L. Lundy, Detroit; T/4 Luther C. Faine, Ft. Worth, Texas; Cpl. Elmer B. Williams, New York City; T/5th Gay Johnson, Augusta, Ga.; T/5th Edwin L. Pierce, Elizabeth, N. J.; Ralph E. Dunmero, New York City; Pfc. Willie D. Mannings, Tulsa; Pfc. Williams Hoggard, New York City; Pvt. Oscar Mercer, Fayetteville, N. C. and Pvt. Fred J. Moran, Birmingham.

Gunners Soften Essen For Big Infantry Push

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill. —

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY — American troops were battling in the streets of Essen, largest city in the Ruhr, this week after thorough shelling of the town by crack Negro artillerymen of the 777th Field Artillery Battalion.

The efficient "softening up" of the German metropolis, which is the home of the famed Krupp munitions plant as well as Reichsmarshal Herman Goering, by the Negro GIs' big guns enable U. S. troops under the command of Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson to enter Essen and engage Nazi defenders in house-to-house fighting.

Keeping pace with the fast-moving Ninth Army, the crack artillery outfit has moved four times in the past several weeks to keep the Germans on the run across the Rhine. 4-14-45

The battalion is now set up i a crowded industrial section here and operates while German children roller skate and play hop scotch in the streets, occasionally thrusting fingers in their ears as the big guns boom.

Among Chicago men in the unit are:

Pvt. Sam Hopkins, 5120 South Parkway; Pvt. William Ross, 715 E. 45th street; Pvt. William McClain, 4413 Calumet avenue; Pvt. Raleigh Younger, 4941 Vincennes avenue; Corp. Eugene Ward, 6711 Rhodes avenue; Corp. John Wade, 6201 Evans avenue; Pvt. Wilton Willis, 3247 Vincennes avenue; Corp. Gerald Ewens, 3823 South Parkway; Pvt. Willy Walker, 4844 State street; Pvt. Jesse Fowler, 547 E. 60th street; Sgt. James Brown, 4930 S. Michigan avenue; Sgt. Benjamin Owens, 4719 Langley avenue, and Staff Sgt. Anderson Miller, 3748 Vincennes avenue.

The 777th is the oldest field artillery battalion in the 16th corps and was the first artillery battalion to fire across the Rhine.

Activated at Camp Beale, Calif., in August, 1943, the unit arrived in England one year later in August, 1944. 4-14-45

By October 1944, they were in action and November found them firing in the vicinity of Ubach, Germany. From November until they crossed the Roer river, they had been firing in Germany some miles from the Roer. On March 3, they went across the Roer and it was my good fortune to accompany

Colored Girl Becomes Soviets' Crack Sniper

Chicago Defender 3-24-45

Chicago, Ill.

By CHATWOOD HALL
(Defender Moscow Correspondent)

USSR GERMAN FRONT. — A brown-skinned, black-eyed Kazak girl patriot, Baijan Baikozhina, has become one of the most expert snipers among Soviet women fighting the "superior race" on the German Front. 3-24-45

If it were not for her high Mongolian cheekbones, this crack scout could pass along Chicago's South Parkway or State street as just another colored girl.

Patriot Baikozhina comes from Kanakhstan, far across the Volga in Soviet Asia and has been fighting the German Fascists through Byelo, Lithuania, Poland and is now off picking Germans inside the third Reich itself.

Her sharp black eyes which out Kazakhstan way often closely followed the swift flight of eagles and the dash of wild horses across the Russian steppes first drew a bead on the Germans at Byelo.

Detects "Peasants"

Once while guarding an important bridge at the front she noticed two "peasants" pulling a sled loaded with hay. Her suspicions were aroused. Peasants did not usually pull sleds this way through the dangerous Front zone. She glued her eyes on these "peasants" as they pulled their load under the bridge. None came out on the other side.

From her vantage point she noticed the "peasants" removing the hay from the sled, disclosing underneath a load of explosives with which they intended to dynamite the structure. Baijan Baikozhina opened fire.

One "peasant" fell dead and the other raised his hands. Both were discovered to be German spies dressed as Russians. For this act of vigilance she was awarded the "Order of the Red Star."

By the time the front had passed across the German border she had ten notches on the butt of her trusty sniper's rifle, each notch representing one German less.

When the Red army began overrunning the city of Hindenburg in Silesia, the Germans were shooting from attics and roofs, basements and trees. Here was a field day for the brown-skinned black-eyed Baijan Baikozhina's sniper's rifle and even eye. 3-24-45

She climbed up a brick wall and waited, but a German shrapnel splinter struck her. She bandaged her own wound and took up watch again. She soon found the perches from which the Germans were shooting at Red Army soldiers.

She patiently aimed deadly beads with her rifle on the hidden German Fascists. One by one the German rifles became silent. Her score was fifteen Fascists sniped dead by the time the Red Army cleared the Germans out of Hindenburg.

For her "good work" in making good Fascists out of bad ones she was awarded the "Order of Patriotic War."

"There's much work for me in Berlin," she said as she swung her trusty rifle over her shoulder and moved on toward the next job.

Patton Needed Tankmen— Lt. Injured at Nazi Border

AFRO-American 3-31-45

Balt., Md.

WASHINGTON

"I don't give a damn what color you are as long as you get out there and kill those - - - ," declared Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., addressing members of the 761st Tank Battalion at Nancy, France.

His words were quoted by Lt. William E. Blake, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Blake of Atlantic City, N.J., a former member of the battalion, on leave here last week from Camp Pickett, Va., where he is recovering from injuries.

The battalion, he said, almost wore out its tanks trying to catch the fast-rolling Third Army. "The only way we caught them," Blake went on, "was by taking off the steel combat tracks and putting on the faster rubber ones."

Caught Up at Nancy

When the 761st tankmen caught up with General Patton, he was waiting impatiently for supplies at Nancy, prior to continuing his push to Germany. 3-31-45

At Gros Rederching, 3,000 yards from the German border, Lt. Blake, liaison officer between the 26th Infantry (Yankee) Division and a tank company received orders to report to the regimental command post for instructions.

As soon as he reached his destination, he added, a German shell landed on the top of the building and a big pile of debris fell on his back as he lay flattened out.

Continues 8 Days

When he finally crawled to the command post he did not inform anyone of his injury and went with the division a total of eight days, making typical Patton marches, before he surrendered to the Medical Corps. 3-31-45

At the hospital, it was found that he had suffered serious injuries to his spinal column and had to be evacuated at once. He was sent to a hospital at Rheims, flown to England and later shipped to the United States.

Even Least was Needed

Sent out to take the pressure off Bastogne, we moved so fast and fought so often that once we had only nine out of 54 tanks ready but General Patton called for that nine," he declared.

The lieutenant, who plans to study law at Howard University when he is discharged, calls his experience overseas a failure for he moved so fast he was unable to buy a cigarette lighter he desired

GI's Dream Comes True--Scribe Finds Base In India With No Color Problem

Chicago Defender 4-21-45

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN INDIA.—Once in a while a dream comes true . . . You visit a military installation and colored GIs greet you, saying, "Mister, we don't have any color problem here. We get the same break all the other soldiers do." 4-21-45

Then you wonder if they're kidding and you become more interested than ever to find out what the real score is.

So when one "Joe" after another of the Negro General Service squadron attached to this advance Air Transport Command base sang this same tune and warbled a loud note of praise for youthful, 26-year-old Illinois-born Lt.-Col. Vilas C. Rice, post commander who sports a pilot's silver wings, I was impressed but not convinced—until I saw the base in operation.

Squadron "Keeps 'em Flying"

The Negro squadron is only one of four whose job it is to keep a fleet of sturdy C-46 cargo planes in the air around the clock shuttling supplies over the "Hump" to war-torn China.

When the unit came overseas some seven months ago there had been no opportunity for many of the men to learn highly skilled ground crew jobs of the air corps. They were at first confined, therefore, to more menial tasks. But as they got into the swing of things, Col. Rice has given them an opportunity to take on more responsibility.

Now they are working on a number of skilled jobs: They are operating as expert plane loaders who must see that the load-weight is proportioned correctly over the entire ship so that it will not be overbalanced. There are 10 teams of "tie-down men" whose job it is to secure cargo so that rough air will not jar it loose. Entire servicing of ships is in their charge. And some of them are now working as apprentice's mechanics on engine modifications at the hundred-hour-overhaul.

Work With White GIs

In the chief engineer's office working as a chief clerk is Curtis Green, Detroit, Mich. Assistant base photographer is Pfc. George Sawyer, New York City, formerly a news photog for the Amsterdam News. Sgt. Fred Smith, Chicago, Ill., chief, says Sawyer "is darn good" and with Smith only a short time away from rotation, Sawyer has a good chance to succeed him. Two Vaughn brothers, Detroit, Mich., are the base bricklayers. Some of the men have also been assigned as "spot-welders" to repair broken plane parts.

In all these jobs, they work side-by-side with the white GIs. When I visited the dispatcher's office to talk to Sgt. Curtis R. Woods, Newborn, N. C., in charge of truck drivers, for instance, he immediately called over Sgt. Carl Wilson, white, Jersey City, to help explain their duties. Their work is so thoroughly integrated that it was impossible to get a full picture of their work without a description from both of them.

That the base policy is to give Negro soldiers an opportunity to get ahead was evidenced by the number who were to appear before the Officer's Candidate Board the day following my visit. Seven men, most of them with some college training, had been recommended by their company commander to compete for commissions in air corps administration. This war a fair percentage of it is considered that there are less than 400 colored soldiers on the base. 4-21-45

No Discrimination

Though they have their own day room which is considered the best equipped on the post, there is no restriction as to the use of any other facilities. This includes the Red Cross club and the consolidated post exchange. In athletics they have demonstrated that they are the best—so much so that when the boxing team left for Calcutta it was all-colored.

In order to achieve this success Col. Rice has been extremely careful to select one of his ablest officers as commander of the colored unit for, like at every other post, there are those that feel the "Negroes should be kept in their place." Company commander is energetic, efficient Capt. William H. Tebay, Butler, Pa., who takes no foolishness in case some less enlightened officer starts some "stuff" with the colored boys. And because he gets full support from his commanding officer, he is a popular guy, too. 4-21-45

Like in most colored units, some of the men have had very little chance for formal education. Fortunately, a former Stanford university instructor in education, 1st Lt. Albert Lewis, is in charge of this program and he is taking quite an interest in raising their level of training. As he says, "When the Negro soldier is convinced that he can improve himself because of further training, he studies as hard—if not harder—than the white soldier."

Men Like Their C.O.

Interestingly enough, white GIs on the post think as much of Col. Rice as the colored boys—even though he insists in fair treatment for all men under his command. No wonder that in spite of the fact that this is not the largest base shipping supplies to China it boasts the highest monthly tonnage. With everyone co-operating, from pilots to garbage cleaners, this isn't hard to understand. Working with ATC gives colored boys their first opportunity to learn some of the ground jobs connected with commercial flying. For ATC, with its globe-encircling network of bases and daily schedule of planes from the United States to every section of the allied-controlled world, is commercial flying applied to military needs. Thus, these GIs are more fortunate than numbers of other soldiers for they are learning skills which may be used in a civilian industry with which they are now directly connected.

No wonder they're the most satisfied group of colored GIs I've visited—and as long as they stay under the present set-up they can't be blamed.

Dunbar Asserts Nazi Cities Are Like Graveyards

Atlanta World 5-5-45

Correspondent Says Snipers Are Still Active

Atlanta Cons. 5-5-45

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY IN GERMANY— (ANP)— The hands of death are in Germany and I stand in her midst to watch her die.

I traveled from France and covered more than 2,000 miles. This particular trip had all the fascination of an adventure. The first real destruction I saw was at Sadrbrucken. The city was like a grave yard. A few people were here and there looting or salvaging what they could find from wrecked homes.

SEES PUERTO RICANS

At Kaiserslautern, where I stopped to be guided on to my correct destination and replenish the jeep with the gas, I saw an infantry unit from Puerto Rico. Their job was to parade the streets in order to keep the defiant Nazi civilians in check. Snipers were active, I was told. 5-5-45

I finally arrived at our press camp in Gaunsbadt. A white correspondent can remain at the camp and learn all about the battles of an army from the briefings. A Negro correspondent cannot work in the same manner. His primary object is to cover Negro units, and since not is not the duty of the briefing officer to know the kind of troops that are fighting in the line, a Negro correspondent must, at all times, go to the front in order to collect his war news.

Sometimes it takes two days to find a unit; especially if it is changing positions daily as was my experience in trying to find the 969th. And believe me it was really secret. Just as I was getting ready to give up the search, I saw the wire party on a lonely road laying the telephone wires.

"Are you from the 969th?" I asked.

"Yes," was the reply.

It was a great relief when I was shown the correct location of the outfit. 5-5-45

CROSSING THE RHINE

At two 'oclock on the morning of March 28 the 969th convoy was moving through the wrecked town of Worms where the battalion made the historic crossing of the Rhine. This town was wrecked to atoms.

In the little town off Mannheim, I saw some houses that were constructed in 1936 complete with air raid shelters. We occupied a house in the same district that was presumably owned by a Nazi boss. This town was of considerable importance to the Germans. They fought like savages to defend it. Our artillery played hell with them when they were trying to cross the bridge on the river Mainz.

Warzbur was another town that was completely wrecked. The Germans were pulling out so quickly that when we entered the town their dead were lying unhooded in the streets.

MOVE FOR ATTACK

Early one morning the batteries moved in the surburban area for an attack. Orders have been given that whenever soldiers enter a town they may select any house they see fit and put the occupants out on the street. The morning, I saw some GIs go into a house.

The house was partly destroyed by blast and the woman occupant seemingly well-to-do, had packed all her belongings in one room. She came back to find GIs in possession of her house.

When she broke down in sudden tears, I politely turned to her and said that she must thank Hitler for her fate, and pointed out that people elsewhere in Europe had suffered infinitely worse.

ALL ARE NAZIS 5-5-45

It is dangerous to take pity on these people and share their houses with them. They are all Nazis and will not hesitate to shoot our soldiers in the most treacherous manner. I saw 12 and 13 year old boys, a 30-year-old woman and scores of civilians of the "die for Hitler" type in the prison cage.

I witnessed one of the strangest pilgrimages of all time. French, Polish, Jugeslaves, numbering tens of thousnads of prisoners liberated from Nazi slave prisons, were in a slow and painful excursion across frozen plains and devasted villages. Some were in rags with hardly any foot-wear to cover their feet.

These wretched people are free again. They have been fortunate to see Nemesis—the god of retributive justice— speedily at work. The "master race" is beaten; their spirits are as flat as their homes. They are burning Nazi flag of surrender.

They are now tasting the very dregs of humiliation. But those pompous brutes had classified Negroes worst than lower animals much to the delight of their "Aryan" buddies in other countries. The master race today has come out in its true colors—colors that show the dreadful virus of bestiality, sadism and contempt for the decencies of civilization.

I repeat, the hands of death are on Germany and I stand in her midst to watch her die.

Pfc. Napoleon E. Taylor First to Land in Africa

5-12-45

Colored soldiers have traveled all over the world in this war, many of them having carried out assignments in two and three continents, but none is prouder than modest 33-year-old Pfc. Napoleon E. Taylor, 502 Bloom Street, Baltimore, Md., who holds the distinction of being the first American soldier to land on African soil.

Pfc. Taylor, now back in the States after two years of duty overseas and recently stationed at Camp Shanks, N.Y., led ashore the first American Expeditionary Force to put foot on African soil June 17, 1942.

His unit, a coast artillery outfit, was sent to Liberia six months after the United States' entrance into the global war under an agreement with the Liberian Government, signed March 31, 1942, at Monrovia.

SGT. NAPOLEON E. TAYLOR of Baltimore (He has been promoted since returning to the States.)

Defense Agreement

Under terms of the defense agreement, the United States was permitted to construct, control and protect air bases in Liberia as a safeguard to the West Coast African region that could have, at the time, been of strategic military value to the Germans.

American forces, chiefly colored soldiers, have been stationed in Liberia since that historic June 17 date, when Pfc. Taylor and his travel-weary comrades, tense and excited after the long 4,000-mile sea trip across the sub-infested Atlantic, gleefully stepped off the landing barges onto African soil.

Pfc. Taylor delivered a dramatic greeting to the Liberians upon landing, declaring:

"Liberians! We are here to join hands and fight together until this world is free of tyrannical dictators."

Greeted by Natives

Only a half-dozen Liberian boatmen who were assisting with the unloading were on hand to listen to the greeting, but the record shows that they stopped, looked and listened admiringly.

One of the small group walked over and shook Taylor's hand. The others silently resumed their work, putting an end to a dramatic and historic moment of the war.

Taylor, who left his packing house job in Baltimore to enlist in the army in January, 1941, moved forward with his comrades and stayed in Liberia two years before returning to the States.

He was among the U.S. soldiers who set up airports, cantonments and other installations in record time in spite of such tremendous difficulties as malaria, bad terrain and the rainy season.

Ex-Douglass Student

Taylor, former Douglass High School student in Baltimore, resided with his relatives at the Bloom Street address prior to enlistment. He is married to the former Ethel Oliver of Georgia who resides in NYC.

Liberia is the only independent republic in Africa, and was first colonized by American freed slaves in 1822. Its capital, Monrovia, was named for James Monroe, fifth President of the United States.

Eboue Key To Success Of Invasion In North Africa

By A. M. WENDELL MALLIET
(Foreign News Editor)

As we celebrate victory over the European members of the Axis, and contemplate with disgust the humiliating end of Italian fascism and its creator, Benito Mussolini, and speculate on the death of, or slinking away to some obscure hide-out by, Adolf Hitler, there come before us the personalities of some of the great architects of victory.

These men, two of whom are no longer among the living, are the leaders who really made victory possible. They stood like mighty oaks in a forest when all around them had been blown down and men's hearts had been failing them from fear. We remember today, Winston Churchill, prime minister of Great Britain; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, late President of the United States; Felix Sylvester Eboue, late governor-general of French Equatorial Africa, and Josef Stalin, marshal of the Soviet Union.

Britain Holds Out Alone

In the Summer of 1940, Great Britain stood alone with Winston Churchill holding the nation together and shouting words of encouragement in England's darkest hour of peril. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared his country the arsenal of democracy, ordered United States warships to convoy and help deliver the goods, materials and weapons to embattled Britain, and arranged the transfer of 50 destroyers to the British navy.

France had fallen under the ruthless heel of Nazi military might. Marshal Petain, Admiral Darlan, Pierre Laval and others had decided to do business with Hitler and collaborate beyond patriotism's call to stand in humility and suffering with one's fallen countrymen. The British had been driven back to their embattled island fortress of England from Dunkirk, and the men of Vichy had actually handed over French Africa to Hitler and his aids, supported by Franco's Spain as a dagger at the heart of South America and the United States.

At that time a pact of peace was in effect between Nazi Germany and Communist Russia. Marshal Rommel's Nazis and Il Duce's Blackshirts were racing toward Alexandria and the Suez Canal. British resistance was feeble enough, especially because Italian planes, submarines and warships had made the Mediterranean a hazardous route by which to transport men, food and arms. If the war had been lost in Africa, India would have been gone and the Germans and the Japanese would have linked up their forces by marching around the oceans of the world.

deGaulle Reaches Britain

General Charles deGaulle had escaped to Britain and was attempting to rally the forces of France for freedom. Without knowledge of what deGaulle was doing in London, a black man, who was a colonial governor in the Tchad Territory in Africa, refused to obey the order of Vichy to surrender to Hitler. He stood firm and rallied his colleagues in other French Equatorial African colonies. These colonial governors were white men, born in France. But this man was black and born in the West Indies: Felix Sylvester Eboue was his name.

DeGaulle and Eboue were doing the same thing at the same time. DeGaulle needed French soil on which to plant France's flag of freedom. This was the first major contribution of Eboue to the cause of a United Nations' victory. Other far reaching contributions to the invasion of Europe by way of the continent's "soft under-belly" were made by this great son of Africa. Eboue provided airfields which facilitated the fueling and flight of hundreds of planes each day in support of British arms against Rommel and the Italians.

Eboue Saves the Day

Furthermore, it was in French Equatorial Africa, under the administration of Eboue, that General LeClerc trained his African and European army which is said to have made the longest march in history to take part in the defeat of Rommel in the pocket at Bizerte and Tunis before the grand assault across to Sicily and thence to Italy.

With a large force of German and Italian troops pinned down in Italy, the way was cleared for the Italian surrender and the successful D-Day crossing to Normandy. If the British and American forces had not landed in France, that unfortunate country could not have been freed and the mighty armies of the Soviet Union could not have rolled on to Berlin as it has done.

Today, in victory, we salute the memory, loyalty, devotion, courage and patriotism of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Governor General Felix Sylvester Eboue.

We salute, too, the heroic and indefatigable labor of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef Stalin. The victory of the United Nations in Europe is victory for the peace loving and democratic peoples of the world.

29th Signal First Negro Wire Unit To Work On German Soil

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

WITH U. S. SUPPLY FORCES IN FRANCE — "Leap-frogging" from the Normandy beachhead through France and Belgium, Company B of the 29th Signal Construction Battalion, has been assigned to the Advance Section, Communication Zone, the border on the Saarbrucken front. Company B, working in close cooperation with Company A, set up its quarters on the enemy's home ground several weeks ago.

When questioned concerning the extremely low casualties in company, Captain William D. Carswell, of Waycrosse, Ga., said, "The men are good soldiers as well as good workers. Our mine detector crews have the respect of all the men, and if it were not for them I'd hate to see what would happen in some of the fields we have to go thru."

Most of the work on this particular section of the line, that extends far back as Nancy, is done under adverse conditions due to the unfavorable terrain. Crews have to carry the heavy 20 and 30-foot poles across country where the line trucks cannot travel over the muddy soil. Six-foot holes have to be dug with spoon shovels by hand, since the earthborer blades will not grab the sandy earth and carry it clear of the hole.

stringing copper strands of telephone and telegraph wire over German soil. This unit is the first Negro signal group to work in Germany.

Following two armies across the Continent, the 29th Signal

NEGRO AND WHITE TROOPS FOUGHT SIDE BY SIDE TO VICTORY IN EUROPE

St. Louis Argus Mo. 5-4-45

WITH THE 78TH INFANTRY DIVISION, EAST OF THE RHINE IN GERMANY

—The volunteer Negro Infantrymen who joined the 78th "Lightning" Division on March 14, crossed the Rhine that day and entered the hot battle then in progress, have established themselves as fighting men no less courageous or aggressive than their white comrades. These "Tan" Doughs welcomed the opportunity to fight alongside their white buddies of the 78th, the outfit that gained no small share of fame by smashing all the way through the Siegfried Line to capture Schmidt and the Schwammenauel Dam. It was the 78th which on February 28 leaped from the Roer to the Rhine where the First Battalion of the 310th Regiment crossed the Ludendorf Bridge the night of March 7 to secure and enlarge the trans-Rhine bridgehead. 5-4-45

The 78th, as did several other infantry divisions on the Western Front, recently received three platoons of Negro Doughboys. One platoon was assigned to each of the 78th's infantry regiments, the 309th, 310th and 311th.

Among the first Negro troops to engage in combat east of the Rhine, men of these platoons came from Quartermaster, Engineer, and Transportation Corps units. Most of them took reductions in grade to become fighting privates in foxholes.

Following is an account by regiments of the activities of these platoons:

309th Regiment

The platoon assigned to F Company of this regiment did "a swell job" in the capture of Honnef, on the west and south banks of the Sieg River, deep in the Remagen bridgehead.

They followed tanks into the city and wasted no time in cleaning up their assigned objectives.

Lieutenant John M. Green, their platoon leader from 1725 12th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., asserted, "They are aggressive and eager, and when they see a Jerry they want to go after him. I'm well pleased with their performance under fire."

Private William Blackwell, platoon runner from 42 Debbs Ferry Road, Fairview, White Plains, New York, shot a running Jerry with his M-1 from a distance of 500 yards.

"I just saw him running," Blackwell said, "so I took cover behind a little bank and let him have it."

Lieutenant Green who helped with the training of the platoon in February, said he had difficulty in confining his men to their objectives. Seeing there Jerries still in front of them, they wanted to go ahead even after they had captured and cleaned out all sections of the town that they had been assigned.

Private First Class Harold Chandler, 369 West 116th Street, New York City, who took a break to private from staff sergeant, volunteered to go and get an unknown number of Germans that had been spotted in dug-in positions near a house.

Armed with grenades and his M-1, Chandler advanced alone while his men covered him. Six Jerries, armed with Burke guns, gave up and came back with Chandler.

Private First Class Vincent R. Malveaux, who took a reduction from first sergeant to private, drew praise from his platoon leader for cool-headed work in helping to get the men out from under a mortar barrage. Malveaux, who lives at 5034 Just Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., was an attorney in the Capital before entering the service.

310th Regiment

Negro troops assigned to A Company of the 310th Regiment won the praise and respect of officers and enlisted men fighting with them in the Remagen bridgehead.

They are referred to as "the fightingest sons-a-guns you ever saw." 5-4-45

Lieutenant Millard G. Durham, their company commander from Steger, Ill., says, "The colored troops, in all engagements, proved to be as courageous and aggressive as the veterans of any other company.

"Their first engagement was a terrific small arms battle. They never faltered. On the contrary, they were hard to control. Their sole desire seemed to be to close with the enemy, regardless of the scheme of maneuver. It was difficult to hold them on the company objective when there was an enemy in front of them."

"Shortage of ammunition was the only thing that stopped them from going too far ahead when two squads of the platoon spearheaded an attack at Wiese," says Lieutenant Robert R. Dobson, platoon leader from Charlotte, North Carolina.

After fighting for two days the platoon suffered its first serious casualty when one member was killed in a fire fight.

The way the men themselves size it up is best expressed by one of them, who said, "We always did want to get up here at the front. It kind of makes you feel good inside." 5-4-45

311th Regiment

The Negro platoon assigned to G Company of the 311th Regiment also has done well.

Lieutenant Lee Luther, their leader from 199 Elm Street, Ilion, New York, remarked, "They came through their baptism of fire in great shape. Sure they were scared at first, but who isn't!"

At the end of a week's fighting one had been killed and nine wounded out of the original platoon strength of 43.

Private George Hutchinson of Brenham, Texas, who had been overseas for 18 months, said, "The Infantry is a heck of a lot better than some of the service outfits we have been in. Here a man's a man. Dangerous as Hades too."

Already they have taken shots at the Germans, killed some, captured some and routed others.

Private First Class Osborne B. Blanton, 1212 Delores Street, Fort Worth, Texas, recounted. "It was January 6. Boy, I'll never forget that date. That's when they asked for volunteers. First General Eisenhower asked, then General Lee asked, and finally they got around to asking me. I snapped it up in a hurry. There are plenty more who would like to get in the Infantry."

Private Jack (Pop) Walling, from Forkton, Ky., at 36 the "oldest" man in the platoon, said. "All we dread is those 88s—and that's all of us. But put this down, will you? I was going through this town and saw a Jerry stick his head out of a window. That was enough for me. I fired a clip at him. That was too much for Jerry."

Most of the men of G Company, fifth platoon, have had from 14 to 24 months' service overseas. All have received the coveted Combat Infantryman Badge and commendation from the regimental commander, Colonel Chester M. Willingham, of 308 E. Temple Street, College Park, Ga. 5-4-45

Captain George Foelsch, their company commander from 22-63 21st Street, Astoria, Long Island, said, "They're making out all right. I told the colonel if he had any more I'll surely take them."

Private Willie Banerman, from Route 1225, Bargas, North Carolina, is impressed with his company commander. "That Captain Foelsch," he said, "is a tough man but a fair man. He always has a map and a compass in one hand and a pistol in the other. He walks right down the road with bullets going all around him. Sort of reminds me of Captain Gandy, colored company CO of the 92nd Division."

Among other Negro Infantrymen in the platoon are Pvt. Lee Robinson, 1008 N. 18th St., St. Louis, Mo.; Pvt. Warren H. Lyle, 203 Hickory St., Orange, N. J.; Pvt. James Everett, 5521 Swiss Ave., Dallas, Texas; Pvt. Abraham Harris, 1015 Springfield Ave., Baltimore, Md.; Pvt. Richard Scott, 51 Seaton Place, N. W., Washington, D. C.; Pvt. Henry Williams, 2134 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.; Pvt. Jesse Bailey, 630 Fifth St., Birmingham, Ala.; Pvt. George Bolling, 603 Herald Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.; Pfc. Lawrence Jones, 42 6½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Negro Combat Vets Made Service Units

Daily Worker

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Elements of the first Negro combat troops to reach Germany, the 777th Field Artillery Battalion, and inactive elements of the first two Negro combat units to arrive in Europe, the assigned to Signal heavy construc- 450th Anti-aircraft Artillery Bat- tion, Quartermaster, Engineer, Ordtalion, have been reconverted into nance and Transportation Corps non-combat outfits for service in battalions and will be shipped immediately to the Pacific Operations Area.

The 777th, only unit of its kind to participate in one of the largest mass field artillery barrages in the history of warfare, is an outfit of 400 men with seven months front-line experience. They are being reconverted into service units.

Most of the 450th men served in two theaters, with assignments in England, North Africa, Italy and France. Many have more than 90 points, each but have volunteered, according to the War Department, to remain in the service. As non-combat troops their accumulation of discharge points will be considerably slower than they were as combat soldiers. 9-3-45

The 450th Anti-aircraft Artillery Battalion, cited four times by King George VI of England and by its former commander, General Mark Clark, was dissolved a few months before the end of the war in Europe

Glad He's Back

Philadelphia Tribune

PFC. WILLIAM L. OULDS is barely able to restrain himself as he and his wife, Mrs. Eva Oulds, of 2229 Catherine street, greet each other for the first time in over two years.

6-9-45 Pa.

A member of the 99th Combat Division, serving in the European Theatre of Operations under the command of General Omar N. Bradley, Oulds was one of the 50 service men returned here Monday to take part in the 7th War Loan Drive. He wears the Combat Infantryman's badge, the Good Conduct Medal and the ETO medal with three stars. (Oth-

Pittsburgh Courier

6-9-45

BIG DAY IN CHICAGO—General Mark Clark, fresh from the Italian campaign, shakes the hand of Sgt. Zachery Love, a Chicagoan and Fifth Army veteran, during Memorial Day ceremonies in Chicago Wednesday of last week. Other Fifth Army vets in photo are: Lieut. Thomas Jefferson and Lieut. Albert Loving of Chicago, and M/Sgt. William C. Chaney, Washington, D. C., the general's orderly. The group, which included forty-eight whites, flew to Chicago from Italy. —Myles Photo.

Pitts., Pa.

Of American Origin!

French Newspaper Slanders Negroes

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW YORK—"Young women of Marseille, be careful." Thus goes a headline in the June 29 issue of the French daily, Le Soir, of Marseille, France. This titilating headline covers a two-column discussion of what the writer, one Marguerite Polgy, calls a "delicate question." American Negroes are, of course, already thoroughly familiar with this "delicate question"—it is simply the fraternization of American Negro troops stationed in Europe, with white women.

Whether in England, France, Australia, or Germany, these simple human contacts become very "delicate questions" in the eyes of Americans, and they set out to try to stop such fraternization if possible.

8-4-45

This latest slanderous attack begins with the usual canards about Negroes being "overgrown children," "crap shooters," "knife wielders," "street-corner loafers," and bad fellows generally. These stereotypes are put forth in a prefatory paragraph and are expressive of American and not French opinion.

A translation of pertinent parts of the article follows:

"Opinion of an American General—We mentioned the vicious conduct of Negroes in Marseille very tactfully to General Ratay, commanding officer of the Delta Base. He told us he regretted them.

"We are on guard and we mete out severe punishment," he said. "I shall increase the military police personnel very soon. But I can't do it at once because there are thousands of soldiers passing through Marseille and they create many complex problems which have to be solved one at a time. These soldiers are coming from Germany, where they have not been allowed to fraternize with the people. They are on their way to the Pacific theatre of war and naturally their stopover in Marseille is a sort of leave, and like all soldiers on leave, they commit a few excesses.

"Our punishment is severe," added Captain Lichine, aide to the general "I can assure you that where a French Council of war would give five years, we give ten."

FAMILY COUNCILS

"Few people in France know that American Negroes live under laws different from those in France, for here we have no race problem. Our blacks live in Africa in conformity with their own customs and with no wish to adopt ours. Only a few of them live in France. This is why the French exhibit such little interest in these race questions. But in America, things are different. In certain of the Southern States, Negroes make up almost 55 per cent of the total population. Therefore this important question cannot be ignored. Every white American sucks it in with his mother's milk.

"But just now there are thousands of Negro soldiers passing through Marseille and this makes the education of our people on this delicate subject very necessary. This is why we must talk to our readers after this friendly fashion.

"Parents, watch your young daughters: A black soldier is not just an object of curiosity. He is a man. And this man lives in accordance with American customs and laws. Now, a Negro knows very well that in his own family and hometown white women are denied him. The white woman who intrudes herself where she is disbarred will lead the existence of a pariah. She will be spurned by Negroes, who will never accept her, and by the whites, who will repudiate her. Now that you know this, watch your daughters. Though these young girls are ignorant, they will understand the counsel which their parents will not fail to give them."

An immediate reply to this slander came from Corp. Percy de Freitas of Brooklyn, N. Y. He wrote Madame Polgy the following letter in French, under date of July 2:

"Madame Polgy:

Allow me to express my deep interest in your article, 'A Delicate Question,' which appeared in the June 29 issue of Le Soir. It is unfortunate that the virus of American race prejudice has erupted amidst the French people at this time. The goodwill and friendship between Negro Americans and the French people must not be allowed to reach an impasse because of the prejudice or jealousy of a few individuals.

". . . The conduct of a few American Negro soldiers should not be made the basis for an unjust attack on a whole people. German defeat was accomplished because of Nazi racism, and any country which encourages race hatred will suffer a similar fate.

"This 'stereotype' manner of thinking is no way to treat any question, and it smacks of chauvinism. Race prejudice is an American phobia which needs to be cleaned out.

8-4-45

"All the sacrifices of this war will have been in vain if the race question is permitted to ruin the opportunity for liberty and accord among all the peoples of the world. Almost all Negro American soldiers are happier in France, from the standpoint of freedom, than they ever were in their own country. Strange, isnt' it? Racial propaganda has had no success in Australia, England, and even in Italy. Let us hope that it will also fail in France. Quo vadis? Be careful! Perhaps Hitler is not dead." Yours truly, (signed) Corp. Percy de Freitas.

1st Reports Told of Only White Troops

AFRO-American

Balt., Md.

Commander Who Said "Nuts" to Nazi Demand for Surrender of 10,000 Was Backed Up by Black Gunners

By OLLIE STEWART 1-13-45

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH U.S. TROOPS IN BELGIUM — By Cable — The city of Bastogne will long be remembered as the scene of one of the most heroic stands made by Americans during this war. I passed through Bastogne near the middle of December and talked to some men who a few days later held the city, although encircled, against the best German troops Field Marshal von Rundstedt had at his command.

On December 21, when the ring of steel had been thrown almost around the place, and the 82nd and 101st Airborne Division had been rushed to the front to stem the Nazi tide at Bastogne, colored artillery men manned their 105-mm. Howitzers and pitched lead twenty-four hours daily as coolly as though on a target range.

Defied Nazi Shells

Three men on a radio truck at the division command post maintained contact between the gun position and headquarters while German shells fell thick and fast, but they never hesitated in the performance of their duty.

They were Sgt. Tillie May of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Cpl. William Rich, Jr., Jamaica, N.Y.; and Pfc. Charles Maddox, Kansas City, Kans.

Two messengers, Cpl. James Kendley of Paris, Tenn., and Pvt. Richard Morgan of NYC, were pushed out of Bastogne by the first German thrust but returned when our forces were regrouped and stayed on the job until the garrison was relieved and reinforced by airborne troops.

Fought in Normandy

This artillery battalion was the same one I watched in action when American troops broke out of Normandy. They helped shell Perior, Lessay, and Laye du Puits until the Nazis surrendered. Their record for speed and accuracy at Bastogne earned them praise from all who sweated out the German assault for ten days that embraced most of the Christmas holidays.

The following men huddled in a room of a partially ruined building when a Jerry shell passed through the wall and exploded in the next room killing four men: Pvt. Walter Henwood, Dayton, Ohio; Pvt. George Moelhenry, Granite City, Ill.; Cpl. Everett Brown, Fairmount, W. Va.; Cpl. Charles Wysong, Hamlin, W. Va.; Pfc. Gerald Durnedetto, Renovo, Pa.; Pvt. Oliver Davis, Tell City, Ind., and S/Sgt. John Willox, Hamilton, Ohio. Some were white, others colored; but no one had time for the separation of races at Bastogne.

Chief Steward on Troop Transport

At a certain port city, I met the first man made a chief steward on a troop transport. He is Winfield Scott Conte of NYC, a former musician who first visited France years ago with Sam Wooding's orchestra. He played the drums with the band when the Regent Theater opened in Baltimore. Conte has been in the transport service almost three years.

Other soldiers seen recently were Lt. Theodore Shell of Rahway, N.J., with an engineer outfit; Cpl. Shellie Pelzer, 2526 S. American St., Philadelphia, Pfc. Furman Sixon of Bayonne, N.J.; Pvt. Gunious Blackwell, Brooklyn; S/Sgt. Willie Balwin, Hickman, Ga.; Sgt. James Lloyd McIntosh, Ga.; Cpl. Milton Jones, Pfc. Cleveland Johnson, Cpl. Robert Mann, Sgt. Quincy Billingsley, all of Atlanta, Ga.

Why Colored Artillery Unit Is Not Identified

WASHINGTON

Dispatches from the war fronts frequently give the unit designations of white soldiers which have engaged the enemy. In the accompanying story, the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions are mentioned by Ollie Stewart but the unit designation of the colored artillery unit which helped to stem the tide at Bastogne is deleted.

A War Department spokesman explained that the designation of component parts of a division is not given because such information would play into the hands of the enemy by revealing strategical weakness or strength. Identification of a unit as large as a division, however, is of little or no value to the enemy.

Since most of the colored units are detached, there is less opportunity to identify them, the spokesman added. The 92nd and 93rd Divisions, however, have long been identified in news dispatches just as have all-white divisions.

Service Troops Shift to Combat Units at Front

BELGIUM—From Cherbourg to Aachen, men in service units were offered the chance to transfer to combat outfits, and many colored soldiers with combat training have taken advantage of the opportunity, some even asking for a place with paratroopers.

Inside Germany, Capt. John Hughes of Chicago, commanded a service company that performed miracles recently, moving stores of ammunition, gas, and food from German clutches. With his four officers 1/Lt. Harold Dolly, 1/Lt. Alfred Ray, 2/Lt. John Castaneda, 2/Lt. James Shields, the company evacuated thousands of tons of vital materials in record time.

Service Troops Heroes in Halting of German Blitz

AFRO-American Balt. Md. 1-6-45

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM (By Cable)—For sheer courage, self sacrifice and just plain guts, nothing that has happened in this war surpasses the efforts of our truckers and QM lads since Rundstedt started his recent blitz.

Here is the picture. When the German steam-roller got under way we had to rush men and supplies to critical spots to stem the advancing tide, but in many cases these men and supplies were great distances away.

Day and night, long columns of reinforcements, gas, ammunition, and medicines moved snake-like toward the front over roads covered with snow and ice and in bitter cold.

Worse 'Lugs' in France

Not even in our rapid advance across France did drivers suffer so much. Their trucks skidded every time they tried to halt. Their motors froze when they halted too long.

They had no hot meals for days, no sleep and no heat for the supplies had to go through despite ferry planes went through strafed our convoys by day

92nd Facing New Attack

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-6-45

Germans Launch Drive in NW Italy

FIGHTING TOUGH

Most Prisoners Are Colored, Nazis Say

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

and parachutists who sniped them at night.

In Belgium, with the heavy fog calling for lights even at noon, I saw numerous wrecks where vehicles slid off road whose surface was as slick as glass. But still the trucks kept inching along and delivered their loads.

The courage of the men who stuck by their guns cannot be praised too highly, but without ammunition and other necessities these men would not have halted the fanatical Germans probing deep into Allied positions.

When it will be possible to tell the full story of incidents surrounding this momentous period, the boys who keep 'em rolling will stand high on the hero roster.

On Tuesday, January 2, I talked with Pfc. Leversey Henry of Amarillo, Texas, just off duty as a train guard. For days he rode with vital supplies until his destination was reached and eager hands unloaded the cars.

Dirty and cold, but grinning, he

Talks With Captured Nazi

Afro-American 1-6-45

Cpl. Hutchins B. Coleman of Detroit (left), a member of the 92nd Division in Italy, is shown conversing with a captured German captain, while Lt. Clarence Phillips of Washington looks on. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Coleman, the corporal, who studied German while a student at the University of Michigan and was given a year's training in advanced German at City College in New York by the Army, can determine a German's section by his dialect. He is a musician, paints a little and is also a prolific writer.

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BULLETIN

Dispatches from Rome said Sunday that 92nd Division troops had retaken Barga, one of two Italian towns captured by the Nazis a week ago, and pushed into the hills beyond.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—Following in the wake of their great Western front counter-offensive, German forces are now launching a new drive along this 5th Army front aimed especially at one sector held by the 92nd Division.

The strength of these new co-ordinated enemy attacks has not yet been officially revealed, but it is known that some of the fiercest fighting this front has seen since the battle for Florence is now under way in the Serchio River Valley area where the Nazis are making their bid.

These attacks center so far, according to the latest reports, around Gallicano, a town at the head of the Serchio River Valley, which is a key road junction spot located 15 miles inland from the West Coast.

Gallicano is 40 miles northeast of the seaport town of Leghorn, an Army supply port.

Washingtonian in Command

Some elements of the unit I accompanied overseas are participating in the fighting in this area. The commanding colonel is ill, and Lt. Col. Alonzo G. Ferguson of 2433 M Street, Northwest, Washington, World War I veteran and a member of the unit since its activation, is temporarily in command.

The difficult terrain of the Apennine Mountains along the slopes of which the 92nd is now fighting has offered a major problem. The Germans hold the highest surrounding ground, thereby making their defense to our spearhead attacks comparatively easy.

The terrain at some points of the conflict is such that it is necessary for 92nd members attempting a forward movement to use their hands to climb slopes and to maneuver for sound footing before they can halt to answer German fire.

Unable to Defend Selves

The Germans in some such instances have rolled hand grenades down on troops, while in others they have been content just to roll rocks.

This marks the first time in almost two months that there has been contentrated enemy activity on the 5th Army front west of the town of Bologna.

Whether the new drive is planned to coincide with the German Western front push is not yet determined, partly because of strength of enemy attacks is still unrevealed.

Elsewhere on the 5th Army front, including the extreme coastal sector and the area east of the Serchio River Valley, activity is limited to reconnaissance patrols.

1-6-45

Lines Confused by Parachutists

Afro-American 1-6-45

Only Tan Yanks Not Suspected as Spies

EVERYBODY FIGHTS

Service Troops Take Posts Beside Infantry

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Twenty-three Marylanders and ten other Easterners are mentioned in this dispatch.]

PARIS (By Cable) — This is being written on the verge of the New Year, when all along the Western Front the outcome of the German thrust still remains in doubt but Allied forces seem to have regained the offensive and in some places have thrown the enemy back several miles.

Most hopeful sign to the American correspondents who have watched the war for years is the confidence of both officers and enlisted men during this crucial moment, when bitter cold is making fighting difficult and poor visibility robs us of our air advantage.

They say it is simply a question of when we will win, not whether or not we will win.

All Became Combat Troops

Significantly, the German attack made all troops combat troops. Colored soldiers performed heroically by the side of white pals when the going was toughest, though many of them had never before been in the front line.

Truck drivers became infantrymen. Port battalions guarded bridges and prisoners. Railhead units fought like mad to protect vital stores of gas, food and ammunition.

Colored MP units were assigned to duty where none ever were seen before.

All But Tan Yanks Suspected

When German parachutists were known to have been dropped behind American lines dressed in American uniforms, it became necessary to demand identification papers from everybody, but with colored troops it was only a matter of form, since the Germans have no known colored soldiers.

For several days colored troops were the only ones not suspected. Visiting along the front with officers and men I was halted many times, but my face was my best identification.

On several occasions colored soldiers captured German spies behind our lines and proved their alertness when everything hung in the balance.

Sees Record Port Unit

At an inland port I found a port company which set a barge-building record while in England. In France they hold the record for unloading a Liberty ship and for the highest tonnage for this particular port. Its members are mostly Marylanders.

Coming from Earleigh Heights, a graduate of Bowie State Teachers' College and approved for direct commissioning as an officer is S/Sgt. Everett Pettigrew. Best French linguist is S/Sgt. Paul J. Wheeler, 2355 Druid Hill Avenue, Baltimore. Other Baltimoreans in the unit include:

Pvt. Leo Green, 422 Laurens Street; Cpl. Von Zo Gunther, 403-A Schwartz Avenue; Pvt. Horace Gail, 510 Robert Street; Pvt. William Gassaway, 1704 Parker Court; Pfc. Frank Sheppard, 1101 Argyle Avenue; Pvt. Thomas Foster, 2432 Etting Street; Pfc. Kenneth Grandison, 1828 McCulloh Street; Sgt. James McKenney, 1918 McCulloh Street; Sgt. James Johnson, 503 Gold Street; Pvt. Samuel Parker, 247 Oxford Court; Sgt. Charles Johnson, 1328 Whitelock Street; and Cpl. Floyd Matthews, 1600 block Division Street.

Other Marylanders are:

Pvt. Oscar Fosque, Crisfield; Cpl. Harry Gibbs, Churchill; Pvt. Theodore Hayward, Princess Anne; Pvt. James Dorsey, Pimlico; Pfc. Joseph Snowden, Turners Station; Pfc. George Greenwell, Valley Lee; Cpl. Andrew Henson, Joppa; Cpl. Charles King, Gaithersburg; and Pvt. James Miles, Leonardtown.

Other members include:

Cpl. Nathan Duffin, 26 L Street, Northwest, Washington; Sgt. Wilmot Harris, 46 N. Fifty-third Street; S/Sgt. Roderick Lynch, 5113 Aspen Street; S/Sgt. Joseph Medley, 4320 N. Gratz Street, and Cpl. Calvin Davenger, 219 N. Farson Street, Philadelphia; Pfc. William Powell, Harrisburg, Pa.; Pvt. William Jordan, Uniontown, Pa.; Cpl. C. K. McGee, Pittsburgh; Pvt. George Richards and Pvt. Roy Moore, both of Suffolk, Va.

Negroes Prove Real Heroes In Morville Rout

Memphis World Tenn. 1-9-45

Nazi Lieutenant Admits Crew Had Few War Equals

BY GEORGE COLEMAN MOORE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE — (ANP) — Real heroes of the 12th corps rout of Nazis forces in the Morville-les-Vic area were members of a Negro tank outfit attached to the 4th Armored division supporting the 26th infantry division.

This is the opinion of a "superman" lieutenant captured during the battle who declared that their bravery and imagination surpassed anything he'd ever witnessed in four years of fighting on several fronts.

"Only once before have I seen a tank crew as full of fight as that one and that was the crew of a Russian tank knocked out and in a similar situation," he said.

According to the story, a Sherman commanded by Sgt. Roy King, River Rouge, Mich., was the lead tank of a force column when bazooka fire hit it on the outskirts of Morville. Crew members removed two wounded comrades with difficulty while German AT and small arms fire peppered their vicinity.

Crawling between the vehicle's boogie wheels the Americans retaliated with a barrage at the enemy only 70 yards distant. Cpl. James Whitby, Detroit driver, with the aid of Pvt. John McNeal, of N. C., accounted for the whole bazooka team and felled six other German anti-tank gunners. 1-9-45

Cpl. Herbert Porter, Asheville, N. C., tank gunner hit by small fragments shell, was the last to leave the disabled tank. The battle raged until elements of the 26th division arrived to kill and capture the remaining opposition. 1-9-45

Meet Canadians Near Rhine To Cut Off Foe

Chicago Defender 3-10-45 Ill.

Paced by a Negro tank battalion, the U.S. 9th Army merged with the Canadian 1st Army after a 6-mile push northward from Geldern in Germany. More than 20,000 German troops were caught in a vise of steel as the two Allied forces formed a junction at point indicated by arrows on map.

(Defender Washington Bureau) 3-10-45

WASHINGTON—A sensational smash through Nazi lines by a Negro tank column spearheaded the American 9th Army in linking up with the Canadian 1st Army Saturday.

Caught in the Allied noose by the swift advance of the colored tank battalion were an estimated 20,000 Nazis, it was learned. 3-10-45

The British Reuters news agency reported from London that the first junction of the Canadians and Americans some six miles north of Geldern was made by Negro-manned tanks. Captain Robert Gropolde of Los Angeles was at the head of the column.

From Edward B. Toles, Defender war correspondent now with the 9th army in Germany, it was learned that two Negro units, the 761st Tank Battalion and 784th Tank Destroyer Battalion are now operating with General William Simpson's army now battling for a Rhine bridgehead.

One of these, probably the 761st, led the attack which sealed the fate of two Nazi outfits, the 1st Paratroop and the 15th Army, when they were cut off between the Maas and Rhine rivers.

The 761st has now been in the line for three months.

From Sevelen, Germany came a dispatch telling of the heroism of the 784th tank destroyer battalion, which staged a "miniature Bastogne" when a bridge was blown up behind them.

The Negro tank drivers mauled Nazi parachute units in savage street fighting although cut off for 18 hours.

The 784th was fighting its first offensive action besides the 35th infantry division. The battalion won a place in the hearts of the white soldiers of the battle-hardened 35th who had fought from St. Lo to Venlo.

Knocks Out Gun

Sgt. Walter "Pop" Half, a 47-year-old veteran of the last war from Little York, Ill., who came back in this war as a commander of a tank bulldozer was called out under fire to fill craters in a road. He went on to knock out a German 88 mm. anti-tank gun.

Sgt. Ambrose Hicks of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., an auto mechanic, was sent back to bring a supply convoy through. He saved three trucks parked near a burning ammunition dump. Many Negro tankmen climbed out of the shelter of their tanks under mortar and shell fire to refuel for the battle.

Also with the 9th army in its big drive on the Rhine was the Negro 777th field artillery battalion which has been in action in Germany since November.

The junction between the Canadian and Negro manned tanks came between Geldern and Kevelaer. So speedy was the American advance that Canadians were unaware of their presence and a tank sent over a shell very close to the 1st Army.

Eyewitness Account

A British correspondent, Ned Nordness, describing the junction said:

"We had set out from Weeze, heading south, with no idea where or under what circumstances we would meet the Americans.

"Outside another town, after working our way over badly cratered roads, we were met by walking infantry who were to make the link-up.

"Progress was a series of cautious advances, interspersed with halts while infantry smoked out houses and patches of woods, ducking into roadside ditches occasionally when enemy machine guns or mortars opened up.

"Just outside of a town in the Geldern-Kavelaer area we halted.

"'Here we believed we would meet the American spearhead,' said Major David MacIndoe. 'We had better take it easy until we can patrol ahead.'

"We knew the Germans were ahead, for we could see them dashing across fields, discarding their gear as they fled.

"After an hour's wait a shell burst near by and a tank man shouted: 'That ain't German. There must be American tanks near by.'

"The patrol returned and reported that tanks, obviously Americans, were approaching the town from the south.

"Soon we could see them outlined against the tree-lined road in the distance.

"Carrying a red and white flag we cut through the fields to meet them.

"We set out feeling very much surrounded. Hard but sporadic fighting was going on ahead, and many houses that had sheltered snipers were blazing furiously after they had been set afire by tank guns.

"We got within forty feet of the nearest American tank when a German Spandau gun opened up ahead of us and a British officer almost broke my neck as he shoved me into a ditch.

"We went on in a trench but had to cross a footbridge to reach the Americans. The British did it so nonchalantly that I stood up and walked across, too.

"Just as we made contact with the Americans, at 3:30 p.m., the Germans laid down a barrage, so there wasn't any of that 'hi, chum,' stuff. When quiet descended, the officers got right to work discussing future operations.

Yanks Pick Off Snipers

"After leaving the officers, I hid behind an American tank to escape a persistent sniper whose bullets kept digging the dirt in front of me.

"'Don't worry, I'll get him,' said a voice from the tank turret, suiting action to the words.

"My savior was Pfc. John Coster of Cincinnati, Ohio, who said he hoped to return there 'just as soon as possible.'

"Another soldier, Pvt. Warren Wiley of Statesboro, Ga., said he was sore because a sniper had almost hit a cheese sandwich he was eating.

"'We saw you guys coming across the field,' Corp. Selza Martin of Little Rock, Ark., told me, 'and we didn't believe the enemy would come at us that way. But if you'd made a single false move, you just wouldn't be here, sir.'"

Negro Tank Unit Wins Hearts Of 35th in Sevelen Battle

Richmond Times Va. 3-5-45

By Wes Gallagher

SEVELEN, GERMANY, March 4—(AP)—With a bridge blown behind them, a Negro tank battalion task force staged a miniature "Bastogne" in Sevelen today, mauling Nazi parachute units in savage street fighting while cut off for 18 hours.

The 784th Tank Battalion was fighting its first offensive action beside the Thirty-fifth Infantry Division. The battalion won a place in the hearts of the men of the battle-hardened Thirty-fifth Division, who had fought from St. Lo to Venlo and beyond, by the battle it put up here and the spearhead fighting it did to get here.

Sergeant Walter "Pop" Half, a 47-year-old veteran of the last war from Little York, Ill., who came back in this war as the commander of a tank bulldozer, was called out under fire to fill craters in a road. He went on to knock out a German 88-millimeter antitank gun.

Sergeant Ambrose Hicks, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., an artillery mechanic, was sent back to help bring a supply convoy through. He saved three trucks parked near a burning ammunition truck loaded with 2,300 pounds of TNT. 3-5-45

There were Negro tank men who climbed out of the shelter of their tanks under mortar and shellfire to refuel.

GI Tells How Negro Buddy Saved Him

Daily Worker N.Y. 3-5-45

WARREN, Ohio, March 4.—William Gillespie, white private formerly with the Third Army in France and now recovering from an attack of siatic rheumatism in an English hospital, tells the story of how a Negro GI, James Alvin Wilson of New York City, saved his life in a foxhole.

Writing in the Daily Examiner's column, About People, Gillespie says:

"In spite of the rain and snow, I could see Jim reach down into the foxhole. He lifted me gently to the edge. I weigh 176 pounds but it evidently didn't make much difference to this soldier who had volunteered to take me back to the aid station. 3-5-45

"The pain in my hips was at that time quite acute, and Jim was always asking if he was hurting me. As I laid my head upon his chest, I could hear his deep breathing and the laboring of his heart. He carried me a little over a mile to the aid station, and it was then that I learned Jim had 'trench feet,' and had carried me all that distance through snow. Every step must have been torture.

HE CARED FOR ME

"We were together from then on, sleeping in cots close together, because Jim told them he would take care of me. 3-5-45

"The care he gave me became a legend with the other patients. At night when I awoke from the pain, Jim was there with water, talking to me, telling me to 'take it easy,' bringing me a cool towel and wiping my face. He would bring cigarets every day, and I had the best of everything.

"And then came our parting. Jim back to his outfit and myself to a general hospital. He carried one end of my litter to the ambulance and when they drove away his parting words were, 'I'll see you in the States, kid,' and we pulled away. As I looked back the sun was shining, and Jim stood there waving his big powerful hand, and, as the sun hit his combat helmet, it seemed to glow into a halo, and I could see he was crying as I was.

"Thus was my friendship with a fellow named Jim. I wondered as the days passed why he didn't write as he promised. Then one day I had my answer as I was reading the 'Stars and Stripes.' I came across an article something like this:

"'James Alvin Wilson, colored, 1224 Lenox Ave., New York, N. Y., Killed in action.'"

Members of Crack 810th Engineer Battalion at Work in the Philippines

3-3-45 AFRO AM.

Members of the crack 810th Engineer Aviation Battalion on Luzon prove adept woodsmen as they fell a cocoanut tree in their camp area near the northern front. 3-3-45

3-3-45

AFRO - AMERICAN

These men are tapping an artesian well which was struck by shrapnel in the bombardment preceeding the landings of U.S. troops. T/5 William L. B.arnes, Richmond, Va., welder, is at exereme right.

This photo shows a completed water point. The three big tanks are filled with purified water, chemically treated after being drawn from a nearby stream.

AFRO - AMERICAN 3-3-45

FIRST NEGRO WACS OVERSEAS — Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis welcomes Pvt. Nisha Tankard, of New York City, left, the first member of an all-Negro Wac postal Unit to step on British soil. Major Charity Adams, 2113 Lady Street, Columbia, S. C., right, is commanding officer of the battalion. The unit will handle the Army postal directory service for the entire European theatre. (Signal Corps Radio Telephoto.)

English Press Filled With Stories Of Black War Heroes

Atlanta World - Ga. 2-18-45

Exploits Make Front Page In Britain; Ignored In America

By NANCY CUNARD

2-18-45

LONDON — (ANP) — A round-up of recent events affecting Negro peoples reveals two American colored soldiers in front-page news, British and French African troops in the fighting, and tribute to Britain's colonial peoples' part in the war effort. France, too, reiterates the fact that she regards her empire and herself as one entity.

On a recent front-page of the London Daily Express was the story of American Negro six-foot lorry-driver, Cpl. Riggins Earle, who saved the lives of dozens of people near Lunton, Bedfordshire, in this country. When his truckful of high explosives collided with another lorry, Earle leapt from his seat and rushed 400 yards down the road, waving his arms and shouting "bombs", past a farm (whose inhabitants owe him their lives) to a row of cottages where a children's party was going on. All sped to cover and no one was hurt as the bombs blew up, firing a patrol-tanker on the road, killing three people in a bus and blasting the farm and other buildings.

NABS NAZI 2-18-45

The second American Negro, a truck driver on the first American Army front in Belgium, escaped being the victim of a bogus "American military policeman" directing war traffic when he realized the instructions this man gave him were somehow phony. He remembered the way and drove back — And pretty soon the "American" was discovered to be a German parachutist in a stolen uniform. This was one of the tricks the Germans used in territory taken from them during the allied advance.

While Africans from Britain's colonies fight in the east, the co-operation of colored seamen in the merchant navy has been praised anew. Colonial Secretary Oliver Stanley, opening a new club for these seamen in Liverpool, urged the British people to show their gratitude for the way colored seamen have helped Britain to survive.

2-18-45

Among France's Arab soldiers are numbers of dark-skinned Negro, or Negro-Arab Mohammedian fighters (the pure Negro troops being mainly the Tirailleurs Senegalais from West Africa). The Official French Mission of Information in London recently published a description by French reporter, Andre Camp, of his visit to the Vosgos front on the occasion of the Mohammedan feast. As he gazed at the numbers of North Africans eating their ceremonial mutton in the deep snow of those historical and over-strategic frontier mountains, the French Regimental Colonial said to him: "France and her Empire constitute one entity and it is right that all members of such a community should share in the same interests and the same risks."

FRENCH HERO AIDED AMERICAN INVADERS

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

Pg. Pa.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Roi Ottley, New York-born author of the famous best-seller, "New World A'Coming," who serves as War Correspondent for the liberal New York daily, PM, and is special feature writer with Liberty Magazine, this week joins the staff of The Pittsburgh Courier as Special Correspondent. His articles in The Courier will be exclusive to Negro newspapers.

The noted journalist and author left the country last June on a roving assignment overseas, with special emphasis on the vital problems of the war and peace roles of colored peoples everywhere. He covered more than 30,000 miles on the tour, during which he talked to a great number of GIs—both Negro and white—on the fighting fronts in the European Theatre. He also secured exclusive interviews with important Allied political leaders, including the Colonial Ministers of Great Britain, France, Belgium and The Netherlands.

He is returning abroad . . . and his exclusive articles EACH WEEK in The Courier will be both informative and interpretive.

Mr. Ottley, winner of the Ainsworth Award and the Life In America Award for his novel, is a Rosenwald Fellow and creator of the radio series bearing the title of his book, now entering its second year. He attended the University of Michigan and St. Bonaventure College, and is former public relations director of the National CIO War Relief.

By ROI OTTLEY, Special Correspondent

One of the most inspiring figures I met in Europe was a Negro—decidedly so in appearance. He was tall and dark, and possessed a wonderful smile. His name was Antoine Montbrun—a name that is swiftly becoming a legend in France. For he was a leader in the Underground Movement in Cherbourg—though he was the only Negro in the city until the Americans invaded.

I first saw this twenty-four-year-old lad on Bastille Day. He was tumultously happy. He waved to the crowds along Rue Gambette, as he proudly marched with his white comrades under the sweeping banner, "Les Forces du Resistance."

FRENCHMEN HAILED CONQUERING HERO 2-17-45

His six-foot frame, erect and flexible, was clad in a patched brown suit. His shoes were old and turned over at the heels. But his smile was full, even contagious. So, people smiled back. Bearded old veterans of French campaigns, wearing medals hidden for years, had tears in their eyes. Hoarse voices shouted, "Viva le Toni!"

Antoine Montbrun was, perhaps, the happiest man in France that day. And he had reasons. For he had come out of the forbidding shadows of the underground movement—at last—and had personally aided in throwing the Germans out of France.

How a lone Negro in Cherbourg got mixed up with the French Resistance Movement, goes back to a day ten years ago when he left his home in Martinique to join the French Merchant Marine. Fed up with growing coffee, he became a seaman. When war began he joined the French Navy.

SHIP SUNK IN DUNKIRK DEBACLE

He was a ship's navigator when the Germans invaded France. He was aboard a destroyer that was torpedoed in the Dunkirk evacuation. The vessel limped back to Cherbourg. Here the ship's officers called for volunteers to go ashore to help stem the Nazi tide. Antoine was one of those who stepped forward. 2-17-45

He was sent to Fort Querqueville just as a German spearhead drove in. Antoine's lips quivered when he told me what happened: When the French commandant gave the order to fire, the soldiers refused, pleading that it was hopeless to resist. When Antoine dashed for his gun, they solemnly warned him, "If you shoot, we'll shoot you!" The young patriot broke his gun and threw the pieces into the river.

IN CAMP WITH SENEGALESE

The whole detachment was thrown into a concentration camp, where 6,000 Senagelese were also held captive. Here Antoine spent two excruciating years of torture and brutality. But he didn't break. For he had heard about the Resistance Movement and determined to get free and join up. 2-17-45

To this end Antoine cleverly played the fool. And played it well. He pretended to have gone insane. A French physician, called to examine him, shook his head hopelessly. He was a party to Antoine's plan. Subsequently he was released and sent to Cherbourg. The Gestapo issued a passport which indicated that he was "insane" but harmless.

JOINED PATRIOTS

Thus began Antoine Montbrun's heroic activities. One night at a cafe a man approached him. He asked Antoine if he wished to work to free France. "I am a patriot," was the reply. The man warned Antoine that if caught by the Gestapo any number of things could happen. He might have his hot iron poked into his belly, or his finger-nails pulled out one by one, or his eyes bored out and then shot—if he refused to denounce his friends in the Resistance Movement. Antoine simply said, "I am ready."

Accordingly, Antoine was assigned the dangerous job of courier—after all, his passport gave him unusual freedom of movement. One project assigned him was the theft of the headquarters—which by now he knew exceedingly well—slipped was told. The unnoticed and snatched the fortification plans. The Resistance importance of this assignment was impressed upon Antoine. The Allies would come and kick the German High Command out. That furious day arrived. Antoine was given the task of guiding the first American units that broke through the German defenses—for the Resistance Movement knew in advance the hour of invasion. As the first spearhead broke through, Antoine dashed toward it, leaped aboard the leading tank, and steered the column by pillboxes, land mines, and fortified spots which the Nazis had set up in advance. When a German soldier was killed by a stray bullet that whistled across Place Divette, Antoine snatched up the gun and went prowling for Nazis.

VIVA LE TONI

For Antoine it was a grim field day. When the sun had set, official Army records show Antoine Montbrun had killed twelve Germans and captured 106 single-handed. The French people say he killed fifteen and captured 197. Lt. Col. Frank L. Howley, officer in charge of Civil Affairs in Cherbourg, declared that "Antoine Montbrun was one of the bravest men in the Resistance Movement." 2-17-45

He was recently decorated for bravery by his superiors in the Resistance Movement. And the crowds can still be heard shouting, "Viva le Toni!" — to a distinguished French patriot, the only Negro who lived in Cherbourg.

BIG SCALE OFFENSIVE SUCCESSFUL

Pittsburgh Courier 2-17-45

By COLLINS GEORGE
(Courier War Correspondent)

Pb. Pa.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy—Elements of the 92nd Infantry Division are now engaged along the coastal flank and last week saw action on a big scale for the first time since entering this theatre. They met stubborn German resistance.

Real action began the morning of February 8 when a company of tank-riding Infantrymen, led by Lt. W. E. J. Bundara, Baltimore, crossed the mouth of the Cinquale Canal to form a new beachhead. Action was preceded by heavy artillery barrage and came as a complete surprise to Germans, according to reports of captured enemy prisoners. 2-17-45

NAZIS BRACE FOR FIGHT

In the initial wave of attacking troops were Lt. Melvin Walker, Covington, Ky., and Capt. Harold Johnson of Akron, Ohio. Capt. Roy Sorrell of Washington, D. C., was in charge of support furnished by heavy artillery weapons.

Coordinating the advance with that of troops along the coast, another small unit pushed along Highway One until it was stopped by enemy gunfire. By mid-morning, the Germans had recovered from the surprise and braced themselves for a stiff fight.

The mouth of the Cinquale Canal was the focal point for everything the Germans could release in the way of mortar, artillery and small weapon fire. Nevertheless, coastal troops advanced 1500 yards to the mouth of the Margo Canal, then started inland.

SEVERE TEST 2-17-45

The Cinquale battle of three days will go down as the severest test yet met by members of the 92nd. During the big battle, elements of the Division repulsed every enemy attack. Flame-throwers were called into use to dislodge the enemy from dug-in mountain positions and doctors established first aid stations right along the front lines. American planes strafed and bombed German mountain strongholds.

On hand the opening day of the attack was Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Fifth Army commander. The entire general staff was pleased with the performance of the Division in its first large offensive battle.

The 92nd is now fighting for the former swanky seaside resort area.

Black French Hero Traps, Kills or Wounds 500 Nazis

AFRO-American Balt., Md.

2-10-45

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

PARIS—(ANP)—Five hundred Nazis were either killed, wounded or captured by Antoinne Montbrun a 25-year-old colored man from Martinique, during the bloody battle of Cherbourg and is acknowledged as the outstanding hero of that city. 2-10-45

His dauntless courage and fanatical nationalism are comparable to that of the late Felix Eboue. His parents are farmers, but he was trained as a navigator. He worked on a ship, the "Oriea," and ran between L'Havre and America.

When the war broke out, he immediately joined the navy, was assigned by request to serve on the "Dilligent," a destroyer which was later bombarded off the coast of Holland and towed into the Cherbourg harbor.

Joins Volunteer Force

Antoinne answered the call for men to form a volunteer force in Cherbourg in order to stop the rapidly approaching German, but France surrendered in the meantime. Antoinne's volunter force established a line at Saint Sauveur Levicomte just outside Valognes.

The commandant gave orders to attack the Nazis within range of fire. Nothing could have pleased the young warrior more. Antoinne, in the front line of the forces, was eager. Then, men in the rear told him not to shoot at the Germans. 2-10-45

"I must obey," Antoinne replied. "Well," replied his comrades, "if you aim at the Germans again we are going to shoot you." Fifteen minutes later, Antoinne and his comrades were prisoners and en route to a concentration camp at St. Lo.

Crazy Act Tricks Nazis

Antoinne did not really [illegible] under the strain of prison life, but the Germans thought so. Told by a French specialist that Antoinne was positively crazy, the Nazis immediately released him with identity papers certifying that he was crazy. 2-10-45

He later joined the resistance movement and was assigned to the action group. (The resistance movement was composed of two groups, the action group and the information group). His chance came for action when the American Army arrived in France.

Killed Nazi With Own Gun

He seized an abandoned German rifle and rushed to one of the forts in Place Divette. He wounded a German and captured 67 others, turning them over to the first American troops.

Antoinne knew exactly where the Germans were hiding, because there was excellent team work between the information department and the action department of the resistance. They camped until the next morning, then started for Beaumont-Hague to join the American forces. 2-10-45

He killed two Nazis in Beaumont and six at Jobourg. Before he finished his revenge, he accounted for 500 Germans, killed wounded or captured. The black hero of Cherbourg is slated for decoration soon.

Cherbourg's Black Hero Accounts For 500 Nazis

Chicago Defender ILL

2-10-45

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR
(ANP War Correspondent)

PARIS—(ANP) — Five hundred Nazis were either killed, wounded or captured by Antoinne Montbrun, a 25-year-old Negro from Martinique, during the bloody battle of Cherbourg.

Young Montbrun is acknowledged as the outstanding hero of Cherbourg.

Antoinne is the assistant jailer at the Mason d' Arrest.

He is a slim chocolate-colored lad about five feet, six inches, whose zealous patriotism, sparkling eyes and expressive hands convinced me that he only understood one language—that of fighting the Germans. Antoinne's parents in Martinique are farmers but he decided not to follow the same occupation. He joined the merchant navy at 14 and was trained as a navigator.

Antoinne worked on a ship named the "Oriea" and ran between L'Harve and America. When the war broke out, he was on a voyage to Valparaiso and Panama. His ship afterwards called at Halifax for important cargo which had to be delivered to England in a convoy. From England, his ship went to Havre where he received his mobilization papers.

Young Antoinne immediately joined the navy, a place where he was best suited, and was assigned by request to serve on the "Dilligent," a destroyer which was later bombarded off the coast of Holland. The Dilligent was towed into the harbor of Cherbourg just at the time when things had begun to look very serious for France.

In Volunteer Force

Antoine answered the urgent call for men to form a volunteer force in Cherbourg in order to stop the rapidly approaching Germans. Antoinne's volunteer force established a line at Saint Sauveur Levicomte just outside Valognes. But this line was easily cracked by the blitzkrieg tactics of Hitler's victorious panzer divisions.

2-10-45

Breaks Rifle

The commandant gave orders to attack the Nazis. Antoinne was in the front line of the forces. He was eager. But men in the rear told him not to shoot at the Germans in defiance of the commandant's order.

"I must obey," Antoinne replied.

"Well," replied his comrades, "if you aim at the Germans again we are going to shoot you. It is no use shooting at the Nazis when they have an overwhelming superiority of men and material. Let us lay down our arms and surrender."

Antoinne broke his rifle in despair and threw it into the river.

Later Antoinne and his comrades became prisoners and were on route to a concentration camp at St. Lo. They were not even given the "luxury" of a ride in a cattle van. Thy walked 55 miles to their imprisonment. The Germans immediately erected the color bar. A large number of Senagalese were in the prison cage and together with Antoinne they were thrown into a separate camp.

The Nazis, however, served the same "slop" to all prisoners but Negro prisoners were made to work in the snow for long periods during the cold days of 1940 while the whites remained indoors. Some of the Negro prisoners died from exposure.

After six months as a prisoner of the Nazis, Antoinne convinced them he was crazy. The Nazis released him with identity papers certifying that he was crazy.

Once free, Antoinne hurried to join the resistance movement.

His chance came for action when the American army arrived in France. 2-10-45

NEROES SHOULD BE INCLUDED

New York Age 1-12-45

Have you noticed that in the pictures on the screen of the war in both Europe and in the Pacific, you do not see any which portrays the part which Negro troops are taking in that war?

General Patton's success near Aachen was due largely to the Negro transportation corps troops, as well as the installation at Herkensthal of machinery, electrical equipment, and every kind of mechanical device. Had it not been for these Negro troops, General Patton himself said, the victories of the Allies would have been impossible.

These Negro transportation troops drive their jeeps through the mud and slush of rain-soaked France. They themselves are soaked with rain and they wade through mountain-like difficulties to get supplies to the front. 1-13-45

For the boys at the front must have food, they must have ammunition, they must never for one moment be permitted to think, "Too little and too late."

And so our Negro boys toil on, uncomplainingly, knowing they are doing a good job, knowing they are doing their bit for democracy, for that better world which shall come out of this holacaust. 1-13-45

We give them all honor. We would not have them complain for one second. We would feel humiliated if they did. And yet—do you remember that old saying about giving even the devil his due?

We feel that in those motion pictures of our fighting fronts, the splendid work of the Negro soldiers should be given its due. They should be shown driving their trucks and jeeps through that sticky mud and slush. They should be shown doing their bit for victory.

Perhaps if enough of us suggested this to the managers of the motion picture theatres, they might relay it to the movie who make

Let's try it next time the pictures! the we see a war picture with the Negro soldiers groes left out.

The California Eagle

56n-1945

'NUTS!' RETORT HELD NO SHOCK TO NAZIS

N.Y. Times 3-4-45

Bastogne Paratroop Heroes Assert Foes Knew They Were Up Against Tough Outfit

Maj. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe's famous reply of "Nuts" to the German surrender demand during the battle of Bastogne came as no surprise to the two men officers who delivered the ultimatum last Dec. 23, Corp. John Shaw of Franklinville, N. Y., cocky little paratrooper of the 101st Airborne division said yesterday.

The Germans, a major and a captain, sort of expected what the answer would be after they saw we were a parachute outfit," the 23-year-old veteran of eighteen months' overseas duty said. "The Germans call us the 'butchers with the big pockets' and they know that the word surrender is not included in the airborne trooper's vocabulary."

N.Y.

Corporal Shaw was one of seven heroes of the battle of Batagne who described that decisive engagement in an interview at Army Public Relations, 90 Church Street. The men were trapped for seven days by superior enemy forces and had to fight not only severe shell fire, but hunger and cold and a lack of ammunition, their stories revealed. 3-4-45

Says Nazis Knew Slang

Corporal Shaw, a radioman, said that when the German officers appeared on a frozen road outside Bastogne, he and his buddies thought the Nazis wanted to surrender. They were taken to a company command post, where they stood for two hours while awaiting word from General McAuliffe. Apparently they were familiar with American slang, he said, for they walked off as soon as our colonel gave them the one-word reply.

Staff Sgt. Stanley Koss of Corpus Christi, Tex., said he entered the Bastogne fight with fortyfive men, only thirteen of whom remained unscathed after the first few days of fighting. He told of holding off an entire battalion of German grenadiers trying to enter the city.

"We set up our two machine gune to cover a road," the sergeant related, "and settled down to await the enemy in weather so cold that our weapons froze. Some 800 men of the 696th Grenadier Battalion attempted to cross the road and we cut loose. The battle lasted from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. and at its end the Germans had lost 250 killed, compared to our loss of two men."

Lieut. Clair L. Hess, 25 years old, of Blairsville, Pa., who took over his company when his captain was wounded, was trapped in Bastogne without food or supplies and without means of communication, re revealed. His men, he said, had to search the area for discarded ammunition and guns to continue the fight.

The outfit had one tank-destroyer, the lieutenant said, but it was manned by Quartermaster Corps men, who were delivering it to the front and did not know anything about fighting from it. A graduate of Pennsylvania State College, Lieut. Hess is a veteran of the Normandy, Holland and Belgian campaigns. 3-4-45

Found Aid for Trenchfoot

A medical corpsman, Cpl. Thomas W. Stephens, 29, of Hornbeck, Pa., said his outfit used a German medcial supply dump in Bastogne as a hospital. Among the supplies they found, he said, were the first effective treatments for trenchfoot he had seen.

Staff Sgt. Robert Clifford, 27, of Grand Saline, Tex., complained of the lack of ammunition at Bastogne. Some of the batteries, he said, had to scratch for lost and damaged ammunition to fire, sometimes using damaged and rejected shell cases if they could be pounded back into shape.

Sergeant Clifford jumped in the vicinity of Cherbourg on D-day, he revealed, but found himself in German lines. He was captured and bombed by Allied planes several times before he escaped.

Sgts. Franklin D. Hendricks and Sandy Wyatt, Negroes, attached to the 278th Field Artillery Battalion, were assigned to divisions sent to the relief of the trapped paratroopers at Bastogne, they said.

Sergeant Wyatt, who lives at 146 West 111th Street, was operating a message center at St. Vith when the Germans broke through. A German shell, he said, landed a few feet from his message center, wounding four of his men, but leaving him unscathed. 3-4-45

Sergeant Hendricks, who lives at South Boston, Va., said his outfit was shelled for forty-eight hours without a let-up. They lost a lot of equipment, he said, but they returned with the Third Army to help relieve the trapped division.

The seven heroes, led by Capt. Edward W. Cissel of Elizabeth, N. J., will tour war plants in this area during the next sixty days. They hope their experiences will emphasize to war workers the great need for continued flow of arms and supplies to the front lines.

HEROES OF THE BITTER FIGHTING AT BASTOGNE

New York Times 3-4-45

3-4-45

Airborne soldiers who have been returned here to tell of the need for increased production of war materiels as they were interviewed yesterday. Left to right, front: Tech. Thomas W. Stephens, Sgt. Sandy Wyatt, Tech. John H. Shaw and Capt. Edward W. Cissell. Left to right, rear: Sgt. Franklin D. Hendricks, Sgt. Stanley P. Koss, Sgt. Robert Clifford and Lieut. Clair L. Hess. The New York Times

White, Negro Troops Fight Side by Side

Atlanta Constitution 3-20-45

PARIS, March 19.—(UP)—Negro and white troops are fighting side by side—for the first time in American history—in the infantry companies of the U. S. First and Seventh Armies, it was disclosed today in a front line dispatch by the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes.

62.

The mixture of the races in unified commands was made after repeated requests by the Negroes that they be permitted to enter combat units, the newspaper said in a dispatch from the U. S. First Army.

62.

Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, the Army's highest Negro officer, reviewed the volunteers. Their sentiments were summarized by Pfc. Leroy Kemp, of Atlantic City, N. J., who said:

"We're all in this together now. That's how it should be. Most of the Negro troops in service outfits have been giving lots of sweat. Now I think we'll mix some blood with it."

NEGRO DIVISION'S LOSSES HIGH IN ITALY SETBACK

Chicago Daily Tribune 2-14-45

Gen. Clark Reports on 92d's Attack.

ROME, Feb. 13. (AP).—The United States 92d infantry division and its supporting armor suffered "relatively high" casualties and tank losses when its week-end attack in the Ligurian coastal sector of the Italian front was repulsed, 15th army group headquarters disclosed today.

Official dispatches earlier had tended to discount as minor this attack of the Negro division, which was launched last Thusday. It was the 92d's first full attack as a division. 2-14-45

A special report from Lt. Gen. Clark's headquarters said "no net gains in terrain were made," and the division was compelled to relinquish the hold it had secured north of the Cinquale canal and at Strettoia and to fall back virtually to its original positions.

Driven Back a Mile.

The Negro doughboys had penetrated as much as a mile on a five mile front to within two and a half miles of Massa before the Germans drove the Americans back in four days of fighting.

The 92d was deployed yesterday near the south shore of the Fiume La Foce, a small stream south of Massa, and action on its sector was limited to patroling.

In the Serchio valley about 15 to 20 miles inland, however, the enemy continued to launch small scale counter-attacks against American positions. 2-14-45

South of Bologna the German laid down smoke screens apparently to shield parties digging strong points and laying mines.

Fog Over Front.

Fog hung low over most of the 8th army front. The only important action there was a strong enemy raid which compelled 8th army troops to withdraw from an outpost on the east bank of the Senio river.

The weather also restricted air operations. Four enemy aircraft were destroyed and three allied planes were missing. The enemy losses were accounted for by B-25 gunners who fought an engagement with 15 enemy fighters over Legnango. Gunners who shared the victories included Sgt. Emil M. Strebec of Cudahy, Wis.

Negroes Enter Combat Units, Fight Beside White Troops

Richmond Times 3-20-45

PARIS, March 19.—(UP)—Negro and white troops are fighting side by side—for the first time in American history—in the infantry companies of the United States First and Seventh Armies, it was disclosed today in a front-line dispatch by the army newspaper, Stars and Stripes.

The mixture of the races in unified commands was made after repeated requests by the Negroes that they be permitted to enter combat units, the newspaper said in a dispatch from the United States First Army.

The Negro infantrymen were picked from the thousands of applicants who had been working as service and supply troops and who volunteered after a special Lieutenant-General who told them: "Your relatives and friends are urging that you be granted this privilege. 3-20-45

Quota Is Exceeded

"The supreme commander is confident that many of you will take advantage of the opportunity to carry on in keeping with the glorious records of colored troops in former wars."

The original quota was quickly exceeded and hundreds of volunteers were rejected. Stars and anxious to share victory with you.

Stripes said. Some 2,300 were accepted and given a refresher infantry course.

Applications came from port battalions unloading materials as well as the famed Negro truck companies. The newspaper said that 171 men out of the 186 in one engineer regiment had volunteered and four first sergeants in another unit accepted a lowering in rank to private in order to qualify for training. From one laundry unit, 100 out of 260 men volunteered but only 36 were chosen. 3-20-45

Brigadier-General B. O. Davis, the army's highest Negro officer, reviewed the volunteers. Their sentiments were summarized by Private First Class Leroy Kemp, of Atlantic City, N. J., who said:

"We're all in this together now. That's how it should be. Most of the Negro troops in service outfits have been giving lots of sweat. Now I think we'll mix some blood with it."

26 Tan Yanks in India Promoted

Balt. Md. 1-6-45

Afro-American

CALCUTTA, India.—The promotion of twenty-six enlisted men was announced here recently by Brig. Gen. R. R. Neyland, commanding general, Base Section 2.

Serving in the largest and most important supply command in the India-Burma-China Theater, these men have been commended by the War Department on numerous occasions for establishing almost a dozen world's records.

The newly promoted men, all former privates, include:

James Liggins, Lexington, Va., to technician fourth grade; Benjamin F. Johnson, to technician fourth grade; James T. Hooper, to corporal; Lucies McNair, Laurinburg N.C., to technican fifth grade; Terry J. Graham, Troutman, N.C., to technican fifth;

Thomas M. Greene, Clover, Va.; Percey L. Knight, William E. Norris, Whitestone, Va.; William H. Peck, NYC; Willie C. Scott, St. Matthews, S.C.; Chester E. Comfort, Grante Springs, Va., and Charles A. Williams, Baltimore, all to private first class.

Italians, Others Flock to Tan Yank Service Center

Balt. Md.

the AFRO-AMERICAN 1-6-45

WITH THE FIFTEENTH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND IN ITALY—If one should happen to walk down the main street of one of Italy's larger towns, he would notice the crowd in front of the shop called "Mobili," the information and education section of a colored service group.

Mobili was in other days an upholstery shop; today it serves as a public library where soldiers and civilians alike gather at all hours of the day to read the latest news.

Posted in the big display window are the latest news bulletins; maps showing the progress of Allied troops in various theaters and even newspaper clippings of interest written in English and Italian.

The customers are as varied as the literature and among the hundreds of people who use these services daily, one [illegible] find New Zealanders, A[illegible]stra[illegible]ns, South Africans, Hindus, P[illegible] and other allies, in addition [illegible] Italian civilians.

These services we[illegible] by First Lt. Fred L. [illegible] Eleventh Street, Northw[illegible], ington, D.C., first of his ra[illegible] to complete the Army Information and Education course at the Army Special Service School, Lexington, Va., assisted by Cpl. James L. Allison of Cape May, N.J.

The news service and the group information and education program are now being conducted by Lt. Charles W. Clarke, NYC, also a graduate of the special service school, and his assistant, Cpl. William T. Towns, Chester, Pa.

HARVARD STUDENT JOINS AIR CORPS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Paul W. McCree, freshman at Harvard College and eldest son of Mrs. Hazel M. McCree of this city, has joined the Air Corps and was feted at a going-away party on Monday.

Daily Press Did Not Tell Full Story of Bastogne

1-13-45

Daily press reports that Bastogne was held by General McAuliffe's 82nd and 101st paratroopers did not tell the full story.

General McAuliffe was in temporary command when the German break-through came. The unit commander was flown back from Washington to his troops, who stood off the Nazis, even though completely surroundeded.

To the demand for surrender McAuliffe sent back the one word: "Nuts."

Tan Artillerymen There

In Bastogne attached to the partroop division was this colored artillery unit whose story Ollie Stewart tells in this cable from the front:

One colored artillery unit, identified in a weekly press association release as the 969h Field Artillery, has already been praised by General McAuliffe for its support in the Bastogne battle, according to reports from the front.

Bastogne is a key road junction. If it had fallen the German advance would have been much speedier. The hold-out compelled the Nazis to make time-consuming detours.

Chemical Unit's Artificial Fog Sets All-Time Record

Afro-American Balt., Md.

1-13-45

Hides Entire Division from Nazis for 16 Days; Protects 2 Saar River Crossings

SAAR RIVER FRONT—Major credit for creation of the greatest artificial fog in this or any other war goes to the all-colored 161st Smoke Generator Company.

The feat, accomplished in conjunction with white units of the 81st Chemical Battalion, enabled the entire combat force of the 90th Division to remain concealed for sixteen days, during which it made two crossings of the Saar River in Germany.

Members of the 161st, who earlier in the Continental invasion had shielded a successful Allied crossing of the Moselle River in France, kept nearly 9,000 smoke pots in effective operation, using 146,000 gallons of oil.

Under their protective screen, infantry, tank and tank destroyer units of the 90th were ferried across the Saar by Army engineers early in December. These combat units had the same protection throughout their advance to Dillingen, Germany, during which they destroyed over 250 Siegfried Line pillboxes.

They were obliged to re-cross the Saar in General Patton's shift of the Third Army, still shielded by the smoke screen, which was credited with helping to keep casualties to a relatively low figure.

"Master Race" Flees from Tan Yanks—Returned Vet

AFRO-American Balt., Md.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (ANP)—The "master race" theory of the German soldiers disappears like magic when faced with the daring and capability of colored Allied troops, said T/Sgt. Walter Malichi, Jr., of Bennetsville, S.C., here last week.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Malichi, the sergeant, who is back from France on furlough, added:

"I have seen Germans, fully armed, run away like the devil upon being confronted with colored soldiers."

Most feared by the Germans, he said, are the Senegalese, French colonial troops who, the Germans contend, delight in cutting off their heads and ears as retaliation for brutalities inflicted upon their comrades in the battle for France in 1940.

Senegalese Best Soldier

The Senegalese, the veteran said, "are beyond doubt the world's best soldiers. They are plenty tough and I am very glad we are on the same side."

T/Sgt. Malichi's outfit, an AA balloon battalion, the Army's only such outfit, was assigned on D-Day to fly barrage balloons from the invasion convoy and captured areas on the beachhead to prevent strafing.

"We were the first all-colored outfit to reach Normandy," Malichi boasts. Cited by its commanding officers, Generals Timberlake and Eisenhower, it is back home for re-equipping before being sent into another theatre of operation.

Nazis Kept Drugged

Sergeant Malichi believes the American and British soldiers are far superior to the German soldiers, who, he says, are kept sogged in dope and alcoholic drinks.

When without the influences of these stimulants, they surrender in large numbers. "I have seen them slipping away from their own outfits with white flags or upraised hands over to our men to surrender," he continued.

Declaring that both the French and the British seem puzzled over the race question, he cited, the reception tendered the colored soldiers by both groups, adding that the British go the French perhaps a fraction better in their treatment.

Nazi Lieutenant Admits Crew Had Few War Equals

Afro-American 1-7-45

BY GEORGE COLEMAN MOORE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE — Real heroes of the 12th corps rout of Nazis in the Morville-les-Vic area were members of a Negro tank outfit attached to the 4th Armored division supporting the 26th infantry division.

This is the opinion of a "superman" lieutenant captured during the battle who declared that their bravery and imagination surpassed anything he'd seen witnessed in four years of fighting on several fronts.

Negroes Prove Real Heroes In Morville Rout

Afro-American Daily Worker 1-7-45

BAITING BACKFIRES

GIs Leave Good Impression On England, DuBois Finds

The Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

By W. E. B. DuBOIS
(Defender Columnist)

LONDON — There have been not less than a half million Negro soldiers in Great Britain during the last three years. Most of them have now gone home but several thousand still remain. 11-24-45

My first reaction when I heard of the large numbers of this migration was one of anxiety. It makes no difference what people are involved when you suddenly transport any such vast number of young men into alien surroundings, friction and disillusion are bound to occur. It is not easy in this case to compute rapidly and accurately the total result. While in England, I inquired from various sources and while I'm sure I have not the whole truth, perhaps in its main my story will not be inaccurate.

First of all, this great incursion of black men into a modern European country has not been disastrous, as it easily might have been. On the whole, I should say, the results are encouraging despite unfortunate incidents and difficult situations. 11-24-45

The black Americans came from all parts of the land and naturally the bulk of them from the South. Their activities covered a wide range of work. They did more varied work than the labor battalions of the first World War; as engineers and members of the Quartermaster Corps, they not only moved material but did skilled and scientific work as radio men and even in directing artillery fire.

Curiously enough the first thing that impressed the English were the manners of the Negroes as contrasted with those of the white Americans. The Negroes were often diffident and apologetic. This was a part of their caste training in the South on the one hand; and on the other hand, it was the courtesy due to their hosts from strangers in a strange land. Negroes asked at bars if they could have a drink; they asked if they could be served in resaurants; they did not, like so many white Americans, order, demand and swagger. 11-24-45

Moreover, the white Americans themselves, feeling that they had a duty to perform, made it their business, in a large number of cases, to spread propaganda against the Negroes; to warn Englishmen of what they might expect and especially English women. There was, for instance, a certain Major Theffel, port chaplain at Liverpool, who crusaded mightily for "white supremacy" and when the colored chaplain, Golding, intervened, Golding was removed.

The American anti-Negro propaganda had its effect but on the other hand, it often backfired. It certainly was not good sportsmanship in the eyes of the British to malign your own fellow soldiers; and since the British were none too happy at the white American invasion, they tended often in sheer resentment to take the part of the Negro against the whites. 11-24-45

This was illustrated perhaps most notably in the celebrated court-martial at Bath. A Negro soldier was convicted by American court-martial of raping a white woman. But it was on ridiculously inadequate testimony and I'm told that a petition in his behalf was signed by 80,000 Englishman. At any rate, Eisenhower ordered an investigation and released the soldier. 11-24-45

On the other hand, there have been fights and riots between whites and blacks such as the one in Manchester in December, 1943. Quite recently, a Negro was beaten to death in a little village. The incident was characteristic. The soldier was drunk; he entered a public bar at closing time and the proprietor announced that the bar was closing and that he could not be served. 11-24-45

Undoubtedly, the Negro thought that he was being discriminated his companions but he rushed back standing of cultural patterns and and stabbed one of the bystanders to death. The same misunderresentment against strangers might happen anywhere with any people.

Mostly the Negro soldiers were quartered in camps in country districts, in sea ports and outside the larger cities. Some were in Scotland and in North Ireland and even in the Orkney Islands. But of course human beings do not meet in masses but as individuals and in thousands of cases, Englishmen came to know Negroes as friends. Negroes visited in their homes and talked to them. They entertained them with music. They told their stories of oppression and difficulty and they gained sympathy and understanding. 11-24-45

Fall in Love Too

The influence of this personal contact between Negroes and whites can hardly be overestimated. It led inevitably to closer unions. Consider the situation: the men of England were off to war; the women, both wives and girls, were left without companionship. Millions of foreign soldiers, young men ready for adventure, moved in. It was ordinary biology, that thousands of connections, legitimate and illegitimate, took place and this happened with Negro soldiers as well as with white.

There were for instance some 15 Red Cross hostels scattered in the large cities all over the Kingdom, where black soldiers came on leave. A colored personnel was in charge with colored men as leaders and several well-trained colored girls. But, of course, most of the hostesses and all of the help were white English girls. They danced with the black boys and entertained them and fell in love with them.

The Army tried valiantly to discourage this, especially they discouraged inter-marriage, absolutely prohibiting it in the western bases, but permitting a few legal unions unwillingly in the southern bases. How many marriages of this sort took place it is difficult to learn but probably less than 50. On the other hand, the result of this crazy policy could be seen in illegitimate children left behind.

Some of the Negro welfare centers working for British, colored personnel, tried to make an investigation. They found in 7 cities, 222 such children. In addition to this, the report from Cardiff said, "The number was so great that the staff did not have time to count them."

Grim Outlook

There can be no doubt that but what there are a thousand mulatto children in Great Britain today as a result of the presence of the American Negro soldier; and there may be twice this number. These children along with other mulattoes resulting from West Indian soldiers and sailors will make a peculiar problem after the war.

Free schooling in England ends at the age of 14. An illegitimate, unsupported child has no chance for secondary or higher training, and would with difficulty be absorbed into industry. If they got into the public orphanages like the Bernado homes, they would in all likelihood be sent to the colonies like South Africa as indentured servants. The outlook for them is grim. 11-24-45

Not only did the Americans try to keep down sex intermingling but it was charged openly in Parliament, that a directive had been given the WAAF (the English WACS) not to converse with colored soldiers except in the presence of whites. This was denied but another directive was hastily sent out which I quote in part:

"I am commanded in the Air Council to refer to recent allegations made in the House of Commons and in the press to the effect that in certain RAF stations, racial discrimination is commanded between personnel of the WAAF and colored airmen from Jamaica.

"Investigation of these allegations has suggested that uncertainty may have arisen on this matter to the extent of two Air Ministry confidential orders dealing respectively with the attitude to be adopted towards (a) U. S. Negroes in the UK; and (b) colored troops as British subjects from the colonies serving in this country with the RAF. Although the orders are still in operation, it is obviously undesirable that any instructions to WAAF and any advice which it is deemed necessary to give RAF in conformity with this order should only be in the way of confidential talks and that any offending notices on notice boards should be removed forthwith. 11-24-45

"It should also be understood clearly that the above was issued not to encourage racial discrimination which would be contrary to order to meet the difference in outthe established government, but in look between white Americans and British personnel and should be explained in confidential talks to WAAF personnel, as to the relationship between white and black people. 11-24-45

"In the case of British colored personnel serving with the RAF similar considerations do not arise and it is the earnest wish of the Air Council that WAAF, equally with RAF personnel, should be encouraged to observe on stations towards these men the normal standard of service comradeship.

"It is realized, however, that some airwomen, particularly the young and inexperienced, may regard the requirements of paragraph 4 of the above as an encouragement to associate off the station with the colored men. I am, therefore, to request that all airmen should be advised in a confidential talk, that they are not to infer from the requirements of the order intimate social contact off-station with West Indians or other colored RAF personnel, although civility should always be observed."

So the experiment was made and the results were bad and good. And yet it has been made clear to the people of Great Britain that American Negroes are average human beings, rather likeable on the whole; and in many cases of splendid character and that they are fighting in America an unequal battle against prejudice, a battle which they deserve to win.

56n-1945

Regular Army- Foreign- Europe

Sacrifice Lives To Save Buddies

Memphis World Tenn.

2-6-45

WITH THE ADVANCE U. S. SUPPLY FORCES IN BELGIUM — (SNS) — Fighting mad, a but not fighting trcops, members of a Negro Quartermaster Company en route to a forward area, withstood a relentless 45-minute air attack on their train. Heroic deeds on the part of the dying and wounded men featured attact on the Quartermaster Service Company. Many of the men died so that their buddies might live, refusing aid that others needed more than they did.

CITE THOMPSON

Individual acts of heroism on the scene were too numerous to mention, but Corporal Elsa Thompson, 761 North Elder St., Indianapolis, Indiana, former sparring partner of Joe Louis, was conspicuous by his daring.

2-6-45

Amid the whizzing bullets, Corporal Thompson fought a fire in one of the freight cars, in a vain effort to rescue three men who had been trapped. By the time he extinguished the flames it was too late, for the men had died from bullet wounds.

Removing the bodies of the dead men from the charred remains of the car, Corporal Thompson then went about removing gas and oil from the other cars in the 15-car train.

"There were no signs of disorder or panic among the men as they left the train and sought cover on terrain that had very little protection to offer," said Second Lieut. Ernest W. Anderson, of Corydon Ind.

PRAISE OFFICER

Lieutenant Anderson was mentioned by most of themen as having been responsible for the small amount of victims among the 206 enlisted men on the train. In relating the role played by the lieutenant that night, Staff Sergeant Carl Haines, 1202 West Oak Street, Louisville, Kentucky, said:

Apparently Lieutenant Anderson must have been asleep, because when I first saw him he was coming down the train to where the car was burning, very scantily clad. It was cold, snow was on the ground, but he was among the men offering assistance where he could and directing others to a wood almost a mile from the railroad track. During all this, the plane attacked twice more."

Haines, modest of his own display of courage, was cited by his comrades for failing to leave the scene until all others had been removed. He assisted with the wounded, and made frequent trips to the train to procure bandages blankets for the men.

2-6-45

WOUNDED SILENT

According to Second Lieutenant Joseph P. O'Neill, 4706 Greene St., Philadelphia. "It was remarkable how the wounded men behaved. Some of them had pretty nasty looking wounds, but they did not cry out or whimper. They just lay where they were and waited patiently until aid reached them. Those who were able to, assisted others unable to help themselves."

The night before, enemy planes after firing several bursts at the train, were driven off by antiaircraft gunners. While in one city where the train had stopped for rations, the company assigned to Advance Section, Communications Zone, was forced to abandon the train for an air-raid shelter.

2-6-45

Recipients of two letters of commendation for operations in England and on the beach, members of the outfit proudly wear a Sea Horse insignia, awarded them for their outstanding work at Omaha Beach, where their unit designation is inscribed on a monument. At that time they were assisting the 6th Engineer Special Brigade in amphibious operations. The men also were guards over captured Germans working on the Red Ball highway.

Reveal 2 Race Units Used To Stop Rundstedt

Atlanta World Ga.

2-9-45

Deny Enemy Open Road To Paris, French Interior

BY JAMES A. SANDERS

WITH THE U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE — (ANP) — The two Negro engineer outfits used as combat troops to stem the tide against Nazi Field Marshal Gord von Rundstedt in the bulge can now be revealed. They were the 366th and 392nd. Engineer General Service regiments who took up positions along the Mouse river.

The positions held by these men denied to the enemy the open roads to Paris and the interior of France. Forty-eight hours after being alerted the engineers were well dugin in their assigned positions. Barricades were erected on the approaches to all bridges, and the bridges wired for demolition so that if the pressure had gotten too strong they could be blown up. Numerous road blocks were set up in every road west of the Meuse to thwart the movement of armored columns. Guard patrols were set up to reinforce the silent challenge of the obstacles. Numerous other patrols, both reconaissance and security, operated deep inside the no man's land east of the river

2-9-45

GLOWING TRIBUTE

Among the normal duties of this kind of outfit are tasks such as building roads and bridges, repairing tunnels, and clearing mine fields, but assigned to any task they will be found adequate. That is a glowing tribute to the training of US ground troops. When they do their basic, they get the works. Perhaps that is why it is so easy to convert US soldiers from the services to the arms an vice versa. But it is not just the training and weapons alone that helped these men in the part that they played in the Battle of the Bulge. It was also the innate courage and devotion to everything dear to the hearts of free people.

2-9-45

The two-pronged Nazi push was believed by SHAEF observers to have as its objective control of the Meuse, but it was a plan that had to be discarded in the face of determined resistance by allied doughfeet. This enemy-forged battle ground that rolled dangerously into liberated territory became the scene of the most terrific clashes in history. They threw away the book and played everything across the board. The poured in everything of courage and fire that they had They hammered the Hitler planned and conceived offensive until his 5th Panzer army and 7th Infantry army turned tail, maimed with the life blood leaking out of it, but not until the US first and third, and British second armies had beaten off 21 separate drives which were dramatically halted on Christmas Eve.

PRONE THEIR METTLE

2-9-45

The chroniclers who depict the deeds of fighting men can now write "finis" to the chapter of "Negro firsts." They have been tried and their mettle in every arm in this theater. Reinforcement centers have them as replacements in infantry teams without regard to race or color; they have demonstrated their prowess with tanks; they have performed magnificently with artillery in the Battle of the Bulge, and these engineer troops primarily service troops have proved their worth; dark-skinned elements of the air corps have helped to batter the Reich. They have all been good because they have been decorated for their work.

92nd Repulses Nazis, Captures 7 Towns

Chicago Defender Ill.

2-17-45

ROME—Repeated German counter-attack on the Serchio River valley positions of the all-Negro 92nd Division this week failed to dislodge the colored soldiers from seven towns they gained in an offensive last week. Sunday's action by the Nazis was the strongest since the big 92nd push which caught the foe flat-footed and resulted in important gains towards the big Italian naval base of Spezia.

On the east side of the Serchio, three counter-attacks, two in company strength, were repulsed and a fourth broken up by strong artillery.

Earlier, Gallicana, the Serchio River valley town taken from 92nd Division forces by the Nazis during a pre-Christmas counter-offensive, was re-occupied when Negro troops overcame slight enemy resistance. Germany reported capturing numerous Negro prisoners at the time of the December breakthrough.

Gathering speed after its recapture of the key town of Gallicana, 92nd soldiers seized the villages of Castelvecchio, Lama di Sotto and Albiano in the Serchio Valley on the east side of the river, while a parallel column on the river's west bank occupied Calomini.

Exploiting their gains, the troops then occupied Monte Bono and the village of Renaiao. The drive northward toward German strongholds of the mountainous Gothic line is the first Allied offensive along the "forgotten" Italian front since October, and breaks a long winter stalemate.

Nazi Aegnts Rounded Up

WITH U.S. SUPPLY FORCES IN BELGIUM. — When Hitler's armies made a desperate effort to break the death-hold applied by the Allies and failed, they left in their wake agents to carry on their schemes of destruction.

These men who were left behind met with no greater success, thanks to the constant vigil of the members of the 4198th Quartermaster Service company, assigned to the Advance section, Communications Zone. Before and since the German counter-attack, men of this unit have been apprehending German agents disguised as civilians, local police, Allied soldiers, and refugees.

2-17-45

"Since the men caught the first Germans, it seems as though every civilian, male or female, caught near the depots or railheads operated by this company, is subjected to a thorough examination," explained 1st Sgt. Fred L. Russell, of 2316 Vine street, Kansas City, Mo.

"Of course it annoys the local people at times, but now and then the men will catch a German, in their self-styled dragnet. Then, too, one can't be too careful around those places the boys guard. That stuff's for up front, and it's their duty to see that it gets there. I can feel pretty safe in saying that they will."

the German breakthrough in the early stages of our campaign there which, so far as I know, has never been published. A Negro airbase security battalion was guarding an airfield a short distance behind the line. The German assault broke our front and remnants of our combat units came streaming back to and through the position of this Negro battalion. Seasoned troops often are demoralized by such a spectacle. These Negroes had never been under fire. Yet, they did not break when their fellow Americans, who happened to be white, fled through their positions. They did not break when they felt the full weight of the German drive. They stood and fought. They held until reserves could be brought up to reinforce and relieve them. The ultimate tribute to their performance was not characterize Negro troops generally.

3-25-45

The suggestion that Negro combat troops generally have performed poorly in this war is a serious error and a gross libel on tens of thousands of men, both living and dead. The campaign in North Africa is now history. However, there's one story of

Washington Post A Communication

YOUR EDITORIAL of Sunday, March 18, "Negro Soldiers," based upon war correspondents' censored reports of a press conference held recently in Italy by Truman K. Gibson, jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, has caused me to write this letter. I am a Negro and formerly held the position which Mr. Gibson now occupies.

Although I am unwilling to believe that the published reports of Mr. Gibson's press conference accurately reflect what he said, that is beside the point. The important point is to the credit of your editorial did not accept these reports as American public opinion that Negro combat troops generally are not performing well in this war, and that the Ninety-second Division made an unsatisfactory record. In this particular has made an unsatisfactory record. In this connection it is to the credit of The Post that your editorial did the fact that an entire division was assigned to this sector which one Negro battalion held when the chips were down.

Artillery at Bastogne

3-25-45

There has been so much written, and deservedly so, about the 101st Airborne Division at Bastogne that it is very easy to overlook the story of the 969th Artillery Battalion, a Negro unit which was at Bastogne before the 101st arrived and stayed there until the Germans were beaten. In fact, this was the only artillery unit at Bastogne. Its guns were heavy 155-mm. howitzers, designed for lobbing shells at ranges in excess of 10 miles. But at the crisis of the battle for Bastogne these Negroes had their big cannon drawn up in a semi-circle, reminiscent of the Western plains, firing point-blank at Germans advancing so near that men manning the guns were falling under direct rifle fire. Yet those guns were served as steadily and rapidly as though in firing practice. And those Negroes who were not needed to fire the big guns picked up rifles and machine guns to stand shoulder to shoulder with the embattled paratroopers on the thinly held perimeter. The men of Bastogne have brought back the story that as these Negroes moved into the line they took time to stuff their thousers into their socks in a reasonable facsimile of paratrooper boots, assuring the men of the 101st Airborne that they were "a' bo'ne" too. I only hope that all who chuckle over this story fully understand it.

Then there was Climbach. Yank, the Army newspaper, told the story. Things were not going well with the Seventh Army. "Task Force Blackshear" was an emergency improvision of Infantrymen, Engineers, tank destroyers and whoever else was available who could fight. It just happened that Negro tank destroyers, and odds and ends of other Negro soldiers constituted the backbone of "Task Force Blackshear." But it didn't just happen that they took Climbach by assault. Everyone agreed that Climbach had to be taken, and that only crazy men would tackle the job. Nature and German ingenuity had made the position that tough. It was raw courage, a willingness of many to die, as they did die, to capture a few square rods of fortified territory from the enemy, that took these men, black and white, into Climbach.

Emphasis Is Weighed

3-25-45

If the daily press notices these stories at all, it usually giveh them but scant attention. They appear inconspicuously. Certainly, they are not given any general significance as typical of the Negro soldier. Yet, let a report get out that a Negro unit is not doing so well in combat and there is widespread comment about "the combat failure of Negro troops."

3-25-45

As for the Ninety-second Division, even the reports of Mr. Gibson's conference which refer to "the combat failure of the division" allude in passing to the fact that Gibson contrasted the "melting away" of some patrols and platoons with the earned citations of entire regiments of the division. Many of us bitterly remember that several months ago when the Ninety-second Division was driven back some five miles the daily press generally announced the defeat of the "Negro division." Yet when the Ninety-second rallied a few days later and retook every bloody foot it had lost, many of the same papers reported merely that the "Fifth Army" had made a successful counterattack. All credit to Drew Pearson and to that minority of papers which told the full story. Some of us also remember that on another occasion when the Ninety-second made an important advance, capturing its objective against stern resistance, it was forced to retreat with heavy casualties because flanking units found themselves unable to advance, thus leaving the Ninety-second exposed to deadly crossfire. Yet this was reported merely as a defeat suffered by the Ninety-second.

3-25-45

In these circumstances, we should know much more than censored communiques or reports of correspondents have told us before we arrive at the conclusion that the Ninety-second Division has been a failure in combat. Of course, there should be an objective appraisal of every defeat, large or small, and constructive criticism to avert a repetition. We know that Negro soldiers, like white soldiers, are sometimes successful and at other times unsuccessful. But there has been too much unfair and unwarranted condemnation of Negro combat troops both in World War I and World World II to let pass unchallenged even criticism intended to be constructive, when it is based upon unwarranted distortions and misinterpretations of the facts.

WILLIAM H. HASTIE.
Dean, Howard University School of Law
3-25-45
Washington, March 19

Il Duce Tells Fascists Colored Troops Facing Them 'Earth's Scum'

Norfolk Journal & Guide

2-10-45 Va.

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction forbidden)

WITH 92ND DIVISION, FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—(Via Wireless)—"You are fighting the scum of the earth," the aging Benito Mussolini is reported to have told the remnants of his dwindling Fascist Army which are facing the 92nd Division in sectors of the Gothic Line here in Italy last week. The Duce, in exhorting his troops to fight to the last ditch, delivered a stinging verbal attack at the Negro, South African, Indian, British and Jewish troops which make up the Allied armies facing the Italians and Germans in this sector, according to reports received at 92nd headquarters.

Brought into Northern Italy to bolster his failing Fascist Army, Mussolini is reported to have run the gamut of his old repertoire in attempting to restore the fire and vigor which was once a part of the Fascist Army Corps.

2-10-45

In calling the Negro and other colored troops which are attacking the Fascists in the Appenine Mountain sector, the "scum of the earth," Il Duce was following in the pattern which he had set years before when he ordered his soldiers to attack Ethiopia in a move which is now regarded by many as the initial action of the European war. In his recent appearance in Northern Italy, Il Duce is said to have shown a flare of the old spirit which sent the Italians to war against Ethiopia.

JORDAN

MAKES PERSONAL APPEAL

2-10-45

The once-powerful Mussolini, in making personal visits and appeals to his soldiers in Northern Italy, urged them to fight to the last for the Fascist way of life, according to the reports reaching us.

The comic-opera Duce, who once ruled all Italy with the pomp and flare of a Ceasar, was said to have appeared briefly directly in front of the 92nd's lines, begging his once proud black shirts to fight fanatically for what was left of his former empire.

DEFENDS FASCISM

Information has reached us that the Italian troops paraded for the deflated Duce who made a typical rabble-rousing speech in defense of fascism. After two hours of ceremonies, Mussolini and his escorting motor convoy, left while soldiers shouted "Duce, Duce!!" Officers of the Fascist infantry opposing the 92nd are believed to have accompanied the former Italian premier.

2-10-45

Meanwhile the 92nd scored significant advances in the sensitive Serchio Valley sector in an advance which began early this week. These rough and ready fighters are plodding the mountain trails on both sides of the icy Serchio River smothering whatever light opposition is met.

Patrol activity has continued. Patrol missions have jabbed and probed into enemy positions killing many Germans and destroying installations. The patrol results are regarded as excellent.

British Laud Ingenuity of Aviation Engineers in Italy

Afro-American Balto, Md.

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY.—As a result of the ingenuity and efforts of a detachment of American aviation engineers, a British fighter wing was able to move onto an all-weather airfield and continue operations against the enemy many weeks earlier than was at first thought possible.

For the achievement of that feat the members of the detachment have received a letter of commendation from the British air commodore of the Desert Air Force in the Italian theatre of operations.

50 Planes on Muddy Field

When they arrived at the airfield they saw over fifty planes hopelessly bogged down in the mud, some of them standing in three feet of water. They had one bulldozer and about thirty feet of steel cable to do the job. The weather was discouraging.

But that small detachment of engineers went in after those planes. Working from dawn to dark in water and mud that sucked the shoes off the feet at every step, they eased them out inch by inch, hoping against hope that the landing gear would stand the terrific strain.

Members of the honored detachment were:

Lt. Roswell L. Finlay, Lakeville, Conns.; T/5 George W. Atkinson, Macclesfield, N.C.; T/5 Walter R. Hare, Little Rock, Ark.; Pvt. John R. Hutcherson, Madison, Tenn., and Pvt. Andrew W. Fordson, Elberton, Ga.

92nd Infantry Division Gets Severe Pounding

Birmingham News

3-13-45

ROME—(AP)—The U. S. 92nd Infantry Division and its supporting armor were mauled severely in week-end fighting attendant upon their abortive attack in the Ligurian coastal sector, 15th Army Group headquarters said Tuesday.

A special report from Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's headquarters concerning the attack of the Negro division, which official dispatches earlier had tended to discount as minor action, said:

"Casualties and tank losses were relatively high and no net gains in terrain were made."

2-13-45

Sharp German counterattacks supported by concentrated artillery and mortar fire repulsed the Negro doughboys after they had gained as much as a mile on a five-mile front. The 92nd's first full attack as a division was launched last Thursday and penetrated to within two and one-half miles of Massa before the enemy recovered from the surprise and drove the Americans back in four days' fighting.

German parachute units in savage street fighting while cut off for eighteen hours.

The 784th Tank Battalion was fighting its first offensive action beside the Thirty-fifth Infantry Division. The battalion won a place in the hearts of the men of the battle-hardened Thirty-fifth Division, who had fought from St. Lô to Venlo and beyond, by the battle that it put up here and the spearhead fighting that it did to get here.

3-5-45

Sgt. Walter (Pop) Half, a 47-year-old veteran of the First World War from Little York, Ill., who came back in this war as the commander of a tank bulldozer, was called out under fire to fill craters in a road. He went on to knock out a German 88-mm. anti-tank gun.

Sgt. Ambrose Hicks of 328 South Ninth Avenue, Mount Vernon, N. Y., an artillery mechanic, was sent back to help bring a supply convoy through. He saved three trucks parked near a burning ammunition truck loaded with 2,300 pounds of TNT. Other Negro tank men climbed out of the shelter of their tanks under mortar and shell-fire to refuel.

NEGRO TANK OUTFIT NOW HOLDS BASTOGNE

3-3-45

SEVELEN, Germany, March 4 (AP)—With a bridge blown behind them, a Negro tank battalion task force staged a miniature "Bastogne" in Sevelen today, mauling back in four days' fighting.

56n-1945

Foreign Service- Pacific

The Only American Who Can Boast Of His Good Fortune

Ex-Farmer Houston, Tex 85

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

MANILA—Until his claim is successfully challenged, William Dixon, 59 retired U. S. Army veteran, enjoys the distinction of being the only American national who refused to surrender to the Japanese for internment—and lived to boast about it! 4-7-45

Not that Dixon is boastful about an exploit that saw him emerge triumphant with the odds at least 1000 to 1 against him. He was almost prayerfully thankful for his good fortune when I ran across him on a visit to the 820th Amphibious Trucking Company, whose members have adopted Dixon as their own since the day he came up from his little refuge in the city of Pasig.

Here is Dixon's story as he told it to me while adoring members of the 820th sat around drinking in his every word:

"I was a First Sergeant in the old 10th Cavalry, Troop A which served in the Spanish-American War. I served in the Philippines for many years before going to America to retire after 25 years and three months in the Army."

"I came back to the islands because I like it over here. I had met and married a Filipino girl and decided that I could live well over here on my retirement pension. Things were beautiful until the Japanese came. My color made no diffenence to the Filipino people. I was a respected gentleman in my communtiy."

NOTICES POSTED

"The Japs posted notices all over the islands warning all Allied nationals to surrender themselves for internment. The penalty was death if caught."

"A group of us old vets talked the thing over. Some owned small farms; others were in business in Manila and nearby barrios. They told me I was a fool when they learned I would take a chance at hiding out rather than surrender." 4-7-45

"When the Jap soldiers began to strut in and out of the cities; slapping the Filipinos around, robbing them of their food, their money, and household possessions, I began to think that they were right. Many a day I wished I had given up. I could not leave my home during the daytime, and sometimes I did not venture outside for weeks at the time. However, I managed to sneak outside in the dead of night for short walks and fresh air."

"My Filipino friends proved the most loyal and faithful friends in the world. They had always declared they liked me, and now they really proved it. They would, at the risk of their own lives, warn me whenever the Japanese came into the neighborhood. They brought me food from their meagre supply, and kept me alive during all those three terrible years. I shall never forget their kindness."

"Finally the Americans came—as every one of us knew they would, and the Japanese rats scurried for shelter. In their rush to escape the American soldiers, they almost caught me. I was sleeping in my home one night when I heard Jap voices underneath my house. They had found my underground hideout, and decided to spend the night there."

"I was scared as hell—suppose they decided to come into the house? As soon as they quieted down, I sneaked out of bed, stole down the stairs and got away to another place I had prepared about six miles away."

"Sure enough, the Nips decided to take over the house next day. About three days later, an American shell hit the place and killed all six of them! I stayed in hiding until I was sure the Americans had mopped up most of Luzon, then I started for Manila. Imagine my surprise when I ran into this group of brownskinned boys from back home, driving what looked like a big boat on wheels. They told me to come along with them, and they've been taking care of me ever since." 4-7-45

The listening GI's nodded their heads in agreement. Later they told me of the tremendous kick they had got out of Dixon's amazement over the modern weapons like the M-1 rifle and Carbine, and the amphibious trucks they drove in and out of Manila Bay unloading our ships.

The day I saw Dixon he was dressed in a pair of coveralls, the gift of one of his new admirers, and was wearing regulation GI shoes. Other than his obvious age, the only thing that distinguished him from the colored GI's was his old-fashioned cavalry campaign hat that he has kept through all these years.

Dixon told me he was a native of Henderson, Kentucky. He has a brother, Lindsey Dixon who lives in Cincinnati, Ohio, and two sisters, Mary Parker and Marguerite Tyler, residents of Baskett, Kentucky. He has not heard from them since 1939. 4-7-45

His immediate problem is to figure out some way to join the 820 officially. I hadn't the heart to tell him how impossible a task he had set for himself.

They said he couldn't hide out from the Japs, didn't they?

Philippine Guerilla Leader Called 'Black Robin Hood'

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-13-45 Balt., Md.

Organized Own Army, Made Ammunition; Finally Wins American Army Recognition

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH GUERILLA FORCE ON SAMAR ISLAND, PHILIPPINES—(By Courier)—During the recent attempt to find the colored guerrilla leader, Frank (Pedro) Merritt, this correspond was told many daring tales of the "Black Robin Hood of Samar."

There have been many reports on the man, Frank Merritt, and the soldier, Major Merritt. Many vary, but they agree on one point—he's an excellent soldier. Arrogant, dogmatic, a stern disciplinarian.

He's been in and out of trouble with the brass hats, but he still commands the largest and most respected guerrilla army on Samar, and soldiering is his meat, having graduated a third lieutenant from the "West Point of the Philippines," Constabulary Academy in Baguio in Luzon.

Dad American, Mother Filipino

Merritt, 32, is black, with kinky hair, has powerful legs loosely joined to slim hips, and a huge torso that muscles into wide shoulders on which are placed a bull neck and handsome, broad head. Almost 5 feet 10, he is much taller than the average Filipino.

Born in Luzon of a colored American soldier and Filipino mother, he was brought up a strict Catholic, even studying for the priesthood. However, he exchanged the Bible for the rifle and thusly began the stormy life of Merritt, the soldier—one that was to see him the virtual ruler of northern Samar.

Organizes Guerrilla Army

Evidently, it was apparent to Merritt that organizing an army was just one of the jobs which he was destined to do. He had to win the people, and most of them were simple farmers with a fear of God and of the modern weapons and might of the enemy.

Japanese paraded their strength, the American force, those who did not die or escape, were beaten. The people hesitated while getting the bad news which slowly filtered through, then fled headlong into the mountains. Confidence and a desire to avenge had to be instilled in them once again.

To Make Own Ammunition

Merritt's guerrillas were low on ammunition. In fact, low is an understatement. Americans were able to sneak in a little, but not enough to serve the cause. There was one thing left to do—make ammunition and weapons.

From timber and bamboo two ordnance plants were constructed under Merritt's supervision. A tommy gun was produced by using water pipes. Bows and arrows were made with powder in arrow tips which exploded on contact. Much of the powder was secured from floating mines which drifted along shore.

Because there were several guerrilla forces operating on Samar and the general command was not unified, General MacArthur stepped in. A Colonel Ruperto K. Kangledon, stationed on Leyte, late in 1943 dispatched Lt. Col. Causing to Samar in an attempt to unify guerrillas, both on Samar and Leyte.

Merritt distrusted Kangledon, and he was advised by Col. Marcario Peralta, Fourth Philippine Corps commander, to refuse Causing because of his weakness and his love for peace. In refusing Causing, Merritt charged that Kangledon surrendered to the Japanese, had no authority from General MacArthur, promoted undeserving people to high rank and that his guerrillas were organized prior to Kangleon's.

Kangleon was appointed Leyte commander. He and Merritt have not spoken to each other since. Kangleon at present has offices in Leyte. Merritt fought his war in the North and while in bitter struggle, continued civil improvements. He was lord over what he surveyed, a deadly fighter, a scholar, a protector.

Finally Wins Recognition

On November 15, 1943, he was awarded the Silver Star of the Philippine Army by President Quezon.

As the guerrilla condition on Samar became clearer, it became evident that to win against the enemy the whole of the command had to be unified. Merritt had emerged as the strongest leader in the North. Causing appeared to be the Southern leader. The situation dragged.

In September, 1944, an American officer representing GHQ reported, the guerrilla leaders, Merritt, Causing and a Major Abia representing the Southern area, met at his headquarters for the purpose of unifying the forces of Samar.

In order to get American military recognition, the leaders agreed to unify under any commander designated by GHQ. On October 4, such a commander was appointed. Merritt was immediately made his chief of staff and officially given Northern Samar.

Easterners Spark Pacific Invasions

AFRO-AMERICAN 1-6-45 Balt., Md.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC — The 4188th Quartemaster Company, formerly Company C of the 543rd Quartermaster Battalion, including men from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania was the only colored unit to take part in the New Guinea invasions.

Under fire for twenty-one consecutive days, the unit was complimented highly for the vital and significant role it played during the campaign, and in all of the action it encountered, it suffered not one single casualty.

In Netherlands Invasion

Members of the outfit have taken part in several other major campaigns and in each case have been praised highly by high-ranking officials for their achievements and cited as valiant and courageous soldiers of the highest calibre.

The company's participation in a recent major invasion of the Netherlands East Indies, which sparkled in all the headlines, won for it the honor of being farther advanced in this theatre than any other colored outfit prior to the invasion of the Philippines.

Shipped overseas after a seven-month training period, the unit has now been abroad thirteen months and has seen service in Australia and many islands of the very New Guinea group. The battalion was activated in March, 1943.

Many Easterners in Group

Easterners in the group include:

NEW JERSEY

NEWARK — Cpl. Alexander Reynolds; Pfcs. Charles Grimsley, Robert L. Perry, Lee Powell, Clinton Jenkins and Carroll L. Thompson; Pfc. James H. Jones; PENNINGTON — Pvts. Dudley Newberry, Jr., Joseph Riley, and Kelly Henderson; ATLANTIC CITY—Sgt. Alfred J. Burr; Pfc. George W. Burr; EAST ORANGE — Pfc. Jeremiah and Pvt. Fred Harrielll; Lunsford; ELIZABETH—Pfc. George A. Morrison; WILDWOOD—Cpl. Harry W. Hayward; HOPEWELL— Pfc. Oscar Theodore Cain; HACKENSACK—Pvt. Lloyd H. Thompson; JERSEY CITY—Pvt. Ernest Stark; TRENTON— Pfc. George A. Butler; PALMYRA—Cpl. Bowen Pfc. Edward K. Person.

PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA—Cpl. James Daniel; Pfc. Jackie L. Smith, Pvts. Walter Ellis; CAPE May—Sgt. Warren B. Overby; VINELAND—T/5 Walter E. Robinson and Pfc. Henry Patterson and Allison; PENNINGTON — First Sgt. Montclair N. John H. Thomas; Pfc. Ernest Robinson; NYC — Pvt. Richard Smith; TRENTON— Cpl. Lemuel C. McRae; CAMDEN—S/Sgt. Robert W. Johnson; ASBURY PARK—Pfcs. George W. Pressley and Pvt. Walter E. Dickson; PENNS GROVE — Cpl. Theodore Cain; HACKENSACK—Pvt. Lloyd H. Thompson; JERSEY CITY—Pvt. Ernest Stark; TRENTON— Pfc. George A. Butler; PALMYRA—Cpl. Bowen Pfc. Edward K. Person.

PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA—Cpl. James Daniel; Pfc. Jackie L. Smith, Pvts. Walter Ellis; CAPE May—Sgt. Warren B. Overby; VINELAND—T/5 Walter E. Robinson and Pfc. Henry Patterson and Allison; PENNINGTON — First Sgt. Montclair N. Robinson and

Storey, Cpl. MMitchell R. Strong, Pfcs. Charles C. Taylor, Jr., Hubert A. Francis and Earl Webster; Pvts. Stanley Burroughs and Philips L. Saunders; BROOKLYN—Sgt. Oscar R. Parris, Pfc. Norman Clark and Pvt. Charles W. Epps;

BUFFALO—Cpl. Bernard D. Phillips; BRONX—Cpl. Robert L. White and Pfc. Harry McGuire; LONG ISLAND—Pfc. William L. Perrineau.

First to Engage Enemy on Ground

Men Forget Color when Jap Sky Army Attacks

WIPE OUT 17 JAPS

2 Baltimoreans, Other Easterners in Outfits

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE ISLAND, Philippines By Courier—(Delayed) — In determined defensive action which saw enemy troops hurled into confusion and finally annihilated, colored engineers helped form the spearhead that thwarted the Japanese two-prong attempt on the American airstrip at San Pablo sector, these colored troops became the first to engage the enemy in ground action in the campaign to liberate the Philippines.

Set Pace for Infantry

For two days, elements of the two engineer battalions helped herd the enemy into a pocket of annihilation. They had secured their position and taken the offensive when infantry troops arrived and completely routed so-called "prize-troops" from Lt. General Sasaku Suzuli's 35th Army.

During the quiet, early hours of December 7, enemy transports, flying low, made the sneak pass, loosing an estimated 250 paratroopers. Simultaneously, enemy ground troops were infiltrating in from the West.

Alerts rent the air before dawn on the third anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Baleful orange flames from the mouths of anti-aircraft artillery and red tracers revealed enough light to show up Japanese troops floating lazily to the ground.

Baltimoreans in Group

T-5 William R. McCall, Detroit; T-4 Winzer Alston, Jr., and T-5 Charles Mumford of Baltimore, were working near the strip when they recognized the enemy aircraft. Grabbing up rifles they rushed to a white depot unit that was then forming a defense perimeter and fought alongside the whites all night.

Although most of the action of the colored troops was confined to the infiltrating enemy groun troops, several manned antiai craft guns during the sky inv sion.

Using a water-cooled .50 ca machine gun, Sgt. Leon Wilbur Berwyn, Pa., and Cpl. Milton Pi gins, Cumberland, Md., were o ficially credited with helpin down one transport, assists o two probables and killing a par trooper.

Japs Meet Their Match

On the ground the enemy wa in the vicinity of Burauen, one half mile west of one of the co ored units and one mile south o the other. They attacked the for mer with automatic fire afte sneaking through the intens darkness. Units from the othe battalion rushed to what wa then the miniature front.

With the same swiftness the have used in building airstrip in the Pacific, they formed defen sive positions and set about the business of shooting down be wildered, running targets. Thei casualties were 2 killed, 3 wound ed. They were credited with 2 Jap dead.

Back at the supply camp, on of the enemy approached withir 10 feet, was spotted by a Filipin and Sgt. Martin fired, as did Cpls Fred Barnes of Jackson, Miss. Horace Akins of Savannah, Ga. and Norman Curley of Washing ton, filling the Jap's body wit bullet holes.

Easterners in the unit include Sgt. James F. Martin, Newpor News, Va.; T-Sgt. Hugh Smith Philadelphia; Capt. E. J. Bonner Freeline, Pa.; Cpl. Herbert John son, of Washington, D.C.; Sgt Burrell Nelson of Washington; Cpl. Herbert J. Johnson, Winston Salem; Pvt. William R. Runsey, Chester, Pa.; and T-5 Samuel Johnson, Washington.

Big Guns Landed By Negro Soldiers On Iwo Seen Key To Marine Victory

Chicago Defender 7/12.

3-31-45

By T.-SGT. H. SCHYLENBURG
(Marine Corps Combat Correspondent)

IWO JIMA (Delayed)—A company of Negro soldiers accomplished unbelievable things here, but what they did that marines on Iwo Jima will never forget is to land artillery on D-Day when the big guns were the difference between taking the island or getting off it.

Japanese on Mount Suribachi were raking the beaches and moving their range inland occasionally to plaster Marine units trying to dig in before nightfall of D-Day. There was no Marine artillery ashore yet. Machine guns were no match for mortars and heavier Japanese guns. Men inching up the steep inclines of Iwo's terraced beaches kept their heads down and wondered when will our guns get in—when will we start to answer these barrages? 3-31-45

Early in the afternoon a Negro amphibious truck company, a U.S. Army unit attached to the Fifth Amphibious Corps, started inland in 50 bobbing, swaying "ducks" (amphibious trucks), bringing with them 105m. howitzers — the guns that have ssince swept the four miles of Iwo with salvo after salvo.

Lose 29 Ducks

When the Negro soldiers finished 48 hours later, they had lost 29 out of their 50 ducks, but the guns were emplaced and doing full-time work. In the face of huge odds, only two guns were lost.

Their story was told by their commanding officer as he squatted in front of his sandbag-covered foxhole a few yards from the beach whose hazards of high surf and mortar fire they had licked. He was Army Capt. William Duryea, of Suffern, N. Y. Next to him stood a platoon leader, Army First Lt. Grover Groves, of 2152 Stacia Way, Sacramento, Calif. These men had deep pride in their eyes. You understand this pride when you heard the story of their men.

"Iwo Jima is tenable only to that force which has artillery ashore," the captain said. "We knew days before the assault that progress of Marine striking forces would hinge in many ways on whether their own artillery could give them the support they needed —both near the airfields and on the slopes of Mount Suribachi. We told our men that the 105's in their care were precious cargo — they could mean keeping or losing a foothold on the beach. They did the rest." 3-31-45

48 Hours In Stretch

He called over his first sergeant, Houston D. Austin, of 248 Kennilworth, Detroit, Mich. Sgt. Austin recited facts in a clipped, matter-of-fact way. It was so matter-of-fact that you almost forgot the significance of what you were hearing.

"Our job was not only to land the first artillery," he said, "but to move it inland to predesignated positions. We had one hell of a time. Mortar fire filled many ducks full of holes. High surf swamped others. Some couldn't make the beach's steep incline and had to make half-a-dozen tries under fire.

"We had drivers who had ducks shot out from under them and then came back for more. I had to order several men off their ducks after they had worked 48 hours unloading ammunition where one hit would have blown everything nearby sky-high."

Swept Out To Sea

"We expected loyalty of men to vehicles, but not like it turned out. Drivers kept their sinking ducks afloat until the last second before going under, when they would jump into naval small craft. Sometimes they were fished out, half-drowned themselves, by sailors who were luckily in the area.

"One man, Francis Goodrich Army technician fifth grade, ran out of gas, refused to abandon a destroyer. He was missing for 13 hours. We gave him up for lost but he finally came in and, although exhausted, remained in action. That night his gun helped repel a Japanese counterattack.

"We knew speed was everything. One hour after, we hit the beach with these guns—and enemy fire kept us from landing again and again—our guns were set up and we had brought in ammunition for them to start firing. The marines sometimes yelled at our drives up around Mount Suribachi to jump off their ducks and take cover. The drivers had to stand up, exposed, to unharness the howitzers. The Gyrenes thought we were crazy, but we figured if they could land on this place we could give them the stuff to make the landing stick." 3-31-45

By now it is known that the landing has "stuck." It is impossible to list all the boys whose ducks carried guns in during the hectic hours of D-Day. Anyway, they are not asking for credit, they'll take a little rest, instead.

Three of them are from the St. Louis (Mo.) area. They are Army Privates Calvin C. Davis, of 3432 Belle avenue, and Edward Turner, of 3304 Hickory street, St. Louis, and Technician Fifth Grade Fred L. Watson, of 22 North 14th Street, East St. Louis, Ill.

They are all dug in, now, on the fringe of beach near Iwo's southern end. At night they can hear the thunder of the 105's they brought in. They grew fond of those big fellows. Anyone ashore on Iwo that first day grew fond of them.

The marines are grateful to this company of Negro boys. They'll remember them as long as they remember Iwo Jima, and that will be pretty close to always.

56n-1945 Foreign Service Pacific

AA Battalion Battled As Infantry During Cleanup In Islands

Norfolk, Va.

Journal and Guide

Loeb Represents Combined Negro Press At Outpost For War On Japs; Tells Of Casualties In All-Negro Unit

7-14-45

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

OKINAWA—(Via Cable)—A battalion composed of officers ~~and men from~~ the disbanded 369th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Regiment is the only all-Negro combat group participating in the Ryukus campaign which has thus far wrested Okinawa and its satellite islands from the Japs.

Under command of Lt. Col. Lilmer F. Lucas and directed by Negro officers this hard hitting outfit of former New York State Guardsmen has during the past 69 days on a combat infantry mission in the Kerama Retto added the following achievements to the glorious record compiled by their parent organization during World War I.

LOEB

7-14-45

First Patrol Captures Jap Major

MAY 30: During its first patrol in the Kerama Retto, the battalion captured a Japanese major, one lieutenant, two superior privates, one female nurse, one heavy machine gun, eight rifles, and large quantities of ammunition without the loss of a man.

Two members of the patrol suffered slight injuries. The Jap major personally surrendered his sword to Lt. Col. Lucas, who through kind treatment of the Jap officer, succeeded in setting the stage for peace negotiations with the enemy garrison entrenched on a nearby island in which the Jap major volunteered to act as intermediary.

Officer, 2 Enlisted Men Killed

JUNE 24: In a day of blazing action on June 24 the battalion captured a valuable hill position from the Japs and killed 20 enemy soldiers and wounded 10. They captured enemy grenades, destroyed two machine gun nests and supplies of ammunition, knocked out two enemy pillboxes, and burned an enemy encampment.

Our losses were one officer and two enlisted men killed and nine men wounded.

7-14-45

In 60 days' operations the battalion has captured in the neighborhood of 700 prisoners, including Jap officers and soldiers, and Korean and Okinawa labor troops who steal their food and supplies. The patrols are engaged in preventing isolated Jap garrisons from attempting suicide forays by small boats against Naval vessels in the vicinity and preventing the enemy from making contact with the Jap mainland.

The 369th, then a Coast Artillery Regiment, left the United States in June, 1942, under the command of Col. Chauncey M. Hooper of New York City, the Hawaiian Islands, where they maintained defensive positions for 34 months. Col. Hooper has since returned to the United States.

Old 369th Halts Enemy Suicides

Japanese Major Captured By Tan Yanks On Okinawa

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

By CHARLES LOEB, NNPA War Correspondent

OKINAWA—(By Cable)—A battalion composed of officers and men from the disbanded 369th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Regiment is the only all-Negro combat group participating in the Ryukyu campaign which, thus far, has wrested Okinawa and its satellite islands from the Japanese.

7-14-45

Under command of Lieut. Col. Lilmer F. Lucas, and directed by Negro officers, this hard-hitting outfit of former New York State Guardsmen has in the past sixty-nine days on a combat infantry mission in the Kerama Retto, added new achievements to the glorious record compiled by its parent organization during World War I.

CAPTURES MAJOR

May 30, during its first patrol on the Kerama Retto, the outfit captured a Japanese major, one lieutenant, two superior privates, one female nurse, one heavy machine gun, eight rifles and large quanities of ammunition, without the loss of a man. Two members of the patrol suffered slight injuries.

The Japanese major personally surrendered his sword to Lieutenant Colonel Lucas. Due to the kind treatment offered the captured Japaneses, the major succeeded in setting the stage for peace negotiations with the enemy garrison entrenched on a nearby island. The Japanese major volunteered to act as an intermediary.

BURN ENEMY CAMP

In a day of blazing action June 24, the outfit captured a valuable hill position from the Japanese, killed twenty enemy soldiers and wounded ten; caputured two machine gun nests and supplies of ammunition, knocked out two enemy pillboxes and burned enemy encampment.

All-Negro Infantry Unit Sparking Ryukyu Drive

Chicago, Ill.

Chicago Defender

By CHARLES LOEB
(NNPA War Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO.—An all-Negro infantry battalion, the only one of its kind in the Ryukyu campaign which already has netted U. S. troops Okinawa and its satellite islands, is chalking up a glorious record for itself.

The courageous outfit, made up of Negro officers and men from New York City's old 369th Coast Artillery (Anti-Aircraft) Regiment, is a constant thorn in the side of Japanese troops encountered.

7-14-45

Under the command of Lt. Col. Lilmer F. Lucas, the hard-hitting outfit during a 69-day combat infantry mission in the Kerama Rettoe, added the following achievements to the glorious record compiled by its parent organization during World War I:

On May 30, during its first patrol in the Kerama Retto, the battalion captured a Japanese major, one lieutenant, two superior privates, a female nurse, one heavy machine gun, eight rifles and large quantities of ammunition without the loss of a man. Two members of the patrol suffered slight injuries.

Personal Surrender

The Jap major personally surrendered his sword to Lt. Col. Lucas, who succeeded in setting the stage for peace negotiations with the enemy garrison entrenched on a nearby island with the Jap major acting as intermediary.

In a day of blazing action on June 24, the doughboys captured a valuable hill position from the Japs, killed 20 enemy soldiers and wounded 10, captured enemy grenade-launcher, destroyed two machine gun nests and supplies of ammunition.

Duck Drivers 'Hot Stuff'

Chicago Defender

By ENOCH P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

TENTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Okinawa—In the navy it's the submarine crews; among combat troops it's the men who man the bombers, but the glamour boys of the service forces are the duck drivers. 7-7-45

Ducks, the amphibious two and one-half ton trucks that glide through the water and race over land with equal facility are an innovation of this war and the colorful feature of most all amphibious operations.

Landings on many of the coral-rimmed islands of the Pacific would have been impossible were it not for them. Here at Okinawa, the role played by these sea-going trucks since D day when the first of them began operating has been a leading one.

Here, as elsewhere, many of the drivers are Negroes, and as such have brought new glory to themselves, their race and the service.

New Lingo

They're an interesting lot. Like aircraft pilots, they're self-confident, cocky and full of the recklessness of youth. Soldiers, with a smattering of seamanship, they have developed a distinctive jargon, a combination of army and navy lingo.

The envy of most service troopers, they, with characteristic immodesty, regard themselves as "hot stuff"—and they are. Everyone says so.

William B. Manning of Brooklyn, N. Y., is first sergeant of one of the veteran companies to hit these shores April 1 when American troops for the first time in history invaded territory heavily populated by Japanese civilians.

The company, commanded by Capt. Herbert H. Taub, white, of Lewistown, Pa., and a staff of seven other white officers, mostly Pennsylvanians, was activated at Indiantown Gap, Pa., in October, 1943.

Land At Leyte

After serving in Hawai from July of last year, the company landed with the Seventh Infantry division at Leyte when the re-occupation of the Philippines began on October 20. Then on April 1, this year, they dropped their craft into the waters of the China Sea to be among the first ashore here.

Adventure marks their daily efforts, but it's adventure that carries with it great personal risk. The men know this and glory in it. It accounts, in part, for their bravado which has enabled many to distinguish themselves.

This is a charmed company. Its men have emerged from their frequent brushes with disaster through uncanny escapes. In spite of their perilous assignments, not a man has been injured or killed by enemy action. On the contrary they have been instrumental in the saving of lives.

Even now, the reckless drivers who bounded shoreward on D-Day with careless disregard for themselves in the face of enemy fire, now guide their craft outward, slowly and with care, for their cargo is one of helpless, wounded fellow soldiers. Chi. Def.

Daring Water Rescues

Their records bulge with material for many action-packed thrillers, stories of deeds that have brought high praise and commendation from high ranking army officers and undying gratitude from fellow soldiers, who, but for the courage of these men, might be white crosses in a military cemetery.

Varied are the stories that could be told.

Of daring water rescues under fire: by Cpls. Robert Cruse, of Trenton, N. J., and Wilfred Celestine, of New Orleans.

Of fearless demonstrations of courage: Cpls. Ernest Townsend and Edward Van Stevenson, of Louisville, Ky., drove trucks loaded with high explosives from a flaming ammunition dump which had been hit by Japanese bombs during an air attack at Leyte.

Of heroic excursions through Jap infested territory to carry ammunition to the front lines: Cpls. Richard Washington, Alexandria, La.; Willie B. Wright, of Memphis, and Titus Taylor of Fort Worth, voluntarily drove three duck loads of .50 calibre ammunition eight miles to Agnu for the Seventh Division at night and because of enemy action were unable to return for 24 hours.

Carry Wounded 7-7-45

There are stories of less spectacular, but important accomplishment: The hauling of 16,000 tons of supplies at Leyte in two months; of similar performance here where the men have transported 22,000 tons of cargo since D-day exclusive of personnel.

But of all its tasks, the company is proudest of having been called upon to provide shore to ship transportation for the wounded.

It is an assignment calling for the best drivers, and to Manning it was a recognition of superior ability that of all the companies here, white and colored, his was called upon to serve.

And it is with justifiable pride that the drivers selected are serving. In this group are Cpls. Luke Alston, Florence Villa, Fla.; Clifford Sturdivant, Miami; Melvin Sears, Birmingham; Gaylord Reid, Westfield, N. J.; William Jones, Birmingham; John Moore, Jersey City; Joseph Johnson, Philadelphia; Winfred A. Cawthorne, Jackson, Tenn.; John T. Mayfield, Anniston, Ala.; Richard E. Daniel, Lambertsville, N. J.; and Pfc's. Charley Harris, Columbus, Ohio; David W. Smith, 2227 Maypole avenue, Chicago; Luther D. Salters, Jackson, Miss., and Willie F. Lucas, Louisville, Ky.

Manning, formerly with the now disbanded 369th Coast Artillery regiment, returned to the states after 11 months overseas to help form this company.

He is proud of his non-com staff, for he had a hand in its selection.

They include such men as Sgt. Adam Kado, New Orleans; S-Sgt. Henry Tolen, New York City; S-Sgt. Kendall A. Taylor, Pennington, N. J.; S-Sgt. Robert A. Hopkins, Washington; S-Sgt. Cornelius J. Beach, New York City; S-Sgt. Marion S. Brown, Spartansburg, S. C.; S-Sgt. Joseph L. Moore, Miami; and S-Sgt. Owen C. Jordan, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Heroism, Awards Mark 93rd's Pacific Progress

Pittsburgh Courier, Pa. 3-3-45

WITH THE 93RD INFANTRY DIVISION IN NEW GUINEA—The story of the Ninety-third Infantry Division this week is a story of heroism in face of the enemy, promotions for jobs well done, and awards for proficiency and exemplary conduct in action against the enemy.

Sgt. Frank Portee of Clover, S.C., has been decorated with the Combat Infantryman Badge for prowess in battle against the enemy, and the Purple Heart for wounds received as the result of enemy action in the Southwest Pacific area.

SHOT BY SNIPER 3-3-45

Sergeant Portee was advance scout for a reconnaissance patrol operating in enemy territory when he was fired on by a Japanese sniper. A .25-calibre bullet struck him in the arm and he slumped to the ground, firing as he fell. Though wounded, he returned the fire with such accuracy that the sniper abandoned his position, thus permitting the rest of the patrol to come up and form a perimeter.

Crawling into the center of the perimeter, without assistance, Sergeant Portee directed the fire of his patrol until the danger point had been neutralized. After receiving first aid, he then continued to perform as advance scout for the patrol until its mission had been completed. 3-3-45

The story of Pfc. Samuel King of Melwood, Ark., is a story of heroism in the face of the enemy. While out on a special mission with a unit dispatched to secure information—and fight if necessary—Private Smith came face to face with three Japanese charging him with fixed bayonets. With deadly coolness, Smith killed all three with a burst from his automatic rifle. One of the dying Japanese fell almost at the feet of the straight-shooting Negro doughboy. This week Smith was still in action, having been awarded the Combat Infantryman Badge.

MADE CAPTAIN

The story of Capt. Edgar G. Davis of the Ninety-third is a typical story of hard work, with promotion as the reward. This week an announcement from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters said Captain Davis was advanced from first lieutenant. 3-3-45

As regimental communications officer, Captain Davis, then a lieutenant, had direct supervision of the broad network of communications for the division.

In Today's Mail

WATERBURY, CONN.
DEMOCRAT
Cir. D. 10,143

JUL 11 1945

RACE DISCRIMINATIONS IN RESTAURANTS, BUSSES ETC., ONLY PROLONGING THE WAR

Waterbury, Conn.
July 11, 1945.

We wonder if the people who practice race discrimination in restaurants, busses etc., realize that they are prolonging the war and causing thousands of lives to be lost. The Japs are emphasizing the treatment of the Negro by other Americans as the American Way," of treating those they consider their inferiors. Call this propaganda if you will, but remember that there has never been a rumor that did not find many persons to believe it. And can America deny the truth of the accusation?

Remember, also, that many Japs have served as domestics in America, and have first hand knowledge of the manner of those whose chief claim to superiority is their inherited or acquired wealth.

Returning to the propaganda, the Japs say they will fight to the last man, commit suicide, or do anything else to keep from falling into the hands of Americans, to be abused as the Negro has been.

Jim Crow Foe Out

Afro-American Balti[illegible] Md.

WINFRED W. LYNN, who in 1942 fought induction into the U.S. Army because he objected to the jim crow practices of Selective Service as well as the Army, is again a civilian after serving 19 months as a sergeant in the South Pacific.

Color Ignored by Officers, Men at Jap 'West Point'

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

GI's Live 'Life of Riley' at Disposition Center in Mountains; 14-Year Vet Plans to Re-enlist

By PEYTON GRAY

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ZAMA, Japan.—Thousands of officers and enlisted men are literally living "the life of Riley" at the Fourth Disposition Center here, approximately 35 miles from Yokohama, while waiting for their ships to come in.

Color is rarely mentioned by these men, who share the barracks of this former "West Point" of Japan high in a mountainous region, a quick train ride from the heart of Japan.

In one room I found a colored warrant officer playing gin rummy with several white officers, two of whom spoke with distinctive Southern accents, while perched on the side of a cot nearby sat an American-born Japanese officer.

Live Normal Lives

In the barracks of the enlisted men, likewise color for the most part has been relegated to a place with the least important thoughts.

Time is spent rehashing Army experiences, writing letters, reading outdated magazines, going to the movies, playing cards, and of course, in the natural position of a soldier, lying prone on one's back dreaming of home.

"Sweating out" transportation to some West Coast port, most of these men are going home for discharges, while others will accept a furlough prior to re-enlisting.

14-Year Vet Awaits Furlough

In this latter group was Chief Warrant Officer Frank Reeder of Port Arthur, Tex., who had been consulting the barrack bulletin board many times daily for over a week expecting to find his name on the "alert list."

More than eligible for a discharge with 108 points, Reeder, a Regular Army veteran with over 14 years' service, plans to spend a vacation with his wife and five-year-old son before re-enlisting.

He has spent more than two years in the Pacific theater, this time with the 278th Quartermaster Service Battalion.

Expressing concern over the delay and recent controversy over procuring ships in which to return the men, Reeder says that he expresses the feeling of thousands of GI's when he says that he would ride a Liberty ship back before passing —"anything to get home."

At that time he will have spent a permanent discharge under more favorable regulations.

Rose Through Ranks

He began his Army career in the ordnance department with the famed 25th Infantry Regiment at Fort Huachuca and worked up to technical sergeant before passing an examination for warrant officer.

Mixed Engineer Unit Builds Manila Hospital

Philadelphia Tribune 5-26-45

By CHARLES H. LOEB

MALILA. — Members of the 1871st Engineer Aviation Battalion had little time for the entertainment of war correspondents when I visited them last week. . . . they were busy. . . . very busy . . . . meeting the challenge offered them by hard-hitting white units engaged with them on the construction of a 4000-bed general hospital on the outskirts of the city.

Major Gregory J. Skinner, commanding the battalion, gave me free rein to interview individual GI's and to inspect the work of picked platoons on the hospital site, and rushed away after turning me over to Sgt. Major Edward F. Bayles, 1315 Park street, Des Moines, Ia.

The 1871st is a proud, cocky outfit which has been setting records since the day it was activated at Greenville Army Air Base, Greenville, S. C., February 1, 1943. In December of that year the outfit was shipped overseas landing January 29, 1944 at Milne Bay, where they cut their construction teeth on warehouses and pipelines.

January 29, 1945 found them at Finchaven where they were given a variety of assignments that included roads, water points, station hospitals, earth moving projects and operation of a gigantic coral pit.

Their next jump was up to Leyte where at Macloben, they were assigned to improve the terrible roads, to maintain water points, and to operate a gravel pit.

In Luzon, they were given the hospital project, sharing the work with a white outfit. Those officers who have watched white and tan units work together on similar projects know well in advance that records are going to be broken, for the keen and friendly rivalry between white and tan outfits in the Southwest Pacific is almost legendary. . . . and the score is about 50-50 5-26-45

While the men openly express their disappointment over the fact that there are no Negro commissioned officers in the battalion, they generally agree that their white officers, most of them southerners, "are on the ball." Evidences of good leadership are to be found in the orderly camp area, the general attitude of military alertness among the men, the low sickness rate, and the full inventory of engineering equipment boasted by the battalion. Good tools are an evidence of good organization, and the 1871st has more tools—all in good working condition than any other Engineer Aviation battalion I have encountered over here.

Non-commissioned leadership is excellent. Outstanding in the organization are the following men:

S/Sgt. Ephraim Alston, of Savannah, Ga.; Motor Sgt. Leonard J. Jackson of Brooklyn; S/Sgt. Theodore R. Dekle, of Pensacola, Fla., who holds the Good Conduct Medal. 5-26-45

S/Sgt. Richard J. Mack, Montgomery, Ala., is one of the best liked men in the battalion. He formerly was a truck driver and in his own terms "a ham-fat mechanic."

S/Sgt. William G. Simpson, 10 Edgewood Park, Roxbury, Mass., is in charge of heavy equipment, and is doing a "damn good job" according to Major Skinner. Prior to his induction he was a private chauffeur. 5-26-45

It was not surprising to find that the best mess sergeant in the outfit was a former lumber mill hand, Sgt. Willis Collier, 392 Scott street, Memphis, Tennessee.

Sgt. Major Bayles is one of the few college men in the battalion. He was inducted into the army on December 5, 1942, while attending Drake university.

Mess Sergeant William K. Arnold is one of several regular army men in the outfit. Arnold hails from Mazia, Texas, and was a cook before Uncle Sam found him willing and ready for service.

Another regular army man is Sgt. Timothy Gregory, 745 Second avenue, New Kinsington, Pa., a construction worker as a civilian, and a former trooper in the Tenth Cavalry. 5-26-45

Some Purple Hearts

The battalion had had its taste of battle thrills and several of its members wear purple hearts as the result of a little engagement with Jap planes as their convoy neared Finchaven on January 31, 1944.

One of the attacking plans got in a lucky hit with a bomb on their Liberty Ship, killing one man, and injuring several others. William Griffin, 2126 Elmore square, Pittsburgh, Pa., did not live to wear his Purple Heart, but four of the men wounded, and now on active duty, posed for photographs during my visit. They are Pvt. Larn Harbrow, 274 Jordan Park, St. Petersburg, Fla.; SGT. A. J. RODGERS, Philadelphia, Mississippi; Cpl. Geo. Howell, 206 Jackson street, Amarillo, Texas, and Pfc. George L. Gillespie 1011 Harrison avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

Sorrow Swept Islands As GI's Left Trinidad

Pa.

A discharged veteran of the 99th Coast Anti-Aircraft Regiment, the first all-colored unit of its kind to go out of the country, tells the story of those men. They left Continental United States in April 1942 for Trinidad, British West Indies, where they found that white soldiers, who had preceded them and who had told many stories of the "barbarism" of the Negro soldiers.

How the barriers were broken down and how the men finally were accepted by the citizens is told vividly in the accompanying letter of the veteran, Edward Thompson, of 1702 north Bouvier street. He attended Central High School for two years but was graduated from the Mastbaum Vocational School. Inducted into the service in June 1941, he went overseas from Camp Davis, N. C., in April 1942, and received his discharged after hospitalization for tropical fever from Camp Stewart, Ga., where the unit was disbanded.

I guess a great deal of people are wondering what happened to the 99th C. A. A. which was the first Negro Anti-Aircraft outfit to go out of the western hemisphere. Of course we realize the war is going on into its fourth year, and there are so many other outfits that are making so many new advances that it is hard for readers to keep up with all the progress our Negro service men and women are making in this war. 4-7-45

I, myself, am a disabled veteran of World War II. I happened to be an ex-member of the 59th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft in which I served for a period of three years. A great many people throughout various parts of the city seeing me out of the army and back in civilian life, ask me about their sons. The real truth has never been revealed, but it's about time that the truth should be told to our Negro citizens who have loved ones in the service.

The 99th C. A. A. was formed at the same time the 99th Pursuit Squadron was in progress. Our regiment was formed by a cadre of Officers and Non-Coms of the 76th and 77th Coast Artillery which were the first two colored technical outfits formed. We left American shores for overseas in April 1942, bound for Trinidad, British West Indies. 4-7-45

We realize our Negro Correspondents have a great many assignments and stories to cover. Perhaps we were overlooked isolated as we were in the jungles. Our outfit was sent to the West Indies to guard the gateway to the Panama Canal when the war was in a very critical stage for the United States. That's the time Martinique was told to disarm by the American government while at that time she was under the rule of Vichy France. Our boys served their purpose well down in Trinidad, because that island was very well shaken up. Enemy submarines and aircraft carriers lay out in the Caribbean waters crippling American and British shipping alike.

I was at that time a member of the coast artillery band—of both the military and swing aggregations. It was pretty tough for the first six months after we arrived there getting used to the climate, for we arrived during the monsoon season and it was very difficult setting our positions up in the jungle. The morale of our troops was very low. The band played a great part toward keeping up the morale of our soldiers. Finally, after a period of three months, we were granted a pass privilege which permitted us to visit the town. We found it very difficult to become friends with the people of the island because a great many people had heard of our coming and their minds had been poisoned against us by the white soldiers who were stationed there two years prior to our arrival. 4-7-45

Most of these white soldiers who had filled the minds of the people with a lot of scandalous lies about us were out of small illiterate towns in the deep south, towns which you and I have never heard of before. They told the people that we were monkeys and that we carried long knives and would cut their heads off and rape their women. But it so happened that a lot of people who had been to the United States and who still kept in contact with their loved ones over here in America knew better.

I can recall, for instance, Mrs. Jeffers, a very prominent business woman there and many others. They gave us our first get-together affair at the Princess Building in the Port Au Spain, which is practically the largest city on the island. I want to call to the attention of the Negro reader to the fact that the people were amazed to see that we had all shades of men even though in uniform, and that the majority of us were educated and cultured. 4-7-45

The closer relationship between us and the people of Trinidad sprung up over night after that affair. Even our own officers told us not to have anything to do with the natives. But later on they found out they couldn't keep us divided, so they didn't bother any more about it. If they, the people of Trinidad, could speak for themselves, they would tell you that they have accomplished a great deal since the Negro soldiers were stationed in Trinidad. They learned much from us so far as education health habits, and economics were concerned. The whole island wept when we had to evacuate. Our departure was a great loss so far as the people were concerned, especially after they had begun to learn the American way of life. The remains of our regiment was brought back here to the United States to Camp Stewart in Georgia where the outfit was split up into labor battalions, trucking outfits and quartermaster companys.

Our men are scattered all over the country. Some we shipped back overseas, and others are perhaps waiting to be shipped over again. It seems a pity that such a technically trained outfit as the 99th should have been disbanded the way it was. 4-7-45

Our Negro citizenry should be proud to know that their sons and daughters abroad are bringing better relationship and are enacting the good neighbor policy throughout the world, factors which will bring about the advancement of the colored man through the entire world.

I happened to be one of the first to be discharged from the 99th Regiment. Malaria Fever and a nervous breakdown necessitated my discharge. I hope this story will open the eyes of our Negro readers so that they may not be blind to the truth.

Tex. General Says 93rd Div. 'Fine Soldiers'

Philadelphia Tribune Pa. 5-26-45

With The 93rd Division In The Southwest Pacific—(ANP—The Negro soldier's valor was praised here last week by Brig. Gen. Leonard R. Boyd, a native of the state of Oregon.

"The Negroes are good fighters," he said. "I think they are just as good as white soldiers of the same IQ."

Gen. Boyd's praise was echoed by Maj. Gen. Harry J. Johnston, the Texas-born commanding officer of the 93rd division.

"I've commanded white soldiers and colored soldiers and I say these boys are fine soldiers," Major Johnston remarked. "I think the division has the finest esprit de corps of any I have seen. All these boys want is to be treated like any other soldier, to do a job like any other soldier."

"See Lefty" Captains Tell Men, To Solve Any Problem In Manila

Philadelphia Tribune Pa.

By CHARLES H. LOEB
(NNPA War Correspondent)

MANILA.—See Lefty! That's what every ship captain who brings his precious cargo into Manila harbor tells his crew as they board landing boats taking them to shore for a few days liberty. See Lefty!

5-26-45

Lefty happens to be Claude Alfred Leftridge, 1471 - 21st avenue, Seattle, Washington, a middle aged, handsome American Negro evades questions about his age, but who talks freely about his children, Delores, thirteen, and David fourteen, who live at the Seattle address with his foster father, William E. Crooman, retired master sergeant in the 10th Cavalry.

5-26-45

The story of how Claude Leftridge happened to become the first Negro port steward for the War Shipping Administration, a Manila port byword, began that day when Japanese bombers swarmed like angry bees over Manila Harbor, bombing and straing American shipping. Lefty was a steward on the SS Capillo, a merchant ship that found itself on the receiving end of a 500-pound bomb.

Lefty and other crewmen survived that one by jumping overboard and swimming to safety When the Jap army took over on Luzon, these survivors headed for the mountains where they joined guerrila forces under the leadership of the famous Col. Thorpe. The band roamed up and down the Cagayan Valley, harrassing the Nips until Col. Thorpe at last surrendered his feeble forces to the Japanese.

Lefty and 40 other Americans were interned at Santo Tomas, the notorious Jap prison camp. Always, cocky, and hard to discipline, Lefty "got out of line" with a Jap official one day, and was given a 82 day "purge" in Ft. Sanitago's dungeons; a treatment reserved for particularly "tough" Americans When he was, in the opinion of his jailers, sufficiently subdued, he was returned to Santo Tomas, where he remained in confinement until released by American troops, February 4, 1945.

5-26-45

Among those who accompanied 1st Calvary troops into the ancient courtyard of Manila's oldest university was Walter K. Neill, regional director, War Shipping Administration, in charge of Recruitment and Manning. Neill recognized Leftridge among the joyous group of half-starved internees, and gave him an "on the spot" appointment as Port Steward for War Shipping, and Steward Manager of the United Seaman's Service Residential Club.

Lefty's assignment was to locate and lease, somewhere in the Manila area, a house or houses sufficient to billet and feed the large flow of Merchant Marine and Naval personnel expected to swarm into Manila harbor.

"We don't want to wait until the sailors are here," Neill told Lefty, "we want to have something ready for them when they arrive. Get busy."

5-26-45

collaborators. Maybe so. But long before funds were available for furnishings, the Seaman's Center was ready to accommodate 50 guests.

Among the first to be housed there were shipmates of Lefty's who had survived the bombing of the S. S. Capillo. Among them was Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Calvin Browne and their 11-weeks-old daughter who had been born in Los Banos prison camp.

5-26-45

True to the traditions of the Merchant Marine, the Seaman's Service Center is open to all Navy and Merchant Marine crewmen, regardless of color. For a small fee, barely sufficient to cover the cost of food, the sailor is lodged and given three meals daily. The fact that the table at Seaman's Service is one of the best in Manila is a tribute to Lefty's superlative ability to "scrounge," swap, barter, and in extreme cases . . . er, appropriate!

The fellows around Seattle, and at the University of Washington will remember Lefty; jolly, carefree, and as talkative as an old maid. He's the same today as he was then, though little streaks of gray in his curly hair mark the passing of time.

He's the No. 1 at the Seaman's Service to the score or more Filipino boys who serve, cook and clean. He's No. 1 to the hundreds of seamen whose eyes pop out in surprise when they enter this swell layout on arrival in Manila. He's No. 1 to Walter Neill, regional director. whose eyes twinkle when he tells how Lefty made bricks without straw.

A drunken sailor wants to start a fight. . . See Lefty!

Sugar's all out, and rice is low. . . See Lefty!

5-26-45

Who's got any cold beer? . . . . See Lefty!

Got a bunk here for me, fellow? . . . . See Lefty.

And what do you think I did when I wanted to locate one of the very few bottles of American whiskey to come into Manila harbor last month. . . . Yep, saw Lefty.

Solves Problems for His Unit

CLAUDE ALFRED LEFTRIDGE
1471 21st street, Seattle, Washington, the first Negro to be appointed a Port Steward by the War Shipping Administration, is now Steward Manager of the United Seaman's Service in Manila. The house that "Lefty" built, houses hundreds of sailors daily, ashore in Manila on liberty or awaiting call.

Lefty got busy. Within two weeks after his appointement, he had located two fine mansions, virtually untouched by the shelling and bombing, but thoroughly looted of their contents. One of the houses, a palatial 20-roomer, had expansive grounds and a private swimming pool. Lefty negotiated a lease with the agents of the absent owners, and turned to the equally important task of securing furnishings.

Lefty claims that most of the furniture that now adorns the United Seaman's Service Center was "gathered" by Filipino guerrilas in his employ from the ruins of homes of

Black "Robin Hood of Samar" Wants To Visit U. S. After The War

1-13-45 Philadelphia Tribune

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the Philadelphia Tribune and NNPA.

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

WITH GUERILLA FORCE AN SAMAR ISLAND, PHILIPPINES—MAJOR FRANK MERRITT — (By Courier)— During the recent attempt to find the Negro guerrilla leader, Frank 'Pedro' Merritt, this correspondent was told many daring tales of the "Black Robin Hood of Samar." Since weather conditions, distance, and presence of enemy troops thwarted the search—the summation of these various stories gives some insight into the personality and the conditions surrounding him.

There have been many reports on the man Frank Merritt, and the soldier, Major Merritt. Many vary, but they agree on one point —he's an excellent soldier. Arrogant, dogmatic, a stern disciplinarian. One officer put it:

'He can out-drink, out-dance, out-curse, and out-fight most of his fellow soldiers."

He's been in and out of trouble with the brass-hats, but he still commands the largest and most respected guerrilla army on Samar. And soldering is his meat, having graduated a third lieutenant from the "West Point of the Philippines," Constabulary Academy in Baguio which is nestled in the mountain province of Luzon. 1-13-45

Part Negro and part Filipino, Merritt is black, with kinky hair. A vigorous youth fitted him with powerful legs loosely joined to slim hips. These balance a huge torso that muscles into wide shoulders on which are placed a bull neck and handsome, broad head. Almost five feet ten, he is much taller than the average Filipino which makes him appear even taller than he actually is. He's thirty-two.

Born in Luzon of an American Negro soldier and Filipino mother, he was brought up a strict Catholic, even studying for the priesthood. However, he exchanged the Bible for the rifle and thusly began the stormy life of Merritt, the soldier. One that was to see him, the virtual ruler of northern Samar, its protector, its Black Robin Hood.

Following surrender to enemy forces at Corregidor, organized resistance in the Philippines was quitted by American forces temporarily. Jap forces moved southward—Mindora, Panay, Leyte, Cebu, Samar, Mindanao. There was little organized resistance to the Japanese occupation of Samar Island, third largest in the Philippine Group. Scattered parties branded together and harrassed enemy installations as opportunity afforded. The enemy did not concentrate any strength since Samar was not of operational importance. 1-13-45

Guerrillas established themselves in unoccupied areas. It has been stated that their means of obtaining support were as varied as they were numerous. Terror methods causing compulsory cooperation by civilians. Civilians were wooed by appointing government officials and establishing civilian agencies.

At the time of surrender, Merritt, then captain, was attached to the Leyte Provisional Regiment stationed at Ormoc. He refused the order to surrender and escaped to the mountains of northern Samar and immediately organized the nucleus of his force. He nursed a hatred for the short-statured, malicious invading Japanese and vowed the sword rather than the pen. He made himself colonel and began absorbing other small guerilla groups in northern Samar. The time, May, 1942.

Evidently, it was apparent to Merritt that organizing an Army was just one of the jobs which he was destined to do. He had to win the people. And most of them were simple farmers with a fear of God and of the modern weapons and might of the enemy. Japanese paraded their strength, the American force, those who did not die or effect escape, were beaten. The people hesitated while getting the bad news which slowly filtered through, then fled headlong into the mountains. Confidence and a desire to avenge had to be instilled in them once again.

Politics on Samar, as other places in the Philippines, had a foul odor. Old, festered political scores were settled by powered crazed politicians. There was no time like the present, and no law and order. The condition seemed an exact replica of the infamous Tombstone of Wild West yarns. It has been proved that civilian Filipinos were dying at the hands of Filipino civilians.

All phases of normal life save those which are requisites to existence disappeared. No hospitals, no schools, no communications and transportation facilities. Almost nothing except a few gardens, chickena, and pigs for the stomach sake.

That was the condition Merritt faced. And remedying caused what has been termed harsh methods. One source stated that his relations with the civilian population left much to be desired. The people were held under control by terror tactics and anyone opposing the army was eliminat- San Jose de Buan, Matuginao, and Wright on the west coast. They have been reported as receiving enemy assistance and being supplied with ammunition to fight Merritt and other anti-Japanese elements. Their reported strength is 3000, including women and children.

Because there were several guerilla forces operating on Samar and the general command was not unified General MacArthur stepped in. The reason was apparent—guerillas began mistrusting each other.

A Colonel Ruperto K. Kangledon was unifying guerilla forces on Leyte, and late in 1943 he dispatched Lieutenant Col. Causing, his chief of staff, to Samar to try and contact forces in an attempt to unify guerillas, both on Samar and Leyte.

Merritt distrusted Kangleon. And he was advised by Colonel Mercario Peralta, 4th Philippine Corps commander, to refuse Causing's weakness and his love for peace and normality in this time of war.

In refusing Causing, Merritt charged:

1-13-45

Kangleon surrendered to the Japanese.

Kangleon had no authority from General MacArthur.

Kangleon promoted underserving people to high rank.

That Merritt's guerillas were organized prior to Kangleon.

Kangleon was appointed Leyte commander. He and Merritt have not spoken to each other since. Kangleon at present has offices in Leyte

The Negro fought his war in the north. He isolated himself, and while in bitter struggle, continued civil improvements. He was lord over what he surveyed, a deadly fighter, a scholar, a protector of the largest individual area on the island.

Tan Yanks Aid Russian Supply Keep Roads Open

Philadelphia Tribune 1-13-45

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the Philadelphia Tribune and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

ON THE RUSSIAN SUPPLY ROUTE, IRAN — By Courier, Delayed—One of the most important tasks handled by American troops here on the Russian supply route is that of maintaining the highways. As part of the maintenance force engaged in doing this work, the 352nd General Service Engineer Regiment has discharged its duties faithfully. 1-13-45

These Tan Yanks have been on the job for over 18 months in the most rugged areas of the Persian Gulf Command. They have crushed and hauled gravel, blacktopped road, handled road equipment, driven trucks and pulled guard duty in a merciless heat that often caused the thermometer to soar to 170 degrees. This heat, plus the ravages of dysentery, malaria, and sandfly fever, which beset them during their earlier days here in the Command, drank deep of the vitality of these "pick and shovel commandos" and today some of them look aged far beyond their years.

Two of the better GI construction engineers and supervisiors of maintenance crews are: Sgt. Harold Beard, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Ollie Christian, of Columbia, Mo., who are quite adept at the mechanics of maintaining roads under such severe climatic conditions. 1-13-45

Holding the responsibilities of First Sgts. are: Robert L. Griffin, of Augusta, Ga., Marvin C. Bridgeforth, Chicago, Illinois, David R. Hilton, Winston-Salem, N. C. Milton L. Tucker, Newport News, Va., and Huey Foster, also of Chicago, and Albert Johnson, of La Grange, Ga.

Others "sweating out" the tough grind of these labor battalions are: Staff Sgts. William Peace, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Owen White, Richmond, Ky., and Robert Pearley, of Liberty, Mo.; Cpls. Robert Ratliff, Mesa, Ariz., Marvin Heard, Pittsburgh, Pa., and James L. Hooper, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Techs. 5th Gr. Reuben Vaughn, Detroit, Michigan, GEORGE F. NELSON, Philadelphia, Pa., Forrest Jones Clarkesville, Texas, Henry Allen, Oakdale, La., and Curtis Jackson, of Okmulgee, Okla.; Pfcs. Joe Mitchell, Pittsburgh, Pa., Samuel Mathes, Colbert, Okla., Nathaniel Austin, Palatka, Fla., Joseph Holmes, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Billy Myers, of St. Louis, Mo.; and Pvts. Jacob Thompson, Chicago, Illinois, Harold Augusta, St. Louis, Mo., and Thomatra N. Scott, of Meridian, Miss.

Negro Engineers Help Spearhead Jap Attack

Philadelphia Tribune 1-13-45

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the Philadelphia Tribune and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE ISLAND, PHILIPPINES, By Courier—(Delayed)—In determined defensive action which saw enemy troops hurled into confusion and finally annihilated, colored engineers help form the spearhead that thwarted the Japanese two-prong attempt on the American airstrip at San Pablo, Leyte.

By delivering the coup de grace to Japanese arms in the Pablo sector, these colored troops become the first to engage the enemy in ground action in the campaign to liberate the Philippines. 1-13-45

For two days elements of the two engineer battalions helped herd the enemy into a pocket of annihilation. They had secured their position and taken the offensive when infantry troops arrived and completely routed so-called "prize troops" from General Sasaku Suzuli's 35th Army.

During the quiet, early hours of December 7, enemy transports flying low made the sneak pass, loosing an estimated two hundred and fifty paratroopers. Simultaneously, enemy ground troops were infiltrating in from the west. From all indications the two arms were to brush aside what opposition was met and centrate attack on the airter concentrated troops strip.

Alerts rent the air before dawn on the third anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Baleful orange flames from the mouths of antiaircraft artillery and red tracers reveal enough light to show up Japanese troops floating lazily to the ground.

Three soldiers, T-5 William R. McCall of Detroit; T-4 Winzer Alston, Jr.; and T-5 Charles Mumford of Baltimore, were working near the strip when they recognized the enemy aircraft. Grabbing up rifles they rushed to a white depot unit that was then forming a defense perimeter. The three Negro soldiers fought alongside the whites all night.

Although most of the Negro action was confined to the infiltrating enemy ground troops, several manned anti-aircraft guns during the sky invasion. Using a water cooled .50 cal. ma

Leon Wilburn, of Berwyn, Pennsylvania; and Cpl. Milton Piggins, of Cumberland, Maryland, were officially credited with helping down one transport, assists on two probables, and killing a paratrooper.

Pennsylvanians in the group are T-SGT. HUGH SMITH, of Philadelphia; PVT. WILLIAM R. RUMSEY, of Chester, and Capt. E. J. Bonner, of Freeline.

Tan Yanks Paid Most for Life-a-Mile Ledo Road

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

WASHINGTON.

For every mile of the 1044-mile Ledo Road, whose construction has been hailed as the greatest engineering feat of the United States Army, there is the grave of an American soldier, the War Department declared in a report on March 5. 9-10-45

That colored soldiers paid the greatest price is admitted inasmuch as 65 per cent of the more than 15,000 soldiers used in the work were colored troops of the U.S. Services of Supply who constantly faced Jap snipers, malaria, mud and continuous rain.

The work was begun at Ledo in December, 1942, by a detachment of the 823rd General Service Engineer Regiment, and the convoy was led into China by a colored driver, T/5 Richard Barnett of York, S.C., the statement revealed. Moreover, it added, the Tan Yanks supervised the thousands of natives used on the project

Men From Texas, Miss. And La. Included In Co.

Informer Houston, Texas

By CHARLES H. LOEB

4-14-45

Informer-NNPA War Correspondent

Copyright Reproduction Prohibited

MANILA.—The greatest pride of the 610 Port Company is in the fact that they are commanded by Negro officers, some of whom rose from privates to their present ranks. It is for these men that they won the reputation for efficiency, and tenacity that stamps them one of the best Port Companies in the Southwest Pacific.

Included in this company are 26 Texans, 4 Louisianians and 8 Mississippians.

S-Sgt. Isaac Campbell, Jr., Orange Texas, will proudly display War Department General Order No. 21, citing elements of the Papuan forces for a little affair at Port Moresby, May 6, 1943. 4-14-45

Among the enlisted men in this great company are:

Texas: S-Sgt. Quinus Caldwell, Texarkana; S-Sgt. Issac Campbell, Jr., Orange; S-Sgt. Mack Luster, McKinney; S-Sgt. R. L. Rish, Di-Boll Sgt. O. D. Bigbow, High; Sgt. William Gill, Beasay; T-4 Edward C. Epps, Linden; T-4 Alvin T. Johnson, Texas City; T-4 Herod B. Ward, Crockett; Cpl. Phillip Dickie, Huntsville; Cpl. James L. Durant, Jr., Beaumont; T-5 Clinton Armstrong, Quinlan; T-5 Anthony Bradley, Texas City; T-5 James Burroughs, Houston; T-5 Willie J. Gardner, Atlas; T-5 Clarkson Hicks, Powderly; T-5 C. T. James, Atlanta; T-5 Oscar Porter, Gonzales; T-5 Jesse P. Powers, Rusk; T-5 N. E. Tims, Douglas; T-5 Walter B. Worthington, Dallas; Pfc. Twilver Briscoe, Beaumont; Pfc. Thelma Gibson, Garrison; Pfc. George Russell, Denison Pfc. Thomas Watson, Jefferson; and Pfc. Garfield Lafond, Flatonia.

Louisiana—Pfc. Herman Language, New Orleans; Pfc. Arthur Dandridge, McCall; Pfc. Frank Johnson, and Pfc. James Dunn, New Orleans. 4-14-45

Mississippi—T-5 George Ervin, Raymond; T-5 Leroy Jones, Crosby; T-5 Lemon T. Liddell, Schlater; T-5 Charles Porter, Woodville; T-5 Leon Smith, Eathehart Pfc. Leroy W. Dunbar, Natchez; Pfc. Chester Gates, Houston; and Pfc. Othel Flowers, Greenwood.

Below me, straining and tugging at the cargo, are the ebony, sweat-drenched bodies of the men who are writing a new chapter in the "Battle for the Philippines." They are the members of this company whose prowess with machine and gun and rifle will never win them citations; who will probably never sport the Bronze Star on their jaunty dress uniforms, but whose straining muscles are evoking more heartfelt prayers of thanksgiving than did the triumphant entry of our fighting forces.

It has been the same story for these Brown Yanks since the day their outfit was first activated in Oakland, California back in July, 1941. It was the same story in Brisbane, in Mt. Isa. in Port Moresby, in Finchhaven, and in Hollandia—a story of sweat and toil around the clock in the tropic inferno that saps the strength of body and mind alike.

Disconsolate—? Hell no! Not these men. They know the importance of their job, and moreover, are cockily confident that nobody else in the world can do it better—or faster! All doubters are invited to check Army records of the astounding tonnages piled up by Negro port companies under the most adverse conditions, and often under enemy bombing and strafing. 4-14-45

The men of the 610th are proud that they came into the Philippines on D-Day. They were in the vanguard of the first convoy to hit Leyte, and the trip was not without its peril and excitement The men tell how Jap-launched torpedoes narrowly missed their ship, crashing into another, cutting it in half—how they hit the beach with our fighting troops.

United Nations. In fact, a movement is presently under way to permit Italy self-government as soon as the European War comes to a close and to just forget that Italy was an active member of the vicious combine that plunged the whole world into war.

Journal & Guide Va. Norfolk, Va.

NAVY RADIOMEN—Heavy radio message traffic is no problem for these technicians at a Naval Air Station in Hawaii. Seaman First Class Roosevelt Smith of Jackson, Miss. adjusts the controls while Radio Technician Third Class Joseph E. Lacey of San Francisco, Calif. manns the plugs and Radioman First Class John E. Hendrix of Winston-Salem, N. C., passes the messages to Seaman First Class Jesse Smith of Philadelphia, Pa. —(Official U. S. Navy Photo)

93rd Division To See Combat Soon, Says MacArthur

Chicago Defender 3-10-45

MANILA. — Rumors that the all-Negro 93rd Infantry Division now stationed in the Pacific theatre, would be changed from combat to service status were scotched this week by no less an authority than General of the Army Douglas MacArthur himself.

In an exclusive interview with Walter White, Chicago Defender columnist and N. Y. Post war correspondent, the commanding general in the Philippines asserted: "The 93rd Division is and will remain a combat division and will be used as such as circumstances warrant. 3-10-45

"Race or color have nothing whatever to do with failure to use this division to date. Lack of ships, among other circumstances, has prevented us from moving the 93rd and several other divisions to forward areas. We hope to remedy that soon," MacArthur explained.

The 93rd was the first all-Negro division to be activated in World War II. It was set up at Fort Huachuca soon after the United States entered the war and the men underwent rigorous maneuvers in Louisiana before being sent overseas.

Stationed first in New Guinea when they left the country nearly two years ago, a portion of the division was recently sent to the Dutch East Indies. The 92nd, activated the following year at Camp Atturbury, Ind., and Fort McClellan, Ala., and later sent to Huachuca, is now fighting with General Mark Clark's Fifth Army in Italy.

Lynn Reveals Army Not Bad

Afro-American

Fought Induction in 1942 Over Jim Crow

Baltimore, Md.

SERVED 19 MONTHS

Feels His Protests Resulted in Change

11-24-45

By RICHARD DIER

NEW YORK—"It's very hard to be patriotic in the Army when you're segregated," Sgt. Winfred W. Lynn, who fought induction because he objected to the draft's jim crow system back in 1942, told AFRO in an exclusive interview this week. "The other men in my outfit felt the same way about it."

Lynn was honorably discharged from the service last month after serving overseas with the 721st Medical Sanitary Co. for 19 months in the South Pacific.

"I found out that the Army wasnt half as bad for me as I expected because all the men with me knew of my case and were watching out for any persecution. The Army knew that The Lynn Committee to Abolish Segrgation in the Armed Forces back home in the States would raise hell if they'd tried anything."

Officer Was Careful

He feels that because he joined, the commanding officer in his company was a little more careful in his relations with colored personnel; and that his presence was of some help to them. 11-24-45

In June, 1942, Lynn wrote a letter to his draft board, Local 261, Jamaica, Queens, refusing to serve in a segregated Army. He later went to jail rather than join.

It was only after he was informed by the court that he could not beat the issue legally until he submitted to the draft that he went into the Army on Dec. 19th after serving 13 days in jail. In the Army, he continued the fight against discrimination.

He was sent to various camps, and from there overseas to Milne Bay, New Guinea, and Manila.

Didn't Mind Fighting

"I didn't mind fighting as long as I wasn't fighting in a segregated Army," he pointed out to the AFRO. "That's the reason why I objected to being drafted."

However, all efforts to convince the courts about this failed despite the fact that a proviso to the draft act states that "there shall be no segregation in the Armed Forces or in the manner of selection."

The American Civil Liberties Union went to bat for him and a committee in his honor was established, The Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces.

"My brother, Conrad, an attorney, told me that if I went into the Army, I could prove segregation and fight it, but if I didn't go in, I couldn't do anything about it," he explained.

His first proof came when he was placed in all-colored outfit.

Fights USO Jim Crow

"On several occasions, whenever I was segregated, I fought it right then and there," Lynn continued. "In Gadsden, Alabama, I went into a USO and they told me colored weren't allowed. I said I was under the impression that the USO's were for all men in uniform. 11-24-45

"I was the only colored serviceman there, but some white soldiers took my part and told the USO director I was right. So I was allowed to stay without further trouble."

During his basic training at Camp Sibert, Ala., he objected to riding in a jim crow government bus marked, "colored." He promptly went to the commanding officer of the Chemical Warfare Department and voiced his objections.

The officer almost blew into the ceiling. Lynn returned to Camp where his corporal and sergeant told him he would get into trouble if he persisted in his action.

"Advised" By Officer

Three days later, a second lieutenant came to see him and asked him if he wanted to go to Officers' Candidate School and from there into Chemical Warfare, since he was considered good Army material. He also told him it would be a good idea to abolish the Lynn Committee back home.

Sgt. Lynn told the officer he had nothing to do with forming the Committee and couldn't abolish it; also, that he knew he was right and even if he couldn't accomplish what he wanted, he was at least breaking ground for others to follow."

"I told him that if you want to walk a thousand miles, you have to start by taking the first step . . . and I was taking it."

Lynn said he was glad he went into the Army because he got a chance to fight discrimination and see first-hand what harm it could do.

High-Ups Sponsor Jim Crow

"I found out that it's the policy of the high-ups to enforce segregation because the common soldier like my self rarely thinks of it. When I returned from overseas, there was no segregation whatsoever on the ship. The matter was never once brought up by white soldiers.

"They didn't seem to mind it, because if they did, they certainly would have said something. Even on the train coming from San Francisco to New York, I had no trouble.

"In my berth, another colored soldier slept in the upper and a white soldier and myself occupied the lower. All the way home we travelled that way without the slightest friction.

"We didn't encounter any segregation until we reached Fort Dix —and then we knew we really were back in the U.S."

Single and 39

Sgt. Lynn is 39, single, and lives with his sister at 240 Manhattan Avenue, N.Y. He was formerly in business for himself as a landscape gardener and intends to go back to this line.

Asked how he felt about being a civilian again, he replied:

"I'm very happy to be out of the Army. You know, it's very hard to be a man and be in the Army . . . especially an officer."

Troops Attached to 75 Service Outfits

The Afro American

Baltimore, Md.

Move Into Nip Capital for First Time; MP's Patroling Dock Area

12-15-45

By VINCENT TUBBS
AFRO Foreign Correspondent

(Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.)

TOKYO (By Cable)—Gen. Robert Eichelberger's Eighth Army Headquarters revealed this week that colored troops assigned or attached to occupation forces in the Tokyo-Yokohama area number 14,866 men in 75 different organizations.

The units are all of the Service Forces and are of five types, breaking down into 17 specialized groups. The types are engineers, ordnance, signal corps construction, port and quartermaster. 12-15-45

The specialized group includes firefighters, aviation engineers, dump truck, water supply, amphibious truck, railhead, laundry, bakery, gas and heavy signal construction units.

Scattered throughout dozens of small villages between Tokyo and Yokohama, the men have billets at Tachikawa, Haneda, Otaru, Yokosuka, Aomori, Ichikawa, Sapporo, Asahigawa and some live like occupation troops should, while others do not.

Many on Japanese Islands

The above figure does not include all of the colored troops in the Japanese area. There are thousands of others with the Sixth Army and Fifth Amphibious Corps located on other Japanese islands. Figures on these will be released later.

Most observers, including many high officers of the Eighth Army, were startled to learn that so many colored soldiers are here in a single sector.

Significantly this correspondent observed the recent movement of at least three units into Tokyo, which heretofore has not sheltered colored American soldiers. At one dock area provincialized military police are colored.

Col. W. A. Metcalfe, in charge of the Tokyo post exchange, states that the greatest demand for Japanese Kimonas has come from colored soldiers.

He said that in an effort to give the garments a more practical rather than a souvenir value, consideration is being given the idea of making revolutionary changes in the design of kimonas.

Garments to Become "Zooted"

"Padded shoulders would replace sloping ones and tight waists instead of the back effect may see kimonas become "zooted" largely because Tan Yanks are buying them in such large quantities.

Men Alerted for Trip Home

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Names Removed from List at Last Minute

MORALE IS LOW

Commander Blamed for Voyage Refusal

By THOMAS E. WATSON

MANILA, P.I.—Six hundred and thirty-seven colored troops and officers, ready for shipment back to the United States, stood by Friday and saw their names cancelled from the shipping lists after they had been officially entered. They learned that the reason was their race. 12-8-45

Up until then, the 21st Replacement depot has shipped out thousands of troops headed for discharge without regard to race or religion. The depot commander has administered all out-going and incoming personnel alike.

"While the men were getting ready to load onto trucks en route to Base "M" and shipment to the United States with the 37th Division, I received a telephone call from the Replacement command that simply said:

'You know the 37th Division commander won't take any colored troops.' So there was nothing else for me to do but issue an order to have them taken from the list."

Came From Command

Lt. Col. A. F. Solomon, executive officer of the 21st Replacement depot, when asked who gave him the order, said: "I don't know. It just came from replacement command."

Col. Solomon further stated: "I know that no matter what we do now to expedite the quick shipment of these men, the damage has already been done. As soldiers, they have been humiliated beyond repair. 12-8-45

"But they'll be on the very next ship allotted to this depot. That's all I can do. As a matter of fact, they will all be out of here within the next 48 hours on the S.S. Catron."

If that is actually the case, the men will arrive in the United States days ahead of the ship they were originally scheduled to sail on.

The 634 enlisted men and three officers were listed on shipment order number 279, dated 21 Nov., by the 21st Replacement depot.

Story Given Straight

The story was given to them straight from the beginning: "Major General Robert S. Beightler, commander of the 37th Division, refuses to take colored troops on the same ships with his men."

The 37th Division, now shipping home from Lingayen Gulf, has been allotted several Dutch ships for its exclusive use. However, when there is room left for other troops, the division notifies Replacement command, AFWESPAC, and they in turn pass the quota on to the 21st Replacement depot.

Such a quota was sent down a few days ago, but without the intended stipulation that only white personnel would be acceptable to the division commander. Consequently, the 21st commander made up the shipping list with his usual disregard for racial differences.

The result was that 637 colored troops and about 300 white troops appeared together indiscriminately on Special Order number 279.

Remove Colored From List

When the "anonymous" telephone call came, the Army regulation that says all troops must be designated by race and religion, made it possible for the staff to go through the orders and draw a pencil line through each name with a big, capital "N" after it.

Among the troops involved were:

Lts. Mervin O. Parker, Baltimore, Md.; Neil J. Gibson, Brooklyn, N.Y., and William M. Driggins; S/Sgt. Vincent Ringo, Camden, N.J.; Sgt. Marcus Boatwright, Newark, N.J.; Pfc. Benjamin Barnes, Newark, N.J.; Pfc. Arthur Fortune Jr., Asbury Park, N.J.; Pfc. Lucish Murray, Newark, N.J.; Pfc. Russell Williams, Montclair, N.J.; Pvt. Ralph C. Wilkinson, Atlantic City, N.J.;

Staff Sgt. Neva R. Jackson, Chesterfield, S.C.; S/Sgt. Walter J. Moses, Sumter, S.C.; T/5 Roosevelt Hemphill, Rock Hill, S.C.; Pfc. James H. Robinson, Florence, S.C.; Pfc. C. T. Wilson, Laurens, S.C; Privates Samuel E. Anderson, Hartsville, S. C.; James D. Byrd, Clinton, S.C.; Willis M. Dickerson, Jamestown, S. C., and Frank Suber, Clinton, S.C.

According to present schedules, all of the officers and enlisted men involved will be home by Christmas or sooner.

Downs Planes

UNIT FIRED LAST SHOT IN WAR II

11-24-45

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

OKINAWA—Confirmation of the claim of the 503rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion gives this Negro organization the distinction of having shot down the last two Japanese planes destroyed by land-based anti-aircraft artillery in World War II, the War Department reported this week.

This claim was based upon the two kills made by Batteries C and D of the 503rd on the morning of August 6, 1945. Records from higher headquarters established that no other Japanese planes were shot down by land-based anti-aircraft after that date.

At about 2 A. M., August 6, the anti-aircraft on Okinawa was alerted to the approach of enemy aircraft. At 2:32 A. M., Battery D, commanded by Capt. William R. Bulloch of Lakewood, Ohio, picked up on its Radar an enemy flight previously unreported. The four 90-mm guns of the battery opened up at extreme range and the Japanese plane went out of control immediately and crashed into the sea in flames about 9,000 yards off-shore.

KNOCKED INTO SEA

One minute later, Battery C, commanded by Capt. Charles K. Woltz of Salem, Va., picked up another flight headed in from the opposite direction and immediately opened fire. Five rounds burst around the target and the last Japanese plane destroyed by anti-aircraft in the Pacific disappeared into the East China Sea, off Okinawa.

The battalion is commanded by Lieut. Col. Lawrence H. Calloway of Chattanooga, Tenn. Following is a list of key personnel of the batteries credited with the kills:

BATTERY C MEMBERS

Battery Commander—Capt. Charles K. Woltz, Salem, Va.; executive officer, First Lieut. K. B. Nicholson, Marion, Iowa; range officer, First Lieut. D. L. Brady, New York, N. Y.; assistant executive officer, John S. Cholewinski, Brooklyn, N. Y.; gun commanders, S/Sgt. Glanville F. Riley, Rochester, N. Y.; Sgt. Arthur McAfee Jr., Gadsden, Alabama; S/Sgt. Burl Simpson, Palmer, Tex.; Sgt. Willie J. Verrett, Houma, La.

Range Section—S/Sgt. Alfred C. Garrett, New York, N. Y.; T/3 Grade William Singleton Jr., Montgomery, Ala.; Sgt. Harry E. Matthews, New York, N. Y.; S/Sgt. Boyd J. Loving, New York, N. Y.; S/Sgt. Theary Moore, Ruleville, Miss.; Sgt. Early Mayweather Jr., Shreveport, La.; T/4 Grade George Falgout, New Iberia; T/4 Grade Thomas W. Heard, Elberton, Ga.; T/4 Grade Lincoln Harper, Atlanta, Ga.; Corp. McHenry Johnson, Atlanta, Ga.; T/4 Grade James A. Hunt Jr., Iaeger, W. Va. 11-24-45

BATTERY D MEMBERS

Battery Commander, Capt. William R. Bulloch, Lakewood, Ohio; executive officer, First Lieut. Maurice J. Cahill, Bronx, N. Y.; range officer, First Lieut. Leonard B. Main, Natick, Mass.; assistant executive officer, First Lieut. Edward P. Prosser, McComb, Miss.; gun commanders, Sgt. Walter H. Nails, Philadelphia, Pa.; S/Sgt. Anderson Hardin, Nashville, Tenn.; Sgt. Judge Blair, Atlanta, Ga.; S/Sgt. Walter H. Oram, New York, N. Y.; range section, S/Sgt. John W. Burton, New York; Sgt. Charles A. Foster, Sgt. Henderson F. Williamson, New York, N. Y.; T/4 Grade John T. Sonait, New Orleans, La.; S/Sgt. Gerard B. Verdun, Franklin, La.; First Sgt. Jessie W. King, New York, N. Y.

Help Herd Enemy Into Pocket Of Final Annihilation

Memphis World 1-12-45 Tenn.

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World And NNPA
(Copyright — Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE ISLAND, PHILIPPINES, By Courier — (Delayed) — In determined defensive action which saw enemy troops hurled into confusion and finally annihilated, colored engineers helped from the spearhead that thwarted the Japanese two-prong attempt on the American airstrip at San Pablo, Leyte.

By delivering the coup de grace to Japanese arms in the Pablo sector these colored troops became the first to engage the enemy in ground action in the campaign to liberate the Philippines.

For two days elements of two engineer battalions help herd the enemy into a pocket of annihilation. They had secured their position and taken the offensive when infantry troops arrived and completely routed so-called "prize troops" from Lt General Sasaku Suzuli's 35th Army. 1-12-45

TRANSPORTS IN SNEAK PASS

During the quiet early hours of December 7, enemy transports flying low made the sneak pass, loosing an estimated two hundred and fifty paratroopers. Simultaneous, enemy ground troops were infiltrating in from the west. From all directions the two arms were to brush aside what opposition was met and center concentrated attack on the airstrip. 1-12-45

Alerts rented the air before dawn on the third anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Baleful orange flames from the mouths of antiaircraft artillery and red tracers reveal enough light to show up Japanese troops floating lazily to the ground.

Three soldiers, T-5 William R. McCall, of Detroit; T-4 Winzer Alston, Jr.; and T-5 Charles Mumford of Baltimore, were working near the strip when they recognized the enemy aircraft. Grabbing up rifles they rushed to a white depot unit that was then forming a defense perimeter. The three Negro soldiers fought alongside the ammunition and medical supplies to the avenging Americans. Out in the Bay, swarming about like bees were big amphibious trucks manned by members of the Negro 720 Amphibian Truck Co. Working with another Negro outfit, the 218th Port Truck Co., these men are again proving their mettle under fire and making heroic and otherwise unglamorous job. 3-6-45

Among the personnel of these groups were: Pvt. Joseph Leonard New Orleans, La. 7/5 Everett Payne, Washington, D. C., Cpl. Williard Bonner, Pitsburgh, Penna., T/4 Eddie Wilkins, Norfolk, Va., Cpl. Walter Lane, Philadelphia, Pa., Pvt. William H. Harris, Baltimore, Md., and 1st Sergeant E. F. Cannon, Houston, Texas.

Builder Of Ledo Is Leader

Informer Press 2-10-45 Houston, Texas

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
(Informer, NNPA War Correspondent)
Copyright, Reproduction prohibited

KUMMING, China. (by Wireless February 5)—Led by Brigadier General Lewis A. Pick, builder of the Ledo Road, a convoy numbering 113 vehicles, including trucks, jeeps, wagon carriers and mobile artillery, with a personnel of 372, arrived in Kumming, China, February 5. It was the first overland convoy via the Burma Road in two and a half years. The trip required 23 days through jungles and over the towering Himalayas.

In the convoy were ten tan yanks, Sgt. George Butler, Brooklyn; Harold Lopez, New York City; T/5 Otha Adams, Sheridan, Ark.; James Allison, Louisville, Ky.; Richard Burnett, York, S. C.; Wilbur Miller, Tupelo, Miss.; Edgar Moore, Dodge City, Kansas; and Cpl. Otis Moore, Smyrn, S. C. There were also two Negro war correspondents, Deton Brooks of the Chicago Defender, and this scribe.

Though they were the first Negroes to enter China on such a mission, these drivers gave an excellent account of themselves on the toughest highway in the world. 2-10-45

Members of the convoy were personally welcomed by General Lung Yun, governor of Yunnan Province.

General Pick, in a stirring address, praised the Allied efforts responsible for clearing out the Japanese and building the road. He then turned the convoy over to Major General Gilbert X. Cheves, commander of the service of supply in this area.

Bedecked With Finery

The Chinese city was bedecked in typical magnificent Chinese finery. Crowds waved flags and banners bearing the label, "Welcome" greeted the first convoy on Tillwell road. The crowd shot fire crackers and offered fruit and flowers to the Americans as the colorful procession moved through the town.

Gratitude was expressed on the faces of all the natives, who showed a keen interest in the tan yanks, as it was the first time that many of them had seen Negroes.

One young girl, evidently well acquainted with a popular brand of cigarette slogan, while viewing the procession, was heard to remark as several drivers passed by that "Something New has been added." At the same time she gave driver Allison of Louisville, Ky., a most welcome smile.

All along the route, Chinese hospitality was most generous and evident; our GIs enjoyed it immensely. During the entire trip the tan yanks were treated the same as white soldiers, both by the convoy personnel and natives, who were unanimous in stating that the first convoy to China was the biggest event in the history of this theatre. There will be other convoys following this one.

A Former Globe Democrat Man Tells Of Heroism Of St. Louisans Fighting Japs

St. Louis Globe Dem. Mo. 4-6-45

Boldness and Skill Gave Foothold

IWO JIMA (Delayed) — This company of Negro soldiers accomplished unbelievable things, but what they did that marines on Iwo Jima will never forget is to land artillery on D-Day when the big guns were the difference between taking the island or getting off it.

Japanese on Mount Suribachi were raking the beaches and moving their range inland occasionally to plaster Marine units trying to dig in before nightfall of D-Day. There was no Marine artillery ashore yet. Machine guns were no match for mortars and heavier Japanese guns. Men inching up the steep inclines of Iwo's terraced beaches kept their heads down and wondered: when will our guns get in—when will we start to answer these barrages? 4-6-45

Early in the afternoon this Negro amphibious truck company, a U. S. Army unit attached to the Fifth Amphibious Corps, started inland in 50 bobbing, swaying "ducks" (amphibious trucks), bringing with them 105mm. howitzers—the guns that have since swept the four miles of Iwo with salvo after salvo.

When the Negro boys finished, 48 hours later, they had lost 29 out of their 50 ducks, but the guns were emplaced and doing full-time work. In the face of huge odds, only two guns were lost.

Their story was told by their commanding officer as he squatted in front of his sandbag-covered foxhole a few yards from the beach whose hazards of high surf and mortar fire they had licked. He was Army Capt. William Duryea, of Suffern, N. Y. Next to him stood a platoon leader, Army First Lt. Grover Groves, of 2152 Stacia Way, Sacramento, Calif. These men had deep pride in their eyes. You understood this pride when you heard the story of their men.

"Iwo Jima is tenable only to that force which has artillery ashore," the captain said. "We knew days before the assault that progress of Marine striking forces would hinge in many ways on whether their own artillery could give them the support they needed—both near the airfields and on the slopes of Mount Suribachi. We told our men that the 105's in their care were precious cargo—they could mean keeping or losing a foothold on the beach. They did the rest." 4-6-45

"We expected loyalty of men to vehicles, but not like it turned out. Drivers kept their sinking ducks afloat until the last second before going under, when craft. Sometimes they were fished out, half-drowned themselves, by sailors who were luckily in the area. One man, Francis Goodrich, Army technician fifth grand, ran out of gas, refused to abandon his duck and gun, and was swept 13 miles out to sea, where he was picked up by a destroyer. He was missing for 13 hours. We gave him up for lost, but he finally came in and, although exhausted, remained in action. That night his gun helped repel a Japanese counterattack.

St. Louisans Outstanding 4-6-45

"We knew speed was everything. One hour after we hit the beach with these guns—and enemy fire kept us from landing again and again—our guns were set up and we had brought in ammunition for them to start firing. The marines sometimes yelled at our drives up around Mount Suribachi to jump off their ducks and take cover. The drivers had to stand up, exposed, to unharness the howitzers. The Gyrenes thought we were crazy, we figured if they could land on this place we could give them the stuff to make the landing stick." 4-6-45

By now it is known that the landing has "stuck." It is impossible to list all the boys whose ducks carried guns in during the hectic hours of D-Day. Anyway, they aren't asking for credit, they'll take a little rest, instead.

Three of them are from the St. Louis (Mo.) area. They are Army Privates Calvin C. Davis of 3432 Bell avenue and Edward Turner of 3304 Hickory street, St. Louis, and Technician Fifth Grade Fred L. Watson of 22 North 14th street, East St. Louis, Ill. 4-6-45

They are all dug in, now, on the fringe of beach near Iwo's southern end. At night they hear the thunder of the 105's they brought in. They grew fond of those big fellows. Anyone ashore on Iwo that first day grew fond of them.

People aren't running around tossing salutes and backslaps at them as long as they remember Iwo Jima, and that will be pretty close to always.

But the marines are grateful to the company of Negro boys. 4-6-45

Ten Negro Drivers, Two Correspondents Make Lengthy Trip

Memphis World Tenn.

2-9-45

BY FRANK E. BOLDEN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

KUMMING, China, — (Wireless) — February 5 — Led by Brigadier General Lewis A. Pick, builder of Ledo Road, a convoy numbering 113 vehicles including trucks, jeeps, weapon carriers and mobile artillery, with a personnel of 372, arrived in Kumming, China, February 5. It was the first overland convoy via the Burma Road in two and a half years. The trip required 23-days through jungles and over the towering Himalayas.

2-9-45

In the convoy were ten Tan Yanks—Sergeants George Butler, of Brooklyn, and Harold Lopez, New York City; Technician Fifth Grade Otha Adams, Sherida, Arkansas; James Allison, Louisville, Kentucky; Richard Barnett, York, S. C.; Wilbur Miller, Tupelo, Miss.; Edgar Moore, Dodge City, Kansas; and Corporal Otis Moore, Smyrna, S. C. There were also two Negro war correspondents, Denton Brooks, of the Chicago Defender, and this Scribe.

EXCELLENT ACCOUNT

Though they were the first Negroes to enter China on such a mission, these drivers gave an excellent account of themselves on the toughest highway in the world.

Members of the convoy were personally welcomed by General Lung Yun, governor of Yunman Province.

General Pick, in a stirring address praised the Allied efforts responsible for clearing out the Japanese and building the road. He then turned the convoy over to Major General Gilbert X. Cheves, commander of the service of supply in this area.

The Chinese city was bedecked in typical magnificent Chinese finery. Crowds waved flags and banners bearing the label "welcome" greeted the first convoy on Stillwell Road. The crowd shot fire crackers and offered fruit and flowers to the Americans as the colorful procession moved through the town. Gratitude was expressed on the faces of all the natives, who showed a keen interest in the Tan Yanks, as it was the first time that many of them had ever seen Negroes.

WELCOME SMILES

One young girl, evidently well acquainted with a popular brand cigarett slogan while viewing the procession was heard to remark as several drivers passed on that "something new has been added," at the same time she gave Driver Allison of Louisville, Ky., a most welcome smile. All along the route, Chinese hospitality was most generous and evident, and our GI's enjoyed it immensely.

2-9-45

During the entire journey the Tan Yanks were treated the same as white soldiers, both by the convoy personnel and natives, who were unanimous in stating that the first convoy to China was the biggest event in the history of this theatre. There will be other convoys following this one.

73 Negroes sentenced for mutiny

Los Angeles Tribune Calif.

2-10-45

U. S. Army court-martials have sentenced 73 Negro soldiers to prison terms ranging from 8 to 30 years at hard labor for their part in a mass mutiny at an American air base on Oahu Island last July, it was reported Feb. 1 by the United Press from Honolulu.

Another accused mutineer was convicted but is waiting retrial after a review of his case by Major General Henry T. Burgin, commander of the Central Pacific base command, the U.P. said. It did not specify whether all involved were Negroes.

The convicted men were sentenced after two extensive court-martials, the first mutiny trials held in this area since the start of the war. 2-12-45

The men, whose names were not disclosed, were members of company E, 1320th engineers, general service regiment. They were convicted of refusing to obey orders of their superior officers to report for work at an airfield on the night of July 31, 1944.

Two other men who did not join in the mutiny but who were accused of aiding it, are awaiting trial, according to the news service.

Negroes on Leyte entered "hell" to save shells

Los Angeles Tribune Calif.

1-1-45 Tribune

WITH THE 96TH DIVISION (Delayed) — Negro soldiers have played an important role in the landings in the Philippines, the War Dept. revealed for the first time today. Cal.

Two members of an amphibious tractor unit attached to the 96th Division distinguished themselves by entering an ammunition dump which had caught fire and saved from destruction three huge amphibious trucks loaded with mortar and artillery shells. They were: Sergeant Clarence Jackson, Washington, D.C., and Technician Fifth Grade Samuel Bryant, New York City. 1-1-45

Private First Class David Mitchell, Philadelphia, and Sgt. Samuel Binkins, Washington, D.C., members of a Transportation Corps unit, killed a Jap sniper infesting their bivouac area. Later they narrowly escaped death when their jeep, carrying a casualty to the hospital, hit a mine, throwing them from their vehicle.

Negroes in the beach party landing in the vicinity of Dulag were warmly greeted by the Filipinos. Their admiration for them arose from the heroic deeds of a Negro guerrilla, Joe George of San Francisco, who came to the Philippines prior to the war. Marrying a Filipino woman in Tacloban, he became a popular local figure. He set up a trucking service between the towns of Dulag and Tacloban on the island of Leyte.

1-1-45

After the fall of Bataan, he used his truck to supply Filipino guerrillas operating in the hills. Captured by the Japs and sentenced to be shot, he escaped and became a local hero by carrying out daring raids on the Japs.

HAWAII TROOPS SENTENCED TO LONG TERMS

Chicago Defender Ill.

2-10-45

'Work - But - Not - Fight' Policy Of Army Brings Protests

HONOLULU, Hawaii — The U. S. army's "work-but-not-fight" policy for Negro soldiers this week brought long prison terms for 73 GIs convicted of mutiny.

Reflecting the growing bitterness of colored servicemen against the army's restriction of most Negroes to labor battalions, the court martial topped all other mutiny trials of this war in the number of defendants.

The sentences to confinement at hard labor for periods ranging from eight to 30 years were announced by the Central Pacific Base Command of the U.S. Army

Refused To Obey Orders

All soldiers involved joined on the night of July 31, 1944 in refusing to continue their jobs as common laborers on an airfield on Oahu. They were members of Company E of the 1320th Engineers, general service regiment, which is a "fancy' name for a labor battalion.

It was charged the men "refused to obey orders of their superior officers to report to a work formation on the company area at an airfield on Oahu."

Names of the soldiers convicted were not revealed Neither was the exact cause for the mutiny.

One of the leaders of the group was given 30 years, another 25 years. Three others got 20 years sentences.

Blind to Racial Differences'

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

Luzon Filipinos Fete GI's

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

2-24-45

LUZON — Indifferent to racial segregation and its significances, Filipinos continue to haunt the camp site of an engineer aviation battalion here, inviting the Tan Yanks to the homes.

However, as a result of the Filipinos' religion and family pride, romances between the American troops and the native girls are few, the girls being quick on the smile but slow on the date, the GI's complain.

The situation is attributed to incidents which occurred during the Japanese occupation, when the girls learned the stratagem of either getting quickly married to a native boy or pretending to do so.

Must Watch for Japs

Meanwhile, every member of the battalion goes about his business of repairing roads, building bridges and putting wrecked railroad lines back into service, always keeping his eyes open for Jap snipers.

In this same camp area recently, thirty Japs were killed after they infiltrated into the Tan Yanks' lines.

2-24-45

Within twelve hours after orders came for the outfit to move into the area, the camp was practically set up and regular work schedules on a "round-the-clock" basis were established.

As a result of the increasing danger of enemy infiltration and the tightening of the campaign in this sector, Chaplain J. C. Clanton of Raleigh, N.C., baptized his first Luzon convert in the waters of Lingayen Gulf.

He was Pfc. Rudolph Almeida of Providence, R.I., who accompanied by this correspondent and Pvts. Joshua Barnes of Boston and Leonard Sams of San Antonio, walked to the beach where he met the chaplain who took him fifty yards out for the baptism.

Jap Victim

5-26-45

5-26-45

CAPT. CLARENCE GRIGGS

Chicago Defender

Courageous chaplain serving with Pacific forces who was killed in action on Okinawa April 12. A native of Temple, Texas, Capt. Griggs was a graduate of Fisk university and Union Theological Seminary and resided in Schenectady, N. Y. He was commissioned in the Chaplains Corps in December, 1942.—U.S. Signal Corps photo.

ATLANTA, GA WORLD
JUNE 2, 1945

THREE HEROES OF SOUTH PACIFIC — Three members of the all-Negro 742nd Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion now in New Guinea, who were awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism displayed in saving two enlisted men from drowning in the Renee River when the 742nd was stationed in the New Hebrides. Left to right, they are: Chief Warrant Officer Laydell Buckmon, Sr., 550 Alfred Street, Detroit, Michigan; Staff Sergeant F. Harold Tinsley, 1023 Florida Avenue, N. E., Washington, D. C., and Corporal Eddie L. Brown, 1103 Willough Street, Perry, Florida. The presentation was made by Colonel G. A Chester, Acting Chief of Staff to Major General William F. Marquat, Commanding General of the 14th Antiaircraft Command. (U. S. Army photo).

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
TRIBUNE
Cir. D. 60,366 — S. 100,152
JUL 8-1945

Negro-White Clash In Pacific Told

By Thomas L. Stoke

CINCINNATI, July 7 (AP)—Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Saturday a group of marines on an important Pacific island threw hand grenades and smoke bombs into camps occupied by Negro navy men in a series of incidents that resulted in a clash.

White, who returned recently from a four-month tour of the Pacific theater, told a radio (CBS) audience that he accepted an invitation from the island commander to serve as defense counsel before a navy board of inquiry appointed to investigate the clash.

"For weeks," he related, "a few marines had been throwing bricks, empty beer bottles and, upon three occasions, hand grenades and smoke bombs into camps occupied by Negro navy men.

No Action Taken

"When no attempt was made by the authorities to stop the attacks or punish the attackers, the colored men in despair determined to defend themselves when next attacked.

"The next assault took place a few days later on Christmas eve," White said. "A group of white service men fired upon colored sailors and ran them out of the main town on the island. Shortly after midnight, a truck load of white marines went to the Negro camp charging that one of their number had been hit by a stone thrown by a Negro navy man. The marines threatened to 'take the matter into their own hands.'

"On Christmas day one Negro service man was shot and killed and another shot by white service men. These and other assaults infuriated the men who had been attacked to the point that twice they attempted to go into town to take vengeance. On one occasion they were turned back; on the second they were arrested, charged with rioting and unlawful assemblage."

Outcome Undisclosed

White did not disclose the outcome of the board of inquiry's investigation.

He said the point he wanted to make in telling of the clash was not to emphasize such happenings but "to personalize the corrosive effective of ignorance and bigotry on the progress of the war in the Pacific and at home."

He declared that the Japanese eagerly capitalize upon instances of friction between white and Negro personnel and give wide publicity among the Pacific's colored peoples to "the anti-Negro rantings of congressmen like Rankin and senators like Bilbo in filibustering a proposal to establish a fair employment practice committee."

93rd In Mop-Up Drive In Southwest Pacific

Pittsburgh Courier
6-9-45
Pgh., Pa.

By BILLY ROWE, Courier War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—(By Cable)—Together for the first time in sixteen months of overseas service, members of the Ninety-third Division are doing collective combat duty in this sector. Facing a by-passed enemy garrison of thousands of troops, the Division is sweeping up remnants of Imperial forces on two islands.

On the largest island held by the Tan Doughboys, more than 1,200 Japanese have been killed and more than 300 captured.

SPEARHEAD BIG DRIVE

Though the island is devoid of organized resistance, the Division is using every possible tactic to clear the strategic base. Last week Bougainville veterans of the outfit spearheaded the most important operation in this sector. Making history with the first all-colored amphibious landing in this theatre, the group killed forty-four Japanese and captured six, losing only one man.

6-9-45

Backed by the entire battalion in floating reserve, two assault companies hit the beach at 0600 hours. Led by Capt. Lemuel Penn, Washington, D. C., and Lieut. Mabry Gibson of Arizona, the group raced 250 yards inland. Meeting no resistance, the body established a defensive perimeter from which forces operated for nine days. During that time several landings were made up and down the coast, perfecting 1,000 yards of beachhead.

ONE YANK KILLED

Enemy forces encountered were in small groups and were killed after offering light defensive tactics. The patrol was led by S/Sgt. Robert Ruth of Baltimore and Sgt. Booker Jones of Texas. They met stiff opposition during which one Yank was killed. Later contacts by other patrols completely wiped out Japanese pockets in the section.

Among the first to hit shore were Lieuts. Charles Brown Jr. of Georgia, Andrew McDonald, Penn Julius Keller, Philadelphia; Chaplain Kenneth White, Jacksonville, Florida; T/Sgt. Wilson Burton, Mississippi; S/Sgt. George Jordan, Tennessee T/Sgt. Lemuel Venable, New Jersey and T/Sgt. Learan Anderson Texas. The operation took place on the northern end of the island where the enemy roamed in small groups for survival. Though short of food and ammunition they sold their lives dearly and proved aggressive fanatics. Some of them were husky specimens. Others were found dead because of lack of medical attention.

On the second island members of the Division ran into a greater number of Japanese. They were well led, organized and equipped. Several fire fights took place last week wit Tan Yanks fighting their way ø out of ambushes. Some thirty-eight Japanese met death while our side recorded seven wounded and two killed. Our men have beaten off several night charges when Japanese rushed in hitting the established perimeters with mortar machineguns and grenades.

6-9-45

CLEAN JAPANESE POCKETS

Among those leading the Yanks against stout resistance were Lieuts. Lafayette Belk, South Carolina; Glenn Allen, Chicago Harold Saunders, Washington, DC Frederick Smith, Boston, and William Heath, New York City. In cleaning these various Japanese pockets, members of the Division received the best collective training to date. After long months of hard and vigorous training, the Division Doughboys are in razor sharp condition and have taken on the cool nerve assurance of professional killers. According to a headquarters spokesmen members of the Division are doing a creditable job, but the future role in the stepped up war against Japan is shrouded in military secrecy. 6-9-45

Negro Marines On Okinawa

Chicago Def.
Chicago, Ill.

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.
(Defender War Correspondent)

7-7-45

TENTH ARMY AIR HDQ., Okinawa.—Tennessee-educated Benjamin P. Jacques, of 6212 Eberhart avenue, Chicago, and a staff of 23 Navy medical corpsmen are administering to the medical needs of almost 2,000 Negro Marines assigned to a huge supply depot here.

Operating in a long hospital tent equipped with cots, a pharmacy and a laboratory, Jacques, who earned his bachelor's degree from Tennessee A. and I college and is a licensed embalmer, and his staff treat an average of 150 men per day.

Only rarely is the medical officer, who covers several similar establishments, called upon outside of the one visit per day he makes to the sick bay from which the corpsmen operate.

Trained for Emergencies

In addition to handing out panaceas for heat rash, sunburn, stomachache, athlete's foot and a dozen other frequent complaints for which standardized remedies have been devised, the corpsmen are capable of meeting practically any emergency without the assistance of a qualified physician.

This is no accident. Each of the 24 men was trained at Great Lakes Naval Training Station and Camp Le Jeune, N. C., to operate in the absence of a physician or surgeon in forward areas.

At present Ph.-M 2-c Robert Hague, of Toledo, and Ph.-M 3-c Archie Hughes, 414 E. Pershing road, Chicago, are serving with Marine service detachments with the First and Sixth Divisions on the fighting front.

Relieved From Navy

These men, among the first Negroes to be relieved from the Navy to serve with the fleet Marine force, have been overseas more than a year.

Handling emergencies at the rate of one per week, they have become proficient in the treatment of gunshot wounds, fractures and skin punctures.

In less than 30 minutes after Pfc. James Price, Detroit, was brought to the sick bay last week suffering from a gunshot wound, they had cleaned the wound, administered morphine and blood plasma, controlled hemorrhage and dispatched him to a hospital in their jeep ambulance.

Group Handpicked

Pfc. Hezikiah Hopkins, who was rushed to them with a broken leg, had received emergency treatment, including anesthetizing the wound and setting the fracture with a splint and was en route to a hospital in 15 minutes.

Handpicked and highly trained, the men are capable of performing a variety of duties imperative to the welfare of men in areas such as this.

For this particular group, the staff administered all required immunization shots before they left the States and all the boosters since required.

7-7-45

Service to Islanders

Since their arrival on Okinawa on D-Day, the corpsmen have been making periodic tests of water, maintaining a vigil against malaria, giving lectures on sanitation, checking sanitary facilities, kitchens and mess halls, examining food handlers, maintaining an alert against the spread of contagious diseases and keeping a 24-hour watch for emergencies.

Serving soldiers, sailors, Marines, merchant seamen and civilians of all races connected with the military services, they have extended their service even to the Okinawans whose health is a matter of concern to the military forces because of their frequent contact with servicemen.

Many Specialists

Some of the men are specialists. PhM 2-c Frank C. Gordon, a Howard university graduate, of Washington, is a neuro-psychiatric technician; PhM 2-c Henry P. James, of Toledo, who attended Toledo university, is a pharmacist; PhM 2-c Richard Gordon, of Mansfield, Ohio, a graduate of Ohio State university, is the only lab technician and runs tests for two other sick bays, and PhM 2-c Augustine McWilliams, of Cleveland, a Tuskegee graduate, is a sanitation expert.

Other corpsmen include:

PhM 3-c Charles Alston, Raleigh, N. C.; PhM 3-c Clarence Mason, Washington; PhM 3-c Earl B. Hicks, Chicago, who attended the University of Chicago; PhM 3-c William T. Brown, Chester, Pa., graduate of Temple university; PhM 3-c Glenn Crawford, 6138 S. Aberdeen street, Chicago, Wilson Junior college graduate; PhM 2-c George Cuiellette, New Orleans, Xavier university graduate; PhM 3-c Calvin Brooks, McKeesport, Pa.;

7-14-45

H 1-c Henry B. De Joie, New Orleans, Dillard university grad; PhM 2-c T. P. Harris, Texarkana, Ark.; PhM 3-c D. C. Jackson, Mobile; PhM 3-c Herbert Freeman, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., graduate of Virginia State college; PhM 3-c Robert Larkins, Jersey City; PhM 2-c Le Marr Williams, New York City, graduate of Morehouse college; PhM 3-c B. D. Barton, Oakland, Calif.; PhM 3-c William Marshall, Birmingham; PhM 2-c J. P. Martin, Plainsfield, N. J., graduate of Virginia State college, and PhM 3-c H. B. Hardee, Ft. Worth, graduate of Prairie View State college.

93rd to Remain in Combat

Will Not Become Labor Unit

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
2-2-45

Rumor That It Would Be Broken Up Found False

By CHARLES H. LOEB
Representing the Combined Negro Press

DUTCH NEW GUINEA. — The famous 93rd Infantry Division, pride of America's millions of Negro citizens, is to retain its integrity as a combat outfit. When I reached this sprawling Army and Navy base, rumors were rampant that the troops who have proven their courage and efficiency at Bougainville and Munda, would be broken up and converted to port, transport and labor units.

To Combat Again

The rumor was given compelling foundation for your NNPA correspondent, when he saw members of the outfit unloading boats and driving heavily loaded Army trucks over the torturously winding roads of this base, many of which were hewn out of the mountainsides by Negro hands manning the most modern equipment. 2-2-45

However, during the past few days I have received assurance from highly authoratative sources that the men who have been trained to fight in combat will again travel the glory road in D-Days to come. When I later witnessed a brilliantly executed practice maneuver by a platoon of the 368th combat team, I was convinced that the 93rd will write new chapters in the conquest of Japan.

Morale High

I found morale in the 93rd of the very highest order. Much of it is due to the sterling leadership of as fine a group of Negro officers as has ever been privilege of a correspondent to meet, but top leadership has played a vital part. 2-2-45

Every GI with whom I talked was high in praise of Major General Harry Johnson, who has through this forthrightness an unqualified democracy wrough a working harmony between hi white and Negro officers tha could well set a pattern for Ame ica at home. General Johnso swear both GIs and officers, wi not tolerate the slightest sen blence of discrimination in th 93rd. Officers with "wrong att tudes" soon find themselves o the way out, and lazy officers ru into one continuous round c "unadulterated hell" from th caustic, exacting General that the soon straighten up and fly righ

The general takes pride i bringing officers from other ou fits based here to the 93rd divi ion area, where with all the prid of a doting father he shows of the spotless halls, the orderl company streets, and the aler military demeanor of the troops Many a visiting officer has bee forced to acknowledge that hi outfit "simply has to come up t scratch." 2-2-45

These jaunts of the genera make it imperative that every unit in the division remain con stantly ready for inspection, fo the general may, at the most un expected hours, dash into the camp area, with from two to 12 cars following in the wake of his jeep. 2-2-45

The general takes great pride in out-saluting the GIs who snap into conventional Army greeting on his approach. He claims that he regards saluting as a sign of alertness, and feels obligated to prove to every GI that the general too is on his toes.

Physical fitness on the part of the officers is a "must" on the General's list, and at the time of my visit to the 318th Medical battalion, every officer in the outfit was engaged in playing volleyball. White and Negro officers play together, even as they work, eat and sleep together. 2-2-45

I was considerably impressed with the quiet unassuming but firm leadership of the 318th Medics by Lt. Col. Bob Bennett, whom I am told is the only Negro C. O. of a battalion in this theater.

War correspondents are no novelty to this cocky outfit, for Fletcher Martin lived and travelled with the 93rd throughout the Bougainville and Munda campaigns but both officers and men expressed pleasure over the prospect of having their photos published in the leading Negro newspapers "back home."

Put Guns Ashore To Save Attack Of The Marines

Memphis World
Tenn

Can't Give Men Enough Credit, Writes Officer

4-13-45

SACRAMENTO, Calif.-The work of a Negro Army amphibious truck company the afternoon of D-Day on IWO Jima "made the difference between taking the island and handing it back to the Japanese" according to a letter received here by the parents of Lt. Grover I. Groves, white platoon leader of the heroic colored men.

The Negro company braved a hail of Japanese mortar and artillery fire on the IWO beach to bring in the the guns—155 mm howitzers—had failed to make the shore, U. S. forces might have been forced to withdraw from the island.

UNDER HEAVY FIRE

"I can't give enough credit to my boys," wrote Lt. Groves, "I hope there is some way everyone learns of the marvelous way these colored boys performed.

"I landed my platoon at 2 in the afternoon on D-Day. We were carrying 150 howitzers and ammunition for the marines. We were under terrific mortar and artillery fire while coming in and while on shore. 4-13-45

"The beach was too steep and too soft to get up and when we landed we struck right to the shore until a tractor could pull us up. My men stayed in their vehicles under terrific fire and get their ducks (amphibious trucks) ashore, some of the ducks so shot up they couldn't go back into the water.

SERGEANT HURT

"One of my sergeants was hurt when he was crushed between a duck and a tractor. He was trying to get wounded casualties off a beached duck. Another man stayed with his stuck duck carrying an artillery piece while everyone else was in a foxhole. I could go on and on about the men's brave conduct I am proud to belong to a colored duck company with the calibre of men that are present in this outfit."

Sgt. Larry Schulenburg, marine corps combat correspondent, wrote of Lt. Grove's outfit:

"The Marines on Iwo Jima will never forget this company of colored boys. Japs on Mt. Suribachi were raking the beaches to plaster marine units trying to dig in before nightfall of D-Day. There was no marine artillery ashore yet. Machine guns were no match for mortars and heavier Jap guns.

GUNS DELIVERED

"Then early in the afternoon this Negro outfit started inland in 50 bobbing, swaying ducks, bringing with them the 105 mm howitzers, the long-muzzled guns which since swept Iwo with salvo after salvo.

"When the colored boys finished 48 hours later they had lost 29 out of their 50 ducks, but the guns were emplaced and working. In the face of huge odds only two guns were lost. 4-13-45

"One hour after they hit the the beach the guns were set up and ammunition ready for firing. The drivers had to stand up, exposed, to unharness the howitzers. The marines thought the colored army boys were crazy, but those boys thought that if the marines could land on the place, their duck company could give them the stuff to make the landing stick."

Identify Patrol Which Captured Jap Colonel

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific Area. — The War Department today announced the names of the members of the nine-man patrol of the 93rd Infantry Division who recently flushed out of the hills of Morotai islands the highest ranking Japanese officer ever taken alive in the Southwest Pacific campaign. 8-24-45

Colonel Ouchi, commander of the remaining Japanese on Morotai, where the 93rd has been engaged in mopping-up operations was discovered and captured as he lay face down in the jungle. At least nine members of his personal guard were killed by the patrol which returned to its base without losing a man.

Names and addresses of members of the patrol follow:

Lt. Col. Jacy C. McKinnie, Box 40, Pineville, La.

Major Stanley A. Meydn, 4226 Beaver St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Major Peveril O. Settle Jr., 19 Westover Road, Fort Worth, Texas.

Capt. John T. Pierce III, Rockport, Mo.

Sgt. Alfonso Dillon, Route 2, Jackson, Tenn.

T-3 X. J. Nakanishi, 338 Second Ave., New York.

Cpl. Albert Morrison, 706 Elm St., Tampa, Fla.

Pfc. Robert Sloan, General Delivery, Clovis, N. M. 8-24-45

Pfc. Robert A. Uvanz, 3827 West St., Oakland, Cal.

Crack 477th Amphibious Truck Outfit Veteran of Four Pacific Invasions

AFRO-AMERICAN 7-14-45 Balt., Md.

By CHARLES H. LOEB
(NNPA War Correspondent)

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Easterners mentioned in this article are from the following States: New York, 11; Virginia, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey, 2 each; Maryland and North Carolina, 1 each.]

NANSEI SHOTO ISLANDS — One of the best DUWK (generally referred to as "duck") units in the Western Pacific, is the 477th Amphibious Trucking Company, which has won the unstinted praise of every command under which it has served.

Veterans of four invasions, these men participated in the D-DAY action in the campaign for the islands of Saipan, Tinian, Leyte and the Nansei Shoto group, the principal island of which is Okinawa.

This fearless group, composed of about 175 non-coms and enlisted men, commanded by five white officers, has received two commendations, a recommendation for a citation and its share of Bronze Stars and Purple Hearts.

Cited for Heroism in Fire

Outstanding man in the unit is T/Sgt. Winston C. Carmichael of Atlanta, Ga., and NYC, who received the Bronze Star for heroic action during a fire on an ammunition-loaded amphibious truck.

The prompt action of the sergeant, who happened to be on the duck when the cargo exploded, is credited with saving the ship and the personnel aboard.

Baltimore, N.Y. GIs Help

Among those who later joined Carmichael in his effort to keep the fire from spreading to other amphibious trucks loaded with ammunition were T/4 Girard Nichols, Baltimore; T/4 William Howell and Cpl. Walter Jonson, NYC.

7-14-45

Commended by Admiral

Another Bronze Star winner was T/5 Jack Golder of Mariana, Fla., whose ingenuity was responsible for the salvaging of a duck which overturned and was floundering on the jagged coral off the shore of Tinian.

Two commendations for its esprit de corps have been received by the unit from Admiral S. W. King and Lt. Gen. Robert C. Richardson of the Island Command, Saipan.

In the latter case, the 477th was among four companies commended for having "performed the astounding feat of supply, operating under extremely difficult and hazardous conditions, and kept their personnel in shape to accomplish their mission."

Admiral King commended the men for "their efficiency and capability" in rescuing crew members of the barge Asphalt which, during a storm, was dashed upon a jagged reef off an island beachhead.

7-14-45

Rescuers Listed

Among men sharing in the commendation were:

T/5 Robert L. Henderson, Pvts. Arnold Perkins, and Charles G. Reed Jr., Pfc William G. Cox, and T/5 George R. Gill Jr., all of NYC; T/5 John A. Johnson, Philadelphia; Pfc. Henry T. Shipp and T/5 Edward R. Hodges, Norfolk, Va.; Pvt. Timothy D. Chavis, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Rotation is long overdue for this outfit which averages almost three years per man overseas service. Topping the list of men eligible for discharge is Pfc. Andrew J. Nixon of High Point, N.C., who has 114 points.

Among other members of this company who have played an important role in landing supplies, evacuating casualties, and transferring materials from beachhead and inland dumps to ships are:

Pfc. William Cox, and T/5 C. B. Sturdivant of NYC; T/5 Richard E. Daniels, Lambersville, N.J.; T/5 John Moore, Jersey City, N.J., and T/5 Joseph Johnson, Philadelphia.

Coast Artillerymen Led by Own Officers

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

Twelve Casualties Suffered by Only Colored Combat Unit on Okinawa

7-14-45

By CHARLES LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

OKINAWA—A battalion composed of officers and men from the disbanded 369th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Regiment is the only all-colored combat group participating in the Ryukyus campaign, which has thus far wrested Okinawa and its satellite islands from the Japs.

Under command of Lt. Col. Lilmer F. Lucas and directed by colored officers, this hard-hitting outfit of former New York State Guardsmen has, during the past 69 days on a combat infantry mission in the Kerama Retto, added the following achievements to the glorious record compiled by its parent organization during World War I.

On May 30, during its first patrol in the Kerama Retto: captured a Japanese major, one lieutenant, 2 superior privates, 1 female nurse, 1 heavy machine gun, 8 rifles and large quantities of ammunition without the loss of a man. Two members of the patrol suffered slight injuries. The Jap major personally surrendered his sword to Lt. Col. Lucas.

Makes Use of Jap Major

Through kind treatment of the captured Jap major, the unit succeeded in setting the stage for peace negotiations with an enemy garrison entrenched on a nearby island in which the Jap major volunteered to act as intermediary.

In a day of blazing action on June 24, the unit captured a valuable hill position from the Japs, killed 20 enemy soldiers and wounded 10, captured an enemy grenade launcher, destroyed 2 machine gun nests and supplies of ammo, knocked out 2 enemy pillboxes and burned an enemy encampment.

7-14-45

The outfit lost one officer and 2 enlisted men killed and 9 wounded.

In 60 days of operations the men have captured in the neighborhood of 700 prisoners, including Jap officers, soldiers, Korean and Okinawan labor troops.

Meanwhile, they have been maintaining vigilant patrols of the Kerama Retto Group, protecting natives from Jap infiltrating troops who steal their food and supplies; also preventing isolated Jap garrisons from attempting suicide forays by small boat against naval vessels in the vicinity and preventing the enemy from making contact with the Jap Mainland.

Story of Courage

Bayoneted Five Times, Game GI Pulls Through

Pittsburgh Courier, Pa. 11-24-45

FORT GEORGE WRIGHT, Wash.—This is the story of a Negro's courage on and off the field of battle. It is not a blood and thunder tale of exploits that earned Pvc. Henry Daniels, of Americus, Ga., a wealth of medals and acclaim. He wears only the Asiatic-Pacific Ribbon and the Purple Heart . . . some small carbines.

and five bayonet wounds, the scars

WOUNDED BY GRENADE

of four automatic rifle slugs in his right shoulder and arm. In the first skirmish Daniels was three in his left arm and hand wounded by a hand grenade but grenade and shrapnel wounds in he kept firing away. Snipers fir- his chest.

Private First Class Daniels was a member of an aviation guard squadron on Iwo Jima when the Japanese made a surprise attack about 4 A. M., March 25, with an estimated 400 in the party. The defenders numbered 250. Yanks their equipment consisted of a few Thompson submachine guns and no chances, gave him a few jabs in the throat and chest for good measure.

In spite of the odds against them the Americans drove off the Japanese. Daniel was treated at an emergency hospital and then sent to the States via hospitalization at Hawaii. The doctors at Oliver General Hospital in Augusta, Ga., told the veteran his right arm was gone due to paralysis of the bicep muscles from nerve injuries that had caused almost complete atrophy.

REGAINS CONTROL

Daniels reported to the corrective gymnasium of the AAF Regional and convalescent hospital at Fort George, Washington, in September and Staff Sergeant John Parsons of Toledo, Ohio, NCO in charge, gave him a set of self resistive arm exercises which utilized the initial stages of the elbow and arm to build the injured one. In the treatment Daniels had only a fifty per cent range of motion his range and shoulder. He now has a complete range.

He is the brother of Mrs. Callie Wilkinson, 121 Hinkle Street, and Mrs. Daisy Wilkinson, 306 Mayo Street, Americus, Ga.

56n-1945 Foreign Service Pacific

Made Way to Tokyo Easier

Pittsburg-Courier

Record of Tan Yanks in Pacific

9-8-45

Saga of Courage, Devotion

Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ever since December 8, 1941, when Pvt. Robert Brooks became the first member of the Armored Force, and probably the American Army, to lose his life at Fort Stotsenburg in the Philippines, Negro soldiers have contributed blood, sweat and tears to the cause of freedom in the Pacific. Ever since April, 1942, when swarthy Negro Engineers streamed ashore from landing craft to whip out steel carpets on New Guinea for the reception of planes of the Nineteenth Bombardment Group, Negro soldiers have assisted materially in avenging the infamy of Pearl Harbor, perpetrated by the Japanese less than four months earlier.

The Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment was the first all-Negro combat unit to face the Nipponese when it landed in the New Georgia Islands two days before the Battle of the Coral Sea, May 4-7, 1942. Men of this organization have been singled out by the Inspector General of the Army for their exceptionally meritorious conduct in routing the enemy from Saipan in the Marianas.

PRAISED BY MacARTHUR

On Dec. 1, 1942, Negro soldiers were included in the first contingent of American troops to arrive at Ledo in India to construct the famed Ledo (now Stilwell) Road. Utilizing a handful of bulldozers and a fleet of dilapidated British lorries, the Negro Engineers had pushed the road fifteen miles into the Patkais by Jan. 1, 1943.

As early as Jan. 23, 1943, ten Negro units, ranging from engineer to Chemical Warfare Service outfits, had been commended by General MacArthur for their "courage, spirit and devotion to duty" in expelling the enemy from Papua, New Guinea.

For extraordinary heroism displayed at Porderch Harbor, New Guinea, March 8, 1943, Pvt. George Watson, Birmingham, Ala., received the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously. Since that time the number of decorated soldiers of color has become legion.

In April, 1944, the Ninety-third Infantry Division had its first taste of action at Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville Island in the Solomons. By the end of that month, the Ninety-third had secured the Saua River and a portion of the land east of the Torokina River. The Division next went to the Treasury Island Group, thence to Morotai Island in the Dutch East Indies and more recently to the Philippines.

9-8-45

CONSTRUCTED LANDING FIELDS

When the mighty B-29 Superfortresses first took off from China to hammer Japan proper, they taxied off of superb landing fields constructed by Negro Engineers from Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's China-Burma-India Theatre. In the words of Maj. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe: "They came with a battery of concrete mixers and put on the damnedest exhibition of instantaneous concrete laying you ever saw. Beautiful concrete, no mud pies."

Besides the Twenty-fourth Infantry and Ninety-third Division, six other Negro combat units have been announced as being in the Pacific. They are, with present stations: 207th Coast Artillery (AA), New Guinea; 369th Coast Artillery (AA), Okinawa; 742nd Anti-aircraft Artillery, New Guinea; 234th Anti-aircraft Artillery, Saipan; 320th Anti-aircraft Barrage Balloon Battalion, and the 372nd Infantry, both in Hawaii.

Roughly 200,000 Negro soldiers are scattered throughout the Pacific and Far East, from Noumea, New Caledonia to Calcutta, India; from Kunming, China to Attu Island in the Aleutian chain. Substantial numbers are deployed in the Alaskan Department, Pacific Theatre, and the China and India-Burma Theatres of Operations. They are serving in such highly technical organizations as the 101st Chemical Processing Company at Manila in the Philippines and the 689th Signal Air Warning (Radar) Company in the Sulu Archipelago.

Three months after the complete capitulation of the Germans, Negro troops, fresh from the European and Mediterranean Theatres of Operations, began arriving in the Philippines, and many more were awaiting shipping orders. As of July, 1945, more than 550 all-Negro organizations were assigned to stations in the Middle, South, and Western Pacific areas. A list of these units follows:

U. S. ARMY FORCES, MIDDLE PACIFIC

9-8-45

UNIT	STATION
24th Infantry Regiment (with units at Kume Shima)	Kerama Retto
30th Quartermaster Pack Troop	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
71st Chemical Service Group Co.	Okinawa
81st Signal Construction Batt.	Okinawa
114th Port Company	Okinawa
115th Port Company	Aiea
126th Port Company	Ie Shima
129th QM Bakery Company	Saipan
129th Port Company	Ie Shima
130th QM Bakery Company	Okinawa
131st Port Company	Ie Shima
133rd Port Company	Ie Shima
135th Port Company	Okinawa
136th Port Company	Okinawa
137th Port Company	Okinawa
138th Port Company	Okinawa
139th Port Company	Guam
142nd Port Company	Okinawa
145th Port Company	Okinawa
146th Port Company	Okinawa
147th Port Company	Okinawa
148th Port Company	Okinawa
150th QM Truck Company	Okinawa
151st QM Bakery Co.	Saipan
159th Port Company	Tinian
168th Port Company	New Caledonia
169th Port Company	New Caledonia
170th Port Company	New Caledonia
181st Port Company	Guadalcanal
197th Port Company	Fort Shafter, Hawaii
198th Port Company	Saipan
212nd Military Police Company	Saipan
219th Port Company	Guadalcanal
221st Port Company	Guadalcanal
234th Anti-aircraft Gun Battalion	Saipan
239th QM Signal Company, First Platoon	Saipan Iwo Jima
240th Ordnance Ammunition Co.	Tinian
242nd Ordnance Ammunition Company	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
243rd Quartermaster Battalion	Ie Shima
245th Ordnance Ammunition Co.	Saipan
247th Ordnance Ammunition Co.	Okinawa
248th Ordnance Ammunition Co.	Okinawa
255th QM Laundry Detachment	Tinian
256th QM Battalion	Okinawa
257th QM Battalion	Okinawa
260th Military Police Co.	New Caledonia
264th QM Bakery Co.	Iwo Jima
267th QM Battalion	New Caledonia
269th QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
271st QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
272nd QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
277th QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
278th QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
289th Army Ground Forces Band	Espirity Santo
290th Port Company	Tinian
291st Port Company	Ie Shima
291st Army Ground Forces Band	Kerama Retto
292nd Port Company	Okinawa
293rd Port Company	Okinawa
299th Army Ground Forces Band	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
310th Port Company	Tinian
311th Port Company	Saipan
312th Port Company	Saipan
320th AA Barrage Balloon Bn.	Honolulu
Company C	Aiea
339th QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
340th QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
341st QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
342nd QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
343rd QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
344th QM Laundry Detachment	Okinawa
364th Port Battalion	Okinawa
369th Anti-aircraft Gun Battalion	Okinawa
372nd Port Battalion	Saipan
372nd Infantry Regt.	Schofield Barracks
372nd Anti-Tank Co.	Schofield Barracks
Company A	Fort Kamehameha
372nd Hq / Hq Co, 2nd Battalion	Hawaii District
Company E	Hawaiai District
Company F	Kauai District
Company G	Maui Island
Co H (less 2 Platoons)	Molokai District
Co. H, 1st Platoon	Hawaii District
Co. H, 2nd Platoon	Kauai District
Company I	Fort Kamehameha
Company K	Fort Shafter
372nd QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
373rd QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
374th QM Laundry Detachment	Schofield Barracks, Hawaii
376th Port Battalion	Saipan
384th Aviation Squadron	Iwo Jima
385th Aviation Squadron	Guam
386th Aviation Squadron	Hickam Field
386th QM Truck Company	Saipan
387th Aviation Squadron	Hickam Field
387th QM Truck Company	Saipan
388th Aviation Squadron	Okinawa
389th Aviation Squadron	Wheeler Field
390th Port Battalion	Espirity Santo
392nd QM Truck Company	Fort Shafter
406th Ordnance Motor/M. Co.	Okinawa
418th QM Bakery Company	Okinawa
432nd Engineer Dump Truck Co.	Saipan
435th Aviation Squadron	Saipan
438th Port Company	Tinian
439th Port Company	Fort Shafter
440th Port Company	Tinian
441st Port Company	Fort Shafter
442nd Port Company	Iwo Jima
443rd Port Company	Fort Shafter
444th Port Company	Saipan
457th Aviation Squadron	Tinian
459th Aviation Squadron	Guam
460th Signal Heavy Con. Bn.	Ie Shima
Company B	Wheeler Field
460th Aviation Squadron	Ie Shima
461th Aviation Squadron	Okinawa
462nd Aviation Squadron	Guam
463rd Aviation Squadron	Guam
464th Aviation Squadron	Guam
465th Aviation Squadron	Iwo Jima
466th Aviation Squadron	Okinawa
467th A/Sqd.	Kahuku Army Air Base
468th Aviation Squadron	Hickam Field
469th Aviation Squadron	Hickam Field
470th Aviation Squadron	New Caledonia
471st Aviation Squadron, Detachment	Guadalcanal Espiritu Santo
471st Amphibian Truck Co.	Iwo Jima
472nd Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
473rd Aciation Squadron	Okinawa
474th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
475th Amphibian Truck Co.	Iwo Jima
476th Amphibian Truck Co.	Iwo Jima
477th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
482nd Bomb Squadron	Ie Shima
486th Port Battalion	New Caledonia
488th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
490th Amphibian Truck Co.	Guam
491st Amphimian Truck Co.	Okinawa
492nd Quartermaster Battalion	Okinawa
492nd Amphibian Truck Co.	Fort Hase
493rd Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
494th Amphibian Truck Co.	Fort Hase
495th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
496th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
503rd Anti-aircraft Gun Bn.	Okinawa
504th Port Battalion	Okinawa
510th Port Battalion	Tinian
521st Quartermaster Group	Okinawa
536th Salvage Repair Company, Detachment	Guam Tinian
538th Port Company	Saipan
539th Signal Heavy Con. Co.	Okinawa
539th Port Company	Saipan
568th Engineer Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
575th Engineer Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
576th Port Co.	Hawaiian Ordnance Depot
589th QM Laundry Company	Okinawa
590th Port Company	Saipan
591st Port Company	Saipan
592nd Port Company	Iwo Jima
594th Ordnance Amm. Co.	Guadalcanal
594th QM Laundry Company	Okinawa
627th Quartermaster Battalion	Tinian
632nd Ordnance Amm. Co.	Okinawa
635th Port Company	Espiritu Sante
644th Ordnance Amm. Co.	Okinawa
645th Ordnance Amm. Co.	Aiea
667th Ordnance Amm. Co.	Okinawa
669th Ordnance Amm. Co., 2 Sections	Peleliu Island Guadalcanal
702nd Chemical Company	Hickam Field
702nd Signal Company	Guadalcanal
704th Signal Company	En route Manila
715th Signal Company, Second Platoon	Tinian Guam
716th Signal Company	En route Manila
717th Signal Company, First Platoon	Iwo Jima Ie Shima
719th Signal Company	Okinawa
726th Anti-aircraft Signal Battery	Schofield Barracks
743rd Signal Company	Saipan
760th Signal Company	Schofield Barracks
765th Engineer Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
811th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Iwo Jima
814th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
827th Amphibian Truck Co.	Okinawa
828th Amphibian Truck Co.	Ie Shima
848th QM Gas Supply Co., First Platoon	Saipan Iwo Jima
855th Port Company	Sand Island, Hawaii
856th Port Company	Sand Island, Hawaii
857th Port Company	Sand Island, Hawaii
865th Port Company	Okinawa
867th Port Company	Okinawa
868th Port Company	Okinawa
870th Anti-aircraft AW Battalion	Kerama Retto
872nd Port Company	Sand Island, Hawaii
890th Engineer Aviation Co.	Tinian
891st Chemical Company	Tinian
891st Engineer Aviation Co.	Tinian
892nd Engineer Aciation Co.	Wheeler Field
893rd Engineer Aviation Co.	Tinian
893rd Quartermaster Truck Co.	Hawaiian Ordnance Depot
894th QM Truck Company	Waipahu
895th QM Truck Co.	Schofield Barracks
897th QM Laundry Co.	Peleliu Island
927th Engineer Aviation Regiment	Guam
975th QM Service Co.	Guam
976th QM Service Co.	Guam
977th QM Service Co.	Guam
981st QM Service Co.	Saipan
982nd QM Service Co.	Guam
1188th Engr. Base Depot Co.,	Fort Shafter
1224th Engr. Fire Fighting Platoon	Guadalcanal
1322nd Engineer General Service Regiment	Tinian
1356th Engineer Dump Truck Co.	Guam
1357th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Ie Shima
1387th Military Police Company, Aviation	Fort Shafter
1534th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
1862nd Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1863rd Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1864th Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1868th Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
169th Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1970th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Okinawa
1882nd Engr. Aviation Battalion	Saipan
1887th Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1889th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Okinawa
1894th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Okinawa
1895th Engineer Aviation Battalion	Guam
1903rd Ordnance Ammunition Co.	Ie Shima
1908th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Okinawa
1909th Engr. Aviation Battalion	Saipan
1914th Ordnance Ammunition Company Avn.	Guan
2007th QM Truck Co. Avn.	Wheeler Field
2031st QM Truck Co. Avn.	Hickam Field
2045th QM Truck Co. Avn.	Hickam Field
2046th QM Truck Co. Avn.	Hickam Field
2278th QM Truck Company Avn.	Guam
2280th QM Truck Co. Avn.	Guam
2281st QM Truck Co. Avn	Guam
2282nd QM Truck Co. Avn.	Guam
2283rd QM Truck Co. Avn	Guam
2284th QM Truck Co. Avn.	Okinawa
2301st QM Truck Co. Avn.	Okinawa
2700th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
2701st Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
2801st Engineer Service Company	Tinian
2803rd Engr. General Service Bn.	Saipan
2804th Engr. General Service Bn.	Saipan
2805th Engr. General Service Bn.	Saipan
2806th Engr. General Service Bn.	Saipan
2807th Engr. General Service Bn.	Saipan
2917th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Ie Shima
2918th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Ie Shima
2919th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Okinawa
3064th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Guam
3065th QM Service Company	Iwo Jima
3067th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3068th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Guam
3069th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Guam
3070th Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Ie Shima
3071st Engr. Dump Truck Co.	Ie Shima
3077th QM Gas Supply Co.	Okinawa
3085th QM Service Company	Iwo Jima
3098th QM Laundry Co.	Iwo Jima
3108th QM Service Co.	New Caledonia
3292nd QM Service Co.	Tinian
3293rd QM Service Co.	New Caledonia
3294th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3295th QM Service Co.	Saipan
3296th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3297th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3388th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3610th Ordnance HA M/Co.	Okinawa
3665th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3697th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3753rd QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3754th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3829th QM Truck Co.	Espirity Santo
4013th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4039th QM Truck Co.	Tinian
4070th QM Service Co.	Tinian
4071st QM Service Co.	New Caledonia
4102nd QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4103rd QM Truck Co.	Saipan
4104th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4105th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4106th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4107th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4109th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4110th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4111th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4112th QM Truck Co.	Ie Shima
4113th QM Truck Co.	Schofield Barracks
4126th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
4117th QM Truck Co.	Okinawa
3119th Engr. Fire Fighting Det.	Okinawa
3125th Engr. Fire Fighting Det.	Okinawa
3126th Egr. Fire Fighting Det.	Okinawa
3127th Engr. Fire Fighting Det.	Okinawa
3128th Egr. Fire Fighting Det.	Okinawa
3239th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3240th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3243rd QM Service Co.	Guadalcanal
3258th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3259th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3260th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3261st QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3274th QM Service Co.	Espirity Santo
3290th QM Service Co.	Okinawa
3291st QM Service Co.	Tinian
3 Second Platoon	Saipan

9-8-45

4121th QM Truck Co. .....Ie Shima
4122th QM Truck Co. .....Okinawa
4123rd QM Truck Co. .....Okinawa
4124th QM Truck Co. .....Okinawa
4125th QM Truck Co. .....Ie Shima
4126th QM Truck Co. .....Okinawa
4161 QM Fumigation and Bath Co.....
..... Schofield Barracks
4207th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4208th QM Service Co. .....Ie Shima
4209th QM Service Co. .....Saipan
4210th QM Service Co. .....Saipan
4216th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4217th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4342nd QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4344th QM Service Co...Schofield Barracks
4345th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4464th QM Service Co. .....Ie Shima
First Platoon .....Okinawa
4481st QM Salvage Repair
Composite ..... Okinawa
4482nd QM Salvage Repair
Composite ..... Okinawa
4513th QM Service Co.....Okinawa
4514 QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4515th QM Service Co. .....Ie Shima
4516th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4517th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa
4524th QM Service Co. .....Okinawa

U. S. ARMY FORCES, PACIFIC

415th Army Service Forces Band.Hollandia
4th Air Cargo Resupply Sqd...Clark Field
5th Air Cargo Resupply Sqd...Clark Field
345th Aviation Squadron.....Okinawa
383rd Aviation Squadron .....Leyte
391st Aviation Squadron .....Leyte
436th Aciation Squadron .....Biak
437th Aviation Squadron.....Finschafen
455th Aviation Squadron....Nielson Field
458th Aviation Squadron .....Hollandia
77th Anti-aircraft Gun Battalion and Group .....Admiralty
207th Anti-aircraft Artillery AW
Battalion ..... Hollandia
466th Anti-aircraft Artillery AW
Battalion ..... Finschafen
477th Anti-aircraft Artillery AW
Battalion .....Ore Bay
741st Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun
Battalion ..... Hollandia
742nd Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun
Battalion ..... Finschafen
933rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun
Battalion ..... Admiralty
28th Chemical Decontamination Co., Manila
29th Chemical Decontamination Co., Manila
704th Chemical M/Co Aviation.....Leyte
49th C/Artillery Batt 155-mm..Finschafen
91st Engr. Gen. Service Regiment....Biak
96th Engr. Gas Service Regt....Malabang
97th Engr. Gen. Service Regt...Finschafen
567th Engr. Dump Truck Co.....Manila
570th Engr. Dump Truck Co. .....Davao
571st Engr. Dump Truck Co...Clark Field
573rd Engr. Dump Truck Co....La Union
576th Engr. Dump Truck Co. ....Manila
585th Engr. Dump Truck Co.....Bulacan
738th Enfir. Base Depot Co. .....Biak
766th Engr. Dump Truck Co. .....Leyte
768th Engr. Dump Truck Co. .....Leyte
769th Engr. Dump Truck Co. ....Manila
771st Engr. Dump Truck Co. .....Manila
772nd Engr. Dump Truck Co. ..Finschafen
773rd Engr. Dump Truck Co. ....Manila
774th Engr. Dump Truck Co. ....Manila
795th Engr. Dump Truck Co..Nichols Field
810th Engr. Aviation Battalion....Manila
822nd Engr. Aviation Battalion.....Leyte
828th Engr. Aviation Battalion..Pampanga
839th Engr. Aviation Battalion.....Leyte
855th Engr. Aviation Battalion....Manila
856th Engr. Aviation Battalion....Manila
857th Engr. Aviation Batt..Fort McKinley
867th Engr. Aviation Battalion..Batangas
868th Engr. Aviation Batt.....Nadzab NG
869th Engr. Aviaiton Battalion....Manila
870th Engr. Aviation Battalion.Pampanga
1225th Engr. Fire Fighting Det.....Leyte
1311st Engr Gen. Service Regt...Milne Bay
1312th Engr. Gen. Service Regt..La Union
1315th Engr. Construction Batt.....Biak
1322nd Engr. Gen. Service Regt.....Leyte
1351st Engr. Dump Truck Co. .....Leyte
1361st Engr. Dump Truck Co ..Lingayen
1462nd Engr. M. Co., ESB....Pampanga
1517th Engr. Water Supply Co.....Manila
1518th Engr. Water Supply Co.....Biak
1519th Engr. Water Supply Co.....Manila
901st Air Base Security Batt.....Batangas
903rd Air Base Security Batt...Milne Bay
922nd Air Base Security Batt...Milne Bay
924th Air Base Security Batt...Milne Bay
268th Station Hospital .....Manila
569th Motor Ambulance Co. .....Leyte
579th Motor Ambulance Co.....Finschafen
721st Sanitary Company .....Manila
722nd Sanitary Company .....Manila
725th Sanitary Company .....Batangas
728th Sanitary Company .....Leyte
735th Sanitary Company .....Manila
739th Sanitary Company .....Leyte
742nd Sanitary Company.....La Union
745th Sanitary Company .....Biak
747th Sanitary Company .....Leyte
759th Sanitary Company .....Manila
808th Motor Ambulance Co. .....Manila
42th Military Police Co.....Cebu Island
169th Ordnance Battalion .....Manila
577th Ordnance Ammunition Co..La Union
578th Ordnance Ammunition Co.....Davao
579th Ordnance Ammunition Co..Pampanga
580th Ordnance Ammunition Co....Manila
590th Ordnance Ammunition Co....Manila
595th Ordnance Ammunition Co.....Leyte
622nd Ordnance Ammunition Co...San Jose
628th Ordnance Ammunition Co...Ore Bay
629th Ordnance Ammunition Co..Lingayen
630th Ordnance Ammunition Co...Lae NG
636th Ordnance Ammunition Co..Batangas
642nd Ordnance Amm. Co.....El Salvador
643rd Ordnance Ammunition Co.....Leyte
650th Ordnance Ammunion Co.....Biak
14th QM Car Platoon.....Leyte
29th QM Group .....Manila
29th QM Battalion (Mobile).....Manila
28th QM Group .....Manila
57th QM Battalion (Mobile).....Batangas
57th QM Battalion .....Leyte
71st QM Battalion .....Manila
91st QM Railhead Co. .....Mindero
92nd QM Railhead Co. .....La Union
119th QM Battalion (Mobile).....Manila
119th QM Bakery Company
Second Platoon .....Clark Field
233rd QM Laundry Det (Mobile)...Manila
234th QM Laundry Det.....Panay Island
235th QM Laundry Detachment..Pampanga
236th QM Laundry Detachment..Cagayan
237th QM Laundry Detachment..Batangas
238th QM Laundry Detachment....Manila
239th QM Laundry Detachment....Manila
240th QM Laundry Detachment.....Leyte
241st QM Laundry Detachment..Malabang
244th QM Laundry Detachment..Batangas
245th QM Laundry Detachment.....Biak
246th QM Laundry Detachment.....Biak
247th QM Laundry Detachment.....Biak
248th QM Depot Company.....Finschafen
268th QM Battalion .....Manila
275th QM Battalion .....Manila
276th QM Battalion.....Leyte Island
302nd QM Railhead Co. .....Milne Bay
311th QM Battalion .....Biak
321st QM Truck Co. .....Cebu Island
322nd QM Truck Co. .....Cebu Island
323rd QM Truck Co. .....Oro Bay
324th QM Truck Co. .....Oro Bay
325th Gas Supply Company .....Biak
361st Laundry Det. (Mobile).....Manila
369th QM Laundry Co. .....Manila
384th QM Truck Co. .....Manila
390th QM Truck Co. .....Zamboanga
393rd QM Truck Co. .....El Salvador
420th QM Bakery Co. .....Leyte Island
466th QM Truck Co. .....Finschafen
467th QM Truck Co. .....Finschafen
469th QM Battalion (Mobile)..Finschafen
490th QM Battalion .....La Union
491st QM Battalion .....Morotai Island
493rd QM Battalion .....Manila
494th QM Battalion .....Cebu Island
531st QM Battalion .....Mindero Island
539th QM Battalion .....Manila
540th QM Batalion .....Lingayen
543rd QM Battalion .....Milne Bay
557th QM Battalion .....Finschafen
569th QM Railhead Company
1 Platoon .....Negros Island
570th QM Battalion.....Finschafen
572nd QM Railhead Co. .....Hollandia
589th QM Laundry Co. .....Leyte Island
591st QM Salvage Repair Co..Leyte Island
630th QM Battalion .....San Jose
849th QM Gas Supply Co.....El Salvador
897th QM Laundry Co. .....La Union
983rd QM Service Co. .....Malabang
984th QM Service Company ....La Union
985th QM Service Company....Finschafen
986th QM. Service Company....Finschafen
91st QM Service Co. .....Leyte Island
992nd QM Service Co. .....Leyte Island
993rd QM Service Co. .....Biak
994th QM Service Co. .....Leyte Island
1906th QM Truck Co. Avn...Leyte Island
1918th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Okinawa
1932nd QM Truck Co. Avn.....Biak
1943rd QM Truck Co Avn..Palawan Island
1954th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Clark Field
1963rd QM Truck Co. Avn....Clark Field
1998th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Lingayen
2001st QM Truck Co. Avn....Madzab NG
2009th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Lingayen
2011th QM Truck Co. Avn..Mindoro Island
2012th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Okinawa
2013rd QM Truck Co Avn..Palawan Island
2015th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Lingayen
2017th QM Truck Co. Avn..Mindoro Island
2020th QM Truck Co. Avn..Morotai Island
2021st QM Truck Co. Avn....Clark Field
2025th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Clark Field
2026th QM Truck Co. Avn....Finschafen
2027th QM Truck Co. Avn..Leyte Island
2039th QM Truck Co. Avn..Leyte Island
2052nd QM Truck Co. Avn.....Manila
2053rd QM Truck Co. Avn..Leyte Island
2058th QM Truck Co. Avn.....Manila
2059th QM Truck Co. Avn....Leyte Island

U. S. ARMY FORCES WESTERN PACIFIC

160th Port Company.....Cebu Island
161st Port Company.....Cebu Island
162nd Port Company.....Cebu Island
164th Port Company.....Leyte Island
167th Port Company .....Manila
179th Port Company .....Batangas
180th Port Company .....Batangas
210th Port Company .....Manila
218th Port Company .....Manila
234th Port Company .....Manila
235th Port Company .....Mindoro
236th Port Company .....Mindoro
493rd Port Battalion.....Leyte Island
503th Port Battalion .....La Union
578th Port Company .....Manila
579th Port Company .....Manila
593rd Port Company .....Hollandia
603rd Port Company .....Biak
608th Port Company .....Leyte Island
610th Port Company .....Manila
611th Port Company .....Manila
637th Port Company .....Finschafen
638th Port Company .....Finschafen
639th Port Company .....Finschafen
650th Port Company .....Lingayen
811th Amphibian Truck Co. ....Lingayen
812th Amphibian Truck Co. ....Batangas
813th Amphibian Truck Co. ..Leyte Island
820th Amphibian Truck Co. .....Manila
824th Amphibian Truck Co. ....Malabang
825th Amphibian Truck Co...Leyte Island
826th Amphibian Truck Co...Leyte Island
851st Port Company.....La Union
852nd Port Company .....La Union
Americal Division Hdq. Company,
Company CS .....Negros Island
7th Cavalry Weapons Troop
Division .....N Laguna
8th Cavalry Hdq. Troop .....Batangas
103rd Infantry (Company I).....Manila
93rd Infantry Div. Hdq...Morotai Island
93rd Inf Div Spe. Troops..Morotai Island
93rd Inf Div Hdq Co.....Morotai Island
93rd Reconnaissance Troop..Morotai Island
318th Engrs. Combat Batt..Morotai Island
93rd Division Artillery.....Zamboanga
593rd Field Artillery Battalion
105th-mm .....Morotai Island
594th Field Artillery Battalion
105th-mm ..... Zamboanga
595th Field Artillery Battalion
105th-mm .....Morotai Island
596th Field Artillery Battalion
155th-mm .....Morotai Island
25th Infantry ..... Zamboanga
368th Infantry .....Zamboanga
318th Medical Battalion....Morotai Island
93rd Div M/Police Platoon..Morotai Island
93rd Infantry Div. Band...Morotai Island
793rd Ordnance Light Maintenance.....
Company .....Morotai Island
93rd QM Company.....Morotai Island
93rd Signal Company.....Morotai Island

Gl's in Hawaii Balked at Work

The Afro American
Baltimore, Maryland
10-6-45

Honorable Discharges Will Be Granted Men RETURNED TO DUTY

Ring Leaders Given 10 to 25 Year Terms

FORT SHAFTER, T.H.—Fifty-two soldiers, convicted of mutiny in this Hawaiian command last fall, have been restored to duty with their original sentences suspended, Lt. Gen. Robert C. Richardson Jr., commanding general, announced here Wednesday.

Honorable discharges await the men when they become eligible.

They were among 73 soldiers involved in a case of refusal to obey lawful orders given to them by superior officers to report to a night work formation at an airfield on Oahu.

Five ring leaders were given 10 to 25-year sentences, the remaining 68 were given 8 to 10-year sentences.

Fifty-two of the 68 were restored to duty following a training period in a rehabilition company.

Two Trials Held

The mutiny took place on the night of July 31, 1944. All of the men were members of Company E, 1320th Engineer General Service Regiment.

The two courts martial which convicted the men were the first Army trials for mutiny to be held in the Central Pacific area since the outbreak of World War II. No names were disclosed.

A separate trial was held for the five accused as ringleaders with the other 68 being tried at a second court martial. All original sentences called for confinement at hard labor, dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of pay and allowances.

FREE 52 GIS CONVICTED OF MUTINY IN HAWAII

The Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois 10-6-45

FORT SHAFTER, T. H. — 52 Negro soldiers convicted of mutiny in the Hawaiian Command last fall have been restored to duty, with original sentences suspended and honorable discharges awaiting each soldier as soon as he becomes eligible.

They were among 73 involved in a case of refusal to obey lawful orders of superior officers to report to work formation in Oahu.

Five ringleaders were given 10 to 25 year sentences, and the remaining 68 were given 8 to 10 year sentences. 52 of the 68 were restored to duty following training in a rehabilitation company.

End of a 'Mutiny'

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania
10-13-45

It is good news that the fifty-two colored soldiers convicted of mutiny in Hawaii last fall have been restored to duty.

This action on the part of the War Department vindicates the contention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that these men were provoked into their action by jim-crowism practiced against them.

The NAACP deserves credit for the persistence with which it fought for the freedom of thse men, going to the highest officials in an effort to get just consideration of their case.

Neither the Army nor the Navy officials can expect young Negroes to take jim-crowism without protest, and while no one will condone disobedience of orders given by superiors, these superiors should live up to the letter and spirit of the Federal Constitution and the regulations they are sworn to uphold.

An even greater injustice was done to the fifty sailors in California who were tried and convicted of mutiny because they balked on loading ammunition ships after a devastating explosion a little before had taken the lives of several hundred of their comrades.

It was later brought out that these men had not actually refused to do the work but had naturally hesitated, knowing the danger involved.

These men should also be freed at the earliest possible date.

If the Army and Navy are interested in having no recurrence of these regrettable incidents, it is suggested that the responsible officials so reorganize the Services that there will be no color discrimination or segregation.

Soldiers and sailors seldom go to the extreme of mutiny unless there is a very good reason for it, and such outbursts are more of a reflection on the officers than on the men.

Says Negroes First To Land on Okinawa

Atlanta World 6-2

Marines Depend On Ducks To Land Guns, Supplies

By JOHN WALKER McCAIN
(B. M. 1-c, a Coast Guard correspondent)

ABOARD AN ATTACK TRANSPORT IN A PACIFIC BATTLE ZONE — (SNS) — Negro Americans everywhere will take the pride in the part the Negroes are playing at Okinawa. The Negro history of America in World War II will include the story of this company, which helped wrest from the Japanese this island of top military importance in the Pacific war.

Before going into battle, Pvt. Herbert W. Seward, of an amphibian truck company, prepared a record of the names and addresses of the men in the unit and after operations had begun he added an account of some of the initial phases of the battle for Okinawa. What follows is based on Private Seward's manuscript. 5-13-45

FIRST TO LAND

Private Seward claim that his unit is the first United States Army outfit to lay foot on the soil of Okinawa. This unit is engaged in supplying the 6th Marine Division and is the only colored unit so engaged. Personnel of the company represents Alabama, Texas, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Virginia, Ohio Maryland, New York, Oklahoma, New Jersey, Iowa, Massachusetts, Indiana, District of Columbia, West Virginia, Michigan, Louisiana, North Carolina and Missouri.

What is this Negro unit doing on Okinawa? They took with them 75mm. guns when they went ashore on the island. They also returned time and time again to haul ammunition and other supplies ashore and to return the wounded to the ships. In short, these Negro men are fighting Americans, doing their share in the battle of Okinawa, which increases in intensity each day. One day this week there were thirteen air raids in less than twenty-four hours. 5-13-45

These fighting Americans have adopted this slogan: "We are the best Duck company in the Army. If you don't believe it, ask the Marines" On landing day (April 1) H-hour was at 8:30 in the morning, and this Negro unit went ashore three hours later.

ONE KILLED

Private Seward concludes his manuscript with these words: "Day-day. In morning of April 1. Gung Ho. Our arty (artillery) throwing it at them. We are bringing it to them. (Later) One of our boys killed last night. Have been working going on 36 hours, no rest, but will continue until we drop."

Okinawa is partially won, and the week is not yet over. With as many as thirteen air aids in one day the battle of Okinawa will never properly be regarded as "easy" even though superb Allied planning and good fortune did make the first day relatively easier than was expected, especially on the beachheads. Organized enemy resistence has intensified during this week, and no man can say how many lives and how long it will yet require to secure the island for full and strategic Allied use in this war. Each day brings new advances—and new problems for our men to meet on Okinawa. When the island is finally brought completely under control, these Negro officers and men with the Sixth Marine Division may well feel pride in the part they are playing in winning this strategic outpost, air base, and supply base for Allied operations in the Pacific.

BUILDING AIRSTRIPS; HAULING SUPPLIES

Pittsburgh Courier Penn. 1-27-45

By BILLY ROWE
(Courier War Correspondent)

WITH GENERAL MacARTHUR'S FORCES, Luzon — Arriving D-Day, and still coming, Tan Yanks of all descriptions are pouring into these channels of war to wrest the Philippines from Japanese aggressors. A part of the largest operation ever contemplated in the Pacific, colored troops are performing every task. Though no infantry troops are in the fight at present, Brown Doughboys are well mixed in as the backbone of combat troops, doing everything from unloading the ships to building airstrips.

SURPRISED ENEMY

From an operational point, the Luzon invasion through Lingayen Gulf was the largest ever aimed at the Japanese forces. From a point of resistance, it was the greatest surprise to the enemy, having pulled out in the face of heavy naval bombardment three days prior to our landing. Long-range shelling was experienced from the hills beyond the city of Lingayen. However, they have since been silenced, and our troops continue their race on the road to Manilla. Our command of the air is complete, and our bombers are making devastating sorties far afield. The only sign of a return air attack came Friday night, but it turned out to be just an alert, and shortly after, we emerged from our foxholes to continue inland missions.

Aviation engineers, a veteran group of youths who have seen three years' service overseas, built the first airstrip in New Hebrides in 1942. They came to Guadalcanal during the hectic campaign of '43, and there built the famous Coli Field. Entering Biak under fire in '44, they completed Seredia Field. Commanded by Maj. Dwayain K. Ford of Seattle, Wash., the 810th entered this operation as one of its most important service units, with a mission to build our first strip under fire.

NEGRO OFFICERS IN COMMAND

One company is commanded by all colored officers, who are First Lieuts. Isham G. Newton, Washington, D.C., commander; Cecil Patterson, Texas; Joseph Kaufman, New Orleans; Joy C. Gould, Washington, and Second Lieut. John Talley, Baltimore. This group came as part of a huge convoy which ranted over many miles. It sailed to the attack right under the noses of the Japanese, passing many heavily fortified points within artillery range. 1-27-45

One day out of Luzon, seven Japanese planes struck fury, but were knocked down into the China Sea without damaging the convoy or halting its progress. Two members of the 810th were killed, however, and twelve were wounded as the evening was filled with flak. Each of these men was in action at the time, aiding the naval crew of their LST, who in turn helped account for the six planes destroyed.

The remainder of the trip was made without incident, and the convoy steamed into Luzon on schedule, but the only Japanese we saw was a dead one ironically floating out to the China Sea. The other units spotted along the beachhead at first glance were the 1998th and 4667th Quartermaster Trucking Companies, the 828th Aviation Engineers, and the 210th.

Record of 636th Under Fire Cited

AFRO-AMERICAN 6-2-45 Bra.

By CHARLES LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

LUZON—The bivouac area of the 636th Ordnance Ammunition Company is quiet now, but during the past six months these men have shown that they possess all the attributes of first-class fighting men.

The company, which marked its third anniversary of active overseas service on May 18, has received the meritorious service plaque and the men expect soon to be declared eligible to wear the Bronze Arrowhead Award for assault landings on hostile shores.

With First Troops on Leyte

Last October 20, attached to the 24th Infantry Division, the 636th, less its rear echelon, participated in "A" Day landings at Leyte, P.I., swarming over Red Beach 65 minutes after the first assault wave landed.

For a month, from Red Beach to Pinamopoan, they maintained a steady stream of ammunition to front line troops, proving in this initial baptism of fire their steadiness, endurance, courage and technical dependability.

Four generals joined in the shower of commendations: Maj. Gen. R. B. Woodruff, Lt. Gen. Walter Kruegar, Maj. Gen. J. L. Frink, and Maj. Gen. F. C. Sibert. 6-2-45

In Luzon Invasion

On January 29, attached to the 38th Infantry Division and the 34th Regimental Combat Team, the unit took part in the initial landings at La Paz, Luzon, with the initial duty of operating beachhead ammunition dumps.

On February 15, 1 officer and 20 enlisted men landed with the Task Force at Mariveles, Luzon, and captured four Jap soldiers, one an officer.

Among Easterners in the company are:

MARYLAND—Cpl. James A. Harris, Annapolis; Pvt. Leroy H. Ligon, 1920 McCulloh St., Baltimore; Pvt. James Owens, 1017 Leadenhall St., Baltimore; Pfc. Russell M. Perkins, Easton; T/5 John Scott, Quincetown.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA — T/4 Christopher C. Hough, First Sgt. Murphy J. Leach, 609 U St.; T/Sgt. James E. Robinson, 1415 Morris Rd., S.E. 6-2-45

VIRGINIA—S/Sgt. Preston P. Cason, Norfolk; Pvt. Nelson Cottoms, Lignomin; Pfc. Norman Drew, Norfolk; Pfc. George T. McCall, Clincho; S/Sgt. Morris J. Parker, Portsmouth; Cpl. George Shepard, Petersburg, and T/4 Thomas E. Venable, Randolph.

PENNSYLVANIA—Pfc. Thomas E. Colbert Jr., 2600 E. Glenwood Dr., Philadelphia, and Pvt. Woodrow Smith, Pittsburgh.

NEW YORK—Pfc. Percy G. Dean, Manhasset, L.I.; Pfc. Reverend L. Hedspeth, NYC; Sgt. Joseph L. McKnight, NYC; Pfc. Edward Midgette, Brooklyn; M/Sgt. William R. Spencer, NYC; Pvt. James O. Troupe, Inwood, and Pfc. Rupert C. Weston, NYC.

Negro Troops in New Guinea

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Senator Eastland, the gentleman from Mississippi, who said that Negro units in this war have been a failure, should have been in New Guinea during the dark days of 1942 when both white and Negro worked like hell to push the Japs back—and did. Then maybe his tune would be a different one. I am high in my praise for the Negro soldier, but I can't say as much for the gentleman from Mississippi. Why in the hell doesn't the Senator mind his own business instead of causing a lot of controversy among the men who are winning the war? Maybe I don't know what I'm talking about, because I've had only 37 months in the Pacific.

CPL. FRED PETERS
Camp Pickett. 7-14-45

Negro Soldiers, Sailors Right In Thick Of Things

6-16-45

Loeb Discovers Friends Among Camp's Mess

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

GUAM— Your correspondent has just spanned the 1500 miles of Pacific Ocean that separates Manila from Guam. There's plenty of action north of here where our combined naval, land and air arms are knocking on the threshold of the Japanese mainland, and as usual, Negro soldiers and sailors are right in the thick of things.

When I departed Luzon for this theatre I regarded the island of Letye scene of our first Philippine strike, as merely a stopover point in my hop by air. I hadn't figured that I would spned nearly three full days in a casual camp near Tacloban while more important people with higher priorities were sped on their vital missions.

Having neither the stomach for the casual camp's traditionally mediocre mess, nor the disposition to share a squad tent with a dozen-odd sad-faced gents in my predicament, I decided to spend the time in pop calls on Negro units in the vicinity. 6-16-45

MEETS BALLARD

Before striking out from the camp I bumped into John C. Ballard, 1214 Lamont St., N. W. Washington, D. C. newly-prompted Field Director for the American Red Cross, former member of the faculty at Tennessee A and I College at Nashville. Ballard had flown up from Finchaven and was awaiting air transportation to Manila where he will join the rapidly increasing number of Negro Red Cross workers coming into Luzon to administer the welfare and recreational needs of Negro troops.

Ballard informed me that Miss Clara Wells, 1106 Rusk St., Marshall, Texas, was at a nearby casual camp, also enroute to Manila where she expects to assist in the operation of the Robert S. Treswell Club directed by Ralph Long of Atlanta, Georgia.

After 22 months of Red Cross service in Australia, New Guinea and the Netherlands East Indies, Miss Wells still radiates enthusiasm for her work. While hardly a glamour girl type, Miss Wells is one of the most popular women workers on theis side. She has the open friendliness that makes an instant hit with GI's wherever she goes, but combines it with a poise and dignity that commands instant respect. 6-16-45

She had arrived at Leyte only the day before, but had already visited several units nearby. Word of her presence had spread via the army grapevine like wildfire, and as I talked to her 1st Sgt George F. Hinton drove up in a jeep with a dinner invitation from his outfit. the invitation extended me was a pure afterthought.

EATS FRIED CHICKEN

The piece-de-resistance was Southern fried chicken which I concentrated on devouring while Miss Wells was being devoured by the admiring glances of the entire company. At the conclusion of the dinner my sensational gastronomic performance brought out the following men to gaze at me with awe and at Miss Wells with unconcealed rapture.

Company clerk Richard L. Cogdell, 426 King Street, Fayetteville, North Carolina; Sgt. Judge H. Dixon, 5400 Villerie St., New Orleans, La.; Motor Sgt. Clifton W. Bell, 116 Washington St., Baton Rouge, La.; T/4 Richard J. Brown, 1640 Bergen St., Brooklyn; Sgt. Henry R. Walker, 3 Quincy Place, Washington, D. C.; Sgt. Arthur A. Jones 1319 Howard St., Sgt. Albert Curry, 3225 Thalia St., and Cpl. Herman Chapman, 4100 Thalia St., all of New Orleans, La.

Miss Wells was the first American Negro girl many of these men had seen in two years, and her reception would certainly have been a morale booster to those thousands of brown "left behinds" in the States who have been apprehensive over the effects of their favorite Tan Yanks' exposure to the Filipino feminine. 6-16-45

After dinner, I visited a Quartermaster Headquarters detachment of 14 men who are doing the administrative paper work for some 30-odd Quartermaster units stationed around Tacloban. Learning that I was a Clevelander, Sgt. Major Ricer Ray Leathers of St. Louis, Mo., hastened to call in one of my old friends, Sgt. John Hubbard of that city.

ANSWERS ALL MAIL

Hubbard, I discovered was in better touch with Cleveland events than myself, being one of those conscientious fellows who answer every letter received out here promptly. He is the son of the late Councilman John E. Hubbard, and brother of Nate Hubbard, news distributor for the big national weeklies in Cleveland. His mother is Mrs. Gilbert H. Ambrose of 2215 E. 32nd St.

Sgt Leathers also introduced me to the following men: T/Sgt. Robert Dinsmore, Kansas City, Mo.; T/Sgt Samuel A. Jolly, Topeka, Kans., T/5 Chester Warren Oxford, Ohio; T/5 Thomas O. Wilson, Norfolk, Va.; T/5 Marion Cheatham, Detroit; T/5 Allen C. Thomas, St. Louis, Mo.; and privates first class Kenneth Barnes, Brooklyn; Milton Murrell Los Angeles; William B. White, Atlanta, and Robert Barham, Atlanta, Ga.

It was beer ration day, and the boys shared generously of their new issue.

On the docks at Leyte I was introduced to one of the most colorful Negro commissioned officers in the Philippines, Lt. James H. Hopkins of 2314 N. 5th St., Kansas City Kans. Lt. Hopkins was in charge of crews backloading a big transport leaving for the States. With him was Lieut. Chester "Chet" Thomas, former Cleveland E. Teck and Ohio State track star. Both men were officers of a company commanded by 1st Lieut. Frank Marshall of Helena, Montana.

Lieut. Hopkins, approaching baldness, and chewing on a cigar, was full of tall stories and rare humor. A veteran of four campaigns since he was dumped off in Australia, shipped to New Guinea and subsequently to the Philippines, he is unabashed by the fact that he is still a second lieutenant.

Take 6 Isles With One Shot

Chicago Def.

GUAM—Six islands taken with one shot fired was the record made here this week by two busy Negro platoons.

Landing on six small islands in the northern Marianas, the troops of the 24th Infantry Regiment were forced to fire only one shot at a Japanese who refused to surrender. 7-1-45

Purely a reconnoitering operation to locate more areas where crippled Superforts could crash land while limping back from the raids on Japan, the troops left no holding force behind.

The operations were carried out by two platoons of Negro infantrymen aided by native guides and Japanese captives who promised their compatriots good treatment in the hands of Americans.

The "naval force" consisted of a destroyer escort, and two 153-foot LCI's (land craft, infantry).

As the troops went ashore, Japanese prisoners manned a microphone aboard the destroyer escort, assuring their stranded countrymen in Japenese-language messages over the loud speaker that they would be treated kindly.

The lone shot was fired by a guide, a single pistol cartridge.

The colored troops removed 24 Japanese civilians and 34 natives, employes of a Japanese copra company and survivors of sunken Jap merchantmen. The natives needed medical attention and were taken to Saipan along with some Okinawa fishermen.

Ample foodstuffs were left there for about 260 natives and Japanese civilians who remained behind.

Guam, Tinian and Saipan, the largest islands in the chain, are already firmly held by Americans.

The six new islands are Anatahan, Saigarn, Alamagan, Agrihan, Asconcion and Maug. Maug was the only island which showed signs of Japanese military occupancy. A weather station was once maintained there but it was bombed out earlier in the Marianas campaign.

Unit Transferred From N. Guinea To Philippines

Atlanta Daily World

Major Simmons, Of Washington, Commands Outfit

7-13-45

BY CONRAD CLARK

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS SWPA — (ANP) — Overseas since October, 1943, the SWPA's only all-Negro staffed hospital has been transferred from "somewhere in New Guinea," where it had been stationed for more than 13 months, to Manila, capital of the Philippine islands.

The sea voyage from New Guinea took more than 10 days, including a few days layover in the Netherlands East Indies.

The outfit, which is commanded by Major Arthur H. Simmons of Washington includes 13 medical officers, 11 nurses, and an enlisted detachment of 94 men, and one second lieutenant.

PERSONNEL LISTED

Members of the officers' personnel are Major Simmons, C. O., former physician of Freedman's hospital, and a member of the Howard U., faculty; Captain Robert P. Randolph, Durham, N. C., chief of medical service; Capts. Joseph H. Mitchell, Los Angeles, registrar and chief of the x-ray department; Kenneth E. Fletcher, Jackson, Tenn., chief of surgery; William H. Wilson, Abbeville, S. C., surgeon; John W. Skinner, receiving and laboratory officer; William C. Rogers, Philadelphia, pharmacy and ward officer; Edward C. Booker, of New York City detachment commander; Rotan Lee, Montclair, N. J., assistant surgean and chief of anesthesia. Clay M. Wilson, Pasadona, Cal., psychiatrist; and 1st Lt.,s Lowell M. Burrell, of Detroit, mess officer and assistant detachment commander and Barnett M. Rhetta, Jr., former physician at Freedmen's hospital, Washington, detached service with another medical unit. 7-13-45

Other officers not with the hospital anymore are Captains Arthur H. Thomas, Philadelphia, evacuated last year to America; Charles R. Joseph, Brooklyn, transferred to a QM unit; and 1st Lt. William S. Hendricks, Los Angeles, former registrar also evacuated last year to America.

The last two officers to be added to the hospital's staff are Captains Wilson, surgeon and C. M. Wilson, (no relation) the psychiatrist.

NURSES 7-13-45

Nurses are 1st Lts. Alberta L. Smith, Kansas City, Mo., principal chief nurse; Prudence L. Burns, assistant to the chief nurse; Elena A. Townsend, Long Island, N. Y., operating room nurse; Geneva H. Culpepper, Wadley, Ala., surgical nurse; Eleanor P. Jones, Ottoman, Va., dietician, replacing 1st Lt Jean Hamilton of Kansas City., Mo., evacuated to America some months ago; Birdie E. Brown, Jamaica, L. I., general nurse; Thelma L. Fisher, Roxbury, Mass., general nurse; Inez E. Holmes, Norfolk. Va., operating room nurse; Dorothy O Branker, Nashville, general nursing service; Marjorie S. Mayers, New York City, medical ward nurse and recreation officer; and Beulah L. Baldwin, in charge of surgical ward 1st Lts. Bessie P. Evans, of St. Louis, the former hospital's dietician; Louise Miller, Los Angeles, formerly in charge of the surgical and operating room, and 2nd Lt Claudia Matthews, Carlsbad, New Mexico, general surgical nurse, who came overseas with the hospital in October, 1943, have also been evacuated to America.

Says Negroes Have Gained China Respect

Atlanta World 3-3-45

War Correspondent Bolden Reveals Li-Jen's Praise

BY FRANK E BOLDEN
(NNPA War Correspondent)

ENROUTE WITH FIRST CONVOY OVER BURMA ROAD, BURMA — (Delayed) — In an exclusive interview with this correspondent, General Sun Li-jen, brilliant commander of the crack Chinese First Army here in Burma, praised the ability and work of American Negro soldiers whose unstinted efforts had contributed in such a large measure to the successful construction and opening of the Ledo Road connecting link with the Burma Road. 3-3-45

Said he, "Please express to the Negro people of American through your press channels my statement of gratitude and appreciation for the valiant efforts of their sons which helped to complete the construction of the Ledo Road. Their fortitude, industriousness, skill, and contagious disposition of good humor was nothing short of magnificent. Their ability to surmount the seemingly insurmountable obstacles which persistently confronted the Allied Engineers charged with the task of constructing a road through almost impossible terrain was an inspiration of hope to all that the job could be done.

"As Commander of the Chinese First Army, I wish to compliment these American Negro soldiers and gentlemen second to none. I feel sure that they have brought distinguished credit to their country and their race by their meritorious contributions here in Burma to the Allied successes over the common enemy. Having worked side by side during construction, Negro troops have gained the respect and admiration of Chinese troops under my command and they join me in this expression of praise. I am also sure that the Chinese people will be ever grateful for your peoples' contributions in helping to establish world freedom for all nations loving liberty."

Re-supply Outfit in Nearly Every Invasion of Pacific

AFRO-American 5-26-45

PHILIPPINES—Activated primarily to supply trained personnel for handling air-borne supplies and personnel for the Fifth Air Force, the 4th Air Cargo Resupply Squadron has seen service in almost every major invasion since August. Balt., Md.

Composed entirely of colored troops under white officers, the outfit was among the first at Biak, Morotai, Leyte, Mindoro and Luzon.

Typical is the action which followed the landing at Clark Field of a huge transport plane loaded with photographic and radio equipment and radar and airplane replacement parts.

Led by Philadelphian

Almost simultaneously with the opening of the plane's side door, a 6 by 6 Army truck ground to a stop and five Tan Yanks, led by Sgt. Frank A. Mitchell of 1928 N. Camac St., Philadelphia, jumped out. 5-26-45

Using one of the newly-developed fork lifts, they unloaded the delicate equipment "on the double," speeding the "top priority" materiel to the front without damage tot freight or plane.

Nearly 80 per cent of the unit, which was commended by the Navy for its action at Mindoro, have been or will be awarded the Good Conduct Medal, while half of the truck drivers have the Automotive Operator's Award.

Few Courts-Martial

Unit court-martials have been kept down by 1st Lt. William Avery of Greensboro, N.C., who instituted an "Off Limits Tent," in which all offenders are deprived of all companionship, reading and writing materials. 5-26-45

The first sergeant is Louis P. McHenry of 719 Howard Rd., S.E., Washington, a Howard University Law School graduate, who was commended by the Fifth AAF adjutant general for investigation necessary to setting up the Clark Field detail.

Awarded Purple Heart

Another Washingtonian is Pfc. Ransteen Johnson, 4853 Rockwood Parkway, who received one of the unit's two Purple Hearts, having been wounded by shrapnel in the Mindoro invasion. He is married.

Sergeant Mitchell, mentioned earlier, and another of the outfit's key men, is single and a graduate of Cheney State Teachers' College, Cheney, Pa., where he excelled in football, track and basketball.

Engineer Battalion Mourns Loss of Brave Pa. Soldier

AFRO-American

Balt., Md.

By CHARLES LOEB
NNAP War Correspondent

5-26-45

SOMEWHERE ON LUZON—The loss of Big Jim Carter, victim of a Jap sniper, has been felt very keenly here by officers and soldiers alike of the 870th Engineer Aviation Battalion.

Big Jim, T/Sgt. James W. Carter, 36, Erie, Pa., a 6-foot, 230-pound former amateur boxer and ball player, was both loved and feared by his men, and he possessed that utter disdain for danger that leads men down the glory trail.

Holder of the Bronze Star for meritorious service during the New Guinea campaign, Big Jim was killed while leading a squad in search of Japs who had been spotted in the vicinity of vital U.S. installations on Luzon.

A Jap sniper got him through the heart after he had killed three Nips with his tommy gun, and a hand grenade had accounted for two others. 5-26-45

Medics Too Late

Big Jim's buddies covered his prone body with a steady fire from their M-1 rifles, but the answering fire of the concealed Nips made it almost impossible to reach his body. T/5 Johnny Priester of Columbia, S.C., went back for help.

A party of medics which included T/5 Percy Irby, News Ferry, Va.; and Cpl. George Basquette, New York City, and the battalion surgeon, Captain Ritter, rushed to the spot, but it was fully 20 minutes before they could reach the body. Big Jim was dead.

Meanwhile the entire area was in a furor. Infantrymen from the 38th Infantry Division, Filipino guerilas, and four picked platoons from the 870th converged on the pocketed Japs, estimated at 200.

The Jap hunt continued for three days, ending April 28, accounting for a total of 160 Japs killed and 21 captured. The 870th was credited with 18 killed and 4 captured. 5-26-45

The 870th patrols were led by Sgts. Leslie Tatum of Mt. Vernon, N.Y.; Whitfield Scott, Charlotte Court House, Va., and F/Sgt. Lenwood Traywick, Southerville, Ga.

The following men each bagged one or more Japs during the brief conflict: Cpl. Johnnie Priester, Columbia, S.C.; Pvt. Milton Shorter, Washington, D.C.; Sgts. Whitfield Scott and Cornelius Roberts.

Praised by C.O.

Eighteen to one is a praiseworthy ratio over here in Luzon, but there's little elation in the 870th over this demonstration that they can fight as well as they work.

"It's a damn poor exchange for Sgt. Carter," Lt. Col. George D. Burch, commanding officer declared with visible emotion. "He was one of the best soldiers I have ever commanded. I shall recommend him for the Distinguished Service Medal. He certainly deserves it." 5-26-45

Sgt. Carter's nearest of kin is his brother, Wilson Carter, 613½ Harr St., Harrisburg, Pa., who has been notified of his death.

The burial ceremony for the soldier was conducted by Chaplain (Captain) Ernest N. Mattison of Washington, D.C., while 28 of his buddies stood at attention, many of them openly weeping as the Battalion Glee Club sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Lift Every Voice and Sing."

Unit First Saw Action At Bay On Bougainville

Ga.

Fought Alongside Vets During The Solomons Fighting

Atlanta Daily World

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The famous 93rd division is being moved into the Philippines on the road to Tokyo while the 92nd division is being readied to return home after battling the Germans in Italy, the war departmentr revealed last week.

The 93rd, the first Negro ground unit larger than a regiment to engage the enemy in this war, first saw action at Empress Augusta bay on Bougainville island early in 1944, when it fought alongside the veteran American division during the campaign for the Solomons.

OVERSEAS IN 1944

7-12-45

In January, 1944, the 93rd went overseas under the command of Major General Raymond H. Lehman of Minnesota, and landed at Guadalcanal on February 7, 1944. The division had its first encounter with the enemy in April on Bougainville and is also entitled to battle credit for participation in the northern Solomons campaign. Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, Glenflora, Texas, is currently in command.

The first all-Negro fighting unit to face the Japanese was the 24th Infantry regiment, now engaged in mopping up enemy remnants on Saipan. Members of this unit recently landed on six small islands in the northern Marianas and captured their Japanese and native inhabitants without a fight. The 24th encountered the Japanese when it landed in the New Georgia islands two days before the beginning of the Battle of the Coral sea, May 4 1942. 7-12-45

SINGLED OUT

This regiment, a regular army outfit, was singled out by the inspector general for its exceptionally meritorious conduct on Saipan where it exhibited excellent discipline and high morale while destroying an impressive number of the enemy.

The arrival of the 92nd from Italy is expected soon.

Brooks Tells Of Entry Into China With First Convoy On Stilwell Road

Chicago Defender Ill.

2-10-45

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD—For two years black and white American engineer troops have toiled through monsoon and heat to blaze a supply route to China.

Today that road is serviceable. The first token convoy has crossed into China with the first Negro soldiers to enter that ancient land and I am with this convoy.

With American and Chinese flags flying from each vehicle, Chinese and American drivers in each cab, newsreel cameramen grinding away, planes saluting overhead, and white-helmeted motorcycle-mounted MP outriders leading the way, this convoy got started in the bright afternoon sun in a frenzy of fanfare from point mile zero on the Ledo Road.

It was December, 1942, that the first American engineer contingent—a black contingent—arrived at Ledo, Assam, in India and poised to plunge into the wilds of northern Burma. They were literally at the end of civilization. Nothing but jungle trails lay ahead. No group before had dared try master this monsoon-swept, malarial-infested terrain which rises and falls into a series of five green-crusted mountains and intervening valleys.

Blaze New Trail

Yet a road to China had to go through, for all existing routes had been closed. China was sealed from the sea. The Japs occupied all its ports. British and American troops had been run out of Burma. Thus the land route across central Burma from the port of Rangoon connecting with the Burma road—the road that thousands and thousands of Chinese coolies had torn from mother earth with their hands—was useless.

That was December 1942. And two weeks when this convoy composed of trucks, carry-alls and jeeps—all loaded with supplies for the Chinese—some even pulling new artillery pieces—moved out of Ledo on the road to China, it stood as a symbol of a hard-earned victory. It was a tribute to American engineering genius and to the strength and toughness of the ordinary GI—better than 50 per cent of whom are Negroes—who have lived in "hell" these two years to make it possible for our government to keep its commitments to the Chinese government and thereby come closer to winning the war.

I have been with these boys as they worked through the jungles. I have seen their lead bulldozer at the point of the road plowing through foliage so thick that daylight never penetrates. I have seen these same bulldozers cutting a new trace 5,000 feet high at the edge of a straight-dropping cliff. Oftimes they worked drenched to the skin knee-deep in mud. At other times they burned in broiling hot sun. They have been discouraged by heart-breaking landslides caused by heavy downpours which no engineering technique could avoid. They have lived on monotonous jungle rations. They have gone for months without even a movie for entertainment. 2-10-45

Some have succumbed to dread jungle diseases—others killed by inevitable accidents. The lead units operated so close behind the fighting lines, they were constantly harrassed by snipers. Yet these troops kept working doggedly forward. So today, though central Burma is not clear and the Japs still have the Chinese ports, supplies can get through by land.

When the convoy left Ledo, I was the only war correspondent who elected to accompany it on this first 270-mile stretch to Myitkyina, strategic center of northern Burma. This was the most difficult section to build. It is also the stretch where most of the colored boys have toiled and sweated to date. So I had a very personal reason for starting at the beginning.

Travelling the Ledo Road again was like coming home. It had been three months since I had first gone over its traces with a convoy—and then it did not lead all the way to Myitkyina. The mountain passes are wider now. Two six by sixes can comfortably go 'round a curve at the same time. The road is hard-surfaced all the way. There were regular convoy stations where one could get a hot meal.

There were motor maintenance shops and gas installations strung out along the way. It could have been any American highway, but for the ever-present jungles standing as background. 2-10-45

Keep Working

But as we rolled through the late afternoon sun and on into the night, there were still thousands of colored boys mounted atop bulldozers and tractors and gravel crushers widening and improving — for weather being what it is in this section of the world, this is a job which will never be completed. They would look up from their work, wave a friendly greeting and anxiously scan the long convoy for the face of colored drivers. They knew its importance as a gesture of friendship to the Chinese and they wanted our allies to know that black Americans had a part too in making it possible.

Time after time clusters of trucks with goggled, dust-covered colored GIs in the cab whizzed past us high-balling it back to Ledo from their regular convoy run. Alongside the road were more Negroes of signal construction companies, stringing new lines of communications. 2-10-45

Later when we stopped for the night Second Lt. Harris, Minneapolis, Minn., a Negro quartermaster put up the whole military press section accompanying me so that we would not have to sleep in the open in jungle hammocks.

Select Nine Drivers

It was Second Lt. Wharton, another Negro quartermaster officer in charge of the rest station mess who saw that we had a good hot breakfast in the morning.

It took three days to complete the trip to Myitkyina. Like the boys I was anxious to know if Negro drivers were to accompany this first convoy to China. This matter was discussed with both Generals Dan F. Sultan, and Lewis A. Pick, in charge of construction, and they immediately ordered that this should be done.

Radios went back to Ledo. Nine crack drivers selected from several colored quartermaster battalions were ordered to draw full equipment and new vehicles and proceed to Myitkyina. These boys have arrived, I have talked to them at the bivouac area. Their names are as follows: Sgts. George Butler, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Harold Lopez, New York City; Cpl. Otis Minor, Smyrna, S. C.; T-5's Richard Barnett, York, S. C.; Sumner Grant, Augusta, Ga.; Richard Street, Millsboro, Del.; Wilbur T. Miller, Tupelo, Miss.; Otha Adams, Sheridan, Ark.; James Aldridge, Louisville, Ky. 2-10-45

Together with T-5 Edgar Moore, Dodge City, Kans., one of eight soldiers from engineering units selected to represent this branch of the service, they were the first Negro troops to enter China.

Entering China in a jeep to become the first Negro soldier of the United States to cross the border was Barnett.

"I didn't know that I was a first," Barnett said, "but I'm proud of the honor because of the folks back home and the fellows who worked on the road with me. We have worked with Chinese and they are fine fellows to work with. For some 15 months they have treated us like brothers. There are few people we would rather help than our new friends. I'm glad to be driving in this convoy."

They are extremely proud of this honor. As Sgt. Lopez said, "I'm tickled pink to be part of this history-making first convoy. I'm sure the other fellows feel the same way. We've worked hard as hell, and we're glad to know that when this gesture of friendship between China and America is being symbolized, our racial group has not been forgotten." 2-10-45

General Pick further stated at a press conference that when regular convoys start rolling into China, colored as well as white trucking companies will be used. If this is done it will put an end to persistent rumors circulating out here that, "The Chinese government has refused to allow Negro troops in that country."

As a matter of fact, Chinese and Negro drivers have worked together for the past two years. Those Chinese, who are on this first convoy, are old Burma road boys who came to Burma when this road was closed. They have slept in the same rest stations and driven alternate convoys with colored boys during this period of time.

Filipinos and Aussies

Courier Journal Louisville, Ky. 8-16-45

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

In an Army paper, Maptalk, your newspaper was quoted as saying that "the Filipinos are our best allies in the Pacific."

I agree with the wholehearted praise given these people by you. The Filipinos certainly deserve it; but they aren't "allies" against a common enemy. My experiences here have convinced me that they are as American as the people of my home State, California, or yours.

Until the Fourth of July, 1946, these people enjoy all the rights of American nationals. When Manila was lost, it was as though San Francisco had been captured, and, when the Philippines were liberated, it was not "allies" but fellow-Americans we were freeing. Louisville, Ky.

Our best allies in the Pacific are the Australians and they too deserve ungrudging praise. Australia has had 870,000 men under arms, including six infantry divisions of 100,000 men fighting the Japanese in Borneo, New Guinea, New Britain and on Bougainville in the Solomons.

These battles have been eclipsed since then by the American liberation of Dutch New Guinea and the 17 U. S. divisions' reconquest of the Philippines; but on V-E Day Australia had suffered 19,430 killed, 35,595 wounded and 25,276 captured, 87,256 casualties out of 870,000 men under arms, or one man in ten. 8-16-45

While we praise the bravery of the 75,000 Filipinos who stood off the Japs at Bataan side by side with 15,000 Americans and the courage of the guerrilla bands during the three years of occupation, let's also laud the six Australian Infantry divisions of New Guinea and Borneo, the 75,000 men of the R.A.F., who supported ground troops not only in the Philippines and Borneo but also south of the equator, and the Australian Navy, whose cruisers Sydney, Shropshire and Australia have supported every landing from New Britain to Leyte and Tarakan and whose cruiser Canberra was lost in the battle of the Solomons.

The war-torn Philippines will need financial assistance aplenty to rebuild Manila. Their agriculture must be helped with seed and fertilizer until the islands can again feed themselves, and they deserve American food every bit as much as did the Dust Bowl victims of the United States.

Australia has not asked for anything under lend-lease but planes, tanks, trucks and guns with which to kill Japs, and farm machinery and seed with which to feed her own fighting troops and the U. S. armed forces in the Pacific. All the Australians want after the war is a share in policing the area south of the equator and reciprocal trade agreements with America so that they can trade gold and wool for Fords and Caterpillars. Canada, Australia and New Zealand are eager to help the U. S. in the big job of feeding the world.

Manila, P. I. Cpl. JOHN C. BODGER, JR.

Discrimination Is Hated By Russians Says Bolden

Atlanta World Ga. 1-21-45

Red Officers Lavish In Praise Of Colored Troops

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
U. S. WAR CORRESPONDENT
(Representing the Atlanta Daily World Newspapers Publishers Association)
(Copyright)

TEHERAN, IRAN— By Courier, Delayed — What are the Russians like? This had been the sixty-four dollar question which had pricked my curiosity for quite a number of years. 1-21-45

During the course of my stay here in the Middle East I have had the opportunity of satisfying some of that curiosity. I have met some of the sons and daughters of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and I have found them to be a people that you can immediately feel at home with upon initial introduction.

SING WITH NEGROES

I have seen the men and women of Soviet Russia working with deadly earnestness and skill. I have eaten sturgeon, herring, and caviar from the Caspin with them, as well as salami and hard bread. I have seen and heard two-head men of the Red Army sing American and Russian songs with our colored GIs. I have seen friendly, blonde Moscow maidens dance with our Tan Yanks. And we have xechanged mutual praises for each others country's contributions in this war against aggression.

This young stripling nation of twenty-six years, which has rejected the poison of racial discrimination and whose ideological hope is to reach that stage in economic development where at the minimum everyone will get samething; has replaced Germany as the greatest power on the continent of Europe, and has emerged as tomorrows' strongest military and industrial force in Asia. It is the new colossus of the twentieth century.

You cannot help but be impressed by the well-disciplined, big, healthy looking, almost perpetually smiling troops in gray-green, mock-bloused uniforms and red tabs of the Red Army. You get the full meaning of total mobilization when you see the Russian women looking neat and amazingly fresh in their plain uniforms or simple dresses, which have been designed more for utilitarian value than for style, working at such tasks as railroad engineers and oilers-jobs which we back home generally reserve for the manual skill of men. Almost all of those whom I saw had well-developed figures. They carried themselves straight and walked extremely well. 1-21-45

Observing these men and women at work here on the supply line, you get a feeling of organization, purpose, and efficiency. They are painstakingly thorough. Every carload of supplies is carefully checked and weighed by their own checkers before Russian authorities will accept it. There must be no mistakes. The Russians do not tolerate such. If there are any-well, among these people you just don't make mistakes. They are exacting in their prosecution of this war and mistakes are considered as crimes against the State! 1-21-45

Husky men of the Red Army load and unload supplies drive trucks and trains, fly planes, and in general keep an over-all eyes on their throbbing lifeline. Healthy, determined-looking women from the shores of the Caspian, who are quite adept at the use of firearms, serve as road guards; and others perform duties as checkers at supply, lumps, interpreters, stenographers, and chauffeurs; while still others work on the railroad.

Some of the men working on the supply line are convalescing from injuries received while at the fighting front. One husky, Georgian youth, who spoke some English and enjoyed my brand of tobbaco, was recovering from a shrapnel wound that had left a depression on his abdomen almost the size of my fist. He was able to do light work and was supervising the loading of supplies on trucks.

PRAISE RACE TROOPS 1-21-45

I had interviews with Lt. Cols. Vladimir Sokolov and Victor Semenchenko, of Moscow, both of whom have seen colored troops in action here on the supply line. Through their respective interpreters Miss Nila Nordstein and Lt. Vladimir Glouskine we were able to exchange conversation with consummate case. 1-21-45

Said Lt. Col. Sokolov, "Negro troops here on the docks, who have been unloading supplies, are very good workers, and soldiers. They are some of the best I have seen. They are deserving of much praise. We judge men by their ability to produce and not on the superficial basis of color and the like. Yes they do well."

Lt. Col. Semenchenko, who has observed the work on at another gulf port here in the Command, remarked to this correspondent that, "Your Negro troops are very hard-working men. They know what to do and like to do it." "You know," he continued, "In Russia that is how we judge a man, by his productivity —his ability to do work. He deserves an opportunity to prove himself. This is a Constitutional right and privilege in the Soviet State." He concluded with the remark that, "We, who have observed your men at work here on the supply line, think that they have done a good job."

SUGGESTS VISITS

The brilliant Miss Nordstein suggested that Americans try and learn more about the Russian people. "People are always more interesting to study and learn things from, than governments," she said. "We try and learn all about your people and you must do the same about ours. Social and cultural intercourse will establish strong bonds of friendship. Your people who can, must visit us more often," she advised. During peacetime Soviet Russia has no restrictive laws against immigration nor visitations.

Russia's post-war economic objective is the reconstruction of war-ravaged areas and a general raising of the standard of living of all its citizens, who have given freely of everything in this war-life, wealth, and leisure. 1-21-45

The USSR will certainly welcome railway and electrical equipment ,mining and industrial machinery-road-building and machine tools; together with engineers and technical advisers. She will also welcome long-term credits in order to purchase heavy equipment. The record of the Soviet nation and the character of its people show that she is deserving of such help. The recrod attests to the fact that the Russians will stick to the letter and spirit of any agreement which they sign. As for their character, the people are now a proud nation, confident in themselves and their leaders, a nation that has met a crisis in the from of a life-and-death struggle and has emerged with the energy, will, and faith to carry out reforms destined to make world history. They know that somebody would have to fight for themselves and their country; they did not count on anyone else doing thier fighting for them; so they prepared.

DELAYS VISIT

I was invited to pay a visit to Russia, but a previous assignment demanded that I delay acceptance of such an invitation until a later date.

This great nation of 16 Federated Republics, 60 different nationalities among them such people as the burnished bronze Buriat Mongols, Tajiks and Turkomans from deep south, dark-skinned Uzbeks, and the Tartars, Ukranians, Yakuts, and Samoyeds from far-northern Siberia, with their Moslems, Armenian, Russian, Georgian, and Mongoloid features; and with a continental area three times as large as that of the United States, will emerge from this war with the largest and most powerful army in Europe and Asia. Industrially she will be outranked only by America and Great Britain. In undeveloped raw materials she will lead the world. 1-21-45

As Tutchev, a Russian poet, wrote in one of his poems, 'You cannot understand Russia with your reason; you cannot measure Russia with a yardstick; you can only believe in Russia.' These are the Russians.

So. Pacific Chaplain Says:

Faiths, Races, Creeds Forgotten On Fronts

Pittsburgh Courier p2 3-17-45

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(ANP)—"When the chips were down and we were facing the implacable Japanese, I found the lines of faith and races forgoten. The Jew fought side by side with the Protestant. The Catholic was on the other end of a stretcher bearing a Negro," Chaplain Karl B. Justus, recently returned from twenty months duty overseas in the South Pacific, said at a meeting of the New Haven Round Table, National Conference of Christians and Jews. 3-17-45

"Out of these experiences," he continued, "is born a bond of fellowship which continues across the years and which even the creeds of different faiths cannot mar." Chaplain Justus said he had been a chaplain aboard a combat transport and though he was a Protestant chaplain, found men of the Catholic, Protestant and Hebrew faiths frequently coming to him with their problems.

Patton Praises Negro Engineers

Daily Worker NYC 4-24-45

WITH U. S. 3RD ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT — Fighting GIs of the 193rd Engineer Combat Battalion have been commended by General George S. Patton for superior performance in assisting the relief of Bastogne last December.

The 183rd was the first Negro organization of its kind to go into action in the European Theatre of Operations under the Supreme Command of General Eisenhower.

In spite of the cold, snow storms and enemy resistance, the 193rd Engineers continued to effectively execute their assignments with the famed 3rd Army. Their work consisted of building snow fences, improving main supply routes, constructing bridges, clearing mine fields, filling bomb craters, and making forward area reconnaissance under fire.

Stillwell Lauds Tan GI's Who Built Road in Burma

Afro American 5-19-45

WASHINGTON

"The spirit of colored troops of an engineering unit in the China-Burma theatre of war is excellent," Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commanding general of Army Ground Forces, declared at a press conference at the Army War College this week. 5-19-45

The general mentioned particularly the 54th Engineers, an all colored unit, among others cited for their work in rebuilding the Ledo Road, which has since been renamed Stilwell Road in honor of General Stilwell's work in the early days of the Burma campaign.

"Before these troops arrived, no one ever thought of working during the monsoon season," he said, "but I have seen these men continue on the job when there was 10 inches of rainfall in one day."

He also lauded colored trucking units in the C-B-I- theatre, especially for their ability to get along well with the various racial groups they came in contact with. The colored soldiers made friends at once with the Chinese and Burmese.

Asked what colored combat units would be used in the Pacific war theatre, he said that the 93rd and the 24th Infantry Divisions were already operating in this theatre but that he did not know whether colored combat troops in Europe would be transferred to the Pacific. 5-19-45

Will Not Change Units In Pacific

Pittsburgh Courier Pa. 6-16-45

Battle Efficiency Will Control Utilization Of All Troops

In reply to a Pittsburgh Courier cable seeking his position on the use of mixed units in the Pacific Theatre of Operations, Gen. Douglas MacArthur declared Monday that:

"The standard of employment of troops in this area, within the scope of my directives, is based not upon race, color or nationality, but solely upon battle efficiency. I assume that only the best and most proven soldiers will be sent here from Europe and if these comprise Negro troops, their welcome and utilization will be exactly the same as that of all others."

WILL USE FIRST ARMY INTACT

His cable said further: "I do not as yet know the divisions which will compose the First Army when it comes here and know nothing of its makeup as prescribed in the European Theatre. However, I haven't the slighest idea of changing in any way the composition of the units which are furnished me and will use them in the form in which they arrive. What happens after that will be dictated solely by the military necessities of the situation."

Making a suggestion, he said, "I am frank to say that I believe you would be making a grave mistake which might well tend to interfere with the war effort if you should endeavor to institute a racial instead of an efficiency basis in the use of soldiers of the United States Army." 6-16-45

ASKED POINTED QUESTION

The Courier cabled General MacArthur two weeks ago asking if he would continue the policy of integration in the First Army, an experiment that proved successful in the final stages against Germany. The cable was forwarded to the general after it was announced that the First Army would be sent to the Pacific to take part in the last lap against the Japanese.

The Courier asked also whether or not General MacArthur would "use this successful example of integration as a guage for complete integration of Negro troops into all armies in your command."

CALLED "SECOND TO NONE"

The cable was sent to the genral after Under Secretary of War Patterson praised the courage of the First Army as "second to none," but declared integration in the Pacific "would be left to, and decided by, theatre commanders."

In the First Army, Negro troops were integrated by General Eisenhower into the First, Second, Ninth, Seventy-eighth, Ninety-ninth and 104th Infantry Divisions.

Details Of Hawaii Mutiny Told By Defender Scribe

Chicago Defender FHL 2-17-45

By HUBERT H. WHITE
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

HONOLULU. — Details of the largest U.S. army mutiny in the Central Pacific were learned this week by the Chicago Defender.

Withheld since July of 1944 by rigid censorship, the Defender learned the facts behind the mass mutiny of Negro troops on Oahu Island.

Behind staggering prison terms given 73 Negro GIs for mutiny on Oahu, was revealed a growing bitterness at the rigid Jim Crow dominating U. S. Pacific bases.

The mutiny of the 73 Negro soldiers began over the army policy of promoting junior white officers above senior Negro officers to command colored regiments.

When Negro officers of the highly-regarded, crack Company E of the 1320th formerly protested this policy they were ousted completely and replaced by all white officers.

The Negro officers of the regiment had sent a formal request through channels asking that the army's promotion policy be reexamined. This promotion policy is said to be based on the white supremacy theory that no colored officer can hold a position superior to a white officer in the same regiment.

The army's answer was to replace all colored officers in the unit with white ones.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Cir. D. 356,512 — S. 539,023
JUN 29 1945

Negro Troops Take 6 Islands With One Shot

Make Their 1st Amphibious Landings of War With 3 Vessels in Marianas

By Wireless to the Herald Tribune

Copyright, 1945, New York Tribune Inc.

GUAM, June 28.—American Negro troops made their first amphibious landings of the war, it was announced today, when two platoons of the 24th Infantry Negro Regiment currently mopping up enemy remnants on Saipan, carried out landings on six small islands in the northern Marianas.

Neither the troops nor the invasion "fleet"—one destroyer escort and two 158-foot LCI's (landing craft, infantry)—fired a shot as the force explored the volcanic islands of Asuncion, Anatahan, Sarigan, Alamagan, Agrihan and Maug. The ammunition expended totaled one pistol cartridge fired by a Saipan native guide at a Japanese who refused to surrender.

Twenty-four Japanese civilians and thirty-eight natives, employees of a Japanese copra company and survivors of sunken Japanese merchantmen, were removed from the islands. Ample supplies and foodstuffs were left for approximately 260 civilians, natives and Japanese, who were permitted to remain. Natives requiring medical attention were taken to Saipan for treatment, along with some Okinawa fishermen marooned in the islands since the invasion of the Marianas more than a year ago.

Maug was the only island that showed evidence of use by the Japanese military. Here the Japanese maintained a weather station, but it had been bombed out early in the Marianas drive. A few survivors of the small force are believed to be still hiding on Maug.

The chief purpose of the expedition was to determine the possibilities of the islands as ditching spots for B-29's unable to complete the return flight from Japanese targets to the Marianas bases farther south. The operation was under the direct command of Lieutenant Commander W. E. Dunlap, U. S. N. R., of Seattle, who participated in a similar operation in the Solomons earlier in the war.

As the troops went ashore, Japanese prisoners manned a microphone aboard the destroyer escort, assuring their stranded countrymen in Japanese-language messages over the loud speaker that they would be treated kindly.

TAN GI'S TAKE JAP-HELD TOWN

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

LASHIO-BURMA 4-28-45 — When this last north Burma Jap stronghold fell before an avalanche of Allied might, first American fighters to enter the city were a company of sun-tan warriors of a Negro "ack ack" battalion.

4-28-45

Heavy guns were still dueling with enemy artillery in nearby hills and the sharp staccato of machine gun fire still pierced the humid air when this company was ordered to secure the airfield on the outskirts of the city against possible Jap air attack.

One half hour after the first truck rolled to a halt every gun was in position and ready to give enemy fighters a hot reception in case they dared penetrate their defense. No Nips came, but because of their efficiency, supply-loaded combat cargo planes of Tenth Airforce were able to zoom into the field within an hour after its capture. In recognition of this accomplishment, Lt. Gen. Dan I. Sultan, theatre commander, who observed them on a tour to the front personally commended their commanding officer.

Begin Final Push 4-28-45

When the final push began on Lashio, this outfit was ordered to proceed from Myitkyina, a distance southward of approximately 225 miles. Travelling in forced stages by truck they arrived in plenty of time for the battle and were ordered to bivouac three miles behind Chinese infantry of the 1st army who were carrying the attack. They were held there as auxiliary artillery in case added firepower were needed. But regular Chinese artillery under American command was able to do the job so they reverted to their basic mission of securing the airfield. When they entered the town they were fully two hours ahead of any other American troops. 4-28-45

T-5 John S. Bemby (Edenton, NC) expressed the opinion of the rest of the company when he said, "We were just itching to get a chance to take a crack at the Nips with our heavy guns. But—hell—they didn't put up a tough enough fight."

Troops Of Both Races Angered By Bad Cartoon

Atlanta World
Ga.

Picture Makes Colored Race Look Ridiculous

5-19-45

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN THE PACIFIC — (ANP) — Hollywood could have made a worthwhile contribution to better race relations by not filming 'Sunday Go to meeting Time,' a Merrie Melody cartoon.

That picture made the GI's around here, white and Negro, very angry.

"A great many people now are working to bring around a better understanding between the white and colored people," one said, "but this cartoon served only to make the colored race look ridiculous.

"Hollywood can make a great contribution toward a better understanding between all the peoples of the world. The money spent on this cartoon could have been spent on a short featuring some of the great colored acts in show business today. Several colored men have gained honor for themselves and their race in combat. Their stories would make great motion picture material. Why not use them?"

Negro and white GI's in the European Theatre of Operations have also pressed their resentment against anti-Negro pictures, especially the motion picture called 'Syncopation."

24th Gets Praise For Saipan Action

Atlanta World
Ga.

5-27-45

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Because of the conduct of the 24th Infantry regiment on Saipan was "so meritorious as to be deemed worthy of special mention," the report of the inspector general's office took the unusual tact of singling out this outfit for high praise, acting Secretary Robert P. Patterson disclosed at his weekly press conference on Thursday.

The secretary took the occasion also to speak of the "success" of Negro soldiers fighting under Maj. Gen. M. S. Eddy, corps commander of the 761st tank battalion in Europe.

IN PACIFIC

The 24th is in the Pacific. The report of the I. G. was this:

"Upon arrival at Saipan, the 24th infantry was given the task of clearing the island of all Japanese not previously subjugated. Since then this regiment is credited with having killed or captured an impressive number of the enemy, and even today is engaged in continuous patrolling and jungle fighting. The morale of this regiment is high, its discipline is excellent and it has definitely demonstrated what can be accomplished with Negro soldiers."

The regiment was established as one of four Negro regiments in the regular army in 1869, its original organization dating back to 1866. As early as 1889 two enlisted men of the 24th had been awarded the Medal of Honor. The 24th participated in the Indian, Saipan, Spanish American and World War I.

PRAISED BY EDDY

The tank outfit was commended in the report of Gen. Eddy. "The speed with which they adapted themselves to the front line under most adverse weather conditions," he reported, "the gallantry with which they faced some of Germany's finest troops, and the confident spirit with which they emerged from their recent engagements in the vicinity of Dieuze, Morville Les Vic and Guebling entitled them surely to consider themselves the veteran 761st."

This battalion is officered by seven white and 32 Negro officers.

Negro Drivers To Carry First Burma Road Convoy

Philadelphia Tribune — Pa.

5-27-45

BY FRANK BOLDEN
U. S. WAR CORRESPONDENT
(Representing the Philadelphia TRIBUNE and NNPA)
(Copyright-Reproduction Prohibited)

NEW DELHI, India — (By Cable from U. S. F. General Headquarters)—Skilled drivers of colored Quartermaster Trucking units will have an important assignment in helping to drive the first American convoy carrying vital war supplies via the Burma Road, it has been officially announced at the U. S. Field Headquarters for the Pacific War Theatre.

These drivers are now at Mitkyina, where they will wait until either the few remaining miles of newly cut roads connecting Mitkyina to Ten Chung are completed, or until the last 23 miles of the old Burma Road are cleared of Japanese. (Editor's Note: The Road is now open.)

The courageous colored engineering and quartermaster units helped build and maintain the initial 460-mile stretch. The new route, known as the Ledo Road, runs from Ledo over knife-edged ridges, through deep gorges of Patkai mountains at an altitude of 4000 feet, down the Hukawng Valley and through dense, rugged malaria-mosquito infested jungle which is torrentially monsoon-soaked, six months cut off each year, to a Chinese town, Wanting, on the Burma border. 5-27-45

The following veteran colored Quartermaster truck drivers are in the group: Sergeants George Butler, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Harold Lopez, New York, N. Y.; Otha Adams, Sheridan, Ark.; James Allison, Louisville, Ky.; Richard Street, Millsboro, Del.; Sumner Grant, Augusta, Ga.; Richard Batnet, York, S. C.; and one member of the Engineering Corps, Edgar W. Moore, Dodge City, Kansas, Authorities believe this will be the first time colored ground service forces ever entered China. A representative of the group stated: "We are proud of the honor to represent our country and race on this first important road mission aiding China.'

Negro Troops On Jap Front

Peoples Voice
N.Y.

ABOARD SHIP (ANP) — After 18 months here at this particular "Somewhere in New Guinea," the officers and men of the Southwest Pacific area's only all-Negro anti-aircraft battalion are saying farewell and will soon be located in a forward area closer to the combat zone. 5-19-45

Under the command of Major Cato Baskerville of New York the battalion has just completed extensive combat training. Walking among the men and talking to them, one feels a sense of excitement that cannot be described in words.

The only Negro combat unit here, these boys will now be given the chance to prove their ability and courage under fire.

The Call 5-25-45 Kansas City Mo

5,000 PESOS ON HIS HEAD.—Captain James Coleman, American Negro leader of Filipino guerrillas, on whose head the Japs placed the price of 5,000 pesos. Coleman and his band of Filipinos and Negritos eluded the Nips for three years, stealing their supplies, harrassing their patrols and killing unwary enemy troops until the Americans returned to the Philippines. In the first picture, Capt. Coleman poses with his wife and children in their home at Angeles, Pampanga, Providence, P. I., for the NNPA war correspondent, Charles H. Loeb. The center picture shows a full length picture of Capt. Coleman, and the picture at the right shows the captain explaining the technique of the bolo to Tan Yanks who gather at his home to listen to tales of his heroic exploits while a leader of guerrila forces in Luzon during Japanese occupency. —Loeb Photo for NNPA.

Loeb Describes Landing on Luzon and Fight With Japs

The Call Kansas City, Mo. 1-26-45

Missouri Youth In LST Which Aids In Battle, Watch Enemy Planes Fall From Allied Fire

By CHARLES LOEB

LUZON, Philippine Islands. — By Cable — Wednesday, Jan. 17. — American forces had expanded a 15-mile beachhead on Lingayen gulf to a depth of 25 miles in the general direction of Manilla when this correspondent rode through the surf atop a bulldozer driven by Cpl. Burnam Metcalfe of Charleston, Mo., of the 810th Aviation Engineers battalion.

The LST, one of four that had transported the battalion to the Philippines, had reached the gulf on E-day plus 4 and stood at anchor in the harbor while American battleships off shore threw shells into enemy pockets of resistance miles inland.

Our LST, "the ugly duckling," had plowed steadily ahead in the "coffin corner," of the huge convoy of ships on a route, our air arm provided cover during the day and the convoy was routed to pass the points of imminent danger at night.

CHARLES LOEB

1-26-45

fox holes or had hidden in the city's outskirts until the shelling was over. They had been a little puzzled at the shelling because all the Japs had fled when the Americans arrived, Oris declared, but they were happy to see an American uniform. The Japanese were very cruel, he added.

We learned that in addition to the 810th Aviation Engineers, the 1998th quartermaster trucking company and the 3667th trucking company were on Luzon. The latter two came in with TM troops on E-day. Two of the 1998th members, Cpl. Calvin Thomas and Pfc. William C. Adams of Philadelphia, gave us a lift in their truck to the inland.

Riddle Plane 1-26-45

Alerted gun crews stood by their posts constantly. Around 6:15 o'clock in the evening, enemy planes were reported off our stern. Gunner's mate 3rd class Thomas Topper of Ashtabula, Ohio, an expert on plane identification, identified them as Jap Oscars. The twin 40s on our stern opened up a full minute ahead of the rest of the ship's gang. Soon we had two planes bracketed by our tracers. We watched the tracers go through one ship and its pilot, hell-bent.

As the convoy neared the end of its journey, it ran into the lone and feeble Jap attempt to stop its progress. Around 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a Jap pilot made a dive out of a low-hanging cloud at a Liberty ship off our port side. 1-26-45

Heavy Bombardment

The plane fell near the side of the ship and battered into the ocean. Suffering only negligible damage, the ship remained in the convoy. While our LST went through the tortuous work of unloading heavy tractor trucks, bulldozers and scrapers on the beach, I joined forces with Billy Rowe, the brilliant Pittsburgh correspondent, and we probed the ruins of the city of Lingayen.

The heavy bombardment had wrecked most of its important buildings near the beach and a miraculously small number of natives had been killed.

Genardo Oris, a Filipino in charge of native labor crews aiding the Americans, told me that the citizens of the city had dug crashed over the convoy, landing in the sea about 100 yards astern of the LST and about 50 feet from the LST on which our sea company was loaded. 1-26-45

Our boys lifted a terrific cheer as the Jap hit the water. A few minutes later, a withering fire from the game guns accompanied by one of the water-cooled .50 calibre machine guns, set up on deck by the 810th, caught another Oscar in their fire. The gunners followed the diving plane almost to water level, riddling it before it hit the water.

The crew of the .50 calibre machine gun was in charge of Sgt. Edgar Arms, 101 Hayes St., La-Grange, Ill.; Cpl. Elva Bradshaw, 1324 South Halstead St., Chicago, and Cpl. Norman Simpson, 29 M St., S.W., Washington.

In the Navy crew was one Negro gunner, Steward's Mate 1st class Robert E. Woody of Covington, Va. We saw at least five Jap planes downed.

30 Men Under Lieutenant King Prove Experts

1-2-45

Claim No Soldiers In Army Better Than This Unit

Memphis World

By LT. JOHN MACAULEY

WASHINGTON-It was the fifth night after the initial American attack on the Philippines. Thirty Negro soldiers--soggy with wet and fatigue--crouched on their rain-filled foxholes near Palo with the water up above their chests.

1-2-45

Within the last two hours, while the rain pelted down incessantly they had helped beat off three Japanese attacks. And now, as the storm dribbled to a stop, the Japanese were trying a different maneuver. They were infiltrating into Palo on the opposite side of the American fortifications. There was almost no defense against this sort of thing.

The Japanese were really close now. Most of the soldiers were holding their fire, for firing from a foxhole gives away ones' position. One of the Negro troops whispered softly to the young white lieutenants in charge of the beleaguered unit:

"Lieutenant King," he muttered "should I fire when I see one of those——?

Wisley, King didn't answer.

Then came another voice, a bit louder, more insistent: 'Lieutenant King--" "I'm hit, Lieutenant King--" "Help Lieutenant King."

Second Lieutenant Dewey King, TC-24 year-old, 200 pound former freshman tackle from Auburn and Mobile, Ala., could take it no longer. He raised his head slightly and peered into the darkness around him, seeking the wounded man.

1-2-45

NEAR PERFECT MIMICRY

"What--" he whispered, and a billet tore through the sandbag on the brim of his foxhole, a fraction of an inch his head. He ducked and held his tongue the rest of the night. The anguished cries had come not from his own men, but from the Japanese! Their mimicry was nearly perfect. Too prefect, perhaps, since most of the Negro troops in the unit were from Northern cities- and Southern accents were a bit at a premium.

The 30 Negro soldiers were all duck drivers, and these chaffeurs of seagoing trucks had joined the invasion on the first Liberty ship to reach the Philippines. Their story, and the story of this first American merchant ship and its gallant crew and Navy armed guard, is told graphically by Lieut. John Macauley, USMS, War Shipping Administration representative with the invading force.

1-2-45

Macauley first met the Negro unit the day before the Liberty ship left a New Guinea port for to Philippines. At that time, neither Macauley nor the men knew their destination.

"Obviously," he wrote "the coming operation was to be no soft touch for this Liberty. This was learned by merely observing the soldiers who came aboard. There was an ack-ack unit, which would be one of the first in the area, one of the first Army units to be relied on for defense against Japanese bombing. Another was an ordnance outfit which would keep replacing vital equipment. There were 30 Negro duck drivers. It was said they would be the first troops off the ship—"

1-2-45

MACAULEY MEETS KING

Later, on Attack Day, Macauley met Lieut. King, the U. S. Maritime Service training center "shavetail" who was in charge of the eight ducks, the amphibious trucks used for carrying small amounts of cargo from ship to shore, up the beach and to combat troops.

"There are duck drivers and duck drivers," he wrote that day, "but the 30 colored boys now under King's command who trained as both drivers and mechanics are experts in their line. They were especially chosen for ability cleanliness and intelligence. They are proud Negroes and King has kept them that way. Both King and his boys were untried in combat until this afternoon, but each day during this trip, King has gone after to feel his boys they must not let him down. Once one of them answered.

"Don't worry sir. We'd all follow you to Manila and back again.!"

1-2-45

Later in the day, when the Liberty ship was being unloaded and the duck crews were rushing ammunition to the front, Macauley wrote:

1-2-45

"King and his boys have spent the entire day going in and out of the small town of Palo. Palo has already fallen, but Jap snipers have made it hot for the unarmed ducsk. Still he kept leading them in and not one of his men has hesitated.

"The shadows are lengthening across the water as the correspondent (Macauley), King and his driver and mechanic make their way towards the beach. The bucking of the duck over the waves makes it difficult for the correspondent to beat out his story on his typewriter which he is holding on his knees. We are on our way to spend the night ashore. King's round, sweaty and begrinned face is beaming. The night to come has no terrors for him. His main fear has been stilled; his men have stood their 1st fire, stood it very well.

NONE BETTER

"By damn!!," he says, "There ain't no soldiers in this man's Army that kin do better than mah boys."

Three days later, when the unloading of the Liberty ship was almost completed, Macauley wrote:

'Last night about 6:15 we found a small sandy beach and decided to spend the night there. King and his driver pulled well above the water mark and signaled the other ducks in. The enlisted men began to dig their foxholes. It was getting dark and they were working fast. An ordnance officer, Captain H. W. Richardson, whose mother lives at 219 Elm St. Mansfield, Mass., and who had hitched a ride with us, suggested that instead of establishing our own perimeter we might do well to find someone else who had been in the region more than a few minute.

1-2-45

"King, always considerate of his foxholes, demurred. At the moment a bullet hit the side of a duck and went singing out over the water. This decided him. We moved up the beach about 50 yards and stumbled right into a camp that was completed blacked out. The men were having coffee. It tasted delicious. The major in charge of the camp told us we could bed down for the night whenever we could find a clear space of ground near aslit trench. The colored enlisted men went down on the beach to dig their own holes.

NO SLEEP ALL NIGHT

"But there was no sleep all night.

1-2-45

Right after breakfast, five Japanese planes attacked the convoy. One of the planes, hit by flak, went out of control and landed on the deck of a nearby vessel. The ship turned turtle and sank. Another dived straight for the Liberty ship, but a 19-year-old seaman first class remained at his gun and kept shooting at the plane even when its wing hit the edge of the sailor's tub and flung hot metal into his torso and face. The plane crashed into the ocean and exploded Macauley and one of the duck drivers Corp. Ray Peoples, of Cleveland, Ohio, rushed the wounded youth to a beach dressing station.

That night, while King's unit staved off attacks from their water-filled foxholes, the Japanese tried the mimicry trick. It failed however, and the Japanese crept closer.

"They were less than 20 yards away," Macauley wrote. "Sometimes our soldiers would fire at them-more often not. One of the duck drivers next to the correspondent, a big rangy ex-Golden boxer named Karl Mahone, took careful aim and fired. There was a Jap scuttling past on the dead run right in front of us. A fusilade of bullets must have been hitting all around him. He zigzagged inward and we saw his arm fly back and forward.

"There was a blinding flash as he hurled the hand grenade into a dump of over 200 boxes containing 105 and 155 howitzer shells 40 and 30 mm. shells. The Jap could not have survived the explosion. The blast from the first box of ammunition blew the correspondent's shirt off as if it were tissue paper. Then it really started.

HORROR OF WAITING

"There would be the deep-throated crackle of 20mm. ammunition and tracer would spangle the sky in all directions. The resounding bank of 40 mm. shells the roar of 105 howitzer shells ,the earth-shaking crash of the 155s turned the night into a horror of waiting 50 feet away, of wondering whether too much ammunition was going to blow up But the small stuff kept going off in salvoos while the big shells seemed to go off one at a time. We dug our faces into the mud and prayed. And how we prayed! Near the correspondent a colored youth was mumbling the Lord's Prayer. We all ran the gamut of every religious plea we had never learnedd."

1-2-45

It was not all prayer and defensive fighting, however. The next day on other occasions, the duck drivers paid off the Japs for that night. One such occasion arose when Macauley was writing his dispatch on the ruined varanda of the town grammar school in Palo. This shed was used as the assembling place for the duck drivers in carrying their ammunition up to the front.

"Groups or doughboys from this unit are patroling the village streets and searching every house as often as possible. A Jap runs right across in front of the corsrespondent with a party of yelling Yanks in pursuit. One of the colored duck drivers, T/5 Pedro Croughter, runs alongside the Nip and puts three carbine bullets in him. Before the Jap has been on the ground three seconds he is riddled with tommy gun M-1 and carbine shells...Later the Filipinos flushed another soldier of the Emperor from under a house. American rifle fire killed him."

1-2-45

In concluding his account of the unit's operations, Macauley wrote:

"Those Negroes had stood like the Rock of Gibraltar-Cpl. James Brown, 1015 N. Caroline St., Baltimore, Md.; Sgt. Osuah Aceptin 142 Ashton St., Los Angeles, Cal; Pfc. Lillean F. Carter, Farmingdale, N. J.; Cpl. Karl Mahone, 2457 Delaware St., Gary, Ind.; Cpl. James A. Johnson, 31 Plainsfield Ave.; Scotch Plains, N. J.; Cpl. Jos. C. Williamson, Jackson, Miss.; Cpl. Eminir B. Hawkins 1405 North 18th St. Philadelphia, Pa.; Cpl. James A. Ross, 56 Kenilworth St., Orange, N. J.; Pfc Jas. Williams, Baton Rouge, La.; Cpl. Karrie Davis, Route 2, Box 63, Vamville, S. C.; Cpl. Zachariah Brinkley, 214 Reid St. Elizabeth, N. J.; Cpl. Paul Wright 2217 East 76th St., Cleveland, O.; Cpl. Jas. S. Wells, 161 North 37th St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Cpl. Pedro Croughter, 49 Veronnica Place. Brooklyn, N. Y.; Cpl. Judge Paterson, 162 Oakwood Pl., Orange, N. J.; Sgt. William O. Jenkins, RFD 3, Box, Henderson Tenn. Cpl Philip Lee, Apt. 2, 501 Hendric St. Detroit, Mich.; Sgt. Tommy L. Thorpe, 209 Madison St., Macon, Ga.; Sgt. William Thorpe, 662 E. Ferry Ave., Detfoit, Mich.; Cpl. George E Hope, 259 Taylor Ave. Columbus, O.; Sgt. Lucius Smith, 255 Cole Alley, Memphis, Tenn.; Pvt. Eddie Ford, Route 1, Box 141A. Caledonia, Miss.; and Cpl. Jas. K. Johnson, 1424 New Jersey Ave., N. W. Washington, D. C They had come through a first and second night of harrowing combat like veterans."

1-2-45

And in describing the Liberty ship's departure, five days after it arrival and two days after its whole crew had helped unload the freighter's military cargo in less than three days, he wrote:

'At sea the ship is riding out the storm. She should ride it out; she is, in seamen's parlance, "a lady," however ugly and battered. And to whom she will be a greatman vessel-not great in the individuajed sense of the ARC ROYAL, the ENTERPRISE, the BOISE, but in the new tradition of steel men on steel freighters, which began when the US Merchant Marine became the first American service to enter World War II, when a took pen in hand and signed the Lend-Lease bill--'Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Problem Of Negro Soldiers Being Based In China Still Unsettled

Atlanta World - Ga.

3-18-45

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World And NNPA)

NEW DELHI, INDIA—(Mar. 13) — The perplexing problem as to whether Negro soldiers in any appreciable numbers are officially wanted or not wanted in China has not been definitely answered, at least not as far as this correspondent is concerned.

There is little doubt but that the problem is somewhat of a "hot potato" and all things considered must be handled with the utmost of caution so as not to contribute towards the rupturing of Allied diplomatic relations

EASED IN, EASED OUT

In previous dispatches I reported that a few of our Tan Yanks had been eased in and eased out as rapidly as possible during the course of "routine duty." The acute need for trained and experienced truck drivers to handle convoys over the newly opened Stilwell Road (Burma Road) until such time as Chinese soldiers now being trained as drivers can take over, necessitates the use of just about all available American personnell that can be spared. I am convinced that at the present moment our colored GIs, who are being used for such duties, are also being used to "test the line." And so far there have been no repercussions from such action.

Tan Yanks Eased In And Eased Out Of Allied Nation

3-18-45

Suspicion concerning the problem was first aroused when it was learned that no colored drivers had been chosen to help drive the first celebrated convoy; when it was well known by all and sundry that some of the best and most experienced convoy drivers in the entire theatre were to be found among the veteran "Tan Cannonballers" who had made Ledo Road history. Many of them were among the first American troops to set foot in that area. And it was also well known that high American military officials thought and still think highly of the ability of the colored GIs here to "produce the goods" in the face of adverse conditions and especially when the blue chips were down. There was some definite reason why the colored drivers were originally omitted and I doubt seriously that they were just "overlooked."

REALIZE INJUSTICE

However, and upon second thought, some of our ranking officials realized that an injustice had been done in not originally giving veteran colored troops representation in the first convoy. And at press conference some of the correspondents had also brought up the matter; so, ten Negro GIs were ordered to join the convoy at Myitkyina, over 200 miles from Ledo, in Assam. These ten "firsts" made the entire trip as I have previously reported.

While in Kunming, China I saw some 60 more colored drivers who came in with another convoy and they were allowed more privileges in the city by their commanding officers than the first Tan Yanks were. However, none remained longer than three days. As fast as weather conditions permitted all were flown back to their respective bases in Burma.

With the largest number of colored soldiers being represented in the Service Forces and also being represented in maintenance branches in practically every theatre of operations where U. S. Army troops are serving, one naturally expected to find some based in the China threatre where much of the work is of general service classification. But such was and is not the case. There are none based anywhere in the theatre.

RIGID CENSORSHIP

Censorship being what it is in China makes it extremely difficult to interview or quote high government officials. The only official statement on the matter coming from Chungking appeared in Generalissimo Chiang Kaishek's newspaper "Chung Chen Pao," Feb 8. It was a reply in answer to a question regarding the employment of Negro GIs inside the boundaries of China which was put by an American correspondent during a Foreign Press Conference. The answer in effect was, "We have not yet heard of this kind of rumor. The Chinese Government will make no racial or color discrimination." The Chinese Government spokesman was Mr. P. C. Chang.

Much has been written about the present Kuomintang Government of China and much has been withheld by rigid censorship. There is a complexity of representation and it is not safe for one to make accusations nor definite criticism based upon pure guesswork.

It is known that there are some influential and intellectual Chinese who believe in the policy of "Asia for the Asiatics' 'and also give little or no recognition to minorities who in their own countries might be considered as having a lower caste status. This being the case, an American Negro holds the status of being both an Occidental and a minority member of America's great melting pot. Then there are others who realizing that the American Army which is aiding so much.. together with U. S. Lend-Lease aid. has its own definite policy regarding the handling of colored and white troops and because they prefer not to be committal one way or the other by so doing the feel that China may be accused of condonning our Army policy on one hand or interferring with our military help and Lend-Lease aid on the other,) they remain completely mum on the issue.

Colored Soldiers Find Warm Welcome In China

Philadelphia Tribune
3-17-45

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
(NNPA War Correspondent)

KUNMING, China.—As a result of further traffic over the newly-opened Stilwell Road (formerly the Burma Road), colored soldiers are now coming and going to and from here with regularity.

It was only a short while ago that the first colored GIs arrived here and I have seen quite a few since that time. At the time of the first arrivals, rumors were then making the rounds to the effect that Tan Yanks were not wanted in China.

Recently I was informed that during the normal flow of traffic over the Road colored drivers as well as white would be used until the Chinese drivers, who are now being trained, were able to take over the task from all American GIs.

As originally reported from an interview with Major General Gilbert X. Cheves, Commanding General of Services of Supply in the China Theatre, military expediency demands that the number of SOS units here are all white, and according to officials it is doubtful if any further additions will be made. General Cheves, who recently assumed command here, plans to work with the available troops which he found at his disposal.

NO DISCRIMINATION

3-17-45

Speaking for Lt. General Albert C. Wedemeyer, Commanding General of the New China Theatre, whose headquarters are at Chungking, and himself, Gen. Cheves stated that neither of them had any knowledge of any racial discriminatory policy directed against the basing of colored troops in the theatre.

One such unit of colored drivers, who have arrived here since I have been in the city, had an interesting time. Things were much different with them than with the original ten GIs who arrived with the first convoy. This unit received the opportunity to go to town and enjoy themselves with as much liberty as any other unit of enlisted men. 3-17-45

In his welcoming address to them General Cheves gave both praise and advice. He complimented them for making the trip without an accident and for taking good care of government property. He asked if there was anything that he could do for the men, and one lad asked if it would be possible for him to, purchase a whole chicken for himself, whereupon Gen. Cheves ordered a chicken dinner plus ice cream prepared for all of the men with one whole chicken especially cooked for the young GI who had asked for it, and without cost. Finally, he informed them that they all had the privilege of going to town in order to see the sights and to purchase souvenirs. A warning was also given to the GIs to beware of the common elixir that cheers known as "chin pao juice" (means air raid alarm) which is made from raw power alcohol and any kind of fruit juice. Two drinks of it qualifies anyone to become a member of the "Boot Who" club, and it usually entitles the drinker to an MP escort.

CENTER OF ATTRACTION

3-17-45

Later, when the eager lads filed into the city they found themselves, much to the amusement of some and much to the embarrassment of others, a real center of attraction. It was indeed a novelty to the natives, the majority of whom had never seen Negroes before, to see these tall husky GIs of varied pigmentation, in U. S. Army uniforms, and who also spoke English. As you know, the Chinese are small in stature and these "giants" with the big hands and flashing smile were to these natives wonders from another world. The Chinese papers here called them "Indians."

Wherever the Tan Yanks went crowds of children and adults followed with looks of pronounced curiosity etched deep into their faces. One English-speaking native said that the various shades of complexion of the Tan Yanks rated as mystery number one to the populace. Some of the GIs refused to budge outside of the American Red Cross Headquarters because everytime they ventured out and sauntered one block down the street in either direction they would find themselves leading a parade.

I was standing on the sidewalk talking with Sgt. Peter Cole, of Washington, D. C.; Cpl. Thomas F. Griffiths, Baltimore, Md.; Cpl. Alma J. Lecator, Norfolk, Va.; T/5 Lawyer E Davis, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Pfc. Esau Gathers, Mt. Pleasant, S. C.; and Pvt. Stonewall Newberry, of Elko, Ga., and within the short space of ten minutes a crowd, whose size made it seem as if its members were assembling to listen to an address on "One World," gathered on the sidewalk and overflowed out into the middle of the street; thus obstructing traffic. The crowd's attention seemed to have been focused upon the six-foot-two inch Cole, who became quite embarrassed. The MPs asked us to kindly move inside of the Red Cross building so that normal life in that section of Kunming might be resumed.

SOON LOSE SHYNESS

3-17-45

No lawyer ever pleaded harder in defense of his client that I did with those beashful GIs who refused to leave the Red Cross building and enjoy themselves like the rest of their buddies were doing. By telling them that they were pioneering, that here was a fine chance to "win friends and influence people," and by agreeing to accompany them on a tour of the city, I was finally able to get them to venture outside of their sanctuary.

3-17-45

That night I returned to town and bumped into several of the bashful Yanks of the afternoon before, and they were enjoying steak suppers. They were not alone, now they were getting along. One of them jokingly replied, "Who wants to go home?" All smiled. So did I.

Their bashfulness soon disappeared when they found that the natives would return a smile for a smile, would serve them with generous courtesy and hospitality in their eating establishments and wait upon them in amicable fashion in their curio shops.

Negro Heroes Moved Up Guns to Win Iwo

Daily Worker N.Y.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 9.—The work of a Negro Army amphibious truck company the afternoon of D-Day on Iwo Jima "made the difference between taking the island and handing it back to the Japanese," according to a letter received here by the parents of Lt Grover I. Groves, white platoon leader of the heroic Negro men.

The Negro company braved a hail of Japanese mortar and artillery fire on the Iwo beach to bring in the big guns needed by the Marines. If the guns—105 mm. howitzers—had failed to make the shore, U. S. forces might have been forced to withdraw from the island.

Lt. Groves wrote: 4-10-45

"I can't give enough credit to my men. I hope there is some way everyone learns of the marvelous way these colored boys performed.

"I landed my platoon at 2 in the afternoon on D-Day. We were carrying 105 howitzers and ammunition for the Marines. We were under terrific mortar and artillery fire while coming in and while on shore.

"The beach was too steep and too soft to get up, and when we landed we stuck right to the shore until a tractor could pull us up. My men stayed in their vehicles under terrific fire and got their ducks (amphibious trucks) ashore, some of the ducks so shot up they could not go back into the water.

"One of my sergeants was hurt when he was crushed between a duck and a tractor. He was trying to get wounded casualties off a beached duck. Another man stayed with his stuck duck carrying an artillery piece while everyone else was in a foxhole. I could go on and on about the men's brave conduct. I am proud to belong to a colored duck company with the calibre of men that are present in this outfit."

Sgt. Larry Schulenburg, Marine corps combat correspondent, wrote of Lt. Groves' outfit: 4-10-45

"The Marines on Iwo Jima will never forget this company of colored soldiers. Japanese on Mt. Suribachi were raking the beaches to plaster Marine units trying to dig in before nightfall of D-Day. There was no Marine artillery ashore yet. Machine guns were no match for mortars and heavier Japanese guns.

"Then early in the afternoon this Negro outfit started inland in 50 Japanese truck company bobbing, swaying ducks, bringing with them the 105 mm. howitzers, the long-muzzled guns which since swept Iwo with salvo after salvo.

"When the colored boys finished 48 hours later they had lost 29 out of their 50 ducks, but the guns were emplaced and working. In the face of huge odds only two guns were lost."

Landing on Iwo Jima Made Possible by Tan Marines

AFRO-AMERICAN 3-31-45

Balto. Md.

IWO JIMA (Delayed)—Aware that machine guns were no match for mortar and heavier Japanese guns, colored marines on D-Day landed the 150mm. howitzers which were the difference between taking the island or leaving it. 3-31-45

Early in the afternoon members of the amphibious truck company started inland in fifty "ducks." When they finished 48 hours later, they had lost 29 ducks but all except two of the guns were emplaced.

One first sergeant told how some drivers had ducks shot out from under them. One man, T/5 Francis Goodrich, he added, refused to abandon his duck and gun, and swept 13 miles out, where a destroyer picked him up.

Constantly Exposed

Although told frequently by the marines to jump off their ducks and take cover, the drivers stood up, exposed, to unharness the howitzers, and, after them, the ammunition, he declared.

Typical of the heroism of the entire unit was that of Pvt. Leroy Gillian of South River, N.J., who having brought his gun inland, returned for a load of ammunition.

Although told to take cover, he unloaded the ammunition under direct mortar fire. Now, he, with others of the outfit, his helping drive the Japs from the island.

Block Lily-White Cafe in Manila

AFRO-AMERICAN 3-31-45

By CHARLES LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

MANILA. (By Wireless)—The watchful eye of Guy Richards, New York Daily News correspondent, stymied old James Crow who had worked his way into a cafe on Manila's scattered Azcarriga Aveune. Richards spotted a neatly-printed red, white and blue sign over the cafe's door reading: "We cater to white service men only." Balt., Md.

Richards, Billy Rowe of the Courier and I went to the shop where the proprietress, Margarieta Veluz; the Filipino bartender, Romiraldo David, and the Chinese cook, Lem Oy, told us that white customers had complained two weeks ago and that a white technical sergeant had advised that the sign be placed there.

Jim-Crow Sign Destroyed

Both the bartender and the cook had objected. They tore up the sign after we pointed out the absurdity of brown people discriminating against members of darker races. 3-31-45

Several GI's, including Cpl. Horace J. Reeves of Atlanta and ranging from two to twenty on this run from fifty miles south of Berlin on in to the target.

These aircraft were mostly ME-262, though a few tailless rocket ME-163's were observed. They attacked the bombers mostly from the rear in groups of two to eight.

Over Capital 40 Minutes

Lieutenant Brown, who was among the flyers participating in this mission called to give newsmen a firsth-and account in a press conference, said he fought for forty minutes over Berlin and that jet-propelled planes seemed everywhere.

Brown said Nazi pilots seemed reluctant to fight escorting fighters and tried to capitalize on their planes' excessive speed to make passes at bombers and dart away.

Brown said that the first jet he jumped, the pilot bailed out when he saw he was in a tight spot and the other one died in the plane as he scored direct hits causing the aircraft to explode in the air.

Hasn't Seen Berlin

"I still haven't seen Berlin," he said in answer to a query about how that German capital looked now, "and I was kept so busy I just didn't have time for sight-seeing."

During the entire run, thirteen jet-propelled aircraft were shot down, with other victories credited to bomber gunners and another fighter group also escorting our bombers.

This mission to Berlin is believed one of the most successful yet pulled by the 15th AAF and a record for aerial victories over jet planes. Jet encounters in air have taken place since last August in the Mediterranean, but not here until December 9 when the first offensive formation was encountered by Colonel Davis's group composed mostly of photo-reconnaisance planes.

... 2 Get DFC; 3 Promoted ...

Lieutenant Brown and Capt. Armour G. McDaniels of Martins credited to First Lieut. Roscoe C. Brown, Jr., of New York City; First Lieut. Earl R. Lane, Wickliffe, Ohio, and Flight Officer Charles V. Brantley of St. Louis, Mo.

This marked the group's second encounter iwth German jet-propelled planes. The first came during the second week of last December when the group was escorting bombers to targets in the vicinity of Munich, Germany. On this occasion one jet of a small formation made a pass at the bombers and darted away without scoring a hit or being hit by chasing fighters.

Trip a Surprise

The run to Berlin came as a surprise to participating bomber and fighter crew personnel, as previously this was not deemed feasible due to adverse weather conditions.

When news reached Colonel Davis's group that the target for the day was Berlin, every pilot wanted to fly the mission.

Jet-propelled planes were encountered in numerous groups

In a letter to the AFRO this week, a sailor said that the commanding officer went into each dormitory and urged the men to attend the show.

"Mhen," he was quoted as saying, "I found out why you aren't at the show. That recreation hall belongs to you men and no one has the right to tell you where to sit. You sit where you please.

"I didn't know anything about that order. Will you go over to the show for me?"

Blames Southerners

"When the boys agreed," the letter stated, "the officer said he would not tolerate such practices, so both colored sailors, who are in the majority here, and whites sit together, eat together and play together."

New Guinea Veteran Two Go AWOL To Join White Combat Division

Pittsburgh Courier 4-14-45

Chicago Defender 4-14-45

Chicago, Ill.

Praises All-Negro Unit

1-20-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Some accomplishments of the all-Negro 207th Coast Artillery Antiaircraft Battalion in New Guinea were revealed here by 2nd Lt. James A. Taylor Jr., Washington, D. C., now convalescing from an operation at Forest Glen Convalescent Center, an annex of Walter Reed General Hospital.

One battle star for the New Guinea campaign is worn by Lieutenant Taylor, whose wife, Mrs. Inez Burke Taylor, lives in Washington and is an employee of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. He explained that he was with the 207th C.A. outfit from August 1943 to August 1944.

He spoke proudly of their proficiency and cited the Inspector General's report on the battalion, prior to their commitment to battle. The report termed the 207th the "most thoroughly trained" and his grade was the highest given the western part of the island.

Set Out For Front Lines

It was the nearest they had been to actual combat and they decided to see some action. They strapped on their combat gear, satisfied with the shouldered their carbines and set given them, but off for the front lines 40 miles about it other away. 4-14-45

In two days they arrived at the rice, of Hartford, headquarters of the 128th Infantry Regiment of the 32nd Division, George G. Haines, matters in their reported to the commanding officer t a taste of what and told him they wanted to fight. he army to do— He was surprised when he 4-14-45 learned how far they had come ers of a laundry and was impressed by their enarrived in Leyte thusiasm. He made them ammumatters when fighting nition carriers. Though they performed their duties without com-

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

LEYTE, Philippines Islands.—There are quite a few soldiers over here who are dissatisfied with the army has given them, but jobs the army has not given them, but do anything about it other than gripe.

Sgt. Robert L. Price, of Hartford, Conn., and Pvt. George G. Haines, of Georgia, took matters into own hands and got a taste of what they came into the army to do—fight.

Both are members of the company which arrived in Leyte early in December when fighting was hottest in the Ormoc sector in plaint, they reminded their platoon leader that they had come there to fight.

Finally they were given rifles and assigned to a squad. For 18 days they fought with an all white regiment of an all white division, and when the fighting was over, they started back to their outfit.

Upon their arrival they were charged with being absent without leave and confined to quarters where they entertained other members of their organization with thrilling stories of their experiences at the front.

Before a hearing could be held on the charges, a letter of commendation praising their courage under fire and their aggressiveness and signed by the infantry commander was received by their commanding officer. The charges were dropped since the boys had been attached to the combat outfit during the period of their absence, and they returned to washing clothes. 4-14-45

Their work is just as boresome as it ever was, but memories of the glorious 18 days they spent fighting the Japs enables them to endure it.

MacArthur Hails Daring Tan Yanks

Pittsburgh Courier 3-10-45 Pg.

By BILLY ROWE
(Courier War Correspondent)

CORREGIDOR, Philippines — General Douglas MacArthur trod blood-splotched Corregidor Friday and saw the American flag flipping to the breeze, playing over the "rock" facing Manila harbor. It was a great day for our forces. The men who fell under the heels of the cruel Japanese in April, 1942, were avenged.

Paying colorful tribute to the horde which returned to take the island, the General did not single them out by names and races but called them his men. The fact that tan yanks have given great aid to every Pacific operation is accepted without question. 3-10-45

MANY NEGRO UNITS

Filling out supply lines are many Negro units always working, fighting when necessary. Cast in the more glamorous role, tan men of the Navy added weight to the battle for the "Rock" by covering white troops who landed on Corregidor.

Manning battle stations with the PT fleet, they fought in the best tradition of the Naval service. Behind twenty millimeter machine guns these tan gobs pitched into the fight. It was the fleet's task to clear Mariveles Bay of enemy shipping. 3-10-45

Negroes among fighting sailors were: S. 2/c Percy Brooks, Pittsburgh; S. 3/c Edward Clarence Hearn, Chicago; S./c Willie Burrel, Dallas; S. 1/c Elmer Lowe and S. 2/c Clarence Leonard, both of New York.

Overseas with the torpedo fleet for two years, these men have fought in many Navy engagements. Among them are Paliu, Leyte and Mindoro.

COMMIT SUICIDE

As General MacArthur saluted the rising flag on a battle-scratched and scarred pole in shadow of the Administration building where General Wainwright surrendered, the enemy was then blowing himself up in caves. 3-10-45

Across the bay tan yanks were stepping into the pages of war history. In the gray midst of early dawn, after ducking and dodging floating mines, the first convoy arrived in harbor. Out of the bowels of LSTs stepped members of the 820th Amphibian Truck Company, first group in the convoy to arrive in the harbor littered with sunken enemy shipping. Among them were 1st Sgt. Robert F. McMickens, Indianapolis; S./Sgt. Juan Allen, New York; Sgt. Rufus A. Gardner, Los Angeels; Charles Pivalo, New York; Carl Jeffries, Pittsburgh; Corp. Ralph R. Dix, Baltimore; Nathaniel Agnew, Washington; Pfc. Stanley F. Allen, New York; Privates John E. Cary, Cleveland and Charles Gray, St. Louis. 3-10-45

BUSY UNLOADING

On another portion of the dock, tan yanks of the 218th Port Company were busy unloading first Army cargo ship to hit the harbor. Doing one thing or another were 1st Sgt. E. F. Cannon, Tex-New York; John F. Hatchett, Virginia; Sgt. Samuel Peterson, Washington; Thomas Shaw, Richmond; Corporal Levi B. Adams, Louisiana; Walter Lane, Philadelphia; Willard Bonner, Pittsburgh; T./5 Everette Payne, Washington, D. C.; T./4 Eddie Wilkins, Norfolk; Pfc. Mark T. Cooper, Pvt. William C. Taslor, Pittsburgh; William H. Harris, Baltimore; Cyril Haynes, Louisiana; Joseph Leonard, New Orleans; Robert L. McKenney, North Carolina and George Coler, New Orleans.

For The Marines On D-Day

Colored Soldiers Braved Fire To Put First Gun On Iwo Jima

Pittsburgh Courier Pg. 3-17-45

By S/Sgt. ALLEN SOMMERS
(Philadelphia, Pa., a Marine Corps Combat Correspondent)

IWO JIMA—(Delayed)—Four colored Army duck drivers braved Japanese bullets and mortar shells on D-Day here to bring ashore the first big howitzers of a Fifth Marine Division field artillery unit. The four men, who hail from different parts of the country, were under continuous fire while the big guns were being unloaded and while they returned to the beach a second time with ammunition.

Army Pvt. Willie Hawkins, 21, of 928 Market Street, Atlanta, Ga., described the beach as "plenty hot" and Marine casualties as heavy.

GOT "HOT" RECEPTION

"But, those Marines were still coming in," he added.

Duck operator Pvt. Jerome D. Collins, 36, a trumpeter in civilian life, was forced to swing his heavily laden vehicle through wreckage on the beach, and damaged landing craft before he was able to reach his position.

"It was too close a shave," said Collins, who lives at 1237 East San Antonio Street, El Paso, Texas.

"That beach was no plaything," according to Army Pvt. Josh Goodwin, 20, of 1215 W. Ninth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, who was among the first of his outfit to reach the beach. 3-17-45

BULLET HITS DUCK

"It was tough enough trying to plow through that soft volcanic beach without the Japanese bullets and mortars," he added. He is the husband of Mrs. Marguerite Goodwin of the Cincinnati address.

Army Pvt. Thomas Tillman, 34, of Route 1, Polkton, N. C., suffered his only real effects of the Japanese fire when a bullet passed through his steering wheel and bounced up against his instrument panel.

Troop Drivers Do Million Truck Miles Without A Major Accident

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

HEADQUARTERS, 13TH ARMY AIR FORCES, Southwest Pacific—Wheels on the trucks of a quartermaster company of the 13th AAF ground out over 1,000,000 miles without a major accident in 18 months of operation overseas, it was announced recently. 1-27-45

The trucks in this outfit, driven, serviced and maintained entirely by Negro enlisted men, have hauled everything from bombs to casualties. Unusual assignments are run-of-the-mill for this quartermaster unit, for the 13th AAF's sweep from the Battle of Guadalcanal to the Philippines in less than two years has required superhuman tasks from its supporting ground personnel.

DIVE FOR FOX HOLES

In the early days, when the Japs were still attempting desperately to drive American forces from the truck company's home island, the sky was dotted with Zeros nearly every day. When a alert sounded, the men dived for foxholes. With them went some of the precious truck parts they had snatched up at the first sound of a siren, which were too valuable to leave exposed to falling bombs.

The repair and maintenance battle never ends. The rain, glue-like mud, jagged coral particles, and rot and rust haunt the dreams of the truckmaster, First Sergeant John A, Angrum, of Los Angeles, Calif., and his assistants, Staff Sergeant Edward Gordon, 625, Savannah, Ga., and Staff Sergeant Arthur A. Hourtman, Detroit, Michigan. Brake drums, for example, are often found to be packed with silt when the big wheels are removed. 1-27-45

Members of the company, acting on the plans of Sergeant Gordon and Hourtman, built a truckwashing trailer from salvaged equipment. The ambitious maintenance crew salvaged a motor from a wrecked jeep, fixed up a rotary pump, procured a universal joint, a hose and a regular fire hose nozzle. The result: A combination washing trailer and emergency fire-fighting unit! 1-27-45

NEEDED BRAKE LININGS

Another neat trick helped relieve the strain of the tightly-stretched Pacific supply lines. One nightmarish day, 20 of the badly-needed trucks were idle for lack of brake linings. It was urgent that they get back on the road and keep precious supplies moving up to scattered air force units. Two enlisted men came through with a solution—a home-made, but effective substitute for brake linings. They stripped machine belts into proper lengths, adjusted them, and the trucks once more rolled off airstrips of the "Fightin' 13th."

The mechanical wizards who solved this crisis were Technician Fifth Grade Louis Stewart, Richmond, Virginia, and Technician Fifth Grade Choice Williams, Miami, Florida.

The men in the truck company have fewer nightmares, now. With the 13th AAF assaulting the Japs in the Philippines, in Borneo, and the Dutch East Indies, supply lines have been strengthened and expanded. The days when the Allies fought a desperate war against overwhelming odds are over, and the 13th's bombers and fighters have gone on from Guadalcanal to neutralize the Solomons, Bougainville, Rabaul, Kavieng, Truk, Yap, Palau, the Schouten Islands, the great oil base at Balikpapan, Borneo, the Halmaheras, the Celebes, and more recently, the southern Philippines.

MacArthur Proud Of Part Played In Retaking "-Rock"

Atlanta World, Ga.
3-6-45

BY CHARLES LOEB
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World And NNPA)

-- MANILA — March 2 — (Via Cable) — I stood on top of "The Rock" and with Jubilant GI'S of the fighting unit that recaptured corregidor saw the pride — filled face of Gen. Douglas MacArthur follow every upward inch of progress as old glory was again raised on the flagpole in the parade ground where it had waved until ignominiously pulled down by the Japanese in 1942.

Now the little men are paying for their brazen affrontery. The remnants of more than 5,000 were blowing themselves up inside the caves. Even as we watched the ceremonies on nearby Cavallo Island. Our dive bombers were bombing and strafing the remnants of Japanese troops who chose to die there. It was a proud day for American arms. Revenge was sweet and will be sweeter in the days to come. 3-6-45

INTERVIEWS TORPEDOMEN

But my most prideful moment on this day was to see and interview Steward 3/C Edward Clarence Chears of Chicago, Steward 2/C Perry Brooks of Pittsburgh, Steward 1/C Elmer Lowe, New York City and Steward 2/C Willie Burrell of Dallas, Texas, who were among the crews of the deadly little torpedo boats which helped clear the mine-swept waters of Manila Bay for the landing of our amphibious infantry men.

Chears, who was assigned a machine-gun post during hostilities, told how the little torpedo boat avengers tore through the harbor, banging away at Jap ships and barges, and reducing machine-gun positions ashore. 3-6-45

Meanwhile they formed a protective cordon for the destroyers and warships whose guns were clearing away for our landings. From his position on the deck, Chears could see the first of many white chutes open over the rock as men of the 540th Parachute troops showered down atop "The Rock' to race twice their number.

AMPHIBS ACTIVE

After the preliminary shooting was over, these little Marine Hornest aided in landing infantrymen of the 24th, their flashing speed baffling Jap snipers ashore. In Manila Harbor lay the first cargo ships to bring in vital food,

S/Sgt. Juan Allen, New York City; S/Sgt. Oliver Norrell, Richmond, Va.; T/4 George Jones, Kansas City, Mo.; T/5 Jack F. Higbee, Cleveland, Ohio; Pvt. James A. Britt, Atlanta, Ga., Pvt. James R. Tiller, Philadelphia, Pa. and T/5 U. Wilson D. Cotner, Louisville, Ky., who were in combat or assigned to the less heroic tasks of arms.

You simply cannot keep those sepia scrappers out of the thick of things. When the history og Bataan and Corregidor is written and signed there will be many a sepia thumbprint affixed to give it authority. 3-6-45

White Confers With General Mac Arthur

Atlanta World
3-6-45 Ga.

New York, N. Y. —(SNS)— A conference with General Douglas MacArthur was scheduled to be held March 2 by Walter White, NAACP Secretary, now in his office from Leyte P. I., he is observing the treatment of Negro soldiers in the Pacific and conferring with high army and navy officials on their role in World War 11. He has already visited Hawaii, Johnston, Kwagalein, Guam, Saipan, the Phillippines and Dutch Guinea. 3-6-45

A book just published by Doubleday Doran, A Rising Wind, gives the first complete account of Mr. White's trip overseas and his observations of the Negro GI's plight in the European theatre of operations in 1944.

Race Prejudice Unheard Of On Battle Front--Reporter

N.Y. Amsterdam News 3-3-45

LOUISVILLE, (ANP)—The battle front is completely void of racial prejudice, Fletcher Martin, war correspondent for the Louisville Defender and the first Negro war correspondent in the Pacific theater, declared last week to an audience gathered at the Quinn Chapel AME church.

N.Y.

"Men on the front lines honestly work for no other," he declared as he expressed the hope that 'the world to which they return will be decent, without race riots.'"

Sordid Conditions

"If a man is a truck driver or a concrete mixer," the 29-year-old correspondent said, "he is still doing a big job. Negroes build the air strips on Saipan from which B-29 Super fortresses took off to bomb Japan." 3-3-45

Further declaring that "nothing is worth what these men suffer," Martin described the battle story of the 24th Infantry when the Negro unit was sent into the front lines on nine days' notice after spending 24 months loading and unloading ships. "But," he explained, "they fought like dogs." 3-3-45

Further describing the sordid conditions under which soldiers fight, the correspondent told how both Negro and white men encounter severe heat and tropical insects, to say nothing of the bothersome Japs.

Embittered Servicemen Want Change

N.Y.

N.Y. Amsterdam News

Men In Pacific Say They Want Fair-Play; Editor Makes Comment

1-13-45

A group of GI's from various sections of the United States who are now stationed somewhere in the Pacific War Theatre with an Engineer battalion don't like the kind of treatment Negroes are receiving "back home." . . . Even more, they are doing all they can to help improve conditions at home—not only by fighting the enemy, but by contributing their blood-and-sweat dollars earned on the battlefield.

After reading the October 28, 1944, issue of the AMSTERDAM NEWS which carried a story by Barbara Lewis on "Fights Virginia 'Justice'" which described how a battle she had on a Jim Crow bus down in Virginia and how she was forced to face charges in court, of which evidence did not bear out, and that she was "broke" and needed money to push her case to escape a jail term, this group of GI's sent money orders (via the AMSTERDAM NEWS) for $133 to help fight Mrs. Lewis' case.

Others have contributed following an appeal which appeared in this paper, but we are making mention of this grant because it does more than offer money to a worthy cause —It gives America an excellent picture of how our boys overseas feel about this Jim Crow business "back home." Part of the letter, signed by Pfc. Robert Davis stationed (censored) follows:

They Are Embittered

"We were surprised and strongly embittered, upon reading to find such cruel and ignorant methods as were applied in the case of Mrs. Barbara Lewis to still be in practice in the United States.

"It's needless to say how we feel about such demonstrations of Fascism and when we return we will do all in our power to help abolish it there as we are helping here . . .

"In answer to the appeal for financial aid for Mrs. Lewis, enclosed find money order totaling $133 to be used in her behalf contributed by the members of this battalion with Cpl. Edgar L. Lockhart of New York as chairman and myself as secretary of the Soliciting Committee.

Post-War Promise

"It should be noted here that the members of this battalion are natives from various sections of the United States and not just natives of Northern states and you can well understand that when we return such showing of unity as is demonstrated here will continue to be an asset to us."

The Editor Replies

Cpl. Edgar G. Lockhart, Chairman
and Pfc. Robert Davis, Secretary,
Soliciting Committee
For Barbara Lewis Fund,
Co. B 1894 Engr. Bn.,
APO No. 244, c/o Postmaster,
San Francisco, California

Gentlemen:

This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter in which you speak of how the men of your outfit were surprised and embittered upon reading the Amsterdam News and finding that such cruel and ignorant methods as were applied in the case of Mrs. Barbara Lewis are still in practice in the United States. We also acknowledge receipt of money orders for $133, which you sent to aid Mrs. Lewis in fighting a case.

We agree with you that the case was tragic, and as men fighting intolerance far away from home, we can understand you well when you write: "It's needless to say how we feel about such demonstrations of fascism and when we return we will do all in our power to help abolish it there as we are helping here . . ."

We want you to know that we on the home front are carrying on also in order that America shall be a better place in which people of all races, creeds and colors may live in peace. While there are far too many incidents like that in which Mrs. Lewis was involved, we would like to report that we have made some gains, and that by continuing the fight we shall make more.

With the newspapers, welfare organizations and forward-looking and liberal-minded individuals, white and black, constantly on guard, many steps have been and are being taken to protect minority groups in the United States.

Since you went away, the United States Supreme Court has outlawed the white primary in Texas, which indirectly dealt a terrific blow to the nefarious poll tax system in the South, and with the progress that is being made it is likely that complete enfranchisement for all citizens all over the country is not far off.

2. There are now two Negroes in the United States Congress.

3. Two bills are right now being presented to the New York State legislature for the establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, and strong measures are being taken to secure enactment of similar legislation by the congress of the United States.

4. Jim Crow laws still exist in the South but at least one state in that section has already laid plans for legislation to outlaw segregation in public conveyances, such as street cars and buses. Virginia is the state in question, and the incident of Mrs. Lewis, which occurred in Virginia, may serve to hasten the abolition of that state's Jim Crow transportation laws. Your contribution will play an important part in this fight.

5. Negroes have made gains in the armed services, although discrimination and segregation have not been wiped out. Yet, Negroes have been advanced to some high places in the Army, the Navy, the Marines, the Maritime Service and the Coast Guard.

GI's on Leyte Enter "Living Hell" to Save Ammunition

Balt., Md
AFRO-America
AN 1-6-45

LEYTE, Philippines (Delayed) —Two members of an amphibious tractor unit attached to the 96th Division were recently cited by the War Department for having entered an ammunition dump and saved three huge amphibious trucks loaded with mortar and artillery shells.

S/Sgt. Robert Jones of Roxbury, Mass., says of the men, Clarence Jackson of Washington, and T/4 Samuel Bryant, NYC; "They entered a living hell to save the ammunition.

Surmount Obstacles

Others praised for bringing up supplies and ammunition, despite muddy roads and terrain thought impassable, are T/4 Prince E. Anderson, Sgt. William H. Holland, T/5s Leonard Ingram and Allen Smith, all of New York; T/4 Daniel J. Everetz, Bridgeport, N.J., and Pvt. Everett Elam, Broomfield, N.J.; T/5 Mayo L. Gentry, 2384 Chambers of a Transportation Corps Northwest; T/4s Robert Mitchell, 926 S. 15th Northeast, Washington, member; T/5 Robert Philadelphia, and Sgt. Samuel McCamey, 226 47th Street, North-east, and Robert Wiley, 3028 Parka Place, all of Washington. Pfc. David Ingram, 3869 Alabama Ave-

Black Robin Hood Of Samar Enthralls Eletcher Martin

Atlanta World Ga.

Virtual Ruler Of Northern Tip Of Philippines

BY FLETCHER P. MARTIN

U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Atlanta Daily World and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)

Copyright—Reproduction prohibited

Atlanta World 1-4-45

WITH GUERRILA FORCE ON SAMAR ISLAND, PHILIPPINES—MAJOR FRANK MERRITT — (By Courier) During the recent attempt to find the Negro guerrilla leader, Frank 'Pedro' Merritt, this correspondent was told many daring tales of the 'Black Robin Hood of Samar.' Since weather conditions, distance and presence of enemy troops thwarted the search — the summation of these various stories gives some insight into the personality and the conditions surrounding him.

There have been many reports on the man, Frank Merritt, and the soldier, Major Merritt. Many vary, but they agree on one point — he's an excellent soldier. Arrogant, dogmatic, a stern disciplinarian. One officer put it:

"He can out-drink, out-dance, out-curse, and out-fight most of his fellow soldiers."

RESPECTED LEADER

He's been in and out of trouble with the brass-hats, but he still commands the largest and most respected guerrilla army on Samar. And soldiering is his meat, having graduated a third lieutenant from the 'West Point of the Philippines,' Constabulary Academy in Baguio which is nestled in the mountain province of Luzon.

Part Negro and part Filipino, Merritt is black, with kinky hair. A vigorous youth fitted him with powerful legs loosely joined to slim hips. These balance a huge torso that muscles into wide shoulders on which are placed a bull neck and handsome, broad head. Almost five feet ten, he is much taller than the average Filipino which makes him appear even taller than he actually is. He's thirty-two.

BORN IN LUZON

Born in Luzon of an American Negro soldier and Filipino mother he was brought up a strict Catholic, even studying for the priesthood. However, he exchanged the bible for the rifle and thusly began the stormy life of Merritt, the soldier. One that was to see him the virtual ruler of northern Samar, its protector, its Black Robin Hood.

Following surrender to enemy forces at Corregidor, organized resistence in the Philippines was quitted by American forces temporarily. Jap forces moved southward — Mindora, Panay, Leyte, Cebu, Samar, Mindanao. There was little organized resistance to the Japanese occupation of Samar Island, third largest in the Philippine Group. Scattered parties banded together and harrassed enemy installations as opportunity afforded. The enemy did not concentrate any strength since Samar was not of operational importance.

Guerrillas established themselves in unoccupied areas. It has been stated that their means of obtaining support were as varied as they were numerous. Terror methods causing compulsory cooperation by civilians. Civilians were wooed by government officials and establishing civilian agencies.

ESCAPES JAPS

1-4-45

At the time of surrender, Merritt, then captain, was attached to the Leyte Provisional Regiment stationed at Ormoc. He refused the order to surrender and escaped to the mountains of northern Samar and immediately organized the nucleus of his force. He nursed a hatred for the short-statured, malicious invading Japanese and vowed the sword rather than the pen. He made himself colonel and began absorbing other small guerilla groups in northern Samar. The time, May, 1942.

Evidently, it was apparent to Merritt that organizing an Army was just one of the jobs which he was destined to do. He had to win the people. And most of them were simple farmers with a fear of God and of the modern weapons and might of the enemy. Japanese paraded their strength, the American force, those who did not die or effect escape, were beaten. The people hesitated while getting the bad news which slowly filtered thru then fled headlong into the mountains. Confidence and a desire to avenge had to be instilled in them once again.

Politics on Samar, as other places in the Philippines, had a foul odor. Old, festered political scores were settled by powered crazed politicians. There was no time like the present, and no law and order. The condition seemed an exact replica of the infamous Tombstone of Wild West yarns. It has been proved that civilian Filipinos were dying at the hands of Filipino civilians.

TAKES ACTION

1-4-45

That was the condition Merritt faced. And remedying caused what has been termeds harsh method. One source stated that his relations with the civilian population left much to be desired. The people were held under control by terror tactics and anyone opposing the army was eliminated.

But, it is believed by many questioned, that the ends justified the means. Training schools for officers and enlisted men were established. A Volunteer Home Guard, Women's Auxiliary Service, hospitals, ordnance works, transportation and communication facilities established.

Back to the war at hand, Merritt's guerrillas were low on ammunition. In fact, low is an understatement. Americans were able to sneak in little but not enough to serve the cause. There was one thing left to do — make ammunition and weapons.

BUILDS WAR PLANTS

From timber and bamboo two ordnance plants were constructed under Merritt's supervision. A Tommy gun was produced by using water pipes. Bows and arrows were made with powder in arrow tips which exploded on contact. Much of the powder was got from floating mines which drifted along shore. From cadre units the guerrillas collected used shells, refilling them with powder.

The enemy did not take Merritt laying down. They wooed the Pulahanes group which was organized under Bonang, a woman, and an old man. Cubalan, who is reported to be mentally unbalanced. The group is still active in the areas of Gandara, San Jose de Buan, Matuginao, and Wright on the west coast. They have been reported as receiving enemy assistance and being supplied with ammunition to fight Merritt and other anti-Japanese elements. Their reported strength is 3000, including women and children.

Because there were several guerrilla forces operating on Samar and the general command was not unified, General MacArthur stepped in. The reason was apparent — guerrillas began mistrusting each other.

REFUSES OFFER

A Colonel, Ruperto K. Kangledon was unifying guerrilla forces on Leyte, and late in 1943 he dispatched Lieutenant Col. Causing, his chief of staff, to Samar to try and contact forces in an attempt to unify guerrillas, both on Samar and Leyte.

Merritt distrusted Kangleon. And he was advised by Colonel Marcario Peralta, 4th Philippine Corps commander, to refuse Causing's weakness and his love for peace and normality in this time of war.

Merritt refused.

The Negro fought his war in the north. He isolated himself, and while in bitter struggle, continued civil improvements. He was lord over what he surveyed, a deadly fighter, a scholar, a protector of the largest individual area on the island.

On November 15, 1944, he was awarded the Silver Star of the Philippine Army by President Quezon.

As the guerrillas condition on Samar became clearer, it was proved evident that to win against the enemy the whole of the command had to be unified. Merritt had emerged as the strongest leader in the north, Causing appeared to be the southern leader. The situation dragged.

AGREE TO UNITY

In September 1944, an American officer representing GHQ reported the guerrilla leaders, Merritt, Causing and a Major Abia representing the southern area, met at his headquarters for the purpose of unifying the forces of Samar. In order to get American military recognition, the leaders agreed to unify under any commander designated by GHQ. On October 4, such a commander was appointed. Merritt was immediately made his Chief of Staff, and officially given northern Samar.

The last report this correspondent received before leaving the area was that the Negro had recently killed 16 Japs, and less than 150 were thought to remain in his area.

From most reports, Merritt represents Samar's struggle. Merritt is Samar; Samar, Merritt. A family man who lost his only child while he and family were evading Jap troops, he stands to see the fight through. His mind and body are fitted with the makings of greatness. His vision clear. He is young, he's ambitious. And what are his postwar plans?

He wants to go into the lumber business. To harness the northern waterfalls for his mills. And if fortune smiles — to some day visit the land of his father's birth America — with his young wife and mother.

Praises Work Of Negro Troops On Ledo Road

Ga.

1-6-45

Movie Actor, Pat O'Brien Is Impressed

Atlanta Daily World

NEW YORK—(ANP)—The Ledo road is "the eight wonder of the world." This is the opinion of Pat O'Brien, movie star, who returned recently from China-Burma-India theatre of the war, and paid tribute to the heroic efforts of Negro Army engineers. As head of a USO-Camp Shows unit, he appeared in 84 shows over a 40,000 mile trip.

"The road is blasted out of solid rock for long stretches," said Mr. O'Brien. "Working and living are hard but we never heard a gripe out of the boys. All we ever heard was 'thanks' and questions about what it was like back home and what it would be like when they got back."

Members of the troupe saw two of the "seven wonders of the world" within a week, the Taj Mahal and the pyramids, said Mr. O'Brien, but the greatest admiration of the troupers was for the work and spirit of the men they entertained. Most of their audiences along the road were predominantly Negro.

In one performance, the GI's held candles and acted as "human footlights," continued Mr. O'Brien, while in another, the small organ borrowed from the chaplains' corps broke down and the performers had to sing the show.

56n-1945 Guam- Pacific F.S.

The Tragedy of Guam

All of us grow weary of constantly complaining about segregation and discrimination.

We would like to be able to stop complaining about it, but those in authority will not let us do so.

Take, for instance, the case of the forty-five Negro sailors who have recently been convicted of rioting on the island of Guam.

Pittsburgh Courier

These Negro sailors were minding their own business, trying to do their best to serve Uncle Sam, when white Marines stationed nearby began attacking them.

The Negro sailors refrained from retaliating until conditions became unbearable.

Pittsburgh, Pa

Then they answered these attacks in kind and were promptly arrested, tried and convicted by Navy courts-martial.

Walter White wrote a story about the abominable situation, but the Navy censor refused to send the story, marking it "for release on July 11, 1945," when the Navy felt that it would be too late for public opinion to be aroused by this miscarriage of justice.

So far as we know none of the white marines has been arrested or tried for the attack on the Negroes.

7-28-45

Now colored people are supposed to accept the conviction of the Negro sailors without protest as if justice had been done.

The Navy is wrong if it thinks that colored people are going to say nothing about what amounts to an atrocity.

Guam, Retaken From Japs Now A Beehive Of Activity

Atlanta Ga Daily World

BY CHARLES H. COLE
(NNPA War Correspondent)

GUAM—Guam was the first piece of American populated real estate snatched back from the Japs on our relentless push across the Western Pacific. Within a year we have built it into the most powerful bastion in the Pacific. The harbor now handles more cargo than any other forward area port in the world. Thousands of tons of vital cargo needed for our shattering blows against the enemy's homeland are loaded and unloaded here daily.

The island contains covered storage space today equal to the area covered by 26 large city blocks. Supplies are stored in hundreds of large and small Quanset huts and wooden buildings, in strange contrast with the open-air dumps we saw in New Guinea and Philippine campaigns.

8-14-45

Ten Marine Field Depot companies; Negro enlisted men commanded by white officers, are responsible for much of the movement, storing, and protection of the heteregeneous supplies that go to forward areas where combat marines sweep on to new glory.

When the first of these companies arrived shortly after the island was declared "Secured" conditions were indeed primitive. We had invaded the islands in the monsoon season, and the heavy rains had left the island's few dirt roads a quagmire and the beaches nothing but mud-filled swampland.

Members of a Marine Depot Company who arirved here arrived here last November 4 can recall they were forced to sleep in puptents before even temporary camps could be constructed.

Activated at Munford Point, Camp Lajeune in May 1944, the unit had spent some time at Pearl Harbor and Eniwetok, but this mud-smeared Pacific hunk of coral and jungle was a new experience for most.

One of their first assignments was patrol duty on which, they learned that a "secured" islands is not necessarily void of enemy troops Sgt. William Wheeler, 938 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, was one of the early patrol leaders whose squads succeeded in bringing in several prisoners.

If there are any Jap remnants on the island they must be buried very deeply, for today shapely Guamanian girls walks to their stores and villages and along the miles of paved highways without fear. Guamanian farmers work their small plots and attend their churches and barter in the public markets.

Members of the company long ago exchanged their puptents for weatherproof squad tents boasting wooden floors. Company streets are carefully graded, and beautified by miniature picket fences surrounding rock gardens planted by the men in their off hours.

There are about 2000 men in the area. Among them are many specialists..... operators of fork lifts and cranes, clerks and checkers, mechanics and truck drivers.

8-14-45

The unit has won no citations for their efficient but colorless duties, but the following men have been highly praised for their proficiency in certain specialized work to which they have been assigned; Pfc A. Thomas, Clearmount, Fla.; Pvt. N. Carter, Washington, D. C.; and Pvt C. Florence, Burlington, N. C. for excellence as tank repairmen in the Ordnance section of a Field Depot. Pfc. James Perry, Anderson, S. C.; and Cpl. Thomas Howard, Lexington, Ky.; for excellence in Motor Transportation duties. Cpl. H. W. Flack, Knoxvile, Tenn.; and Pfc. H. E. McLean, Branham, Texas, for excellenct work in the Artillery repair section. Pfc. J. A. Wright, of Philadelphia; Pvt. J. H. Burrall, Washington, D. C.; and Pfc. H. H. Johnson, Los Angeles, for small arms work Pfc. D. F. Hunter, Alexandria, Va.; Cpl. H. Spann, Sumpter, S. C.; Pfc Harold Jackson, Chicago, and Cpl. Willie Robinson, of Jacksonville, Fla., for work in the carpenter section, salvage section, fire controy section, and instrument repair section, respectively. These men were given promotions on the basis of such performance.

In accordance with the policy of the Marine Corps to staff Negro units with Negro non-commissioned officers as rapidly as possible, the company and the nine other units at the Field Depot have Negro non-coms.

8-14-45

Non-coms in the company include: Acting first Sgt. Claude T. Wright, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Gunnery Sgt. Theodore P. Silas, of Lake Charles, La.,; Platoon Sgt. William Cannady, New York City; Sergeants William Wheeler, Brooklyn; Frank L. Wright, Hot Springs, Ark.; Leroy Morgan, Knoxville, Tenn., and Peter Williams, Winston Salem, N. C.; Corporals Sheridan J. Reynolds, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Willie F. Robinson, Jacksonville, Fla.; George Rowe, Fayetteville, N. C.; Harmon Spann, Sumpter, S. C.; Ned Wilson Gary Ind.; Murry Wiley, Washington, D. C.; Charles O. Wililams, of Columbus, Ohio; Hugh W. Flack, Knoxville, Tenn.; Joe N. Frazie Cincinnati, Ohio; Lorenzo Grahan St. Petersburg Fla.; Leroy D. Hil Memphis, Tenn.; Thomas B. How ard, Lexington, Ky. and Charles I Jones, Louisville, Ky.

COOKS AND COMMISSARY BRANCH — Staff Sgt. James M Culbreath, New York City; ACK (cook assistant) Cecil G. Ellison, o San 'Antonio, Texas; ACK Edwar Johnson, Baltimore, Md.; ACK Danforth Hawkins, Augusta, Georgia and ACK Wesley Lowery, o Cedartown, Ga.

NAVY PERSONNEL IN DISPENSARY — Phm. Second Clas Lorenzo Watson, Phm. Third Clas William S. Moore, and Hosp. App 2/c Perry Baxter, all of New York City.

COMPANY CLERKS include: Cpl. Calvin Goins, Gallaton, Penna.; Pfc. Altha C. Harris, Springfield Mass.; and Pfc. Rufus Wright, of South Amboy, N. J.

Sparking the recreation program in the newly-constructed recreation hall built by the men in their spare time, is Pfc. Lawrence A. Jacobson, New York City, who is acting recreation sergeant, Jacobson is an unusually accomplished musician, plays the piano and cornet and other brasses, and is a former student of the Juillard Conservatory.

Morale was good among the enlisted men, the food was excellent and the non-coms were in a fever of excitement over the beginning of construction of a Non-commisisoned offers club they expect to "christen" within the next two weeks

Serving on Guam

Afro-American Baltimore Md. 9-22-45

LT. (j.g.) JAMES R. BROWN, first colored Navy chaplain in the Pacific, who arrived on Guam Aug. 14 and will serve Bluejackets at U.S. Naval Barracks 1. Chaplain Brown preached his first overseas sermon aboard the Navy transport that brought him to Guam, and reported an enthusiastic reception from white troops who were en route to Okinawa.

Mixed MPs On Guam B-29 Base Prove Inter-Racial Units Work

Chicago Defender Illinois

8-25-45

BY ENUC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

GUAM AIR DEPOT, HARMON FIELD, Guam—The mixed—Negro and white—military police force charged with the security of this gigantic air depot is often erroneously referred to as an experiment, Sgt. Albert Mills, of Pittsburgh, declared recently.

"An experiment," Mills pointed out, "implies a test, the results of which are uncertain. This is not that at all. What we have here "is the recognition and application of a fundamental principle, the validity of which intelligent people have long been aware."

Mills, as a city policeman in Pittsburgh, patrolled a neighborhood, largely Italian, in which few if any Negroes resided, for two years before coming into the army.

Here at Harmon Field, he's a desk sergeant, working out of the headquarters of Maj. Kenneth J. Peterson, white, Manti, Utah, provost marshall.

Dispatches MP's

On 12 hours at a stretch and off 36, Mills receives all calls and dispatches MP's scattered throughout the area with whom he is in constant radio and telephonic contact.

Only one third of the MP force here is made up of Negroes which means that most of the men whom he dispatches to investigate complaints and who report to him are white.

"Since I've been on the job," he said, "I havent' had one unpleasant experience, and neither have any of the other Negro MP's so far as I know, and the fellows here come from all sections of the country."

Former Cop 8-25-45

Mills originally planned to be a social worker and spent two years studying at the University of Pittsburgh. Running out of money, he took the civil service examination and became a police officer.

Though a policeman is not exactly a social worker, Mills feels that his education has been a definite asset.

Major Peterson was high in his praise of Mills and regards him as one of the most valuable members of the MP force at the field.

The MP company, of which Mills is a member, has been stationed here since March of this year. It is the only Negro aviation MP company in the service and was activated October of last year at Barksdale Field, La.

Commanded by Capt. Robert W. Fox, white, of Kalamazoo, Mich., the company after its arrival here, was informed that it wouldn't operate as a unit, as it had in the states, but would be thoroughly integrated into a force made up of two other companies.

Commanding Posts

Non-coms in the Negro company retain their ratings and authority, and take their turns along with others in commanding details.

Mills was originally with the traffic and gate section, but his work was so outstanding that he was made a desk sergeant.

Top man is S-Sgt. Thomas Ivory, of Detroit, provost sergeant, who is ranking non-com for one shift. Others are Sgt. Cyrus Gary, Richmond, Va., dismounted patrol; Sgt Richard Lacy, Washington, motorized section (jeeps and motorcycles), and Sgt. Richard C. Foulks, Keystone, W. Va., investigation.

Foulks, a native of Chicago, is a 1932 graduate of Bluefield State Teachers college, Bluefield, W. Va., and was teaching English and history at Northfork, W. Va., before coming into the service. His wife, the former Miss Amaza Harris, is a graduate of West Virginia State college and is teaching at Anawalt, W. Va.

8-25-45

Another whose work has been outstanding is Cpl. Charles Parker, of Washington, Texas, of the gate and traffic detail, who has received a commendation for efficiency from Major Peterson.

The same varied backgrounds found elsewhere in the army are present in this MP company.

Ex-Baseball Player

Pfc. Ernest Smith, of Alexandria, La., was a professional baseball player, serving as catcher for the Homestead Grays in 1936, the Kansas City Monarchs in 1940 and the Chicago American Giants in 1941.

Cpl. Ramon Williams, 717 East 37th street, Chicago, a graduate of Englewood high school, is a boogie woogie pianist and was filling an engagement at the Bandbox in Chicago when he was drafted.

Cpl. William H. Young of Brooklyn, was a boxer who reached the finals in the New York Golden Glove tourney of 1939 before turning professional.

Pfc. John E. Cornelius of Texarkana, Ark., was an inspector for the Universal Life Insurance company and Pfc. John M. Jameson, of Cleveland, operated a filling station; Cpl. Alfred M. Sinclair of Clifton, Tenn., was cook at a bus station and Pfc. Jackie M. Galloway, of Detroit, a truck driver.

The energies of the force are not confined to maintaining order, directing traffic and checking vehicles in and out of the depot. One of its most important functions is protecting the supplies, and equipment from sabotage.

With the passage of time, this becomes less and less of a problem, but less than a week ago a Japanese soldier, a remnant of the army which opposed the landing of the Americans last year, was killed by an MP who noticed him loitering around a B-29.

But ordinarily the life of an MP here is marked with monotonous routine, and arrests here are fewer than in a civilian community of similar size.

56n-1945

India Pacific

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD

Rest Camp Facilities Poor in India; GI's Shun Segregated Swimming Pool

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland 11-3-45

11-3-45

NNPA War Correspondent

WASHINGTON

Dixie prejudice won a smashing victory in the India-Burma theater of operations as regards the availability and use of rest camp facilities for colored and white military personnel.

Although 65% of the troops working on the construction and operation of the Ledo Road in Burma were colored, there were originally seven camps for the white troops and only one for the colored GI's.

Later, several of the white camps were closed down, but no more were opened for colored soldiers.

Say GI's Picked Site

All but one of the white camps were located in pleasant cool mountain areas, while the lone colored camp was in the heat-stricken, disease-ridden Calcutta area at low sea level.

Correspondents were informed that a poll had been taken among the colored soldiers and that they had chosen the Calcutta site.

According to my figures, however, only some 5% actually participated in the poll, while no poll was taken of the white soldiers' wishes.

Near Prostitution Area

The original colored camp was at Howrah, a site which the Tan Yanks called the "GI's Devil's Island." It was situated near the "off-limits" prostitution area.

The buildings were of the native basha type, cheap bamboo construction, and infested with vermin. One soldier was bitten by a rat while sleeping.

No Mess Halls

With no mess hall available, like that found in the white camps, the colored "vacationists" were forced to stand up in the chow line as they did when on regular duty.

The advent of colored correspondents brought a little change to the picture. The old Dum-Dum orphanage, with a much better looking physical layout and in the same area, was renovated and put into use as a rest camp for colored personnel.

Concession to Officers

When queried on the segregation policy, Maj. Gen. Covell of Arkansas, commander of services of supply in the theater, promised that colored commissioned personnel, who were few in number, would be permitted to go to one of the white officer camps if they made such a request.

However, the nurses, under this arrangement, had to sleep in one of the larger hotels in the city because the camp lacked the necessary facilities for the housing of female personnel.

Rather than accept either arrangement, a few colored officers spent their leaves visiting other vacation spots in India at their own expense.

No Change for GI's

General Covell stated that it was impossible at that time to "make the necessary arrangements" for colored enlisted personnel at any of the white camps.

Lt. Col. J. F. Mimnaugh of New York, director of rest camps in the theater, did all within his power and jurisdiction to improve the lot of the colored service men, but his powers were limited by rank.

Jim-Crow Pool Opened

In July of this year, the Army scored its grand slam as regards its policy of segregation and discrimination when it completed construction of a jim-crow swimming pool in Calcutta.

The schedule called for colored soldiers being allowed to use the pool on Tuesdays and Thursdays and every third Sunday, and whites to use it the remainder of the time.

This schedule worked to the disadvantage of the colored soldiers because some of them might be working on one or maybe two of the segregated days.

It was rumored that the colored Red Cross Club suggested a boycott of the pool by the Tan Yanks in that area. Because of this segregated policy, several of the club's administrative personnel resigned and returned home.

When I left the theater, the charges against the club of having initiated the idea of a boycott had not been proved.

British Pool Open to All

On opening day, no colored soldiers used the pool. By July 5, 12 had been in. As of July 26, only 25 had used the pool, the Tan Yanks having been granted a period of 90 days for swimming.

In answer to this American jim-crow set-up, the colored troops went directly across the street from the segregated pool, and for about eight cents in American currency enjoyed the full privileges of the British pool.

There, they swam with fellow white Americans, British and Indian men and women, and West Africans.

No "Incidents"

When queried by the correspondents, British authorities stated that, to the best of their knowledge, there had been no "incidents."

The base section where the American pool is located is under the command of Maj. Gen. Robert (Bob) Neyland, former head coach at the University of Tennessee.

Brief Survey Report

On Treatment Of Negro Troops In Iran, India-Burma Theatres

The Informer Houston, Texas 11-3-45

(Second of a Series of Three)

PRO picture morgues were often found to be "lean" on pictures showing colored troops at work. Those which were available generally showed them in participation of their social activities "enjoyed" during recreational hours. However, the PROs were quite cooperative in trying to obtain any pictures which the correspondents requested. But from this correspondent's view point there should have been made already available such pictures and publicity data on the Negro soldiers as there was for the white troops.

Camp newspapers generally neglected to play up the deeds and accomplishments of the Negro troops until the matter was brought to the attention of the authorities concerned by the colored correspondents. The India-Burma theatre was not as delinquent on this score as the Iranian theatre.

White troops were generally given the praise, raves and publicity to the exclusion of colored troops in the theatres, and in some cases even when the colored troops were in the majority in certain areas and when they had been largely responsible for those accomplishments which the white troops were being given credit for. The Ledo Road project and attendant publicity is an example. Originally Negroes were not included in the first convoy which went over the Road. At first Signal Corps movies neglected their presence on the Road both during its construction and during the transportation of supplies over it to China. It was not until the colored correspondents made the complaint that the delinquency was partially reminded. Releases and pictures were prepared to satisfy the grievance. However, the damage had already been done to the moral of the colored troops and little if anything could be done to assuage it.

In most instances recreation was not administered fairly to the colored troops. War Department directives were not obeyed as regards "no discrimination or segregation." There were so many "dodges" effected that time and space will not permit enumerating all of them. Special Service and the Red Cross worked hand-in-hand to perpetuate the "Dixie caste system."

In Iran all of the Red Cross workers were white. Together with the Special Service units it contrived to keep Negro coldiers from enjoying all of the privileges of administered recreation. Dances were given for "white only," even though the majority of the native girls attending as hostesses for the white torrps expressed no resentment at socializing with the Negro troops. In the towns, cities, and villages the native girls definitely enjoyed the company of the colored GIs and acted frequently. It was only when the white GIs attempted to influence them against Negroes that the problem reached the proportions of unwarranted discrimination and segregation. This was often done under the threat of boycott and non-patronization of recreational facilities and establishments by both white officers and enlisted men. Colored troops were always told that a separate dance could be given for them "If enough girls could be found who would be willing to socialize with them." (Generally, enlisted personnel, both colored and white got along well together. Discriminatory polices were more often fostered and demaned by white commissioned personnel.)

Ex-Hamptonite Describes D-Day Landing on Luzon

Baltimore, Md.
afro-American
9-21-45

By K. ROBINSON

LUZON — Coming ashore on White Beach behind infantrymen in the D-Day landing here, a port battalion unit visited recently, worked 22 hours daily for five consecutive days unloading ammunition and food from ships.

The Japs a short distance away, dropped mortar shells in the area, while big guns, rockets and machine gun fire went off from both sides.

First Sgt. Harley J. Newsome, a former Hampton Institute student and athlete, in describing the landings, said, "At Cape Creek we were unloading 'ammo' from the ship of a colored amphibious duck unit.

Only Pure In Heart

"I saw a Jap bomb fall and ricochet off our ship. Two casualties were reported. Only the pure in heart could have stood those exciting moments of D-Day on Luzon."

The unit arrived from New Guinea where they had been cited for their record tonnage, unloading rations and ammunition. Although the work was tiring, movies and shows kept the men entertained.

The Four Smoothies, a unit quartet, worked for special service entertaining troops on the island.

"Four Smoothies"

Members of the quartet are Pvt. Lawrence Johnson, first tenor of Philadelphia; Pfc. Murt J. Tyson, second tenor of Steelton, Pa.; S/Sgt. Peter Courtrier, baritone of Charleston, S.C., and Sgt. Newsome, bass of Newport News, Va.

The company has been overseas for 19 months. Platoon leaders supervising the work are: S/Sgts. Houston E. Norman of Pittsburgh; Arthur McDonald of Houston, Tex., and William Sutton of Kentucky.

S/Sgt. Arthur Clark Jr., of Kentucky is supply sergeant, S/Sgt. Reuben Jones of Kentucky is mess sergeant, and T/5 Sydney F. Ricks is mail orderly.

56n-1945

Nansei Shoto Islands-- Pacific Foreign Service

Story Of Heroic Duckmen (Part 2):

Journal + Guide

447th Amphibious Company In Thick Of Fight Against Japs

Norfolk, Va

7-21-45

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

EDITORS' NOTE: This, the second of a series of stories covering the activity of the 477th Amphibious Trucking Company, relating the circumstances under which two of its members won the Bronze Star Award, gives a vivid picture of the hazards under which these specialized troops operate.

NANSEI SHOTO ISLANDS — T/Sgt. inston C. Carmichael of Atlanta, Ga., and New York City is no longer a member of the intrepid 477th Amphibious Trucking Company. He was recently evacuated, but wherever he is, he must know that his name is spoken with pride by the buddies he left behind him in the Nansei Shoto group.

Of the group of men who participated in this story of daring and disregard for personal safety, only Sgt. Carmichael was awarded the Bronze Star, but there is no resentment, because each freely admits that Carmichael's utter disregard for danger marked him the "bell cow" of the action.

Ammunition On Fire

The group was aboard an LST loaded with, among other impedimentia of war, a quantity of .75mm ammunition. For hours a stream of Ducks had been ploughing back and forth from beach to ship unloading its explosive cargo. Air raids were frequent in those days, and the sight of a hell-bent-for-suicide plane no novelty.

A Duck loaded with ammunition caught fire on the tank deck. The vehicle did not belong to Carmichael's company but he happened to be on the vehicle when its cargo exploded, and after a moment of shock began to fight the fire in an effort to prevent its spread to other vehicles.

Forsaking his own safety with the knowledge that six or seven amphibious trucks loaded with ammunition stood nearby, he fought the fire alone until joined in his efforts by T/Sgt. J. C. York, Memphis; T/4 Girad Nichols, Baltimore; T/4 James C. Johnson, Atlanta; T/4 Garnett Harris, Chicago; T/4 William Howell, New York City, T/5 Roy McCray, Houston; T/5 Anthony Walker, Augusta, Ga.; T/5 John C. Davis, Augusta, Ga.; and Cpl. Walter Johnson, New York City.

Flames Conquered

The men fought the fire, aiding its control until Carmichael, overcome by smoke and fumes, had to be dragged up on deck, but not before the flames had been conquered. His prompt action is credited with saving the ship and personnel aboard. As a result the ship and the vehicles aboard her at the time continued service in the battle for TINIAN, which in our hands is now a powerful base from which the gigantic B-29's hop off to spread destruction to Japan's industrial centers.

7-21-45

On the same day a Duck driven by Pfc. Henry Horton and Sgt. Crawford Brown, both of Little Rock, Ark., ran over an enemy land mine, miraculously escaping injury. They went right back to work in another vehicle.

Another Duck driven by Pvt. Melvin Shaw, Jacksonville, Fla., assisted by Pfc. William Cox, New York City, was hit in the side by a light artillery shell. Again death and injury were foiled.

On the following day, T/5 Jack Golden, Mariana, Fla., moved into the Bronze Star fraternity. He stood on the beach watching a Duck flounder helplessly in the raging surf, then overturn in the jagged coral off the shore of Tinian. Without hesitation he entered the water to determine steps necessary to right the vehicle.

He decided it could be righted and recovered by the use of chains, cables and winches, and left the water to procure them. He returned to the vehicle which was bouncing in a very rough surf, a constant menace to his safety, and with utter disregard of the danger, attached the chains and cables.

The vehicle was subsequently towed to shore and returned to the service of supplying ammunition to Marine light artillery units being employed against the enemy.

Pfc. John E. Carter, Chicago, Ill., assisted in this operation, as did a group of white Marines stationed on the beach.

7-21-45

"Gallery Of Heroes"

In the unofficial "Gallery of Heroes" kept by M/Sgt. Jason W. Brown, Atlanta, Ga., is found also the name of T/5 John C. King, 26, 130½ Ash street, Troy, Ohio, who in line of duty was severely burned while fighting the flames from an exploded acetylene tank in the company's bivouac area.

Given power I'd have distributed citations freely among the group participating in these actions, but of course, I'm dreadfully prejudiced in favor of these so-called "non-combatant" Tan Yanks.

56n-1945 93rd Bougainville

How 93rd Division Swung Into Action Against Japs on Northern Solomons

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland

9-29-45

GUADALCANAL—The cessation of hostilities in the Pacific permits the revelation of certain operations of the 93rd Negro Infantry Division which hitherto have been withheld for reasons of security.

Following is a chronological report of highlights of operations of the 93rd Division's 25th Combat Team which was ordered to proceed from Guadalcanal to Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville Island, on March 21, 1944:

MARCH 21 (Guadalcanal)—Headquarters, 93rd Infantry Division is ordered by the Commanding General, U.S. Army Forces in the South Pacific Area, to move the 25th Combat Team to Empress Augusta Bay Perimeter, Bougainville Island, with the least practicable delay. Composition of the Combat Team:

25th Infantry Regiment
593rd Field Artillery Battalion
596th Field Artillery Battalion
Company A, 318th Combat Engineer Battalion
Company A, 318th Medical Battalion
1 Platoon, Company D, 318th Medical Battalion
93rd Reconnaisance Troop,
Detachment, 93rd Signal Company
Detachment, 793rd Ordnance Company
Detachment, 93rd MP Platoon

MARCH 26 (Guadalcanal)—25th CT embarked and departed from Guadalcanal in convoy of five transports.

MARCH 28—Debarked at Empress Augusta Bay and attached to XIV Corps and on same date attached to American Division.

MARCH 29—Established bivouac area and prepared local security positions.

MARCH 30—Commenced intensive training in patrolling and jungle operations.

MARCH 31—593rd FA completed its gun positions and was ready to fire its first mission.

APRIL 16—Companies E and G were attacked by an enemy force but our troops were successful in repelling the assault which also was aimed at the Fiji battalion on Company G's right. Thirty-five Nips were killed by men of Company G. The 593rd Field Artillery fired 1,216 rounds.

APRIL 18—The 25th's 1st Battalion continued its operations with the 93rd Battalion, 132nd Infantry, in occupying and organizing Hills 165, 500 and 501.

APRIL 27—Company A moved to occupy Hill 150, encountered no opposition and left one platoon there as an outpost.

Heroic Medics With 93rd Played Part Too

Afro-American Baltimore, Md 9-29-45

Carrying no arms, these members of the medical battalion attached to the 93rd Division during the Bougainville operations suffered heavy casualties as they faced withering Japanese fire to rescue their wounded buddies. Litter-bearers make this wounded man comfortable as they carried him up Hill 250 to the nearest aid station.

Men Ask for Heavy Artillery Fire

Afro-American

APRIL 7—Company K contacted the enemy before an ambush could be established and in the fire fight that resulted one officer and seventeen men were killed and seven were wounded. Our forces withdrew about 100 yards and called for artillery fire. All bodies were recovered and interment made in the Bougainville cemetery. The 593rd fired 745 rounds in support of the Americal artillery. Baltimore, Md.

APRIL 11—A patrol from Company K sighted five Japs 2,000 yards north of Hill 250, along the west branch of the Torokina River ,and killed two of them. A patrol from Company I located a 70-mm Jap field piece and destroyed it. During the night the 25th CT was subjected to Jap artillery fire (15-cm) for the first time.

9-29-45

APRIL 14—A patrol from Company E, operating northeast of the East-West Trail, made contact with an estimated 15 Nips and killed three of them. The 593rd fired concentrations on enemy gun positions.

APRIL 15—Litterbearers were subjected to enemy fire during the night, and fought with as much vigor as the infantrymen. On one such occasion, T/5 Mose Wheeler of Company A, 318th Medical Battalion, became the first casualty of his unit. Detachments from the 793rd Ordnance, 93rd Quartermaster Company and 318 Medical Battalion were ordered to report to Bougainville from Guadalcanal.

Combat Team Assigned to Americal

Afro-American

APRIL 29—25th CT relieved from attachment to GIV Corps and placed under operational control of the commanding general, Americal Division. Brigadier Gen. Leonard R. Boyd assumed control of the Provisional Brigade, 93rd Infantry Division.

MAY 6—Company B moved out to Hill 150, with the mission of conducting a reconnaisance in force and around Hill 350, then to occupy Hill 350. The 93rd Reconnaisance Troop completed its happing mission of the Kuma Road; Engineer work routine, also Field Artillery. Balt. Md.

MAL 11—Company B on Hill 350 was relieved bya platoon of Company L. The platoon of Company I, operating east of Hill 150, returned to the Outpost Line of Resistance after destroying enemy ammunition. Another platoon of Company I moved east of the Saua River with the mission of reconnoitering the East-West Trail between the Saua River and the Reini River. Balt., Md.

MAY 15—Cannon Company, 25th Infantry, fired on two check points. Malarial control fuctioning in an excellent manner.

MAY 16—The 593rd Field Artillery scored direct hits on a Jap pill box. Men of 93rd Reconnaisance Troop, operating between the Saua and Reini Rivers, made contact with the enemy three times during the morning. The patrol withdrew and called for artillery fire. 9-29-45

MAY 17—The 93rd Recomnaisance Troop, in continuing or mission to Reini River, was ambushed in the morning by an unestimated number of Japs 600 yards west of the river, who used machine guns and mortars. Three men of the troop were killed and three were wounded. In addition, seven men and one officer were missing.

Go Out to Recover Slain Buddies

Afro-American

MAY 18—Company I moved out in the morning, with the mission of proceed to the area where the Reconnaisance Troop had made contact, clear out all Japs opposition west of the Reini River, also was relieved and ordered cover along the East-West Trail, to a staging area for movement, killed in action the bodies of those men to Green Island. Other units of and locate those men the 25th CT also were alerted for tion. Baltimore, Md. 9-29-45

MAY 19—Company I continued on its assigned mission. The 1st Platoon and Headquarters Detachment, 318th Combat Engineers alerted to move from Bougainville immediately. During its operation on Bougainville, Company A of the 318th completed 10.4 miles of road, constructed four bridges, 500 feet of the corduroy road, eight barrel culverts, four wooden culverts, in addition to two water-tank towers and shelter for the 318th Medical Battalion. The 2nd Battalion, 25th Infantry, also was relieved and ordered to a staging area for movement, early shipment.

As 93rd Infantrymen Moved Up to Attack

The full story of how the 93rd Infantry Division swung into action against the Japanese on Bougainville is released for the first time this week by the War Department. Photo shows members of the combat team crossing the Laruma River over a newly constructed bridge. They carry ammunition and communication supplies as they move towards the front. The engineers were there first to construct the bridge.

WAR DIARY

The Richmond and Guide

Report of action of the 93rd Infantry Division in the Northern Solomons, March 21 to May 19, 1944.

Richmond, Virginia 9-29-45

GUADALCANAL — The cessation of hostilities in the Pacific permits the revelation of certain operations of the 93rd Negro Infantry Division which hitherto have been withheld for reasons of security.

Following is a chronological report of highlights of operations of the 93rd Division's 25th Combat Team which was ordered to proceed from Guadalcanal to Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville Island on March 21, 1944:

March 21—(Guadalcanal) Headquarters, 93rd Infantry Division is ordered by the Commanding General, U. S. Army Forces in the South Pacific Area, to move the 25th Combat Team to Empress Augusta Bay Perimeter, Bougainville Island, with the least practicable delay. Composition of the Combat Team:

25th Infantry Regiment, 593rd Field Artillery Battalion; 596th Field Artillery Battalion; Company A, 318th Combat Engineer Battalion; Company A, 318th Medical Battalion; 1 Platoon, Company D, 318th Medical Battalion; 93rd Reconnaissance Troop; Detachment 93rd Signal Company; Detachment, 793rd Ordnance Company; Detachment, 93rd MP Platoon.

March 26—(Guadalcanal) — 25th CT embarked and departed from Guadalcanal in convoy of five transports.

March 28—Debarked at Empress Augusta Bay and attached to XIV Corps and on same date attached to Americal Division.

March 29—Established bivouac area and prepared local security positions.

March 31—593rd FA completed its gun positions and was ready to fire its first mission.

April 2—The 2nd Battalion of the CT was detached from Americal Division and passed to operational control of Commanding General, 37th Infantry Division, forming part of a composite force consisting of one battalion of the 148th Infantry, two Fiji Battalions, and the 2nd Battalion, 25th Infantry.

During the next two days the 2nd Battalion, 25th Infantry operated against the enemy along the Numa-Nume Trail, Blue Ridge, and and the Laruma River. At 2:30 p. m., April 2, Pfc. Isaac Moore, of Brooklyn, N. Y., pulled the lanyard on the No. 2 gun of Battery A, 593rd FA, which sent the first round fired by the 93rd Division into enemy positions.

April 4—The 2nd Battalion continued its operations along the Numa- Numa Trail. During this operation, the battalion closed with the enemy and killed approximately 25 Nips. Four men were lost by the A and P Platoon which it was returning from a supply mission to the Americal Division on Hill 500: Privates First Class Hugh Carrol, Oginal I. Ryan, William W. Ash, and Joseph C. Mallory. These were the first men of the 93rd to be killed in action in this war. The 593rd FA fired four concentrations and consumed 208 rounds of ammunitions. Engineers of 318th moved out fully equipped for combat road construction. The morale of all men was praiseworthy, and comments were made by members of the 37th Division that elements of the 25th CT committed to the push were the best "green" troops they had ever seen in action.

April 5—The 2nd Battalion withdrew from the Numa-Numa Trail and was released from assignment to the 38th Division. The 3rd Battalion occupied Hill 600 and 250. Men of the 593rd received a commendation from Brig. Gen. W. C. Dunckle, commanding Americal Division Artillery, for firing six excellent concentrations. Engineers continued combat road construction.

April 6—Company E left Hill 250 to establish an ambush along a Jap trail to the east. The 3rd Battalion conducted intensive patrolling to the north and east of Hill 250. Ordnancemen inspected first captured Jap equipment. About 11:30 p. m. a period of emergency began, which, before its termination, was to tax the skill and ability of the men and officers to the utmost. Throughout the night and all the next day the men worked diligently and untiringly. Eighteen surgical operations were performed, and officers and men, without regard for their personal safety, carried the wounded to ambulances over difficult and steep terrain at the base of Hill 250.

April 7—Company K contacted the enemy before an ambush could be established and in the fire fight that resulted one officer and 17 men were killed and seven were wounded. Our forces withdrew about 100 yards and called for artillery fire. All bodies were recovered and interment made in the Bougainville cemetery. The 593rd fired 745 rounds in support of the Americal Division Artillery.

April 11—A patrol from Company K sighted five Japs 2,000 yards north of Hill 250, along the west branch of the Torokina River, and killed two of them. A patrol from Company I located a 70-mm Jap field piece and destroyed it. During the night the 25th CT was subjected to Jap artillery fire (15-cm) for the first time.

April 14—A patrol from Company E, operating northeast of the East-West Trail, made contact with an estimated 15 Nips and killed three of them. The 593rd fired concentrations on enemy gun positions.

April 15 — Litterbearers were subjected to enemy fire during the night, and fought with as much vigor as the infantrymen. On one such occasion, T 5 Mose Wheeler of Company A, 318th Medical Battalion, became the first casualty of his unit. Detachments from the 793rd Ordnance, 93rd Quartermaster Company and 318th Medical Battalion were ordered to report to Bougainville from Guadalcanal.

April 16 — Companies E and G were attacked by an enemy force but our troops were successful in repelling the assault which also was aimed at the Fiji battalion on Company G's right. Thirty-five Nips were killed by men of Company G. The 593rd Field Artillery fired 1,216 rounds.

April 18—The 25th's 1st Battalion continued its operations with the 3rd Battalion, 132nd Infantry, in occupying and organizing Hills 165, 500 and 501.

April 27—Company A moved to occupy Hill 150, encountered no opposition and left one platoon there as an outpost.

April 29—25th CT relieved from attachment to XIV Corps and placed under operational control of the Commanding General, Americal Division. Brigadier General Leonard R. Boyd assumed command of the Provisional Brigade, 93rd Infantry Division.

May 6—Company B moved out to Hill 150, with the mission of conducting a reconnaissance in force and around Hill 350 then to occupy Hill 350. 93rd Reconnaissance Troop completed its mapping mission of the Kuma Road; Engineer work routine, also 593rd Field Artillery.

May 11—Company B on Hill 350 was relieved by a platoon of Company L. The platoon of Company I, operating east of Hill 150, returned to the Outpost Line of Resistance after destroying much enemy ammunition. Another platoon of Company I moved east of the Saua River with the mission of reconnoitering the East-West Trail between the Saua River and the Reini River.

May 15—Cannon Company, 25th Infantry, fired on two check points. Malarial control functioning in an excellent manner.

May 16—The 593rd Field Artillery scored direct hits on a Jap pill box. Men of 93rd Reconnaissance Troop, operating between the Saua and Reini Rivers, made contact with the enemy three times during the morning. The patrol withdrew and called for artillery fire.

May 17—The 93d Reconnaissance Troop, in continuing on mission to Reini River, was ambushed in the morning by an unestimated number of Japs 600 yards west of the river, who used machine guns and mortars. Three men of the troop were killed and three were wounded. In addition, seven men and one officer were missing.

May 18—Company I moved out in the morning, with the mission to proceed to the area where the Reconnaissance Troop had made contact, clear out all Jap opposition west of the Reini River along the East West Trail, recover the bodies of those men killed in action the preceding day, and locate those missing in action.

May 19—Company I continued on its assigned mission. The 1st platoon and Headquarters Detachment, 318th Combat Engineers alerted to move from Bougainville immediately. During its operation on Bougainville, Company A of the 318th completed 10.4 miles of road, constructed four bridges, 500 feet of corduroy road, eight barrel culverts, four wooden culverts, in addition to two water-tank towers and shelter for the 318th Medical Battalion.

Commander Arrives to Inspect Team

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

APRIL 1—Major Gen. Raymond G. Lehman, commanding general, 93rd Infantry Division, arrived on Bougainville to inspect all elements of the 25th CT, under command of Col. Everett M. Hon, and to observe its operation and progress.

APRIL 2—The 2nd Battalion of the 25th CT was detached from Americal Division and passed to operational control of Commanding General, 37th Infantry Division, forming part of a composite force consisting of one battalion of the 148th Infantry, two Fiji Battalions, and the 2nd Battalion, 25th Infantry.

During the next two days the 2nd Battalion, 25th Infantry, operated against the enemy along the Numa-Numa Trail, Blue Ridge, and the Laruma River. At 2:30 P.M., April 12, Pfc. Isaac Moore, of Brooklyn, N.Y., pulled the lanyard on the No. 2 gun of Battery A, 593rd FA, which sent the first round fired by the 93rd Division into enemy positions.

APRIL 3—25th CT continued its operations against the enemy along the Numa-Numa Trail, Blue Ridge and Laruma River. The 2nd Battalion crossed the Laruma River in a flanking movement to the north bank and proceeded up the river. Jap snipers infested the immediate jungle terrain.

The Nip force, a rear guard protecting the withdrawal of the main body, was entrenched on the opposite side of the river. After laying down a terrific barrage and devastating mortar barrage, the Second Battalion crossed the Laruma River to the south bank and annihilated the enemy.

The 593rd fired 11 missions, including four concentrations, effect in all was reported good. Men of the 318th Combat Engineers completed plans for two new roads.

They Poured Hot Steel Into Jap Positions

These members of a coast artillery battery attached to the 93rd Division are shown loading a 155-mm Long Tom rifle with which they blasted entrenched Jap positions on Bougainville. They have been lauded for their accurate firing and untiring zeal in battle.

First Men Are Killed in Action

Afro-American

APRIL 4—The 2nd Battalion continued its operations along the Numa-Numa Trail. During this operation, the battalion closed with the enemy and killed approximately 25 Nips. Four men were lost by the A and P Platoon while it was returning from a supply mission to the Americal Division on Hill 500; Pfcs. Hugh Carrol, Oginal I. Ryan, William W. Ash, and Joseph C. Mallory. These were the first men of the 93rd to be killed in action in this war.

The 593rd FA fired four concentrations and consumed 208 rounds of ammunition. Engineers of 318th moved out fully equipped for combat road construction. The morale of all men was praiseworthy, and comments were made by members of the 37th Division that elements of the 25th CT committed to the push were the best "green" troops they had ever seen in action. Balt., Md. 9-29-45

APRIL 5—The 2nd Battalion withdrew from the Numa-Numa Trail and was released from assignment to the 37th Division. The 3rd Battalion occupied Hill 600 and 250. Men of the 593rd received commendation from Brigadier Gen. W. C. Dunckle, commanding Americal Division Artillery, for firing six excellent concentrations. Engineers continued combat road construction.

APRIL 6—Company E left Hill 250 to establish an ambush along a Jap trail to the east. The 3rd Battalion conducted intensive patrolling to the north and east of Hill 250. Ordnancemen inspected first captured Jap equipment.

This is the day that will never be forgotten by those men of the battalion who had set up the 25th CT Clearing Station at the Americal unit. It was about 11:30 P.M. that a period of emergency began, which, before its termination, was to tax the skill and ability of the men and officers to the utmost. 9-29-45

Throughout the night and all the next day the men worked diligently and untiringly. Eighteen surgical operations were performed, and officers and men, without regard for their personal safety, carried the wounded to ambulances over difficult and steep terrain at the base of Hill 250.

56n-1945

Northern Assam

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
Cir. D. 82,213

JUL 17 1945

As of Today

Show Appeals to Whites To Understand Negro Aims

Effective Program Presented by Soldiers At Air Base in Northern Assam

By CECIL B. DICKSON

Northern Assam—"The Listening Skies."

That is the name of one of the best all-Negro shows I've ever seen. It was staged at this air base on the vast Brahmaputra River running in corkscrew streams out from behind the high Himalayas into the broad plains of Assam Valley, on which neat tea plantations stretch for hundreds of miles. The heat—116 degrees; the humidity—98.

Thirty-eight American Negro soldiers, nevertheless, sang above the voices of millions of mosquitoes—sang the plaint, the joy, the sorrow and the hope of the Negro race. Hundreds of bug-slapping officers and men sat for an hour and a half and listened to melodies of ages, to swing, "boogie-woogie" and Stephen Foster's jewels.

Marvelous Appeal

Under direction of Cpl. Charles Etcherson, 31, former Detroit social worker; authored by Sgt. Herbert C. Gilbert, 27, Cairo, Ill., and Pfc. Sullivan E. Wolfe, Paducah, Ky., and narrated by Sgt. Frederick H. Gaskins, 21, Philadelphia, the show was a marvelous appeal for the white man to understand the Negro's aims and ambitions. It took three months to whip the orchestra and chorus into line, because the men had their regular jobs to do under Capt. Sam A. Scalici, known as "Cap'n Sam from Alabam," a Southerner who played with Negroes on his Alabama plantation.

It is impossible to reproduce, of course, the singing. You will have to hear it, maybe after the war. But the narration, as uttered by the deep clear voice of Narrator Gaskins is produced here in part:

"Whence did man come? Whither is he going? These questions have been the enigma of the ages, and no one has yet found a satisfactory answer. Still, philosophers of every age are in unanimous agreement that mankind is being driven steadily forward by an indomitable human spirit, in image of and in harmony with the spirit of God.

Recognition by Man

"And in manifestation of this spirit, mankind has, from the beginning, made some token of recognition. And in the greatest and most universal of these gestures of reverence is song. Songs which have issued from anguished or joyful hearts down through the ages, telling a truer tale of the course of man's development than ideas by sword or formed by pen.

"But tonight we are interested chiefly in the songs of the Negro. First, because this is intended as a pageant of Negro songs and music. Second, because we sincerely believe that the songs of the Negro have added as much to the forward movement of the human spirit as any other songs recorded in the annals of history. We believe the Negro's songs are turbulent, poignant, sad, joyful and as moving as they tell. Hear them now."

Later—"Moving southward from the Nile center of civilization along the African corridor, the Negro settled in its jungles, and there amid the lushness of this tropical region began a life that was to go on uninterrupted for thousands of years."

56n-1945

Okinawa - Pacific

Colored Officers Led Men In Attack

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN THE OKINAWA AREA — (Delayed)—On June 24 during the first combat action involving an all-Negro group in the Southwest Pacific, elements of a Tenth Army battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. Wilmer F. Lucas and thirty-five Negro commissioned officers, met and repulsed Japanese troops during a day of blazing action.

8-11-45

When the smoke of battle cleared our forces had wrested from the Japanese an important hill position, counted twenty enemy dead and ten wounded, captured an enemy machine gun nest and ammunition supply, knocked out two pill boxes, destroyed an enemy kitchen, and captured an enemy grenade launcher.

PAY STIFF PRICE

The Japanese exacted a stiff price, for in the victorious action we lost a courageous young officer, First Lieut. Robert J. Peagler of Fort Hill, New Medford, Conn., and two enlisted men, Pfc. Larry J. Gainer, Atlantic City, N. J., and Corp. Henry A. Rogers, Bronx, N. Y., all killed in action; and nine enlisted men wounded.

In the overall Pacific war the action hardly merits a line in the communique of the day, but to us who have looked forward eagerly to the day when Negro troops under Negro officers matched their courage and training against the Japanese, it was a red-letter occasion.

All of the action of the fight was to gain an important ridge on which the Japanese were entrenched and from which they used to come down at night to rob the natives of food and women. One of our patrols had been ambushed in that sector a few days ago and barely got out alive.

OFFICER KILLED LEADING ATTACK

Two platoons of the company, one commanded by Lieutenant Peagler and the other Lieut. Lorenzo Thomas of Jacksonville, Fla., spearheaded the attack on the ridge. In spite of the murderous machine gun fire they faced, in spite of the hidden snipers, in spite of the steepness of the slope up which they had to attack, and in spite of the death of Lieutenant Peagler, the men advanced first to the top of the ridge and then to uncover and wipe out all the Japanese emplacements.

Before the fighting was over, platoons commanded by Lieut. Roslyn Henley, Washington, D. C.; Lieut. Arthur Thompkins, New York City, and Lieut. Clarence A. Carter, Vardkinville, N. C., the latter two of which had been held in reserve, entered the fight. The combined efforts of all the men soon ended the battle.

The following men were wounded in the battle: T/3 Robert George, Jamaica, L. I.; Pfc. Moses Chapman, New York City; Sgt. Leo Gurley, New York City; Corp. Armond Gurley, brother of Leo; Corp. Ivan Henry, New York City; Pfc. Elzie Dukes, Ellaville, Ga.

MANY HEROES EMERGE FROM BATTLE

8-11-45

The names of all the heroes of that fight and the deeds they did would make a story too long for publication, but these are a few of the men who distinguished themselves under fire, either by their skill in wiping enemy strong points off the map or their courage in rescuing their wounded brothers-in-arms:

S/Sgts. Danny Morgan, Harding, Leacock, Niles Smith, Pfc. Major Bass, Corp. Clinton Harris, Lieut. Charles H. Charity, Pfc. Robert Johnson, Corp. Benjamin F. Robinson, Pfc. Kenneth Wilcox, Corp. Samuel White, Corp. Cyrus Finney, Corp. John Davis, Corp. Jimmie Thomas, all of New York City; Maj. Edward Marshall, Brooklyn, N. Y.; T/5 Nipthell L. Young, Fairbanks, Pa.; Pfc. James Jones, Bronx, N. Y., and Corp. Henry Savage, Fairbuff, N. C.

The Japanese soon had enough. The ridge had been cleared of the Japanese. Two machine gun nests had been knocked out, six dead Japanese were counted in one pit and six in the other. All snipers in the vicinity had been killed. One mortar had been captured and four enemy dead left in the pit. The bodies of four snipers were found, and our machine guns had the hill covered.

COMMANDER PRAISES FINE TEAM-WORK

Colonel Lucas was high in his praise of the team-work and spirit of both officers and men, and is considering recommendations for citations for some of the men.

"No man can be singled out for praise," he said, "the success is due to the combined efforts and spirit of my officers and men. They do the fighting. I'm proud of the rapidity with which they have adjusted themselves to the unfamiliar techniques required in this assignment."

Of Lieutenant Peagler, he said, " Lieutenant Peagler is the first Negro officer to become an enemy casualty for this command. His courage, coupled with his capacity to assume the most hazardous work under the most unfavorable circumstances and his leadership in battle made him an inspiration to his fellow officers and to his men. He reflected great credit upon himself, his race, and the military establishment of his country."

I said, " Amen."

56n-1945

Negro Yanks Bring Music To Okinawa Wounded

Daily Worker

OKINAWA.—From 6 p.m. to 6 a.m., seven night a week, Negro servicemen in the 827th Amphibious Truck Company travel from ship to shore in their "ducks," bringing in cargo for the fighting forces. But despite the limits to their free time, these men volunteer after work hours to provide entertainment for wounded soldiers and marines in field hospitals on this battle-torn island.

7-23-45

Recruited by Monroe Sweetland, American Red Cross staff supervisor from Potrland, Oregon, the troupe includes four musicians, two vocalitsts and a master of ceremonies. They have given themselves the appropriate title of "Amphibianeers."

Rain or shine, the Amphibianeers travel miles in their "ducks" to bring music and laufhter to the thousands of men crowded into the field hospitals. They group themselves informally in the center of squad tents that serve as wards, and "give out" on their saxophones, trumphet and guitar. The patients gather around, sitting on cots, salvaged metal bombracks, overturned boxes, anything. This entertainment was doubly welcome in the early days of the invasion when the lack of radios, record players and even books made amusement of any sort a rare and precious thing.

The seven Amphibianeers boast a lot of talent—several of theme were successful musicians in civilian life.

T/5 Eric Miller, who organized and leads the group, as well as playing the tenor sax, has worked with such artists as Hazel Scott, Benny Carter, Lucky Millinder and Ovie Alston, in New York City. The other men are:

7-23-45

T/5 Curtis Robinson, sax virtuoso of Denver, Colo.; Pfc Tainey T. C. Hill, trumpeter, the Bronx; Mandozo Yates, guitarist, Washington, D. C., and Roosevelt Dickerson, baritone soloist and former concert singer, of Kansas City, Mo.

Quartermasters, Truckers Carry The Ammunition

Atlanta Daily World

7-21-45

Loeb Pictures Characters In Pacific Drama

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA WAR CORRESPONDENT

OKINAWA— First Army troops to enter the ravaged city of Naha, once-populous capital of Okinawa prefecture, were members of a Negro Quartermaster-Trucking Company which found itself cast in the role of Ammunition carriers for the scrapping 6th Marine Division during the fierce, final phases of the battle at the southern tip of the island.

In addition to is proud distinction of being the first Army outfit to enter the city, the company boasts quite a collection of Eastern Seaboarders who are "characters" in their own right. Most of them for one reason or another, had been able to postpone their inductions; and their initial baptism of fire has caused not a few to regret that they failed to get into the scrap earlier.

Perhaps you'd like to meet some of them. Maybe you know them.

First Sergeant John D. Walters, 2670 London St., Porstmouth, Va., is a strapping 200-pounder who is a former teacher in the public schools at Portsmouth. He has been in the service four years, and was eager to know the whereabouts of John "Rover" Jordan, Journal and Guide war correspondent, his brother-in-law.

7-21-45

S/Sgt. Lawrence Hamilton, Loveland, Ohio, is the most dignified man in the company, and one of the hardest workers.

S/Sgt. Fred Mitchell, Long Island N. Y., is the "biggest eater." S/Sgt. Lloyd Reddick, New York City is the "noisest." S/Sgt. Charles Vickers, Boston, Mass., is the "sleepingest," having won this title by failing to turn over in his bunk once during a three-hour air raid.

Okinawa

S/Sgt. Eddie White, Paducah, Ky. is mess Sergeant and operator of "White's Bar and Grill;" the high sounding title proclaimed by a gaudy red and white sign in front of the hastily- improvised mess hall in the company area. The day I offered my patronage I was served canned C-ration bacon and eggs, and warm fruit juices, but I was told that in the midst of the fighting White mysteriously produced fresh pork chops. Nobody asked questions.

LOST DRAFT BET

Sgt. Adrain Bristow, New York City, is distinguished only for having lost a sizeable bet that he would "bet the draft."

Sgt. Willis Brown, another New Yorker, is company barber. He has the largest collection of Okinawa Invasion currency of any man in the outfit. He's voted "the man most likely to return to civilian life with a pile of dough."

Sgt. Raphael O. Miflin, a former New York City attorney is the company's authority on oriental folk lore and plant life. The boys calim that his induction was due to a badly prepared brief. A native of the Virgin Islands, he is a graduate of Howard University Law School.

LITTLE SIGHT-SEEING

There is a little sight-seeing prospects. At Naha there is nothing but ruins. Before the war it was a flourishing community of about 66,000 people compressed into an area of about two square miles. It once boasted such industries as the tile weaving, the manufacture of "Panama" hats, pottery, lacquer and the production of liquor and alcohol. Parks, temples, a couple of christian churches, modern public buildings, a railroad station are now mangled masses of masonry.

The boys have been probing around the area that once housed some 4,000 girls-prostitutes, geishas and waitresses with results zero.

The once remainder of modern plumbing in the area is a sparkling white porcelain face bowl that now graces the tent of First Sgt. Walters and provides running water from an engenious pump arrangement hooked into a nearby well.

M/Sgt. James D. Williams, 1053 Hunter St. Atlanta, Ga., son of Mrs Margaret Williams, is Group Sergent Major. He was a successful cotton jobber in pre-war days, and plans to open a printing and publishing firm after the war.

Heroic Story Of Action In Okinawa Area

N. Y. N. Y. Amsterdam News

Japs Exact Stiff Price; Several GI's Killed and Wounded

8-11-45

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN THE OKINAWA AREA (Delayed) —On June 24 during the first combat action involving an all-Negro group in the Southwest Pacific, elements of a Tenth Army battalion commanded by Lt. Colonel Wilmer F. Lucas and 35 Negro commissioned officers, met and repulsed Jap troops during a day of blazing action.

When the smoke of battle cleared our forces had wrested from the Japs an important hill position, counted 20 enemy dead and 10 wounded, captured an enemy machine gun nest and ammunition supply, knocked out two pill boxes, destroyed an enemy kitchen, and captured an enemy grenade launcher.

The Japs exacted a stiff price, for in the victorious action we lost a courageous young officer, 1st. Lieutenant Robert J. Peagler of Ft. Hill, New Medford, Conn., and two enlisted men, Pfc., Larry J. Gainer, 122 N. Carolina Avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., and Cpl. Henry A. Rogers, 785 Home Street, Bronx, N. Y., all killed in the action and nine enlisted men wounded.

In the overall Pacific war the action merits a line in the communique of the day, but to us who have looked forward eagerly to the day when Negro troops under Negro officers matched their courage and training against the Japanese, it was a red-letter occasion.

6 Wounded Men Tell Story

The story of that day was told to me by six wounded men I talked to on a Hospital Ship lying in the harbor outside the little island, awaiting evacuation.

T/3 Robert B. George, 168-10 110th Ave., Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., was favoring a machine gun wound through his knee as he accepted the cigarette I profferad, closed his eyes as if to recall the scene of the battle, and related:

"I was the platoon sergeant under Lt. Peagler. There were 30 EMS in our group which led the assault on Jap positions located about 50 yards up on a steep hill. Our platoon from "B" Battery was on the right flank, another led by Lt. Lorenzo Thomas of Jacksonville, Fla. and S/Sgt. Danny Morgan, New York City was on the left flank.

"Directly behind there two platoons was another commanded by Lt. Reslyn Henly, Washington, D. C., and S/Sgt. Harding of New York City.

New Yorkers Had Ammunition

In reserve as a support platoon was a group under Lt. Clarence A. Carter, Vardkinvile, N. C., and S/Sgt Niles Smith of New York was ready with ammunition, barbed wire, and other supplies with which we were to secure the position once we had taken it.

"All of us had been well briefed for the operation by Major Edward I. Marshall of Brooklyn, so we knew what it was all about and that it wasn't going to be any picnic.

"The Japs had been coming down from positions on that hill at night robbing the natives of food and sometimes taking their women to the hills to act as prositutes for the soldiers. A few days ago one of our patrols had been ambushed near this position, and barely got out alive.

"We knew that the Japs had knee mortars and some machine guns, but they were cleverly concealed, and our scouts had not been able to locate them. Anyway the Japs kept moving them from place to place. Prisoners had told us that the Japs were well armed and under good leadership. They had plenty of food.

90mm Barrage Laid Down

"Our scouts had located a few of the Japs position, and arrangements had been made by Col. Lucas, Major Marshall and a white major from another group to lay down a 90mm barrage on those positions.

"We were all in position at 5:30 a. m. but a red alert in the harbor caused the barrage to be called off and postponed until 7:30. All assault elements were supposed to move off at 8 a. m.

"Each platoon carried a portable field telephone which was hooked into an inter-platoon communication system with combat infantry wire on reels which were rolled out behind the advancing units so as to keep up continuous communications. Contact by wire was also maintained with the command post in the rear.

"Mortars on the beach were assigned to the support of each assault platoon.

"All of the platoons moved off at the same time. The one led by Lt. Peagler and myself went forward first because the path was too narrow for two platoons to move at the same time, and we had to clear out mines which had been previously laid in the area. Lt. Peagler was an expert at this business.

"The first 75 yards was steep and difficult, but good cover was afforded by the brush. By that time we had reached the top of a ridge and our Patrol and Lt. Thomas' were moving forward abreast.

Atlantan Figures In Sniper's Death

Atlanta Daily World

10-6-45

OKINAWA (Delayed) — Two Negro sailors, members of the seaman guard, recently killed a Japanese sniper as he tried to get into the camp area of the largest Navy receiving station on the island.

"We were in a foxhole with our backs together, when I heard a slight sound and saw the bushes sway," explained Charles Schanette seaman, second class, 2027 Benville avenue, New Orleans, La.

"I didn't see the bushes move, but I heard the sound," said Willlie L. Banks, seaman, second class, of 727 Nebail avenue, Atlanta, Ga. "I had no sooner heard the sound when I felt Schanette pushing his elbow in my back.

SHOT AT BUSHES

"We leveled our guns toward the moving bushes and waited until we were positive something was there," continued Banks. "But we held our fire. You see our commanding officer doesn't want us wasting bullets. Don't fire until you see something,' is what he tells us."

The men listened intently as they watched. They couldn't talk, whisper or smoke. And their vision was little more than 10 feet, the night was so black.

"The 15 minutes we waited seemed like a couple of hours," remarked Schanette "Our hands began to get clammy; beads of perspiration started running down our faces, but we waited and watched."

The men began to have doubts in their minds about what they had seen, when Banks noticed something crawling toward an old tomb. He opened up with his carbine, firing 10 shots.

"I think you got 'im, Banks," Schanette whispered. "It looks like he is trying to get away." So Schanette fired several rounds at the moving object.

Even though the men were sure that they shot a Japanese sniper, they did not dare venture from their foxhole. Other snipers might be lurking in the area, and unless they had killed what they believed was a sniper, there was a chance he might have a grenade on his person waiting to pull the pin as soon as one of the men came near.

10-16-45

The next morning, when the commanding officer went out to make a check of the area surrounding the foxholes, he found a dead Japanese on one knee at the entrance of the old tomb.

All Hell Breaks Loose

Then all hell broke loose! Snipers began to pop at us from hidden positions. Lt. Thomas cleaned out several snipers on the slope of the ridge to his left.

At almost the same time Peagler's platoon located a machine gun nest in a gulley, set to cover any approach over the ridge. In order to fire on the nest it was necessary to stand, and in doing so become a perfect target. Peagler called a bazooka team, Pfc. Major Bass, and Cpl Clinton Harris (NYC), and as the lieutenant raised up to point out the position of the gun nest he was shot in the temple by a sniper to his right. The bazooka men got the gun nest with the first two rockets.

"The next man to be hit was Pfc. Moses Chapman (NYC) who was hit in the shoe.

"I had been right behind Lt. Peagler before he was shot, but he had ordered me to go back where I could take charge of the men in the event he was hit. On my way back I saw Lt. Charles H. Charity (NY) and Pfc. Robert Johnson (NYC) both pinned down. Johnson was a radio man but I guess Lt. Charity had come along for the excitement. Both were lying so still, I though they were dead.

"I crawled up to Johnson and whispered his name.

"Get back you damn fool," he mumbled, "there's a machine gun right in front of us." As I backed away, a machine gun slug hit me in the knee. In about five minutes a medic, T/5 Nipthell L. Young (Fairbanks, Pa.) crawled up, grabbed me by the legs and pulled me away. He gave me some wound tablets.

Just then Pfc. Larry Gainer came up to the gulley where I had been dragged, picked me up in his arms and carried me back to the air station.

Sgt. Gurley Hit by Sniper

"I learned later that Gainer went back and got killed." The story was taken up at this point by Sgt. Leo L. Gurley (NYC), a member of Lt. Peagler's platoon. He was hit in the shoulder by a Jap sniper.

"When Lt. Peagler fell, all of us opened fire at the position from which the sniper seemed to be firing. I don't know whether we hit him, but he was silenced. Just about then, another machine gun opened up to the left of us. Then another opened up from the left where it had been concealed on the ridge. We were between two fires and had to take cover in a rain gulley that sloped off to the right of the crest of the ridge.

"Lt. Peagler's platoon, minus its leader and Sgt. George, was ordered to hold fast, and the support platoon under Lt. Henley (Washington, D. C.) was called forward to replace it. I crept up as near to the machine gun nest on the right as I could and tossed four grenades at it. I heard a scream and the gun stopped. I got to my knees to take a look, and saw two Nips creeping towards the gulley. I shot both of them with my M-1, and was about to drop to my stomach again when another Nip I hadn't seen winged me in the shoulder. I wheeled in the direction of the shot, fired eight rounds, and saw a Jap throw up his hands.

Lost a Lot of Blood

"Cpl. Benjamin F. Robinson (NYC) crawled up, gave me some wound tablets and water, and went back to get a medic. It seemed to me that I stayed there for an hour, but I guess it wasn't that long. I lost a lot of blood before they got me back to the aid station, and missed the rest of the fight."

Cpl. Armond Gurley, brother of Leo, and who entered the service with him six and one half years ago when both joined the New York National Guard, took up the story.

"By this time Lt. Thomas' platoon on the left, by taking advantage of a slope on the side of the ridge, moved forward and attacked the machine gun on the left front. He called for a ma[illegible] gun section and when the b[illegible] opened up on the Japs, proceeded to flank the position.

Wipe Out Mortar Position

"Two Nips who had been hiding near a cave darted into it and escaped. While Lt. Thomas' boys [illegible] silencing the machine gun [illegible] platoon under Lt. Henley moved forward over the right crest of the hill and using rifles and BAR's wiped out a Jap mortar position and killed four Japs.

"Jap fire seemed to spring up all around us, and we stayed pinned down for about 15 minutes before we were caught in a crossfire between ridges on left and right. As the fire lessened I crawled forward behind Lt. Thomas and we saw a body in a hole. Pfc. Kenneth Wilcox (NYC) who was with us said 'That's Lt. Peagler.'

"Cpl. Samuel White (NYC) who had taken Sgt. George's place as platoon sergeant, spotted a Jap position about 200 yards in front, and we crept towards it. Lt. Thomas ordered bazooka fire on the position, and we knocked it out with the first rocket.

"Lt. Carter and his men, by this time had came up in support. Just then the Nip machine guns opened up again. A burst knocked Lt. Carter's rifle out of his hand, knocked my canteen off my hip, and a moment later a slug hit me in the ankle. Lt. Thomas picked me up, put me on his shoulder and started back with me, slipped and fell, then picked me up again and carried me out of the line of fire with the help of Cpl. Cyruse Finney (NYC). As I passed out I heard Lt. Thomas call for a heavy machine gun.

Quartermasters Sought Action

Here Cpl. Ivan Henry, (NYC), a member of the QM platoon under Lt. Carter, who was hit in the leg by a machine gun slug, took up the story:

"Our platoon was supposed to act as a Quartermaster section, taking up ammunition, water, wire, etc. When the fighting got really hot, we were itching to get there and help our buddies. Pretty soon a runner came back with a message from Lt. Thompkins telling Lt. Carter to bring up his platoon. I was second in command of the squad led by Cpl. John Davis (NYC). Our squad wound up on the extreme right of the line. I heard somebody say 'I'm hit,' and thinking it was Sergeant in front of me, I crawled up to help him. The Nips must have spotted me, for I had hardly started to move when a machine gun slug hit me in the right leg, and a sniper's bullet got me in the arm. I would have got it in the head if I hadn't luckily had by arm stretched out in front of me.

"When the slugs hit me, both at aimost the same time, I hollered like hell, then remembered to play possum, keeping my trap shut and lying as still as death. When the fire let up about five minutes later, I took a gamble, and rolled down into a gulley about 25 yards down the hill.

"In the gulley was Col. Jimmie Thomas (NYC) who tore off his 'T' shirt and made a tourniquet for the leg. Pfc. James Jones (Bronx, NY) crawled over with some wound tablets and a canteen of water.

Fire Was Too Intense

"Lt. Carter could be heard calling the men up out of the gulley, but the fire was so intense that they couldn't stick their heads up. They stuck with me, and when fifteen minutes had passed, Jones said, 'Damn it, we can't leave him here, I'm going for a litter. He darted out of the gulley and in about 15 minutes he came back with Pfc. Logan and Pfc. O'Gorro (Bronx, N. Y.).

"The Japs opened up again, and the four men had to wait until the fire died down before they could get out of there on the litter. Finally, they lifted me out of the gulley and onto the litter. Two of them lay on their bellies in front and the other two in back, and foot by foot, dragged me along. When we came to some barbed wire, the men crawled under it, pulling the litter under, and got me to the first aid station.

While this was happening, Lt. Thomas, taking advantage of brush on the side slope of the hill, had moved around and located an enemy kitchen. He ordered a flame thrower turned on it, then returned to the ridge along with Lt. Henley, and the two made their way to the crest of the hill. On their way back they turned the flame thrower on a machine gun pit which had been knocked out by the bazooka, and retrieved a knee mortar and some ammunition from the pit.

Pfc. Elzie Dukes (Ellaville, Ga.) a member of Lt. Carter's QM squad, who was wounded in the hip, told how Pvt. Gainer and Cpl. Rogers met death.

"Gainer had gone back into the line after bringing Sgt. George to the aid station. When our squad got to the gulley we ran across Gainer. He had been badly hit. Cpl. Rogers and I stopped to help him. Gainer was lying on the rim of the gulley, and we pulled him down into the gulley, and out again towards our aid station. On the way we hit a clear space, and the Nips opened up on us. They hit Rogers in the right chest. I crawled over to him, loosened his pants, and Pvt. Edward Boyd crawled over to help. He gave Rogers some wound tablets.

"Gainer was groaning loudly. He had been hit in the stomach and the bullet had come out of his back. Then I got hit, and there were three of us there helpless.

Lived for Short Time.

"Cpl. Henry Savage (Fairbuff, N. C.) finally found us, and he went back for a litter to bring us in. Gainer was shot again as they carried him back of the litter, but lived until he was on his way to a hospital ship.

"By this time the Nips had had enough. The ridge had been cleared of the Japs. Two machine gun nests had been knocked out, six dead Japs were counted in one pit and six in the other. All snipers in the vicinity had been killed. One mortar had been captured and four enemy dead left in the pit. The bodies of four snipers were found, and our machine guns had the hill covered.

"Working quickly, barbed wire was strung at the crest of the hill, mines and trip flares were laid to prevent the enemy from again using the hill.

Col. Lucas was high in his praise of the team-work and spirit of both officers and men, and is considering recommendations for citations for some of the men.

"No man can be singled out for praise," he said, "the success is due to the combined efforts and spirit of my officers and men. They do the fighting. I'm proud of the rapidity with which they have adjusted themselves to the unfamiliar techniques required in this assignment."

Of Lt. Peagler, he said, "Lt. Peagler is the first Negro officer to become an enemy casualty for this command. His courage, coupled with his capacity to assume the most hazardous work under the most unfavorable circumstances and his leadership in battle made him an inspiration to his fellow officers and to his men. He has reflected great credit upon himself, his race, and the military establishment of his Country."

I said, "AMEN."

56n-1945 Pacific- Foreign Service

Four GIs First Ashore To Occupy Jap Naval Base

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

Soldiers Accompany Marine General At Yokosuka

9-8-45

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

YOKOSUKA NAVAL BASE, Japan — A scene which occurred here 92 years ago was recalled last week when four Negroes from Chicago, Washington, St. Louis and Grenada, Miss., came ashore with Brig. Gen. Wm. T. Clement, commander of the Marine task force that took over this military installation for the U. S. navy.

The four Negroes were: Sgts. Riley Brassel, St. Louis; James E. Holliday, Grenada, Miss.; and Pfcs. Leroy Dumamas, Chicago, and Raymond E. Clark of Washington.

In 1853, Commodore Matthew O. Perry landed at Yedo, now Tokyo, flanked on either side by a tall, solidly built Negro, armed to the teeth—his personal bodyguards. The parallel isn't perfect, for Gen. Clement landed at this naval base some 40 miles south of Tokyo and the four Negroes were not his bodyguards but members of his mess staff.

Aside from these four, only two other Negroes are known to be among the occupation forces in this sector. They are HA 1-c Lowell L. Davis of Tuskegee, Ala., member of a naval epidemic unit attached to the Marine task force, and St 3-c Eugene L. Edwards, of Edna, Texas, personal steward to Commodore Womble.

Sailors Participate

No Negro units, marine or naval were included in the landing force which speedily took over the control of this base. Whether any individual Negroes or Negro outfits landed with Gen. MacArthur's forces at Tokyo is not known since movement of navy correspondents, during the first day, was limited to the area secured by their respective landing forces.

9-8-45

However, though only six Negroes are known to be among the landing forces occupying this important military establishment, several thousand Negro sailors had a part in the landing operations. Aboard almost every one of the several hundred naval vessels anchored several miles offshore in Tokyo Bay are Negro messmen whose only glimpse of Japan so far has been a hazy outline of the base on the horizon.

But 17 messmen of the cruiser, San Diego, tied up at Agama, got a closeup view of the base, though they were not allowed ashore except for the formality of a meeting between high-ranking Japanese and American military officials. The landing, which began at 9:30 a.m., was casual and unhurried. By 2 p.m., all elements of the landing force were ashore and service troops were bringing in heavy equipment such as bulldozers, water-purification machinery, trucks, etc.

Japs Unexcited

The presence of the few Negroes among the landing forces drew no excitement from the black-uniformed Jap gendarmes or the Nipponese soldiers, sailors or civilians in evidence. An English-speaking Japanese newspaperman said that Japs living in Tokyo were not unused to seeing Negroes. In addition to Negro merchant seamen and sailor residents of Tokyo and other large Jap cities, they have seen a number of colored theatrical groups touring the country.

The Jap newsman was probably too young to remember the Negro baseball team, made up of 24th Infantry members, which made a good-will tour of Japan prior to World War I. The 24th was stationed in the Philippines at the time.

9-8-45

The scribe was unable to say whether or not there had been any Negroes among the 600 Allied prisoners of war liberated from Amori Prison Camp before our arrival. The camp, located on the outskirts of Yokohama, is about 15 miles from here.

It is significant, since Negroes have played such an important role in the founding and growth of what is now the world's greatest republic, that their first known appearance in Japan coincided with the first visit of Americans to these shores and that they landed with the first American troops Thursday even though in small numbers.

Pile on Jeep

The Negroes who were in the landing party Thursday were just ordinary GI Joes with a yen to get back home. The manner in which I met Brassel, a 23-month marine who has been overseas 17 months, was something of a reflection on my ability for keen observation. Looking about for transportation to follow the general's car on one occasion during the busy morning, I saw a number of correspondents and photographers climbing on a jeep. I popped on too, making about the 16th passenger and discovered Brassel at the wheel when we had unloaded.

Clark, who has been with Gen. Clement for months, was a messenger in the Navy Department as a civilian. His brother, Cpl. James Clark, a member of a service outfit in Europe, was killed in Germany while volunteering as an infantryman. In the marines since April, 1943, he has been overseas more than a year and went through the Okinawa campaign as a cook for the officers' mess of the 29th Marine regiment. He has been with Clement's staff a shade over a month. Before entering the service, he was a civilian motor maintenance mechanic at Camp Shelby, Miss.

The Chicagoan lives in the vicinity of 35th street and Indiana avenue and was studying to be a machinist when he joined the marines in September 1943. Another brother, Herbert, is serving with a Seabee battalion at Guam.

9-8-45

Davis, who was a pre-medical student at Tuskegee Institute before joining the navy, has been doing field and laboratory work in epidemology and did meritorious work during the Okinawa campaign. His father, Rev. Jordan Davis, a former army chaplain, is now dean of theology at Selma university in Selma, Ala. A brother, Elbert, is serving with a tank-destroyer outfit in Europe while a sister, Elva, attends Tuskegee.

Edwards, 26 months at sea, was attending high school in Texas just before joining the navy.

The 17 Negro messmen aboard the USS San Diego included: Daniel Brown, Williamsport, Pa.; Irving Butler, Emporia, Kas.; Izior Sweet, Orange, Texas; Ralph Holland, Bluefield, W. Va.; Aaron Bronson, Horton, Kas.; Jasper Pruitt, Atlanta; Miller Butts, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; David Stokes, New Orleans; Henry Jefferson, Memphis; A. B. Berry, Laurel, Miss.; A. Bergan, Fayette, Miss.; William Belcher, Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Clifford Milton, Longbeach, Calif.

Tall Medic Among First in Japan

Afro American

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPP War Correspondent

WITH AMERICAN OCCUPATION FORCES IN JAPAN—Among the grim-faced, weary troops of the Fourth Marine Regiment, who swarmed ashore at the big Yokosuka Air Base, south of Tokyo, the 6 foot 2 inches, 200 pound figure of Hospital Apprentice first class Lowell L. Davis of Tuskegee, Ala., stood out like a sore thumb.

9-8-45

The strapping brown-skinned youth seemed quite at home among the sea of white faces around him. His easy smile and resonant voice dominated the small group of medics, who were supervising the unloading of supplies and medicine to care for our liberated prisoners.

No Colored Prisoners

To date there have been no colored war prisoners reported released. Davis had long ago become accustomed to being referred to as the only colored member of the fighting Fourth Marines.

A pre-medical student at Tuskegee Institute prior to his induction in the Navy, he was stationed for 11 months at the Naval Air Base, New Orleans, before coming overseas as a member of a malaria control unit.

The unit served with the Fourth Marines in the campaign for Guadalcanal and for Guam, the first occupied American territory retaken from the Japanese.

When as an integral part of the Sixth Marine Division, the Fourth Regiment participated in the conquest of Okinawa, Davis was in the thick of the bloody action as a member of a malaria control unit that saw service in the vicinity of Naha.

By the time the Fourth had helped clean out Sugar Loaf Hill and executed the capture of Naha Airfield, Davis was an accepted member of the scrapping leathernecks.

Consequently when Marines hour of triumph, the landing as conquering heroes on the soil of Japan, Davis shared with his buddies the honor of being among the first ashore.

9-8-45

Long Way From Tuskegee

It's a long way from Tuskegee, Ala., place of his birth, and from Selma, Ala., where his father, the Rev. Jordan Davis, recently discharged Army chaplain, is dean of the department of theology, Selma University.

It's a long way from Europe where his brother, Pfc. Elbert Davis, attached to a tank destroyer battalion awaits rotation. It's a long way from Tuskegee Institute where his sister, Alva is a junior.

But Davis seems quite satisfied and quite aware of the distinction he enjoys as a sort of unofficial representative of the 15,000,000 colored Americans, whose contributions helped make victory possible.

Hundreds to Land

Out there in the bay and on the the hundreds of ships that make up the vast armada bringing occupation troops to Japan, are hundreds of colored bluejackets, who eventually will tread the hitherto unconquered soil of Honshu kyushu, Shikoku and Hokkaido, but Davis was there with the first.

GI's Pessimistic as U.S. Flag Is Raised in Tokyo

The Afro Argus St. Louis Missouri

9-15-45

By CHARLES H. LOEB
AFRO War Correspondent

TOKYO — There was a mere handful of American combat troops in Tokyo the day the Supreme Allied Commander, General Douglas MacArthur, ordered the raising of Old Glory over the grounds of the American Embassy.

The mission was that of a task force whose objective was to storm and capture the small but strategically important French town of Climbach—five miles from the German border or the last town in France before approaching the Siegfried.

here to hear General MacArthur when, in ordering General Eichelberger to "have our country's flag unfurled in Tokyo's sun," he added:

"Let it wave in its full glory as a symbol of hope for the oppressed and as a harbinger of victory for the right."

The raising of that flag marked the end of the road for our victorious armies.

GI'S Look Toward Home

As it waved over an otherwise flagless city, some two thousand colored service troops, vanguard of those later to flow into the Tokyo area of occupation, began to look towards home and to demobilization.

At Yokohama, the day after the ceremony, these service troops were discussing the General's words and trying to fit them into the interrupted lives they will soon be taking back to America.

They saw oppression before their induction, encountered segregation while wearing the uniforms of their country and today in Yokohama are wondering why military police are displaying an order signaling out "colored troops" for special restriction to their bivouac areas.

These men would have loved to join America's mad victory celebrations, but perhaps that was the week they spent killing rats in the big Japanese warehouses near the docks.

Enthusiasm Lacking

Or they may even have been engaged in the more serious consideration of what America has in store for them when they return long after the first crop of conquering heroes.

That is what makes them the tempered unenthusiastic group I visited the day after the historic ceremony of the taking over of Tokyo.

9-15-45

In reporting that these men are pessimistic about post-war race relations, I am not giving the opinions of illiterate unlettered men but of ex-collegians, clerks, newspapermen, businessmen, barbers, bakers, cooks and laborers, who are about to return to civilian life.

They read the papers over here and get enough of them to know that we still tolerate the Bilbos and Rankins, that we couldn't muster support for the FEPC and that millions of those they left behind are still without the franchise.

They were hoping that V-J Day would also be FEPC Day and E-J (Equality Justice) Day.

They're a little disappointed.

N.Y., N.Y.

Negro GIs Routed Japanese on Jolo

Daily Worker

WITH THE 93RD DIVISION IN THE PHILIPPINES, Sept. 16.—In the closing phase of the war with the Japanese, Negro troops of the 93rd Infantry Division demonstrated their fighting ability when forward elements of the 368th Infantry Regiment climaxed a four-week drive on Jolo Island in the Sulu Archipelago with the killing of Major General Tetsuzo Suzuki. More than 750 Japanese were killed, wounded and captured.

Operating through the jungle, the infantrymen battled their way up the slopes of Mounts Tumantagis and Taran. 9-17-45

Overall commander of forces employed in the areas was Lieutenant Colonel Isaac C. Corns, of Harlingen, Tex.

The operation was preceded by reconnaissance patrols of American and guerrilla troops led by First Lieutenant Booker T. Williams of Baltimore, Md., Battalion Intelligence Officer.

Reports had been received in early July revealing that Japanese were raiding civilian farms in the foothills.

Reports also had reached headquarters that General Suzuki was in the hills organizing an attack on the city of Jolo.

Lieutenant Williams and his patrol combed suspected areas and returned with information concerning the probable Japanese pockets of resistance.

A few days later a company of seasoned infantrymen, under the command of Captain Alamanca C. Williams of Crawfordville, Ind., conducted a combat patrol.

On July 17, First Lieutenant Ricardo Santiago of New York and a small patrol of 37 jungle-hardened veterans added another chapter to the fighting record of Negro soldiers when they ran up against a heavily armed nest of more than 100 Japanese. Out-numbered almost three to one, Lieutenant Santiago and his men nevertheless disorganized and drove back the enemy, killing 21. 9-17-45

Staff Sergeant Leonard Dowden single-handedly rushed at a Japanese machine gun nest to destroy it with hand grenades and rifle fire. Although shot in the chest before he had taken a half-dozen steps, he did not swerve or falter in his advance. By painful efforts he struggled to within grenade throwing distance of the enemy emplacement. Shot in the throat, he fell mortally wounded as he raised his arm to hurl a hand grenade.

Within a month's time an entire island was cleared except for small, scattered pockets which were being rapidly eliminated as the war ended.

Four in 93rd Division Win Bronze Star Medal

The Afro American Baltimore Md. 10

NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES—Four awards citing "outstanding leadership," "highest devotion and fidelity to duty," and "outstanding service in direct support of combat operations," earned a first lieutenant and three sergeants the Bronze Star Medal in the 93rd Infantry Division last week.

First Lt. John C. Robinson of Baltimore won his award for "outstanding leadership of patrols across extremely rough terrain and through defense jungle."

Led Men Through Jungle

His official citation from the commanding general of the 93rd Division, Major General Harry A. Johnson, read in part:

"First Lt. Robinson landed with a platoon and led his unit for eight miles across extremely rough terrain and through dense jungle to rendezvous with his company. By means of skillfully located trail blocks and patrols which he led personally, he secured important information of enemy activity in the area. 10-20-45

"During these operations, First Lt. Robinson's work was characterized by a vigorous personal leadership which evoked and maintained a high state of morale in his men, despite the rigors of terrain, weather and enemy action."

A battalion sergeant major for the past two years, the owner of two Battle Stars which he wears on his Asiatic-Pacific Theater Ribbon, and wearer of the Good Conduct Ribbon, T/Sgt. James W. Brown of Jamaica, N.Y., won his award for meritorious service in handling administrative details.

Supported Combat Team

The award credited Sergeant Brown with outstanding service in direct support of combat operations against the enemy at Los Negros, Admiralty Islands, and Morotai, Netherlands East Indies, from Oct. 4, 1944, to May 10, 1945.

The citation accompanying the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Sgt. Norton Hurd of Evergreen, Ala., states that "during the period Oct., 1944, to 23 June 1945, Sergeant Hurd showed enthusiasm, resourcefulness and fidelity to duty in carrying out the duties of his combat mission as Battalion Motor Sergeant of an Infantry Battalion."

The award which credited First Sgt. William S. Seals of New Kensington, Pa., with the "highest devotion and fidelity to duty," was made with a citation which stated in part:

"His excellent ability to control the personnel of his company and his attention to administrative details and high regard for orders of his superior officers were of inestimable value, thereby allowing the company commander to concentrate on combat plans and operations.

"The outstanding service of First Sergeant Seals was an inspiration to his men and reflects creditably on himself." 10-20-45

Lives in Baltimore

Lieutenant Robinson, who makes his home with his wife, Catherine, at 820 N. Fremont Ave., Baltimore, entered the Army in December, 1941, and trained at Fort Belvoir, Va. He was later assigned to the 93rd Infantry Division upon its activation in 1942. He has completed 18 months of service in the Pacific and is, at present, a company commander in the 369th Infantry Regiment.

T/Sgt. Brown is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Brown of Jamaica, N.Y. He held the position of clerk in the Marine Insurance Co., New York City, prior to induction into the Army and is a graduate of Boys' High School, Brooklyn, N.Y.

First Sgt. Seals enlisted in the Army in July, 1942, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., receiving his basic training there. Upon activation of the 93rd Infantry Division, he was assigned as a cadre member of the 369th Infantry.

Sees Negro Soldiers In Action, The Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Manhattan.

Editor, Daily Worker: 10-23-4.

Thought you might be interested in this letter I received recently from a soldier in India:

"We are on the 20-mile mark on the Stilwell Road. This road was built by our boys. The majority of Engineer troops who built it were Negro. There are many crosses in India where heroic Negro troops died. It was so tough building the road. They had to build the road and fight the Japanese at the same time. They had machine guns mounted on their bulldozers. They died of typhus, malaria, pneumonia and Japanese bullets. They made the greatest sacrifice on earth. I hope with all my heart that it was not in vain. This is a hell-hole if ever a human's been in one. In fact no human ever did come to these parts, because it was all wild jungle until it was cleared by our troops. We live here in the hope that soon we will come home to our people in America. We are just about 12,000 miles from home. That is a long way. All we want when we come back is to have a true democracy. By that, I don't mean the phony kind we have now. If all minority people are treated as people, if discrimination ceases, if rats like Bilbo are thrown out of Washington, if Negro and white, Christians and Jews can live together without hatred, then perhaps it was worth the struggle. I say that as a soldier who has given up three years of his life. Will it be worth it? And I speak for the ones who will never come home, and those who come home crippled for life."

W. H.

Indonesians In Global Struggle

Chicago Defender, Ill.

BATAVIA, Java — Allied war aims were taking a beating this week, as American and British arms were put at the disposal of Dutch imperialist authorities to aid in suppressing Indonesian efforts at achieving independence.

With British forces acting to quell the independence movement gaining momentum throughout Java and threatening nationalists with the death penalty "for any form of violence," Dr. Soekarno, nationalist leader, protested to President Harry S. Truman the use of American munitions, trucks and uniforms by Dutch colonial troops. 10-27-45

In its message to the President, the Indonesian government revealed that Dutch forces "wearing American uniforms and equipped with American arms, munitions and trucks" terrorizing the population "by shooting at innocent passersby, kidnapping and maltreating—even killing — captives, and robbing private belongings."

The President was enjoined to "disallow infringement of American neutrality and order the immediate discontinuance of American disguise by the Dutch."

Amid internal strife the first independent Indonesian congress met last week to ask United Nations recognition of the new nationalist republic and condemn efforts of the Netherland Indies Civil Administration to provoke violence. Elections were scheduled for November and December with the government of President Soekarno and Vice-president Mohammed Hatta to serve in the interim.

Indonesians received unexpected moral aid from members of British parliament. Laborite Lt. L. J. Callaghan led a movement to demand a "hands-off" policy by Britain in the Dutch East Indies situation, and organized a "Hands-Off-Indo-China-and-Indonesia" committee. Pledged to fight the use of British forces "to impose old, unwanted regimes" upon colonial peoples, with particular reference to Indonesia, the committee urged that British troops be used only in evacuating Japanese prisoners and deporting Japanese garrisons. Prime Minister Attlee, in answer to charges from the younger Laborite elements, maintained that he has no desire to "interfere unnecessarily" in non-British territories. He declared, however, that the Allies had a moral obligation to aid the Dutch in restoring control. He promised that British forces will be withdrawn from the Netherland East Indies "as soon as circumstances will permit."

World-wide support of the Javanese nationalists was registered this week when dock workers in Singapore and Australia paralyzed all shipping by walking out in a sympathy strike against "British and Dutch imperialists."

Although British troops have seemed reluctant to fire upon Indonesian patriots, they have aided in setting back the independence movement by employing Japanese troops to restore "law and order."

Increasing objections from Parliament and a split in the Prime Minister's cabinet are making it more and more difficult for Attlee to order more direct action against Indonesian independence.

711th Medical Company Among Army's Finest

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.
2-17-45

WITH THE 711th MEDICAL SANITATION COMPANY, FRANCE —Virtually all American sick and wounded to be evacuated from the Continent to England are carried part of the way by the expert Medical Corps soldiers of this Negro unit. For months these carefully trained medical technicians have supervised moving of all patients from hospital trains to hospital ships at a giant port of liberated France. Only company of its kind on the Continent, its speed and efficiency have brought repeated praise from train and ship commanders. 2-17-45

FIFTY-FIVE IN COMPANY

The faster unloading is done here, the sooner battle casualties receive full hospitalization in England. Recently litter bearers stripped a train of 264 patients, and loaded them carefully aboard ship in 45 minutes. Only 55 strong, they once filled two hospital ships, each bearing between five and six hundred patients, in three hours.

"Moving the wounded is a precise and difficult art," stated the company commander, Capt. Louis L. Mollinary, 1316 East Nevada Street, El Paso, Tex., "but our men are past masters at it."

COMPANY ROSTER

ALABAMA—Alexander City, Pvt. James Wychoff; Birmingham, Pvt. Sterling Pennick Jr.; Pvt. James H. Tarver; Carrollton, Cpl. Jesse Watts; Forman, Sgt. James Askew; Mobile, T/5th Gr. Arthur Lewis; Phenix City, Pfc. Charles Alexander.

CALIFORNIA—Los Angeles, Pvt. Lee Coleman.

CONNECTICUT — Ansonia, T/4th Gr. William W. Parks; Ridgefield, Pfc. Clyde McCaslin; Stamford, Cpl. Oakley E. Gibbs.

DELAWARE—Georgetown, Pfc. Vernon M. Tunnell; Selbyville, Pvt. Oliver D. Williams.

FLORIDA—Fort Pierce, S/Sgt. Stephen Bacon; Tampa, Pvt. Willie J. Robinson.

GEORGIA—Atlanta, Pvt. Arbie Haney; Pvt. Clarence Holloway, Sgt. Dock L. Scott; Augusta, Pfc. Roger Green, Pfc. Jessie J. Parks; Brunswick, Pvt. Luther H. Harris; Columbus, Pfc. Willie Patrick; Crawfordville, Cpl. Joe Hill; Culloden, Pfc. Sargus Heuston; Elberton, Pvt. Olin Rucker; Macon, T/4th Gr. Thomas E. Goodwin; Savannah, Pvt. Henry Crawford Jr.; Statesboro, Pvt. Sam Andrews, Theodore R. Gillis. 2-17-45

ILLINOIS—Chicago, Pvt. James Burns.

KANSAS—Kansas City, Sgt. Robert H. Jordan.

KENTUCKY—Mount Sterling, Pvt. Sherman Garrett; Owensboro, 1st Lieut. Barrett H. Phillips; Paris, Pfc. William Brent Jr.; T/5th Gr. Asa Parrish; Mt. Sterling, Pvt. Eugene J. Morris.

LOUISIANA—Baker, Pvt. Henry King; Baton Rouge, T/4th Gr. Claude Humbles, Pfc. Joseph E. Jennings; Bossier City, Pvt. Henry Lilly; Boyce, Pfc. Lonzo Himes Jr.; Campti, Pvt. Anderson Kemp; Carville, Pvt. Nick Hall Jr.; New Orleans, Pfc. Oscar O. Dordain, Pfc. Herbert Holmes, Pfc. Benjamin Williams; Oakdale, Pvt. Curley L. Hollins; Shreveport, Pfc. Jim Louis; St. James, Pvt. Willie Hensley; Zachary, Pvt. Jose Horton Jr.

MASSACHUSETTS — Cambridge, Pfc. Samuel A. Weems; New Bedford, T/5th Gr. James Freeman.

MISSISSIPPI — Amory, Pvt. Augustus Dilworth; Coffeeville, Pvt. Fred H. Winters; Magnolia, Pvt. Joe D. Smith; Meridian, Pvt. Walker Hill; Potts Camp, Pfc. Lester Dean; Shuqulak, Pvt. Jim Allen; New Albany, Pvt Scott Starks.

NORTH CAROLINA — Burlington, Pvt. Robert Wilson; Charlotte, T/5th Gr. Walter Strong Jr.; Concord, Pfc. Willie Ross; Durham, Pvt. Joseph W. Amos, Sgt. Benjamin H. McClary; Elizabeth City, Pvt. Washington Stepney, Pfc. James W. Whitehurst; Enfield, Pvt. Frank Taylor Jr.; Henderson, Pvt. Gilbert A. Jones; Grifton, T/5th Gr. James C. Rountree; Kannapolis, Pvt. Henry J. Robinson; Leaksville, Pvt. James W. Thompson; Maxton, Cpl. William R. Thomas; Method, Pvt. Lonnie Rogers Jr.; Morven, Pfc. David Streater, Pfc. Henry Vaughan; Murfreesboro, Pfc. Joel W. Jenkins; Raleigh, Pfc. Enoch E. Scarborough; Roanoke Rapids, Pfc. Frank J. Underdue; Roxboro, T/5th Gr. Walter E. Yancey.

NEW JERSEY—Camden, Pfc. Elmer C. Wilson; Madison, Pvt. Earl C. Williams; Newark, Pvt. Joseph W. Lockhart.

NEW YORK—New York City, T/5th Gr. Eddie Jackson, 1st Lieut. Allan K. Dimon.

OHIO — Akron, T/5th Gr. Mathew M. Knott; Cookville, T/5th Gr. Frank O. Harvey; Columbus, Pfc. Wallace B. Parker; Cleveland, Pfc. Jesse Harvey; Cutler, Pfc. Conrad M. Hill; London, T/5th Gr. Robert R. Wilson; Steubenville, 1st Sgt. Eugene M. Bowman Jr.; Washington Court House, Pvt. Leonard C. Gray.

PENNSYLVANIA — Philadelphia, S/Sgt. William R. Bantom, Pvt. Alexander D. Burrell.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Great Falls, Pvt. Derry Allen Jr. 2-17-45

TENNESSEE—Chattanooga, Pvt. Robert Allen, T/5th Gr. Eddie Eubanks; Jefferson City, T/5th Gr. Shelby E. Wilkerson; Knoxville, T/5th Gr. Julius Williams; Mt. Pleasant, Pfc. Joe L. McGloffin; Nashville, T/4th Gr. Eugene Davis; T/5th Gr. Henry T. Eason, Pfc. Willie L. Thomas; Trezevant, Pvt. Cornelius T. Howard.

TEXAS—Dallas, S/Sgt. Jesse C. Butler, T/5th Gr. Leon Braswell Sr.; El Paso, Capt. Louis L. Mollinary.

WEST VIRGINIA — Martinsville, Pvt. Howard Dillard; Welch, S/Sgt. Milton H. Branch, Stanley L. Tucker.

318th Medical Bn. Awarded Meritorious Unit Plaque

The American, Baltimore, Maryland
11-3-45

318th MEDICAL BN.—30 pt. . . .

IN THE PACIFIC—The 318th Medical Battalion on Morotai island, first all-colored unit of its kind activated in World War II, and staffed entirely by a colored personnel, was recently awarded the Meritorious Unit Plaque by Maj. Gen. Harry Johnson.

The citation paid tribute to the "stamina, courage, and will to win" of the unit which carried out tactical missions in the far reaches of the Pacific wastes and in jungle heat, from Guadalcanal to the Philippines.

It commended the men for "superior performance and outstanding devotion to duty" from Nov. 15, 1944, to Sept. 20, 1945, in providing medical-dental care and treatment, and evacuation facilities for the 93rd Infantry Division's entire personnel.

High Standards Cited

Although under strength in personnel, and despite difficult and trying situations, the unit "maintained high standards of administration and continued improvements in medical service, housekeeping, sanitation, military courtesy, discipline, and exemplary appearance."

The unit's average on Ordnance inspections was among the highest in the 93rd Infantry Division, in spite of the fact that 90 per cent of their vehicles were of the Class II and Class III category.

Its "outstanding achievements" at all times, and its "high degree of morale and espirit de corps," won commendations from many visiting officials including the Surgeon General of the Army.

56n-1945

366th Infantry

366th Broken Up into Labor Units

AFRO-AMERICAN 4-28-45

Colored Officers in One Regiment, Others White

MEN DISILLUSIONED

Balt. Md.

Leadership Criticized by General Truscott

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY—(By Cable)—The 366th Infantry Regiment which landed overseas a year ago under command of Col. Howard Queen, no longer exists as such.

The regiment was broken up here March 28, into two engineer regiments, with placed under some of the orginial officers and the other under the command of white officers. 4-28-45

Leadership Criticized

Maj. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Fifth Army commander, who advised the regiment of its fate, said simply that there is an urgent need here for more engineer units and that it was the War Department order that the axe should fall on this regiment.

General Truscott, however, had this to say to me recently concerning the change:

"There is a great need here for engineer units and the conversion of this infantry regiment into such to help full this gap was because it was felt that its loss as fighting unit would do us less harm. The 366th was never an effective fighting unit. Its leadership was not as good as it might have been."

Activated at Devens March 3, 1941, as an infantry regiment and shortly afterwards placed under the command of Col. Queen, who returned to the States three months ago, this conversion ends the four-year existence of the first all-colored infantry regiment to be shipped overseas as such and the first to see duty intact.

The duties of the two engineer regiments formed from this infantry group will be of a general service nature, such as building and repairing anything from latrines to roads and bailey type bridges. The two new engineer units are now undergoing training for this work.

Men DisIllusioned

I took a 30-mile jeep trip to a rear area today to talk to Lt. Col. Alonzo G. Ferguson of 2433 M Street, Northwest, Washington, who took over command of the infantry regiment when Col. Queen left for the States and wh[illegible] commands one of the new units with all-colored officers.

I found him and his staff of officers and men badly shocked and disillusioned as a result of the breakup of their regiment, but determined to make the best showing possible on their new job.

Lt. Col. Ferguson estimated that approximately 65 of his officers will be left out of 152 as a result of the conversion and that others, including a large percentage of enlisted personnel, will go to a replacement center here for possible assignment either to the 92nd Division or other units.

Many to Be Reassigned

The majority of these excess officers and men, including two officers with the regiment since its activation, have already been sent for reassignment.

While Lt. Col. Ferguson's new regiment contains his original staff officers and most of the old-timers, the new regiment under white officers has only a colored chaplain and three medical officers temporarily assigned pending their removal to a replacement depot.

Guarded Air Fields

Following guard duty on vital installations throughout the New England States, the infantry regiment was assigned to the Fifteenth Army Air Force fater arrival overseas last year for air base security work.

Col. Queen and his men received several commendations for superior performances of their duties guarding air fields throughout Italy. 4-28-45

Fought with 92nd

The regiment was transferred in late November to the Fifth Army and one battalion, under Lt. Col. James H. Robinson of Washington, went into line in the Serchio Valley sector in support of the 92nd Division after just four days of a scheduled intensified six-week training period.

It was this battalion which bore the brunt of the Germans' December 26 thrust in Serchio and one that remained in line from December 1 to February 26 when the tire regiment was withdrawn from supporting the 92nd.

It was another battalion of this regiment, under Major Willis D. Polk of Philadelphia, which bore the brunt of the fighting in the recent Clinqualle attack of the 92nd. Major Polk was killed in this action.

Casualties High

Military security prevented correspondents from designating this unit as supporting the 92nd during its attachment to that division.

The official estimate is that casualties suffered by this regiment during attachment to the 92nd were about one-third its total strength, with the usual percentage of deaths and wounded among the casualties.

Two-thirds of the regiment have combat infantry badges which they may continue to wear under their new assignment and many have won silver and bronze stars for outstanding heroic achievements.

366th Suffers Greatest Loss

The Afro American

Baltimore, Maryland

Total Includes 495 Killed in Action

8-25-45

23 PRISONERS

2,877 on List Due to Non-Battle Causes

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

PISA, Italy — Here, perhaps for the first public appearance, are the complete casualty figures for the 92nd Division and its attached units from the time of arrival overseas a year ago for combat up to and including July 31 of this year:

Killed in action	495
Wounded in action	2280
Missing in action	77
*Died of wounds	66
Prisoners of war	23
Non-battle casualties	2877
Total	5752

*Those dying of wounds are not to be calculated in compiling total 92nd casualties, for they are included among those wounded in action or among —

Non-battle casualties which include those soldiers sick, injured or dead as result of sources other than actual combat.

366th Hardest Hit

Foremost among those of the 92nd's attached units bearing a large share of these casualties was the old 366th Infantry Regiment, which was broken into two general service engineer regiments (224th now in Pacific and 226th still in Italy) just prior to the final Allied drive in Italy.

Elements of this regiment, under Lt. Col. Alonzo C. Ferguson of Washington, bore the brunt of the German offensive in the Serchio Valley last December 26 and drew the hot spot in the Cinqualle Canal jump-off in early February, with the result its total casualties figured high above 30 per cent of its original strength.

FIRST NAVY NURSE

New York Age

AT long last, the United States Navy's last remaining barrier against Negroes has been cracked with the commissioning last week of Miss Phyllis Mae Daley, of this city, as the first Negro nurse as an Ensign in the Navy's Reserve Nurse Corps. 3-24-45

Under normal circumstances, the commissioning of a nurse should not be considered news of great importance. But in this case, the news is important because it marked the first time that a Negro woman has been given the opportunity of serving as a nurse in the Navy, and it marked the last branch of naval service to let down the restrictions against the use of Negroes. N. Y. Ages

It is a sad commentary on democracy when we have to exult and call special attention to such a story as the commissioning of Miss Daley, because in a democracy it is pre-supposed that there will be no barriers erected against anyone, by reason of race, creed or color, who desires to serve his or her country in time of war. In time of great national peril or emergency, everyone is expected to give his all for the preservation of the state under which he lives. N. Y., N. Y.

That Negroes have not been allowed to give freely of their talents, services, and yes, even their lives if need be, is one of the tragedies of the "democratic" way of life.

People's Voice 4-28-45 N.Y., N.Y.

Second Navy Nurse. Helen Fredericka Turner, who was sworn into the Navy last Friday at 33 Pine st, NYC. Born in Augusta, Ga., and raised in Hartford, Conn., the 27-year-old nurse is a graduate of the Lincoln School for Nurses, and Teachers College of Columbia University. (Stovall foto)

Phyllis Daley

Negro Nurse Joins Navy

P.M. - N.Y., N.Y. 3-8-45

PM Exclusive

The first Negro ever to be accepted by the U. S. Navy Nurse Corps will be commissioned an ensign today in a ceremony at 33 Pine St.

The commissioning of the nurse, Phyllis Daley, 25, of 167 W. 143d St., implements for the first time the Navy's decision, announced Jan. 25, that it would accept qualified Negroes for the Corps.

The Nurse Corps is the last division of the Navy to lift its ban against acceptance of Negroes for responsible positions. At the beginning of the war, Negroes were accepted only as mess boys and stewards. It wasn't until June, 1942, that Navy ranks were opened to Negro seamen. And it was not until October, 1944, that Negro women were accepted by the WAVES. 3-8-45

Miss Daley, who lives with her parents, has had almost two years of graduate-nurse experience; eight months at Lincoln Hospital in The Bronx and a year as a public health nurse for the New York City Dept. of Health.

During her first six months in the Navy Miss Daley will be on probation at a naval hospital nearest her home for training. After that, she will be transferred to the post where she is most needed.

First Navy Nurse Is Ensign

Journal & Guide - Va. - 3-17-45

Norfolk, Va.

Miss Phyllis Mae Daley, who poses with a poster showing the need for more nurses in the Navy Nurse Corps after she had been commissioned in the corps last week, is the first Negro woman to get this position in the corps. Miss Daley was one of five nurses commissioned in the Navy's speeded up nurse recruiting system. A graduate of Lincoln's School of Nursing, Ensign Daley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Septimus B. Daley, of New York City. 3-17-45

Visits Parents

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland 9-1-45

ENSIGN EDITH M. DEVOE of the Navy Nurse Corps who flew to Washington from Boston Friday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DeVoe, Mrs. Mazie Henderson and her sisters. A former D.C. Health Department employee, Ensign DeVoe finished her nursing training at Freedmen's Hospital in June 1942.—Riley Photo

Third Negro Appointed To Navy Nurse Corps

Philadelphia Tribune 5-19-45 Pa.

CHICAGO, Ill.—Miss Eula Loucille Stimley, 40, of 3312 east 91st street, here on May 3 became the the first Negro in the Midwest to enter the Navy Nurse Corps when she was sworn in at a ceremony held in the Office of Naval Office Procurement, Board of Trade Building, 141 west Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

A nurse with the Chicago Health Department, Miss Stimley was commissioned an ensign in the Nurse Corps. She will report for active duty in about three weeks.

She is the third Negro to be appointed to the Nurse Corps. She was preceded in the service by Phyllis Mae Daley, of New York, and Edith Mazie Devoe, 208 'H' street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Miss Stimley is a graduate of the Provident Hospital School of Nursing and served at the Chicago Lying-In Hospital and at Cook County Hospital before accepting her position with the Chicago Health Department.

Navy, Red Cross Pass Buck On Taking Negro Nurses

P.M. N.Y.C. 1-28-45

Admiral Denies Discrimination Policy or Quota, But —

By Shirley Katzander

Rear Admiral William J. C. Agnew, acting chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy, confirming his announcement that Negro nurses will be accepted by the Navy Nurse Corps, yesterday blamed the American Red Cross for erroneously informing Negro applicants that they were not wanted in the Navy. He said:

"We found out this weekend that Negro applicants were told by the Red Cross that they cannot enlist in the Navy Nurse Corps. The Navy has no such policy, and no such discrimination." 1-28-45

In Washington, a spokesman for the Nurse Recruitment Center of the Red Cross, denied the organization had, on its own, barred Negro nurses from Navy service.

She said that the center "operates entirely on instructions from the Army and the Navy," and added:

"The Navy instructed us not to accept Negro applicants. We have heard that the Navy Nurse Corps is now open to Negroes, but we have not received official notification."

The spokesman added that there may have been some misunderstanding between Agnew and the Red Cross on instructions. Agnew said he had discovered the Jim Crow policy when he spoke in New York last week at an emergency nurse recruitment meeting.

Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, head of the National Assn. of Colored Graduate Nurses, said she was "happy to see this reversal of policy," but that she had previously believed Negro nurses were barred from the Navy Corps.

"In fact," Mrs. Staupers said, "two of our members on Jan. 15 received letters from the Red Cross asking if the nurses wished to join the Army Nurse Corps instead of the Navy. 1-28-45

"The letters stated that 'At the present time the Navy does not accept Negro nurses. Will you please let us know . . . if you desire to serve with the Army Nurse Corps?' The letters were signed by Mrs. Ruth B. Glucksman, director of the Nurse Recruitment Center."

The Navy, with 9000 nurses in the Corps now, must meet a quota of 13,000 by June 30, a Navy spokesman said. Currently, the Army is trying to recruit 10,000 nurses urgently needed here and overseas. Although some Negro nurses are accepted by the Army, there is still a quota on the number permitted to enlist.

Agnew told PM that the Navy "has no quota" on the number of Negro nurses. However, he added:

"We only require a certain number. You understand that the number is not unlimited. The number we can take has not yet been determined, but there is no quota."

Although Agnew insisted yesterday that the Navy does not discriminate, it was not until June, 1942, that Navy ranks were opened to Negro seamen. Before that time, Negroes were limited to mess duty. Until October, 1944, Negroes were not accepted in the WAVES.

Mrs. Staupers commenting on future acceptance of Negro nurses into the Corps, said: 1-28-45

"If Negro nurses are required to meet the same State standards as white nurses, there is no reason for them not to be able to meet Navy standards as white nurses do. If the Army and Navy would turn to the records of the Procurement and Assignment Service which lists all nurses eligible for service, it would help fill the bill in the present shortage when nurses are needed so urgently."

NAVY NURSE

1-19-45

ENSIGN HELEN TURNER (NC) USNR

Chicago Ill. 1-Ill.

Who was recently assigned to duty at Navy Pier Dispensary, her first post since entry into the Navy. Ensign Turner received her training at Lincoln School for Nurses, New York City; Medical College of Virginia, Richmond; and Teachers college, Columbia University, New York. She is the daughter of Mrs. Helen G. Turner, and the late Frederick D. Turner of Hartford, Conn. — Scott Tyler photo.

Visitor

Washington Tribune D.C.

Ensign Edith M. DeVoe, of the U.S. Naval Reserve Nurse Corps, who flew to Washington last week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DeVoe, her sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Young and Miss Sadie DeVoe, and Mrs. Mazie Henderson. 10-23-45

Ensign DeVoe was sworn into the Navy Nurse Corps on April 18 and was assigned to active duty at the Boston Navy Yard Dispensary on June 13. She is a graduate of Dunbar High School, received her nursing training at Freedmen's Hospital and postgraduate training at the Medical College of Virginia.

Prior to entering the Navy she was employed by the D.C. Health Department and worked as a private nurse at Freedmen's Hospital. 10-23-45

Nurses

Present Jim Crow Policy Is Called "Damfoolishness"

AFRO-American - Balt., Md. 2-27-45

White Nurses Serve Colored Troops Now, While Our Nurses Wait on Prisoners of War

One of the items on which the AFRO's War Correspondent Elizabeth (B. M.) Phillips was asked to inquire was what white nurses overseas think of the exclusion of their colored colleagues from Army and Navy hospitals overseas.

This is the result of Mrs. Phillips's inside inquiries in three hospitals in England.

LONDON, England — For the past eight weeks I have lived intimately with courageous women who have served Uncle Sam on the fighting fronts in England, France, Belgium and Holland as members of the nurse corps and Wacs. 1-27-45

These nurses are some of the 1,000 whom President Roosevelt mentioned in his message to Congress as being ill from overwork. The Wacs too are among the ailing. Most of them have been overseas over six months, and several have served over two years.

They know all about the need for more ammunition at the front. Many of them bound for the States have definite ideas on what they will tell the folks at home about the need for everyone to put his shoulder to the wheels; to give us more guns and ammunition, and to abandon talk of reconversion.

Without Minds and Limbs

One Princeton, N.J. nurse, told me, "Everytime I hear someone talk about reconversion, I'm going to tell him how our men are dying on the front because of lack of ammunition; how they are coming back minus limbs and minds." 1-27-45

I know that this nurse is right because I have been a patient in at least three hospitals and have seen the casualties she speaks of.

As expected, most of them do not know that one of the reasons for the nurse shortage over here is the fact that the army has shunned the aid of tan nurses.

274 Colored Nurses

In the whole army there are only 274, according to War Department figures, and less than 100 of these are overseas. Those in this area are confined to nursing prisoners of war.

In the words of a Boston nurse who had served in this theatre over six months, this policy is "pure and simple damnfoolishness." That's the attitude of most of the women with whom I've discussed the problem, even those from the South. 1-27-45

Several recall that some of their friends in nursing schools were colored girls and the policy of excluding them when the need for nurses is so urgent, is deplorable.

Welcome Our Girls

The majority said that they would welcome colored nurses into their units and pointed out that since there is no segregation in army hospitals, there should be no segregation of nurses.

They attest to the fact that all Americans, regardless of race and creed, are doing a first-class job, and that there is no jim crow when enemy bullets hit.

Serve Our Soldiers

Lt. Francine Kelly, formerly of Boston City Hospital, who recalls that Hazelle Lomax is one of her fellow workers, says: "White nurses care for colored soldiers. I don't see why colored nurses can't care for white soldiers."

Lt. Kelly has been overseas two years, first in Egypt, then 14 months in France, Germany, and England. 1-27-45

The war is not yet won and we must use all our resources, these women are saying in no uncertain terms. In other words, on the battlefront, color doesn't matter.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 419,447 - S. 805,967

JUN 9 - 1945

Mahoney Medal for Negro Nurse

Capt. Susan Freeman, the first Negro nurse to enlist in the Army Nurse Corps, received the Mary Mahoney Medal for "outstanding contribution to the field of nursing among Negroes" at ceremonies yesterday at the Broadway Tabernacle.

Army Wants 9,000 Nurses

AFRO-American Balt., Md.

Appeal Goes Out to Colored Women

2-3-45

BIG PAY OFFERED

Novices Are Given Free Training.

By LULA JONES GARRETT

The Army needs 50,000 nurses. It has 41,500, only 308 of whom are colored. There are, according to the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, 9,000 colored nurses eligible for service in the Army.

The association, which has heretofore charged that segregation has kept colored nurses out of the Army Nurse Corps, urged this week that all available nurses sign up immediately for military services. 2-3-45

The plea went out following the statement of Major General Norman T. Kirk, surgeon-general, last week that all qualified nurses, regardless of race, will be taken into the Army.

Need Increasing

The need for nurses is constantlygrowing. Since May, patients requiring nursing care have increased from 260,000 to 450,000, but in the same period there has been an increase of only 2,000 nursese in the Army.

When the Army set up its standards in 1941, it called for 120 nurses and 500 enlisted men in each general military hospital of 1,000 beds. By 1942 the Army had had to reduce the number of nurses to 105 to 1,000 beds. Today, with casualties increasing, the standard has been reduced to 83 nurses.

Standards Lowered

In other words, instead of one nurse to eight beds, the Army has now come down to asking one nurse to twelve beds—and isn't getting even these. Compare this to one nurse to five patients as is the standard in civilian hospitals.

The decree to discontinue the bar against colored nurses in the Army, issued last week by Secretary of War Knox, is one of the ways in which the strain can be eased.

While the 90 colored nurses serving in England have not had an opportunity to prove it, there is little doubt that white and colored nurses can serve amicably and well together.

Would Welcome Them

Mrs. B. M. Phillips, AFRO war correspondent, who recently interviewed white nurses serving in London, pointed out that they would welcome colored nurses. They, according to Mrs. Phillips, pointed out that white nurses served colored soldiers, and that on the battlefront race or color doesn't matter.

Incidently, our nurses are no longer serving white prisoners of war.

Here's What You Can Do

An American woman who feels the responsibility of giving whatever succor she can to wounded men, there are several ways to serve.

Colored women may join the Army Nurse Corps if the yare under 45 years of age, physically fit as judged by Army standards, a graduate registered nurse and without children under 14 years of age. They are eligible to serve in the States or abroad.

Hospital Service

If a colored graduate registered nurse is past the age limit, or has a physical disability that still does not prevent her from working, she may serve as a civilian nurse in Army hospitals.

Any colored high school graduate between the ages of 18 and 35 who wishes to train for service in the Army may join the Cadet Nurse Corps, in which she will receive free training at the expense of the government.

Volunteers Needed

A civilian who wishes to give volunteer service may become a nurses aide. Instruction is given atstandard hospitals in most cities. The course requires 50 hours. A nurse's aide must serve an additional 90 hours before she is eligible to serve in an Army hospital.

Colored girls who meet the requirements for the Women's Army Corps may join the corps as a medical assistant and be trained for service in Army hospitals.

If you are a graduate registered nurse this applies to you:

You may be up to but not including 45 years of age; physically fit as determined by an Army medical board; and of good character and general suitability;

You may be single, widowed, married or divorced, but you must be a citizen of the United States or a citizen of a co-belligerent or friendly country. If married you must have no minor children under 14 years of age.. If divorced, a notarized copy of the divorce decree must be submitted.

As a regular nurse you will receive the rank of a second lieutenant; as a chief nurse, that of first lieutenant.

Base pay is $1800 per annum, plus quarters and subsistance allowance, with 10 per cent increase for overseas services; $250 is allowed for uniforms. Nurses now get the same insurance, etc. benefits as do service men.

MISS EFFIE CHANCE

If you are a high school graduate or a student nurse and wish to enter the Army Nurse Corps, this is what you will want to know:

You must be between the ages of 18 and 35 years, and a high school graduate;

As a U.S. Cadet Nurse you will receive uniforms, training in a standard school of nursing, and monthly stipends. These payments are $15 per month for the first 9 months; $20 for the next 15 to 21 months and 30 for the last 6 to 12 months. At the close of the training period you may serve in the Army here or abroad.

NEGROES ACCEPTABLE, ADMIRAL ANNOUNCES

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.
2-3-45

WASHINGTON—The increased need for nurses has introduced an "unofficial war" between the Army and Navy with much attention being focused on policy regarding the acceptance of Negro nurses. The Army has officially announced its abandonment of the pro-rata method and the Navy has stated it has "no policy prohibiting the appointment of Negro nurses."

These developments followed introduction on the House last week

Rear Admiral Agnew stated in Washington Saturday, that, "We have found out this weekend that Negro applicants were told by the Red Cross that they cannot enlist in the Navy Nurse Corps. The Navy has no such policy, and no such discrimination."

Commenting on the charge, a spokesman for the Nurse Recruiting Center, Red Cross, denied the organization, on its own, barred Negro nurses from Navy service. She said:

"The Navy instructed us not to accept Negro applicants. We have heard that the Navy Nurse Corps is now open to Negroes, but we have not received official notification." 2-3-45 of a bill providing for the drafting of nurses into the Armed Forces. The bill was introduced by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), and carries two prohibitions against race discrimination.

BILL PROHIBITS DISCRIMINATION

Under the terms of the bill, every graduate nurse between the ages of 20 and 45 would be subject to the draft, provided and "regardless of race or color," she has been afforded an opportunity to volunteer for induction into the land or naval forces.

The bill also provides that "in the selection and induction of persons under this act and in the interpretation and execution of this act there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color." 2-3-45

Surgeon General Norman Kirk, of the Army, announced that the Army Medical Corps was accepting any nurses who qualify and placing them without regard to color. This represents a change from the old policy of accepting Negro nurses on a pro-rata basis according to the population and number of Negro soldiers in the service, and of assigning them to segregated Negro hospitals.

NO POLICY, NO PLAN

Rear Admiral William J. C. Agnew, acting chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Naval Medical Corps, issued the following statement last Saturday:

"There is no policy in the Navy prohibiting the appointment of Negro women in the Navy Nurse Corps or in the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve. Every application reaching the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for appointment in the Navy Nurse Corps or the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve is given full consideration, provided the applicant meets the physical, professional, military fitness and other requirements for appointment."

The Courier contacted Capt. Sue Dauser, superintendent, Navy Nurse Corps, regarding any plan for acceptance of Negro nurses. Captain Dauser refused to comment beyond the statement released by Admiral Agnew and was non-commital on the status of applications from Negro nurses previously filed with the bureau.

Congresswoman Francis P. Bolton (R., Ohio), praised the Army's new policy and assailed the Navy for holding to "the ancient method." Known as a champion of Negro nurses, the Congresswoman said "They (the Navy) are still finding it more of a problem than they have faced before. They are still holding to the ancient method."

Hospital In England Is Well Staffed

Memphis World

WITH THE 168th STATION HOSPITAL, Warrington, England—Lt. Colonel Harold O. Jirsa, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, commanding officer of this United States Army station hospital, this week praised the skill of the 53 Negro nurses who make up his [redacted] staff 7-13-45

"I am convinced that these nurses are in the service for the actual amount of medical care they can render,' he said. "They are kind, cooperative, willing workes, and they are doing an excellent job .There are certain specialists among them who are good as any you will find any place. I couldn't ask for a better group of nurses.

10th HOSPITAL

Memphis, Tenn.

These nurses arrived in England in August 1944 and were assigned to the 10th Station Hospital, where German prisoners of war being treated After completion of this duty, the entire group attended a three weeks' training course at the American School Center.

Early this year they were assigned to the 168th Station Hospital Several of them served in Africa with the 25th Station Hospital and after a brief period in the united States were sent to this theater of operations.

Since commencing duty at the 168th, these nurses have had as many as fifteen hundred patients at one time Captain Mary L. Petty of Cicago, Illinois, who before coming to England, served at Fort Huachuca, Arizona Fort Bragg North Caolina and Tuskegee, Alabama, is supervisor of the nurses.

VARIED TASKS

Two meinbers of this group, First Lt Pharfeania F. Jones, of Tampa, Florida, and First Lt Theresa V. James, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, have attended the Army Information and on Education Staff School. Others have attended short courses at various English universities and one is presently doing mess inspecting in Paris. 7-13-45

The physical therapist, Second Lt. Muriel Davis, of Evanston, Illinois, recently assigned to this goup has done outstanding work in the rehabilitation of soldiers who have suffered broken bones and other temporary disabilities. She has supervised the building of improvised equipment to supplement the regular apparatus.

Negro Nurses In England Commended

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.

WARRINGTON, England — The 53 Negro nurses assigned to the 168th Station hospital were praised recently by Lieutenant Colonel Harold C. Jirsa, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., commanding officer of the hospital. 7-21-45

Said the commander:

"I am convinced that these nurses are in the service for the actual amount of medical care they can render," he said. "They are kind, co-operative, willing workers and they are doing an excellent job There are certain specialists among them who are as good as any you will find any place. I couldn't ask for a better group of nurses."

114 Negro Nurses Join Army, Navy

The Guide
N.Y., N.Y.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—One hundred fourteen Negro nurses have been accepted into the armed forces since the nurse recruitment drive began early this year for an estimated 10,000 nurses. One hundred ten were employed by the Army and four were accepted by the Navy.

War department records reveal that 440 Negro nurses are now serving the Army as of May 1. That indicates an increase of 110 over the original figure of 330. No figures have as yet been received as of June 15. 7-21-45

444 Negro Nurses In Armed Services

Kansas City Call

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — One hundred fourteen Negro nurses have been accepted into the armed forces since the nurse recruitment drive began early this year for an estimated 10,000 nurses. One hundred ten were employed by the army and four were accepted by the navy.

War department records reveal that 440 Negro nurses are now serving the army as of May 1. That indicates an increase of 110 over the original figure of 330. No figures have as yet been received as of June 15.

The Navy has assigned two of its four Negro nurses to the Charleston Navy yard at Boston; one is at the Philidalphia Navy yard and the other, Miss Helen Turner, is reported to be stationed at navy pier in Chicago.

According to Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, Inc., New York City, there were 2,000 Negro nurse cadets enrolled in the army nurse corps as of last September. One thousand six hundred were in Negro schools, she said, and 400 were in 22 mixed schools. 8-3-45

There are now 36 mixed nursing schools in the country, she revealed, whereas in 1934 there were only 10. Active Negro graduate nurses in the nation number 8,000, she said. Based upon the fact that 18 percent of all active nurses are now in the army or navy, a report by Mrs. Staupers' organization showed that both branches of the service should now have 1,520 Negro nurses instead of a 444 total.

Negro Nurses Serve at German Prisoner of War Camp in England

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND (ANP correspondent – A blend of reactions varying from the tonic-like pride of race which accompanies new achievements to deep apprehension. preceded my informal visit to the camp in which Negro nurses were stationed, "somewhere in England." At the gate we were courteously directed to the nurses quarters by the sentry, white.

The camp site seemed to be in the traditionally well ordered condition which marks U. S. army locations. We had been previously informed that German prisoners of war were the sole patients at this hospital camp. Because of this we were anticipating a generous supply of features which would distinguish this camp from those at which American soldiers were hospitalized and under the care of white nurses. We were disappointed in our inability to distinguish even nominal differences.

The nurses' dining hall, lounge and club rooms were cheerfully immaculate and cosily warm, despite the wintry cold outside and the unit heating. The PX unit located in the large club room carried the usual toileteies carried the usua toiletries, sweets, fruit juices and personal items as well as corned beef and coca cola. The attendant, a white U. S. soldier, was courteous, respectful in his duties. A table at the end was filled with sliced ham, cheese, spiced meats, pickles, olives, bread, butter, etc.—"help yourself," was the invitation. A "radiogram"— combination record player and radio—was intermittently serviced by the attendant with "good old home music." The furnishings of the club included a pool table, ping pong tables, small games and comfortable lounge chairs.

While a lively discussion was in progress between the nurses and some Red Cross officers regarding plans for a party, we snagged three nurses to answer some of the questions which were burning our tongues.

"How were they being treated by their superiors' What was the attitude of the German patients toward them? How did they like their present assignment? Why was the first group of Negro nurses to arrive in England assigned to a prisoner of war hospital unit?"

One of the nurses qualified their possible reactions as being highly subjective at this early point in a new experience They were warmly welcomed both officially and informally on their arrival at a northern port. A brief stay at two station hospitals for orientation proved to be a friendly experience with the white staffs. The degree of adjustment to this operation varied individually but they felt their superiors were trying hard to help them in their adjustment. The German p. w.'s were as a whole exceedingly polite and differential. The nurses expressed an understandable distaste for the eager anticipation of the prisoners to get to prisoner of war camps in the United States.

As professionally trained nurses they administered the same care to German p. w.'s that they would to their own brother. Being faithful to their profession, they are placed in the difficult position of helping an enemy because of humanitarian considerations. They find the prisoners of war notoriously aware of their rights under provision of the Geneva treaty. A few of the p'w.'s were under peculiar illusions about the war and America generally. Many expressed their amazement at finding that Negro nurses were subjected to the same proscription all over America that Jews received in Germany.

There were frankly skeptical answers to the reason for the colored nurses' first assignment being with p. w.'s. They had looked forward to nursing their own boys and would be happiest when that opportunity comes. This attitude is the same as that so highly manifested in Negro soldiers preferring Negro officers. They raise the constant wail of when are Negro Waes coming over and why can't we get colored bands and USO shows? Foreign soil intensifies the hunger for faces and things associated with home.

As we watched the convalescing German p. w.'s at their work about the camp, their happy smiles made us wonder how our colored soldiers were faring in German camps of American p. w.'s. We wondered what effect the letters from the Germans in this camp were having on their families and among authorities in Germany when they exposed the fact that they were under the efficient care of Negro nurses whom they had been told belonged to a subhuman group.

The nurses told us that they looked upon their patients merely as suffering human beings entitled to all the skill, care and service which a nurse professionally must give a patient. The nurses, too, especially those who had advanced training before going into the service, are keenly aware that their performance is being watched and that as Congressman Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, mother of the cadet nurse program, told them when she visited them recently that they are the outposts of colored nurses and their work is most important to the cause of the professional progress of the women of the human race.

As we left the camp and tried to figure out the way of this situation, a lot of probable reasons for the army's placement of these nurses arose which superceded our rather patent belief that the army always moves to discredit the Negro in the interracial scene. Maybe it's popaganda of a sort which will help rather than hurt.

Negro Nurses Accepted By Public Majority

DENVER. —(ANP) —At a time when the acceptance of the army and navy of Negro nurses is much discussed, it is significant that a majority of civilians would accept Negro nurse care in hospitals, as revealed in a nation-wide survey conducted by the National Opionion Research Center, University of Denver.

NORC's personally trained interviewers questioned a national cross-section of white civilian adults—men and women, young and old, rich and poor—in cities ,towns, and rural areas throughout the United States. All were asked:

"If you were sick in a hospital, would it be all right with you if you had a Negro nurse ,or wouldn't you like it?"

All right	57%
Wouldn't like it ..	42%
Undecided	1%

The 57 per cent include 3 per cent who would accept Negro care but who express a preference for white nurses.

The more ducation a person has the more willing he is to have a Negro nurse take care of him. Seventy per cent of persons with a college background, but only 53 per cent of the high school educated and 45 per cent of those with no more than a grade school education answer "All right." Six out of ten (62 per cent) residents of the north and west, but only four out of ten (42 per cent) southerners, would be willing to receive care from a Negro nurse in a hospital.

Comments from individuals interviewed reveal that many white people think very highly of Negro nurses, and that some even prefer them to white nurses. A Palatine, Ill., storekeeper believes: "Negroes are more tender hearted than the white people." A New York City machinist says: "You probably get better care with a Negro nurse than with a white nurse." A Brooklyn lawyer states: "Why not? We have Negro waitresses and Negro mammies."

The wife of an engineer in Houston replies: "I'm a nurse myself, and colored nurses are very good. I know many." Others who speak from personal experience comment: "I was in the hospital and had Negro nurses who were wonderful to me . . . I had a Negro nurse who was the best I had. She was kinder and took more pains to please me . . . I would rather have Negro nurses. Whites are too independent."

Those who would not like a Negro nurse express either a general dislike for Negroes or a fear of them on grounds of cleanliness or health. Typical reactions are: "I don't like Negroes close to me—I just don't . . . I don't want no nigger messing around me . . . Negro nurses should work for other Negroes . . . I wouldn't want any nurse if a Negro was all I could get . . . Negroes don't seem clean to me . . . I'd never get well."

A Montana cattle rancher admits: "I woudln't like, but I believe a Negro nurse would take better care of me than a white nurse." The wife of an Oregon mill superintendent replies: "I don't think I'd like it. I'm that way about any other race. I suppose it's racial prejudice." A telephone repairman in Louisiana makes an interetsing distinction: "I wouldn't like a Negro nurse in a hospital. It's all right in a home. I was practically raised by a Negro nurse."

The most frequent comments made by persons who reply "Undecided" are: "I don't know. You simply can't generalize on that question . . . It depends on the person."

25 Huachuca Nurses Sent to W. Coast Camp

CAMP BEALE, Calif. (ANP)—A contingent of twenty-five nurses led by Captain Della Raney, chief nurse, arrived here Wednesday from Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., and will be assigned to the nursing of returned Pacific war veterans.

The comparatively small number of soldiers at Huachuca now has enabled the reduction in size of the hospital staff there.

Twenty Harlem Nurses Challenge Army Policy

Chicago Defender Ill. 1-27-45

(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK.—Twenty graduate nurses of Harlem hospital here this week challenged the U. S. Army policy of limiting the number of Negro nurses accepted for service while issuing urgent appeals for white enlistments.

The applications of Negro nurse volunteers are allowed to gather dust in army files, yet the army declares that a critical shortage of nurses exists. Ten thousand graduate nurses are needed immediatly, the army says, yet brown American nurses are being ignored.

Among scores of Harlem and Lincoln hospital nurses who've been rejected because of their color are Hilda Brooks Jackson, a graduate nurse with 20 years' experienc who volunteered in 1941; Edith Beatrice Jackson, who applied to the Red Cross more than a month ago, but has received no reply; Annie B. Robinson whose two years of psychiatric training meant nothing to the army which rejected her in July—no reason.

Major General Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the U. S. Army in a press statement last week revealed the unyielding discriminatory policy of the army. Speaking of Negro nurses he said, "We don't mix them—where we have Negro troops, we use them, but up till now we haven't used them for white troops. We don't house Negroes and whites together."

The army policy was challenged by Mrs. Mable K. Staupers, executive secretary of the Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, in an emergency meeting called at the Hotel Pierre by Mayor La Guardia last week to recruit nurses. At the meeting Major General Kirk declared there is an immediate need for 10,000 nurses. He suggested that conscription might be resorted to to fill the demand.

Mrs. Staupers rose from her seat in the small audience of nurses and people interested in nursing problems and asked, "If nurses are needed so desperately, why isn't the army using Negro nurses? Of 9000 registered Negro nurses, the army has taken 247. The navy takes none." 1-27-45

Reflects Civilian Trend

Major General Kirk somewhat flustered replied, "I believe that the average share of colored nurses in the army is equal to the total number of Negro troops."

The army is only a reflection of nation-wide policy in respect to Negro nurses. Recently Iva Wallace of Brooklyn was assigned to Buffalo General hospital after an emergency call during the infantile paralysis epidemic there. When she arrived she was told that Buffalo General Hospital would not hire Negro nurses despite the emergency. She was given her fare back to Brooklyn.

Betty Brown, of New York City passed a civil service examination for public health nurse with a high rating and was assigned to the Public Health Nursing staff of Plattsburg, N. Y. When she arrived in Plattsburg the health officials, astonished to find that they had employed a Negro, advised her to resign immediately as "there were no Negroes in the community" and she might be in danger personally!

Only 47 Schools Open

1-27-45

These examples are repeated with a greater or less degree of crudity all over the country. Young Negro women who aspire to nursing careers find that of the 1297 accredited schools of nursing in the United States, only 47 will accept them. Many of the schools due to the sub-standard conditions in the South are unable to give their students the finest training.

Again, when Negro nurses graduate they are subjected to salary inequalities. According to a recent survey of 27 public health agencies in the South, the median salary for white nurses was $1624 and for Negro nurses $1227. This means less chance for furthering their nursing education. 1-27-45

The knight in shining armor in the plight of Negro nurses has been the Association of Colored Graduate Nurses. Organized in 1908 it has a membership now of over 1500 and has put up a stiff and consistent fight for the recognition of Negro nurses.

Among its many important accomplishments, for not only its own members but Negro nurses throughout the nation, have been the opening up of better nursing schools to Negro students; the slow integration of Negro nurses into the American Nurses' Association through state associations, membership in which is in some instances a professional requirement; registration of Negro nurses in many states. All of which has meant increased opportunities for Negro nurses in various fields.

But it has been a long uphill climb for Negro nurses since the Civil War days when Harriet Tubman volunteered her services to sick and wounded soldiers on Southern battlefields. White women administering in the same way were financially rewarded by the government in the years after the war. But Tubman never received a cent.

Mary Mahoney, the first professional Negro nurse, deplored the fact in 1909 that good nursing schools were closed to Negroes. She graduated from Boston's New England Hospital for Women and Children in 1879. In 1944 it was listed as one of those hospitals not accepting Negro students.

First Lady Urges End Of Ban On Negro Nurses

Chicago Defender Ill.

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt declared this week that much of the critical nurse shortage could be laid to the ban on Negro nurses. 1-20-45

The First Lady, while favoring an overall draft of nurses, blasted the Jim-Crow-quota of colored nurses and appealed for the free utilization of Negro nurses.

The mounting wave of protest which hit the Jim Crow nurse draft this week drew defensive reactions from Washington officials.

Denying that any discrimination existed in the use of colored nurses, Brig. Gen. George F. Lull, deputy surgeon and Col. Florence Blanchfield, superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps, said that the army has taken in qualified Negro nurses without discrimination or segregation. 1-20-45

But the draft plan, as it now exists, continued to encounter a solid block of opposition from Negro organizations throughout the country.

The National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses through its executive secretary, Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, placed full blame for the small number of Negro nurse recruits on the army and navy jim crow policy.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt, Jane Edna Hunter, head of the Ohio State Federation of Colored Women's clubs, went on record opposing the draft plan. Mrs. Hunter pointed out that there was some 10,000 Negro nurses in America with less than 500 permitted to enlist in the armed services.

"Respectfully urge that provision be made for fuller use of this large body of Negro nurses through enlistment and specific inducement by granting of commissions to all applicants without regard to color," the telegram stated. 1-20-45

"If the proposal to draft nurses must be resorted to, then we urge that all inductees be given consideration on basis of training and fitness and allowed to serve in all branches of the army and navy and not restricted to Negro soldiers alone."

Further discussing the controversial nurse draft, Mrs. Hunter said: "President Roosevelt should see to it that the army heads immediately remove all restrictions on the enlistment of Negro nurses. The President should order without delay the opening of the doors to Negro nurses that they may have the opportunity to serve our country in this crisis." 1-20-45

N.A.A.C.P. Enters Fight

Meanwhile the N.A.A.C.P. urged Chairman Andrew J. May of the Military Affairs Committee to include an anti-discrimination clause in the proposed legislation for the draft of nurses.

In his message to Congressman May, acting secretary of the N.A.A.C.P., Roy Wilkins, said:

"National Association for the Advancement of Colored People strongly urges that if nurses are drafted, the legislation contain a clause forbidding discrimination and segregation on account of race and color in the induction and service of nurses. We urge this because under voluntary enlistment program Negro nurses who were eager to serve their country have been discouraged from enlisting by a quota system and a policy of restricting them to nursing of Negro soldiers only. 1-20-45

"This failure to utilize trained and registered Negro nurses has contributed to the critical shortage which military authorities are now seeking to remedy by means of a draft. It should be pointed out that even if draft is ordered and present system of limited and discriminatory use of Negro nurses is continued, it is not like that more Negro nurses will be inducted.

"Our information from various camps is that tendencies exist to concentrate Negro nurses in prisoner of war camps. Several cases have been reported here that they have been doubly humiliated before German war prisoners by being forced to eat in separate dining rooms. 1-20-45

"Negro nurses like all other Negro Americans are anxious to serve their country but so far they have been given limited opportunity and have been insulted in the bargain. As a southerner you will instantly recognize how ridiculous is the assumption that trained nurses shall not be entrusted with ministering to wounded American soldiers who happen to be white."

In a letter to Dr. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the U. S. Army, George Marshall, head of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, urged the armed forces to use all trained nurses on the basis of ability instead of race.

Need 8,000 Nurses

The letter pointed out that this would be a major step in meeting the critical need for 8,000 additional nurses and stated:

"There are only about 300 Negro nurses in the army. This means that while almost 15 per cent of the white nurses of the country are serving with the armed forces, only three per cent of the Negro nurses are with the armed forces. The limitation of the number of Negro nurses with the armed forces is largely the result of a policy of exclusion, as practiced by the navy, and a policy of discouragement, discrimination and segregation, as practiced by the army."

Colored Nurses Serving Abroad Receive Praise

9-14-45 Philadelphia Tribune

WITH THE 168th STATION HOSPITAL, WARRINGTON, England— Lieutenant Colonel Harold I. Jirsa, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, commanding officer of the United States Army station hospital, this week praised the skill of the 83 Negro nurses who make up his entire nursing staff.

These nurses arrived in England in August, 1944, and were assigned to the 10th Station Hospital. Early this year they were assigned to the 168th Station Hospital. Several of them served in Africa with the 25th Station Hospital and after a brief period in the United States, were sent to this theatre of operations. 9-14-

Captain Mary L. Petty, of Chicago, Ill., who before coming to England served at Fort Huachuca, Arizona; Fort Bragg, N. C., and Tuskegee, Alabama is supervisor of the nurses.

56n-1945 Nurses

Atlanta World 2-11-45

Atlanta World 2-11-45

INTEREST IN NURSING among Negroes has greatly increased since press announcements that the ban against using Negroes has been lifted by the Navy Department. Enrollees in the Cadet Nurses Corps at Tuskegee are displaying eager interest in war service opportunities. This group is standing in front of the John A. Andrew Memorial Hospital at Tuskegee. — (Photo by Polk)

Negro Nurses Attend U.S. Troops In United Kingdom

2-10-45 Pittsburgh Courier - Penn.

WITH U.S. TROOPS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM—The sixty-three Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps, now attending United States troops in one of the oldest American hospitals in the United Kingdom, are serving with distinction, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, ranking Negro officer, informed the War Department this week. 2-10-45

Prisoners of war, formerly treated at the hospital, have been transferred to other installations, the General revealed. Captain Mary L. Petty has been assigned as Chief Nurse of this contingent.

Nurses Attend White Wounded In England

Chicago Defender - ILL.

3-3-45

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND—The 63 Negro nurses assigned to an army hospital here in Britain are now attending American wounded exclusively. The last wounded Nazi prisoner of war was removed in late December. Shortly after arriving in Britain in mid-August, the nurses replaced white nurses who were attending the German prisoners. 3-3-45

With the removal of the Germans, Capt. Mary L. Petty, Chicago, was made commanding officer of the company of nurses replacing the white commanding officer, Capt. Frances Crouch. 1st Lt. Louise Jacobs Manley, Tuskegee, Ala., is officer in charge of the operating room replacing Lt. Marjorie Truex, white.

White and Negro soldiers are speedily cleared through the hospital and while the percentage of Negro soldiers is small compared to the white patients, the two groups are always represented, said Captain Petty. Recently high ranking officers conducted through the hospital found all patients expressing satisfaction with the hospital's staff. 3-3-45

"We're kept very busy and we are all praying for the war's end so that the boys can get back home," said Lt. Alma Favors, Chicago, Ill., a Provident hospital graduate.

Negro Nurses in the Army

Richmond Times - Va. 1-26-45

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Mothers and fathers of America: It is your sons that may never return because of inadequate nursing. Thousands of Negro nurses are and have been available. Some parents may prefer dead sons to Negro nurses in the army, but do you? If not, speak out now and hope that, for your son, you have not spoken too late. Telegraph or write to your Senators and Representatives today.

ETHEL CLYDE.

New York, N. Y.

Camp McCoy's Latest Nurse Graduates

Afro-American 1-13-45

Baltimore, Md.

The latest class of nurses to complete their basic training at the Army Nurse Corps training center at Camp McCoy is shown at attention prepared for inspection. They are as follows, front row, left to right: Thelma Gallman, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Rosetta Austin, Savannah, Ga.; Gladys Brown, Camden, N.J.; Rachel Green, Charleston, S.C.; Mary Burton, Petersburg, Va.; Ada Mack, Greenville, S.C.; and Virginia Mobley, Haverhill, Mass. Second row, left to right: Lts. Mary Rogers, Savannah, Ga.; Mildred Stokes, New Orleans, La.; Lydia Wiles, New York; and Evelyn Decker, Washingtonville, New York.

Captain Della H. Raney Heads 25 Nurses at Station Hospital at Camp Beale, Transferred From Ft. Huachuca

Kansas City Call 4-20-45

CAMP BEALE, Cal. — Headed by Captain Della H. Raney, 25 Negro nurses now compose the entire nursing staff of the Station hospital at Camp Beale. Captain Raney's staff of one first lieutenant and 23 second lieutenants from many States in the South and east was transferred here from Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

"I have only highest praise for Captain Raney and this fine group of nurses," states Colonel C. W. Comfort Jr., Camp Beal post surgeon. "They are doing excellent work here in caring for our patients and shows results of thorough training." 4-20-45

Although Negroes are stationed at Camp Beale with the Army Service Forces Personnel Replacement Depot, work at the Station hospital is with all races. Only a small percentage of the hospital patients are Negro. 4-20-45

Captain Raney has the distinction of being the first Negro nurse to report for duty in the present war. When she joined the service she was serving as operating room supervisor in the Lincoln hospital, Durham, N. C.

She was commissioned a second lieutenant April 25, 1941, and saw her first duty in Fort Bragg, N. C. On March 9, 1942, she was promoted to first lieutenant and transferred to Tuskegee Army Air Field, Alabama, as principal chief nurse. Advancing to her present rank in June, 1944, she went to Fort Huachuca on July 7, where she served as principal chief nurse until transferred to Camp Beale in January of this year to assume the same position.

Nurses in the group are: First Lieutenant Mary L. Williams, Fort Worth, Texas, and Second Lieutenants Rosetta Austin, Savannah, Georgia, Ada H. Bailey, New York City, Bernice E. Britton, Clover, Va., Gladys S. Brown, Camden, N. J., Mary P. Burton, Kalmarnock, Va., Vinnie L. Curry, Winston-Salem, N. C., Evelyn Dicker, Washingtonville, New York, Carolyn E. Dillon, New York City, Thelma A. Gallman, Winston-Salem, N. C., Louise E. Jenkins, York, Pa., Ada E. Mock, Greenville, S. C., Laverne F. Martin, Princess Ann, Md., Virginia Mobley, Haverhill, Mass., Mary J. Monroe, Philadelphia, Pa., Thelma N. Reynolds, Atlantic City, N. J., Mary M. Rogers, Savannah, Ga., Ethel M. Stanley, New Bern, N. C., Lydia C. Wiles, New York City, Clara E. Bridges, Atlanta, Ga., Patti D. Evans, Oklahoma City, Okla., Velma N. Brown, St. Louis, Mo., Paradine D. Alford, Jacksonville, Fla., and Hazel P. Reid, San Diego, Cal.

All nurses live in the completely equipped nurses' quarters at the hospital. A recreation hall is at their disposal during off duty hours. Week end trips to Sacramento and San Francisco, to the South, and to nearby Grass Valley and Nevada City in the California foothills are possible for the nurses.

6-16-45

Pittsburgh Courier Pa

PROMOTED—Among recent promotions at Tuskegee Army Air Field is First Lieut. Abbie Ross, widow of Capt. Mac Ross, member of the first class of cadets to be graduated from TAAF, and the first member of the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron to make a parachute jump. A native of Alexandria, La., Lieutenant Ross attended Xavier University, where she was a pre-medical student. Her nurse training was received at Kansas City Geenral Hospital No. 2.—AAF Photo.

Army Lists 512 Nurses at General, Station Hospitals

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland 10-6-45

By RICHARD R. DIER

NEW YORK — On active duty with the Army Nurse Corps are 512 colored nurse officers, according to the War Department.

The figures, given as of the end of July of this year, include nine holding the rank of captain, 115 first lieutenants, and the remaining 338, second lieutenants.

At 5 General Hospitals

The War Department says that colored Army nurses are assigned to a number of Army installations throughout the country, including five general hospitals, 11 station hospitals and three regional hospitals. 10-6-45

The general hospitals at which colored nurses are working are: Halloran, Staten Island, N.Y.; Lovell, Fort Devens, Mass.; Nichols, Louisville, Ky.; Winter, Topeka, Kan.; and U.S. Camp Butner, N.C.

At Station Hospitals

The station hospitals to which colored nurses have been assigned are those at Camp Beale, Calif.; Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.; San Luis Obispo, Calif.; Camp Callan, San Diego, Calif.; Fort Des Moines Iowa; Tuskegee AAFS, Tuskegee Ala.;

Camp Livingston, La.; Prisoner of War Camp, Florence, Ariz.; Prisoner of War Camp, Papago, Ariz.; Utah ASF Depot, Ogden, Utah; and Prisoner of War Camp, Rupert, Idaho.

The three regional hospitals named are those at Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort George G. Meade, Md.; and Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo.

War Dept. Announces Army Nurse Corps Has 512 Negro Officers

The New York Age New York, N.Y. 10-6-45

On active duty with the Army Nurses Corps are 512 Negro nurse officers, the National Association of Colored Graduated Nurses has learned from the War Department in reply to a query from the Association. The figures, given as of the end of July of this year, include nine holding the rank of captain; 115 first lieutenants and the remaining 388 second lieutenants.

The War Department also informed the Association that Negro nurses are assigned to a number of army installations throughout the country, including five General Hospitals, eleven Station Hospitals and three Regional Hospitals.

The General Hospitals at which Negro nurses are working are Halloran, Staten Island, N. Y.; Lovell, Ft. Devens, Mass.; Nichols, Louisville, Ky.; Winter, Topeka, Kan.; and U. S. Camp Butner, N. C.

The Station Hospitals to which Negro nurses have been assigned are those at Camp Beale, Calif.; Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.; San Luis Obispo, Calif.; Camp Callan, San Diego, Calif.; Fort Des Moines, Iowa; Tuskegee AAFS, Tuskegee, Ala.; Camp Livingston, La.; Prisoner of War Camp, Florence, Ariz.; Prisoner of War Camp, Papago, Ariz.; Utah ASF Depot, Ogden, Utah, and Prisoner of War Camp, Rupert, Idaho. 10-6-45

Three Regional Hospitals named are those at Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort George G. Meade, Md.; and Francis E. Warren, Wyoming.

56n-1945

Nurses

Capt'n Raney Commands 25-Nurse Staff In California

Atlanta World

Do Excellent Work Caring For Patients

4-27-45

CAMP BEALE, Calif. — Headed by Captain Della H. Raney, 25 Negro nurses now compose the entire nursing staff of the Station Hospital at Camp Beale. Captain Raney's staff of one first lieutenant and 23 second lieutenants from many States in the south and east was transferred here from Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

"I have only highest praise for Captain Rainey and this fine group of nurses," states Col. C. W. Comfort Jr, Camp Beale post surgeon. "They are doing excellent work here in caring for our patients and show results of thorough training." 4-27-45

WORK WITH ALL

Although Negroes are stationed at Camp Beale with the Army Service Forces Personnel Replacement Depot, work at the Station Hospital is with all races. Only a small percentage of the hospital patients are Negro. 4-27-45

Captain Raney has the distinction of being the first Negro nurse to report for duty in the present war. When she joined the service she was serving as operating room supervisor in the Lincoln Hospital Durham, N. C., from which she had graduated.

She was commissioned a second lieutenant April 25, 1941 and saw her first duty in Fort Bragg, N. C. On March 9, 1942, she was promoted to first lieutenant and transferred to Tuskegee Army Air Field Ala., as principal chief nurse. Advancing to her present rank in June 1944, she went to Fort Huachuca on July 7, where she served as principal chief nurse until transferred to Camp Beale in January of this year to assume the same position.

LIST NURSES

4-27-45

Nurses in the group are: First Lieut. Mary L. Williams, Ft Worth, Texas, and 2nd Lieutenants Rosetta Austin, Savannah, Ga., Ada H. Bailey, New York City, Bernice E. Britton, Clover, Virginia, Gladys S. Brown, Camden, N. J., Mary P. Burton, Kalmarnock, Virginia, Vinnie L. Curry, Winston-Salem, N. C., Evelyn Dicker, Washington-ville, New York, Carolyn E. Dillon,

4-27-45

FIRST TO REPORT FOR DUTY—Captain Della H. Raney, Army Nurse Corps, who now heads the nursing staff at the station hospital at Camp Beale, Calif., has the distinction of being the first Negro nurse to report for duty in the present war. She is a former operating room supervisor in the Lincoln Hospital, Durham, N. C. Only a small percentage of the Camp Beale patients are Negro (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

New York City, Thelma A. Gallman, Winston-Salem, N. S., Louise E. Jenkins, York, Penna., Ada E. Mock, Greenville, S. C. Lavern F. Martin, Princess Ann, Maryland Virginia Mobley, Taverhill, Mass. Mary J. Moncore, Philadelphia, Penna., Thelma N. Reynolds, Atlantic City, N. J. Mary M. Rogers, Savannah, Ga., Ethel M. Stanley, New Bern, N. C., Lydia C. Wiles, New York City, Clara E. Bridges, Atlanta, Ga., Patti D. Evans, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Velma N. Brown, St. Louis, Mo., Paradine D. Alford, Jacksonville, Fla., and Hazel P. Reid, San Diego, Calif.

All nurses live in the completely equipped nurses' quarters at the hospital. A recreation hall is at their disposal during off duty hours. Week end trips to Sacramento and San Francisco, to the south and to nearby Grass Valley and Nevada City in the California foothills are possible for the nurses.

Negro nurses assigned to Army hospital in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE — Twenty-five Negro nurses have been assigned to duty at the Nichols General hospital here, an Army installation.

GETS COMMISSION

Chicago Defender

GENEVIEVE E. WASHINGTON

Graduate nurse, who has been commissioned 2nd lieutenant in the Army Nurse Corps and will report to Camp McCoy in Sparta, Wis., on March 15. Miss Washington is a graduate of Provident hospital and for the past four years been employed as a psychiatric nurse at Peoria State hospital. She did post graduate work in psychiatry at the Illinois State School of Psychiatric Nursing in Chicago. Miss Washington is the daughter of Mrs. Estella Stemley of 5818 LaFayette avenue, and Samuel Washington of 206 East 45th street.

STIMSON REFUTES SURGEON GENERAL

Pittsburgh Courier

Penn.

1-27-45

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Colored nurses are going to be used wherever and whenever they are available and needed, Secretary of War Henry Stimson stated at his press conference Thursday in apparent contradiction of the jim-crow dictum of Surgeon General Norman Kirk of the Army.

Stimson, recognizing that the Army is already using some Negro nurses on a non-segregated basis, took occasion to deny the position taken by the surgeon general represented Army policy.

This statement was made in reply to a question as to what extent restriction of colored nurses to service in Army hospitals where the personnel was all-colored represented War Department policy. Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, the surgeon general, was quoted as having told Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, that the Army did not mix white and colored nurses.

WILL UTILIZE ALL NURSES

Mr. Stimson said that colored nurses commissioned in the Army "must meet the same physical and professional requirements established for all nurses," and added that "all nurses appointed in the Army Nurse Corps are going to be utilized." 1-27-45

Meanwhile, the question of utilization of colored nurses by the Army and Navy came up last Wednesday on the floor of the House when Representative Samuel Dickstein (Dem., N. Y.) read a letter written to Walter Winchell, a New York newspaper columnist and radio commentator. The letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Winchell: As I listen each Sunday evening, I am more convinced you are honestly and conscientiously trying to help win the war and make possible the winning of the peace.

"You mentioned the desperate need for nurses for the Armed Forces. Can you, as an honest reporter, continue to make the plea for nurses without adding, 'the Army wants white nurses'? Of the 9,000 registered Negro nurses the Army has taken 247, while the Navy has taken not a one. Yet we are told that 10,000 nurses are needed at once and may be drafted.

POINTED QUESTION

"Apparently these nurses are registered and perfectly able and willing to do their part. Should we permit prejudice and intolerance to stay in the way of our fighting men's getting all the care to which they are entitled? Why not permit these young women to do their share for their country?"

Representative France P. Bolton (Rep., Ohio) said she thought the number of colored nurses given in the letter was too low, and that there now were nearly 400 colored nurses in the Army Nurses Corps.

She said the Army had established some years ago a quota for colored nurses. "It may interest the gentleman (Mr. Dickstein) to know," she stated, "that I have been working for some years to lift the ban on Negro nurses in the Army, and I am constantly working at it."

PRAISES NURSES

Mrs. Bolton said while she was visiting fighting fronts recently she spent a day with sixty-one colored nurses who were sent to England as a unit, and were just finishing their orientation course at the time of her visit.

"They were an exceedingly fine group of women," Mrs. Bolton added, "and the reports I have had of their work since then have been splendid. I am very much in accord with the gentleman's (Mr. Dickstein's) view that we could use more of them." 1-27-45

The American Civil Liberties Union last Friday asked Congress to include in any extension of draft legislation to nurses or 4-F's specific prohibitions against race segregation.

GEN. KIRK QUESTIONED

The House Military Affairs Committee last Friday heard Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, strongly endorse the nurse draft bill as the most effective means of getting 20,000 new nurses needed to insure the best treatment for wounded soldiers.

General Kirk was questioned by committee members as to the policy on the acceptance of colored nurses. He replied that "we are accepting every Negro nurse who puts in an application and meets requirements." 1-27-45

The National Nursing Council for War Service revealed later that of the 9,000 graduate colored nurses there are approximately 308 in the Army Nurse Corps. The Navy has none, and as far as could be learned, it has no plan for the acceptance of colored nurses.

NURSES IN BURMA—American nurses at work in the completely Negro-Staff hospital in North Burma. Gowns, masks, sponges, and various articles are made by the nurses themselves. Here Lieutenant Daryle Foster works at the sewing machine while Lieutenant Doshia May Watkins places gowns in the sterilizer. (U. S. Signal Photo.)

FIRST U. S. NEGRO NURSES ARRIVE IN AUSTRALIA — American Red Cross Club Director Harvey Shaw (622 Kirkpatrick St., Philadelphia, Pa.) pours coffee for U. S. Army nurses and officers serving in the Southwest Pacific. Left to right: 2nd Lt. Beulah Baldwin, 2211 East 33rd St., Cleveland, Ohio; 2nd. Robert L. Rimmer, 573 Chandler Street, Detroit, Mich., who just won his commission; 2nd Lt. Marjorie Mayers, 74 East 121st St., NYC; 2nd Lt. Prudence L. Burns, 306 1st St., Mounds, Ill.; Capt. Walton C. Johnson, 220 East 90th St., Cleveland, Ohio and 2nd Lt. Joan L. Hamilton, 1306 Euclid Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.

56n-1945

COLOR COMMUNIQUE

Nurses No Longer Attend Nazi Troops

Chicago Defender

2-10-45

ILL.

WITH U. S. TROOPS IN UNITED KINGDOM—The 63 Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps no longer are attending Nazi war prisoners here in Britain. Widespread protests against the assignment of the only contingent of Negro nurses overseas to watch over German "supermen" has resulted in transfer of the Nazis to other installations.

The nurse unit is now attending U. S. troops in one of the oldest American hospitals in the United Kingdom. They are serving with distinction, Brig.-Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer in the army and now an aide to General Eisenhower, has informed the War Department.

Head of the Negro nurse unit is Capt. Mary L. Petty of Chicago.

Negro Nurses

P.M.

Dear Editor: 2-9-45

Qualified Negro nurses are accepted by both the Army and the Navy! If you know any who wish to volunteer, tell them to write to the Army Nurse Corps or the Navy Nurse Corps, Washington, D. C., to avoid possible local opposition.

If discrimination is encountered, notify Mrs. Mabelle K. Staupers, president of the National Assn. of Colored Graduate Nurses, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

ETHEL CLYDE

Race Nurses Work In Great Britain

Memphis World

2-6-45 Tenn

WITH U. S. TROOPS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM— (SNS) — The sixty-three Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps, now attending United States troops in one of the oldest American hospitals in the United Kingdom, are serving with distinction, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, ranking Negro officer, informed the War Department today. 2-6-45

Prisoners of war, formerly treated at the hospital, have been transferred to other installations, the General revealed. Captain Mary L. Petty has been assigned as Chief Nurse of this contingent.

Hopes Others Will Become Navy Nurses

3-16-45

Kansas City Call

NEW YORK. — " I hope I am only the first of a large number of members of my race to join the Navy Nurse Corps," said Miss Phyllis Mae Daley, R.N., as she was commissioned an ensign, along with four other young women, Thursday morning, March 8, at the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, 33 Pine St., New York, N. Y., by Commander Thomas Gaylord, U.S.N. (retired), director of the office. She is the first Negro to become a member of the Navy Nurse Corps.

A pleasant-faced young woman 25 years of age, in a black crepe dress, Miss Daley bore the limelight modestly, but confessed she was "proud and excited."

6 Months' Training

She was born in New York and was graduated from the Lincoln Hospital School for Nurses in 1941. After her graduation, she worked at the Lincoln Hospital and Home, and at the New York Department of Health as a public health nurse. Immediately prior to her induction, she was taking a course in public health nursing at Teachers college, Columbia university. 3-16-45

The new ensigns will be assigned to duty within a few days at one of the two naval hospitals in the vicinity of New York—at St. Albans, Queens or the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn. They will receive six months' training in Navy hospital procedure before assignment elsewhere.

Would Go Overseas

Miss Daley said, in answer to

Nurses

a question after the commissioning ceremony, that one did not ask for specific assignment in the Navy, but that she "would not mind" going overseas. 3-16-45

The Navy Nurse Corps is in urgent need of 2,500 additional nurses by June 30, Commander Gaylord announced. At present there are 9,000 Navy nurses. Arrangements have been made, the commander said, to speed up recruiting by receiving applications for commissions through the Pine Street office in New York instead of in Washington. Nurses have been assured they will be satisfied of the Navys decision approximate 30 days after final papers have been filed.

Navy Says Its Policy Does Not Keep Negro Nurses From Serving

New York Age

2-3-45

Speaking Thursday night at an emergency meting in the New York Times Hall, 240 West 44th street, Rear Admiral William J. C. Agnew, acting chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy, said that the Navy planned to accept Negro nurses.

At the same time, Major-General George F. Lull, deputy surgeon-general of the Army, said that of the 9,000 Negro nurses in this country, only 2,000 are eligible for the Army Nurses Corps because of age, dependent minor children, and physical condition.

2-3-45

The meeting was held to encourage recruitment of nurses for both branches of the armed forces.

Amplifying his statement, Admiral Agnew on Saturday declared:

"There is no policy in the Navy prohibiting appointment of Negro women in the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve. Every application reaching the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for appointment in the Navy Nurse Corps or the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve is given full consideration, provided applicant meets the physical, profesional, military fitness and other requirements for appointment."

Nurses Serving On Front Lines

Atlanta World Ga.

2-4-45

NEW YORK, — (ANP) — Although little has been said about it, Negro nurses are working in a number of hospitals in this country. They work is general hospitals as regular army nurses doing general duty. Even Surgeon Gen. Kirk evidently did not know how far his army has progressed in this direction. When questioned at press conference two weeks ago, he indicated that Negro nurses were being used only to nurse Negro troops.

Nurses are stationed at Camp Livingston and Camp Claiborne in Louisiana at Camp Bragg in North Carolina and at Camp Beale in California. A group of 25 nurses was just transferred from Fort Huachuca to Camp Beale.

When the hue and cry regarding the use of Negro nurses to care for German prisoners of war went up shortly after the first contingent of Negro nurses to see overseas duty went to England, the nurses were transferred and it is known that they saw duty at Bastogne, Belgium. 2-4-45

Mrs. Mable Staupers of the National Association of Colored Graduate nurese has appealed for more volunteers especially now that nurses need not be on the availability list from which they were formerly selected.

It is the responsibility apparently of the NACGN and the National Nursing council in which Mrs. Estelle Massey Riddle is is consultant to stimulate acceptance enough to meet the demand now that the bars are down but this evidently is proving to be a somewhat difficult job.

Group Writes Petition To General Kirk

Atlanta World

2-17-45 Ga.

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Fifty prominent women, representing stage, radio, civic, church, educational, writing and trade union fields in a statement last week, urged Surgean Gen. Norman T Kirk to utilize Negro nurses on a complete footing of equality.

Declaring their support to President Roosevelt's proposal for the full utilization of nurses to tend our wounded, the signees simultaneously hailed the newly announced navy policy to accept Negro nurse applicants and urged full application of that policy by the armed services.

WOULD SOLVE SHORTAGE

"We Feel," the signees declared, "while this new policy would not entirely solve the shortage of the nurses it would rapidly bring to the armed forces, a large number of additional qualified nurses."

Heading the list of signers were Margaret Halsey, author, "Some of My Best Friends Are Soldiers," Dr. Gene Weltfish, co-author "Races of Mankind," Benay Venuta, Hazel Scott, Betty Garrett, Elizabeth Bergner, Henrietta Buckmaster, Fennie Hurst, Nym Wales, Hilda Simms, Mrs. Terry R. Penman, women's auxiliary, National Maritime union, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, Sono Osato, Dr. Annette Rubenstein, Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Dr. Adele Sicular, Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, Greenwich Settlement house, Myra Blakeslee, Good Will commission, New Jersey, Eleanor Fowler, secretary treasurer, CIO Women's auxiliaries, Rose Terlin, editor, Women's Press, Helen M. Currier, Brooklyn Council for Social Planning, Mrs. William J. Schefflin, Dorothy Height, National Board YWCA, Katherine Earnshaw, Greater New York council, CIO, Olivia Pearl Stokes, Baptist Young Peoples union, Mrs. Faye Stephenson. 2-17-45

The statement, circulated by the Sweethearts of Servicemen, affiliated with American Youth for Democracy took specific issue with the recent statement of Gen. Kirk who declared that "the army uses Negro nurses only where Negro troops are and that the army does not mix them."

WOMEN CONCERNED

"We are vitally concerned," the signees declared, "that our servicemen have the best equipment and supplies as well as the best possible medical care when wounded. Yet we are told by the President that there is undue strain on the exeting force' and that '11 army hospital units have been sent overseas without their complement of nurses' and that at army hospitals in the United States, there is only one nurse to 25 beds, instead of the recommended 1 to 15 beds.'

"As Sweethearts, wives and sisters of our brave fighting men we know we speak for our servicemen when we say: We askin the army," they can do.

ONLY 300 IN ARMY

The statement called attention to the fact that while "some 9,000 Negro graduate nurses are allies' for American democracy, today, only 300 are and, most immediate, denies the needed medical care being given

They emphasized that "the practice of segregation has likewise served needlessly to aggravate the acute shortage of nurses serving with the army. Such a practice undermines national morale, lowers the respect of our allies' for American democracy, and, most immediate, denies the needed medical care being given to all members of our armed forces." 2-17-45

2-17-45

The statement disclosed that the present practice is "contrary to the experiences of many civilian and army hospitals today." During the last war Negro nurses "were integrated into the army nursing service, and creditably performed their duties, nursing white patients as well as colored," according to war department records. 2-17-45

"Nothing must be spared," they insisted, "to fulfill our high responsibilities to our wounded. We welcome the newly announced Navy policy to accept Negro nurse applicants as a sign of this recognition. We urge the full application of this policy in all of the armed services where Negro nurses are concerned."

Army Hospital Staffed by Negro Nurses Rated High in Efficiency and Neatness

The Call - Kansas City Mo

LANCASHIRE, Eng. — (ANP) —The 168th U. S. Military hospital here is rated highly. The hospital is manned by an all-Negro nurse staff under the command of Capt. Marry Petty. 3-23-45

"The experiment of staffing a military hospital with Negro nurses has proved a real success," said Patricia Strauss, a white daily newspaper correspondent. "I must record that I saw one of the operating rooms 45 minutes after the last operation of the day was finished. It was not just clean and tidy. It looked as if it had never been used. It might in fact have been an exhibition operating room in a window at Macy's." 3-23-45

The bulk of the operation is skin grafting. With the use of the modern dermatone, which cuts one-100th of an inch thin, no scars are left on the patient's face nor the donor's face. No stitches have to be removed anymore because the skin is pasted on with a paste made of plasma and leucocytic extract. 3-23-45

Fifty-four of the nurses have managed to survive the dampness of the English climate although Capt. Petty is reported to have been confined recently by pneumonia. Many of the girls are reported to have purchased bicycles and take rides around the English countryside.

Second Lt. Alice Ismael, New York City, is among those who hopes they will be able to spend leaves in Paris soon.

Miss Priestly On Staff Of 1st Negro Hospital Unit Assigned Overseas

Informer - Houston - Texas

2-27-45

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA —Miss Alma M. Priestly, formerly of New Orleans, La., is one among those who compose the Negro hospital unit which for the first time in the annals of the American Red Cross, has been assigned overseas.

The unit will be attached to the 268 Station Hospital commanded by Major Arthur H. Simmons, somewhere in New Guinea and Miss Priestly is assistant field director.

Miss Priestly who having been awarded the $1000 Julius Rosenwald Fellowship to study social work, was graduated from the Atlanta School of Social Work and Xavier University at New Orleans. She is a member of the American Association of Social Workers, the American Associaiton of Medical Social Workers and a Member of the Alpha Kappa Sorority.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Eugenia P. Priestly of Los Angeles and of the late Edward A. Priestly. She served as medical social worker in Flint Goodridge hospital at New Orleans and as Case Consultant and director for the New Orleans Housing Authority. Prior to ehr entering the field of Medical Social work with the Red Cross at Fort Huachuca, Miss Priestly was director of the National Catholic Community Service USO activities at Des Moines, Ia.

2-27-45

Others composing the unit are Miss Elizabeth P. Green, hospital recreation worker of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miss Esther M. Baker of Champaign, Ill., secreatry.

J.C. Nurse Policy Banned in Vets' Administration

AFRO-American Balt., Md.

2-13-45

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON (N N P A) — Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administration chief, said in an exclusive interview this week that he was advising his medical director to accept qualified nurses regardless of race, creed or color for use wherever the demand is greatest.

The Army has recently broadened its use of colored nurses, and the Navy has just announced it would accept them for the first time.

At the end of the week, however, the medical director in Washington, Dr. Charles M. Griffith, Oteen, N.C.

"Are they used in these places only to serve colored patients or to serve any and all patients?" I asked.

"The whole things depend on the number of patients we get," Dr. Griffith answered. "So far, we have used them only for colored patients, but I am due to have a conference with the general on the whole nurse question soon."

Housing Toughest Problem

General Hines, in announcing the new policy, said the housing of the nurses at veterans' institutions in some sections would be a problem, but he thought it could be solved.

He suggested the possibility of having the colored nurses live "off the post," which he said some of the white nurses are doing now in Washington because of crowded housing conditions at Walter Reed Hospital and Mt. Alto.

The general expressed a high regard for the ability of colored nurses, praised the calibre of work had not received the "advice" of the general and was still sticking to the present restrictive use of colored nurses. 2-13-45

Director Still Hesitant

In an interview, when Dr. Griffith was told of General Hines' statement, he said: We are taking both white and colored nurses now. I have vacancies now for 15 or 20 colored nurses."

Asked if the "vacancies for colored nurses" meant they would be used only at Tuskegee Veterans' Facility, he said they are being used at three other places—Hampton, Va., Waco, Tex., and

Women Leaders Hit Jimcrow of Negro Nurses

Worker - 2-4-45

TELL SURGEON GENERAL THOUSANDS ARE READY TO SERVE IN ARMY

Fifty prominent women yesterday called upon Surgeon General Norman T. Kirk to utilize fully the thousands of Negro nurses available for the armed services.

Representing stage, radio, civic, church, educational, writing and trade union fields, these women pointed out that only 300 of the 9,000 Negro nurses in this country are in the Army today. Full and equal utilization of this important womanpower would go a long way toward answering President Roosevelt's call for more women to tend the wounded, they said. At the same time they hailed the Navy's new policy of accepting Negro nurse applicants.

Signers of the call—which was sponsored by the Sweethearts of Servicemen, affiliates of the American Youth for Democracy—included: Margaret Halsey, author of Some of My Best Friends are Soldiers; Hazel Scot; Betty Garret; Dr. Gene Weltfish, co-author of Races of Mankind; Benay Venuta; Elisabeth Bergner; Henrietta Buckmaster; Fannie Hurst; Hilda Simms; Dr. Mary McCleod Bethune; Sono Osato; Dr. Annette Rubenstein; Evelyn Adler, director, National Social Service Division, UOPWA; Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown; Mary K. Simkhovitch, Greenwich Settlement House; Eleanor Fowler, CIO Women's Auxiliaries; Helen M. Currier, Brooklyn Council for Social Planning; Olivia Stokes, Baptist Young Peoples Union, and Myra Blakeslee, Good Will Commission, State of New Jersey.

Army and Navy Urged to Use More Colored Nurses

AFRO-AMERICAN, Balt. Md.

3-3-45

NEW YORK — Acceptance of more colored nurses by the army and navy as an immediate step toward meeting current shortages was urged in a joint statement issued last week by two nursing organizations.

Signers of the statement were Mrs. Elmira B. Wickenden and Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretaries of the National Nursing Council for War Service and the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, respectively.

While opposing any quota system, Mrs. Wickenden and Mrs. Staupers pointed out that the 330 nurses now in the Army Nurse Corps represent less than one-tenth the proportion of colored soldiers in the army.

2,000 Available

Rejections, and the fear of rejection, have kept down the number, they stated, although it is estimated that at least 2,000 out of the total of 8,000 or more colored graduate nurses now active in nursing may be eligible for military service. 3-3-45

Post-War Value Cited

1. It would demonstrate that as American men, regardless of race, are fighting for democracy, American women are being given the opportunity, equally without discrimination, to care for them when ill or wounded.

2. It would, if administered without segregation, carry over into military life the policy of integrating professional services, regardless of color, now being increasingly practiced in civilian life. 3-3-45

3. It would demonstrate to prospective nurses that opportunities to serve will not be denied them, thus paving the way for a greater contribution by colored nurses after the war to the health of the nation.

Colored, White Nurses Serve at Livingston

AFRO-AMERICAN Md.

3-3-45

CAMP LIVINGSTON, La. (ANP) — Neither physicians, nurses nor patients have found difficulty in working harmoniously together in the camp station hospital, here, where the color bar has been entirely erased.

Colored nurses have played an important role in the operation of the Camp Livingston Station Hospital almost from the activation of that highly important medical unit four years ago.

Currently the hospital roster shows the names of twenty-three colored nurses among the forty-seven nurses stationed here. They rank from captain down to second lieutenant and hold such responsible positions as night supervisor, assistant to the chief nurse, charge of operating pavilion, and chief nurse of the eye, ear, nose and throat clinic. 3-3-45

Capt. Freeman Assistant

Capt. Susan E. Freeman, a veteran nurse whose work in Liberia earned her a citation from that country recently, holds the same rank as the chief nurse, under whom she serves as assistant. Capt. Freeman is a native of Stamford, Conn., but had served for many years on the staff of Freedmen's Hospital, Washington.

Night supervisor is 1st Lt. Anne Philips Davis, of Ramseur, N.C. She came to Livingston Station hospital in August, 1941. Speaking of her experience here, she said:

Get Along Fine

"I am perfectly happy here and would be lost if I had to leave. We work side by side with white doctors and nurses and get along fine. We certainly receive fair treatment and equal opportunity. We have received as many promotions as the white nurses." 3-3-45

Lieutenant Davis said she has worked on wards the same as every other nurse—and it doesn't matter whether there are white or colored soldiers on the wards. Although a majority of enlisted ward attendants are white, Lieutenant Davis says she has always had excellent co-operation.

Virginian Speaks

First Lt. Carrie C. Marshall of Worsham, Va., who serves as nurse in charge of the operating pavilion, sums it up this way:

"Most important is an understanding commanding officer and chief nurse. We have both, and conditions couldn't be better."

Besides holding down nearly half of the nursing chores at the hospital, colored personnel contributes more. On the staff at present are seven physicians, one dental officer and sixty-two colored enlisted men.

During the four years Camp Livingston has been training troops, thousands of colored soldiers have been stationed here. The 46th Field Artillery brigade was one of the first outfits to move into camp and for more than two years remained the largest single colored organization on the post.

In addition, scores of quartermaster, ordnance, engineer and special troops of the third and fourth armies have done at least a part of their training at Livingston. 3-3-45

Infantry Replacements

Right now there are colored troops taking part in the infantry replacement training program to which the camp is devoting all its energies. As the course is short and extremely tough for all trainees, these men have not the time for all the recreational activities enjoyed by those who preceded them.

White And Negro Nurses Together

ATLANTA World Ga.

2-24-45

CAMP LIVINGSTON, La. (ANP) -Negro nurses have played an important role in the operation of the Camp Livingston Station hospital almost from the activation of that highly important medical unit four years ago.

Currently the hospital roster shows the names of 23 Negro nurses among the 47 nurses stationed here. They rank from captain down to second lieutenants and hold such responsible positions as night supervisor, assistant to the nose and throat clinic.

WON CITATION 2-24-45

Capt. Susan E. Freemen, a veteran nurse whose work in Liberia earned her a citation from that country recently, holds the same rank as the chief nurse under whom she serves as assistant.

Night superviser is 1st Lt. Anne Philips Davis, of Ramsuer, N. C. She came to Livingston Station hospital in August, 1941. Speaking of her experience here, she said: "I am perfectly happy here and would be lost if I had to leave. doctors and nurses and get along We work side by side with white fine. We certainly receive fair treatment and equal opportunity. We have received as many promotions as the white nurses."

HAD COOPERATION

Lt. Davis said she has worked on wards the same as every other nurse and it doesn't matter whether there are white or Negro soldiers in the wards. Although a majority of enlisted ward attendants are white, Lt. Davis says she has always had excellent coooperation.

First Lt. Carrie V. Marshall of Wersham, Va., who serves as nurse in charge of the operating pavillion, sums it up this way:

"Most inportant is an understanding commanding officer and chief nurse. We have both and conditions couldn't be better.

"One must like what one is doing and I most certainly like my job." 2-24-45

Besides holding down nearly half of the nursing chores at the hospital, Negro personnel contributes more. On the staff at present are seven physicians and one dental officer and Negro enlisted men number 62.

During the four years Camp Livingston has been training troops, thousands of Negro soldiers have been stationed here. The 46th Field Artillery brigode was one of the first outfits to move into camp and for more than two years remained the largest single Negro organization on the Post.

Majority of Public Willing to Accept Colored Nurses

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

DENVER (Special)—At a time when the acceptance by the Army and Navy of colored nurses is much discussed, a nation-wide survey by the National Opinion Research Center here reveals that a majority of civilians would accept colored nurse care in hospitals.

NORC's personally trained interviewers questioned a national cross-section of white civilian adults—men and women, young and old, rich and poor—in cities, towns and rural areas throughout the United States. 2-24-45

All were asked: "If you were sick in a hospital, would it be all right with you if you had a colored nurse, or wouldn't you like it?"

57 Per Cent Favorable

Of them, 57 per cent said it would be all right; 42 per cent said they wouldn't like it, while 1 per cent was undecided. Three per cent of the first group expressed a preference for white nurses. 2-24-45

That education is a determining factor is evidenced by the fact that 70 per cent of persons with a college background expressed willingness to have colored nurses take care of them.

On the other hand, only 53 per cent of the high school educated and 45 per cent of those with no more than a grade school education answered "All right."

South's Opposition Greatest

Six out of ten (62 per cent) residents of the North and West, but only four out of ten (42 per cent) Southerners, would be willing to receive care from a colored nurse in a hospital.

Comments from individuals interviewed reveal that many white people think very highly of colored nurses, and that some even prefer them to white nurses.

A Palatine, Ill., storekeeper declared: "Colored people are more tender-hearted than the white people." 2-24-45

New Yorker's Reaction

A New York machinist said: "You probably get better care with a Negro nurse than a white nurse," while a Brooklyn lawyer stated: "Why not? We have Negro waitresses and Negro mammies."

The wife of an engineer in Houston said: "I'm a nurse myself, and colored nurses are very good. I know many." 2-24-45

Others who speak from personal experience commented:

"I was in the hospital and had Negro nurses who were wonderful to me . . . I had a Negro nurse who was the best I had. She was kinder and took more pains to please . . . I would rather have Negro nurses. Whites are too independent."

Dirt Myth Raised

Those who would not like a colored nurse express either a general dislike of colored people or a fear of them on grounds of cleanliness or health. 2-24-45

Typical reactions were:

"I don't like Negroes close to me—I just don't . . . I don't want no n——r messing around me . . . Negro nurses should work for other Negroes . . .

"I wouldn't want any nurse if a Negro was all I could get . . . Negroes don't seem clean to me . . . I'd never get well."

Prejudice over Logic

A Montana cattle rancher admitted: "I wouldn't like it, but I believe a Negro nurse would take better care of me than a white nurse."

The wife of an Oregon mill superintendent declared: "I don't think I'd like it. I'm that way about any other race. I suppose it's racial prejudice." 2-24-45

A telephone repairman in Louisiana made an interesting distinction: "I wouldn't like a Negro nurse in a hospital. It's all right in a home. I was practically raised by a Negro nurse."

"Can't Generalize"

The most frequent comments made by persons who replied, "Undecided, were: "I don't know. You simply can't generalize on that question. It depends on the nurse in a hospital. It's all right in a home. I was practically raised by a Negro nurse."

The NORC, an academic institution working under a grant from the Field Foundation and the University of Denver, used 2,523 confidential interviews, statiscally sufficient to be within 3 per cent correct 997 times in 1,000.

Army Nurse Captain To Receive Medal

Journal & Guide 6-2-45

NEW YORK—Selection of Captain Susan Freeman of the Army Nurse Corps to receive the Mary Mahoney Medal this year was announced this week by Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses.

Captain Freeman, first Negro nurse to command Negro Army nurses on overseas duty, will receive the medal during the board meeting of the NACGN scheduled for June 7, 8, and 9 in New York.

The Mary Mahoney Medal, awarded annually for outstanding contribution to the field of nursing among Negroes, derives its name from that of the first Negro graduate nurse of record in this country.

Prior to her overseas assignment Capt. Freeman served as chief nurse at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and also as assistant to the chief nurse at Camp Livingston, La.

NAACP Urges Discriminatory Ban In Army Nurse Draft Legislation

New York Age N.Y. 1-20-45

Inclusion of a clause to end discrimination and segregation in proposed legislation for the draft of nurses for military service, was urged by the NAACP in a wire to Chairman Andrew J. May of the Military Affairs Committee. In his message to Congressman May, whose bill is scheduled for hearings next week, Acting Secretary Roy Wilkins said:

"National Association for Advancement of Colored People strongly urges that if nurses are drafted, the legislation contain a clause forbidding discrimination and segregation on account of race and color in the induction and service of nurses. We urge this because under voluntary enlistment program, Negro nurses who were eager to serve their country have been discouraged from enlisting by a quota system and a policy of restricting them to nursing of Negro soldiers only. This failure to utilize trained and registered Negro nurses has contributed to the critical shortage which military authorities are now seeking to remedy by means of a draft. It should be pointed out that even if draft is ordered and present system of limited discriminatory use of Negro nurses is continued, it is not likely that more Negro nurses will be inducted. Our information from various camps is that tendencies exist to concentrate Negro nurses in prisoner of war camps. Several cases have been reported here that they have been doubly humiliatd before German war prisoners by being forced to eat in separate dining rooms. 1-20-45

"Negro nurses like all other Negro Americans are anxious to serve their country but so far they have been given limited opportunity and have been insulted in the bargain. As a southerner, you will instantly recognize how ridiculous is the assumption that trained Negro nurses shall not be entrusted with ministering to wounded American soldiers who happen to be white."

ANOTHER PROTEST

Utilization by the armed forces of all trained nurses on the basis of ability instead of race was also urged by George Marshall, chairman of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, in a letter to Dr. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon General of the U. S. Army.

The letter pointed out that "there are only about 300 Negro nurses in the Army. This means that while almost 15 per cent of the white nurses of the country are serving with the armed forces, only 3 per cent of the Negro nurses are with the armed forces. The limitation of the number of Negro nurses with the armed forces is largely the result of a policy of exclusion, as practiced by the Navy, and a policy of discouragement, discrimination and segregation, as practiced by the Army." 1-20-45

Attention was called to the parallel Army policy of segregating doctors which has also contributed to the shortage of Army medical personnel. Reference was made specifically to the 15 Negro doctors who recently completed their internship at Harlem Hospital in New York and who were repected by the Army, "not because the Army had a sufficient number of doctors, but because it was stated that the Army had all the Negro doctors it needed"

This policy of segregation and limited service by Negro doctors and nurses, Mr. Marshall stated, "prevents the best possible medical care being given to all members of our armed forces, undermines national morale and lowers the respect of our Allies for American democracy....It is not consistent with President Roosevel'ts statement in his recent message to Congress that the economic truths represented in the Second Bill of Rights can be established for all 'regardless of station, race or creed'."

Classmates Aroused Over Ouster of Va. Cadet Nurse

AFRO-American Balt., Md.

2-13-45

Staff Correspondence

HAMPTON, Va.—Expulsion last week of of Miss Alveda Whigham, a junior cadet nurse at the Dixie Hospital, because of her "attitude," has so stirred her classmates that they have requested transfer to another hospital to complete their training.

They have also requested:

Adequate recreation for other nurses who remain or who may later enroll;

A better qualified nursing arts instructor; 2-13-45

Lowering of the present passing grade requirement from 80 to 75 in keeping with other nursing schools of the nation;

An unbiased hospital superintendent and superintendent of nurses;

Discontinue of the practice of calling colored patients and graduate nurses by their first names.

5 Others Slated to Go

Shortly after Miss Whigham's dismissal, the class was told that five more of its members were slated to go. 2-13-45

Until recently, nurses were working twelve hour shifts (7 pm. to 7 a.m.) and attending several classes in the day. Unless they had an average of 80 in their classes, were failed.

G. B. Colonna, white, chairman of the board of trustess, visited the hospital last week in the role of conciliator and spoke to the nurses. There was no applause when he concluded.

Brought J.C. Policy

Considerable resentment has been expressed that C. W. Magrum white South Carolinian, the present superintendent, has substituted jim crow policies for those of the late Dr. Harry D. Howe.

"Colored" and "white" signs appeared son after Magrum's arrival but most of these have been taken down.

Private Rooms Dirty

The best private rooms for colored patients have dirty walls, drab draps and faded venetian blinds in contrast to the white patients' private rooms which are painted two or three times a year.

A colored patient, who several years ago had been given a room in the new wing of the Dixie, where there was running water, telephone service and good furniture, recently returned.

She requested similar quarters and was told that under the new management, colored patients were no longer admitted to this section. She then demanded and received a refund.

Complaint has also been made that the recently added pediatric ward for colored children has but one small window which permits little sunshine or fresh air, so vitally needed.

The Colored Graduate Nurses' Association on the peninsula last week sent a full report of alleged discriminatory practices to Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, national executive secretary, and to Mrs. Estelle M. Riddle, former national president, now in charge of the colored cadet nurses' program.

Cadet nurses serve in 51 nursing schools

Calif. Los Angeles Tribune 2-26-45

WASHINGTON — A report by Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, before the House Committee on Military Affairs hearing testimony for and against the nurse draft, paid tribute to Negro nurse cadets.

On the contribution of Negro graduate nurses, Dr. Parran said, many are now serving with the U.S. Army Nurse Corps. One group is stationed in Australia; another group, recently returned from Liberia, is being reactivated for overseas duty. Other young Negro graduate nurses are serving in Army camps in Louisiana, North Carolina, Alabama, Arizona and Iowa. 2-26-45

Nursing care is being provided by Negro cadet nurses in some 51 schools of nursing in 17 States. Opportunities in these schools still await outstanding young women in spring classes now being formed. Those who are qualified and who are interested in enrolling are asked to write to their State Nursing Council or to the U.S. Public Health Service, Box 88, New York City 8, N.Y.

Cadet Nurses Capped At Tuskegee Ceremony

Chicago Defender Ill.

2-17-45

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—In impressive ceremonies held in the Institute Chapel recently, sixteen freshmen nurses were "capped" and inducted into the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps. Candidates were presented by Miss Viola Terrell, R.N., educational director and formal induction was conducted by Miss Lillian Holland, R.N., superintendent of nurses and director of the School of Nursing, who charged the young women that as they receive the cap to "regard it as a symbol of our faith and confidence in your ability."

In the absence of Dr. John W. Chenault, medical director, Colonel Eugene H. Dibble Jr., manager of the U.S. Veterans' hospital, in brief remarks, welcomed the candidates "into a profession of mercy and service."

The Cadet Nurses' Glee club sang "Angels of Mercy," with William L. Dawson, musical director, conducting. 2-17-45

Those inducted were: Doris Askey, San Antonio, Texas; Bessie Booker, Houston, Texas; Consuela Bolden, Cincinnati; Frances Campbell, Tallassee, Ala.; Octavia Christmas, San Antonio, Texas; Maudette Drayton, Georgetown, S. C.; Electa Johnson, Baltimore; Rosalie Little, Kansas City, Mo.; Lillie Mae Moore, Tucson, Ariz.; Ernestine Rice, Gaffey, S. C.; Edmonia Saunders, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Marlyn Shephard, Tucson, Ariz.; Jacquelin Simpson, Birmingham; Ruth Turner, Memphis; Iris Ruth Tynes, Miami, Fla., and Mildred Watkins, Carning, N. Y.

10 nurses in hospital's '45 class

Los Angeles Tribune 2-26-45 Calif.

Ten Negro nurses are in the 1945 graduating classes of the General Hospital, and of the number, seven are cadet nurses.

Graduated Feb. 1 and now enrolled at UCLA is Non-Cadet Nurse Marian E. Henderson. Tentatively scheduled to have graduated Saturday was Cadet Nurse Marion S. Starks. Nurse Starks is undecided as to whether she will enter the Army or not.

Planning to enlist in the Army Nurse Corps upon her graduation Mar. 29 is Nurse Cadet Birdella Taylor. Non-Cadet Ophelia Dixon, who will graduate Mar. 30, will work at the Children's Hospital.

Non-Cadet Mabel Renfroe, who will graduate July 19, will enter a university to do eight months' work which will complete qualifications for her Bachelor of Science degree.

Bias Against Cadet Nurses Ousted from Hampton Told

AFRO-American 4-21-45

PHILADELPHIA

Hitherto unpublished facts surrounding the ousting of ten junior class U.S. Cadet Corps nurses from the Dixie Hospital at Hampton, Va., recently, were disclosed this week. Balt., Md.

The ten juniors, who were told that they were being sent home because of their "attitude," all had good marks at the time and were well into the essentials of their course, it was said.

Charged Biased Practices

The alleged "attitude" was charged when the young women complained of certain discriminatory practices. Upon their original entry, the hospital school of nursing was a part of the Hampton Institute. 4-21-45

When this connection was severed, the passing mark was said to have been raised from 75 to 80 without their knowledge. To save the time, marks and expense, they were compelled to enroll in the cadet corps.

Ordered to Use Rear Door

The housing of a group of white technicians in the dormitory caused an order for the colored cadets to use the rear entrance. Complaints brought a suggestion from the head nurse that it would be "wise not to object."

Since the dismissal, several of the cadets have enrolled in other schools, while the rest await developments. 4-21-45

The transferring of marks looms as an obstacle in many instances. The ten juniors reside in States from Maryland to New York.

Tuskegee Cadet Nurses Enroll At Boston's Hospital

Memphis World 4-13-45 Tenn.

BOSTON — (ANP) — The largest group of colored cadet nurses to be sent to a northern institution arrived here last week when twelve nurses from the nurse training school of Tuskegee institute came to begin a period of study at Boston City hospital.

4-13-45

The girls who were accompanied by Miss Lillian M. Holland, director of nurses at Tuskegee, will spend 12 weeks in the city hospital as part of their regular course of training Formerly Tuskegee nurses used only the city hospital at Augusta, Ga., for their institutional training. The new cadets are enjoying the change in locale. They return to Tuskegee when they finish their 12 weeks here.

CLEVELAND, O.
PRESS
Cir. D. 227,908
JUN 12 1945

Halts Negro Cadet Dining Room Order

The order that 10 Negro cadet nurses must share the same dining room with the regular staff at Marine Hospital has been postponed by Surgeon Gen. Thomas A. Parran.

Dr. A. R. Sweeney, commanding officer at the hospital, has been instructed by the surgeon general to take no action pending further instructions. This order came after Dr. Parran had received a protest from 35 staff people at the hospital asking that the cadets not be permitted to share their dining room.

Lieut. Rosemary McCann, chief nurse at the hospital, left for Washington last night for a special training program. Dr. Sweeney has asked her to discuss the situation with Dr. Parran, who ordered the cadets be allowed to share dining facilities after an interviey with representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"I am sure we can work out a satisfactory solution in this controversy," Dr. Sweeney said. "If our nurses refuse to eat here they can eat in their homes, as they have said they would. They will not leave our hospital."

Dr. Sweeney was expected to interview today Mrs. Estelle Riddle, a consultant for the National Nursing Council for War Service, in the city this week to study the cadet nurse program here.

The letter of protest was signed not only by nurses, but by doctors, dietitians and aides at the hospital. Many feel that student nurses should not be allowed to share dining facilities with graduates, Dr. Sweeney said. There are several hospitals in Cleveland, however, which do have dining rooms shared by cadets and graduates. Marine Hospital is the only hospital in Cleveland, with the exception of City Hospital, which has Negro cadets.

CLEVELAND, O.
PRESS
Cir. D. 227,908
JUN 11 1945

Marine Hospital Nurses Protest Negro Cadet Order

Staff nurses at Marine Hospital, 12200 Fairhill road, are protesting an order by the surgeon general providing that 10 Negro cadet nurses be allowed to eat in the regular nurse dining room.

"We were ordered last Saturday to put tables for the cadets in the nurse dining room," Dr. A. R Sweeney, commanding officer, said today. "I probably will not take any action until the surgeon general has received the protest our nurses are sending him. I will, of course, do as ordered."

The 10 cadets, the only students at the hospital, have been eating in a separate dining room since their arrival two months ago. This arrangement was set up, according to Dr. Sweeney, because the regular dining room was crowded.

The change was ordered by Dr. Thomas A. Parran, surgeon general, after an interview with Dr. Nathan K. Christopher, president of the Cleveland branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Capt. Jesse O. Dedmon Jr., secretary of veterans' affairs of the national association. Dr. Christopher's group has been protesting dining and housing facilities provided for the cadets since they arrived.

The cadets live in their own quarters on the second floor of a house on the hospital grounds. Doctors and other staff members live on the first floor.

"We remodelled this building and provided a kitchenette and library. There are also private rooms for each girl," Dr. Sweeney pointed out. "The cadets are not living in the regular dormitory because there is no room but they have all the conveniences our graduate nurses have."

Dr. Sweeney maintains that this arrangements was not designed as discrimination against the cadets, but was the only way to make room for students. He points out that patients and orderlies eat together in the main dining room regardless of color or creed.

This is the only military hospital in this area with Negro cadets. Both the cadet nurse program and the Marine Hospitals are operated by the United States Public Health Service under Dr. Parran.

"I would never have agreed to take these students if I had known changes would be made in our original plan," Dr. Sweeney declared. "I feel the plan as it has been operating was satisfactory to everyone, and the cadets have been happy. I feel they have no basis for complaint and this situation has been jumped upon by certain groups who want to force an issue."

The N. A. A. C. P. committee interviewed Dr. Sweeney last month and asked that an adjustment of housing and dining facilities be made so that the cadets would not be segregated. He studied the situation for ten days, and told them no corrective action was needed. The N. A. A. C. P. then wired congressmen from this district, describing conditions and asking their cooperation. Last week Dr. Christopher went to Washington to protest to the surgeon general.

Dr. Parran promised an investigation and assured the group that the Public Health Service would not permit any segregation or discrimination at any of its facilities.

Balt. Md. Afro American

2,000 Students in Cadet Nurse Corps

7-14-45

WASHINGTON

Approximately 2,000 colored students enrolled in schools of nursing during the last 12 months, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, who administers the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps, announced this week.

As of May 31 last, there was a total of 4,128 colored student nurses who were receiving free tuition under the Cadet Nurse Corps program. Of this number, 288 are now seniors in 25 schools of nursing admitting only colored, and 506 are seniors in 14 other schools.

Memphis World

CADET NURSE—Home for three weeks from her studies as a Cadet Nurse at Hampton Institute, Va., is petite and beautiful Catherine Lashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lashley, of 231 North Dunlap. Miss Lashley, 1943 graduate of Manassas High School, is rounding out her second year of study at Hampton, and will enter the U. S. Army Cadet Nurse Corps upon completion of the course. 7-12-45

Remembered as one of the campus' lovelies of Manassas, Miss Lashley served as majorette for the school's Drum and Bugle Corps. She has two sisters and four brothers.

56n-1945 Cadet Nurses

Cadet Nurses Special Guests of Washington Church

The Rev. George Bullock welcomed members of the Cadet Nurse Corps of the U.S. Public Health Service to services held at the Third Baptist Church, Washington, Sunday. They included the above, first row, left to right, Thelma Martin, Akron, Ohio; Marion Foster, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Mildred Grant, Elizabeth, N.J.; the Rev. Mr. Bullock, Evelyn Burton, Washington; Joslyn Ferrell, Chestertown, Md.; Betty J. Tillis, Indianapolis, Ind.; Theresa Washington, Raleigh, N.C. Second row: Jean Sloane, Harrisburg, Pa.. Harrite Forrest, Birmingham, Ala.; Willie Mae Smith, Elizabeth, N.J.; Ada Bruce, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Beatrice Coleman, Washington.

Cadet Nurse Green Is Only Negro In Graduating Class

The Informer
Houston, Texas

Miss Hattie Pearl Green, 795 St. Nicholas avenue, the only Negro student in the large graduating class at Pilgrim State hospital, Brentwood, Long Island, has completed her course of training and will take the New York State Board examination for Nurses, October 27.

During her Senior Cadet period, which was spent at England General hospital, in Atlanta City, New Jersey, Miss Green assisted in the management of a large unit, where officers ranking from second lieutenants to three-star generals hospitalized. "All of them were wonderful to me, and showed me the greatest respect as a nurse."

Before entering Miss Green graduated from the Industrial High school, West Palm Beach, Fla., and studied at Spellman college, Atlanta, Georiga. She is now interested in becomnig a specialist in psychiatric nursing.

11-9-45

Miss Green was a member of the Glee club during her Senior Cadet period at England General hospital. She lives with her mother, Mrs. Hattie Pearl Green, and a sister, and has two brothers in the service.

WAC's At New York Port Of Embarkation Have Important Roles In Keeping Port Humming At Top Efficiency

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

Taking a colony count in a water analysis laboratory is a long jump from dressmaking, but T/5 Grade Colon Robinson, Washington, D. C., is taking it in stride. She is not a bacteriologist yet but her assignment at an installation of the Transportation Corp's New York Port of Embarkation affords her every opportunity of becoming one. 1-20-45

DENTAL ASSISTANT — Private Alice Ford, Philadelphia, Pa., helps to speed the process of an operation that most patients approach with reluctance. Before enlisting in the WAC she was a dental hygienist, now her job in the dental clinic of an installation of the Transportation Corps' New York Port of Embarkation is to develop X-rays, mix fillings, assist at extractions, chart teeth and prepare impressions.

PERSONNEL OFFICER — First Lt. Glendora Moore, New York City, has had a variety of assignments. One of the first officer candidates to be graduated at Ft. Des Moines, she has been a company commander, physical training director, personnel officer and now, assigned to Fox Hills Cantonment, New York Port of Embarkation, she is in charge of the Personal Affairs office. 1-20-45

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va

1-20-45

UTILITIES CLERK — Pvt. Effie Dawson, Cincinnati, Ohio, can put her pencil on any installation at Fox Hills Contonment where she is a clerk in the Utilities office. When things need fixing, civilian plumbers, electricians and carpenters depend on her to supply the right direction.

WACs Released From Kentucky Camp Stockade

Philadelphia Tribune 1-27-45 Pa.

CAMP BRECKINRIDGE, Ky.—According to information received from a reliable source, the TRIBUNE was informed this week that one of the last orders issued by Col. Throckmorton, post commander was an order for the release of the seven colored WACs, who were recently imprisoned for refusing to obey the order of a lieutenant. 1-27-45

The WACs had been ordered to fix bed springs in a barracks which had been declared unfit because it had been drained and was unheated. They were released and sent back to their company area, but were confined again and five were held. 1-27-45

The post commander is reported to have told the girls that they "had a perfect right to complain about working under such circumstances," but said they had gone about it in the wrong way. 1-27-45

The five held were Privates First Class Eleanor Brown and Edith Young; and Privates Davetta Butler, Ruth Sanders and Geneva Pipkin.

1st Lt. Clayton Attending Purdue University

Atlanta Daily World

LAFAYETTE, IND.—1st. Lt. Ella Lucille Clayton of Miami, Florida, WAC Administration Officer at Ft. Benning, Georgia is a member of the fourth class of students assigned to the Women's Army Corps school for personnel administration at Purdue University. She will return to her command at the conclusion of the two and one-half week course.

Designed to improve the efficiency of women in the Army, the school is unique in the War Department's training program. The course consists largely of lectures on personnel management, Army organization, adult psychology, current history and the utilization of special services and educational facilities of the Army.

Lt. Clayton attended B. T. W. High School, Miami, Florida and Florida A. and M. She enlisted in the Women's Army Corps March 1943. Prior to her enlistment she was cashier-secretary at the Central Life Insurance Co. Miami, Florida.

Negro WAC Band Plays for Chicago Bond Drive Rally

Iowa By Skipper 5-17-45

5-17-45

The 404th ASF Band of First Women's Army Corps Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Ia., only all Negro women's military band in the United States, played in Chicago, Illinois, at an opening rally for the Seventh War Loan Drive, at 7:30 p. m., May 14, 1945, in the Savoy ballroom and at a number of other war bond rallies this week in Chicago.

The 404th ASF Band was organized at Fort Des Moines in August, 1943. Its commanding officer is 1st Lt. Ernestine L. Woods, of Stamford, Conn.

The band director is S/Sgt. Leonora J. Brown, of Jacksonville, Fla., a graduate of Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn., and Oberlin Conservatory Oberlin, Ohio.

The twenty members of the band come from fifteen states of the Union, the five New Yorkers being in the lead by states.

Personnel

5-17-45

The entire personnel is as follows: T/4 Nina M. Bethune, trombone, Birmingham, Ala.; T/4 Gloria Davis, trombone, New York; T/4 Evelyn Haley, baritone, Portsmouth; T/4 Constance Hurling, trumpet, Verona, N. J.; T/4 Eunice Van Horn, piccolo flutist Indianapolis, Ind.; T/4 Joan R. Williams, sousaphone, Pittsburgh, Pa.; T/5 Lillian F. Brown, clarinet, New York; T/5 Gurthalee Clark, clarinet, Vallejo, Calif.; T/5 Lenora L. Dial, sousaphone, Munford, Ala.; T/5 Clementine A. McConico, French horn Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Yvonne L. Payne, cornet, Richmond, Va.; T/5 Louise C. Sheppard, saxaphone, Colorado Springs, Colo.; T/5 Romaine A. Simmons, clarinet, Philadelphia, Pa.; T/5 Rachel Stewart, French horn, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Pvt. (f.c.) Harriet Braxton, clarinet, Columbus, Ohio; Pvt. (f.c.) Stella Gale, baritone, Philadelphia Pa.; Pvt. Jane R. Holloway, bass drum, Washington, D. C.; Pvt. (f.c.) Nellie C. Lattimore, drummer, Ft Wayne, Ind.; Pv. (f.c.) Violet O. Moore, trumpet, New York; Pvt. f.c.) Audrey E. Gross, saxaphone, Baltimore, Md.; Pvt. Delia C. Jackson, French horn, Jamaica, N. Y.; Pvts. Dorothy Johnson, trumpeter, and Amy Kelly, drummer, both of Cleveland; Pvt. Anna M. Sims, trumpeter, Milwaukee, Wis.

5-17-45

The 404th ASF Band is a popular organization which has toured the state of Iowa playing at war bond rallies and war plant recruiting meetings. In July, 1944, it was one of the features of the NAACP conference held in Chicago. The members were quartered at the International House on the University of Chicago campus. The band gives a program on alternate Thursday evenings at 7 p. m. in theatre No. 1 at Fort Des Moines to which the public is invited. Their next concert will be on Thursday, May 24.

4-9-45

Los Angeles Times 4-9-45

COMPANY COMMANDER—The 97 Negro Wacs comprising Co. F of the Women's Army Corps unit at Fort Lewis, ASF training center, are engaged in a widely diversified field of activity, with some performing highly specialized tasks. The list includes hematologists, truck drivers, typists, and warehouse clerks. Above is Captain Irma J. Wertz, of Chicago, company commander. She is former case supervisor and assistant director of Chicago's Parkway Community house. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo from Bureau of Public Relations).

Medic Sues For Divorce From WAC Major

The Informer

MONROVIA, Liberia — (ANP) — Dr. Charles I. West, of Washington, D. C., now serving with the rank of major in the U. S. Public Health service mission here in Liberia, has filed suit for divorce against his wife, Major Harriet M. West, one of the ranking officers in the U. S. Woman's Army corps. The suit was entered in the civil law court of the sixth judicial district, Montserrado county, Liberia.

7-14-45

Dr. West, who before entering the U. S. army as a doctor practiced in Washington where he and his wife resided, charged Major West with desertion. His plea as filed, records the assertion that "on September 1, 1939, his wife, Harriet M. West, without the will and consent of the plaintiff, did willfuly abandon their home and has continued to desert their home and that the plaintiff has neglected the defendant for five years and six months up to the filing of the complaint."

Maj. Harriet West, one of the first colored women to join the ranks of the WACs, was trained at Fort Des Moines. She became one of the first colored members of the WACs to be commissioned, was the first to receive the rank of major, the highest any colored WAC has attained. She bears the reputation of being one of the most beautiful women to wear the uniform of the Woman's Army corps.

A native of Kansas City, Mo., she lived for some years in Chicago, where she was the wife of Dr. John Chenault, now head of the John Andrew hospital of Tuskegee. In Chicago she held an important position on the staff of Provident hospital in that city.

7-14-45

An interesting aspect of the suit is the report here that Maj. Harriet West still lives in the home of the mother of Dr. West, in Washington, where she and her husband resided during their married life. Maj. Harriet West is stationed at WAC headquarters in Washington.

Benning's New Executive

AFRO-AMERICAN Baltimore.

56n

LIEUT. PATRICIA G. GUNTER,

2-24-45

now executive officer of WAC Detachment, Section 2, at Fort Benning, Ga. Prior to her enlistment on December 3, 1942, she was a Dental hygienist for two and a half years at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, and taught Physical Education at the Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla., for a year. She holds the A.B. degree from Fisk and the D.H. degree from Meharry. She completed her basic military training at Ft. Des Moines, Ia., where she graduated from the Administration and the Officer Candidate schools. Lieut. Gunter has held her present post since September, 1943. She is married to Warrant Officer (j.g.) Marcus Gunter who has been assigned to Camp Ellis, Ill., since his return from overseas.

Washington WAC Ends Special Course in England

Washington Tribune

Pfc. Olive K. Dedeaux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew H. Dedeaux, of 529 Gresham Pl., N.W., Washington, recently completed the instructors' training course in the information and education branch of the United Kingdom Special Service School, London, England. 5-26-45

This course is a new phase in the Army's educational program. Its purpose is to train qualified enlisted personnel to return to their respective units and teach various subjects. Since many soldiers will be left in the United Kingdom for quite sometime yet after the defeat of Germany, those who desire may enter these schools set up under the information and education program.

Private Dedeaux was a student at Miner Teachers' College, Washington, before entering the service. Prior to going to England, she had been stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash., for 21 days, before which time she was assistant to the chief of personnel in reconditioning at Ft. Hauchuca, Ariz.

6-2-45

WACS PARADE—In perfect step, the WACS of the Fox Hills Terminal, of the Army's New York Port of Embarkation, march along in the parade which featured the organization's third anniversary celebration, May 14. Playing a prominent part in the festivities of all WAC detachments attached to the NYPE, the Fox Hills contingent enjoyed a banquet and were entertained by a bevy of stage and screen stars at Camp Hamilton, Brooklyn, N. Y., where the celebration was held. Pictured, from left to right, leading the detachment, are: S/Sgt. Addie Young, Washington, D. C.; Lt. Glendora Moore, New York City; Pvt. Ethel Underwood, Beaufort, S. C.; 1st/Sgt. Margaret Charity, of Richmond, Va.; Cpl. Ruth Jackson, Charleston, S. C.; and Lt. Lenora Claxton, Ossining, N. Y. 6-2-45

'All-Negro' Unit Trains For Duties

New York Amsterdam News 1-20-45

After Two-Year Wait Our WACS Get Chance For Overseas Service

WASHINGTON—(Special)—The War Department announced Monday that a Women's Army Corps unit, composed completely of Negro WACs, is being formed for overseas duty.

The unit, the War Department said, will be sent to a foreign theatre of war upon completion of field training. They will form a postal battalion. The group, composed entirely of volunteers, is now being assembled and will be the first group of Negro WACs trained for overseas service.

They will be sent overseas, it was said, under the command of Negro WAC officers. 1-20-45

Nearly two years ago, the first units of white WACS arrived in overseas ports to take up duties there, and they are at present serving on all continents where elements of our armies are to be found.

While the white WACc have been abroad for the last two years, Negro WACs have been retained for service in the territorial United States only, and in the camps and in headquarters in various cities.

The fact that a difference had been made in the assignments of Negro and white WACs to active duty caused a furore on the home front. Many organizations took up the fight for full recognition of Negro women as an integral part of our armed forces.

It was felt that pressure from the South played a large part in the decision of the War Department to retain Negro WACs on the home front only, and the resultant discussion and publicity given the matter had a lot to do with the falling off of enlistments of Negro women in the corps. 1-20-45

At press time, the War Department had still refused to reveal the names of the WACc who have volunteered for special training for overseas duty.

50 Negro WACs to Become Aids at Gardiner Hospital

Chicago Daily Tribune 6-7-45

Fifty Negro members of the WAC will arrive tomorrow at Gardiner General hospital, where they will serve as medical and surgical technicians, Maj. Gen. David McCoach Jr., commanding officer of the 6th service command, has announced.

The WACs and another contingent of 40 which will arrive at the hospital June 15 will be housed in temporary barracks the army has erected in Burnham park between 47th and 48th sts. They were recruited in a recent campaign to enlist women in the WAC to serve in more than 70 general hospitals.

Gen. McCoach said the WACs would not replace any civilian employes now holding jobs at the hospital. The barracks in which they will be housed must be razed within a year after the end of the war under an agreement the army made with the park board for use of the land.

Studying Leadership at Purdue

Afro-American 6-2-45

Among ninety officers of the Women's Army Corps now taking additional training in the leadership of women at Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., are the above, lft to right, Capt. Harriette B. White, Capt. Sarah E. Murphy, 2nd Lt. Evelyn F. Overton, 1st Lt. Connie Sinclair, 1st Lt. Katherine S. Watson and 1st Lt. Victoria J. Poole.

Although some of the white civilians in the neighborhood around Gardiner General hospital are up in arms over Negro WACs being stationed there, the white men who do the actual war chores don't seem to share their objections. Here, Pvt. Maxton Oliver of Woodsdale, N. C., watches as WAC Sgt. Werner K. Ertle of Chicago takes his blood pressure at the Hyde Park hospital.—Photos by Scott Tyler. 7-7-45

WACs PERFORM DUTIES DESPITE JIM-CROW FURORE

Chicago Defender

See also 80'a - Housing Ill.

In spite of the concentrated efforts of lily-white factions to have them stationed outside the Hyde Park district, WACs assigned to the Gardiner General hospital there, continue to go about their duties in a calm and efficient manner. Pvt. Edna Offord, 26-year-old WAC from Chillicothe, Ohio, gives S.-Sgt. George F. Sheer his daily back-rub during her tour of duty. Sgt. Sheer, who is 23, hails from El Paso, Ill. 7-7-45

WAC Gets Direct Nurse Commission

7-14-45

Atlanta Daily World

CAMP ATTERBURY, Indiana—In recognition of her outstanding service as an X-ray technician and nursing aide WAC Technician Fourth Grade Rubye Jamerson 66th St., Nicholas Place New York City has been given a direct commission as a second lieutenant in the Army Nurse Corps She is now attending the nurses training school at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin

With nine years of nursing experience behind her at the River side Hospital in New York, she obtained a military leave in 1943 to join the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps. She received her basic training at Fort Denves Massachusetts Fort Des Moines, Iowa. 7-14

Lt Jamerson, then a private in the WAC, arrived at Wakeman in October of 1943 and was assigned to the X-ray section. Two months later she was placed on ward duty and with her graduate nurse experience performed an outstanding job as a Wac technician for a full year until October 1944 when she reassigned as Technician Fourth Grade Jamerson to the X-ray section. She performed duties in that section until she was commissioned. 7-11-45

Lt Jamerson is a graduate of Wadley High School, New York City; Fraternal Hospital Nurse School, Montgomery, Alabama; Harlem Hospital School of Nurses and East X-ray School for Physicians Aides in New York City

WAC Contingent Settling Down In English School

Atlanta World 4-4-45

General Lee Inspects Unit Headquarters

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON —(ANP)— Stimulated and inspired by their commander, Maj. Charity Adams, the colored WACs are settling down in their down in their new abode. Before the girls arrived, many areas were surveyed to find time most suitable place in which to garrison the battalion. The King Edward school in Birmingham turned out to be the most approprate place for this purpose.

Sixteen hundred troops were turned out to make room for the Wacs Colored soldiers installed three miles of electric wiring and 270 lights were added to the building. Four new small brick buildings were constructed for sanitary purposes. One redeeming feature is that the building has central heating. The girls therefore, would not have to work in a chain of drafty corridors which form such discomfort to Americans in an English winter. 4-4-45

They live and work under the same roof; and their kitchen is equipped with the most modern and up to date machinery for cooking.

The visit of Lt. Gen. John C. Lee when he inspected a review of the battalion was just as historic as the arrival of the girls in the United Kingdom. The general struck a dominat chord in his address to the battalion when he said that: 'This is a day we would never forget." Gen. Lee also stressed the necessity of their presence in the United Kingdom because of the paramount importance of their work in the ETO. These Wacs have already discovered that Gen. Lee is a strict disciplinarian with an inflexible adherence to principle.

As a result, when the general inspected their building, every part of it was beautifully clean.

Most of the Wacs previously were school teachers. Some were medical students. The PRO is 1st Lt. Margaret E. Barnes from Oberlin, O. She went to Howard University where she was studying journalism Before joining up she supervised the steam laundry business of her mother's. Lt. Barnes also edited a small paper which her mother published called "National Notes."

I had a long chat with 2nd Lt. Lillian D. Duncan from Talladega Ala. She studied at Talladega college majoring in English and history and was teaching in the public school system in Alabama. 4-4-45

Among the personnel of the battalion there are some good professional talent. For example, there is young Cpl. Jennie Moton whose father succeeded Booker T. Washington as head of Tuskegee Inst. She is an excellent pianist having studied under Hazel Harrison at the Chicago Musical college under Sols Dyson, Max Fischel, and Leon Samitini. In addition there are singers and dancers. With all of this talent, Capt. Davenport-Carter told me that she is going to use it to the fullest extent in order to enliven the morale of the Battalion. 4-4-45

I met two interesting sisters who were both teaching school before joining the WAC. They are T-5 Essie O'Bryant and Pfc. Tessie O'Brient from Augusta, Ga. Essie studied at Haynes Normal Industrial school and was a sub teacher in Augusta Public school at Wren, Ga.

NEGRO WACS GOING ON OVERSEAS DUTY

Times Picayune New Orleans

(The Associated Press)

Washington, Jan. 15.—A Women's Army Corps unit composed of Negro WACs is being formed for overseas duty, the war department reported today. 1-16-45

The unit, which will form a postal battalion, will be commanded by Negro WAC officers. It will go abroad on completion of field training.

Negro Wac Unit to Get Postal Duties Overseas

Courier Journal 1-16-45 Louisville, Ky.

Washington, Jan. 15 (AP)—A Women's Army Corps unit composed of Negro Wacs is being formed for overseas duty, the War Department reported today. The unit, which will form a postal battalion, will be commanded by Negro Wac officers. It will go abroad on completion of field training. 1-16-45

Dr. Bethune Joins Fight To Save WACs

Informer Houston-Texas

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — The recent sentence of a year at hard labor to four Negro Wacs at Ft. Devens, Mass., has stirred the nation and now along with three New York representatives, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune is putting in her word against the sentence.

White House Interested 4-7-45

The White House itself has become interested in the case since the fate of four Wacs not only is involved but the situation places a smear on the contributions of the nation's entire 4,000 Negro WACs in general.

Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women and lone Negro member of the national advisory committee of the Wacs, began work last week to have the sentence suspended, and according to comment, the chances of effecting the change are good. 4-7-45

In court, the girls charged Col. Crandall, commandant of the hospital, with saying he didn't want "black Wacs as medical technicians or in the motor pool," and that they "had to mop walls, scrub floors and do all the dirty work"

Although it is generally conceived that the girls violated a definite article of war in refusing to go back to work as Maj. Gen. Miles of the first service command, urged them, the following are some of the forces at work to reverse the verdict: Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune; the NAACP, Reps. Powell, Marcantenie and Celler, New York

If the war department alters the convictions, sympathizes in the case believe that public opinion itself will work to remove Col. Walter M. Crandall, central figure in the case. The papers are now in the hands of the judge advocate general. 4-7-45

The involved girls are Pvts. Alice Young, 23, of Washington; Johnny Murphy, 23, Rankin, Pa.; Mary E. Green, 21, of Conroe, Texas; and Anna C. Morrison, 20, of Richmond, Ky.

"Well Done," Says U. S. As WACs Are Released

Informer - Houston, Texas

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Last week's reversal of the four WAC's sentences indicated that the army and the navy are "becoming alive to the fact that the public always will react against injustice," New York Rep. Emanuel Celler declared as the girls were free to resume their duties at Lovell General hospital, Ft. Devens, Mass. 4-14-45

Army action on the part of the four WACs was a follow up of a similar attitude on the part of the navy which the day before reversed the charges given 14 Negro seabees originally ordered dishonorable discharged from that branch of the armed forces.

Such quick and effective results prove, Rep. Celler declared, that it is always worthwhile to be watchful and to protest loudly when intolerance, ineptitude and bungling appear in high places.

The four WACs convicted March 10 of violating the 64th article of war following a personal order by General Miles to return to work, struck along with 50 others at Lovell hospital because, they contended, they were discriminated against and forced to do the "dirty work" which white WACs were not required to do. 4-14-45

Although the general concensus of opinion was that the girls had been given a fair trial and that they actually violated the 64th article of war, public opinion reached a high point when the girls testified in court that the hospital commandant, Col. Walter H. Crandall, told them he wanted no "black" WACs in the hospital's motor pool or assisting as medical technicians.

The White House became apprized concerning the facts of the case, three New York representatives arose to action, the NAACP and the Council of Negro Women headed by Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, eyed the treatment of the WACs as an insult to the several hundred Negro girls serving in the various branches of the service throughout the world. 4-14-45

Bethune Acts

Mrs. Bethune, president of the National Council and only Negro member of the National Advisory committee of the WACs, who had armed herself with all the power of her office in protest against treatment. Thursday she declared: "The outcome of the Fort Devens case has greatly stimulated the morale of our people all over the country, particularly of the women in the armed forces. We feel that the action shows a decided trend toward more definite attempts to correct unbalances which have been going on in the service in regard to Negro men and women."

The former school head and president of the National Federated Women's clubs is still unsatisfied, wondering if the army intends probing the disposition of Col. Crandall who wanted no "black" WACs in his hospital's motor pool or assisting as medical technicians.

Plain Talk

N.Y. Amsterdam News

They Represent the "New Negro", Who Is Ready To Fight and Pay the Price!

By DAN GARDNER

Four Negro WAC's, 50 Negro Seamen, 73 Negro Soldiers Courtmartialed for Mutiny, Seen As Martyrs To a Cause

At Fort Devens in Massachusetts four Negro WACs were court martialed and sentenced to one year in prison at hard labor and dishonorable discharge the other week.

In California 50 Negro seamen were sentenced to a total of 588 years in prison and at hard labor.

In the Hawaiian Islands, 73 soldiers were convicted and sentenced to terms ranging from eight to thirty years at hard labor. 4-7-45

All this adds up to one thing. The "New Negro" is making his appearance and taking his stand against the intolerance, prejudices, and racial abuses which the and his ancestors have been subjected to ever since the first boatload of African slaves was unloaded at Jamestown. 4-7-45

Where others have refused to stand up and face the issue, the "New Negro", as found in the armed forces of the United States in this modern age, is asserting himself and showing that he is willing to pay the price, however heavy, to blazon the path we all must trod if we will be totally free.

The four Negro women involved in the WAC court martial were Pvts. Mary E. Green, Houston, Texas; Johnnie Murphy, Pittsburgh; Alice E. Young, Washington, and Anna C. Morrison, Richmond, Kentucky. They were penalized, were these intrepid Negro women, because of a refusal to obey a direct command under highly controversial circumstances.

The trial, conducted by a court composed of nine officers, including two Negro officers and two WAC officers, handed down its verdict in twenty minutes.

Testimony at the trial brought out the accusation by three of the women that Col. Walter H. Crandall, commander of the hospital at Fort Devens, had stated at one time that he "didn't want any black WAC's in the Fort black pool." The defendants testified that the remark was made following the request of one of the women for a transfer from an orderly's job to one in the pool.

4-7-45

Pvt. Alice Young was reported to have said that a "colonel" had found her teaching another WAC how to take temperatures and had asked what she was doing, to which her superior replied, after the WAC had informed him that she was a medical technician instructing another girl, "I don't want any black WAC's as medical technicians around this hospital. I want them to scrub and do the dirty work."

The women on trial, it was said, testified that they were required to do menial and dirty work which was not assigned to white WAC's at the hospital.

Comands Ft. Huachuca WACS

1-13-45

LT. CONSUELO BLAND IS NOW THE COMMANDING Officer of Fort Huachuca's WAC Section, SCU 1922. Lt. Bland's home is in Keokuk, Iowa. She succeeds Captain Irma J. Cayton, who was transferred to Fort Lewis, Washington.

Pittsburgh Courier 3-10-45

WACS ON PARADE...IN FAR-AWAY ENGLAND—Wacs on parade with their colors in England. They are the first of their group to go overseas, and are shown here as they were reviewed by Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, commanding general of the Communications Zone. The Wacs form the U. S. Army Postal Unit. Twenty-four Negro Wac officers and 677 enlisted colored women are with this unit.—British-Combine Photo.

56n-1945

Wacs

South Carolinian Commands First WACs To Reach Britain

Atlanta World Ga. 2-18-45

Major Charity E. Adams, Former Teacher, Greeted By Gen. Davis.

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

LONDON— (ANP)— History was made in England when a battalion of Negro Wacs arrived at Birmingham, Eng. by special train recently. The unit consisted of 677 enlisted women and 26 officers under the command of Maj. Charity Edna Adams, former school teacher of Columbia, S. C. 2-18-45

The girls were greeted at the railroad station by the 10th Replacement band They displayed their vigorous young blood when they march energetically to waiting vehicles by the strains of 'Stars and Stripes' while laden with full field equipment.

Officials of the European theatre of operations were on hand to welcome them. Among them were Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, representing Gen. John C. Lee, Mary C. Weems, Dayton, Tenn., representnig the ETO Wac Staff director; Lt. Col. Ann W. Wilson, Study City, Cal.; Maj. Margaret L. Philpot, Portland, Me. Wac staff Maj. Kenneth Campbell, Chicago; director for UK bases and Chaplain Beverly M. Ward, Capital St. Presbyterian church, Harrisburg, Pa. 2-18-45

Every detail for the comfort of the girls had been considered in advance. They will return to America after a brief orientation and training period here. Major Adams, their commander, is a decided success. The daughter of the Rev. John Adams, a distinguished AME church official, she is the incarnation of clear common sense She has skilfully extricated herself from many awkward questions thrown at her with lightning rapidity from a battery of newsaper reporters.

Four Negro WACs were convicted by an army general court martial of violating the 64th article of war—refusal to obey orders of superior officers. They were immediately sentenced to serve one year at hard labor and to be dishonorably discharged.

The verdict was announced by the court after an hour and ten minutes deliberation.

The seven-officer court-martial board included two male Negro officers and two white WAC officers. 3-22-45

The four had contended that they were ordered to do menial work in Lovell General hospital "because of their color."

The sentence also ordered the four deprived of all pay allowances due and to become due.

They are Private Alice D. Young, 23 years old, of Washington, D. C.; Private Anna C. Morrison, of Richmond, Ky.; Private Johnnie Murphy, of Rankin, Pa., and Private Mary Green, of Conroe, Tex. 3-22-45

Private Young told the court martial that Colonel Walter M. Crandall, commanding officer of Lovell General hospital, had told her:

"They want no black WACS working at the motor pool."

She said the colonel made the declaration after she had asked him on March 9 to be transferred to the pool from the hospital.

Private Alberta Goss, 21, of Tuscumbia, Ala., a witness, supported Private Young's testimony. Both said the statement of Colonel Crandall was made at a meeting that followed a protest meeting of WACS at which Negro members complained of discrimination.

3-22-45

The two WACS testified that they felt there was discrimination against Negro WACS because white WACS were not forced to do the same type of work as Negro personnel and because, they said, Colonel Crandall asserted that Negro WACS were supposed to do "the dirty work."

Private Young, a former medical student at Howard university, said she entered the WACS believing she would do hospital technical work or nursing. She sought transfer to the motor pool, she said, after she was told she would not be given work in the hospital where she could "better educate herself." 3-22-45

She, Private Goss and some 52 other Negro WACS wept at the meeting when Colonel Crandall made his alleged statement they were not wanted at the motor pool, Private Young added.

Lieutenant Tenola Stoney, Negro officer, and Lieutenant Victoria Lawson, commandant of the WAC detachment at the Lovell hospital, were at the meeting and also cried, she said.

Private Young testified that the work and type of uniform were changed when Negro WACS arrived at the hospital. Medical technicians were given white uniforms, she said, and hospital orderlies, blue.

"All colored WACS were made hospital orderlies; some reduced from the rank of medical technicians," she added.

Lieutenant Lawson testified she had 99 girls in her Negro WAC detachment and 178 in the white contingent. 3-22-45

Prior to the arrival of the Negro group last November, she said, she used members of the white detachment to do hospital orderly duty, performing the same tasks to which the Negro WACS objected.

FOUR NEGRO WACS COURTMARTIALED

Times-Picayune

Convicted of Refusal to Obey Superior Officers

New Orleans - La.

(The Associated Press)

Fort Devens, Mass., March 21.—

Big Welcome In Britain for Negro WACs

P.M. New York 2-14-45

Bagpipes Play for Happy Women Whose Dreams Come True

By JOAN CAPREOL

Reuter Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, England, Feb. 14.—When 686 tin-hatted members of the 1st Battalion of the American Women's Army Corps stepped off a train at a windswept flood-lit siding station near here last night, smiling faces showed their dreams had come true—they were overseas.

These girls, representing nearly every state with 85 per cent of them ex-school teachers and holders of college degrees, received a special welcome.

Brig. Gen. John A. C. Lee, commanding general of the communications zone, flew specially from Paris to greet them at their debarkation port, where a Scot band bagpiped them to the train for England. Buses were waiting for them, and an American band marched them in. 2-14-45

A Thrill

Chaplain Capt. Beverley Ward of Harrisburg, Pa., who flew to welcome the girls, said he got a thrill when he recognized 21-year-old Ruby Wilson, whom he had baptised in the Presbyterian church in his home town.

The girls, most of whom have husbands, brothers or sweethearts in the Army, unanimously declared that their arrival over here would mean a lot to the Negro troops.

Pfc. Mamie Lewis, 26, of New York, told me her fiance, Corp. Frederick Clay of Oklahoma, who is in France, didn't know that she was overseas. 2-14-45

"I just hope we can get leave together. I am going to see the chaplain about it," she said. Both are graduates of universities and met in the Army while training in Kentucky.

Edna Toolsie's husband in New York will be glad to hear of his wife's safe arrival.

"He was discharged from the Army for medical reasons. He never got here but I got here instead. I am a British subject, born in Port of Spain," Mrs. Toolsie said.

Grandmother

2-14-45

The oldest member of the battalion is a grandmother, Mrs. Arma Fifer, 51, of Chicago, who got in "just under the wire."

With two sons on active service, Mrs. Amy Fairweather, of New York, a youthful looking widow of 48, joined up to make it a solid family proposition. Her son, Lt. Elwyn Fairweather, 26, was South Pacific-bound when his mother left for England. Her other son, Arthur, 21, is a sergeant in the Marines who has been in the Pacific two years.

Evelyn Lozi, 22, of New York, was a riviter on plane wings before she joined up "to help the colored people."

An accomplished pianist was among the group. She was Cpl. Jennie Moton, daughter of the great Negro educator who succeeded Booker T. Washington as head of the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

Ask Wac Convictions Inquiry

New York Times

WASHINGTON, March 22 (U.P.) —Three New York members of Congress asked an investigation today into the reecnt court-martial of four Negro Women's Army Corps members. The Wacs staged a sit-down strike March 10 at the General Hospital at Fort Devens, Mass. They charged that Col. Walter M. Crandall, commanding officer, told them that they were "here to mop walls, scrub floors and do all the dirty work." Each of the four was ordered dishonorably discharged and sentenced to a year at hard labor.

WAC Swears Menial Duties Go to Negroes

P.M. New York 3-20-45

Court-Martial Hears Private Defend Refusal to Work

Special Correspondence

FORT DEVENS, Mass., Mar. 20.—A Negro WAC private assigned to the Lowell General Hospital testified before a general court-martial board here yesterday that she and other Negro WACs at Fort Devens were compelled to do heavy and menial work because of their color.

Pvt. Anna C. Morrison, Richmond, Ky., was the first of four Negro WACs to testify. They were charged with refusing to obey orders of a superior officer. The court-martial will resume today. 3-20-45

Pvt. Morrison told the court, composed of five white officers, two white WAC officers and two male Negro officers, that she would have "preferred to die" rather than continue doing work in the hospital which white WACS were not compelled to do.

She told of getting stomach trouble from having to scrub a concrete kitchen floor. Government witnesses denied that the defendants or any of the other Negro WACs in the hospital detachment were compelled to scrub floors.

The other defendants are Pvts. Johnnie Murphy, Ranking, Pa.; Alice Young, Washington, D. C., and Mary E. Green, Conroe, Tex.

Pvt. Morrison told the court she told her white WAC commanding officer that she couldn't go on doing heavy work. "If it will help my people I will take a court-martial," she said. 3-20-45

Civilian counsel for the women, Julian Rainey, Boston, declared that differentiation made in the assignments of work among members of the armed services resulted in a state of mind which he called monomania.

The effect of such discrimination, he said, resulted in a form of temporary insanity."

WASHINGTON — Negro authorities expected a representative American Negro to participate in the United Nations meeting at San Francisco of April 25 is Dr. Ralph Bunche, recently made acting associate director of the Dependent Areas division of the State Department. Dr. Bunche is a former Cali-

3-21-45

FORT DEVENS, MASS., March 20.—(AP)—Four negro Wacs today were convicted by an Army general court martial of violating the 64th article of war—refusal to obey orders of superior officers. They were immediately sentenced to serve one year at hard labor and to be dishonorably discharged. They are Pvt. Alice D. Young, of Washington, D. C.; Pvt. Anna C. Morrison, of Richmond, Ky.; Pvt. Johnnie Murphy, of Rankin, Penn.; and Pvt. Mary Green, of Conroe, Texas.

California Negro is Four Negro Wacs Court Martial Convicts

Montgomery Advertiser

State Dept. Official

fornian, a Phi Beta Kappa from the University of California at Los Angeles, and a former political science professor at Howard university.

Northampton's First

PVT. VERLINA JONES, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Jones of Birds Nest, Va., who was the first from Northampton County to join the WAC.

Probe of WAC Center Ordered

Secretary of War Stimson has notified Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York that he has ordered an investigation of the situation at Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., WAC training center, from which reports came last week of unwarranted discriminatory treatment against Negro WACs, it was learned from Washington this week.

According to reports reaching here last week the number of Negro WACs at the training center, which is commanded by Colonel Howard Clark, has been reduced to a minimum; those remaining are assigned to duties of civilian employees who were discharged; the WACs work on 12-hour day and night shifts; white nurses' aides are assigned tasks which they formerly performed and Negro WACs have been ordered to obey orders of white civilians.

War Dept. Probe Asked Of Trial of 4 Negro WACs

Reps. Powell, Celler, Marcantonio Call Sentence Excessive

By J. S. Qualey

Three New York City Congressmen have asked investigations into the conviction of four Negro WACS at Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass, for refusing to obey a direct order to return to work as hospital orderlies.

Reps. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Democrat, and Vito Marcatonio, American Labor, have written Secretary of War Stimson asking for an investigation of the case and transcript of the court-martial.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, Democrat, has asked Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles of the First Service Command to make an inquiry into the case.

The four WACs were sentenced to a year at hard labor and dishonorably discharged for refusing to perform their duties on the grounds that they were being discriminated against because of race and were forced to do labor not assigned to white WACs.

'Unbelievable'

"It is unbelievable," Powell and Marcantonio wrote Stimson, "that in times like these that the colonel in charge of the Lovell General Hospital refused to let Negro WACs assist in nursing back to health our soldiers by forbidding them to take temperatures and ordering them to do 'all the dirty work.'"

The Powell-Marcantonio letter not only requested an investigation of the case, but also of Col. Walter H. Crandall, Vinalhaven, Me., commandant at Lovell.

At the court-martial, one of the defendants, a former Treasury Dept. adding machine operator, testified that the colonel had discovered her showing another girl how to take temperatures and on being informed by the WACs' superior that the defendant was a medical technician, had remarked that "I don't want any black medical technicians at my hospital."

During the trial, all four of the WACs said that on Mar. 10 Col. Crandall had told one of the Negro WACs, who had requested a transfer to the hospital motor pool, that "I won't have any black WACs in the motor pool."

Severe Sentence

In his letter to Gen. Miles, who still has to review the court-martial and sentence, Celler said:

". . . It is unseeming and contrary to general orders for a colonel to make statements of the character indicated—if it is true. Furthermore, the sentence of dishonorable discharge and one year at hard labor is, in my humble opinion, extremely severe, especially, if there has been, as charged, discrimination because of race and color."

Previous to the court-martial, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People had written Stimson, asking that Col. Crandall be transferred, and stating that an investigation by the NAACP had convinced the Association that Crandall was "unfit" to handle Negro troops.

Following the trial, Roy Wilkins, acting NAACP secretary, said his organization would fight the conviction all the way up to the President if necessary.

Marcantonio told PM that he would not be satisfied with anything less than an honorable discharge for the four girls. "If they try to give us the run-around," he added, "we'll take the case to the President."

Powell, who introduced a bill in the House Wednesday to abolish Jim Crow in the Army and the Navy six months after V-Day, said he could not understand the treatment allegedly given the WAC hospital orderlies at a time when the demand for Army nurses is so great.

Camp Atterbury Wac Technician Up from Private to Lieutenant

CAMP ATTERBURY, Indiana—In recognition of her outstanding service as an X-ray technician and nursing aide, Wac Technician Fourth Grade Rubye Jamerson, 66 St. Nicholas Place, New York City, has been given a direct commission as a second lieutenant in the Army Nurse Corps. She is now attending the nurses' training school at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin.

With nine years of nursing experience behind her at the Riverside Hospital in New York, she obstained a military leave in 1943 to join the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps. She received her basic training at Fort Devens, Mass., and Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

Began as Private

Lieutenant Jamerson, then a private in the WAC, was assigned to the X-ray section. Two months later she placed on ward duty and with her graduate nurse experience performed an outstanding job as a Wac technician for a full year until October 1944 when she was reassigned as Technician Fourth Grade Jamerson to the X-ray section.

29 New Wac Nurses in First Contingent in Atlantic City

By CLAY CLAIBORNE

ATLANTIC CITY—The latest version of the Army's "sisters of mercy" is now in process at the Thomas M. England General Hospital here, where 29 members of the WAC have taken up duties as medical surgical technicians.

The 29 include three members of the administration department of the unit and are part of a total of 93 colored and white basic trainees who were graduated from the hospital's technicians course.

1ST. Lt. Hall in Charge

The detachment known as the "31st" is headed by 1st Lt. Ann G. Hall, of Chicago, and is the first unit to complete an apprenticeship course at the hospital. Members of the unit enlisted for the England General Hospital, and received 11 weeks of training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

They were later transferred to the hospital where the apprenticeship course was given and are now assigned to the permanent staff of the hospital. Upon completion of the course all were promoted to the rank of T/5.

Their duties consist of working with soldier-patients rendering much the same assistance that nurses would and to assist the regular members of the hospital's nursing staff.

Special Barracks

A special Wac barrack has been set-up in the fashionable Cedar Croat hotel where fifty rooms are available to house one hundred Wacs. The barrack is yet in the process of being furnished and when completed will offer recreation rooms, library, administration offices, supply rooms and a PX.

All of the facilities and recreational features of the hospital are made available to the unit.

Members of the unit are:

Pvt. Eleanor Anderson, Corporas, Pa.; T/5 Edna M. Barnes, Milledgeville, Ga.; T/5 Marie Bohannon, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Johnnie D. Brooks, Sharoe, Miss.;

T/5 Leola L. Bufort, South Bend, Ind.; T/4 Alma B. Childs, Philadelphia, Pa.; T/5 Katherine Curry, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Gloria Clingman, Detroit, Mich.; T/5 Dorothy V. Freeman, Washington, D.C.;

T/5 Rose Ferguson, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Helen M. Galloway, Detroit, Mich.; T/5 Bernice Graham, Lockland, Ohio; 1st Sgt. Ethel C. Jennings, Columbus, Ohio; T/5 Geneva Jones, Chicago, Ill.;

T/5 Emma Lutz, Cincinnati, Ohio; T/5 Lillian Lacye, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Fannie C. Lamb, New York City; T/5 Doris R. McKeller, Evanston, Ill.; T/Marie A. Powell, South Bend, Ind.; Pvt. Mildred B. Powers, Chicago, Ill.;

Sgt. Ora L. Premo, Lexington, Ky.; T/5 Burnelle M. Rogers, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Willie M. Slaughter, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Carroll Singer, Farmington, Ohio; T/5 Bette L. Stargel, Cincinnati, Ohio;

Pvt. Arnetta M. Taylor, Chicago, Ill.; T/5 Joanna M. Turner, Louisville, Ky.; T/5 Tina L. Wells, South Bend, Ind.; T/5 Dorothy Young, Leland, Miss.

3 Wacs Acquitted After Row At Elizabethtown

On charges of disorderly conduct, three Negro Wacs were found not guilty by a special court-martial at Fort Knox yesterday.

The three, Pfc. Helen H. Smith, 40, Syracuse, N. Y., Pfc. Georgia Boson, 25, Dallas, Tex., and Pfc. Tommie D. Smith, 73, Lexington, were accused of assault on an Elizabethtown policeman over their refusal to leave the white waiting room at the bus station, Fort Knox officials said.

Pfc. Helen Smith was arrested and turned over to military authorities. The other two reported back to Fort Knox, where all three have been stationed for more than two years as members of the 1550th Service Command Unit, W.A.C. Section II.

Technical Army Duties Assigned To Negro WAC's

Philadelphia Tribune 4-7-45

FORT LEWIS, Washington.—The 97 Negro women comprising Company F of the Women's Army Corps in the engineer section, Ft. Lewis Army Service Forces Training Center, are engaged in a widely-diversified field of activity, with some performing highly-specialized tasks. The list includes hemotologists, truck drivers, typists, and warehouse clerks. 4-7-45

Many have learned new skills since entering the service and some are utilizing knowledge acquired in civilian life, thereby adding invaluable experiences to their future capabilities.

The group includes a college-trained social worker, an artist, a dietician, and a graduate nurse. Thirty-three have soldier husbands, two are married to veterans. Some have degrees from universities.

Capt. Irma J. Wertz, 1506 Albany st., Brunswick, Ga., company commander, is the wife of Lt. William J. Wertz, executive officer in the reconditioning service at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz. She earned a B. A. degree at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., then went to the Atlanta School of Social Work, Atlanta, Ga. She attended the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, and also completed a course in business administration at Bryant-Stratton business college in Chicago. Before the war, Capt. Wertz was active in social work as case supervisor and assistant director of Chicago's Parkway Community House

56 Wacs Speed Mail To GI's On Western Front

Philadelphia Tribune 4-7-45

UNITED KINGDOM BASE, England — Most people realize that mail is morale with fighting GIs, but few people do as much about it as WAC Sgt. Betty Jane Smith of 2054 Hallock street, Kansas City, Kans., and Privates First Class Winona and Jacquelyn Fuller, sisters of 135 north Campbell street, Chicago, Ill.

Sgt. Smith and the two sisters are members of the Postal Directory Section of the all-Negro WAC Postal Battalion in England which handles the mail for the entire European Theatre of Operations.

Under the supervision of Sgt. Smith 56 WACs are steadily engaged in redirecting mail to our fast moving soldiers on the Western Front.

The Fuller sisters in going overseas with the WACs, are merely keeping up a precedent already set by the men of their fighting family in this war.

Their father, Mr. Jake George Fuller discharged from the Navy last June, is a wearer of the Purple Heart and their two brothers, Seaman Second Class Donald Fuller and Private Ellison fuller, with the Navy and Army respectively, are both serving in the Southwest Pacific.

Sentences Voided For 4 Negro Wacs

Montgomery Advertiser 4-3-45

BOSTON, April 3.—(AP)—Court-martial proceedings against four negro Wacs who were sentenced to a year at hard labor after being convicted of refusing to obey superior officers at Fort Devens, were voided today by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, commanding general of the First Service Command. 4-3-45

The action followed receipt of an opinion from the judge advocate general, the Army Public Relations Office announced, adding that the Wacs would be restored to duty.

They were convicted, March 20, of violating the 64th Article of War.

Sergeant Slaps WAC Fined and "Busted"

Philadelphia Tribune 5-26-45

By CORRESPONDENT
(Special to The Philadelphia TRIBUNE)

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla.—A fine and a demotion in rank from Staff Sergeant to Private were imposed last week upon William Roundtree, of 1633 north 22nd street, Philadelphia, Pa., as a result of his slapping a white WAC, who allegedly called him a "n. . . r."

According to the soldier, the WAC had ignored an order to type and file some papers. During the discussion that followed, the WAC used the insulting term and the angered soldier slapped her twice.

Sgt. Roundtree has two brothers serving in a Quarter master Regiment in Germany: one a Corporal and the other a Sergeant.

Following his demotion, Pvt. Roundtree commented: "We've got the Japs to fight and a bigger fight right here in the United States ahead of us."

Colored WACS Act In Anglo-American Show

Philadelphia Tribune 5-26-45

6688TH CENTRAL POSTAL DIRECTORY, England—Thirty-six Negro Wacs of this unit, the first all-Negro Wac detachment to arrive overseas appeared in an Anglo-American show here recently.

They were presented to the Lord Mayor of Birmingham and 3,000 British and United States Army service men and women by Capitain Mildred Davenport Carter, of Boston, Massachusetts unit special service officer.

Opening with a choral group number, "Greetings Great Britain," an original composition by Corporal Jennie Dee Moton of Tuskegee, Alabama, the Wacs gave several vocal and instrumental solos.

Featured on the program was an interpretation of an African tribunal dance, complete with tom-toms, by Private Rebecca B. Ferguson, of 754 East 169th street, New York City. 5-26-45

British entertainers performed for the first half of the program which was sponsored by the Birmingham Hospitality Committee.

CITY AWES WACS FROM PUERTO RICO

New York Times 3-24-45

171 Assigned to Tasks Here Thrilled by Sights Viewed in Cruise in Harbor

Puerto Rico's first company in the Women's Army Corps, which will start work here next week, was treated yesterday to a cruise of New York's harbor, with sightseeing and rhumba music competing for the biggest "Ohs!" The tour was similar to several heretofore secret ones, arranged for new Port of Embarkation personnel.

Up the gangplank of the Sandy Hook, a former excursion ship now on Army duty, the 171 Wacs marched single file early in the afternoon. Their military bearing was no less correct two hours later—although a vigorous conga line had been disbanded as the steamer docked.

Recruited six months ago on their home island, the group trained at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., before being assigned to serve as mail processors at the Embarkation Post Office, 464 Lexington Avenue. Their sail yesterday was intended to acquaint them with other facilities making up the port's huge operation.

Swarm Onto Sunny Decks

3-24-45

On the outgoing part of the voyage the sunny decks swarmed with khaki-clad sightseers, each clutching her "sombrero" to protect it from the fresh breeze. An Army officer described points of interest through a loudspeaker in approved tourist style, but most of what he said civilians won't hear till the end of the war.

His announcement, though, that "This on my left, ladies, is Brooklyn" brought a big—and unrestricted—laugh.

The Puerto Rican Was, whose average age is 23, chattered freely in Spanish, but confined their English mainly to sighs of "So big" or "So beautiful." While all of the company are bilingual, one petite soldier explained: "When one does not speak English, it is only because she is bashful."

Twenty-five-year-old Diana Alvarez, who used to work as a stenographer in the Department of Health in San Juan, wasn't shy, though, when she saw the Statue of Liberty for the first time. With a rapt look, she said quietly, "I write home about this."

40 Per Cent are College Graduates

Most of the girls were teachers or office workers before they enlisted and 40 per cent of them are college graduates. Many have relatives in the Army, particularly in a Puerto Rican infantry regiment now on duty in France.

On the return trip entertainment by Special Services artists was the main attraction When the twelve-piece band led by T/4 Al Graham launched into, "Cachita," the response was such that he said afterward, "Now I know how Sinatra feels."

Besides the group of performers, whose regular job is to meet ships bringing in wounded men, the program also included a song by Pvt. Felcy Arrocho and some expert rhumba, congo and lindy hopping by the audience itself.

Following the cruise, the group returned in Army buses to its temporary barracks at the Broadway Central Hotel, 673 Broadway.

First Tan Wacs Now in London

Afro-American Mag. 2-3-45

LONDON — Headed by Major Charley E. Adams, Columbia, S.C., and Capt. A. Noel Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala., the first contingent of non-white Wacs arrived here Tuesday for assignment to a war zone.

Major Adams, a graduate of Wilberforce, enlisted July 18, 1942, and has held her rank since September, 1943. Capt. Campbell enlisted July 18, 1942, and has a brother with the 332nd Fighter Group and a sister in the Army Nurse Corps.

The Wacs are having trouble counting British money, but are enthusiastic about their new work. The first soldiers who saw them refused to believe their eyes and crowds on London streets turn to stare at them.

[EDITOR'S NOTE—Colored Wacs are reported to have been seen also in Stone, England, and in India.]

Wac Unit In France

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45

By THEODORE STANFORD

ROUEN, France—The first unit of Negro Wacs to be sent outside the continental limits of the United States arrived here early Wednesday morning from England.

The outfit, a Postal Director battalion composed of 817 enlisted women and thirty-one officers, is housed in the "Saserne Tallandier," a former French barracks. Under the command of Maj. Charity E. Adams of Columbia, S. C., the unit will soon wade into its task of redirecting "SNAFU" GI mail.

According to Public Relations Officer Lieut. Margaret E. Barnes, Oberlin, Ohio, the battalion maintained an average output of between sixty and seventy thousand letters and telegrams per day while in England. Among those seen taking the sun in the barracks' courtyard were:

Pfc. Julia Harris Webb, Augusta, Ga.; Sgt. Annette Batiste, New Orleans, La.; Corp. Theodora Bryant, New York City; Pfc. Elvira Jackson, Washington, D. C.; Corp. Grace Bryant, Wilmington, Del., and Pvt. Bettye Jean Richardson, Detroit, Mich.

3-4-45
Daily world — Atlanta, Ga.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM THE "OLD MAN"— 1st Lieut. Corrie Sherrard, Atlanta, Ga., (left) mess officer for the first contingent of Negro Wacs to arrive in the European Theatre of Operations, is congratulated by Lieutenant General John C. H. Lee, Commanding General, Communications Zone, ETO, following his inspection of mess hall at WAC installation somewhere in England. At right is Major Charity E. Adams, Columbia, South Carolina, commanding officer of the WAC unit. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo from Bureau of Public Rlations.)

memphis World Tenn. 1-30-45

Lieutenant Ellsworth W. Fouche of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot, (Depot Control Division), studies, surveys and analyzes the work of the other divisions of the Depot; handles personnel matters of the Depot Control Division, is custodian of the Division's records, and supplies information requested by other divisions of the Depot; "briefs" reports from all divisions inward-bound to the Executive and Administrative Division of the Depot; and studies and analyzes directive from higher headquarters, determining their application to the Chicago Quartermaster Depot. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo from Bureau of Public Relations.)

FORM FIRST WAC BATTALION FOR OVERSEAS DUTY

Ill.

Chicago Defender

1-20-45

Negro Women Set For Post Office Work In Foreign Zone

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Now undergoing intensive field training, the first unit of Negro WAC's formed for overseas duty will be shipped to a foreign theater of war upon completion of their toughening up preparations for contact with the enemy.

The War Department announced this week that the women will form a postal battalion. The group, composed entirely of volunteers, is under the command of Negro WAC officers.

No information on the scene of the field training was released. Nor did the War Department reveal to which theater of war it plans to send the Negro WAC's, since this is considered military information.

The Negro WAC's, it is understood, will perform valuable service at post headquarters where they will speed the delivery of mail within the combat zone. Their sister WAC's still in America are being trained in administrative, technical and other positions at various army posts and the presumption is that as the war progresses some of these will be sent overseas to release men for front line duty.

Congressmen Ask Probe of Four Wacs' Sentences

AFRO-American 3-31-45

Balt., Md.

Julian D. Rainey, defense attorney, told reporters over the week end that because he has discovered some "material and sensational evidence," he shall ask that the court be reconvened that the evidence might be introduced and become part of the record. 3-31-45

FORT DEVENS, Mass. — Four Wacs, convicted on March 20 by a court-martial board of disobeying a superior officer, were sentenced to one year at hard labor and ordered dishonorably discharged from the service.

They were: Pvts. Alice Young, 23, of Washington; Johnnie Murphy, 23, Rankin, Pa.; Mary E. Green, 21, Conroe, Texas; and Anna C. Morrison, 20, Richmond, Ky., who collapsed when sentence was pronounced.

The decision, ordered by the board composed of two colored captains, two white Wacs and five other officers, is subject to review by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles of the First Service Command, whose order they disregarded.

Meanwhile, a thorough investigation of the case has been requested of President Roosevelt and Secretaryof War Stimson by Mrs. Mary McL. Bethune and Reps. Adam C. Powell and Vito Marcantonio of New York.

A member of the advisory committee of the WAC, Mrs. Bethune told Mr. Stimson in a letter, "The issues involved are so serious and the implications so broad that we beseech you to make your own personal investigation."

World Race War Feared

Morris Milgram, national secretary of the Workers' Defense League, in a letter to the President, declared, "We face a world race war," just because of the jim-crow practices of the armed services. 3-31-45

Full pardons and reinstatements, he continued, would not solve the problem "which needs a purge of racism from the armed services and enforcement of the anti-discrimination section of the Selective Service Act.

The four were among the fifty-four Wacs who staged a strike two week ago in protest against alleged discrimination. However, after General Miles read the group the article of war regarding refusal to work, fifty-two returned.

Later the four convicted Wacs rejoined the two, Pvt. Inez L. Baham of New Orleans and T/5 Thelma Allen of Columbus, Ga., who were absolved of charges when General Miles became convinced they did not realize the seriousness of their actions.

During the two-day hearing, the Wacs contended that their refusal to scrub floors of Lowell General Hospital followed other instances of discrimination on the part of Col. Walter M. Crandall of Vinalhaven, Me., hospital commander.

They charged that he had said that he didn't want "black Wacs" as medical technicians or in the motor pool, adding, "They are here to mop walls, scrub floors and do all the dirty work."

Colored Officer Saw No Bias

Substantiation of the charge was made by Lt. Tenola Stoney, commander of the colored Wacs, who, however, declared that Colonel Crandall had attributed the remark to Capt. Barney Stewart.

Moreover, she added, she had seen the white Wacs doing the same type of work as the colored Wacs, who it was said had been brought to the hospital to replace a white contingent as orderlies.

Questioning of Lt. Virginia Lawson, white, commander of all Wacs at the hospital, revealed that of the 178 white Wacs only 15 were orderlies, whereas 60 of the 90 colored were so classified.

Although hospitalized in the same wards, she stated, there were no colored technicians and the six colored clerks handled only the contingent's own affairs.

ff offffsg7 ,tiona 3-31-45

The Wacs were defended by Julian D. Rainey of Boston, a civilian lawyer, who said, "It's a tough thing in this country to be a colored person and subject to discrimination in the face of what we claim to be."

In defense of the girls, he said further that although all they hear is "regardless of race, creed or color," they are told by the officers that they are not wanted for certain duties.

Earlier, however, the Boston NAACP president, Julian Steele, had issued a statement deploring the action of the Wacs. It was issued for both the NAACP and the Armstrong-Hemenway foundation. 3-31-45

It further stated that the Wacs were overly sensitive as a result of the overall policy of segregation in the army, which was termed an underlying but not immediate factor in their case.

National Body Fights

His statement, as well as another praising General Miles's personal fairness in handling the case, was used by a New York daily which in its headline stated NAACP approval of the sentences.

Acting Secretary Roy Wilkins, however, protested the newspaper's interpretation of the association's attitude, declaring that it not only emphatically opposed the sentences but also plans to offer every assistance in the appeal.

Wacs

Although the GI's are not certain about what should be done, they agree that some strong voice should assure the responsible persons or organizations that the colored man's part in this war is no laughing matter.

I have seen thousands of colored people in my life, but I have never seen a single one with features similar to the one in the cartoon.

Fort Lewis WACs Are Specialists

8-10-45

Northwest Herald

FORT LEWIS—The 97 Negro women comprising Company F of the Women's Army Corps in the engineer section, Fort Lewis Army Service Forces Training Center, are engaged in a widely-diversified field of activity, with some performing highly-specialized tasks. The list includes hematologists, truck drivers, typists and warehouse clerks.

field training. 1-19-45

The Unit, which will form a postal battalion, will be commanded by Negro Wac officers. It will go abroad on completion of field training. The ten enlisted women pictured below are on their way to render more vital service to their country in foreign lands. Each of them was selected from the WAC section at Fort Huachuca because of her character and capability, and each volunteered for the over-seas assignment; they are, from left to right, front row: Pfc. Dorothy Reid of Penn; T 5 Lucia M. Pitts, Penn; Pfc. Marie Gillisslee, N. Y., Pvt. Charlotte Cartwright, Penn; T|5 Edna Burton, Fla; back row: Lt. Consuelo Bland commanding officer; T|4 Evelyn C. Martin, N. Y., T|4 Mildred Peterson, Texas; T|5 Alice Allison, Va., T|5 Fannie Talbert, N.Y., and Pfc. Mildred Gates, Ill.

NEGROES ACCEPTABLE, ADMIRAL ANNOUNCES

Pitts burgh Courier Pa.

WASHINGTON—The increased need for nurses has introduced an "unofficial war" between the Army and Navy with much attention being focused on policy regarding the acceptance of Negro nurses. The Army has officially announced its abandonment of the pro-rata method and the Navy has stated it has "no policy prohibiting the appointment of Negro nurses."

These developments followed introduction on the House last week of a bill providing for the drafting of nurses into the Armed Forces. The bill was introduced by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), and carries two prohibitions against race discrimination.

Rear Admiral Agnew stated in Washington Saturday, that, "We have found out this weekend that Negro applicants were told by the Red Cross that they cannot enlist in the Navy Nurse Corps. The Navy has no such policy, and no such discrimination."

Commenting on the charge, a spokesman for the Nurse Recruiting Center, Red Cross, denied the organization, on its own, barred Negro nurses from Navy service. She said:

"The Navy instructed us not to accept Negro applicants. We have heard that the Navy Nurse Corps is now open to Negroes, but we have not received official notification."

BILL PROHIBITS DISCRIMINATION 2-3-45

Under the terms of the bill, every graduate nurse between the ages of 20 and 45 would be subject to the draft, provided and "regardless of race or color," she has been afforded an opportunity to volunteer for induction into the land or naval forces.

The bill also provides that "in the selection and induction of persons under this act and in the interpretation and execution of this act there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color."

Surgeon General Norman Kirk, of the Army, announced that the Army Medical Corps was accepting any nurses who qualify and placing them without regard to color. This represents a change from the old policy of accepting Negro nurses on a pro-rata basis according to the population and number of Negro soldiers in the service, and of assigning them to segregated Negro hospitals.

Rear Admiral William J. C. Agnew, acting chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Naval Medical Corps, issued the following statement last Saturday:

"There is no policy in the Navy prohibiting the appointment of Negro women in the Navy Nurse Corps or in the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve. Every application reaching the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for appointment in the Navy Nurse Corps or the Navy Nurse Corps Reserve is given full consideration, provided the applicant meets the physical, professional, military fitness and other requirements for appointment."

The Courier contacted Capt. Sue Dauser, superintendent, Navy Nurse Corps, regarding any plan for acceptance of Negro nurses. Captain Dauser refused to comment beyond the statement released by Admiral Agnew and was non-commital on the status of applications from Negro nurses previously filed with the bureau. 2-3-45

Congresswoman Francis P. Bolton (R., Ohio), praised the Army's new policy and assailed the Navy for holding to "the ancient method." Known as a champion of Negro nurses, the Congresswoman said "They (the Navy) are still finding it more of a problem than they have faced before. They are still holding to the ancient method."

Army Women Will Be Put On Postal Service

St. Louis Argus Mo. 1-19-45

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15—The War Department announced today that a Women's Army Corps unit, composed of Negro Wacs, is being formed for overseas duty and will be sent to a foreign theater upon completion of 2 Negro WACs Face Courtmartial After 100 Strike In Mass.

N.Y. Age 3-17-45

FORT DEVENS, Mass. — Two Negro WACs face a courtmartial and three others were confined to quarters Monday following a brief sit down strike which 100 WACs had staged Saturday in protest against working conditions at the Lovell General Hospital here.

In a protest Friday, the Negro WACs charged discrimination and demanded that they receive the same treatment as white WACs. On Saturday, they refused to report for duty. After an officer read the Articles of War to the group, however, all but two went back to work. The two who refused now face court-martial. 3-17-45

One complaint of the WACs was that college-trained women, enlisted as medical technicians, were assigned to scrubbing floors and windows, while white WACs and civilian workers received preferential treatment.

Major General Sherman Miles has started an inquiry.

Army Court Convicts 4 Negro Wacs of Disobeying Superior

Washington Post D.C.

Fort Devens, Mass., March 20 (U.P.).—Four Negro Wacs were convicted tonight by a nine-member court-martial on charges of disobeying a superior officer. They were ordered dishonorably discharged from service, and sentenced to one year at hard labor. The decision of the court, comprised of two white Wacs, two Negroes. 3-21-45

When the decision was announced, Pvt. Anna C. Morrison, about one hour., broke down and had to be aided by her civilian lawyer called to aid in the room. The verdict was received calmly by her five other officers deliberated gro captains and five other officers, is subject to review by Maj three codefendants—Pvts. Johnnie Gen. Sherman Miles of the First Murhpy, 20 of Rankin, Pa.; Alice Service Command, whose back-to-Young, 23, of Washington; and work order was disobeyed by the Mary E. Green, 21, of Conroe, Tex. 1-45

The Wacs' trial lasted two days, case without precedent and said:

"These Wac girls enlisted, they weer not drafted. They are young and all they hear is 'regardless of race, creed or color' but then a colonel says in their presence that he doesn't want colored Wacs taking temperatures." 3-21-45

In the face of their sitdown strike

In defense of their sitdown strike at the Lovell General Hospital March 10 and defiance of the sixty-fourth Article of War read to them by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles of the First Service Command, the quartet offered a series of instances of alleged discrimination.

They charged that Col. Walter H. Crandall of Vinalhaven, Me., commanding officer of the hospital where they were orderlies, told them that "they are here to mop walls, scrub floors and do all the dirty work." 3-21-45

[The Associated Press quoted Private Young as testifying that Crandall tol dher that "they want no black Wacs working at the motor pool." She said that he made the declaration after she asked to be transferred from the hospital.—Editor's note.)]

Chicago Sunday Tribune

4-8-45

British Combine

NEGRO WACs, of an American postal unit, parade in Britain.

Axe Hits 2 Champions of Fort Devens Wacs' Cause

Afro-American 4-14-45

BOSTON — Although the court-martial proceedings against the four Wacs at Fort Devens were voided and they were restored to duty, two officers felt the axe because of their work on behalf of the girls.

One was a Lieutenant Brown, a colored chaplain who had given much assistance to persons working in defense of the Wacs who had been charged with insubordination. He was transferred to San Francisco.

The other was a Lieutenant Gay, their commanding officer who, it was said, frequently transmitted their complaints about discrimination to Col. Walter Crandall, commander of Lowell General Hospital. She was discharged

Wrong Persons Contacted

It was revealed during the trial of the girls who were sentenced to a year at hard labor for refusing to work that Colonel Crandall had said that he wanted no "black Wacs" as medical technicians or in the motor pool.

According to reliable reports the sentences were voided after the Army review board decided that because Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles had presided at the trial and had been the original complainant the proceedings were not legal.

.... Exposure Threatened ....

It was also said that Mrs. Mary M. Bethune, a member of the WAC advisory board, armed with facts concerning conditions at the fort and at the hospital, had threatened a full exposure of the situation.

Commending the Wacs on their stand, Father Kenneth Hughes of St. Bartholomew Church in Cambridge, Mass., pointed that the Secretary of War's anti-discrimination order "is flouted openly every day by commanding officers.

Balt., Md

The defense counsel, Julian D. Rainey, said after the victory,

"The case brought out some inequities, practiced because of color, which have since been corrected. Let us, therefore, score it as a finished round in favor of progress."

Officers Themselves Divided

Thanking the public on behalf of the Boston NAACP, Julian D. Steele, president, stated that despite misinformation and false rumors the organization's fight for the girls was endangered at no time.

"We knew there were high ranking officers who did not share the prejudicial view of some others; we had condfience in these men, and I believe the results have justified our confidence," he added.

4-14-45

Silver Bars for Jeanne Webster

AFRO-AMERICAN 4-14-45

CHICAGO — Advancement of Jeanne C. Webster, Wac, of New York City, to the rank of first lieutenant, QMC, has been announced by Brigadier General J. E. Brazynski, Commanding General of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot.

Lt. Webster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Webster. She attended Wadleigh High School, New York, and Howard University in Washington, D.C. Before entering military service she was in civilian life a clerk in the U.S. War Department, Washington, D.C.

Pfc. Georgia Singleton of Fort Huachuca Gives Vivid Description of Daily Life in Woman's Army Corp

Kansas City Call — Jan.

4-20-45

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.—A general description of the daily life of the American WAC was explained to GI's in France in a recent letter from Pfc. Georgia Singleton, stationed at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Pfc. Singleton was an instructor in the Harlem, Ga., school system prior to her enlistment in the armed services.

"Though we are now in the midst of actual combat," wrote Pfc. Singleton, "nevertheless we WAC's have a great deal of work to perform here on the home front which is indirectly a contribution to the winning of the war."

In outlining the daily activities of the WAC, she pointed out their work commence at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and terminates at 4:30 o'clock each evening, six days each week.

"We drill three days and attend orientation classes one hour each week. Sunday is a day of rest," she continued, "On this day we attend worship services at the post chapel and in the evening we attend movies, read books, and write letters. 4-20-45

Telling of WAC inspection, she asserted that their barracks are inspected daily. "On Saturdays we have a formal inspection of all clothing that have been issued to us," continued her letter.

According to her letter, the Saturday inspection consists of a full display of the following articles: one Tropical worsted suit and one extra skirt, three khaki shirts and one blouse, seven summer shirts, three O. D. shirts, two fatigue dresses, one bath robe, two O. D. Blouses, three O. D. skirts, two dress hats, four overseas caps, one winter off-duty dress and one off-duty summer trench coat with a detachable wool and silk lining, four pair pajamas, one pair field shoes, two pair of dress oxford shoes, one pair of rubbers, one pair leather dress gloves, one pair of wool gloves, winter scarf, two summer scarfs and ties. 4-20-45

"We buy our own powder, lipstick and etc," said Pfc. Singleton, who continued writing, "we have to put all of that in a very small space. We have one foot-locker and one wall locker. There is usually a space provided under our wall locker for our clothes."

"We live in two story barracks. There are ten beds along each side of the barrack—both up stairs and down stairs," she wrote.

In reply to a question in regard to the military duties of the WAC organization at Fort Huachuca, she said they are now engaged in essential military positions to free men for combat duty.

Among the many military duties performed by the WAC's of her unit, Pfc. Singleton listed postal service, cooking, special service, clerks, stenographers, telephone operators and drivers. 4-20-45

Pfc. Singleton concluded her letter saying, "We are in this Man's Army just as you fellows are—playing our part as good soldiers to bring an early termination to the present world conflict. Just as all of you, we too, look forward to the day when "Peace and Good Will Toward All Men" shall prevail throughout the world.

Only Tuscumbia Wac

Weekly Review

Bha Alabamers

PVT. ALBERTA L. DOSS, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John A. Doss, who was home recently on furlough has returned to Fort Devens, Mass., where she is stationed working and going to Medical Technical School at Lovell General Hospital. Pvt. Doss is the only Colored WAC from Tuscumbia, Alabama and has been in service one year. 2-21-45

Atlanta World 4-26-45

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, England—Examining a carving at the base of William Shakespeare's statue in the City Park here are left to right) Pfc. Lillie Harrison, 330 New Hampshire Ave., N. E. Washington, D. C., Pfc. Alyce Dixon, 4001 Blaine Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., and Private Lila Burkett, 41 East Garfield Street, Chicago, Ill., who recently toured the playwright's home with other Negro Wacs. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo from Bureau of Public Relations).

Hobby Out; Wac 'New Deal' Seen

Chicago Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The resignation of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby as director of the Women's Army Corps is considered "good riddance" among Negroes in many quarters here.

Col. Hobby's persistent unwillingness to press for the complete integration of Negro WACs into all facilities and services of the corps on a completely unsegregated basis branded her as extremely conservative if not downright prejudiced.

On several occasions when committees of Negro women have conferred with Col. Hobby she has suavely refused to see segregation of Negro and white WACs as a basis for contention.

What the attitude of her successor, Col. Westray Battle Boyce, will be on this score still remains to be seen. Little is known here of her previous experience with Negro groups or what her record reveals. 7-21-43

Typical of the Hobby technique was a plan rumored to be in the making to set up an all-Negro WAC regiment which would have made way for the rise of one Negro to a top command position. When the plan was disclosed it was bitterly opposed by Negro women. Talking to a small group on the subject, Col. Hobby denied such an intention, but she blandly stated that she did not see why such a plan would be objectionable to Negroes.

Hit Negro Recruiters

At one stage of the game she completely withdrew Negro recruiting officers from the field complaining that the type of recruit they were bringing in was decidedly inferior.

When asked whether the caliber of Negro recruit improved under the selective process of white officers she quickly replied "yes." But when cornered by a question as to whether the qualifications for recruits had not been raised when the white officers had been charged with recruiting Negroes and therefore there was no basis for comparison, Col. Hobby plead another appointment and excused herself from the conference.

Negro WACs have been consistently denied the opportunity to participate in many of the Army Special Services schools ostensibly on the grounds that several were located in the South and Negroes would not be acceptable.

This policy as well as many others countenanced by Col. Hobby is in sharp contract to that followed by the Women's Corps of the navy where complete integration is practiced.

Started Badly

Col. Hobby got off to a bad start when the corps was established as an auxiliary to the army. At the first WAC trainng center at Des Moines, Iowa, Negroes were assigned to all Negro platoons and were billeted and fed as platoons. Although they shared the same dining facilities as whites, they ate at separate tables. For living, they were assigned by platoons to barracks.

In latter years Col. Hobby feebly clung to the excuse that "We are a part of the army and must abide by army regulations."

Col. Boyce was commissioned in the WAC in September, 1943. She served as company officer at the first WAC training center at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, and for a time was public relations officer in the second service command with headquarters in New York City.

She was then assigned as WAC staff director of the fourth service command at Atlanta, Ga. Later she was sent to the North African theater as WAC staff director. She was named deputy director of the WAC last May.

Col. Boyce comes from North Carolina where she was formerly employed in an insurance company in Raleigh. Her home is in Rocky Mount. 7-21-45

Under Col. Hobby's administrations the corps was built up to a strength of nearly 100,000 of which better than 5,000 are Negroes.

Within recent months the first contingent of Negro WACs have been assigned to the European theater in the London area. They have done a highly creditable job in the handling of servicemen's mail.

Pittsburgh Courier

IN COMMAND—First Lieut. Evelyn F. Overton of Washington, D. C., is the commanding officer of the Wac Detachment at Douglas Army Air Field (Arizona) Twin-Engine Advanced Flying School. She was recently promoted to her present rank. She is a former Treasury Department employe.

7-21-45

Pittsburgh Courier

OVERSEAS — Pfc. Mary L. Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Moarin of Memphis, Tenn., is attached to the Central Postal Directory Battalion stationed in Rouen, France. She was among the first colored Wacs to arrive in the European Theatre of Operations. 7-21-45

Arrival of Detachment of Air Wac's Give New Life to Godman Field

Afro-American

7-14-45

Gen. B. O. Davis is shown here greeting his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Agatha Davis. Others, left to right, are Mrs. Elmer D. Jones, Washington, D.C.; Capt. Sarah E. Murphy, Fort Knox, Ky.; Mrs. Bascom F. Hodge, Godman Field; Mrs. Geraldine Stanton, Los Angeles; Miss Hortense Young, Louisville, and Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

7-14-45

General B. O. Davis reviewed the first contingent of air Wacs to arrive at Godman Field, Kentucky, Friday. The air Wacs are part of a detachment assigned to the 477th Composite Group. Accompanying the General were Col. B. O. Davis Jr., and Capt. George Knox, commander of troops at the review.

7-21-45

Shown here is Colonel B. O. Davis, commanding officer, Godman Field, Kentucky and the 477th Bombardment Group, greeting Captain Elizabeth C. Hampton, commanding officer of the newly arrived Air Wacs. Members of the new contingent will perform clerical jobs formerly held by civilian workers. Capt. Hampton is a Californian.

FOUGHT JIM CROW DUTIES AT HOSPITAL

Action Followed Protest Of Leaders, Groups, and General Negro Press

By Bernard K. Johnpoll

4-7-45

WASHINGTON — Major General Sherman Miles, Commander of the First Service Command, announced yesterday that he has set aside the court martial conviction of four Negro WACS for refusing to obey the orders of their officers.

New York Amsterdam News

The WACS had been sentenced to serve a year in jail (each) and were to have been dishonorably discharged from the service.

General Miles' action followed the receipt of a recommendation from the Judge Advocate General's office suggestion that the conviction be set aside and the WACS be allowed to return to duty.

Several liberal leaders, including Mrs. Roosevelt, many protest groups, and the entire Negro press, expressed grave concern over the plight of the WACS who were sentenced after they went on a sitdown strike at Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass., protesting what they termed "Jim Crow duties". One testified that she was compelled to do heavy and menial work because of her color and "would rather die t than continue soing such work", especially so when white WACS at the pool were not compelled to do likewise.

2 Wacs Slugged by Kentucky Cop

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Pair Had Refused to Move in Bus Station

FACE COURT-MARTIAL

7-28-45

Officer Upheld by Fort Knox Commander

PHILADELPHIA

How she and another Wac were blackjacked in a Louisville, Ky., bus station by a civilian policeman was described by Pfc. Helen Smith, former Philadelphian, in a letter to her sister, Mrs. Catherine McCabe of 2201 Ellsworth St.

Stationed at Fort Knox, both Pfc. Smith, wife of a World War I veteran and mother of a son serving overseas in the Army, and her companion, Pvt. Georgia Bosum face court-martial proceedings as a result of the incident.

Originally charged with violating the State jim crow laws and assaulting a civilian officer, the two were later charged with violating the 93rd Article of War; i.e., being disorderly in uniform.

Kentucky does not have any law which requires segregation in train or bus stations.

According to the letter, the two Wacs were sitting in the section of the bus station reserved for whites when they were approached by the policeman and ordered to get out.

Told that the section reserved for colored was overcrowded and that they were simply waiting for a bus, the cop retorted, "When white people down here tell n - - - s to move they move," the letter said.

Threatening to place them under arrest, he continued to use offensive epithets and when Private Bosum protested he hit her over the head with his blackjack, Pfc. Smith wrote.

Left Bleeding

When she came to her companion's rescue, the cop slugged her severely with his weapon, leaving her battered and bloody, she continued.

7-21-45

When the pair were returned to camp, the post commander ignored their plight and lectured to them on obeying jim crow laws in the South, she informed her sister further. The NAACP has been asked to investigate the incident.

Democracy Works at Atlantic City Hospital

Pro-American Baltimore, Md.

7-28-45

Included among 29 members of the 31st WAC unit assigned as medical surgical technicians at the Army's Thomas M. England General Hospital in Atlantic City, N.J., are the above: Cpl. Emma Lutz, Cincinnati, Ohio, formerly a machinist at Wright Aero Corp.; Cpl. Carroll M. Singer, Farmington, Ohio, and Cpl. Bernice Graham, Lockland, Ohio.

Three Wacs Slugged By White Police In Kentucky

Chicago Defender

Chi. Ill.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. — The South turned its guns against Negro WACs here this week. 7-28-45

Three WACs, beaten with clubs by white civilian policemen because they protested against Kentucky's Jim Crow, are being held here for a summary court martial.

The WACs walked into the "white only" section of the bus station here and were hacked over the head by white policemen because they "did not get out fast enough."

On leave from Fort Knox where they worked in the Regional hospital, the WACs were Pfc. Helen Smith of Syracuse, N. Y., Pfc. Georgia Boson and Pvt. Tommie Smith of Texas.

Pfc. Smith, mother of a son in service overseas and the most seriously beaten of the three, was dragged through Elizabethtown streets by two of the officers and jailed for six hours without medical attention.

For White Only

In a fantastic reign of race terror here which spread to the WAC camp itself, the WACs were reprimanded by their camp commander, Colonel Throckmorton, for "breaking the Jim Crow laws" and placed on court martial.

The WACs, who were later given medical treatment at Fort Knox, stated that they were accosted by a white policeman as soon as they entered the "white only" section of the bus station.

Smith said she explained to the policeman that the colored waiting room was crowded with men and that there were no lights.

"I sat on the end nearest the colored section," said Pfc. Smith. "The civilian cop came in and said, 'Get up and get out of here. This is not for niggers. This is for white people.'" 7-28-45

"When I did not move, he said: 'You heard me. When white people down here tell niggers to move, they move.'

"I told him we were doing no harm and that we were waiting for a bus."

Pfc. Smith stated that she told the policeman that if he wanted her arrested he could call a military policeman.

Hit With Blackjack

"He said he didn't need a M.P.," said Smith, "and said if we didn't move he would take care of the 'nigger wenches' himself."

"When he said that," continued Smith, "Pfc. Bosen jumped up. He hit her over the head with his blackjack and I asked the civilians to help us. They never moved. I told Pvt. Smith to go and get an MP, but she could find none."

During the ensuing attack, Pfc. Smith was struck repeatedly over the head and face with a blackjack. 7-28-45

Pfc. Smith stated that when they were called into the offices of their company commander after being released from jail they were lectured and reprimanded for violating the state Jim Crow laws.

She said that Colonel Throckmorton pointed to the ethics of the South and Civil War conditions and cited them for court martial on charges of violating the law and assaulting a policeman.

Pfc. Smith has served 26 months in the army, and has a perfect record.

Shower Heavenly After Baths in Helmet, Says Wac in Rouen

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By PFC. VASHTI MATTHEWS

ROUEN, France — Rouen is in ruins, but I am as happy as possible because for the first time in four months I can take a shower . . . with hot water.

The water is hard, but after bathing in a helmet for so long, it is still heavenly.

We arrived here in May. The Army has been able to find a decent place for us to live. The building we have here is much larger than the King Edward School in which we lived while stationed in Birmingham, England.. Though there are 26 girls in my room, we are not as crowded as before.

I was startled at the change in attitude of the English before we left. Prior to V-E Day, there was no end to the trouble they would go to to accommodate us. Their anxiety to please cooled off considerably when the enemy had been conquered.

Talking about "frantic." The French, men and women, are frantic beyond hope. The women even frowned upon our arrival because of the competition with the fellows they expected from us. So far I have seen very little socializing between our soldiers and French girls. In England one saw loads of colored babies, here I've seen only a few. It maybe because I am in a small town.

Can Use Appliances

One of the good things about France is that there are the same electrical appliances as in the States, so that we are able to use American irons and radios without any changes. Though most of the radio programs are in French, the Allied Expeditionary forces still carry English and American programs 24 hours a day. 7-21-45

In our lack of knowledge of French, the fellows have been a real help, and we should be able to find our way around in short order.

Costs Up

Everything is very high. Since the food shortage, we are not permitted to buy food, however, we can buy articles such as perfume. For a change, there is no KP. We have French KPs. They are terrible, but I would rather have them than do it myself.

Freddie Howard, a cousin of some distance, and who used to work at the AFRO, is stationed near here. He is a master sergeant. I have been fortunate enough to run into him several times. It is good just to talk over old times, even though we had never met before.

Five local Wacs stationed near Rouen, France

Los Angeles Calif. 7-23-45

NORMANDY BASE SECTION, France—Five local girls are among Wacs of the 6888th Central Postal Directory, stationed near Rouen, France, European headquarters said this week.

They include Pvt. Jessie Hall, 921 East Jefferson blvd. and Private Frances Anna Foster, 1308 Newton; Pfc. Polly S. Frazier 1373 E. 48th Pl.; Cpl. Viola E. Suarez 1593 W 36th st.; and Sgt. Mattie Moorehead, 1783 W. 35th st. Other Californians there are Pvt Mary L. Ellington, of San Jose, Pvt. Lillon M. Prince, if San Diego and Pvt Dorothy E. Daniels, of Stockton.

Demand Action Against WAC Assailant In Ky.

Int'n'l Labor Defense Enters Protest Case

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga

NEW YORK— (ANP)— War department action against the policeman who on July 9 assaulted Pfc. Helen H. Smith, Negro WAC, at Elizabethtown, Ky., was urged by the International Labor defense Thursday in a telegram which simultaneously called for investigation of the commanding officer at Fort Knox for his attitude, and full protection of the rights of Pfc Smith, scheduled to be courtmartialed on Saturday.

"The case is an outrage," said Louis Colman, secretray of the ILD. "Our communication to Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio is only a first step."

The telegram to Ulio follows:

"The facts in the case of Pfc. Helen H. Smith, beaten by a civilian policeman on July at Elizabethtown, Kentucky and as a result now facing 96th Article of War charges at Fort Knox, as presented to us, on their face warrant full and immediate investigation by the adjutant general, both as to the brutal treatment accorded to a member of the armed forces and the apparent discriminatory and callous attitude of the commanding officer who cynically refers to violation of a non-existent Kentucky segregation law to excuse his indifference to the assault against a member of his command.

CHARGES 'INEXPLICABLE'

"The charges placed against Pfc. Smith are inexplicable on any theory. It is our understanding trial of Pfc. Smith has been set for this Saturday. Any reflection in this trial of the attitude attributed to the commanding officer would be disastrous to military and civilian morale. We urge you to take every possible step to prevent such an occurrence and for the fullest protection of the rights of Pfc. Smith, including institution of appropriate action against her assailant. 7-29-45

"That the Army of the United States should permit and its officers abet such assault upon its personel is unthinkable.'

Pfc. Smith was on her way back to Fort Knox from Memphis. The train was late and getting later becuase of being placed on sidings for troop trains. She decided to get off at some small town, take a bus, and try to get to camp on time inas much as she has a good conduct medal and has never been cited for any violation of regulations. She purchased her ticket at the bus station and since the 'colored' section was over-crowded she sat down on what she describes as the "nearest bench to the colored section." Several other colored WACs joined her there, and eventually a civilian policeman appeared, cursing and calling them 'niggers," and telling them they would have to move because that section was for white people. He said they would be arrested if they did not move.

ASKED FOR ME

Pfc. Smith told him that if they were going to be arrested he should call an' MP, whereupon he is alleged to have replied that he did not need any MP to tell him how to handle "n—wenches." At that point one of the other Wacs finally rebelled and said they had heard enough about "n——," and they would not stand for any more. He then took out his black-jack and started beating the Wac over the head. 7-24-45

Pfc. Smith tried to intervene and he attacked her, hitting her over the skull, in the jaw, and blackening both her eyes, also dragging her across the bus station floor, kicking her ankle, and skinning her elbow. She was not fully recovered from the effects of this assault on July 18, when she wrote a letter to her daughter, and she had had to have a tooth pulled which was loosened by the blow on her jaw.

The final insult was the indifference of her commander, who said that she had violated a Kentucky state law on separation of the races, and he was not much concerned.

Negro WAC Brutally Beaten By White Cop

At the request of The New York Age, the NAACP has requested its Louisville, Ky. branch, to investigate the brutal beating of a Negro WAC who made the mistake of sitting on a seat reserved for white bus patrons in a small Kentucky town while enroute to her post at Fort Knox, Ky., from Memphis, Tenn. 7-28-45

The attack was brought to light when Miss Grace Smith, of 552 West 160th street, visited The New York Age and produced a letter sent by her mother, WAC Pfc. Helen H. Smith, member of the WAC for two years, holder of the Good Conduct Medal and clerk in the ration board office at Fort Knox, Ky.

"The things that happened to me is like a horrible nightmare," Pfc. Smith wrote her daughter. "I shall try to tell you in a few short sentences what really happened to me. While enroute back to the post from Memphis, the train was running late due to being sided a couple of times to let troop trains pass, so I got off in this little one-horse town in order to get to the post quicker. Got a cab from the railroad station to the bus station, went in the place and purchased my ticket.

"The part they have for colored people was crowded with civilians, so I sat on a bench as near to the section for colored as I possibly could. Well, while sitting there, a couple of more WACs came in; naturally, they came and sat with me. Well, in came this civilian cop. He said:

"'Git up and git out of here. This place aint for niggers. This place is for white people.'

"I said, 'I beg you pardon. The other place is crowded. We are waiting for our bus and surely it is no horm done, since the bus will be here in a few minutes.' He continued with his 'nigger business' and said if we didn't move he would have us arrested ..... The other Wacs jumped up and said, 'that will do with that nigger business, we have heard just about enough of that'. N.Y. Age

"With that he got out his black-jack and started beating her over the head with it. I asked the civilians to help. They never moved. I sent the other girl out to look for an MP, then I went to the aid of he other WAC. Naturally, I got the worst of it. He said I was a smart nigger from the North and he would make an example of me and proceeded to do just that.

"I still have a big hickey on my head. My eyes were closed until last Friday. Both of my eyes are still black. My head aches continually like a toothache. My elbow is still sore where I was dragged across the bus station floor, and my ankle is still quite painful where one of them kicked me. And Saturday I had to have a tooth pulled that was loosened from a blow on the jaw.

"I was a pretty sick woman last week, and I don't feel too good this week. But, my dear, here is the payoff. The Post Commander is not worried about us. He is only concerned with the fact that we broke a Kentucky State law when we stood or sat in a white waiting room. I am also charged with assault and battery against the cop. Well, that is the last straw, but I am not taking it lying down. There is a lot more."

Before enlisting in the WACs Pfc. Smith was a resident of Syracuse, N. Y.

Beaten By Cop

PFC. HELEN SMITH

56n-1945

Three WACs Get Commissions

Des Moines Iowa Bystander

Fort Des Moines, Iowa—Three Negro women have been commissioned second lieutenants in the Army of the United States with the 58th class of Officer Candidate School at First WAC Training Center, Fort Des Moies, Iowa. They are Lts. Evelyn Seace, McDonough, Ga.; Annie Husbands, Brooklyn, N. Y. and Leader Hoskins, Fostoria, Texas. 7-26-43

Lieutenant Evelyn Cecelia Seace, daugher of Mr. and Mrs. John Alfred Seace, Sr., McDonough, Ga., enlisted in the Women's Army Corps in April, 1943. She was a classification specialist at Army Air Fields in Walla Walla, Wash., and Wendover Field, Utah, and also at the Army Air Base, Sioux City, Iowa, before she attended Officer Candidate School. A 1941 graduate of Spelman college in Atlanta she was employed as a teacher by the Henry County Board of Education in McDonough, Ga., before she enlisted in the WAC.

Lieutenant Annie Christine Husbands, daughter of Mrs. Arthalia Connolly, 389 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., enlisted in the Women's Army Corps in March, 1944. After basic training at Fort Des Moines, she was stationed at Midland Army Ai Field, Midland, Texas, where she worked in the personnel processing office. Des Moines, Iowa

Lieutenant Leader Hoskins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hoskins, Fostoria, Texas, enlisted in December 1942. She was stationed at Camp Atterbury, Ind., as a personnel clerk and became the chief administrative clerk in the personnel office there before she returned to Officer Candidate School in Fort Des Moines. She is a graduate of Phyllis Wheatley high school and attended Houston College in Houston, Texas.

Court Acquits Beaten WACs

Peoples Voice

PV ★ Peoples Victory

Army charges against Pfc. Helen Smith, and two other WACS, accused of violating the 93rd article of war, dealing with disorderly conduct while in uniform, were acquitted by an Army courmartial last Saturday, after a tremendous amount of public protest had been registered against the brutal beating of two of the women by a civilian policeman and their subsequent arrest. The Louisville branch of the NAACP which figured prominently in the case, is now preparing to sue the policeman who assaulted the women. 8-4-45

The verdict was given after a closed trial at Ft. Knox. Even before the trial, as general indignation rose over the obvious injustice of the case, charges against the WACS were reduced from violating a state law on segregation and assaulting an officer, to the simpler one of disorderly conduct.

At the trial, Pfc. Smith still bore visible marks of her encounter with the policeman who had beaten her and Pfc. Georgia Boson of Texas with a blackjack over the head and dragged her across the Elizabethton bus station when they objected to being called "nigger wenches." New York

The trouble started while the WACS were waiting for a bus to return to their post and had sat on a bench in the waiting room a little distance from the overcrowded "colored section." Even though Kentucky has no state law providing for segregation in bus and train stations, the policeman came up and threatened to arrest them if they did not move, and then assaulted them.

First Negro Wac Marries On Foreign Soil

Pittsburgh Courier

PARIS (ANP)—Pfc. Ophelia M. Ewings became the first Negro Wac to marry on foreign soil when she married Sgt. Christopher Redmon here on June 12. 9-11-45

The bride, the daughter of Clarence Ewings of Franklin Boro, Conemaugh, Pa., was formerly stationed at Camp Sibert, Ala. She is now attached to the 6888th Postal Directory Battalion here.

The groom hails from Cleveland.

Wacs

Dr. Bethune Pleased With Wac Housing, Service in Hospital

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By MARGARET L. CAUTION

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Warm praise was voiced over the democratic administration of Army general hospitals here by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, after an inspection tour, last week.

Mrs. Bethune made the tour as one of a delegation of four members of the WAC civilian advisory committee of which Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, white, of New York City is chairman.

Dr. Marion Kenworthy, professor of psychiatry at the New York School of Social Work, Columbia University, and Mrs. William F. Sharp of Alexandria, Va., Red Cross prisoner of war service consultant, are the other members of the advisory committee, who made the tour. 8-4-45

Marshall To Get Findings

Their findings at the 31st and 32nd WAC Companies at England General Hospital, will be presented to Gen. George Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

Members of the party were luncheon guests of Col. L. S. Chappell, commander at the hospital where paying guests once made merry in luxury when it was Haddon-Hall Hotel.

Guests included Mrs. Chappell, Adjutant General James Bowers, who represented Governor Edge, Lt. Col. Cora Webb Bass, Second Service Command WAC director; Capt. Juanita Stryker, Capt. Seth N. Baker, public relations officer in charge of the inspection; Lt. Marie Rowley, Army Nurse Corps; and Lts. Ann Hall of Chicago and Georgina Brown of the WAC companies.

Meet Noncoms

In the 31st, which has headquarters in the old Cedarcroft, the inspection party met Supply Sgt. Ora Primo of Beaumont, Tex., First Sgt. Ethel Jennings of Columbus, O., former Wilberforce University student and school teacher.

The Wacs have cheery rooms, with color, attractive furnishings and cleanliness and neatness evident everywhere.

Mrs. Bethune said that she felt that training in such a n environment would inspire some girls who had lived in drab homes with meager facilities to transform their entire communities.

The WAC companies are housed separately.

Major Anna M. Grassmyer, Army Nursing Corps, said that colored girls are making enviable records and cited Cadet Nurse Hattie Green of New York City a outstanding in efficiency at the hospital.

Trainees Rate Higher

Capt. Marie Rowley said that colored trainees had slightly higher rating than white trainees.

While the party was on the way to the physiotherapy section, Pfc. Herman Brown of 2136 Howard St., Baltimore, came out in a wheel chair to shake the hand of Mrs. Bethune, whom he remembered as a national director of NYA training.

Rebuilding Men

Because England General is one of the Army's largest amputation centers, this section proved intriguing to the visitors, who saw men being taught to walk on artificial legs and use arms and muscles blasted and torn in battle or hardened by enforced inactivity.

Everywhere there were white and colored Wacs caring for soldiers without regard for race.

The party took particular notice of Pvt. Elizabeth Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Coleman of 1527 Corcoran St., Washington, D.C., in the service record section.

Cpl. Rose Ferguson of Chicago and Cpl. Dorothy B. Freeman, daughter of Samuel Freeman, retired Washington government employee, are in surgical sections.

Pleased at Technical Jobs

Mrs. Bethune said she was pleased to observe that colored girls were not assigned to menial duties, but were serving as technicians or technical trainees.

She said that the teamwork and naturalness among the races at general hospitals have been the greatest inspiration to her, and she regarded them as important factors in making democracy work.

Court-Martialed Wacs Acquitted

8-11-45

Pittsburgh Courier (Pa.)

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Following acquittal of the three Negro Wacs accused of violating the Ninety-third Article of War for sitting on the "white" side of a bus waiting room in Elizabeth, Ky., the Louisville NAACP announced the possibility of taking specific action against the civilian policeman who brutally beat Pfc. Helen Smith and Pfc. Georgia Boson. Private Smith was beaten over the head with a blackjack and dragged across the bus station floor when the women object to being called "n—— wenches."

J. H. McKinney, president of the Louisville branch NAACP, has secured an affidavit from Private Smith which may form the basis for action against the policeman.

WAC Commander Eludes Questions On Negroes

What'll Happen To Our Wacs Under New Head Is 'A Safeguarded Secret'

New York Amsterdam News

By CONSTANCE H. CURTIS
— Amsterdam News Staff Writer —

WASHINGTON—(Special)—Sometimes the South is clothed in silk, sometimes in khaki.

Col. Westray Battle Boyce, newly appointed head of the Women's Army Corps, adds up to a combination of these two things, as a genteel Southern lady in the uniform of a soldier.

As the first Negro reporter to have the opportunity to interview Col. Boyce, there are many things still not clear which may become more definite in the future. After talking with her, and exchanging more "small talk" than gathering facts, there are still many things not clear. Col. Boyce is a difficulty lady to get around. Practically impossible to be "got".

8-4-45

Setback No. 1 came as the first of several surprises. After meeting the colonel, who is a soft-spoken, quite attractive woman of 43, I settled down to ask her the questions I had submitted prior to my interview. Before I could begin, an aide, who was present during the entire conversation, handed me two neatly typed sheets of paper. On them were note only the questions I had sent, but the carefully worded answers. My interview had been snatched out from under me!

8-4-45 N. Y.

It Hard To Get Something Solid.

I thanked Major Chance (the aide) and looked at the things Col. Boyce had written in answer to my questions. They were the sort of answers it was hard to "get your teeth into", but it wasn't to hard to gather that if there are to be any changes in the policy of the Corps towards its Negro members they won't be great.

As Col. Boyce said in answer to my question concerning the chance for more complete integration of Negroes into the entire corps, "In accordance with War Department policy, the Negro and white WACs are housed separately." There were additional comments, as to the fact that the Department had not policy of segregation "insofar as the jobs are concerned. All women accepted for the Corps," the statement said, "measure up to high physical and mental standards set by the War Department."

I looked up from the paper at the colonel, and decided to jump into talking with her, whether I had typed answers or not—and she was a real lady about it.

In answer to a question as to whether or not she had any personal friends or acquaintances among Negro WACs, she said no. But, the question reminded her of a past experience, with "a New York WAC", whose name slipped her at the moment.

"When I went back to Des Moines", Iowa, she said, "I met this WAC, and though she was from New York her mother was from Petersburg, Virginia, my home. I found that our mothers had known each other. You see, her mother had been a wonderful seamstress, and often her mother had mentioned my mother and aunt—". So the colonel and the other WAC officer had a really lovely talk, since their mothers had been friends.

Another General Answer. N.Y. Mirror

I was careful to put down her story, then went back to the typed interview. There was a question as to whether her office had taken any action on the case of the two WACs who were beaten on July 9 by a civilian policeman in Elizabethtown, Kentucky. The answer didn't say yes or no, it read, "The matter is being handled by the military authorities at Fort Knox."

8-4-45

The chances of Negro women being assigned to duty in the Pacific are questionable, according to Colonel Boyce. "I cannot answer that question directly", she said. ". . . There is a possibility that consideration will be given to sending Negro WACs to the Pacific."

Colonel Compliments All the WAC, Plus Negroes

The record of WACs, including Negro members, came in for compliments from the colonel, who said that she had, ". . . a high regard not only for Negro WACs as soldiers but as individuals who are using this means of expressing their patriotism to our country." There was also a compliment to the work of the postal unit, composed entirely of Negro WAC personnel which is serving in England.

In all, my interview with Colonel Boyce lasted about 15 minutes. I had the written answers, and the impression gained in talking with her that she was well-bred, gracious, and cagey. We were, she, her aide and I, on mental tiptoes, in a lady-like sparring match.

As I was about to leave, I thanked her for having given me generously of her time, and said that although I had been taken a little "off base" by the written answers, I had at least had the opportunity to see . . . and hear her.

Good-Byes And Thanks Minus Answers.

The Colonel knew that I referred to her accent "Yes", she said with a smile. "I noticed that we sounded a great deal alike, you and I. We both have southern accents!" I took the light blow, and answered that I imagined that we had held to a little of the South too, in other ways than speech.

There were more "goodbyes", "thank you's" and the interview was over. How the Negro WAC will fare under Colonel Boyce I still can't say.

Pittsburgh (Pa) Courier

SECOND LIEUTENANTS—The three servicewomen above recently received their bars as second lieutenants at the First WAC Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Iowa. From left to right, they are Lieut. Leader Hoskins, Fostoria, Tex.; Annie Husbands, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Evelyn Seace, McDonough, Ga.—Official U. S. Photo. 8-4-45

Mrs. Bethune Finds WAC Integrated In Hospitals

Atlanta (Ga) Daily World

WASHINGTON—(ANP)— Negro WACs were found to be integrated into the general program of the several army hospitals visited by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune as a member of the National Civilian Advisory committee for the WACs she disclosed upon her return from a tour of installations. 8-3-45

She declared, however, the fact that Negro technicians and physicians were not numbered in the staffs. "This is a serious error," she said. "Negro citizens want to work with others more than they want to work for them." She brought the matter to the attention of the war department and asked for a change.

Mrs. Bethune was particularly impressed by the "real experiment in democracy" at the Dennis hotel in Atlantic City, a redistribution and resort for returned soldiers.

that they will be defended by Lt. W. Robert Ming, base legal officer at Godman Field, under Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

The furor caused by the Army's refusal to take action against the WACs' attackers mounted as Louis Colman, secretary of the ILD, termed the case an "outrage" and wired the following telegram to Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio:

"The facts in the case of Pfc. Helen H. Smith, beaten by a civilian policeman on July 9 at Elizabethtown, Ky., and as a result now facing 96th Article of War charges at Fort Knox, as presented to us, on their face warrant full and immediate investigation by the adjutant general, both as to the brutal treatment accorded to a member of the armed forces and the apparent discriminatory and callous attitude of the commanding officer who cynically refers to violation of a non-existent Kentucky segregation law to excuse his indifference to the assault against a member of his command.

"The charges placed against Pfc. Smith are inexplicable on any theory. It is our understanding trial of Pfc. Smith has been set for this Saturday. Any reflection in this trial of the attitude attributed to the commanding officer would be disastrous to military and civilian morale. We urge you to take every possible step to prevent such an occurrence and for the fullest protection of the rights of Pfc. Smith, including institution of appropriate action against her assailant."

Pfc. Smith was on her way back to Fort Knox from Memphis, said the ILD. The train was late and getting later because of being placed on sidings for troop trains. She decided to get off at some small town, take a bus, and try to get to camp on time inasmuch as she has a good conduct medal and has never been cited for any violation of regulations.

ILD, who said that she had violated a Kentucky state law on separation of the races, and he was not much concerned.

The three WACs will be defended in their court-martial trial by Lt. W. Robert Ming, base legal officer at Godman Field, under Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

Demand Action Against Dixie Cops Who Slugged Wacs

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

8-4-45

NEW YORK — (ANP) — War Department action against the Dixie policemen who slugged three Negro Wacs recently was demanded this week by the International Labor Defense.

The three Negro WACs were beaten in Elizabethtown, Ky., by a civilian policeman because they sat in the "white only" section of the bus station.

The WACs, Pfc. Helen Smith, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Pfc. Georgia Boson, and Pvt. Tommie of Texas, are being held for Army court-martial charged with "disorderly conduct."

It was revealed here this week

She purchased her ticket at the bus station and since the "colored" section was over-crowded she sat down on what she describes as the "nearest bench to the colored section." Several other colored WACs joined her there, and eventually a civilian policeman appeared, cursing and calling them "niggers," and telling them they would have to move because that section was for white people. He said they would be arrested if they did not move. 8-4-45

Pfc. Smith told him that if they were going to be arrested he should call an MP, whereupon he is alleged to have replied that he did not need any MP to tell him how to handle "nigger wenches." At that point one of the other WACs finally rebelled and said they had heard enough about "nigger," and they would not stand for any more. He then took out his black-jack and started beating the WAC over the head.

When Smith tried to intervene she was hit over the skull, in the jaw, and both eyes blackened.

The final insult was the indifference of her commander, said the 56n-1945

Wacs

4 Negro WACs Get Year For Defying Orders

PM 3-21-45

NAACP Asks War Dept. for Action Against Commander

3-21-45

By J. S. QUALEY

Staff Correspondent

FORT DEVENS, Mass., Mar. 21.—Four Negro WACs working as orderlies at Lovell General Hospital were found guilty in a general court-martial at Fort Devens late yesterday of refusing to return to duty after a direct command. The court-martial panel was out only 20 minutes. Each was sentenced to a year at hard labor and dishonorably discharged. The sentences are subject to review by the commanding general of the First Service command.

In the windup of the two-day trial, three of the defendants testified that Col. Walter H. Crandall of Maine, commander of the hospital, had told them on Aug. 9, that he "didn't want any black WACs" in a Fort Devens truck pool. The remark came, the defendants said, after one of them had requested a transfer from her orderly job to the truck pool because she was forced to perform menial duties not alloted to white WACs.

Technician

3-21-45

The four WACs were convicted by a panel of nine officers, including two women and two Negroes. The charge said that they had defied a direct order personally made by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, of the First Service Command, on Mar. 10 after 54 WACs had refused to work because they said they were being discriminated against in type of work and opportunity for training.

One of the defendants, Pvt. Alice Young, said a "colonel" had found her showing another WAC, under orders, how to take temperatures. The colonel had asked, she said, what she was doing and her superior had informed him that she was a medical technician and was teaching another girl to take temperatures.

Pvt. Young quoted the colonel as saying: "I don't want any black WACs as medical technicians around this hospital. I want them to scrub and do the dirty work." Pvt. Young said she had thought she was a technician because she had been so informed by superiors.

The other defendants testified that they were given jobs as hospital orderlies at Lovell while white WACs were not.

Colonel on Leave

3-21-45

Lt. Tenola T. Stoney, herself a Negro and commander of the Negro WACs, testified, however, that she had seen white WACs at Lovell doing the same type of work as Negro WACs.

Lt. Stoney also said that she had heard Col. Crandall say that on Mar. 9 Negro WACs were not wanted in the motor pool, but she said the colonel attributed the remark to Capt. Barney Stewart.

Col. Crandall was reported by the post public relations office to be on a 30-day leave. Earlier, headquarters of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in New York informed PM that the association had asked Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to take action against Crandall.

Defendants on the stand yesterday were Pvt. Young, former Treasury Dept. adding machine operator at Washington; Pvt. Mary E. Green, Houston, Tex., and Pvt. Johnnie Murphy, Pittsburgh. The fourth defendant, Pvt. Anna C. Morrison, Richmond, Ky., testified during the first day of the court martial.

In addition to Lt. Stoney, Lt. Virginia Lawson, Tulsa, Okla., commander of all the WACs at the hospital, Negro and white, also took the stand.

All defendants testified that the Negro WACs were assigned different duties than their white sisters. Pvt. Young broke into sobs and a recess was called toward the end of the morning. The defendants all showed tension and it was difficult to catch their testimony, because of low, choked voices.

Replaced Orderlies

3-21-45

Lt. Lawson brought out that the Negro company had been brought to Fort Devens Lovell Hospital to replace an earlier contingent of white WACs working as orderlies.

Of the 178 white WACs now at Lovell, Lt. Lawson said only 15 were classified as orderlies, while 60 of the 99 Negro WACs were so classified. The orderly jobs consist of cleaning, fetching, dusting, etc., in hospital wards and kitchens. Lt. Lawson also said the white company classed 16 of its members as medical technicians and that 70 were listed as clerks. There were no Negro technicians, she explained, and six Negro clerks, and these were only used for work on the Negro company's affairs and not in the hospital proper.

She said that WACs, Negro or white, were hospitalized in the same wards and that white WACs had waited on ill Negro WACs.

The general court-martial allowed the trial to run along broad lines and there was no attempt to confine the questioning to the narrow terms of the cases. Julian D. Rainey of Boston, attorney for the defendants, was allowed to reach back in an effort to bring out extenuating circumstances. The panel of officers obviously was attempting to discover what was behind the hospital disturbance.

Praises Miles

3-21-45

Julian Steele, head of the Boston unit of the NAACP, who was present at the court-martial, praised the efforts of Gen. Miles to obtain justice for the four girls. Steele disclosed that two other WACs charged after the disturbance on Mar. 10 with refusing to return to duty, were absolved of charges when Miles was convinced that they did not understand the seriousness of not returning to duty after a direct order.

Rainey argued that two of the defendants, Pvts. Morrison and Murphy, were not guilty of violating any order and that Pvts. Green and Young simply did not know what they were doing, because they were confused over real and fancied racial discrimination.

Rainey thanked the general court-martial for its "liberality and attitude of fairness," and implied the entire trouble sprang out of the Army's general policy on Negroes.

Release of Four WACs Called Straw in Wind

P.M. 4-4-45

Liberals See New Era of Justice in Army and Navy

By J. S. QUALEY

The Army's quashing of the sentences of four Negro WACs, convicted at Fort Devens, Mass., of refusing to obey a direct order to return to work, is regarded by progressives and Negro leaders as further indication that the Army and the Navy are beginning to realize that all is not well with their policy on Negro service men and women.

Coming only one day after the Navy reversed itself and gave 14 Negro Seabees discharges "under honorable conditions" after earlier having ordered dishonorable discharges, it is regarded as particularly significant by liberal leaders. In recent months other similar incidents have indicated that the military is making a stronger effort to see that justice is done to Negroes in the services.

The four Fort Devens WACs were back at work in Lovell General Hospital today at their old duties, Lt. Col. Walter Brown, public relations officer for the First Service Command, told PM.

Indignation

4-4-45

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, chief of the First Service Command, yesterday voided the girls' court-martial sentence which would have interned them for a year and expelled them from the Army with dishonorable discharges. The action came after Miles conferred with the Army's Judge Advocate General at Washington.

The Fort Devens episode stirred widespread indignation. It was agreed generally that the four WACs had received a fair trial and that they were guilty of disobeying a direct order. But it was also felt that the matter went deeper and that the general attitude of the Army toward Negroes was basically at fault. 4-4-45

The National Assn. for Advancement of Colored People and the National Council of Negro Women demanded an immediate investigation, as did New York City's U. S. Reps. Emanuel Celler (D.), Vito Marcantonio (ALP) and Adam Clayton Powell (D.).

A leader in the protest was Dr. Mary MacLeod Bethune, president of the National Council and also the only Negro member of the National Advisory Committee of the WACs.

Watchfulness Pays

On learning of yesterday's decision, Dr. Bethune told PM that "the outcome of the Fort Devens case has greatly stimulated the morale of our people all over the country, particularly of the women in the armed forces."

"We feel," she went on "that the action shows a decided trend toward more definite attempts to correct unbalances which have been going on in the service in regard to Negro men and women."

The Negro woman leader said, however, that her organization still was concerned as to why Col. Walter H. Crandall, commandant of Lovell Hospital, at which the WACs worked. talked as he did to the Negro WACs. She said the War Dept. has been asked to inquire into the attitude and fitness of Crandall. 4-4-45

Dr. Mary Bethune

At the trial it was brought out that Crandall had told the WACs that he wanted no "black" WACs in his hospital's motor pool or assisting as medical technicians. Crandall has been on leave since shortly after the trouble at Lovell. Col. Brown at Boston said that, as far as he knew, Crandall's status at Fort Devens was unchanged.

Rep. Celler, who was active in the campaign to obtain justice for the WACs, said the Army's action proved that it is always worthwhile to be watchful and to protest loudly when intolerance, ineptitude, and bungling appears in high places.

Celler said he thought the reversal of the Negro girls' sentences indicated that the Army and the Navy were "becoming alive to the fact that the public always will react against injustice."

The four WACs were convicted of violating the 64th Article of War following a personal order by Gen. Miles on Mar. 10 to return to work after 54 WACs at Lovell had struck because, they contended, they were discriminated against and forced to do "dirty work" not required of white WACs at the hospital.

Mrs. Bethune, Powell To Fight Convictions

The Kansas City Call Mo. 4-30-45

Public in Sympathy With Girls Although They Were Wrong in Defying Army Orders

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — While admitting disobedience of orders while in the Army is technically wrong, public sympathy is wholly on the side of the four Negro WACs at Fort Devens, Mass., who have become martyrs in the fight against discrimination in the armed forces of the United States.

Because of the courage of these four girls in defying threats even of death for the sake of democratic principles, their fight is being taken up by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women; Reps. Adam Powell and Vito Marcantonio of New York, and the N.A.A.C.P. Appeals have been sent to President Roosevelt and to Secretary of War Stimson in their behalf.

Refused Dirty Work

3-30-45

The dramatic circumstances surrounding the "sit down" strike for which these four WACs were convicted have not been told in the daily press.

According to the story told to Mrs. Bethune by Julian Rainey, civilian attorney for the WACs at the courtmartial, 100 WACs refused to perform further the "dirty work" assigned exclusively to Negro members of the corps at Lovell General hospital.

Maj. General Sherman Miles of the First Service Command read the 64th Article of War—the bible of conduct for all members of the armed forces—to the 100 WACs. After the first reading, two more returned. The four girls who were courtmartialed sat stone-faced. They said they preferred death to slavery and discrimination in the army of their own country. (Shades of Patrick Henry.)

One From Texas

The four convicted WACs are Pvt. Anna C. Morrison of Richmond, Ky.; Pvt. Johnnie Murphy of Rankin, Pa.; Pvt. Mary Green of Monroe, Texas; and Pvt. Alice D. Young of Washington, D. C.

The court was comprised of two Negro captains, two white WACs, and five white officers.

Mrs. Bethune, in a letter to Secretary Stimson said "We do not attempt to prejudge the case, but the issues involved are so serious and the implications so broad that we beseech you to make your own personal investigation before confirming or permitting the sentence of courtmartial to be carried into effect." Mrs. Bethune is a member of the national advisory committee of the WACs.

Powell and Marcantonio jointly signed a letter to Stimson urging immediate investigation of the conviction, and requested a complete copy of the trial proceedings.

3-30-45

The two New York congressmen called for a complete investigation. They are asking other congressmen and the public to demand the War department look into the matter immediately.

Situation Unbelievable

"It is unbelievable that in times like these," the Congressmen said, "when the nursing shortage is so critical that the colonel in charge of the Lovell General hospital refused to let these WACs assist in nursing back to health American soldiers by forbidding them to take temperatures and ordering them to do 'all the dirty work.' In view of these circumstances, we ask for an investigation of Colonel Walter H. Crandall, the commanding officer."

Morris Milgram, national secretary of the Workers Defense League sent a message to President Roosevelt on the case. "We face a world race war," he said, "just because the jimcrow practices of the armed services prevent colored peoples the world over from believing it is possible that the United States will work with them on a basis of full equality." He said the four WACs, by refusing to accept Army discriminatory practices, are real patriots, for they acted in the best interests of their country and of the world.

3-30-45

Milgram told Roosevelt that the WACs, who were courtmartialed and sentenced for their act deserve full pardons and reinstatement, "but that was no solution to the problem, which needs a purge of racism from the armed services, and enforcement of the anti-discrimination section of the Selective Service Act."

Negro Wacs From State In First Overseas Unit

Birmingham News

Twenty-four Alabamians were in the first contingent of Negro Wacs to arrive overseas when 738 members of a unit RT-510, accompanied by Capt. Abbey Campbell, Tuskegee, as executive officer, arrived in England, according to a War Department announcement made this week.

2-21-45

The Wacs, commanded by Maj. Charity Adams, Columbia, S. C., arrived in Great Britain on Feb. 2. They are from 40 of the United States.

Members of the unit from Birmingham are Pfc. Willie Mae House, 1217 First Avenue, West; T-5 Christel Stocks, 313 Southwest First Street; Pfc. Dorothy Elizabeth Brown, 511 North First Street; Pvt. Mary Louise Walthall, 1812 South Center Street; Pvt. Eva Edwards, 2022 10th Way, Ensley; Pvt. Minnie Bell Quarles, 103 Eighth Avenue, West, and Pvt. Elecia LaVon Johnson, Route 2, Bessemer.

Fourteen other Alabamians in the unit are Pfc. Elizabeth Mary Davis, Pvt. Irene Robinson Green, Pvt. Willie Lee Coleman, T-4 Macelen Lettie Fairgood, Pvt. Delores Hall Smith, all of Mobile.

2-21-45

T-5 Jeanette Lucile Moorehead, Florence; Pvt. Lillian Irma Battle, Tuskegee; T-4 Addie Campbell, Dixiana; Pvt. Ophelia D. Thomas, Alexander City; Pfc. Susie Irma Middlebrook, Montevallo; Pfc. Tessie Mae Seymour, Decatur; Pfc. Margaret Lydia Young, Selma; Pfc. Irene Steele, Prairie; Pvt. Izona Brown, Muskogee; T-5 Mary Frances Smith, Montgomery, and Pfc. Mary Rose Munice, Montgomery.

Atlanta World Ga. 3-9-45

COMMANDS FIRST NEGRO UNIT— Major Charity E. Adams, Columbia South Carolina is commanding officer of the first contingent of Negro members of the Women's Army Corps assigned to overseas service. They are now in England preparing to go to the Continent where they handle the Army postal directory service for the entire European Theatre of Operations. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo from Bureau of Public Relations.)

ASSIGNED TO TAAF

Philadelphia Tribune

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—CAPT. MARY L. LEWIS, of Philadelphia, Pa., recently was assigned to Tuskegee Army Air Field from Lincoln AAF, Nebraska. Receiving her commission at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, in August 1942, Lt. Lewis served there for 30 months before going to Lincoln where she commanded a WAC detachment for two months. She has a Bachelor of Science degree from Tuskegee Institute and is the second WAC to be assigned to TAAF.

11-7-45

NEGRO WACS IN PROTEST

New York Times

But End 'Strike' at Fort Devens After Five Are Disciplined

3-12-45

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

FORT DEVENS, Mass., March 11—The Negro Wac medical company stationed at Lovell General Hospital at this post refused to report for duty yesterday and five members disciplined, others returned to duty, it was announced today. The five were restricted to their quarters.

The Negro Wacs, in a protest Friday, charged discrimination and demanded that they receive the same treatment as white Wacs. Ninety-six joined in the protest. One complaint was that college-trained women, enlisted as medical technicians, were being assigned to scrubbing floors and windows.

May Sue Kentucky Policemen

Were Held for Sitting on White Side of Station

The Call

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The three WACs who were brutally beaten by city police of Elizabethtown, Ky., for sitting in the "white waiting room" of a bus station were found not guilty of disorderly conduct charges at a court martial here Saturday.

The three are: Pfc. Helen Smith of Syracuse, N. Y., Pfc. Tommie D. Smith of Lexington, Ky., and Pfc. Georgia Dosen of Dallas, Texas.

The girls were defended by Lt. W. Robert Ming, post legal officer at Godman Field which adjoins Ft. Knox where the WACs are stationed.

8-10-45

The three WACs went to trial still bearing the marks of the unmerciful beating given them by the civilian policeman.

Kansas City MO

Didn't Move Fast

The girls were charged with violating the 93rd article of War dealing with disorderly conduct.

The only defense reported as failure to "move fast enough" when ordered out of the white waiting room. They sought to explain that the "colored waiting room" was crowded with men and the lights in there were out. One witness reported that a policeman began beating the girls in uniform with his nightstick and yelling, "when we tell n——— to move we mean for them to git." During the melee, another white officer arrived and assisted in dragging one of the WACs to jail.

With the military charge dropped, the WACs are considering filing a civil suit against the policeman who beat them.

J. H. McKinney, president of the Louisville branch N.A.A.C.P., has secured an affidavit from Pfc. Smith which may form the basis for action against the policeman.

McKinney says that Elizabethtown is a hot bed of prejudice; that the Negroes there are intimidated and the situation is difficult, but that his branch plans to press the case to the limit.

Pfc. Smith was on her way back to Ft. Knox from Memphis when the incident occurred. Because the train was late and getting later because of being placed on sidings for troop trains, Pfc. Smith decided to get off at Elizabethtown, take a bus and try to get to camp on time in as much as she had never been cited for any violation or regulations and held a good conduct medal.

Called Them Na[illegible]

After purchasing her ticket at the bus station and finding the "colored" section overcrowded because that section was for white people only. She sat down on the "nearest" section. He threatened to arrest if they did not move. According to her explanation, it was not long before several other colored WACs joined her and eventually a civilian policeman appeared cursing and calling them "nigger wenches." At this point Pfc. Georgia Boson of Texas and said they had to move and "niggers" and heard enough about not stand for more. Pfc. The civilian policeman then whereupon he should call an took out his blackjack and started to the civilian po-ed beating the WAC over the head. When she attempted to intervene, Pfc. Smith was dragged across the bus station floor by the policeman who twisted her elbow and skinned her ankle. Before it was found that Kentucky has no provision for segregation.

56h-1945

Wacs

Fruits Of Jim Crow

Pittsburgh Courier

While The Pittsburgh Courier never condones disobedience of military orders, we cannot help but feel that there was some justification, however slight, for the action of the four Negro Wacs at Fort Devens, Mass., recently sentenced to a year's hard labor and dishonorable discharge for refusing to do what they were told to do.

Pittsburgh Pa. 3-31-45

They rightfully protested against the Army's jim-crow system, which relegated them to menial tasks while white girls in the same service were not required to perform similar duties.

They should have obeyed the orders given them, but all Americans can understand why, in their state of mind, they refused.

Like hundreds of thousands of other colored Americans in the Armed Services, they were prepared to do their bit for ultimate victory, but they saw no reason why they should be subjected to discrimination because of their color in the fulfillment of that duty.

It is all very well for some people to condemn these four Negro girls, but we feel that the Army should be equally condemned for compelling its colored members to serve at a disadvantage in a war professedly being fought to establish the principles of equality, justice and fair play.

3-31-45

Servicemen and women should obey orders, but it is a violation of the letter and spirit of service regulations, to say nothing of the Federal Constitution, for the Army and Navy to practice at home racial bias similar to that against which we are fighting abroad.

Negro Wacs at Ft. Devens

Richmond Times

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

American citizens as well as fighting men have been watching with much interest the trial of the four Negro Wacs at Fort Devens, Mass., that has terminated with sentences of one year confinement at hard labor and a dishonorable discharge for each of the defendants.

4-27-45

The writer does not disagree with the court in regard to whether the girls are guilty of disobeying an order of a superior officer, for if they were given a direct order and refused to obey it, then they are guilty of disobeying that order. But I am concerned with the reasons for disobeying that order.

Va.

The evidence revealed that these girls did have cause for refusing to return to work. Readers may say that they should have made complaints to higher authorities "through channels." If this country had no discrimination or segregation because of color in its armed forces, I would agree, but we do have such practices. Why would these girls make complaints that they know will be ignored?

The Wac commander, in her testimony, gave facts and figures that were proof of discriminatory practices. With only 99 Negro Wacs in the detachment, they were made to do 60 per cent of the dirty work as hospital orderlies; not any serve as medical technicians and on clerical jobs only 6 per cent are Negroes. Besides being denied these privileges their "superior" officer is quoted as saying that he didn't want black Wacs working in the motor pool or as medical technicians, and that they were there to "mop walls, scrub floors, and to do all the dirty work around the hospital." Any officer who would insult his soldiers in such a manner would not, I am sure, listen to complaints made by a group he is prejudiced against himself. There is no place for officers in our armed forces who are so narrow-minded and thoughtless that they would not respect the rights of soldiers serving under them.

As a fellow soldier, I voice the sentiment of many others when I offer a salute to these courageous girls for their fight for democracy in our army. Many of their race have just volunteered for combat service in Europe; many will die there and are dying on battlefields all over the world so that people of other countries and races can enjoy the rights that their people are denied here in the only country they know and love. To be given a dishonorable discharge from the service of this country you have enlisted to serve of your own free will is a bitter pill to swallow, but what good would an honorable one be when you are denied the right to use it?

RICHARD T. WAYMER.
Camp Lee.

Negro Wacs

Washington Post-D.C.

In voiding the court-martial conviction of four Wacs at Fort Devens, Mass., for refusal to obey a direct command, Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, chief of the First Service Command, tempered justice, we think, with reason as well as with mercy. It happened that the four Wacs were Negroes. And their insubordination was directly related to this fact. They felt, and with some justification, that they had been made victims of racial discrimination. They had been assigned to menial work as hospital orderlies. A colonel, one of them testified, had refused to let them perform more advanced duties to which white Wacs were assigned because "I don't want any black Wacs as medical technicians in this hospital. I want them to scrub and do the dirty work." When, along with 50 other colored girls, they refused to carry on their duties, General Miles personally ordered them back to their jobs. It was for refusal to obey this order that the four girls brought before the court-martial were sentenced to a year at hard labor and dishonorable discharge from the Army.

4-12-45

Insubordination is, of course, a very serious offense in the Army. But the tradition of unquestioning obedience has not yet been developed among our women soldiers. And the disobedience in this instance stemmed from considerations involving the essential self-respect and human dignity of the four girls concerned. It seems to us, therefore, that they deserve the leniency which General Miles accorded them. Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, and the only Negro member of the National Advisory Committee of the Wacs, declared that "the outcome of the Fort Devens case has greatly stimulated the morale of our people all over the country, particularly of the women in the armed forces." We hope that this is so. Morale would be further strengthened, we have no doubt, by a thorough investigation of the charges made against the colonel in command of the hospital at which the four Wacs served. There is no room for racial discrimination among the men and women who wear the uniform of the United States.

DEVENS WACS STAGE SITDOWN

Chicago Defender

3-24-45 Ill.

By EUGENE C. ZACK
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—Charging racial discrimination, 100 Negro WACs at this post staged a brief sit-down strike Saturday.

As the result of the strike at Lovell General hospital, brought about when college-trained Negro WACs who had enlisted as medical technicians had been forced to scrub floors and wash windows, disciplinary action has been taken against five members of the company.

3-24-45

Lieut.-Col. Walter A. Brown, chief of public relations for the First Service Command, made the following official statement concerning the brief strike:

"The Negro WAC medical company stationed at Lovell General hospital refused to report for duty Saturday. Disciplinary action was taken against five members of the company, after which the balance returned to duty."

But behind this clipped statement, lay a demand by WACs that they be given treatment equal to that accorded white members of the WAC.

3-24-45

The disciplinary action took the form of pending court-martial against two WACs, and confinement to quarters for the remaining three.

First Negro Wac from Boston welcomed home by mayor

BOSTON Cal. Capt. Mildred Davenport-Carter, the first Negro girl to enlist in the Wacs from this city, was welcomed home by Mayor Kerrigan at City hall last week after serving in France for a year. She formerly worked in the city's welfare department.

WACs Enjoy Party In Rouen, France

Chicago Defender

4-11-45

PARIS, France—Members of the only colored Wacs Detachment serving overseas arrived in France recently to take up the job of assorting the huge stacks of mail that has piled up here in the last 11 months.

Chicago, Ill.

The 6888th Postal (Central) Directory Detachment is composed of more than 800 enlisted Wacs and 31 officers. They are stationed at Rouen, one of the leading port cities. A party was given last week in honor of the enlisted personnel by the members of the 89th QM. Bn. Mobile, stationed in Paris.

Court-Martialed At Fort Devens

CONROE GIRL PROUD OF BEING IN THE WAC

Pittsburgh Courier

4-7-45

Pittsburgh, Pa.

By O. J. CANSLER

CONROE, Texas—Mary Amerson Green, one of four Negro Wacs recently court-martialed in Fort Devens, Mass., was born in Tamina Community, just ten miles southwest of Conroe, in December, 1928. She is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Amerson, and spent most of her formative years in the same community. Her elementary and high school work was done in the Booker T. Washington High School. She left school in her senior year and married—which probably explains her entrance into the Wacs at such a tender age.

In an interview with her principal, T. W. Humphrey, it was emphatically brought out that at no time did Mary show indication of insubordination. She was quiet, soft spoken and genteel and at no time during her entire school years was her conduct ever below 90.

Following an unsuccessful marriage, she entered the Wacs in June, 1943, and wrote glowing letters back about how she was trying to carry out the principals of democracy. She referred often to the promotions of her brother, Cornelius Leon, was receiving and promised her parents that she, too, would get something out of the Army and make her friends proud of her. She was proud to be a Wac!

The parents of Mary were contacted by the press and both of them talked freely, though often tears went unheeded in the mother's eyes. Mrs. Amerson, youthful and alert mentally, spoke freely and sanely about the matter. She said that if Mary had wantonly broken Army regulations that she would want her punished, but somehow, something kept telling her that her child had not strayed too far from the obedient docile youngster she was—one who wanted life and wanted to serve others while seeing life at its most exciting angle.

The Rev. Mr. Amerson was a bit more vehement in his statement. He lamented the misfortune that had befallen them, but who would stand up for a principle if death itself was the proudest parent proud.

that he would admire anybody from the Navy Department as it would make any that had befallen them, but had trouble rather Mary aftermath. The Amerson couple have one son in the Navy stationed at San Francisco, who has high rating of steward first class. The writer was invited to get that boy's record

ATLANTA WORLD — Ga. 4-18-45

SWITCHBOARD OPERATOR — Pfc. Vernese C. Hayes, Weldon, N. C., is one of the three switchboard operators at the Headquarters of the first battalion of Negro WACs to serve overseas. The battalion processes 80,000 letters, parcels, telegrams and flat envelopes daily at the Postal Directory of the U.S. Army First Base Postoffice in England. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo from Bureau of Public relations).

WAC Band Third in Record Contest

3-24-45

AFRI-AMERICAN

FORT DES MOINES, Iowa—In a national contest recently for recorded music made by Army personnel, the 404th ASF Band Chorus of the Women's Army Corps from Fort Des Moines won third place in the group singing category. Baltimore, Md.

It sang Fred Waring's arrangement of "Let My People Go."

After preliminary contests in the nine service commands, the winning recorded selections were forwarded to the Special Services Division, New York City, where judges selected the winners.

Philadelphian Soloist

Soloist was Cpl. Romaine A. Simmons of 240 N. Fifty-seventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa., formerly a member of the Drury Opera Company of Philadelphia.

Recordings selected by the judges will be included on a future release of V-discs for the entertainment of service men overseas.

No Jim Crow At WAC Post

Chicago Defender

I would like this short paragraph to enter the column for the good of our girls who would join the WACS if they weren't persuaded that they would meet with foul play:

4-21-45

To my friends who thought Georgia was going to give us colored girls a hard way to go, I am speaking for 100 colored basic trainees who are to become Medical Technicians. We have the best, considerate officers. We have met with no discrimination on the post whatsoever of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. —Pvt. Wilma Long, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. Chicago, Ill.

WAC Band Wins Recording Contest

Iowa Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa
3-22-45

Fort Des Moines, Iowa—In a national contest recently, for recorded music made by army personnel, the 404th ASF Band Chorus of the Women's Army Corps from Fort Des Moines won third place in the Group Singing category. It sang Fred Waring's arrangement of "Let My People Go." 3-22-45

After preliminary contests in the nine service commands, the winning recorded selections were forwarded to the Special Services Division, New York City, where judges select the winners. Two of the nine judges were Deems Taylor and Benny Goodman.

Soloist was Cpl. Romaine A. Simmons of 240 North 57th street, Philadelphia, Penn., formerly a member of the Drury Opera Company of Philadelphia. 3-22-45

Recordings selected by the judges will be included on a future release of V-Discs for the entertainment of servicemen overseas.

The contest was initiated by Special Service Division of the Army to promote interest in soldier participation of music organization, via competition.

The band is composed entirely of colored women.

21 Wacs Sent to Camp Knight

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

OAKLAND, Calif. — A contingent of 21 Wacs started clerical work in the cargo and engineering branches of the overseas supply division, this week, at Camp John T. Knight. 8-11-45

Eighty-four more are expected to arrive from Camp Maxie, Tex.

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
1-23-45

PROMOTED — First Lieutenant Katherine Jackson Hunter just about the nicest New Year's surprise anyone could receive came in a small package to Lt. Katherine J. Hunter, on January 3, when she was notified of her promotion from second lieutenant to first lieutenant in the Woman's Army Corp.

Lt. Hunter is the daughter of Mrs. Edward H. Jackson of Tougaloo. She entered the service in 1942 as a private later to become the first commissioned Negro Wac Officer from Mississippi.

A few days prior to Christmas, Lt. Hunter was the guest of her father and brother, Mr. Leroy N. Jackson, manager of the Alamo and Booker T. Theatres. Lt. Hunter is stationed at Camp Sibert, Alabama.

Negro WACs Overseas Praised By General

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.

FORT DES MOINES, Ia.—(ANP) —Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, deputy commander and chief of army service forces in the European Theater of Operations under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, paid tribute to the work of the Negro members of the Women's Army corps this week in a speech at the First WAC Training center.

Stopping at Des Moines to visit his 86-year-old aunt, the general reviewed a parade at the center. The 404th ASF band, the only WAC Negro band in the country, played for the event. 9-22-45

"No WAC in the ETO asked a GI to do her work," the general said. "The challenge was gloriously met by our women of the armed forces and their work has been perfectly splendid. Every position held was fully held. I saw many WAC detachments including the Negro battalion and they all set a fine standard of American womanhood of which every soldier is proud." 9-22-45

Inspecting companies from the overseas replacement depot whose departure for the Pacific was recently cancelled with a directive stating that there would be no more overseas shipments of WACs, the general expressed regret that the women could not be sent over as replacements for high point WACs now on duty in the ETO. He also said that he would like to see the Women's Army corps continued as a permanent part of the regular army.

1st Negro WAC Weds Sergeant Overseas

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois 9-22-45

ROUEN, France—(ANP) — Lt. Vashti B. Tenkins last week became the first WAC officer to wed overseas.

She was married to S-Sgt. Elwood Willis in a simple ceremony here which was attended by her fellow WAC officers. Battalion commander, Maj. Charity E. Adams, gave the bride away while S-Sgt. Robert Woods was best man. 9-22-45

The bride is a native of Ashland, Va., and a graduate of Hampton institute, but did graduate work in Chicago. She has served with the armed forces for three years, and prior to that time she was an instructor of high school English in Virginia.

Sgt. Willis, son of Mrs. Phoebe Willis of Philadelphia, is also a Hampton product. A resident of Chicago, he had been engaged to Lt. Tenkins for about 18 months. They met in Marseilles for the first time in three years.

Letter From A Jamaican Woman Serving in the Armed Forces

Public Opinion 5-21-45

Miss Alma Labadie Writes About Coloured American WACS. Who Received Tremendous Welcome By The British In The Midlands.

Somewhere in the Midlands the coloured American Women's Army Corp are stationed to take care of the postal services of the United States Troops in the European Theater of war. 5-21-45

On arrival at the Camp I was taken to meet Captain Carter who is their Special Service Officer and is responsible for their welfare both on and after duty hours. She is most determined that they should get the maximum of pleasure in their leisure hours and is determined in her efforts to secure for the WACS a balanced programme of healthy recreation, including visits to cultural and educational centres in the U.K. Captain Carter received me most graciously and was very pleased to know that I had come to the Midlands especially to visit the Station. She immediately took charge of me and made arrangements for my comfort during the remainder of the visit. Before joining the services Captain Carter was a famous dancer who as Mildred Davenport danced in many of the larger cities of the United States of America. 5-21-45

I had the honour of meeting the Cammanding Officer, Major Charity Adams who formerly taught mathematics in a College in South Carolina. She speaks with a gentle voice and has the ability to make one feel instantly at ease in her pres nce. She gave me the opportunity of meeting her officers, non-commissioned and other personnel, and later on invited me to a meal in the officers mess. The food was excellent and prepared under the expert supervision of Messing Lt. Sherrard. 5-21-45

The WACS are thoroughly enjoying themselves and are taking advantage of all the educational facilities this section of the country offers. They have been invited to a number of private homes and have received a number of official and civic welcomes. They undoubtedly represent a type of normal, healthy and intelligent American womanhood upon which the progress of any race depends.

The British people are very impressed with their smart appearance — Their uniforms are perfectly tailored, their hands are beautifully kept not a hair out of place. Their Unit is equipped with a modern and up to date beauty parlour capable of taking care of their needs. 5-21-45

They shewed an intelligent curiosity into the activities of coloured women in the West Indies, and I have promised them a lecture shortly. On discussion with various members of this Unit, I found that many of them were trained in civilian life to do more than one job, so that when work was scarce in one trade they could very easily fill another. Many of them also did a great deal to improve themselves in spare time, and also a great deal of social welfare work. They are very anxious that coloured beauty treatment and cosmetics should be available to all coloured peoples. A great many of them are accomplished musicians, and have already taken parts in a show at Birmingham.

They have an enormous recreation room, and I discovered with a lot of pleasure that there were a great many Jamaican members of the Royal Air Force visiting them We were all very well received and were very grateful for this opportunity of receiving American hospitality about which we had heard so much in the past. They have the ability of making you feel that they are so happy to have you with them. 5-21-45

In the enclosed photograph of International Women's day in Birmingham, representing, England, Russia, Norway France, Czechoslovakia and America — The girl (coloured) in uniform at the end is representing the United States. She is extremely smart and a Senior N.C.O. that any country could be proud of.

There are approximately 200 or more coloured wemen officers in the United States Army, and there are at least 2 Majors. This is a record of which coloured peoples all over the world can be very proud of. In addition Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis is the only coloured General in the world, and has recently been given one of America's highest Military awards.

The Wacs were met on arrival here by Brigadier General Davies. I also learnt that coloured Americans have their own Captain in U.S.A. Navy and coloured W.A.V.E.S. — equivalent of the British public relations Officer, Lieutenant Margaret Barnes for giving you this bit of news about our coloured friends over here. Lt. Barnes was a journalist and did a great deal of social service work prior to joining the Army; she is extremely smart in appearance and a brilliant conversationalist. 5-21-45

Coloured people in the United States form approximately a tenth of the population and is undoubtly the largest of the minority Groups in that country.

The responsible positions given to coloured Americans in this present war is a tribute to the determination of the American Negro to create for themselves their rightful place among other nations. 5-21-45

After my visit with these fine women, I am confident that there is nothing that people of colour cannot achieve once they are determined to stick together as a Group. Making the most of business hours, and a greater use of leisure hours in the service of our less fortunate people.

Major Adams And Her Wacs Arrive In Paris, France

Atlanta Daily World 6-13-45

BY FRANK D. GODDEN
Associated Negro Press Foreign Correspondent

ROVEN France—(ANP) — Maj. Charity Adams and her unit of WACs arrived here recently and are now redirecting the mail for soldiers who have returned to the states since V-E Day.

The Negro WACs, numbering 31 officers and 800 enlistees, make up the 6888th Central Postal directory and are the first colored members of America's Women Army corps to be seen here.

Maj. Adams, a former Columbia, S. C. mathematics teacher, and her outfit were welcomed by several of the army units here. Pfc. Geraldine Beaumont of Chicago met her husband, 1st Sgt. Paul Beaumont, here.

Stricken by excitement, all they could say was: 'Oh'!

FIVE WAC OFFICERS PROMOTED IN FRANCE

Pittsburgh Courier 11-10-45

ROUEN, France — Five second lieutenants of the 6888th Central Postal Directory, the only contingent of Negro WACs serving overseas, were recently promoted to the rank of second lieutenant. PW.

Those elevated were: First lieutenants, Hazel E. Craddock, Des Moines, Iowa; Gussye D. Stewart, Chicago, Ill.; Vivian N. Elzie, Chrisfield, Pa.; Julia A. Rich, Media, Pa., and Bertie M. Edwards of Danville, Va.

These officers were the second to receive promotions since their arrival overseas.

831 Wac's in France

Afro-American

ROVEN, France (ANP)—Maj. Charity Adams and her unit of WAC's arrived here recently and are now redirecting the mail for soldiers who have returned to the states since V-E day. 6-23-45

The WACs, numbering 31 officers and 800 enlistees, make up the 6888th Central Postal directory and are the first colored members of American's Women Army corps to be seen here.

Maj. Adams, a former Columbia, S.C., mathematics teacher, and her outfit were welcomed by several of the army units here. Pfc. Geraldine Beaumont of Chicago met her husband, 1st Sgt. Paul Beaumont, here. 6-23-45

Stewart Visits Afro-American Wacs in France

Baltimore, Md.

276 Get Good Conduct Medals at Ceremony

6-30-45

PRISONERS WATCH

20 Get Paris Pass Weekly; Few Homesick

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent

ROUEN, France — Good Conduct Medals were presented 276 members of the 6888th WAC Postal Unit in a formal battalion ceremony here Friday by commanding officer, Maj. Charity Adams, of Columbia, S.C.

The first medal was pinned on S/Sgt. Fannie Little of Palatka, Fla., after which the others were handed medals by the major who lated congratulated the entire group.

Among the recipients were: Pfc. Vashti Matthews, Baltimore, daughter of Carl Murphy, president, AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers; Cpl. Fayrine Murray, 1140 N. Gilmor St.; Pvt. Gloria Taylor, 509 Baker St.; and Pvt. Grace Whyte, 625 N. Carrollton Ave., all of Baltimore.

Eleven Washingtonians

Washingtonians given medals included: Pvt. Doris Ware, 1201 G St., N.E.; Pfc. Elivre Jackson, 1729 12th St., N.W.; Pfc. Margaret Simmons, 1459 S St., N.W.; Pvt. Deloris Ruddock, 1338 T St., N.W.; Pvt. Constance Wardell, 604 Howard St., N.W.; Cpl. Vergie Knox, 1340 Fourth St., N.W.; Pvt. Velma Lofty, 1418 W St., N.W.; Pfc. Annie Knight, 600 Harvard St.; Pfc. Hattie Lee, Pvt. Emma Johnson, 1106 Columbia Rd., N.W.; Pvt. Dona Primus, 524 Oklahoma Ave., N.E.;

Philadelphians honored were: Pfc. Hilda Wood, 5430 Summer St.; Pvt. Willia Jackson, 2339 Wehder St.; Pfc. Jennia Anderson, 385 N. Smedley St.; Pfc. Mary Artist, 2017 Titan St.; Pfc. Blanche Berks, 1810 W. Masters St.; Pvt. Mary Young, 1631 17th St.; T/Sgt. Marty Buster, 2344 W. Turner St.; Pvt. Florence Collins, 7209 Wissinoming St.; Cpl. Lena Bell, 1532 N. 18th St.; Cpl. Alma Philpot, 123 N. Conestoga St.; Pfc. Evelyn Lesuer, 3854 Falson St.; Pvt. Louisa Balls, 2713 N. Second St.; Pfc. Thelma Purdy, 218 N. 56th St.; Pvt. Naomi Stewart, 2556 W. Page St.; and Pvt. Eleanor Wilson, Centreville, Md.;

165 Promoted

The ceremony was also the occasion for announcing the promotions of 165 Wacs from private to private first class. Standing on the reviewing platform where Capt. Noel Campbell, Lt. Catherine Landry, Capt. Vera Harrison, Lts. Vashti Tonkins, Bernice Henderson, Ella Tatum, and Julia Rich.

Observing the ceremony with interest was a company of German prisoners, who work around WAC barracks. They were visibly impressed by the smart military manner of the girls. Also looking on were hundreds of GI's and French civilians.

Get Paris Passes

Major Adams declared: "The battalion is in good health and not too homesick. Our job is redirecting mail, and I have had fine co-operation from officers and enlisted personnel."

She also revealed that there are adequate recreational facilities. The girls ride horses, swim, play golf, go boat riding, and hike. Twenty of them get passes for Paris weekly, and 12 for Belgium.

Medical Officer Male

The lone male with the unit is Lt. Frank Johnson of Brooklyn, medical officer, who admitted that the girls keep him busy on sick calls, but his work is made easier by having two assistants with nurse training plus a dental technician.

The unit's weekly paper is run by Lt. Margaret Barnes, Oberlin, Ohio, public relations officer, assisted by Cpl. Ernestine Hughes, Dallas, Texas. Cpl. Jennie Moton works in special service.

Dated by Soldiers

The best part of the day is after supper when the nearby soldiers are allowed in the battalion area for a few hours. It is like boarding school as the boys ask in the orderly room for the girls of their choice who, after being telephoned, come out to chat or go into town to the Red Cross Club.

Talking with the girls, I found them most anxious to return home for various reasons, though they are not particularly homesick. Some said frankly that the high IQ of the outfit qualified them for more important or responsible work.

Everybody was impressed by their military bearing and good conduct, from Major Adams to the lowliest private.

Army Rebuffs Tories on Negro WACs in Hospital

New York, N.Y. Daily Worker

CHICAGO, July 2.—Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy has rejected protests by reactionary organizations in the Hyde Park lakefront district against assigning Negro WACS to the Gardiner General Hospital here. 7-3-45

The Hyde Park Community Planning Association, the Hyde Park Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Neighborhood Associations, the Oakland-Kenwood Property Owners' Association, and other reactionary groups had protested the housing of Negro WACS in that "exclusive" "white" neighborhood.

"The Army's decision to use Negro WACS in the Gardiner General Hospital was based on the needs at that installation, where wounded American soldiers of all races and creeds are treated," McCloy said in a letter to spokesmen of the reactionary group.

Pointing out that the area in which the WACS will be housed is within streetcar distance of the large South Side Negro community, McCloy added: 7-3-45

"In view of these circumstances, and particularly since the fact that Negro WACS will be stationed at Gardiner General Hospital is well known throughout Chicago, I regret that the Army's decision in this matter cannot be changed."

Returned From European Theater

The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland 9-1-45

Above are shown the four Wacs who arrived from the European theater along with 37 white Wacs last week. Veterans of service in England and France with the WAC postal unit, they are, left to right, Pfc. Adele B. Ricketts, Louisville, Ky.; T/4 Lucia M. Pitts, Chicago; Pfc. Eloise B. McNeely, Boston, and Pfc. Bernice E. Huggar, Minneapolis.

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Va.

WITH THE WAC AT ROUEN, France—From left, Lieutenant Colonel Anna Wilson, WAC staff director in the European Theater; Major Charity Adams, 217 Lacy street, Columbus, S. C., commanding officer of the 6888th Central Postal Directory; Captain Mary F. Kearney, 400 Newfield, Bridgeport, Conn., chief of directory service and Sergeant Mattie Garrett, 392 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., section non-com, hold a lively discussion as Private Dollie E. Jackson, 414 Johnson avenue, Larned, Kans., locates a GI's missing address. (U. S. Army Signal Corps)

Hits Army's Whitewash Of Brutality on Negro WACs

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. 9-6-45

Special to the Daily Worker

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 5—Hosea Hudson, member of the Southern Negro Youth Congress and president of Local 2815, United Steelworkers of America, CIO, today denounced a War Department whitewash of police brutality against three Negro WACs.

The whitewash was done by Truman Gibson, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War, in reply to a letter by Esther V. Cooper, executive secretary of the SNYC, asking for complete investigation of police beating of the WACs at Elizabethtown, Ky., July 9, and punishment of the guilty.

A group of 258 white overseas veterans at the Baxter General Hospital, Spokane, Wash., last week asked the Secretary of War to investigate the charges that Elizabethtown, Ky., policemen had beaten Pfcs. Tommie Smith, Helen H. Smith and Georgia Boson. They allegedly had been sitting on a "white" bench in the bus terminal waiting room.

Gibson wrote Miss Cooper:

"The patrolman alleged that Private [Helen] Smith became indignant and abusive towards him and refused to comply with his orders. He placed her under arrest, whereupon, he claimed, all three of the WACs attacked him, calling upon the Negro men and soldiers in the station to assist them. The patrolman, according to his statement, fearing a serious disturbance and to protect himself, struck Private Smith and one of the other WACs."

Mr. Hudson, who has himself been a victim of police brutality, called upon Mr. Gibson to use his office in the War Department to protect Negro servicemen and women who are coming back to the United States every day to face attacks from lynch-minded policemen and civilians.

Hudson ended his letter:

"This attack, moreover points out the need for the passage of the GI Assault Bill which would make it a federal offense to attack or kill a member of the armed forces."

She's A 2nd Looie

The AfroAmerican Baltimore, Maryland

2ND LT. GRACE M. GITTENS daughter of Mrs. Winifred Gittens of Alston St., Cambridge, Mass., who was recently home on leave. She was commissioned a second Lieutenant in the 50th class to be graduated from the First Service Command basic training center for nurses. Lieutenant Gittens is now stationed at Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass.

9-29-45

Four Texas WACs Get Promotions In Rouen, France

The Informer Houston, Texas 10-20-45

ROUEN, France — Four Texans were among the one hundred and one members of the 6888th Central Postal Directory, only Negro WAC battalion serving overseas, recently promoted to ranks beginning Staff Sergeant through Master Sergeant.

M-Sgt. Juanita Goodlow, 1621 South Fourth street, Waco, Texas, who is a section chief in the postal directory and was promoted to her present grade from SS-Sgt. T-Sgt. Lucille Lewis, 1520 E. 19th street, Fort Worth, Texas, section sergeant, was promoted from Sergeant.

Staff Sergeant Ruby L. McClung, 607 Roosevelt street, Wichita Falls, Texas, who is assistant section sergeant in the postal directory, was promoted to her present grade from sergeant and Technical Sgt. Flordia E. Robey, 3420 Delano st., Houston, Texas, who is motor sergeant of the motor pool, was promoted to her present grade from Cpl.

WAC Major

Washington Tribune Washington D.C. 10-16-45

Maj. Harriet West, now stationed in France as commanding offier of Negro WACs has contributed immeasurably to this war effort in boosting the morale of our boys and training our girls to do an efficient job in taking over the jobs of soldiers in order that they may be released for more important tasks. She and her girls have done a wonderful job and deserve a place with the immortals of this War.

War Dep't Told Of WAC Beatings

Chicago Def. Defender 10-27-45

Beatings inflicted upon three Negro WACs by policemen in Elizabethtown, Ky., have been reported to the Department of Justice, it was revealed by Col. Harrison A. Gerhardt, executive to the Assistant Secretary of War.

The action was taken after the Veterans' Committee for Equal Rights had protested the assaults to the War Department.

Arrested while waiting for a bus on a "white" bench, the servicewomen were cleared of charges of breaking the law or disturbing the peace at a summary court-martial.

Bare Jim Crow Of WACs In N.J.

The Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

'YW' Denies Negroes Recreation Facilities

11-3-45

ATLANTIC CITY—Jim Crow of 103 Negro WACs assigned to the Thomas M. England General hospital at the YWCA and other recreational centers was revealed here this week.

These WACs, housed in the Cedar Croft hotel, have virtually no facilities for recreation beyond a pool table, which was brought to the barracks when other army installations closed. Appeals were sent to the white YWCA, the only one in this city with recreational facilities for women, but the colored WACs were told that the Y was not in a position to cater to them.

The colored branch has no recreation facilities. It consists of 1 bed rooms, and two meeting rooms, an office, a kitchen and dining room.

Mrs. Mildred Brand, white, secretary of the YWCA, said that the WACs had some recreation facilities but were denied opportunity to participate in the Y program. She asserted that the present program is so full that no additional group can be allowed to use the facilities, and added that the swimming pool was not in use.

Of the two bowling alleys in Atlantic City, none can afford the WACs opportunity to use their facilities.

Total of 176 Wacs Come Home Aboard Queen Mary

The Afro-American—Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK—A total of 176 Wacs arrived in New York early Friday morning aboard the giant Queen Mary. 11-9-45

Completing her eighth westward crossing since V-E Day, the gaily decorated Cunard trooper steamed up the Narrows, past the Statue of Liberty and the Battery to the tune of hundreds of harbor boat whistles and the music of the WAC Band aboard the Army's Welcome Home Boat, "Miss America." 11-19-45

The huge vessel made an impressive picture as she docked at Pier 90, North River, opposite the battleship Missouri. In addition to the Wacs, there were more than 400 Tan Yanks aboard.

Sent to Camp Shanks

Debarkation began almost immediately, and the Wacs were whisked off to Camp Shanks for 24-hour orientation and processing. From there, they are scheduled to go to Fort Dix and various other separation centers. All are eligible for discharge from the service.

Among the arrivals were several Wacs from Philadelphia, Newark, and Richmond.

All are members of the 6888th Central Postal Directory which was stationed overseas in Birmingham, England, and Rouen, France, for a period of 9 months. Their job was taking care of mail coming to and leaving the continent.

M/Sgt. Norene Harris of Tribbey, Ky., was the highest non-commissioned officer in charge of the unit. "The girls liked England and France very much and hated to leave," she told the AFRO. "Some of the girls were in Paris on VJ-Day and had a swell time.

Paraded in Rouen

"All of us were given two days off to celebrate, and we took advantage of it by holding a big parade in Rouen. The girls liked Paris, which is similar to New York, but not quite as cosmopolitan." 11-19-45

T/Sgt. Catherine King, 1350 S. Bouvier St., Philadelphia, said she had a very good time overseas and traveled quite a bit. "I got around to various parts of France, Belgium, and Switzerland.

"These countries are more agricultural than the U.S. The scenery in Switzerland is wonderful, and their mountains really have snow tops. It took me 45 minutes to get up to the top of a peak.

"I saw my brother, M/Sgt. Kenneth R. King, in Rheims and hope he comes home soon. I really am very happy to be back, and want to call my mother as soon as I get the chance."

Marian Anderson's Cousin

T/Sgt. King is a second cousin of Marian Anderson, noted singer, and she told the AFRO she was overjoyed to be back in time to hear Miss Anderson sing a Carnegie Hall in December. "That's one thing I didn't want to miss," she declared.

Pvt. Dora Ferguson, 1328 S. Lambert St., Philadelphia, said America was still her favorite country.

T/Sgt. Rhoda Daniel Pearson, 201 N. 10th St., Darby, Penn., was married overseas just two weeks ago.

Among others seen by the AFRO were S/Sgt. Beulah Robinson, 89 Bergen St., Newark; T/5 Georgiana Morton, 44 Somerset St., Newark; S/Sgt. Daisy Dinkins, 100 New St., Newbridge, N.J.; T/5 Mary Moody, Jamaica, L.I., N.Y.; S/Sgt. Willene Jobinson, NYC. and T/Sgt. Marcell Wilson, 1905 Parkwood Ave., Richmond, Va. 11-17-45

Other passengers aboard the Queen Mary included James C. Dunn, Under Secretary of State; Congresswoman Mary Norton of New Jersey, and several Army generals.

List 173 Wacs Home from ETO

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK PORT OF EMBARKATION.—"It was great to be over there, but its greater to be back," and Staff Sergeant Jerrell Lawrence, Caldwell, Tex., who was among the 173 Wacs debarking at Pier 90, last week, beamed as she moved down the gangplank and touched native ground.

The Wacs were among 10,000 troops returned home from the European Theater on the Queen Mary which arrived at the New York pier, Friday, Nov. 9. They had been overseas nine months, in England and France, with the 6888th Central Postal Directory. All have 36 points or more and were returned to the States for discharge. Also aboard were 30 nurses returning from service in England and France.

The Wacs were taken to Camp Shanks, New York Port installation in New Jersey, and in 24 hours were on their way by train, bus and plane to Separation Centers closest to their homes from where they will be discharged.

Get Official Greeting

On hand from Washington to greet the Wac contingent were Lt. Col. Katherine Goodwin, white, staff director, ASF, WAC, and Maj. Alice Brown, white, staff director, Transportation Corps, WAC. Lt. Col. Raymond E. Conte, special assistant to the chief of staff, New York Port of Embarkation, was also on hand, as was Mrs. Audley Moore, representing the National Council of Negro Women. 11-24-45

Among those returning on the Queen Mary were:

CONNECTICUT: Bloomfield—Pfc. Marion S. Jackson, 19 Gilbert Ave.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: Washington—T/5 Isabella P. Owens, 2130 G St., N.W.; S/Sgt. Irma L. Campbell, 2011 Benning Rd., N.E.; Sgt. Gertrude V Hall, 1.7 E. St., S.E.; Cpl. Susan V. Crabtree, 502 24th St., N.E.; Pfc. Olive K. Debeauy, 529 Gresham Pl., N.W.; Pfc. Sarah B. Gary, 2301 H St., N.W.

MASSACHUSETTS: Pittsfield—T/5 Mary E. Moody, Graylock Rd; Springfield—Pfc. Cora L. Hurston, 715 Union St.

NEW JERSEY: Newark—T/5 Georgianna Morton, 44 Somerset St.; Paterson—S/Sgt. Willene Johnson, 19 Godwin Ave.; Plainfield—Pvt. Johnita A. Johnson, 640 W. Third St.; Woodbridge—S/Sgt. Daisy B. Dinkins, 100 New St.

NEW YORK: Brooklyn—Pvt. Bernice A. Auustine, 122 Macon St.; Buffalo—S/Sgt. Evelyn C. Martin, 125 Woodlawn Ave.; New York—Cpl. Callie Katrina Smith, 2 Verona Pl., Bronx; Pvt. Edith J. Armstead, 109-01 169th Pl., Jamaica; Pfc. Margie L. Amis, 50 W. 120th St.;

Pfc. Virginia A. Blake, 1851 Seventh Ave.; Pfc. Helen M. Wood, 522-A MacDonough St., Bronx; Pfc. Rose Stone, 300 Manhattan Ave.; Pfc. Marie B. Gillisslee, 595 E. 167th St.; Pfc. Evangeline G. Jeffery, 15 W. 123rd St.; T/4 Ethel C. Leving, 92 Morningside Ave.;

T/5 Geneva McRae, 270 W. 115th St.; S/Sgt. Beulah E. Robinson, 859 Home St.; T/5 Myrtle A. Rhoden, 1370 Boston Rd.; Yonkers—Pfc. Gladys S. Carter, 38 Dunbar St.

NORTH CAROLINA: Durham—S/Sgt. Maggie A. Latta, 304 E. Piedmont Ave.; Elkin—Pfc. Elizabeth B. Barker; New Bern—Pfc. Emma L. M. Jenkins, 38 End St.; Waldon—Pfc. Vemise C. Hayes, Box 188.

PENNSYLVANIA: Belle Vernon—Pfc. Bebe C. Johnson, 513 Bluff St.; Danby—T/Sgt. Rhoda A. Daniel, 210 N. 10th St.; Philadelphia—Cpl. Love P. Anderson, 2307 N. 23rd St.; T/Sgt. Catherine A. King, 1350 S. Bouvier St.; T/Sgt. Lillian V. Jones, 2330 Catherine St.; Willow Grove—T/5 Elaine V. Jones, 230 Glendale Ave.

SOUTH CAROLINA: Trenton—Pfc. Nouvella E. Jackson, Rte. 1, Box 117½.

VIRGINIA: Alexandria—Pvt. Gertrude Sessoms, 619 N. Henry St.; S/Sgt. Catherine D. Brown, 2028 N. Edison St.; Victoria—Cpl. Hazel C Jennings, Rte. 1, Box 22.

WEST VIRGINA: Bluefield—S/Sgt Myke A. Smith, 413 N. Powell St.

Three WAC Officers Promoted in France

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

ROUEN, France — Three WAC second lieutenants of the 6888th Central Postal Directory received timely Christmas gifts in the form of promotions to the rank of first lieutenant. 12-29-45

Promoted to the new rank were: First Lieutenant Hazel E. Craddock, 1263 E. 17th St., Des Moines, Ia., Post Utilities officer with the battalion; First Lieutenant Gussye D. Steward, 5490 South Parkway, Chicago, Ill., Battalion executive officer; and First Lieutenant Bertie M. Edwards, 43 Robert St., Danville, Va., commanding officer of Company "B."

Amsterdam News — New York, N. Y.
3-24-45

THESE ARE THE FACES OF OUR WOMEN IN UNIFORM, and they are only a small proportion of the thousands who are serving here, overseas or within their own communities, to help end the war successfully. At top, left, members of the American Women's Voluntary Services in their blue, grey uniforms. Center, top, three WAVES pose for the camera. Immediately below them are three WACs, dressed in summer uniforms, and to extreme right, are two Red Cross workers. Bottom, Left, in overseas dress, part of the first contingent of Negro WACs in overseas service, pose in the snow. Center, cadet nurses, and at extreme right, their older sisters, members of the Army Nurse Corps.

3-24-45

3-30-45

Each With Her Heart And Skill Fights For Victory

Review of Our Women In Service

N.Y. Amsterdam News 3-24-45

Future Looks Bright; Practically All Bars Have Been Eliminated

By CONSTANCE CURTIS

Thinge are bright for Negro women in the services today After more than three years of struggle against racial prejudice which denied in too many instances the right to serve their country, the bars are nearly all down. They along with Negro servicemen, are at last being given some chance to take a stake in democracy.

The list of women's services is impressive, and there are Negro women in all of those to be named here. They are in Navy blue both in the WAVES and SPARS, both of which services fought long and in a softly bitter manner to exclude them from these "most exclusive" of services.

At the present time, since the bars have fallen, there has been little cause for complaint among Negro women who have donned the uniform. There have been only few rumors that even hinted of the least difference in treatment, and they disproved.

Nurses in uniform have marched continually forward, especially in the schools for white women in the Navy, and our few Negro officers have lodged no complaint against their treatment is with them, as with the use of service-men, for prejudice has been nearly done away with completely. Negro women are being trained in the same to membership in its ranks. Two weeks ago a first Negro nurse took the oath of office for this service, and after her there will no doubt be many others.

3-24-45

In the WAC's, first of the women to be admitted to the first contingent of Negro services to admit Negroes, WAC's was sent to the European Theatre of war to serve as a postal unit there. They are no doubt the first of many to follow in war jim crow system in Navy for the first time admit them to the Corps. Though the Army jim crow system lifted from them, and the Corps, the Army Nurse Corps, and at the end of last year her there will no doubt serve in ranks going as high as major, and at the end of last year women to replace men grows each day. 3-24-45

3-24-45

Overseas in Large Numbers

Overseas in large numbers are women in the uniform of the American Red Cross, who have the entertainment of the servicemen as their main objective. In all of the theatres of war, they have set up canteens, acted as hostesses to lonely, weary and homesick soldiers, taken American food and American humor up within sight of the front lines. In their ranks are many women who have had experience as physio-therapists, to aid in bringing men back to health of body, and as social workers, to release their minds from the horrors of war.

Among the younger women who are serving in uniform, are the cadet nurses, in most instances high school graduates, or girls with one or more years of college training. They, under the supervision of the government, are training to become registered nurses. Many Negro women have taken advantage of the opportunity to be prepared for a profession by enlisting in this service. Though under no obligation, many of them are urged at graduation to become members of the Nurses Corps. They are working in the hospitals in this country, do much to lighten the heavy responsibilities of overworked nurses in understaffed hospitals. 3-24-45

On the Home Front

On the home front, best known of the women's services is the American Women's Voluntary Services, in which Negro women have played an active part since the beginning. They spend long hours within each week as motor corps and salvage workers, lifting the burdens from the armed forces.

Marching Towards Victory

In these uniformed branches of service Negro women have fought against prejudice when it occurred, and have proved as the lines were broken that they were deserving. As the days of the war draw on toward their end, Negro women, along with men, have written a record of which they can be proud. Their services during these trying days will be yet another foundation stone in the new building of democracy. They, along with the rest of the Allies, are marching forward toward victory.

COURT-MARTIAL REVERSED

New York Age 4-14-45

ONE of the most encouraging signs of democracy was evidenced last week when Major General Sherman Miles, commanding general of the First Service Command, reversed the court-martial convictions of four Negro WAC privates and ordered them restored to duty immediately.

This was democracy at work because there were mitigating circumstances surrounding the whole case. There is no denying the fact that the four WACs who were convicted, were guilty of disobeying the orders of a superior officer. They admitted to the court-martial that they had refused even after the Articles of War were read to them. But in refusing to obey the order, the four WACs did something else other than leave themselves liable to dishonorable discharge from the Army and jail sentences. They brought out into the open an intolerable situation and the resultant publicity did the rest — effected the cure.

Were one to judge the case merely on the bare facts — the four WACs were among several score who participated in a sit-down strike at Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass., and refused to work one day until the Commanding General of the area was forced o come in and read the Articles of War to them citing the dangers of continued refusal to work and follow orders — then the decision of the court-martial, finding the four WACs guilty was justified. 4-14-45

Were one to judge the sentence on the basis of the court-martial finding — dishonorable discharge from the Army and service of a year in jail at hard labor — then the penalty was justified.

BUT, there were mitigating circumstances in the case. After all, these four Negro women had enlisted in the WACs and they took an oath of allegiance to the country and agreed to follow orders when they donned the uniform of the WACs.

It is one thing to agree to follow orders, but it is another thing to have to follow orders that are discriminatory and unjust. The orders were discriminatory and unjust because the colonel in command of the hospital was discriminatory and unjust. He was quoted as saying that he didn't want "black WACs in the motor pool or as medical technicians." This same commanding officer, Col. Walter M. Crandall was also quoted by the WACs as saying that they "are here to mop walls, scrub floors and do all the dirty work."

Now there is nothing in the table of organization of the War Department that says that all the dirty work to be done in the Army must be done by Negroes — men or women. Too often that has been the case, however, and the Negro has gotten all the menial, all the lowly jobs to do. In the case of the four WACs, the colonel in command had discriminated against the Negro WAC contingent and assigned all the dirty work to the Negro WACs — work which even white civilians (unskilled laborers) were not required to do. 4-14-45

It was this attitude on the part of the colonel that the WACs protested. It was why the WACs were willing to be court-martialed, because they knew that the spotlight of publicity in the case would better the conditions for their sister WACs at the hospital.

One of the leading people to take up their case was Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women and only Negro member of the National Advisory Committee of the WACs. With her wide contacts in Washington, Mrs. Bethune was able to reach people who normally cannot be seen without previous appointments and going through a lot of red tape. Secretary of War Stimson, himself, was interested in the case and a complete and full investigation of the case was demanded.

In announcing the fact that the court-martial verdict had been vacated, a War Department statement said it was "in the interest of the strictest justice toward the accused." The court-martial was also declared to have been improperly convened. We are willing for the War Department to rationalize all it wants for vacating the verdict as long as the four WACs are restored to full duty without penalties of any sort and the condition of work at the hospital is changed for the better.

Some times we must fight the hard way to get justice. But this case shows conclusively that when a fight is intelligently waged and fought, it brings desired results.

560-1945

Rising Sun Sets, World War Two Ends; General MacArthur To Boss Japs

New Orleans 18-22-

Louisiana Weekly

Washington, D. C. (Special).—At 7 p. m., EWT, Tuesday, President Harry S. Truman announced the news the whole civilized world had been anxiously waiting to hear, "Japanese acceptance of the Potsdam ultimatum."

The surrender terms of the Japs will be accepted by General Douglas MacArthur as soon as arrangements can be completed.

8-18-45

In the formal message read by Mr. Truman, relayed from Emperor Hirohito through the Swiss government, the Japanese ruler pledged the surrender on the terms laid down by the Big Three Conference at Potsdam.

Following is the statement made by President Truman:

"I have received this afternoon a message from the Japanese government in reply to the message forwarded to that government by the Secretary of State on August 11.

"I deem this reply a full acceptance of the Potsdam declaration which specifies the unconditional surrender of Japan.

"In this reply there is no qualification.

"Arrangements are now being made for the formal signing of surrender terms at the earliest possible moment.

"General Douglas MacArthur has been appointed the supreme Allied commander to receive the Japanese surrender.

"Great Britain, Russia and China will be represented by high ranking officers.

"Meantime, the Allied armed forces have been ordered to suspend offensive action.

"The proclamation of V-J Day must wait upon the formal signing of the surrender terms by Japan."

Simultaneously, Mr. Truman disclosed that selective service is taking immediate steps to slash inductions from 80,000 to 50,000 a month.

8-18-45

Henceforth, Mr. Truman said, only those men under 26 will be drafted for the reducer quotas.

The White House made public the Japanese government's message accepting that ended the war which started December 7, 1941.

Demobilization of a vast military establishment and the reconversion to peace-time pursuits of an industrial plant expanded beyond original belief are, in a broad sense, the major problems confronting America today with the ending of World War II.

Never in all history has the world found itself faced with such utter chaos and wide-spread destruction as it does today. And while America managed to escape the physical devastation that had hit Europe and the Far East, it nevertheless felt the impact of these blows throughout its economic, political and social structure. No segment of its populace went untouched by the events of the war years.

8-18-45

Like other Americans, Negroes must now go about the task of reconstruction — among themselves and in concert with other Americans. In some instances the problems will be identical; in others, peculiar. In either case they will involve the return of servicemen to civilian life, the development of an up-to-date agency to deal with their problems for years to come, the struggle for jobs by all, and finally, the release of war-incurred tension.

8-18-45

A large army of occupation is going to be maintained both in Europe and in Japan, with Gen. MacArthur in command, the war department disclosed. But as quickly as it can, the department intends to release men from the service and return them to their homes. This they expect to be able to do at the rate of 500,000 men a month, using present redeployment centers in addition to the separation centers now in use.

The job of bringing men back from overseas will tax shipping but the job, the department says, will be done expeditiously. It is to be expected, however, that service troops may be delayed a bit longer than others since they will probably be required to dismantle and load equipment that is to be brought back here. Of course, certain types of equipment will be useable abroad and so disposed of there.

8-18-45

The Veterans administration, with Gen. Omar Bradley taking over direction this week, is shaping up into a model agency. The insistence of Negroes that a Negro special assistant be appointed is likely to meet with a warm reception. The idea has already been advanced in administration circles and is understood to be looked upon favorably.

The realization of this objective will give some assurance to Negro veterans that they will have some protection for their rights under the GI Bill of Rights. Apart from Gen. Bradley is regarded as a "square-shooter", certainly superior to his predecessor, Gen. Frank T. Hines, who continually maintained that there is no problem.

Growing like a spectre now is the prospect of unemployment. Even before President Truman had transmitted the reply of the allies to the Japanese government, the war department had announced a cutback in material requirements of some $4 billion. This was on Saturday.

Reports of the labor department and from the FEPC all along have pointed out that the Negro's greatest gains have been in war industries — munitions and shipbuilding. A perusal of cutback announcements would easily show that the weight of these changes will fall heavily upon the war industries, thereby throwing millions of Negroes out of work in high-paying jobs.

8-18-45

The chances of re-employment, either in their skills or at comparable wages in other pursuits, will be seriously impaired by the return of servicemen who also will be seeking jobs. The speed with which industry is able to reconvert will determine the intensity of the problem and the length of its duration.

Finally, attention is beginning to focus upon threats of outbreaks. Sociologists and other observers in recent years have been viewing with unguarded alarm the possibility that racial incidents will develop with increasing frequency when the war emergency is behind us. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been and is on the alert for signs of domestic unrest, and steps are being taken to check any such incidents.

Four Newsmen See Signing

Afro-American 9-8-45

60 Stewards Present Aboard the Missouri

ANXIOUS TO RETURN

Baltimore, Md.

Intend to Fight for Peace on Home Front

By CHARLES H. LOEB
NNPA War Correspondent

ABOARD THE USS MISSOURI IN TOKYO BAY (By Cable) — A second-class nation of regimented people whose first-class fighting men were no match for the enormous resources and aroused fighting spirit of free men signed away Japan's ill-conceived dream of world conquest at 9:15 a.m., Sept. 2, Tokyo time.

The surrender took place on "the piece of American soil" that is the deck of the USS Missouri, flagship of the Third Fleet anchored at Yokosuka Harbor, south of Tokyo. 9-8-45

As far as the fighting men in the Pacific were concerned, it was V-J Day when the Sphinx-faced Japanese delegation leader, wooden-legged Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, stepped up to sign the treaty before representatives of the United Nations and the crew of the Missouri.

60 Stewards, 3 Newsmen Present

Correspondents and cameramen of the world's press captured the scene for history.

The colored people and the colored press were well represented, the people by the 60-man contingent of stewards who stood on deck at stiff attention and the press by there other reporters and your correspondent.

20 Saw Launching

One-third of the stewards were on the Missouri's maiden voyage following her launching Jan. 29, 1944.

They are among the elite group of enlisted men who will in the years to come regale their friends and relatives with descriptions of the historic scene. Each will bring home a specially designed cards authenticating claims.

They are:

Charles Davis, Paterson, N.J.; Ned Sellers, Detroit; Willie R. Moseley, Richmond; James J. Scott Jr., Springfield, Ill.; Harold G. Osorio, New York City; Mar J. Johnson, Eagle Lake, Texas;

Samuel E. Heading, Dothan, Ala.; Ernest J. Hinton, Raleigh, N.C.; Cleon C. Harrison, Sulphur Springs, Texas; Thomas Ruiz, Brooklyn; Willie J. Davis, Houston; Samuel D. Linscomb, New York City; P

J. F. Journee, New Orleans; A. Roger Adams, Philadelphia; Franklin Robinson Jr., Beaufort, S.C.; Edward D. Mahoney, Ft. Myers, Fla.; Thomas Ray, Vicksburg, Miss.; Jonathan Gay, Bryan, Texas;

John T. Ingram, Memphis; Rufus Shepard, Fort Pierce, Fla.; Elihue Simon, Miami; Nathaniel Short, Louisville, Ky.

Osorio, steward third class, in charge of the group brought to Japan from Guam by the destroyer, spoke for his men and then gave me a statement signed by them. It read:

"As we were fighting and working in the Navy, we have been listening all this time to statements about the rights of minorities, the Four Freedoms, etc.

Look for Fulfillment

"These are principles the Allies were fighting for. Now that the great war is over, we of the colored group are expecting that these standards of human liberties and justice will be given us;

"We have been asked frequently 'What are we fighting for?'

"Well, we are fighting for a chance to fight on. We have just fought with weapons of war to make this world a better place for humanity.

To Use Weapons of Peace

"Now we must fight again with the weapons of peace, education, unity of race, and our franchise, to make this greatest nation of the world a better home for the colored race."

Dlf&h sink haor hoar oa oa

Many of these men were manning .20- and .40-milimeter guns when the Missouri shot down the first Jap plane on March 1, 1944, off Iwo Jima. They were aboard when the Missouri returned to the Tokyo area with Task Force 58, with Okinawa the target.

Helped at Okinawa

They were thrilled and shuddered on March 24 when the Missouri unlimbered its main battery for the first time, hurling tons of explosives into Okinawa fortifications.

They were aboard when the Kamakaze crashed into the starboard quarter, inflicting only superficial damages.

They were at the guns when the Missouri bombarded Japanese steel works at Muroran on Southern Hokkaido and saw the shores of Japan from seven miles out on July 17 during shelling of Hitachi area on Honshu.

Anxious to Return

Now they are champing at the bit to get back home to wives, relatives and a newer and brighter life.

Steward First Class Willie W. Booth Jr., Baltimore, speaking for group polled for V-J Day reactions, said:

"I am sure I speak for all of us when I say that none intend to re-enlist. We've lots of time to make up.

"All of us, of course, are hoping that our service to our country will be rewarded by better chances to live in our various communities as first-class citizens.

Seek Only Their Rights

"We are not too interested in bonuses, special service men's concessions or in anything special.

"We only want a chance to work where we show ability for the job, to continue our education in schools of our choice, to have a vote in whatever community to which we return.

"That is what we've fought for and will continue to fight for when we go back home."

Knew of Event Beforehand

Stewards aboard the USS Ancon, communications ship, which housed correspondents with the Navy, were among the best informed service men in the world.

They regarded V-J Day as anticlimatic, however, for their V-J Day occurred two weeks ago when they were alerted to proceed to Yokosuka Naval Base for the signing proceedings.

From vantage points on the deck of the Ancon, they watched the signing ceremony on the Missourri "just across the street a few hundred yards."

Hope for Full Partnership

Colonies Place Faith In New Administration

Pittsburgh Courier
Pa
8-11-45

By GEORGE PADMORE, Courier London Correspondent

LONDON—(By Cable)—Thanks to Britain's "bloodless revolution," the Socialist Party now has the greatest opportunity since the Bolshevik revolution to bring about liquidation of the worlds' greatest empire by transforming India, Africa, West Indies and other Colonial territories into full partnership with Great Britain on a basis of absolute political, economic, social, and racial equality with white dominions.

TRADE MEN IN POWER

Whether Socialists will grasp the opportunity of transforming the Colonial system by rapidly advancing the native races along the road of self-determination as pledged in the Socialist Party election program awaits to be seen. Meanwhile, Prime Minister Attlee has selected two ex-trade union officials to take over control of the Colonial Office, replacing two aristocratic Tory Colonial secretaries, Oliver Stanley, son of Lord Derby, and Stanley's brother-in-law, the Duke of Devonshire.

RAPID PROGRESS

The new plebian rulers of King George's far-flung Colonial empire are George Henry Hall, ex-coal miner, and Arthur Creech Jones, ex-railway clerk. Hall is a Welshman who, after working in coal mines since boyhood, later became a trade union organizer. When the Socialists joined Churchill's coalition government in 1940, Churchill appointed Hall Under-Secretary of the Colonies. In 1942, Churchill reorganized the coalition cabinet, promoting Hall to Financial Secretary to the Admiralty. From 1943 until the breakup of Churchill's administration, Hall served as Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs under aristocratic Anthony Eden.

Now that the political pendulum has swung violently leftwards, throwing the right wing Tory reactionaries overboard and bringing proletarian leaders to the forefront, Colonial peoples are expecting a big instalment of reforms from their British Socialist comrades. Unless this is granted, the colored races will conclude that, however much Socialists and Tories may differ over domestic issues, both are the same on imperial problems affecting Indians and Africans and other subject Empire peoples.

Realizing that the eyes of the world's colored races will be closely watching labor's Colonial administration, Prime Minister Attlee has made Creech Jones, leading Socialist Colonial expert, first assistant to Hall. During Churchill's administration, Jones was the foremost critic of the Tory Colonial policy. Now he will have an opportunity of applying the theories and policies he has been advocating.

JONES IS 54

Jones entered Parliament in 1935, and is now 54 years old. Before becoming a professional politician Jones held the position of national secretary to the Transport and General Workers' Union, the largest union in Britain, which was organized by Ernest Bevin, Eden's successor.

Thanks to Bevins' patronage, Jones advanced rapidly in the Socialist hierarchy, and when Churchill appointed Bevin Minister of Manpower Control, Bevin in turn appointed Jones his parliamentary secretary. It was a case of "I scratch your back; you scratch mine." 8-11-45

GROWS AS LEADER

Now Bevin is boss of the Foreign Office, and friend Jones also has advanced as second in command of the Colonial Office, and is responsible for the destiny of over sixty million dark-skinned citizens of the empire.

While Jones was serving his parliamentary apprenticeship, he began to devote his spare time to Colonial affairs and gradually became recognized as a leading Socialist expert on foreign affairs. In order to arouse interest in Colonial affairs within the Labor Party and trade unions, Jones organized the Fabian Colonial Bureau in 1940 and served as chairman. Soon the bureau became the spearhead for Colonial propaganda and the mouthpiece for native demands in leftist parliamentary circles, thereby focusing attention of the Colonial Office on native injustices.

During this period, Jones and leftist members of Parliament became such thorns inside the Tories that Oliver Stanley resorted to the age-old tradition of quieting critics by appointing Jones to serve on the Colonial Office Commission on Higher Education of West Africa. In this capacity, Jones visited West Africa in 1944, under the leadership of Col. Walter Elliott, Tory member of Parliament who suffered defeat in the last elections.

VISITED AMERICA

Stanley also sent Jones to America to help Lord Hailey explain the British imperial policy to American critics at a conference organized by the Institute of Pacific Relations in 1943.

While visiting in New York, Jones explained the Socialist Colonial policy to a conference of Aframerican intellectuals at a Harlem public library, promising that when Socialists replaced Churchill's government, the Colonials would receive a new deal. Now that he is in, Jones is expected to implement his party's promise.

560-1945

Collaborator

Grand Zombie

Time

Alioune Mamadou Kane came to Paris from his native Senegal in the early '30s. A spear-tall (6 ft. 8 in.), mission-trained blackamoor, he made a living by driving a taxi and hawking West African gewgaws. Then, at the 1937 Paris International Exposition, he performed as a fakir. It became a habit.

Chicago, Ill.

He decked himself in flowing blue robes, green-&-gold skullcap, ram's-horn necklace and a resounding title: Batoula, the Great Marabout and Prince of Zombie. As prince of an African voodoo cult, he spoke flamboyantly of 2,000,000 followers. In 1939 he made a trip to New York. Harlem gave him a lavish reception, and many a dusky laundress dreamed of becoming his Princess.

12-24-45

When the war broke out, Mamadou Kane became an officer of French Senegalese troops. After the defeat of 1940, he donned his royal robes again. The Germans were impressed. They gave him an office in the Hotel Scribe, winked when the Prince of Zombie became a prince of black marketeers.

This month Mamadou Kane, accused of collaboration with the enemy, stood before a Paris court of justice. For two hours he wept, beat his breast, gestured royally, proclaimed his innocence like a prophet.

Chicago, Ill.

The Court asked: "Is it true that during the occupation you owned a car and employed a chauffeur?"

The Prince of Zombie replied: "I had four cars—two Packards, one Buick, one Mercury!"

"And where did you get all the money?"

"I had my faithful flock, just like the Pope."

The Court was unimpressed. Last week Kane began five years hard labor.

Associated Press

PRINCE OF ZOMBIE

He had his faithful flock—and four cars.

560-1945

General

WAR: Victory In Midst Of Promise of More Democratic Army Plans

The Journal and Guide — Norfolk, Va.

January 1-19-45

JANUARY 6—92nd Infantry Division sees action with U. S. 5th Army in Italy. Buffaloes retake Bargo and hold the Jerries in the coastal sector near Tyrrhenian Sea. U. S. Third Army attacks north of Bastogne against Germans' Belgium salient. In france, the Germans atacked U. S. Seventh. Tan Yanks welcomed opportunity to see front line combat. Two Negro girls, Harriet I. Pickens and Frances E. Wills complete WAVE officer training at Smith College.

JANUARY 13—92nd makes raid behind Nazi lines; commando tactics used in spectacular attack along Riviera coast. Seven pilots, including four squadron leaders of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy awarded the coveted Distinguished Flying Cross. In Belgium, German bulge compressed by new Allied gains. Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, former commanding officer of New York's 369th Coast Artillery (AA) Regiment, report for duty as a member of the Secretary of War's discharge review board.

JANUARY 20—A unit of 92nd Division soldiers, led by 2nd Lt. Wilbur P. Ledbetter of Washington, capture Nazi patrol, including the first German officer, a lieutenant, to be taken alive by the 92nd. In the Pacific theater, Seabees pile up an enviable list of feats, both working and fighting.

JANUARY 27— Two Negro engineer units participate in D-Day operations on Luzon, Philippine Islands. Quartermaster truck drivers among the first to roll over the Ledo Road into China. In European theater of operations, Negro engineers show gallantry and daring as they mop up behind advancing battle armies. Major George Spencer Roberts awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in Italy and named honorary colonel by West Virginia governor.

February 1-19-45

FEBRUARY 3—In France with the American 7th Army, small units of the 827th Tank Destroyer Battalion, tankmen, and armored infantry of the 14th Armored Division assisted a crack American infantry to halt Field Marshal Karl von Rundsted's offensive at Hatten and Rittershofen for 11 days. Two 92nd Division officers in Italy, Lts. Graham H. Jenkins, Philadelphia, and John R. Fox, Cincinnati, give their lives to halt Nazis in gallant Serchio defense. Willie James Jackson, Navy cook, awarded Silver Star for saving lives of many comrades aboard LST 357 during amphibious invasion at Salerno, Italy. Two Silver Stars and 14 Bronze Stars awarded to 92nd heroes. A 155-mm howitzer outfit, while German mortars fell on them "like rain," bravely stick to their guns, firing around the compass in defense of encircled Bastogne, France. Assurance given in Dutch, New Guinea, that the 93rd Division to fight again as battle unit.

FEBRUARY 10—During the bloody battle around Cherbourg, France, a Martinique Negro with French forces, Antoinne Montburn, kills, wounds, and captures five hundred Nazis. Negro troops, led by Brig. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, builder of the vital Ledo Road, deliver the goods in China. Pvt. Jake McInnis, Mt. Olive, Miss., attached to 92nd Division, Fifth Army, halts Germans for seven hours, sending 20 to death on the Gothic Line. Quartermaster company with supply forces in Belgium, heroic when attacked by the Germans. Manila falls to U. S. Forces.

FEBRUARY 17—In spite of heavy casualties during three days of blazing action, the 92nd Infantry Division makes spectacular advance in the coastal sector of the Gothic Line. Wounded of the division sent to states receive medical care.

FEBRUARY 24—First contingent of Negro Wacs, a postal unit, numbering 738, arrive in England. 3103rd Quartermaster Company supports the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions in the invasion of Holland. For heroic action in personally accounting for 14 Nazis when the Germans attacked the 92nd Division lines in Italy, T/5 Jefferson H. Hilliard, Brooklyn, N. Y. awarded the Silver Star. For bravery in action on Siegfried Line in France, Capt. Charles I. Thomas, Detroit, Mich., tank destroyer commanding officer, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, Dec. 1944.

March 1-19-45

MARCH 3—Weather clears, permitting 332nd Fighter Group pilots, under command of Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., to resume blitzing of the Nazi homeland. Italian partisans credited with giving aid to 92nd Division in the Gothic Line battle. Awards and promotions go to 93rd Infantry Division for gallantry during encounters with Japs in the Pacific theatre of operations. Pfc. James Robinson, Atlantic City, N. J., in Italy with the 92nd Division, awarded the Silver Star Feb. 19, 1944, for a daring feat in going to aid of wounded comrade. Twenty other Buffalo Division members awarded Bronze Stars.

MARCH 10—92nd Infantry Division in Italy ignores flood of German propaganda. Torpedo boat stewards fight with McArthur's forces in the recapture of Corregidor. Negro troops in Burma, India win praise of Chinese First Army General Sun Li-jen. Ensign Joseph Banks Williams, first colored Seabee officer, arrived at an advanced base in the Pacific for duty. Germany's fourth largest city, Cologne, falls to U. S. First Army. Miss Phyllis Mae Daley, New York, first Negro Navy nurse, commissioned an ensign on March 8.

MARCH 17—Judge Cantrell Jr., Navy cook second class, Knoxville, Tenn., awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroism in a Pacific rescue. Colored 784th Tank Battalion, with the 35th Infantry Division in Germany, staged a miniature "Bastogne" in the battle of Sevelen. On Iwo Jima, amphib drivers braved Jap bullets and mortar shells on D-Day to bring ashore the first big howitzers for the Fifth Marine Division. With advance U. S. Forces in Holland, All-Negro officered chemical warfare unit paved way for combat troops.

MARCH 24— At Rome (Italy) press conference, Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, requested that the 92nd Infantry Division be given a break, said that the Division was "fighting two battles," one against prejudice. On the Rhine, in the ETO, Negro and white infantry fought shoulder to shoulder. 1st Lt. William S. Price, of Topeka Kansas, a member of the 332nd Fighter Group, stationed at an advanced base in Italy, downed the first Nazi plane of '45. Four men of the 818th Amphibian Truck Co., with U. S. Forces in France, awarded Bronze Stars for courageous action in saving comrades in a burning gasoline dump. Members of the Eighth Marine Ammunition Company praised for fearless action on Iwo Jima. Promotions, DFCs and efficiency prizes go to members of the 332nd Fighter Group, in Italy, for excellent service.

MARCH 24—Japanese resistance on Iwo Jima ends after the bloodiest battle of Marine Corps history.

MARCH 31 — 332nd Fighter Group pilots, in Italy, bag their first jet planes, knocking down three in a spectacular mission to Berlin, March 25, '45. Clare Luce, congresswoman from Connecticut, talked with battle veterans of the 92nd Division in Italy. In Holland-ia, Dutch, New Guinea, General Douglas McArthur said to Walter White: "Race is no factor in fighting ability." Back in the states, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., now dead, said: "I don't give a damn what color you are as long as you get out there and kill those son of . . . in the green suits." The Presidential Citation awarded to the 969th Field Artillery Battalion in France.

April 1-19-45

APRIL 7—From an advanced air base in Italy, the 332nd Fighter Group pilots downed 25 Nazi planes in two days of battling over Austria. Report from Paris, France, reveals that two Negro field artillery battalions, 333rd and 578th, suffered heavy casualties in Karl von Runstedt's Ardennes offensive in December, 1944. 426th Engineers praised for keeping supplies rolling to the front in the ETO. Negro sentinels from 3226th Quartermaster Service Company guard Nazi prisoners in England.

APRIL 14—92nd Division faces stiff resistance in battle for La Spezia in Italy. A veteran unit of the Buffalo Division transferred to engineer duty. Truman K. Gibson Jr., defends the 92nd in Washington press conference; states that the division "has not failed in combat." A total of 7,000 men of the 92nd won battle honors; among the number were 1,377 Purple Heart wearers. General George C. Marshall visited the Buffalo Division in Italy. The 709th Medical Sanitary Company, serving in Belgium, praised for excellent round-the-clock action while under attack. 3424th Trucking Company in France, in daring feats, delivers supplies to the Seventh Army when all other transportation bogged down. Liberty Ship SS Robert L. Vann, originally skippered by Negro Captain John Godfrey, reported sunk. In Manila, Philippine Islands, death of Lt. Col. Walter Howard Loving confirmed.

APRIL 28—In Italy, as the Allies break mountain lines and enter the Po Valley, the 92nd Division cleans up in the Apennines. In the states, mixed Coast Guard crew experiment initiated by Lt. Carlton Skinner, former secretary of the Washington Newspaper Guild, called success. Nuremberg, Nazi "shrine" city, taken by U. S. Seventh Army and mixed U. S. units attacked.

1-19-45

APRIL 21—92nd Division big guns paved way for Allied infantry in advance on Massa, Italy. Buffalo Division mourns death of late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. For the first time in the history of the United States Marine Corps, three Negroes began training for commissions. They were: former Sgt. Maj Charles F. Anderson, Birmingham, Ala.; 1st Sgt. Charles W. Simmons, Centralia, Ill.; and 1st. Sgt. George F. Ellis, of Brooklyn, N. Y. (They were not commissioned later, however.) Reports from U. S. Forces in France reveal that port companies manned machine guns when Field Marshal Karl Von Runstedt smashed into the American lines.

May

MAY 5—Announcement made of U. S., Russia, and Britain backing the Yalta decision. 332nd Fighter Group pilots have field day smashing Germans in Northern Italy. Mussolini's tragic end stirs GIs in Italy. United Nations' World Security Conference gets down to business in San Francisco. Report of Nazi surrender proves false. Four Nazi flyers over Prague downed by a trio of new 332nd Fighter Group pilots. Tan GIs win praise from Gen. Joseph Stilwell for excellent job done helping to build the Ledo Road in China Burma theatre.

MAY 12—Unconditional surrender of Germany formally ratified in Berlin, ending the war in the ETO. Nazi surrender finds troops calm. 332nd Fighter Group pilots relieved of operational assignments as combat in theatre is terminated. 92nd Infantry Division, with the 15th Army Group in Italy, awaits new orders. Colored GIs who fought in mixed units praised by Maj Gen. Roderick R. Allen, 12th Armored Division commander.

MAY 19—Marine Private First Class Luther Woodard, Lucy, Tenn., awarded the Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement against the Japs in the Pacific. China and Russia denounce the colonial system at the San Francisco Security Conference. 1871st Engineer Aviation Battalion busy building 4,000-bed hospital near Manila. 92nd Division troops rest in Italy.

MAY 26 — Seventy-five Tan Yanks among the first 2,500 soldiers discharged under the point system. Major Gen. Hugh J. Casey, chief engineer, general headquarters, Southwest Pacific, lauds engineer troops, without regard to race, for doing a good job from Port Moresby to the Philippines. Major Gen. Edward M. Allmond, 92nd Division commander, issues a statement of sincere admiration for the outfit's splendid performance in accomplishing the swiftest and most spectacular results in the last crucial campaign.

June 1-19-45

JUNE 2—92nd Division slated to return to Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The 366th Company of the Buffalo Division bore brunt in the Serchio attack in Italy, it was announced.

JUNE 9—Many Congressmen endorse mixed Army unit policy. Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Fifth Army chief, lauded all colored units of the 92nd Division, except the Infantry. Acting Secretary Robert P. Patterson revealed at a press conference in Washington that the 24th Infantry Regiment, which saw action on Saipan and Bougainville in the Pacific, and the 761st Tank Battalion, which fought in Europe, had won high praise for combat service.

JUNE 16—Bronze Service Stars were awarded to 417 members of port companies for work in northern France campaign. First Negroes assigned to Army judge advocate general's department in European theatre—Capts. James A. McLendon, Chicago, and Williard B. Ransom, Indianapolis, Ind.

JUNE 23 — In France General Dwight D. Eisenhower lauds Tan Yanks. "Performance equal to any," he said. Paid tribute to 2,600 Negro soldiers who volunteered for combat duty. In a ceremony held deep in conquered Germany, ten Negro doughboys, who served with the 104th Timberwolf Division, were decorated for bravery against the Nazis. Navy Department discloses that there were 81 Negroes aboard the ill-fated aircraft carrier USS Franklin, sunk 60 miles off the Jap mainland by Nip dive bomber attack.

JUNE 30—Col. B. O. Davis Jr., assumes command of the 447th Composite Bomber Group at Godman Field, Ky., replacing Col. Robert W. Selway, who was blamed for racial friction at the base. Tan Yank units took part in victory campaign and that four Negroes were decorated for bravery. Tan Yank units took part in victory campaign and that four Negroes were decorated for bravery. Navy Department discloses that there were 81 Negroes aboard the ill-fated aircraft carrier USS Franklin, sunk 60 miles off the Jap mainland by Nip dive bomber attack.

JULY 7—Mississippi's minority-that "Negro soldier has been an utter and abysmal failure." Jacob L. Devers, 6th Army Commander in refuting Eastland's blasphemy of Tan Yanks. Senator Eastland's slimeaer did "not represent the viewpoint of the War Department" according to Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson.

Steward Mates First Class Herbert J. Crawford, Washington, D. C.; Willie Brown, Bell City, La.; and Claymon T. Holmes, Salerno, Fla., for citations as a result of their courageous action in fighting flames aboard the USS Bunker Hill in the Pacific.

July

JULY 14—A battalion composed of officers and men from the disbanded 369th Coast Artillery Anti-Aircraft Regiment credited with being the only all-Negro combat group that participated in the Ryukus campaign, helping wrest Okinawa and other strategically important islands from the Japs. Navy eases color bar by assigning all recruit trainees to training stations irrespective of race, on similar basis. 93rd Infantry Division moved into the Philippines, after having battled the Japs at Bougainville early in 1944 92nd Division, in Italy, still standing by to return to the states. In England, Lt. Col. Harold C. Jirsa, commanding officer of the 168th Army Station Hospital, said in landing colored nurses in ETO: "they are skilled, kind, and cooperative workers."

JULY 21—Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, praised the Navy's racial integration plan after an official three week inspection tour of naval installations in this country. White Marines and Negro sailors riot on Guam on Christmas, 1944, as a result of unprovoked Leatherneck attacks. Forty-five sailors imprisoned. 92nd Division officer, Lt. V. J. Baker, Cheyenne, Wyo., awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action on April 6, 1945, near Viareggio, Italy. John "Rover" Jordan, Journal and Guide war correspondent, wins special commendation for his excellent war coverage of the 92nd Division in Italy. The 3243 Quartermaster Service Company, with U. S. Forces on Guadalcanal, awarded Meritorious Service Unit Plague for outstanding performance of duty. Six islands in the Marianas chain captured by two platoons of Negro infantrymen from Saipan.

JULY 28—Twenty-four GIs of 92nd Infantry Division killed and 48 injured as a mine blows up the American Red Cross enlisted men's club in Viareggio, Italy. The 8th Marine Ammunition Company attached to the 8th Field Depot, credited with outstanding performance of duty on bloody Iow Jima. Tempo of returning overseas veterans stepped up as 50,000 men a month reach the states.

August

AUGUST 4—For the first time in war, the atomic bomb, a new devastating engine of destruction, is used. Fifty thousand Japs killed as four square miles of Hiroshima is leveled. Underway is a new era in warfare. Six volunteers awarded Bronze Stars for courageous action aboard the USS Intrepid. The steward manned anti-aircraft guns, fighting off Jap suicide planes, until one crashed among them. Ensign Samuel L. Gravely, Richmond, Va., first Negro Navy officer to serve aboard a warship, assigned to duty on the USS PC-1264.

AUGUST 11—On Morotai Island in the South Pacific, a patrol of the 93rd Infantry Division captured a high ranking Japanese officer, Col. Muison Ouchi. Russia declared war on Japan. Second atomic bomb dropped on Japan's Nagasaki. This bomb, more powerful than the first released on the Nips, razed one-third of the city, killing 10,000 Japs.

AUGUST 18—War ends as Japan accepts unconditional surrender terms. President Truman announces capitulation at 7 p. m., August 14, 1945. For heroic defense on Nazi-beseiged Bastogne, the 969th Negro Field Artillery Battalion and white units who fought in the encircled, blazing city, received the Presidential Distinguished Unit Citation.

AUGUST 25—Rioting broke out in Viareggio, Italy, when a white lieutenant struck a Negro officer who was escorting a fair USO show girl. War Department releases report on the 92nd Infantry Division: casualties suffered, attached units included—5,752; killed in action—495; wounded in action—2,280; missing in action—77; taken prisoners of war—23; non-battle casualties—2,877. Fifty-eight (58) per cent of quartermaster troops in ETO were Negroes. Of 133,354 in the theatre in March, 1945, 77,348 were Negroes.

September

SEPTEMBER 1 — Col. Julian Horne and member of his 24th Regiment, Negro outfit, received the surrender of 240 Japanese suicide troops on Aka Island. Bronze Stars numbered 44 awarded to men of sanitary platoon, attached to U. S. Army Medical Corps on Guam.

SEPTEMBER 2 — Japanese surrender terms officially signed aboard U. S. S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay. "For outstanding performance of duty" in escorting bombers over Berlin on March 24, 1945, the 332nd Fighter Group was awarded the Army's Distinguished Unit Citation. 92nd Division lauded in citation and Major Gen. Edward M. Allmond, its commanding officer, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. Fifteen members of the 93rd Division awarded Bronze Stars for meritorious service in direct support of military operations on Bougainville Island, New Guinea, and the Netherland East Indies. 1-19-45

SEPTEMBER 15 — American troops pour into Jap capital, Tokyo, in preparation of ruling the Nips. Deactivated and slated to be shipped to the Pacific was the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion, which was commanded by heroic Capt. Charles L. Thomas, Detroit, Mich, who spearheaded an attack on the Siegfried Line. The Meritorious Service Unit Plaque was awarded to the 666th Quartermaster Truck Company, European theatre of operations, "in recognition of superior rating and outstanding devotion to duty . . . "Gen. MacArthur by order, dissolves the Japanese imperial staff. War Department releases war casualty figures: Total Army dead since Dec. 7, 1941, all theatres, 203,379; Navy, 53,617. Army wounded, 571,589; Navy, 79,672.

SEPTEMBER 22 — Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, on leave, heads group to survey the status of Navy Negro personnel in the Pacific. For meritorious service during the "Battle of the Bulge" in France, last winter, the 3991st Quartermaster Truck Company was awarded the Distinguished Unit Badge. The 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion fights forest fires in Oregon.

SEPTEMBER 29—S/Sgt. Joseph Louis Barrow, world heavyweight boxing champion, "for exceptional, Meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services," awarded the Legion of Merit Medal at Fort Hamilton, N. Y. Hideki Tojo, former Jap premier, attempts suicide by shooting, but fails and is saved by U. S. medical aid. Conference of "Big Five" opens in London, as foreign ministers of the U.S., Britain, Russia, France, and China meet to seek solution of peace problems. 1-19-45

October

OCTOBER 6—Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, informs the Army that he is withdrawing a suggestion, previously made, that reserve aviation units composed of Negro fliers be based at the Army Air Field located near Tuskegee. Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, discharged from the Army at Camp Shanks, N. Y. Tan Yanks, veterans of campaigns in Germany, France, and Belgium, attend the American (Army) University at Shrivingham, England. War Department celemency board begin reviewing cases of Army prisoners.

OCTOBER 13 — Admiral Chester W. Nimitz puts his stamp of approval on the integrated use of Negroes in the American Navy. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., removed as military governor of Bavaria for comments which aroused resentment in this country.

OCTOBER 20 — At Eniwetok, Marshall Islands, the crack 51st Marine Defense Battalion, all Negroes except commissioned officers, in conference with Lester B. Granger, inspecting installations in the Pacific, complained of Naval policy. Authoritative government source discloses that the peacetime Negro Air Forces tactical units will not be based at Tuskegee. Colored auxiliary ship crews credited with doing a good job during the war.

OCTOBER 27—A special Army committee, appointed by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, and headed by Lt. Gen. Alvin C. Gillem Jr., weighs new Army policy on Negro. A poll conducted among white officers and sergeants who fought with Negroes reveals that mixed units are favored. The War Department finally releases a report which showed that Tan GIs in mixed units performed "very well in combat" under Gen. Eisenhower. Convicted of mutiny in Hawaii, and then restored to duty with original sentences suspended, were 52 of 73 members of Co. E, 1320th Engineers Service Regiment. The 318th Medical Battalion attached to the 93rd Infantry Battalion was awarded the Meritorious Service Plaque "for superior performance and outstanding devotion to duty . . ." 1-19-45

November

NOVEMBER 3 — Lester B. Granger, on inspection tour for the Navy, finds that the Seabees, who helped to win the bloody battle of Peleliu, live like "galley slaves." Two thousand GIs on Guam victims of Red Cross race discrimination.

NOVEMBER 19 — The Navy wipes out discrimination against Negroes at the Anacostia (D. C.) Naval Receiving Station. 103 Wacs assigned to the Thomas M. England General Hospital, Atlantic City, N. J., denied recreational facilities.

NOVEMBER 24 — Frederick C. Branch, Charlotte, N. C., the first Negro Marine officer, was commissioned a second lieutenant on the 170th anniversary of the corps then placed on inactive duty. The Navy Department announced that Negroes with ratings and commissions are in the service for keeps. Twenty per cent of the total casualties and injuries as a result of the disastrous typhoon that struck Tokyo were colored servicemen. Resignation of Cilivian Aide Truman K. Gibson Jr., accepted by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. Pfc. Jack Thomas, Albany, Ga., awarded the Distinguished Service Cross at Kunzeslau, Germany, "for extraordinary heroism."

December

DECEMBER 1 — Advanced elements of the 92nd Infantry Division arrived in the states. The 969th Field Artillery Battalion stationed in Weissenburg, Germany, slated to perform security guard duty at the trial of war criminals in Nuremberg.

DECEMBER 8—Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, famous task force commander, while in Norfolk, Va., describes Negro marines and sailors as "fighting fools." Twelve thousand and ninety-six decorations were made to officers and enlisted men of the famed 92nd Infantry Division. The division itself won 205 commendations and to the division colors the Italian government added the Military Cross of Merit in War. Seasoned veterans of the 92nd Division returned to the states; 21 Tidewater Virginia GIs among the number.

DECEMBER 15—The removal of 123 Negro soldiers, eligible for redeployment, from the USS Croatan, aircraft carrier, in France, draws a storm of protests. Colored soldiers, when discharged, and Asiatics barred from Australia, according to information given to U. S. Army officials by the Australian government. War Department reveals that 12,006 awards went to officers and enlisted men during World War II.

DECEMBER 22 — Secretary of the Navy issues a warning to all naval officers and personnel that no discrimination is to be practiced against Negro members of the armed forces returning to the states aboard ships, or against those in the Navy, after Negro press organizations protest USS Croatan raw deal. 1-19-45

DECEMBER 29—Gen. Omar N. Bradley, veterans' administrator, in conference with colored leaders of a national organization, says that he didn't believe "any blanket directive" would halt racial bias in the Vets' Administration, but stated that the appointment of an assistant to advise on Negro problems was "under consideration." War Department refuses to enlist more Negroes for aircraft training. Local and national government take steps to secure adequate housing for veterans.

560-1945

THE CONGRESS

Negative Test

Time Mag

Before the end of the Potsdam meeting, Harry Truman hoped to be able to tell Stalin and Churchill: the U.S. has kept faith, here is the signed pledge of our participation in world affairs.

Then a sudden switch was made in Senate signals. For Senate action this week, the Bretton Woods monetary plan and international bank was put ahead of the World Charter. Administration leaders hoped it would be approved before the week was out. Then, they hoped, would come quick action on the Charter. Last week it passed its first Senate examination —by the Foreign Relations Committee.

To the two-storied, mahogany-and-marble walled caucus room on the Senate Office Building's third floor came representatives of scores of national organizations, leaders of church, education and women's groups, leaders of the vanishing fringe of die-hard nationalists, many a listening Congressman, many a service man. They heard no rousing debates, no sharp claps of oratorical thunder. They heard very little that was substantial said against the Charter.

7-23-45

Foreknowledge. The Senate opposition —what little there was—knew that they had been beaten before they started. They had no apparent strategy for concerted attack. But the Charter's proponents did. That strategy was: accentuate the negative. What the Charter would not do, rather than what it might hopefully accomplish, was their theme. Carefully and objectively, white-suited Chairman Tom Connally and Senator Arthur Vandenberg explained the Charter would not abridge U.S. sovereignty; it would not put war-won Pacific islands under international trusteeship; it would not impose some postwar schemes of disarmament upon the U.S. without U.S. approval; it would not, by itself, take away from Congress the right to declare war.

7-23-45

Acme

ELY CULBERTSON
He developed "Communist Eurasia."

These were the chief points on which the opposition had trained its sights. But no heavy barrage was fired. Only one Senator took careful aim. Pointing a long, tobacco-stained finger, Colorado's big (200 lb.), bald Republican Eugene Donald Millikin lined up his target: the use of U.S. armed forces under the Charter. He asked: what control would the U.S. retain over its share of an international armed force? Could the U.S. reserve to itself decision over where and how to use its forces? Senator Millikin's close questioning of John Foster Dulles, the Committee's G.O.P. adviser on international affairs and the Charter, developed a point of surprise to several Senators, who had assumed that military agreements under the pact would be subject only to majority votes in the House and Senate.

Able Lawyer Dulles gave his opinion on the point: no, such agreements would have to be treaties, would thus be subject to a two-thirds Senate vote.

Millikin seemed satisfied.

"I'm No Crackpot." The hearings set off some fireworks, but even these sputtered and fizzled. They came mostly in one day, from some dozen witnesses who saw international bogeymen lurking under the Charter bed.

The noisiest: Mrs. Agnes Waters ("National Blue Star Mothers of America"). Her line: the Charter would "set up a world government for the Soviets . . . make of this nation a feeding trough for the have-nots."

Tom Connally was not amused when she yelled: "The real war criminals are sitting right in this room. . . . I name Mr. Stettinius, the former international banker." Finally, two guards escorted garrulous Mrs. Waters from the E-shaped hearing table. Cried she: "I'm not afraid of all the devils in hell. What this country needs is a good old-fashioned American revolution."

The witness who claimed to represent most territory was tall, lean David Darrin: he announced himself as representing "The United Nations of the Earth Association." This, it developed, was no more than a letterhead and David Darrin. He offered a charter of his own: "The Tentative Constitution of the United Nations of the Earth." It was not examined. The World Security Charter he dismissed as "godless . . . a monstrous crime against American liberties."

Among the other opponents:

¶ Bridge Expert Ely Culbertson ("Fight for Total Peace Inc."). His plea for charter changes: "We are facing within the next five or six years a preventive war by the capitalistic world to eliminate the threat of the rising Russian giant state. And if this war does not take place, then we are facing in 15 or 20 years a war for the control of the world by Communist Eurasia, led by Russia." Ely Culbertson offered amendments for disarmament, a United Nations armed force.

¶ Buxom Mrs. Helen Virginia Somers, whose theory was that the Charter implements a plot to make the Duke of Windsor "king of the world." Qualified Mrs. Somers: "I know whereof I speak; I'm no crackpot."

¶ A mother of nine, Mrs. Grace Keefe ("Women's League for Political Education"). To her the Charter was "an instrument insuring our perpetual involvement in all future wars."

¶ Mrs. Elsie F. Johnson. Snapped she: "This country is in the grip of a gigantic conspiracy."

¶ Mrs. Cecil Norton Broy ("Americans United Inc."; membership: 25). To her the pact "provides for dirty Big Five domination."

7-23-45

Skimmed Milk. One to whom the Committee listened intently was chin-whiskered Rev. W. E. B. Dubois, an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He suggested amendments to clarify racial equality and treatment of colonies.

Associated Pres

SENATOR MILLIKIN
He developed a surprise.

If these and a few others represented the cream of the nation's organized opposition, it was thin indeed. Many potent U.S. organizations went on the Committee's record in support of the Charter.

After five days Chairman Connally called a halt on the hearings, called for a vote. Result: 21 to 1 for approval (California's Hiram Johnson was the lone dissenter; Minnesota's Henrik Shipstead did not vote).

Effects on Negro and Race Relations

The cream of organized opposition was thin indeed.

Internationa

MRS. AGNES WATERS

LIFE

DAVID DARRIN

LIFE

REV. W. E. B. DUBOIS

Internation

MRS. ELSIE F. JOHNSON

Some wanted amendments, some saw international bogeymen.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
P M
Circ. D. 137,100 - S. 136,912
SEP 3 - 1945

By Albert Deutsch

Negro Labor Hit Hardest By Reconversion Cutbacks

Peacetime reconversion marks a critical period for the five and a half million Negro workers in the U. S. A. They stand to be hit hardest by any mass-scale unemployment. Their hard-won wartime gains in industry may be largely or wholly wiped out if full employment goals are not achieved. They were the last to be hired, in war as in peace, and lack of seniority plus lingering race prejudice stack the cards against them when dismissal slips are handed out.

What makes the outlook particularly bleak for Negroes is the fact that most of their wartime job gains were made in war-industry plants now feeling the full force of cutbacks in government contracts. Mass firing isn't the only economic problem faced by Negro workers. Many of those upgraded into skilled and semi-skilled jobs because of the acute manpower shortage face the immediate prospect of downgrading to their former status in unskilled categories with consequent disuse and waste of their acquired skills.

The threat to the Negro's job security reaches beyond warplant gates into non-essential pursuits. The manpower shortage forced many civilian lily-white trades and firms to hire Negro help for the first time. Other firms which had hitherto employed Negroes only in menial occupation accepted them for higher-paying jobs.

These wartime gains may now be lost before they can be consolidated. Preliminary reports from the Detroit area, hardest hit by war-production cutbacks, indicates that a disproportionate number of Negroes have been thrown into the ranks of the unemployed. Besides the competition of their white fellow-workers, Negroes face the added competition of veterans now returning to civilian life en masse.

Employment of Negroes in civilian jobs, according to the U. S. Labor Statistics Bureau, increased by nearly one million between April, 1940 and April, 1944. The outstanding change in Negro employment during this period, according to the same source, was a marked movement from the farms to the factories.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics points out that, during the four-year period, the number of Negroes employed as skilled craftsmen and foremen doubled, as did the number engaged in semi-skilled factory operations—from 500,000 in 1940 to about one million in 1944.

In spite of these modest wartime gains, there are still great industrial areas in American life where gross inequalities in job opportunities still prevail. These inequalities will hound more than 800,000 Negro servicemen when they return.

It will be hard enough for Negro workers, during the reconversion crisis, to hold their own against the general job threats which affect all workers. They face the added burden of race prejudice which deprives them of equal opportunity to jobs and advancement on the basis of ability.

To protect that right, we need, now more than ever, a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee. Citizens who believe in fair play should help pressure Congress into voting favorably and promptly on the permanent FEPC bill.

GLEN RIDGE, N. J.
PAPER
Circ. W. 1,974
AUG 24 1945

Problem Of Negro In Reconversion Is Studied By CIO

Committee Sees Negro As Integral Part Of Industry

The aftermath of the V-J Day holiday led to the creation of the Committee on Negro Problems in reconversion, at the August 17th meeting of Local 416, UER&MWA -CIO. When the organization voted to continue itself after the lay-off of the members of Eastern Aircraft the problems of the Negro members received the committee's attention in Bloomfield.

Henry Booth, Executive Board member and leader of Local 416 for the last two and one half years, outlined the purposes of the committee as follows:

"Labor, and Local 416 of the U. E. in particular, see in the closing of Eastern Aircraft Bloomfield and Ampere plants a threat to the post war security of the negro people. The full employment of the war years saw the emergence of the Negro as an integral part of industry, working with his fellow workers to achieve the greatest production job in world history. The negro is determined to keep the place he has won for himself in industry. A place which can be one by uniting with his white brothers in the labor movement to fight for "Jobs for All"—60,000,000 jobs in an all out peace production economy.

"The closing of war plants with no reconversion plans in view as expendable "war babies" will lead only to unemployment and the strife engendered by it. Labor is determined that this war's end will not see a repetition of the last one."

The committee of 15 members have been conferring with Negro and white leaders in this area and will announce their plans as they mature.

NUTLEY, N. J.
SUN
Cir. W. 4,100
AUG 24 1945

LETTERS

Calls For True Democracy in Post-war Adjustment Period

From S. Dorothy Peterson
58 Harrison Street

To the Editor of The Nutley Sun:

Within the past two weeks three major events have taken place which have made history long to be remembered and should cause every American to be proud of the capabilities of her people.

First, the success of the atomic bomb. Second, the end of the war with Japan brought about by the use of this weapon. Then, last but by no means least, the distinction made for themselves by that gallant and fearless group of Negro soldiers of the 93rd Division who, being given instructions to bring back a Japanese Colonel alive, did so in five days time. This was the highest ranking Japanese officer reported captured during the Pacific campaign.

Once more the Negro has proven himself worthy and capable of executing any task or duty assigned to him. Whether it has been on the battlefront or the front here at home, he has proven himself to be a loyal and true American in the recent conflict.

Now let us think of the post-war adjustment period and wonder if these same boys come home to face conditions as they were when they went away — discrimination, race hatred, Jim Crowism, economic insecurity and the morale breaking condition of knowing one is only tolerated by the country and people for whom they have given so much.

Let us keep faith and hope the American people will realize that before the eyes of all nations they represent that symbol for which we have suffered, bled and died — the symbol of true democracy.

Negro Veterans Scan America For Freedom They Fought to Save

By EUGENE GORDON

"What's your feeling," I asked Negro servicemen on 125 St. last Wednesday afternoon, "about the war you've just helped to win and about the way the future looks to you?"

Steve Wilson, a youngster in a merchant marine cap, interrupted his talk with a soldier friend to say that he had not been in the "shooting war" but that it had been plenty hot where he was. There he intended to stay—"for the time being, anyhow," he added, "because I belong to the NMU and I like the merchant marine."

His soldier friend, Pvt. Willie Johnson, of an engineering outfit, said he had worked in a Pittsburgh steel mill before the war and that the future, for him, personally, looked pretty good.

"My job's waiting for me," Johnson said, observing that he'd have to thank the union for that.

Corp. Lester Ballard of New York City thought "some good" had come to the Negro people out of this war. He felt that it would "take time for things to readjust themselves to normal," but that, as a result of the war, "there are many important changes in favor of the ambitious colored boy or girl."

He couldn't see much hope for true democracy in the United States, are driven from public life." Sure, he'd do his part to drive the Bilbos out.

Corp. Ira Montgomery of the 3137 Quartermaster Truck Co., said that after coming back from Europe, it is "disheartening" to find race hatred "as strong as ever" here, "in the country which supposedly fought to do away with it and which is supposed to be setting up democracy in Germany right now."

Corp. Montgomery has a little restaurant business he intends to go back to, but wishes the future looked as hopeful to some of his buddies as it does to him.

'As far as I can see, the thing we fought for—democracy for everybody—hasn't been won for the Negro in America," Sgt. C. D. Brown, one of Corp. Montgomery's buddies, declared. "One thing about the United States is it has the habit of preaching democracy but seldom practicing it."

GRAIN OF SALT

As to his future, he said, "Uncle Sam has told the American Negro soldier, along with the white soldier, that he can look for prosperous and happy times," but, he laughed, "I'm not taking Uncle at his word—meaning that if I don't get a suitable job I'm disappointed but not surprised."

Sgt. Allen Boston, presently unattached, was on a 30-day furlough from a 3½-year stay in the Aleutians. He hadn't been back long enough, he said, "to see how our boys are being taken care of," so he had no opinion on what gains had come from the war. Nor had he any inkling of when he'd be a civilian again. He only hoped things would be better than when he was inducted.

I came across a tall young fellow, in complete uniform except for his new civilian shoes, looking in a 125th St. leather-goods shop window. He had under his arm a bundle wrapped in green paper. He said he was a technical sergeant, late of the 77th Coast Artillery.

NOT SURE

"Only being out of the Army four days and celebrating my return to civilian life," he said, "I haven't had enough time to look around and see whether things are as good as or better than when I went away 3½ years ago."

He was hoping that he would find "a little more democracy at home" than he'd been led to believe existed here while he was in the South Pacific. He had been a radio mechanic in the Army and hoped to continue as a civilian.

Corp. Elbert L. Lee, still a member of the 392nd Engineer Regiment and not knowing when he'd be free, said his prospects for the future were, personally, "very hopeful." He expected to open "a small garage" and had been saving money for it. He doubted that the democracy for which we fought had been attained.

"The only way the Negro people as a whole can win the democracy we fought for is to keep up the fight here at home," Corp. Lee said.

Future Status Of The Colonies Occupies Major Attention Of The Great Powers

West African Pilot

Subject Features San Francisco Talks

West African Pilot 6-18-45

By GEORGE PADMORE, Our London Correspondent

LONDON.—It is the considered opinion of the best informed diplomatic observers here that apart from the solution of peace in Europe the problem which is occupying the major attention of the great powers is the question of what shall be the status of colonial dependencies.

This opinion is confirmed by the fact that, apart from the international security organisation, the subject which was mostly under discussion at San Francisco was a suitable arrangement between the powers concerned of this issue.

The Times, in an editorial summing up and analysing the projects put forward and the results of the discussions at San Francisco, says that "One of the 12 committees into which the San Francisco conference has resolved itself for its detailed work is considering the colonial section of the prospective United Nations Charter.

ANNEXATION OPPOSED

"The committee's aim is to revise and enlarge the mandatory conception established by the League covenant.

"Its concern is with principles, not with their application, so that when the Prime Minister of South Africa (Field Marshal Smuts) proposed that the mandate for South-West Africa should be terminated and the territory incorporated in the Union, the Prime Minister of New Zealand, who is the committee's chairman, ruled the proposal out of order.

"The committee's discussions have revealed interesting differences of view.

"Under the original British scheme, the projected trustee council would take cognizance of three kinds of territories — existing mandates, dependent territories taken from the defeated Axis powers, and territories voluntarily brought under the scheme by their present governors.

AUSTRALIA DISAGREES

"Australia would amend this last provision by empowering the assembly to place a badly administered territory under trusteeship.

"Her proposal gives clear expression to one of the ideas underlying the whole project, that of the responsibility of every colonial power to the general opinion of the civilised world.

"The rejection of this amendment would not imply any disavowal of the motive which inspired it, but only a wise caution against overburdening the assembly before it has developed its strength.

"The League's experience gives its warning here 6-18-45

STRATEGIC AREAS

"To the triple classification proposed by Britain the Americans would add a fourth territory, the strategic area, the oversight of which would be entrusted to the security council instead of to the trustee council.

"The difference of view which has arisen here has its origin in the differing circumstances of the two powers.

'The United States feels itself to be the principal custodian of future peace in the Pacific and, therefore, holds that the administration of thinly populated atolls of high strategic value should be judged primarily from the standpoint of security.

"Britain, as the greatest colonial power with direct responsibility for the welfare of scores of millions of dependent peoples, is equally concerned that her administration should be estimated by its contribution to human progress.

'POPULATED" AREAS

"Commander Harold Stassen (American spokesman) has prepared a draft which fuses the two proposals.

"It authorises the security council to distinguish between 'strategic' and 'populated' areas and itself to accept the oversight of areas which, at the request of the administering power, it classifies as 'strategic.'

"But the draft recognises that the distinction is not absolute.

"An area classified as strategic may also be populated.

"The draft, therefore, proposes that the security council may, at its discretion, charge the trustee council with the responsibility for the general welfare of such areas."

According to the Times Special Correspondent at San Francisco, the British delegation would prefer to have this permissive arrangement made mandatory.

The Soviet government, too, has put forward amendments to the draft, the most important of the declaring trusteeship to be a preparation for independence.

CONFLICT OF VIEWS

"An international conference is the right agency to reconcile divergent attitudes towards colonial responsibility.

"These divergences, which are perhaps in the main differences of emphasis rather than of principle, arise from variations both of local circumstances and of national ways of thought.

"The British view is likely to be coloured by an imperial tradition which has found its most novel and noteworthy expression in a process of gradual evolution from dependent status to freedom.

"The American view is likely to reflect not only an ancient tradition of liberation for dependent peoples, but also those more recent strategic preoccupations of which Pearl Harbour is a dramatic symbol.

SOVIET TRADITION

"The Russian desire to proclaim full national independence as the ultimate goal equally accords with a tradition of self-determination for subject nations which was a capital item of the Bolshevist programme even before 1917.

"This tradition has been consistently followed to the extent of recognising the formal right of secession even of constituent republics of the Soviet Union

"It is in this sense that Britain has made full self government the goal of her colonial policy, and her stand point is recognised in the form of words which would make either self-government or independence the final objective of trusteeship.

TRUSTEESHIP & COLONIAL RULE

"It is appropriate that the charter of the United Nations should seek to define the proper relation between advanced and dependent peoples and thus give binding force to a new widely recognised principle.

"But though trusteeship will be making its first appearance in international law as the basis of colonial rule, the idea itself is not new.

"It arose out of the humanitarian sentiments which gained ground so rapidly in Britain towards the close of the eighteenth century and found their first dramatic expression in the abolition of slavery.

"It was as trustees for peoples previously regarded as chattels that British colonial governors set themselves to establish internal peace and impartial justice in the territories which they administered, and it is primarily because of the success with which the greatest colonial power developed and applied the doctrine of trusteeship that it can now be given world wide scope.

"As a principle, trusteeship is not limited to mandated territories nor does it carry with it any suggestion of international government

"On the contrary, the position of the established government must be fully maintained if it is to carry out its legal obligations as a signatory o the charter.

"But the doctrine of trusteeship imposes on the exercise of sovereignty a responsibility to the conscience of mankind.

"It is a responsibility which this country, which has been quick to expose abuses of colonial rule and has done much to set up administrative standards, has properly taken a leading part in establishing and will itself continue faithfully to discharge."

Dr. Dean Writes On Post-War Outlook For Negroes

St. Croix Avis
Saint Croix Virgin Islands
U.S.A.

Dr. William H. Dean, former Price Executive of the OPA for the Virgin Islands, has contributed an article on Post-War Outlook For Negroes. (The article appears in the September issue of Interracial Review, A Journal For Christian Democracy, a Catholic organ published in New York. 11-14-45

In his article, Dr. Dean points to the possibilities, and starts by saying that there is hope, but that this hope is "blended with apprehension.

The article treats such phases of the problem as leadership, the trend in urban populations, employment and security, housing, and the problems that returning veterans will present, and which the GI Bill of Rights and the Veterans Administration will have to face. Finally, Dr. Dean points to the need for interracial cooperation as an essential for progress.

Dr. Dean, a Harvard Ph. D. and is presently project director for the National Urban League in New York.

The Post-War Outlook For Negroes

St. Croix Avis
Saint Croix, Virgin Island

by WILLIAM H. DEAN

The post-war outlook for Negroes in the United States is blended of hope and apprehension. There is hope because of the strength of the progressive and unifying forces in America. The elements of a realistic program for constructive social action, taking full regard of the racial aspects of reconversion and social reconstruction, are well defined, and a forward-looking sector of our national and community leadership is insistent upon a march toward democratic goals. There is apprehension because of the power of the obstructionist forces, the pronounced lag in planning for human and racial phases of reconversion and reconstruction, the loss of some of the unifying influence of the war effort, and the many signs of inertia and reaction. Many of the wartime gains made by Negroes may be swept away in a return to laissez-faire. 11-15-45

The abrupt end of the war against Japan has ushered in a critical period in race relations. Inevitable structural changes in our economy, transitional and perhaps permanent unemployment, migratory shifts of population, the return of battle-hardened veterans, the tendency to revert to "normalcy" and to relax wartime minority safeguards, the resurgence of "hate" movements and Bilbo-ism, and pressures on civil liberties create an atmosphere in which race tensions can mount dangerously. A number of people have predicted a wave of post-war race riots, similar to those after World War I. The hurricane flag has been hoisted.

The war has made it impossible to return to "discrimination-as-usual," without serious consequences, for the thinking of Negroes regarding their share in American life has been sharpened. The man-on-the street is more sensative to the frustrations and inequalities of the race-caste system. He has been indoctrinated with the ideals of the nation as a by-product of wartime propaganda. He has demonstrated industrial capacity and exploded the myth of industrial inferiority. At home Negroes have participated to a larger extent than ever before in the economic life of the nation; they have also contributed heavily to the victory of progressive political forces. Abroad, they have fought and died for democratic ideals and have learned that the race-caste system is not universal. The principle of fair employment practices has sunk deep into their minds. Negroes know that polices of national scope, carefully administered at community levels, can produce desirable results. The implications of this frame of mind to national and local leadership are obvious. 11-15-45

African Pot Simmers

The Pittsburgh Courier

Colonial 'Spectres' Haunt London Peace Conference

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

By RAYFORD LOGAN

Courier Foreign Affairs Adviser

9-22-45

WASHINGTON—The real "peace conference" is being held in London, and the ghosts of old world diplomacy are parading their century-old spectres through the bomb-racked shell of London. Almost every name that students twenty-five years ago came to know as the graveyards of plans for peace once more shuttles across the stage.

Moreover, if usually reliable reports may be believed, another familiar genie, power politics, seems to possess an amazing vitality. The idealism of the Atlantic Charter is even more ignored than were Wilson's Fourteen Points in Paris in 1919. What is being done to some of the principles of the San Francisco Charter makes our pessimism two months ago seem wan and pallid.

U. S. Proposes to Strip Italy of Colonies

LONDON—As a stunning surprise, the United States has proposed to the Council of Foreign Ministers now meeting in London that Italy be stripped of all her pre-war colonies, including Libya, Eritrea, and Italian Somaliland, and that those colonies be placed under international trusteeship. It had been widely believed previously that the United States favored letting Italy retain the colonies under trustee supervision.

ITALIAN COLONIES

For example, two of the long-familiar names are the Dodecanese Islands and the Italian colonies of Libya (including Tripoli and Cyrenaica), Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. Although the Dodecanese Islands are inhabited overwhelmingly by Greeks, full possession of them was given to Italy during World War I as a part of the price for her joining the Allies against the Central Powers. Italy promised to cede these islands "eventually" to Greece, but like many other similar promises the date of delivery was constantly postponed. Greece is demanding now the restoration of these islands, but Greece apparently is not going to be permitted to press her claims in person. Somewhat like native peoples in dependent areas, she seemingly is to have only the right of written petition.

560-1945

Along The Interracial Front

New York Age

By GEORGE EDMUND HAYNES

The "Big Three" have met in conference. Prior to the meeting, Prime Minister Churhill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden spent days and nights discussing how Britain can deal with the issues that must be decided.

After two hours of debate recently, about 480 church leaders at the National Study Conferenc of the churches on a Just and Durable Peace at Cleveland, Ohio, adopted an eight-point resolution approving the Dumbarton Oaks Plan, but setting up seven specific changes which Protestants desire. One of these changes asserts that "a special agency or commission should be established wherein the progress of colonial and dependent areas to autonomy, and the inherent problems relative thereto, will become an interntaional responsibility."

This crucial question must be faced by the "Big Three" and all the white nations if the Dumbarton Oaks Plan is to prevent World War III. Thoughtful Americans, white, black and brown, as well as colored peoples elsewhere, are asking themselves: "What are we fighting for? What will become of Burma, Indo-China, Syria, Ethiopia and all the other black and brown peoples in Africa and on the islands of the Pacific?"

The current issue of the National Geographic Magazine has a beautifully illustrated article about the Gilbert Islands which have been liberated from the Japanese by American blood and guts. One of the illustrations shows, however, the returning British Resident Commissioner. Will the brown people on these and other Pacific islands have any guarantee under the Dumbarton Oaks Plan such as that called for by the resolution of the churchmen? Many other dependent and colonial areas, formerly under French, Dutch, Belgian and British rule, raise similar questions.

Nearly all of the dependent and colonial areas are inhabited by colored peoples. The ruling nations after this war will be white. This question then has probably become another phase of world race relations. One of the major weaknesses of the League of Nations was the fact that Ethiopia was admitted under conditions imposed by Italy and other Western white nattions. Under these conditions, Ethiopia could not secure modern military instruction and equipment. When Italy attacked, Ethiopia was not prepared to defend herself. Mussolini made a race issue out of the whole matter to rationalize his rape of the African kingdom. Leading Indians point to the racial exclusion policies of Australia and South Africa as one of the obstacles to their dominion status in the British Empire.

Racial parity in the coming world peace, therefore, and the problem of races in the present war, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. Japan asked that the racial equality principle be included in the agreements following World War I. The request was rejected. Who knows what its adoption might have saved in blood and tears?

On both the domestic and the foreign front, many American leaders have been most anxious that the demand made by the churchmen be made a part of the Dumbarton Oaks Peace Plan. It must be answered in the affrmative or we cannot have "a just and durable peace."

No Clashes Expected, Says Mayor

Pittsburgh Courier

2-24-45

By JOHN H. YOUNG III

JACKSON—Mayor Leland Speed said in an interview here, "I expect to do more for the colored man than has been done in the past."

Mr. Speed had only been in office two weeks and could not give definite plans for the program of his administration.

When asked if there was a planning committee, appointed by the city, which was interracial in nature, Mayor Speed said that there was not, but that the Chamber of Commerce had such a committee and that he anticipated considering its suggestions.

* * *

I asked Mayor Speed if he believed that there would be any clashes between returning Negro and white veterans. He said that he didn't believe so.

Mayor Speed jokingly referred in his reply to an individual who expressed the opinion that Negroes in Jackson may resort to violence. He said that he told this individual that Negroes were pulling for him and that he did not believe that they would do anything without seeing him to get their troubles straightened out on the side of law and order.

* * *

When asked for a statement on Negro veterans, Mayor Speed said: "Negro soldiers have been doing their part. There have been a few isolated cases of Northern soldiers creating disturbances. I believe that everything is going to be all right in the post-war period."

Catholics Ask Race Hate Ban

P.M. 2-9-45

The Committee of Catholics for Human Rights today disclosed that it had sent a message to Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Stalin and President Roosevelt urging that in their present conference they discuss a worldwide ban on racial discrimination.

The Committee is headed by Sen. James E. Murray (D., Mont.) and is made up of nationally known Catholic leaders in political, labor, intellectual and business fields.

The message said: "That there can be true peace upon the earth, in all nations, discrimination must be condemned as the destroyer of international security."

'Gate Open For Another War,' Warns Dr. DuBois

Chicago Defender - Ills.

"The gate has been left open for another war," warned Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, noted author and educator, in a critical analysis of the colonial problem delivered at a meeting this week sponsored by the Men's club of Arnett Chapel AME church.

Dr. DuBois, Chicago Defender columnist and director of research for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, blasted the Dumbarton Oaks conference for kicking out China's resolution on racial equality for the Security Council.

"This leaves 750 million colonials without representation," he stated. Dr. DuBois compared the Security Council with the Mandates Commission set up after World War I to govern Germany's colonies. "But the mandated colonies became part of the empires of France, Italy, England and Japan," he said, "and the plan fell through."

"World War I was a war of jealousy and envy to see who would rule the colonies," said Dr. DuBois, and again in World War II it was a cause, although not the only one, of another war.

Dr. DuBois traced the history of colonies from the early Greek and Roman empires to World War I, when great empires were built and maintained by exploiting colonial peoples and resources. While the great empires displayed to the world their power and grandeur, the colonies from which they obtained their wealth were like the slums in the cities of these empires, he continued.

Dr. DuBois explained that with colonies, the empires of the world are determined to realize a profit on their investment. "In some cases as high as 25 per cent."

In his revealing presentation of modern history, Dr. DuBois told how "the carving up of China was postponed by Europe before World War I because Japan wanted a hand in it."

"I doubt if there is any question as important to you as the fate of the colonies," he told the audience, and emphasized the close relationship between the colored peoples of the world. "The progress of the Negro in America has had repercussions in colonies all over the world.

"With 750 million colonials and 500 million semi-colonial people, half the world's population is in a colonial state," Dr. DuBois added.

Also on the program were Eston B. Tubbs, principal of Morgan Park high school, Leon Kirkpatrick, pianist, and the Senior and Gospel choirs of Arnett Chapel. Rev. W. N. Reid is pastor of the church.

Dr. DuBois Raises Crucial Postwar Question

Daily Worker N.Y.

By JAMES W. FORD

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois has written a significant article on Imperialism, United Nations, Colonial People. He argues that to set up a new international order with half the world enslaved is to court disaster; that as long as there are colonies there will be renewed international rivalries for colonies; there will be colonial revolts and wars. DuBois has raised here one of the most crucial questions of the postwar world, questions arousing the greatest general interests. It is evident that the old imperialist solution will not guarantee postwar peace and prosperity.

Earl Browder as spokesman of the Communists has made brilliant contributions on this question. He has said that unless the United Nations solve this question in the interest of democracy and freedom for the colonial peoples, there will be disaster not only for colonial peoples but also for the major nations of the world. If there is not a joint Anglo-American political and economic program for the peoples of Asia and Africa, underwritten and participated in by the Soviet Union, with such a program guaranteeing the colonial peoples freedom and democracy and preparing them for large-scale industrialization, there will be no postwar peace.

These facts were not fully taken into consideration by Max Gordon in his column in the Daily Worker of Jan. 5. The manner and content of Gordon's column fell far short of a fundamental and constructive critique of the points raised by Dr. DuBois' proposal for the international security organization to open the possibilities for colonial countries to share in world peace on the basis of equality in the right direction. The assumption in DuBois' argument is that peace will be kept, but in such a way that it their understanding of the war. These advances of the Negro people have placed them in a position to contribute to the solution of the problems of colored peoples throughout the world. Dr. DuBois is eminently qualified by experience and understanding as well as being a recognized spokesman of colored peoples in contributing to the solution of this world problem. He is correctly concerned with the fate of colonial peoples.

Dr. DuBois is the dean of the modern Negro liberation movement. He is an outstanding American scholar and student of social problems. He was one of the principal founders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and was, from its inception until 1932, the spiritual and political leader of the organization. He left the Association in 1932 because it "stepped decidedly toward the right." After ten years he returns to the NAACP in charge of special research which is apparently concerned with the new world problems of colored people. Today the NAACP is making significant historical progress which is in line with the advances of the Negro people in will exclude a billion people from equal and direct share in keeping it. To this he objects. Here a careful distinction must be made made between two things, (a) his objection to unequal status and lack of democratic rights of a billion people, and (b) his objection to collaboration with four or five major powers, without which lasting peace is impossible. In other words, it would be dangerous to conclude that we cannot support the United Nations coalition because it would bar a billion people from democratic rights. True, it raises the question: does lasting peace have to be bought at the price of imperialist enslavement. N.Y.

Actually that is not the way life is posing the question. On the contrary, only to the extent that the major powers collaborate on a program of economic stability and democratic progress will peace be assured. To the extent that collaboration of the great powers is effective, to that extent will progress be made towards overcoming imperialist domination. You can be assured that failure to secure that collaboration will mean unrestricted imperialist domination. 1-12-45

The question really is: how to organize and assure lasting peace by collaboration and concerted action of all peace-loving nations under the leadership of the main powers who are in possession of the effective economic and military might which alone can prevent future aggression? 1-12-45

One major shortcoming of Dr. DuBois' article is that he fails to estimate the role and influence of the Soviet Union in the solution of this question. It is also particularly unfortunate that he discusses this question in the New Leader whose policy is bitterly anti-United Nation, and which provides a false background and lends overtones that do not belong to Dr. DuBois' position.

GROPPERGRAMS

Tanner no longer makes the headlines. Reporters don't care to get their facts on Finland straight from the Nazi catspaw's mouth.

If Gropper can use your original gag you will receive $1. Address Groppergrams, care Daily Worker, 50 E. 13 St.

U. S. A. to Map Economic Plan for Latin America

P.M. N.Y. 2-26-45

By Uni

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 26.—The U. S. A. is ready to present to the Inter-American Conference resolutions for coping with postwar economic problems of Latin America.

The U. S. delegation will present its economic resolutions to the steering committee and tomorrow Assistant Secretary of State William H. Clayton will address a joint meeting of the economic commissions, explaining U. S. policy.

The basic desire of delegates here is to formulate a program of "hemispheric economic solidarity" which will be a step toward fulfillment of the pledge of freedom from want and fear. 2-26-45

All discussions of economic questions here, however, are dominated by two basic fears—the fear in the U. S. A. that it will have to support the whole world after the war; the fear in Latin America that wartime contracts will be terminated rapidly, that peacetime buying will be delayed, and that shortage of ships will prevent Latin American access to U. S. markets.

The U. S. economic program is expected to be based primarily upon the thesis that the fears of Latin America are not as serious as they believe. At the same time, there will be an attitude of candor in explaining the limitations of U. S. help.

U. S. delegates, for example, believe that U. S. buying in Latin America will continue longer than some think. They also point out a clause in the export-import bank law which allows its funds to be used for orderly marketing of surpluses and in helping maintain economic stability of Latin American republics. Such authority could be used in the transition period.

The long term economic problems involve the following:

¶ Diversification of economies of Latin countries, many of which before the war were totally dependent upon one crop or mineral.

¶ Increasing production of each worker to broaden purchasing power. 2-26-45

¶ Modernization of agricultural practices.

¶ Increased industrialization on a peacetime basis rather than some of the high-cost wartime industrial developments.

Walter White People, Politics And Places

III.

Because columns of Walter White, now in the Pacific theatre of war, have been delayed, his regular space is taken this week with an excerpt from his new book, "A Rising Wind" published by Doubleday, Doran & Co.

Chicago Defender 3-3-45

Kinship of Colored Peoples

WORLD WAR II has given to the Negro a sense of kinship with other colored—and also oppressed—peoples of the world. Where he has not thought through or informed himself on the racial angles of colonial peoples and master-race theories, he senses that the struggle of the Negro in the United States is part and parcel of the struggle against imperialism and exploitation in India, China, Burma, Africa, the Philippines, Malaya, the West Indies and South Americas.

The Negro soldier is convinced that as time proceeds that identification of interests will spread even among brown and yellow peoples who today refuse to see the connection between their exploitation by white nations and discrimination against the Negro in the United States.

If the consequences of race prejudice were confined solely to American Negroes, they would constitute no serious problem for the United States which could not be handled after a fashion by repressive legislation and physical force against a troublesome minority. But it may well be proved that the effect upon the American Negro will be one of the most minor results.

British Attitudes 3-3-45

IT HAS ALREADY been seen how the British government made concessions in its official attitude towards the racial practices of some white American soldiers. In making such concessions, however, England has not improved its standing with many of its colored colonials. London correspondents of Indian, South African, West Indian and other newspapers published in the British colonies have manifested a very considerable interest in the handling of the new racial problems created in England by Americans. 3-3-45

British public opinion has not been untouched either. The results have been a marked increase in skepticism even among British people regarding the official government attitude on the race question.

The soldiers of Canada, New Zealand, and strangely enough—in light of her laws forbidding admission to that island of any but whites——Australia will take home with them from European and other battlefronts greatly augmented suspicion and mistrust against the United States because of her treatment of Negro soldiers.

Finally the evil effect of misbehavior by a minority and the timorousness of the American government in meeting such misbehavior will cost America and other nations dearly so far as colored peoples, consisting two thirds of the earth's population, are concerned. Winston Churchill's recent statement that, as the war nears its end, ideology is being forgotten increasingly means to colored peoples that idealism is being conveniently shelved. Colored peoples, particularly in the Pacific, believed, whether correctly or not, that in its later stages the war was being fought to restore empire to Great Britain, France, Holland and Portugal.

Threat Of World War III 3-3-45

IS JAPAN right in what she says to Asia and the Pacific? Every lynching, every race riot is played up by the Japanese over and over again.

What will America's answer be? If already planned race riots and lynching of returning Negro soldiers "to teach them their place" are consumated, if Negro war workers are first fired, World War III will be in the making before the last gun is fired in World War II.

The United States, Great Britain, France and other Allied Nations must choose without delay one of two courses—to revolutionize their racial concepts and practices, to abolish imperialism and grant full equality to all of its people, or else prepare for World War III.

560-1945

Peace Plans and Darker Races

What Stake Have the Darker Nations in the Coming Peace?

AFRO-AMERICAN

1-6-45

New Book Edited by Ex-Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles Gives Insight into World Problems

560

Baltimore, Md.

HAILE SELASSIE

W. V. S. TUBMAN

ELIE LESCOT

On the shoulders of these three statesmen rest the future of the three colored independent nations, Ethiopia, Haiti and Liberia. What will they do?

By RALPH MATTHEWS

WASHINGTON

What stake do the darker nations of the world have in the peace? AFRO-AMERICAN

Some controversial answers to this question are to be found in the new "Guide to the Peace," an elaborate analysis of the world situation prepared under the directorship of former Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles and published by the Dryden Press, Inc.

1-6-45

The book gives a timely and exhaustive study of all of the nations of the world, their colonies and territories, their history and socio-economic workings.

Haiti Over-Populated

Liberia, Ethiopia, Haiti, Puerto Rico, India and various European divisions of Africa are put under the political and economic microscope to see what makes them tick and what adjustments will be necessary for them to function successfully in the post-war world.

Haiti's major problem is overpopulation, a fact which was brought out all too tragically in the massacres and border incidents which flared up several years ago between Haitians and their Dominican neighbors on their tiny island.

Ethiopia's Needs

Ethiopia is in dire need of new agricultural developments and irrigation which will add to her self-sufficiency.

The Dominican Republic, on the other hand, while under-populated and land rich, has allowed its government to degenerate into a virtual military dictatorship because of a fear of mass migration of Haitians, which they say will alter the composition of their country.

In maintaining a strong military establishment to guard against this influx, they have permitted the military machine to become a Frankenstein monster which has in turn practically enslaved the very people it was created to protect.

The Dominicans, then, must solve their own island problem or open their gates for European immigration.

Liberia Lags Behind

1-6-45

Liberia, because of her discouragement of foreign investments due to fear of European domination, lags far behind the nearby colonies in economic development.

In the post-war world she has but two courses open. The Americo-Liberians who control the government must either welcome foreign investments or must turn vigorously to the internal development of the hinterland by spreading education, industrialization and methods of communication.

A far step in this latter direction has already been taken by the American military forces which have been billeted in the country since the outbreak of the war.

Roads and airfields have been built, but whether further development along this line will be extended, now that the Nazi threat to the western hemisphere has been reduced, is problematical. Liberia, then, must capitalize on these developments and carry on from there.

The editors express grave doubts that the Liberians, with their one-party system, will promote the development and education of the native population due to the threat that such education will hold for their continued domination.

1-6-45

Financial Status

Financially, Liberia is better off than either Haiti or Ethiopia on the world trade market. The Liberian dollar is worth 84 cents, while the Ethiopian thaler is stabilized at only 39 cents and the Haitian gourde is worth approximately 20 cents.

Since the outbreak of the war, Liberian exports skyrocketed from $570,000 annually to $7,300,000, due largely to the rubber demand.

Ethiopian exports are placed around $900,000, mostly to England. Haiti's foreign trade has been crippled during the war because 40 per cent of her trade was with France and only 12 per cent with America.

The liberation of France and the curtailing of the submarine menace may restore a portion of this trade, but no improvement is expected until after the war.

Three Men

The future of these three remaining independent nations rests on the shoulders of three men.

Emperor Haile Selassie has been restored to his throne with the aid of British arms and is already making some progress in bringing unity and progress to his nation.

He has just negotiated a new treaty with Great Britain which gives him some security against military aggression, but puts him on the spot to guard against British economic domination. How he manages this will determine the future of Ethiopia for the next generation.

W. V. S. Tubman, president of Liberia, is in a similar position. Can he guide the course of his country so that the economic advantages brought on by the development of the natural resources of the country will accrue to the good of the whole nation, or will he permit the foreign money interests to further enslave his people?

1-6-45

Elie Lescot, president of Haiti, is faced with a situation whereby the annual cash income of most of his citizens is only $20 a year. One company alone, the Haitian-American Development Corporation, employs 75,000. This octopus is growing and spreading, leading toward unrest and revolution.

The vision, courage and honesty of these three men will determine the future of the remaining independent colored nations in the post-war world.

Colonial Representatives Insist Upon Freedom Now

Norfolk Journal & Guide

4-21-45

NEW YORK—Representatives of more than a half million colonial people met for discussion of problems and the shaping of new policies relative to their future status, at the NAACP Colonial Conference, presided over by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, NAACP director of special research, April 6 in the 135th Street Branch of the New York Public Library.

Evident in all discussions during the all-day meet, was the fact that native colonial peoples have no intention of relinquishing their demands and plans for complete independence at the end of World War II.

4-21-45

Members of the committee drafting resolutions to be presented at the San Francisco Conference were: Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, chairman; John R. Andu, Netherlands East Indies; Julio Pinto Gandia, Puerto Rico; Kumar Goshal, India; W. A. Hunton, U. S. A., National Baptist Convention; Francis Nwis-Kofi Nkrumah, Gold Coast, British West Africa; Akiki Nyabongo, Uganda, East Africa; Charles A. Petioni, British West Indians; L. D. Reddick, U. S. A., Schomburg Collection; and Maung Saw Tun, Burma.

Resolutions adopted follow:

1. Colonialism must go, for the reason that it has caused poverty, illiteracy and disease which affects not only the colonies, but also the world and therefore, world peace.

2. There should be an international body established to oversee the transition of peoples from colonial status to such autonomy as colonial peoples themselves may desire.

3. That on such an international body the colonial peoples themselves shall have effective representation.

4. That the prime object of this international body shall be to improve the economic and social condition of the colonial peoples.

4-21-45

Among the representatives were delegates from: Puerto Rico, Jamaica, British Guiana, Barbados, Nigeria, India, Burma, Uganda, East Africa, Indonesia, Netherlands East Indies, W. A. Indies.

Job Color Line Must End In Post-War U.S.—McNutt

When Peace Comes...What?

By Paul V. McNutt

(Third of a Series)

1-13-45

War production records have been smashed, not by any labor elite but by an all-American team of workers, a team powered by white manpower and black manpower.

American manpower in war has included the manpower of all minorities. It includes the power of the handicapped, the power of the over-aged workers, it includes womanpower. American manpower is America. 1-13-45

PAUL V. McNUTT as chairman of the War Manpower Commission is one of President Roosevelt's key men in spurring American war productions to new heights.

The war has shaken many non - democratic traditions. The expansion of production schedules cracked industry's former practice of dividing workers into "white man's jobs" and "black man's jobs." Even before the famous Executive Order 9346 had been issued, some industrial corporations had voluntarily broken away from peacetime hiring practices. Executive Order 9346 made it clear that all employers were expected to meet their labor needs without regard to race, color, creed or national origin.

Executive Order 9346 proved that the United States were engaged in an anti-fascist war—that we were pitting not only our armies against Germany and Japan but also our democratic soldiers of production. 1-13-45

Early in the national emergency the government recognized the necessity for adequate training programs. Vocational schools and pre-employment courses were established by the National Youth Administration. Out of these beginnings, a network of Federal training programs originated, programs that converted raw, unskilled labor into the skilled and semi-skilled war workers. Negroes in large numbers were trained as metal workers, shipfitters, welders. 1-13-45

Negroes have demonstrated their know-how in all the war industries. Their wartime skills are potentially convertible into the pay envelopes of peace.

All Americans know that the impact of war production schedules, the existence of labor stringencies, the formulation of positive Federal policies have multiplied the presence of Negroes in America's plants and factories. But we also know that there are areas, communities, groups that have opposed the Negro's right to enter the war labor market or to advance to high-skill and better-pay jobs. 1-13-45

Hate-strikes against Negroes have thrown a national spotlight on those resistant Americans who are either racist in their philosophies or confused or indifferent to the practices of economic democracy.

Who are the "Americans?" Has any man a "right" to a prejudice, or to a confusion or to an indifference that will impede the flow of war goods to the fighting Americans overseas? None of us has that right. This opposition to Negro manpower in time of war foreshadows a greater opposition in time of peace—unless we lay down policies now to protect Negro manpower and all other minority manpower when the cutbacks and other production adjustments reduce jobs. 1-13-45

Need For Total Approach

Will such democratic policies be evolved in time? Prejudice cannot be swept away by fiat, by wishful thinking, by rhetoric. The industrial progress the Negro has made in the war years can only be guaranteed by an America in which there will be jobs for all Americans who want jobs.

Today seventy per cent of the Negroes in war production are in such emergency mushroom industries as shipbuilding, aircraft production, munitions. The majority of these Negro war workers have acquired skilled and semi-skilled ratings and pay. When military victory reduces our war production requirements, the Negroes will be among the munitions workers who face job dislocation. What will happen to these thousands of workers when the war ends?

Jobs for displaced Negro war workers cannot be put in one compartment and jobs for displaced white war workers in another compartment. The job approach must be a total approach.

The Federal and State governments, the country's ablest industrialists and economists, and many community organizations are planning now on the problem of creating jobs to replace those which peace will terminate. Jobs for all, a "60,000,000-job-America" — this is a capsule way of saying that our approach to peace and reconversion must indeed be total, all-inclusive, all-American. 1-13-45

Will we succeed? The outlook is hopeful. The war has proven American genius to organize production and employment. This genius and know-how can operate the two-way street of war and peace.

American industry has been producing battleships, planes, tanks and all the other instruments of war. American industry can also build roads and hydro-electric power dams, clear slums, create new public housing. 1-13-45

The scientific and industrial brains which have blueprinted the miracles of war production can chart a peace-time America that will bring to harvest three hundred years of labor in the western world.

Is this the American dream? Let us admit it is. But the American dream is not a fantasy. The American dream can be the reality of tomorrow. Our giant war industry, our giant army of war workers can team up to make the American dream an American fact.

The innumerable problems of peace are as solvable as those of war. Jobs and retraining can be provided, both for the demobilized servicemen and for the employees of demobilized local war industries, newcomers to war communities absorbed, workers no longer needed in war industries helped to migrate to other communities or to rural areas, and so on, problem by problem down the entire agenda of a democratic reconversion.

Test of Mature America

1-13-45

The Negro war worker, and the demobilized Negro soldier who in many cases will bring home with him a skill acquired in service, will be the testing points of this new mature America, all sincere Americans are hoping for.

Today, considerable numbers of Negro veterans and Negro war workers have already come to the United States Employment Service of the War Manpower Commission for job help. We in the USES and the WMC are committed to making job rerferrals, without discrimination as to race, color or creed. It is the recognized responsibility of every public employment office to refer job applicants to employers solely on the worker's ability to meet the employer's occupational qualifications test and to perform the job satisfactorily.

The job-placing apparatus exists. The War Manpower Commission, through the USES, today in all communiities, provides effective employment service facilities such as placement, counseling, and employment information. The employment needs of the Negro worker have been and are today of great concern to the WMC Bureau of Placement. Yes, the job-placing apparatus exists for all Americans, including Negroes. But America's USES offices only can be deeply meaningful in an America where there are jobs for all. This point cannot be repeated too often.

Key Role of Labor

The Administration's plans for a "60,000,000-job-America" are shared by most in the ranks of industry and labor. The Negro's industrial future is tied up with labor organizations. 1-13-45

At the time of World War I the bulk of the labor unions were organized on a craft basis—the most important exception being the United Mine Workers—an industrial union with a long history of Negro participation. The majority of Negro workers were concentrated in the heavy industries where only a skilled handful of workers were organized. Few Negroes were occupationally eligible to join the organizations which then dominated the union field.

The rise of industrial unionism profoundly altered the status of Negro labor. Negroes were included and formed important segments of membership in many organizations, such as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the Packing Workers Organizing Committee and the National Maritime Union. The war hastened the trend towards industrial organization in the A.F.L. The A.F.L. Machinists Union, in the aircraft plants for example, accepted all workers. These are facts very pertinent to the future of Negro manpower.

Urges No Job Lines

1-13-45

The new maturity of organized labor, both in the A.F.L. and C.I.O. combined to facilitate the hiring and upgrading of Negroes in war production. If these new attitudes towards Negro unions are projected into the post-war, all workers will benefit, not only the Negro workers.

Post-war America cannot be divided. Jobs for whites cannot be separated from jobs for blacks or jobs for women separated from jobs for men.

No separate job lines can be drawn if we are to have a prosperous democratic America. The color line in industry is a line against democracy. Let us remember that the only lines that counted in making a ship, a plane, a jeep a rifle were the lines on the blueprints.

560-1945

Peace Plans- World Trade Union Conference

COLONIAL CHARTER TO OUTLINE PEACE AIMS

Pittsburgh Courier 3-3-45 Pa.

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Courier's London Correspondent)

3-3-45

LONDON — (By Cable) — Colonial delegates to the World Trade Union Conference and representatives of all colored labor organizations in Great Britain have agreed on a provisional committee appointed for the purpose of calling a Pan-African Congress to draw up a charter for colored peoples to present to the peace conference.

During the week-end, labor delegates from Africa, West India and British Guiana traveled to Manchester where they held a preliminary conference with executive members of the International African Service Bureau, Negro Welfare Centre, Negro Association and other colored leaders.

SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS

A series of successful meetings were held at which Colonial delegates reported decisions of the World Trade Union Conference and told of problems affecting native workers in various parts of Africa, the Caribbean and other colored lands.

Reports were made by Wallace Johnson, general secretary of the West Africa Youth League and delegate to the International Trade Conference from the Sierra Leone Trade Union Congress; Ken Hill, third vice president of the People's National Party, Jamaica, and delegate to the trade conference from the Trade Union Council, and Hubert Crichlow, president of the British Guiana Trade Union Council.

3-3-45

MANY REPRESENTATIVES

Other speakers included Learie Constantine, welfare officer, British Ministry of Labor.

Kenya, East Africa, was represented at the preliminary conference by Jomo Kenyatta, general secretary of the Kukuyu African Association; James Taylor, former president of the Gold Coast Negro Welfare Centre; Dr. Peter Milliard, former president of the Negro Association, Panama Republic; Tomoso Makonnen, executive secretary of the International African Service Bureau, and many other representatives of African nationalist organizations.

Fraternal delegates to welcome African and West Indian labor delegates were sent to the closing session of the preliminary conference by colored personnel attached to the American Red Cross in Great Britain. American Negro nurses and British colonials serving with the Royal Air Force and British army also had a hand in this. The visitors later were entertained by Red Cross officials, headed by Chester Gray, director of the club at Manchester.

3-3-45

It was agreed that an all-American United Front Committee be set up to join with African, West Indian and other movements to work out plans for the Pan-African Congress scheduled to take place in Paris next September.

560-1945

Peacetime Draft Discussion

Peace Draft Plan Is Assailed On Racial, Educational Basis

Richmond Dispatch

Richmond, Va.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Peacetime draft proposals were assailed on moral, racial and educational grounds today as opponents opened their fight before the House Postwar Military Policy Committee.

6-7-45

In the first of three days allotted to the opposition after two days of proponents' testimony spokesmen for a large segment of the nation's educators urged defeat or postponement of consideration of universal training legislation until after the war.

The American Council on Education, through A. J. Brumbaugh, vice-president, saw in the plan to build up a large reserve army through peacetime inductions a threat of "regimentation of the mind."

"It is impossible," he told the Woodrum committee, "to give only military training—the body cannot be regimented without comparable regimentation of the mind."

6-7-45

Enactment of draft legislation, he contended, would be an admission "that we have no faith in collective security and international action."

A similar view was taken by the Rev. Dr. William J. Miller, president of the University of Detroit, who contends the legislation would "create suspicion, mistrust and fear among our allies" and would "stimulate a universal armaments race."

As an alternative, he called for "universal health and character education." Father Miller spoke for the Michigan council to oppose peacetime military conscription.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, through William H. Hastie, of Washingtin, assailed the proposal on the ground it would "permit the continuation of present racial segregation and discrimination in the armed forces."

Postponement of action until the end of the war was recommended by Dr. Gould Wickey, of Washington, executive secretary of the National Commission on Christian Higher Education of the Association of American Colleges.

In the meantime, Dr. Wickey urged, Congress should set up a commission representing the armed forces, education, religion and industry "to study the best ways in which national security can be achieved without injury to democratic ideals."

Dr. J. L. Davis' Stand

Dr. John L. Davis, of Indianapolis, executive secretary of the board of higher education of the Disciples of Christ, told the committee that only military necessity "should compel us to embark on such a course."

"Where is that necessity in the immediate postwar years?" he asked. "Are we getting ready to throw the Russians out of China? Do we fear Britain's postwar plans?"

Speaking for the People's Lobby, of which he is executive secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh, of Washington, declared peacetime conscription "won't help America because we can't scare anybody by it."

"Russia doesn't and won't want to fight us even when much stronger," March claimed, "because she knows that within five to 10 years we will adopt a socialized economy or have chaos and probably civil war."

The proposed legislation would "tend to imperil the mutual trust of the members of the United Nations," the committee was told by Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick, of New York, representing the Liberal party of New York State.

Hastie Opposes Peacetime Draft

The Afro American

Baltimore Md.

ST. LOUIS.—(ANP)—Compulsory peacetime military training was condemned by Dr. William H. Hastie, dean of the Howard University Law School, at a Public Affairs Forum meeting at the YMCA here Dec. 2.

Dean Hastie said, "One year in a federally sponsored system of segregation would have a large and serious effect on our youth and the principles of racial equality toward which we have been working.

12-15-45

"No one can be so well prepared as to win another war. The next war, if any, will result in the destruction of civilization."

He based his opposition to peacetime conscription upon his experience with the un-American policies of the government setup while serving as civilian aide to the Secretary of War and judge of the Court of Virgin Islands.

'Mental Regimentation' Seen By Educators In Draft Plan

Montgomery Advertiser

Ala.

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP)—Peacetime draft proposals were assailed on moral, racial, and educational grounds today as opponents opened their fight before the House postwar military committee.

In the first of three days allotted to the opposition after two days of proponents' testimony, spokesmen for a large segment of the nation's educators urged defeat or postponement of consideration of universal training legislation until after the war.

6-7-45

Mental Regimentation Seen

The American council on education, through A. J. Brambaugh, vice-president, saw in the plan to build up a large reserve Army through peacetime inductions a threat of "regimentation of the mind."

"It is impossible," he told the Woodrum committee, "to give only military training—the body cannot be regimented without comparable regimentation of the mind."

Enactment of draft legislation, he contended, would be an admission "that we have no faith in collective security and international action."

A similar view was taken by the Rev. Dr. William J. Miller, president of the University of Detroit, who contended the legislation would "create suspicion, mistrust and fear among our Allies" and would "stimulate a universal armaments race."

As an alternative, he called for "universal health and character education." Father Miller spoke for the Michigan council to oppose peacetime military conscription.

6-7-45

The national association for the advancement of colored people, through William H. Hastie, of Washington, assailed the proposal on the ground it would "permit the continuation of present racial segregation and discrimination in the armed forces."

Postponement of action until the end of the war was recommended by Dr. Gould Wickey, of Washington, executive secretary of the national commission on Christian higher education of the association of American colleges.

In the meantime, Dr. Wickey urged, Congress should set up a commission representing the armed forces, education, religion and industry "to study the best ways in which national security can be achieved without injury to Democratic ideals."

Dr. John Luodavis of Indianapolis, executive secretary of the board of higher education of the Disciples of Christ, told the committee that only military necessity "should compel us to embark on such a course."

"Where is that necessity in the immediate postwar years?" he asked. "Are we getting ready to throw the Russians out of China? Do we fear Britain's postwar plans?"

Speaking for the people's lobby of which he is executive secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh, of Washington, declared peacetime conscription "won't help America because we can't scare anybody by it."

The proposed legislation would "tend to imperil the mutual trust of the members of the United Nations," the committee was told by Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick, of New York, representing the Liberal party of New York State.

PEACETIME U. S. DRAFT ASSAILED

Ala.

Birmingham Age

'Regimentation Of Mind' Charged By Educator In House Hearing

6-7-45

MORAL OBJECTION IS ALSO EXPLAINED

Racial Opposition Given By Group, Pointing To Discrimination Fear

BY WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON, June 6—(AP)—Peacetime draft proposals were assailed on moral, racial and educational grounds today as opponents opened their fight before the House postwar military policy committee.

In the first of three days allotted to the opposition after two days of proponents' testimony, spokesmen for a large segment of the nation's educators urged defeat or postponement of consideration of universal training legislation until after the war.

The American Council on Education, through A. J. Brumbaugh, vice president, saw in the plan to build up a large reserve army through peacetime inductions a threat of "regimentation of the mind."

6-7-45

"It is impossible," he told the Woodrum committee, "to give only military training—the body cannot be regimented without comparable regimentation of the mind."

Enactment of draft legislation he contended, would be an admission "that we have no faith in collective security and international action."

Suspicion Is Feared

A similar view was taken by the Rev. Dr. William J. Miller, president of the University of Detroit, who contended the legislation would "create suspicion, mistrust and fear among our Allies" and would "stimulate a universal armaments race."

As an alternative, he called for "universal health and character education." Father Miller spoke for the Michigan Council to Oppose Peacetime Military Conscription.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, through William H. Hastie, of Washington, assailed the proposal on the ground it would "permit the continuation of present racial segregation and discrimination in the armed forces."

6-7-45

Postponement of action until the end of the war was recommended by Dr. Gould Wickey, of Washington, executive secretary of the National Commission on Christian Higher Education of the Association of American Colleges.

In the meantime, Dr. Wickey urged, Congress should set up a commission representing the armed forces, education, religion and industry "to study the best ways in which national security can be achieved without injury to democratic ideals."

Dr. John L. Davis, of Indianapolis, executive secretary of the Board of Higher Education of the Disciples of Christ, told the committee that only military necessity "should compel us to embark on such a course."

6-7-45

Questions Posed

"Where is that necessity in the immediate postwar years?" he asked. "Are we getting ready to throw the Russians out of China? Do we fear Britain's postwar plans?"

Speaking for the people's lobby of which he is executive secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh, of Washington, declared peacetime conscription "won't help America because we can't scare anybody by it."

"Russia doesn't and won't want to fight us even when much stronger," Marsh claimed, "because she knows that within five to 10 years we will adopt a socialized economy or have chaos and probably civil war."

Military Training May Help Bias

Balt., Md.

Afro-American

6-23-45

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

WASHINGTON

Persons who assume to speak for colored people oppose the bill to provide universal military training in peacetime because of race discrimination and segregation in the armed forces.

Such an argument is plausible but weak. Defeat of the bill will not promote the abolition of race discrimination or segregation in the armed forces.

Its enactment, giving youth from all sections of the country and all walks of life a year of training in the Army or Navy, ought to contribute to better understanding and greater tolerance.

May Mean Retrogression

Defeat may mean retrogression to the situation which existed prior to 1940, when the only colored units in the Regular Army were two skeletonized regiments of infantry and cavalry each and a few units of quartermaster troops and medical detachments, and the only colored personnel in the Navy were messmen.

Opponents of the bill have advanced no plan for the utilization of colored personnel in the armed forces in the post-war period. They evidently favor the maintenance of a body of professional soldiers in the from of the Regular Army.

Any plan which would end segregation in a professional army would be more effective in a system of universal military training because of the difference in the caliber of men who would volunteer for service in a professional army and those who would be required to undergo a year of training under a system of universal military training.

Cites May Bill

The bill introduced by Representative Andrew J. May, of Ky., chairman, House Military Affairs Committee, would provide military or naval training for all male citizens or resident aliens who attain the age of 18 years.

It contains three declarations by Congress:

1. That the reservoir of trained manpower built up at an enormous expense during World War II should not be permitted to become empty again as after World War I, but should be perpetuated for the peace and security of future generations.

2. That this end can be assured only through a system of military training for all able-bodied male citizens in their early manhood, based upon the democratic principle that all citizens of a free State should be trained to defend their country.

3. That the training system should be inaugurated as soon as practicable after the cessation of hostiliites in order to utilize material resources and training experience which will otherwise soon be dissipated.

Would Be in Reserves

Under regulations prescribed by the President, every male citizen and resident alien, within four years after he becomes 18 years of age, would be given a year's training in the Army or Navy. Upon completion of his training, he would be enrolled as a reservist in the land or naval forces for a period of six years, but would not be subject to compulsory military service except in an emergency declared by Congress.

A better approach to the question of universal military training than the negative one taken by the NAACP would be to support the bill and after its passage petition the President to include in the regulations he is authorized to prescribe a prohibition against race discrimination and segregation in the Army and Navy.

Traditional Policy

The policy of the War Department of not intermingling colored and white enlisted personnel in the same regimental organization was proclaimed by President Roosevelt from the White House on Oct. 9, 1940.

The reason given for sticking to that policy was that it had proved satisfactory over a long period of years and to make changes would produce situations destructive to morale and detrimental to the preparations for national defense.

Under the stress of war, however, Army policy has proved flexible. Before the collapse of Germany, colored infantrymen were fighting side by side with white infantrymen of the First, Second, Ninth, 78th, 99th and 104th Divisions of the First Army, and when the war in Italy ended, the 92nd Infantry Division had assigned to it a white and a Japanese-American regiment.

Stimson Testifies

Testifying in favor of universal Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson last Friday told the House Committee on Post-War Military Policy that a year's military training for the defense of the country would have valuable "incidental advantages," implying that it would lessen race and religious prejudice and teach democratic principles. On this point he said:

"Again, a system of universal military training would draw together into close association, acquaintance, and friendship our youth from the plains and the mountains and our youth from the cities and industrial areas.

"In the universal sharing of common facilities and common tasks these boys would rub smooth the sharp edges of prejudice, sectionalism, and lack of understanding between groups in different parts of our land. Their democracy would take on new breadth and strength.

"The best way to teach a man to love his country is to let him know his fellow countrymen. In that way America ceases to be an abstraction and becomes a fact in each man's individual knowledge."

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower also urged members of Congress to adopt compulsory military training. His views were expressed in a letter to the House Select Committee on Post-War Military Policy.

Hastie Says Peacetime Military Conscription Is 'Unsound' in Principle

Iowa Bystander 6-14-45

Des Moines, Iowa

Washington, D. C.—Appearing before the Post-War Military Policy Committee, Judge William H. Hastie, on behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. expressed strong opposition to peacetime military cnscription "both because it is generally unsound in principle and because the present bill would permit the continuation of racial segregation and discrimination in the armed forces."

Taking sharp issue with the promise of the bill that peacetime conscription will promote peace and security of future generations, Judge Hastie stated that in launching a program of universal peacetime training and preparation for war, it can be reasonably anticipated that all great nations will attempt to equal or surpass our military program.

"International competition to see what nations can be best prepared for war is the most certain path to war," Hastie declared. "The nations best prepared for war rattle the sabre at the less prepared. If the less prepared nations sullenly bow to the threat of force, it is only to gain time in which to make ready to match that force and ultimately to become strong enough for the rattling of their own sabres. The history of mankind is the story of the futility of this process as insurance against war."

"The Negro citizen," Judge Hastie said, "is unalterably opposed to giving the military blanket authority without any safeguards whatever to protect them against segregaion, discrimination and other abuse.

Deeply Resentful

6-14-45

"It is no secret," he continued, "that the Negro today is deeply resentful over much of the treatment he has received at the hands of the Army and Navy. In peacetime, and even until this war was well advanced, the Navy excluded Negroes from naval services, except as messmen. Even the partial relaxation of this rule in the exigencies of this war leaves large numbers of technical specialties closed to the Negro seaman. Entire areas of naval service, for example naval aviation, are still completely closed to Negroes. We have no reason to believe that the Navy contemplates the use of Negroes in any capacity other than as messmen when it returns to a peacetime basis

In pointing out that the same limitations upon the use of Negro personnel obtain in the Army, he said, "Except for attached units, Negro enlisted men in the Medical Corps have been restricted to 'Sanitary Companies.' The work of these units may be common labor in and about hospitals; it may be drainage for mosquito control; it may be the digging of latrines in the theatre of war or any other labor service required for sanitation. All of this is necessary work. Much of it is particularly unpleasant work. Certainly the Negro should do his share of it. But so far as I know, there is not a single white Sanitary Company in the Army."

6-14-45

He also pointed to the fact that while the Army was trying desperately to recruit 10,000 young men with scientific training for meterologists and weather observers, all qualified Negroes were rejected because "the Army took the position that it had seven (7) Negroes in this field and that was enough. Negroes are excluded entirely from other such sought after types of training and service. For example," Hastie said, "even today the Air Force will not accept a Negro pilot in the Air Transport Command."

Blames Army's Policy

Hastie blamed the Army's policy of racial segregation for much of the discrimination against Negroes in training and service opportunities. Declaring that it is no more possible to provide opportunities in the segregated 10 percent of the Army equal to those in the remaining 90 percent than it is possible to duplicate in a Jim-Crow coach the many facilities of a deluxe passenger train, he stated that "the exigencies of the policy of racial segregation rather than considerations of military advantage come to be the controlling factor in building ten percent of the Army. All of this is too high a price to pay for the maintenance of a segregated pattern which serves no useful purpose."

6-14-45

"One of the most ridiculous and extreme manifestations of this practice of segregation is to be found in Puerto Rico. Here the Army has introduced a system of separate colored and white Puerton Rican units. I do not know what test of racial identity applied or can be applied, but the mere matter of practical difficulty does not deter those who make a fetish of racial segregation."

Speaking of the responsibility of the Federal Government, Hastie said "Whatever private individuals may do. or even the States within their exclusive sphere, it is a basic concept that our Federal Government shall not make racial distinctions in the administration of the national business. This should be especially true of the military establishment whose very mission is the safeuarding of the institutions of a democracy. We gain little if now and in the future the military protects us from Hitler's brand of racism, yet, itself exemplifies and by its own organiaztion impresses upon the minds of our young men a domestic brand of racism equally at variance with democratic ideas."

6-14-45

In conclusion, Hastie declared, "The responsibility of Congress to require in uniequivocal language that in the Army and Navy the selection of individuals for training, the determination of the type of training which an individual shall receive asd the organization of units both for training and for service shall be accomplished without regard to or distinction on account of race."

Ban On Discrimination Approved

New York Age
N.Y. N.Y.

MEXICO CITY — The abolition of racial discrimination, immigration measures against undesirable aliens and the participation of women in inter-American activities were among the resolutions approved March 6th by the Inter-American Organization Committee of the Chapultepec Conference. 3-17-45

The resolution on racial discrimination, submitted by Haiti and modified by the U. S., Colombian and Brazilian delegations, recommended in its final form the reaffirmation of the "principles recognized by all the American Governments of equality of rights and opportunities for all men regardless of race and religion." 3-17-45

It urged that the Governments of the nations represented at the conference "present with all the means in their power all that may provoke discrimination among individuals because of racial and religious reasons.

Fears 'Big 3' Won't Insure Peace For All

N.Y. Amsterdam News 4-7-45

N.Y., N.Y.

Profound Article States Discouraging Days Ahead—Unless the Tide Changes

By A. M. WENDELL MALLIET

We have been trying our best to find some reason to justify a reasonable man's faith in the efforts of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union to re-organize the world on a basis of permanent peace and security as outlined in the Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms, but although we are within a month's time of the meeting of the San Francisco Conference, the outlook is not only dark and confusing, but discouraging. 4-7-45

We write with a consciousness of the grave and heavy responsibility of the press. Sometimes conclusions are reached without all the information which would have made for more sober judgments. At other times, the interest of a small minority is allowed to overweigh the interest of the majority or that of the people of the world as a whole. As we have fought to achieve complete victory over our enemies, so should we fight to bring peace, security and prosperity to the people and the nations of the earth.

How War Started

But as there is such a thing as the spirit of laws, there is also the spirit of national or international policies. Our global war started out as a sort of local affair and later developed into an international conflict, affecting all races, colors, creeds and nationalities. When the going was dangerously tough and the outcome of the struggle in serious and reasonable doubt, the leaders of the embattled nations shouted some of the most lofty pretensions that certainly did not agree with their policies and attitudes on those questions before the conflict arose. 4-7-45

To say that Dumbarton Oaks failed in its purpose in laying any adequate foundation for world peace and security for all peoples is to put the truth of the matter mildly. At Bretton Woods the magic of money came into play and only God knows where it will land the so-called common people. It looks to us like the jailer coming with his ball and chain. At Yalta the big boys who played with power politics won and lost, each in his turn. And now, San Francisco!

Objectives and Policies

In all their efforts, plans, objectives and policies, the unchallenged power which is now possessed by Britain, Russia and America seems to have created a degree of insanity and swollen pride. Other than lip service, no one hears a word about the rights and responsibilities of small nations, the necessity of banning all forms of discrimination and racism within the borders of every single member of the United Nations; the problem of slave and forced labor in the colonies of imperial nations, and the admission that these evils exist and should be eliminated as a condition precedent to anything like world peace and security. 4-7-45

Fascist elements in the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union have already violated the spirit and letter of the Atlantic Charter. Of course, the Atlantic Charter is said to be no part of Russian war policy. Most of us, however, are closer to the United States and Great Britain than to Russia. When these three nations opened the door to Italy and exchanged diplomatic representatives, they broke the back of the war aims of the small nations, and betrayed Ethiopia, Greece, Albania, and France, not to mention Great Britain, who bore the brunt of the war while other nations "fiddled."

Rise of Fascism 4-7-45

It is said that Count Dino Grandi, former fascist ambassador to Britain, is well liked and respected in that country. A high-ranking English official recently declared that Grandi was not among the war criminals. The United States has become the battleground of Italian propaganda to make good its turn-coat policy. In two wars, one before fascism arose in that country, Italy found herself in the German camp, as a member of the Triple Alliance, and later as a member of the Berlin-Rome-Tokio Axis, as a fascist nation. In both instances, she betrayed and stabbed friend and foe in the back.

Although less than a month as Italian ambassador in the United States, Alberto Tarchiani has already become a nuisance. Hopping on trains between Washington and New York, he is working overtime to do the dirty work of his countrymen. Now comes the influential and scholarly Benedetto Croce, philosopher, who writing in the Free World for April, says among other things:

"The hidden but essential point of all Italy's relations with international life today, the point which non-Italians fail to see, which many of us even dare not formulate clearly, is that Italy, formally defeated according to laws of war and peace, does not feel defeated. She cannot adapt herself to being considered among the defeated nations, but affirms her right to be considered among the victorious." 4-7-45

Brazen Insolence

Seldom has such brazen insolence come from the spokesman of a criminal nation, which of its own free will violated all the rules of international law and human decency, and made open warfare upon its so-called friends, as in the case of Ethiopia and Great Britain, and its neighbors, France, Greece, and Albania and Yugoslavia.

Croce is a philosopher and was, at one time if not all the time, a friend of that other Italian philosopher, Giovanni Gentile, who as fascist minister of education, reorganized Italian education and made it an additional force in the life of Mussolini's Italy. He also formulated the philosophical bases and principles which served as the foundation of fascism.

False Prophets?

What we are now witnessing is that peculiar but diabolical use of the intellect and philosophy to bring Italy back to the ways of democracy which a false prophet, Gentile, had wooed and won to the bed chamber of fascism. Tarchiani, Mayor La Guardia, Luigi Antonini, Justice Ferdinand Pecora and others should be watched very closely. Some of these names, well known to Negro New Yorkers, were much in the limelight on the side of Il Duce when his black shirted troops were pouring into Ethiopia and raining gas and fire bombs from the skies upon old, young and defenseless people in that unhappy country. The band is gathering strength again. 4-7-45

The Negro who is alert and worth his salt should get busy and do every conceivable thing that is right and proper to defeat the deliberate machinations of the Italians in connection with the San Francisco Conference or any other policy making conference of the United Nations. Italian representation at any of these conferences, excepting the peace conference which will whittle down the defeated—and Italy is a defeated nation—will be against the peace, order and security of the world for which our sons are fighting and dying.

Memo To 'Big Three'

The demand for the handing over of the Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland to Ethiopia should be so insistent that not even the power-swollen "Big Three" could afford to ignore the will of the people. By no means should Italy be made eligible to membership in the United Nations.

Shows Need For Governing Body

Chi., Ill.
Chicago Def.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Establishment of a world colonial commission was called for by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois at the Senate foreign relations committee here last week.

Testifying at the two-day hearing on the San Francisco charter, Dr. DuBois spoke in favor of adopting the charter but pointed out that it gave no recognition to the wishes of colonial peoples.

"The colonial system of government . . . is undemocratic, socially dangerous and a main cause of wars," DuBois said. "The United Nations, recognizing democracy as the only just way of life for all peoples, make it a first statute of international law that at the earliest practical moment no nation or group shall be deprived of effective voice in its own government."

"What was true of the United States in the past is true of world civilization today," he said, "we cannot exist half slave and half free." 7-21-45

Appearing on the first day of the hearings alloted to the opponents of the charter, Dr. DuBois, one of three Negro consultants who attended the United Nations Conference, pointed out that "human rights" were mentioned four times throughout the charter but was contradicted in a passage which stated:

Hits Contradiction

"Nothing contained in the present charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the members to submit such matters to settlement under the present charter.'

"Under these circumstances," DuBois declared, "the United States Senate . . . should make clear a new evaluation of the whole colonial system as practiced in the 19th and 20th century, and should declare that:

"The main groups of mankind, commonly called races, are essentially equal in capability of progress and deserve equality of treatment, opportunity and respect. In the eyes of both science and religion, all men are brothers, with rights of freedom of belief and expression, freedom of domicile and communication; justice before the courts and equal civil, economic, political and social rights.

"The first duty of civilization is to see to it that no human being is deprived of these rights because of poverty, disease or ignorance."

DuBois proposed that in addition to the Trustee Council, an international colonial commission on which colonial people would be represented "with power to investigate the facts concerning colonies and areas not under mandate, and shall implement this declaration under the authority of the Security Council."

"I believe that the proposed charter of the United Nations is . . . a far step toward peace and justice," DuBois told the committee, "and just because it is so fair an effort it is imperative that in ratifying this international treaty, the Senate of the United States should insist on certain reservations or projected amendments which it will at the earliest opportunity propose.

"These amendments or reservations have to do with colonies. We who were born and educated in the 19th century, have not only seen the colonial system keep parts of the world in continuous turmoil for 150 years, but in the 20th century, we have twice seen the very foundations of civilization imperilled by bitter rivalry and greed arising from the ownersihp and exploitation of human beings under colonial imperialism," he said.

DuBois proposed that the charter should "make clear and unequivocal," the "straightforward stand of the civilized world for race equality, and the universal application of the democratic way of life, not simply as philanthropy and justice, but to save human civilization from suicide."

DuBois sharply rapped the United States delegation for aligning "itself repeatedly with the great colonial powers rather than with China and Russia whose future does not depend upon colonial aggression."

New World Charter Is Forward Step—Dr. Bunche

Baltimore Md

Proclaims Trusteeship Plan for Dependencies as Definitely Better Than Mandate System

afro-American

WASHINGTON

"The establishment of permanent machinery for peace is vital both to individual and world progress," Dr. Ralph Bunche, State Department official, told the AFRO Thursday in discussing the highlights of the United Nations charter. Dr. Bunche, associate chief, Division of Dependent Area Affairs, Office of Special Political Affairs, was sent to the United Nations Conference as a technical expert.

Dr. Bunche

7-21-45

Commends Trusteeships

He said that the creation of trusteeships over the old League of Nations, the Mandate system, is a definite improvement, that it was broader in scope, and the objectives are more precisely defined.

Under the old system, the nation which held a mandate was not accountable to the same extent to the league for the welfare of minority groups.

Under the Trusteeship plan, the General Assembly and Trusteeship Council have power to accept petitions in any form and from any source, and representatives of the organization can make periodic visits to territories under Trusteeship.

Human Rights

The plan also provides that nations holding mandates are responsible for the promotion of political, educational and social advancements of the inhabitants.

Another important gain emphasized by Dr. Bunche, is the charter's provision for a new respect for human rights; fundamental freedom for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and for recognition of the interdependence of all peoples.

"It is our assumption," explained Dr. Bunche, "that this will provide the mechanism to put the dependent territories on an international scale.

Report by Nations

"If carried out in good faith, it should lead to a vast improvement of the welfare of peoples who formerly lived without hope of advancement."

He stressed the fact that this is the first time in any international setup, that the administrating state would submit reports to the international organization on the conduct of their administrations.

Dr. Bunche pointed out that "one of the most important adjuncts to the World Charter is the establishing of international, economic, and social co-operation which promote:

Cites Other Benefits

"Higher standards of living, full employment and conditions of economic and social progress and development.

"Solutions of international economic, social, health and related problems, and international cultural and educational co-operation.

7-21-45

"And finally, universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion."

Co-operative Pledge

He explained that all members of the conference pledged to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in the charter.

The duty of the Economic and Social Council, said Dr. Bunche, is te set up commissions for the promotion of human rights, which he likened to the Constitution of the United States in that it sets forth a number of cardinal principles for conduct between nations.

V-J Day Presents Special Problems

Philadelphia Tribune (Pa.)

8-18-45

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

(By The Associated Negro Press)

WASHINGTON— Demobilization of a vast military establishment and the reconversion to peacetime pursuits of an industrial plant expanded beyond original belief are, in a broad spread destruction as it does today. And while America managed to escaped the physical devastation that had hit Europe and the Far East, it nevertheless felt the impact of these blows throughout its economic, political and social structure. No segment of its populace went untouched by the events of the war years.

8-18-45

Reconstruction

Like other Americans, Negroes must now go about the task of reconstruction—among themselves and in concert with other Americans. In same instances the problems will be identical; in others, peculiar. In either case they will involve the return of servicemen to civilian life, the development of an up-to-date agency to deal with their problems for years to come, the struggle for jobs by all, and finally, the release of war-incurred tension.

It is not the administration view that America was not ready for the sudden collapse of Japan, but privately the oninion is held that much more could have been done to facilitate the adjustments that must now be made than has been done.

Army of Occupation

A large army of occupation is going to be maintained both in Europe and in Japan, the war department has already disclosed. But as quickly as it can, the department intends to release men from the service and return them to their homes. This they expect to be able to do at the rate of 500,000 men a month, using present redeployment centers in addition to the separation centers now in operation.

8-18-45

The job of bringing men back from overseas will tax shipping but the job, the department says, will be done expeditiously. It is to be expected, however that service troops may be delayed a bit longer than others since they will probably be required to dismantle and load equipment that is to be brought back here. Of course, certain types of equipment will be usable abroad and so disposed of there.

Aid To Veterans

The Veterans administration, with Gen. Omar Bradley taking over direction this week, is shaping up into a model agency. The insistence of Negroes that a Negro special assistant be appointed is likely to meet with a warm reception. The idea has already been advanced in administration circles and is understood to be looked upon favorably.

The realization of this objective will give some assurance to Negro veterans that they will have some protection for their rights under the GI Bill of Rights. Apart from that Gen. Bradley is regarded as a "square-shooter", certainly superior to his predecessor Gen. Frank T. Hines who continually maintained that there is no problem.

The Job Problem

Growing like a spectre now is the prospect of unemployment. Even before President Truman transmitted the reply of the Allies to the Japanese government, the war department had announced a cutback in material requirements of some $4 billions. This was on Saturday.

Later in the day the department disclosed that procurement would be cutback some 80 percent for the army service forces and more than 90 percent for the army air force.

Then came the announcement of the Navy department that construction on 95 war ships, work valued at $1,200,000,000 had been ordered stopped, and that work on some 160 district craft would also cease. These cancellations, however, have been distributed along the three coast lines for various reasons one of which is to avoid too much displacement in any one area.

Reports of the labor department and from the FEPC all along have pointed out that the Negro's greatest gains have been in war industries—munitions and shipbuilding. A perusal of cutback announcements would easily show that the weight of these changes will fall heavily upon the war industries, thereby throwing millions of Negroes out of work in high-paying jobs.

8-18-45

The chances of reempoyment, either in their skills or at comparable wages in other pursuits, will be seriously impaired by the return of servicemen who also will be seeking jobs. The speed with which industry is able to reconvert will determine the intensity of the problem and the length of its duration.

Finally, attention is beginning to focus upon threats of outbreaks. Sociologists and other observers in recent years have been viewing with unguarded alarm the possibility that racial incidents will develop with increasing frequency when the war emergency is behind us. The Federal Bureau of Investigations has been and is on the alert for signs of domestic unrest, and steps are being taken to check any such incidents.

SITE OF UNO HOME MUST BE IN NORTH

Pittsburgh Courier

England Supports India's Demand That United Nation's Permanent Home Be in City Which Draws No Color Line

Pa.

LONDON—American delegates attending the meeting of the United Nations Preparatory Commission here were reminded of their country's jim-crow policy last week when Great Britain joined India in demanding that the United Nations select an American city which draws no color line as the site of the UNO's permanent home.

The question of racial discrimination was first raised by the Indian delegate, Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar. His request was supported by a British delegate who read a paper, saying that it is "indispensable that the area be such that all members of the United Nations should be able to feel at home in it, whatever their racial origin or the character of their State."

12-29-45

NO COLOR LINE

Both the Indian and British delegates expressed concern in selecting an American city which draws no color line as the site of UNO headquarters.

Since that time the Commission voted to select an eastern U. S. city as the site for the permanent UNO.

The British warned the UNO to "go slow" in selecting an American site, but recommended that the distance of the capital from Washington be considered because "very close proximity to Washington might affect the character of the delegation to the UNO assembly."

12-29-45

LIBERIA AGAINST U.S.

Liberia and South Africa, along with twelve other countries, voted against the United States as a permanent site for the UNO.

Ethiopia was among the countries that did not vote.

RUSSIA JOINS PHILIPPINES

P. J. Noel-Naker, a British UNO delegate, objected to the United States being called the "host state" and Russia joined the Philippines to provide a precdure which recognizes the principle that dependent peoples should elect their spokesmen under UNO supervision. America voted against the measure.

British delegates said a better site than any yet offered might still be found and noted there are a number of beautiful small towns in the eastern United States, some with fine historical and cultural associations."

At a late hour the City of Boston appeared to be favored by the majority of the delegates as a site for a permanent UNO home.

Many GI's Plan to Study, Go in Business After War

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md. 1-6-45

WASHINGTON—Over 30,000 of the 700,000 colored troops now in the Army plan to return to full time school or college after the war, according to results of an Army survey, the war Department announced last week.

About one-third of all colored soldiers expressed definite interest in taking part-time school or college courses after leaving the service, but most of them have not made definite plans.

Others Plan Businesses

Based on the same survey, it is estimated that 7 per cent of all colored troops have definite plans to start a business of their own after the war, and 4 per cent plan to operate farms.

Highest interest among men planning to go into business for themselves is in retailing. services, is the largest single group with 18 per cent; service establishments, 17 per cent; food retailing, 7 per cent; and all other retail establishments, including eating places, 29 per cent.

Most of these men are planning to start small businesses—three out of five saying they plan to invest $2,000 or less.

Majority to Enter College

Of the men with definite plans for full-time school or college attendance, most are under 25 years old and single, and two out of three are qualified to enter college.

Although a large portion of the men in the army were not familiar with the details of the "GI Bill of Rights" at the time the survey was made, the response indicated a high degree of interest on the part of troops in taking advantage of the bill.

Under this bill, all tuition, and fees up to $500 are paid by the government, and the veteran receives $50 a month if single, $75 a month if he has one or more dependents.

The survey was made by the Research Branch Information and Education Division, Army Service Forces.

30,000 Negroes in Army Plan Return to School

Chicago Tribune 1-7-45

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—More than 30,000 of the 700,000 enlisted Negro soldiers in the army intend to return to full time school or college after the war. The war department, reporting the results of a survey today, said 7 per cent plan to start a business of their own after the war. Four per cent intend to operate farms.

College sets special vets curriculum

Los Angeles Tribune 4-16-45

HAMPTON, Va. — Veterans of World War II who enroll at Hampton Institute, one of the 32 private Negro colleges and universities banded together in the United Negro College Fund currently seeking $1,550,000, will enjoy the advantage of special curriculum and of counseling services that are especially adapted to their needs and interests, President Ralph P. Bridgman announced this week.

Designed to help returning service men and women speed their preparation for gainful employment in civilian life, and also complete their college education, the Hampton program for veterans will go into effect, step by step, beginning with this summer.

Those who come to Hampton may speed up their education by (1) short pre-employment sequences in various branches of agriculture, leading to certificates; (2) accelerated individual work in certain regular trade curricula, leading to diplomas; and (3) accelerated individual work in certain courses regularly required for degrees. 4-16-45

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Although graduation from an accredited high school is usually required for admission to Hampton Institute, a certain number of ex-service men and women, who present evidence of ability to pursue the course they desire, may be admitted to short sequences for certificates, whether or not they have completed high school.

The requirement of high school graduation may also be waiver in the case of applicants for admission on an accelerated basis who have the equivalent of a high school education through training and experience in military service. Each ex-service record will be evaluated in accordance with standards developed by the American Council of Education and a certain number of credits assigned respectively for length of military service, specialized training, and courses completed under the Armed Forces Institute.

No Comfort For Colored World

Pittsburgh Courier Pgh. Pa. 2-24-45

The first thing one notices in looking over the document released at Yalta, Crimea, over the signatures of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, is that there is no mention whatever about the subject of colored peoples in Asia and Africa.

Great space is taken up with what is to be done to and with Germany when she is finally defeated; what is to be done about establishing law and order in liberated Europe and reintroducing democracy; what is to be done to and with Poland and Yugoslavia, and how peace is to be maintained and established.

But there is not one word in this historic document about the restoration of sovereignty to Burma, India, Java, Sumatra, Malaya, the islands of Oceania, and the numerous once-independent States of Africa.

So far as these hundreds of millions of poor people are concerned, the Crimea Conference might as well not have taken place.

We can be quite sure that if no mention was made of Allied intentions regarding these people, the intention is not to change their status in the post-war world.

This confirms the suspicions of those who did not take the Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter seriously, but simply looked upon them as propaganda documents to hold the allegiance of these enslaved peoples when their aid was desperately needed and victory seemed far off.

Perhaps it is just as well, however, that no flowery promises were made, such as those contained in Wilson's Fourteen Points and never realized.

Perhaps it is better that the dark peoples of the world understand that no Great White Santa Claus is going to give them their freedom on a silver platter, no matter what sacrifices they may have made for the preservation of the status quo.

COLONIAL ISSUE ON 'FRISCO AGENDA

Pittsburgh Courier 3-24-45 Pa.

Bulletin!

WASHINGTON — The recent appointment of Dr. Ralph Bunche as acting associate director of Dependent Areas Division of the State Department, has been interpreted in some circles as an indication of the United States' interest in the important colonial question. Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, director of special research for the NAACP, will be an observer at the United Nations Conference opening April 25.

By GEORGE PADMORE
London Correspondent

LONDON — The post-war status of dependent areas in Africa and Asia, largely occupied by black, brown and yellow peoples, is scheduled to become one of the most important and controversial issues with which delegates to the forthcoming San Francisco Conference of the United Nations will be forced to grapple. 3-24-45

Succinctly, the big, white colonial powers are going to have to invent a device which will enable them to use and exploit their colored brothers and at the same time permit these colored peoples to feel that they are "free and equal."

The Brtiish Commonwealth of Nations has already gone to work on the problem.

In order that the British Empire point of view might be concretized, representatives of the British Dominions and of India have been meeting for two weeks here under the auspices of the Royal Institute for International Affairs. Forty delegates have been present.

The British, as well as the other major powers, have recognized that the old mandates system, under which so-called backward areas were given over to the control of imperialist Nations, is no longer morally defensible. The mandates system will have to be replaced. 3-24-45

BRITISH WANT REGIONAL BODIES

As usual, the English statesmen don't mind giving up the shadow, but they are resolute in their determination to cling to the substance of colonial control.

As a first step, they propose to discard use of the word "imperialist" and replace it with the word "trustee." It is their hope that the use of the latter word will cause the world to feel differently about colonial powers and prove more persuasive with the natives of the colonies.

Further, the British are proposing a set-up of regional councils, composed of Nations with colonies, to jointly exploit and develop the dependent areas.

These regional councils would be required to issue annual reports on the colonies to the World Economic and Social Council to be set up within the framework of the world security organization.

SMUTS WILL SUPPORT BRITISH VIEWS

Jans Christian Smuts, South African statesman who once compared Negroes with mules, will accompany Clement Atlee and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to San Francisco and has been assigned the task of selling Britain's idea of regionalism.

Smuts will be expected to oppost any attempt to liquidate Britain's sovereignty over any parts of her empire.

Churchill's famous statement that he did not become the King's first minister to preside over the liquidation of the Empire is still basic to British colonial policy.

It is stated on this side of the ocean that the British diplomats will attempt to enlist the support of America for the regional councils.

U. S. MAY OPPOSE IMPERIALIST VIEWS 3-24-45

However, reports which have leaked out of Yalta indicate that there was tentative agreement among the three powers for a council set up on an international rather than a regional basis. This plan is said to have the backing of the United States.

Indian delegates who participated in the conference here gallantly and persistently attacked the color bars against Indians and Africans in South Africa and Kenya. The South Africans weakly defended themselves by denying the charges of racial discrimination.

Despite the desire of Great Britain to invent a morally defensible empire colonial scheme, there are misgivings in some quarters because of the diverse points of views of the colonial powers.

It is feared that the United States might urge that the British and the French handle their colonies in Asia as America has handled the Philippines.

DUTCH VIEWS IMPORTANT 3-24-45

There is doubt that the British would want to prepare for the eventual return of Hong Kong to China and the independence of Burma, Malaya and India.

France wil probably reject any suggestion that she plan to give up Indo-China.

Of all these powers, only the Dutch seem likely, in some sense, to follow the United States example.

Another factor disturbing the planners is the future attitude o Russia.

Neither Great Britain nor th United States can be too sure wha card the Russians will play whe the chips are down for the bi stakes in Asia.

College Heads Differ On Matter Of Compulsory Army Training

Journal + Guide Norfolk Va.

3-10-45

DETROIT, Mich. — "Compulsory military training is not needed in a democracy. If it were needed the time of war is not the time to make such a decision," writes Dr. David D. Jones, president of Bennett College, in the exclusive HEADLINES Poll of Negro college presidents on the vital issue of peace-time conscription. 3-10-45

Dr. Jones also says, "I write as a father who has two sons in the armed forces. Therefore, I have strong convictions on the matter of compulsory military training. There are enough forces in American life which are tending toward totalitarianism in our nation . . . If in addition to the hobbles already existing, we add the control which would come through compulsory military service for youth, we make it too easy for an American Hitler to emerge." 3-10-45

DR. PATTERSON'S VIEWS

On the other side of the question is Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, who answers, "I am inclined to regard it no less than the patriotic responsibility of every American citizen to go along with this recommendation. That there are dangers to be faced in terms of regimentation, one cannot doubt. There are also certain assets, however, in terms of physical development and training, even in vocational and other non-military ways which greatly benefit Negro youth . . . ."

There are also complete and exclusive statements from Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, Dr. Rufus Clement, president of the Atlanta University system, and Dr. Felton G. Clark, president of Southern University presented in the March issue of HEADLNES. 3-10-45

Also in the March HEADLINES, will be Paul Pentagon's "That's Washington For You," the newsy sparkling round-up of capital doings. And there will be more pictures than ever before: a spread of Negroes in Cuba and how they live, and pictures of everyone in the news.

Pursuit Of Democracy

Pittsburgh Courier

Howard University Points The Way for Post-War Planning of Leisure Time

By MARJORIE McKENZIE 5-19-45

Pgh. Pa.

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

ONE of the skills that people will have to learn again in the post-war world is the effective use of leisure time. The pattern our war-time recreation offers no guide, for we have gone in for passive participation extravagant commercial entertainment that does little but dull over-tired nerves. The current progress of the war makes clear that soon we shall have a shortened work-week, release from pressure and anxiety, freedom from travel bans and other restrictions, all of which will leave us time and energy that we won't know how to use. It is not too early, in this period between V-E Day and V-J Day, to include programs for leisure and recreation in our post-war planning. 5-19-45

Miss McKenzie

Howard University has just demonstrated its conviction that the abundant life cannot be taken by storm, like a beachhead, but must be wooed gently and patiently. On May 3, it inaugurated a Festival of Fine Arts, an addition to its services to the community which the culturally bereft citizens of Washington will hope to see continued.

* * *

UNDER THE leadership of Warner Lawson, dean of the School of Music and director of the University Choir, the Festival Committee provided a three-day program of song, music, modern dancing, an exhibit of modern painting and seminars in related subjects. "Artists in embryo," said the committee in the introduction to its program, "pursue the even tenor of uninspiring and unprofitable ways . . . until they die unless . . . discovered." Moreover, "the power to understand, enjoy and interpret what other men have created lies dormant in countless folk. Thus, "art is not a thing apart, or for the few . . ." 5-19-45

Art appreciation has come a long way from its early upper-class consciousness. The critics may go on talking about it in trade language if they wish, but "countless folk" have cut through the verbiage and developed a simple standard of their own: the only questions to be asked are, do they LIKE it or not? How does it make them FEEL? It may be said of art, as of other human institutions, that it has gone democratic in the last decade or two. And, of course, the more fully it reaches down into the life of the people, the more authentic it becomes.

* * *

THE OPPORTUNITIES that people have for exposure to various art forms have been greatly limited during the war years. However, emphasis in the post-war world will be focused not exclusively on mere observation of the work of others, but upon active creation by the individual. The objective of such a procedure is the development of stronger, happier personalities. One of the important therapy techniques used with psychoneurotics by the Army has been to turn the patient loose with drawing or modeling materials and tell him to make whatever he feels like making. It does not matter whether great and enduring art results from this activity, but it is of great social significance that people, neurotic or normal, have a feeling for beauty and creative living. The Nazis have proven that the human heart and hands are as capable of destruction as of building what is good and fair.

It is characteristic of much of the leadership at Howard University that it should interpret properly the role of the university in directing and documenting cultural trends. Its contribution to the future is nowhere more significant than in making available to the people within its sphere of influence good music and good painting. Indeed, such a spirit is personified in Dean Lawson himself, who has foregone a career of certain success as a concert pianist in order to teach large groups of young people how to sing together to their own delight and that of everyone who is privileged to hear them respond to Dean Lawson's baton.

Report Negro Shut Out Of World Organization

Amsterdam News N.Y.C.

By EDGAR G. BROWN

The San Francisco conference of United Nations has come to a close, and I took opportunity of one of the closing sessions to ask Field Marshall Jan Christian Smuts, of notorious fame for making the African natives get off the sidewalks in their own country to let Englishmen pass by, if he considered black persons human beings in the definition of the United Nations Charter he had drafted as the chairman. 7-14-45

The answer, with a bit of a sneer, done with the propriety of a well trained American diplomat was a very loud, "No."

Something is "cooking" brethren and sisters in this new international kettle.

Now for another sidelight on the wind-up of the United Nations Conference in San Francisco.

There was no colored member of the armed services in the President's "GUARD OF HONOR" with every branch of the Army, Navy and Marines represented on the platform, when Mr. Truman addressed the final UNCIO session in San Francisco. It was strictly. "LILY-WHITE." 7-14-45

Also in Chapter I, Purposes and Principles of the San Francisco United Nations Charter, Article 1, No. 7, is this most disheartening paragraph:

"7. Nothing contained in the present charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the members to submit such matters to settlement under the present charter, but this princple shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII." (This chapter has only to do with elucidation of the broad military powers of the Security Council, the heart and sinew of the Charter.

This declaration must have warmed the cockles of old Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, the oppressor of the natives of the Union of South Africa. The United States chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Tom Connally of the LILYWHITE Democratic Primary of Texas, must have given this Englishman a bear-hug on this Ku Klux Klan masterpiece in world diplomacy. 7-14-45

Following the final UNCIO Steering Committee, Saturday, June 23, 1945 in the War Memorial Building here in San Francisco, we asked the Haytian, Liberian chairman and also Senator Connally their reactions at the moment to the United Nations Charter's final draft they had taken the last vote to approve. All in almost identical expressions praised their own handiwork as all but perfect. They were unanimous in enthusiastic indorsement,, though it was refreshing at the end for the Liberian spokesman to express the fervent wish that it would be implemented by more deeds than generalities and pretty language.

Psychologist Heads Army School In France

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON.—The only civilian selected by the War Department to aid in setting up schools for army educational counsellors in France is a Negro, it was revealed this week.

He is Roy Davenport, employed as assistant to the chief psychologist, classification and replacement branch of the adjutant general's office. 8-11-45

Davenport arrived in Paris this week where he will be responsible for controlling the number of vocational and educational counsellors needed, to be trained and distributed to the 750 schools in the European theatre.

No Color Line, Say Britain and India

Pm. 12-20-45

LONDON, Dec. 20 (UP).—Great Britain joined India yesterday in demanding that the United Nations select a U. S. city which draws no color lines as the site of its permanent home. New York

The United Kingdom delegation presented a paper saying it was "indispensable that the area be such that all members of the United Nations should be able to feel at home in it, whatever their racial origin or the character of their state."

The issue of racial discrimination first was raised by Indian delegate Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar in a speech before the Preparatory Commission.

Philippines Ask Race Equality

Journal & Guide

Norfolk, Va.

By P. BERNARD YOUNG JR.
Editor, Journal and Guide
(Copyright, Reproduction Forbidden)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. —Spokesmen for eighty million Filipinos, loyal to America and the cause of the United Nations, have demanded of the World Security Conference here that a declaration on "the spirit of brotherhood and racial equality among nations" be inserted into the world charter. 5-12-45

In its official amendment-proposals the Philippines delegation supports the addition to the Dumbarton Oaks peace blueprint with the following comment:

"It must be obvious to any observer that at the bottom of the many differences which have brought hatred and even war among nations of different races in the past is the racial discrimination and superiority complex evinced by some.

HOW TO AVOID

"To avoid this in the future and to infuse sincerity to friendly relations among nations, the amendment proposed is believed essential."

Moreover, the Filipinos, whose spokesman is colorful and gallant Brig. General Carlos P. Romulo of Bataan fame, asked that the world charter specifically obligate its subscribing members "to act in accordance with the principles (Four Freedoms) declared in the Atlantic Charter."

Its amendment on this point is supported in the following language: 5-12-45

ATLANTIC CHARTER

"The Atlantic Charter is to the proposed United Nations Charter as the American Declaration of Independence has always been to the federal constitution (of the U. S.). Just as the American Declaration of 1776 supplied the spirit and the principles for the American constitution, so must the Atlantic Charter supply the life and the ideals for the World Charter.

"The only difference is that the Atlantic Charter is a world declaration, signed by the United Nations and conceived from the beginning for all peoples.

"Its principles were received in Asia, Europe, Africa, and in the Americas as the undisputed principles underlying the war. Whenever an Allied soldier fought, he knew that he was fighting for something greater than his country, and his people.

WHAT FIGHTING FOR

"He was fighting for the emancipation of the human spirit and for the principles of self-government the world over . . . They have died on the altar of principles of the Atlantic Charter, and of the Four Freedoms enunciated by President Roosevelt.

"In inserting the principles of the Atlantic Charter as part of the United Nations Charter, we are simply recognizing the plain facts of this war. We are simply reiterating what has already been agreed upon—and fought for—the principles and ideals of the new world order."

The amendments were thoroughly discussed and analyzed by the Filipino delegation during a press conference on Friday morning, May 4.

It urged amendments to "provide an equitable basis of choosing the proposed six- non-permanent members" of the all-powerful security council of the world organization. 5-12-45

It objected to the absolute veto now enjoyed by the Big Five, declaring that no one nation should "be allowed to place herself above the entire world." That would be to "sterilize and frustrate" the security council, its members pointed out.

Another important amendment to fill a gap in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals would specifically define what constituted an aggressor nation, and it called for small-nation representation on the security councils military staff committee.

In addition to the social and economic purposes of the world organization, Filipinos pleaded for inclusion of a cultural and education commission.

U. S. Offers Own Trustee Plan For Colonies

Atlanta, Georgia

Atlanta World

5-8-45

Advancement Of Dependent Peoples Among Proposals

BY JOHN PITTMAN

SAN FRANCISCO —(ANP)— Uncle Sam has his own trusteeship plans for colonies, it was revealed last week during an off the record conference with a high authority. These plans have also been transmitted to the other big four prowers at this world security conference.

The American proposals have four aspects:

1. Security of the United States,
2. World security
3. The advancement of dependent peoples.
4. Resources of dependent areas. 5-8-45

No specific colonial territory was discussed or will be discussed at the conferences but all American governmental branches, including the Army, Navy, the Interior and State departments, are in accord with the trusteeship proposals, which are reported to be couched in a form that will not prejudice other questions to be dscussed later.

COVER THREE AREAS

The proposals cover three areas. First, all mandates; second, areas taken from enemy countries; third, other terrories voluntarily placed under trustee. The procedure would also include consultation with dependent peoples.

The proposals carry a recommendation for inspection powers of the trustee body, it was learned. Further revelation on the colonial proposals may come from Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of British South Africa, and additional comment is expected from Walter White and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, NAACP representatives. 5-8-45

A colonial trusteeship committee has already been named and functions under the general assembly. The commision includes delegates from New Zealand and Luxemburg.

Liberia has been assigned to the committee to work out the framework of the general assembly and Ethiopian representatives are working on the judicial organization. Haiti is on the membership committee, which functioning under the comission on general provisions.

Washington Post

A Better World Betrayed

IT IS OBVIOUS by now that the talk of trusteeships for colonial or mandated territories means little or nothing. It is the kind of talk that is invariably used to cloak a determination to sit tight and preserve the old order.

CHILDS

Apparently, the big powers that have fought this war against fascism mean to try to put back the old colonial order. They may use somewhat more fancy language to give it a less old-fashioned, outmoded look. But it will be, essentially, colonial exploitation in the pattern of the past. 5-9-45

That is a betrayal. It is a betrayal of the ideals of the Atlantic Charter and it is a betrayal of one of the great hopes of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who, more than any other individual, summed up the yearning of millions everywhere for a better world.

This is perfectly clear now. We do not need the longer perspective of history to make it any more obvious.

Washington, D. C.

I HAVE BEFORE ME the notes of a conversation I had with the late President a year ago, in which he talked at some length of his ideal of a trusteeship that would enable colonial peoples to move toward political and economic independence within a fixed number of years.

The President began by talking about the position of the white man in the far Pacific. The white man, he pointed out, had come more and more into disfavor. The quick successes of the Japs had shaken white prestige that was already badly damaged.

"We are going to have to take some positive steps," the President said, "or find ourselves pushed out completely.

"Some time ago I worked out a form of trusteeship for French Indo-China. You know, that colony was governed very badly. For every dollar the French put in, they took $10 out. Those little people had a culture of their own, Cambodia and the Cambodian kings. But they were badly treated.

"Now my idea is for a trusteeship to administer Indo-China. I put this up to Chiang Kai-shek and he was strong for it. The idea is to have one Chinese trustee, one Philippine trustee, one French trustee, a British trustee and perhaps an American trustee." 5-9-45

Through a fixed term of years, as the President outlined it, the Indo-Chinese would work toward political and economic independence. The trustees would guide that process, with complete freedom as the final goal.

AT TEHERAN, Roosevelt said, he asked Stalin what he thought of the plan. Stalin thought it was "excellent."

Prime Minister Churchill, however, would have none of it, even after the late President reminded him that on this issue there were three votes against one. Churchill was thinking of Burma. He refused to consider such a plan for Burma.

Whether Roosevelt could have carried the United Nations Conference with him on this issue is a question. In the weeks preceding his death, he was tired and old and sick. Even so, he might have appealed to the conscience of the world. He, alone, possessed the moral force to challenge the rulers on an issue so vital.

Such an appeal could have been made against the background of our success in helping the Philippines to move toward independence. That is a record which has profoundly impressed the millions in Asia who are far more politically conscious than colonial overloards like to think.

THE BRITISH have just completed the reconquest of Burma, a grim and grisly operation in the green hell of the Burmese jungle that took careful planning, courage and persistence. In the accounts of that campaign, I saw nothing about the kind of native guerilla army that gave such invaluable help to the American forces in the Philippines. 5-9-45

The people of the Philippines had something to fight for. After final victory over Japan, the other brown and yellow peoples of Asia are going to want something to live for.

Russia's Peace Table Demands Will Include 'Equality' Clause

Pitts burgh Courier 1-27-45

By GEORGE PADMORE, Courier's London Correspondent

LONDON—(Censored)—When leaders of the Allied Nations gather around the peace Table, Russia will demand a clause pledging racial equality, not only for Jews, but for all the non-European races of Asia, Africa and other continents and countries inhabited by colored peoples. This emphatic statement was made here by a Soviet representative when asked to comment on remarks by Prof. Komarov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences. The professor had given additional information to a recent order credited to Marshal Stalin, Georgian-born leader of the Soviet Union, in which he was quoted as instructing military commanders of the Russian armies to ruthlessly stamp out all forms of racial discrimination and jim-crow laws in countries occupied by the Soviet forces. 1-27-45

PUNISHED BY DEATH

Prof. Komarov declared Stalin's warning should be heeded by all malicious spreaders of racial hatred and racial practices and explained that according to the laws of the Soviet Union, active racists and anti-Semites are punished by death.

In 1931, Stalin had declared that "Anti-Semitism is the most dangerous survival of cannibalism."

"In the future," declared the professor, "we shall not turn our backs on racial practices until we have stamped them out, pulled them up by the roots and taken every measure against their recurrence. When any country gives shelter to the Hitlerites or their ideas in the form of discriminatory legislation, racist organizations or a racist press, it is no longer an internal affair of that country. 1-27-45

RACIST IDEAS DANGEROUS

"If your neighbor opens in his backyard a container of poison gas which threatens to spread over the town, you do not waste time by asking permission to enter his premises to prevent death of thousands of people. Racist ideas are more dangerous than any poison gas. It is our solemn duty to future generations, to civilization and to humanity, not only to put out the present bonfire of Nazi-Fascism in Europe, and elsewhere, but to discover and extinguish every one of its sparks and smoldering embers wherever they may be found."

It will be remembered that during the 1919 Paris Peace Conference, the Japanese delegation, headed by Baron Makino, proposed to the victorious powers the plan to adopt a race equality clause. The plan was supported by Haiti, but received strenuous opposition from the South African delegation, headed by General Smut, and certain members of the British delegation.

Courier's Adviser Pleads for Colonials

Post

WASHINGTON—When the "Big Three" meet soon President Roosevelt has been asked to give special consideration to the problem of dependent areas and colonial territories. The plea was addressed to the President by Dr. Rayford Logan in his capacity as adviser on foreign affairs for The Pittsburgh Courier, general president of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, chairman of the Committee to Focus Attention on Post-war Problems of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes, and member of the Social Service Committee of the National Baptist Convention.

Dr. Logan requested of President Roosevelt that "you help to expand and improve the system by which dependent peoples will be guided through an international agency to eventual autonomy or first class citizenship thereby removing one of the causes of war."

ARGENTINE ENVOY PLEDGES PEACE AID

New York Times

Ambassador Tells President Mission Is to Co-operate 'Without Reservation'

5-9-45

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 8—Senior Dr. Don Oscar Ibarar Garcia, newly appointed Ambassador from Argentina, presented his credentials to President Truman today and extended the good wishes of the Argentine people and Government "on this day of victory of the Allied arms."

The Ambassador also gave a pledge of Argentine cooperation in the building of the peace in which Argentina will participate at the San Francisco Security Conference as a result of the recently issued invitation to the conference which was extended after strong opposition from the Soviet Union.

On leaving the White House the Ambassador said he would go at once to San Francisco, and would be joined by the Argentine Ambassador to London and the other delegates. Argentina, he said, would be represented at the conference although that country had not yet signed the United Nations declaration.

"At this hour in which plans are being made for peace and the future well-being of humanity," he said to President Truman, "I have come with the special mission of conveying to you the resolution of my Government to cooperate without reservation in the attainment of such high purposes."

He paid special tribute to the life and ideals of President Roosevelt "for whom the heroic flag of the United States still flies at half mast." 5-9-45

President Truman thanked the Ambassador for his reference to President Roosevelt, and replied:

"In the great task that lies before us, as you have well said, it must be the common resolve of all peace-loving nations that ways and means shall be found to prevent the scourge of war and to settle international differences by a more rational recourse than that of force. In the consummation of this historic under taking for the future well-being of all mankind, I welcome the assurance of solidarity and cooperation which you have just given me in the name of your country."

Besides the Ambassadors to Washington and London, it is understood the Argentine delegation to the San Francisco Conference will include three members of the Argentine Embassy staff here.

Big Five Nations To Direct European Peace Settlement

The Atlanta Constitution Atlanta Georgia 9-10-45

By JOHN A. PARRIS.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Big Five's foreign ministers converged on London tonight to begin drafting a peace settlement that will change much of the map of the world.

Foreign Ministers Wang Shih-Chien of China and Georges Bidault of France arrived by plane this afternoon. V. M. Molotov of Soviet Russia left Moscow Saturday. James F. Byrnes of the United States is due by sea tomorrow. These four will join Ernest Bevin of Great Britain for the first session Tuesday of the foreign ministers' council, set up at Potsdam.

Wang's associates said he expected to be here two weeks. The foreign ministers, aware of the pitfalls in the Paris peace conference of 1919, expect to hold many later meetings and make no effort to hurry unduly a settlement of the border and other problems posed by the end of World War II.

BIG FIVE DIRECTS

The Big Five are directing the negotiations. The smaller powers will be invited to attend only when matters directly concerning them are under discussion. Thus, the Big Five will be spared much of the lobbying and grumbling which harassed the principal statesmen at the Paris conference.

Italy is scheduled to be the first of the ex-enemy countries to secure peace with the United Nations. The foreign ministers will draft a peace treaty for Italy during their deliberations here. This document will deal with the future frontiers of Italy in Europe and with Italian colonial possessions.

WANG OPTIMISTIC

China's foreign minister arrived at Victoria station tonight from the Haunts airfield, where he landed after a flight from Chungking by way of India and Cairo. Wang spoke only briefly with reporters, who asked him if the National Government party of China had patched up its differences with the Communists. London newsmen asked Chiang Kai-shek's aide whether he would speak "for the whole of China" at the conference.

"I hope to be able to," responded the gray-haired diplomat.

"Yes, of course he's speaking for the whole of China," interrupted Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador to Britain.

Wang was accompanied by Hollington K. Tong, former Chinese vice minister of information; K. T. Hauh, new Chinese charge d'affaires in Rome; Dr. Y. C. Yang, director of Asiatic affairs of the foreign office and Dr. H. C. Wei, a sectional chief in the foreign office.

Bidault brought along Maurice Cove de Murville, former ambassador to Rome, who has been named policy director for foreign affairs, and Herve Alphand, chief of the foreign ministry's financial section. A fourth member of the delegation, Jacques Fouques-Duparc, was here already.

The peace treaties with Finland, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary may be postponed at this council meeting. America and Britain are insisting that they must have representative Democratic regimes before there can be any thought of concluding peace settlements with them.

Although the drafting of a peace treaty for Italy is expected to consume considerable time, there are many other complex problems which the foreign ministers must tackle in their job of shaping the future of postwar Europe and laying a foundation for peace. These include:

1. Disposition of Germany's Ruhr and Saar areas.

2. Possible Dutch and Belgian claims against German territory as part of war reparations.

3. An American proposal for creating an international commission to govern inland European waterways—the Rhine and Danube rivers, Germany's Kiel canal, the Bosphorus and Dardanelles.

4. A general airing of the entire Balkan question aimed at establishing more democratic regimes.

UNO in the South? Of Course Not!

Daily Worker

Here's a Christmas thought for you, America . . . do you know that there's a large part of this country which was ruled out as a site for the permanent quarters of the United Nations Organization?

That was the South . . . because delegates from other nations, who might happen to have a darker skin, would not come into the southern part of the USA for fear of being jim crowed.

Quite a thought, isn't it? Here we are supposedly the great "moral leader" of the world, and yet no one would vote to let the headquarters of the United Nations reside in our deep South, no, not even in Washington, DC, which may be good enough as the capitol of our own land but isn't good enough as capitol of the world!

12-25-45

Think about it, Americans. Your country is the shame of the world, because it is a country where racism is still tolerated. Isn't it a humiliating thought for Christmas Day?

Negro Sacrifice On Field Of Battle Merits Post-War Equality, Says Scott

Chicago Defender ILL

3-10-45

By EMMETT J. SCOTT

One of the great tragedies of this United States of ours is the color-caste system, recognized and practiced in practically all of the normal activities of the religious, secular, social, industrial, and political life of our nation, with particular reference to the largest racial minority group of our population.

DR. EMMETT J. SCOTT is one of the few Negroes in the nation with a supervisory position in a big shipyard. He is director of employment and personnel relations at the Sun Shipbuilding Co. in Chester, Pa. During the last war he was first assistant secretary of war under Newton D. Baker. Earlier he was secretary to Booker T. Washington and secretary-treasurer of Howard university.

It is a brazen, shoddy attempt, long and more or less successfully continued, to keep this group confined to a second-degree citizenship, with all the disadvantages and inhibitions, gross injustices, and crass inequalities that usually go along with the mistreatment of oppressed peoples.

These observations are pertinent in discussing Negro post-war prospects. Why, in the name of high heaven must there be discussion of such a theme? These 13,000,000 Colored-Americans are citizens of the republic. They have been ennobled by three great Civil War amendments by having conferred on them all of the liberties, equalities, and privileges of American citizenship.

In fact, our American ideal is that "No race or creed or culture has a monopoly of Americanism — except the human race, the creed of friendship and good will, and the culture of free speech and free opportunity." This group is a minority group only in the sense of color of their skins—as non-whites.

It is a black page in American history that they have been hedged about by bigotries and intolerances based on color, and have been prevented by vicious legislative enactments, and traditional practices, from fully enjoying that citizenship which is legally theirs—a citizenship equal to that of any other group in the United States.

I refuse to discuss these problems which perplex Colored Americans from the standpoint of a minority racial group. A minority as non-whites, as I have said, yes. But Americans just the same, just as much so as any racial group in this country of ours, clothed in all the proud habiliments and dignities of American citizenship. We cannot for one moment concede that we are one whit less in stature than any other group that claims the high and exalted privileges of full-rounded, American citizenship. 3-10-45

If America is, as has been said the fountain of human hopes and individual opportunity, we are entitled to share every one of these hopes and opportunities.

We have helped to make and to save this nation. Our story is an epic recital of our rise from servitude, of hard beginnings, of discouraged hopes, of modest achievements, of fruitful endeavors; sometimes, of more or less spectacular successes in education, in business, in the professions, and in the practices of that freedom and citizenship we have helped to win.

We helped to save this nation when the slave oligarchy sought to sever the bonds which held the states of the nation in indivisible union. 3-10-45

Whenever the safety of the nation has been threatened, brawny black men have shouldered muskets and have gone forth to fight and to die.

Across the front facade of that Supreme Court which stands in the nation's capital appear the words, "Equal Protection Under Law."

No citizen of the Republic has a right to expect more than this; no citizen of the Republic has a right to expect less than this.

In the effort to qualify for full rounded citizenship, the Negro has helped to clear our forests, to build our railroads, to raise giant masses of steel and stone in our American cities, has plowed our soil, and helped to raise our crops.

He has gallantly fought in every war of the republic. He has come to believe that democracy, in its widest application, should rest upon the "reign of law, based upon the consent of the governed, and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind." Any practices, anywhere, which do violence to the high sounding sentiment I have quoted threaten the institutions of our land.

Exhibit Courage

These statements establish the validity of our claims as citizens of the nation. The turmoil and strife attendant upon the effort to secure fair representation in the performance of war tasks—a right finally conceded only by the coercive necessities of the war-manpower situation, and not by a generous recognition of a fundamental right—was finally won.

When the opportunity came, Negro men and women were ready to prove their worth, and their ability to master the intricate craftmanship of shipbuilding, of airplane construction; also of guiding and operating Liberty ships, tankers and cargo vessels, of exhibiting Merchant Marine courage and stoutness of heart; in building precision instruments, and of qualifying for general service in the manifold activities of all-out production in industrial plants which, by tradition and practice, had resolutely been closed to them.

No longer can there be denial of the potential possibilities of Negroes in skilled occupations. In World War II, we have proved our case. 3-10-45

Need Change In Opinion

The Negro people must recognize the fact, however, that, taken as a whole, the darker peoples of America and the world are still outside the boundaries of the thinking and planning of the White World. We have sober responsibilities ahead of us. As great as are our war gains, they cannot be conserved until the legalistic, moralistic, and idealistic forces of public opinion undergo an almost complete metamorphosis.

We Colored Americans can measurably contribute to this change.

Our men and women who today enjoy economic opportunities and privileges far beyond any of the past, owe a duty and responsibility by excellence of performance of every duty, and the acceptance of every burden placed upon them to meet every exacting requirement.

By so doing, they will baffle our enemies and confirm the faith and trust of our friends.

They can employ their man- and woman-power, their technical skill, and the uses of all their resources, economic and otherwise, to strengthen our country as it is undergoing strains and perils never before faced by it.

International Problem

They can conserve whatever gains we have made by taking advantage of every opportunity to win the respect and confidence of their fellowmen and by helping to promote a more complete, normal and healthy economic life.

In these efforts of ours we shall have the support of Godly men and women. These friends must be bound to us by hooks of steel. We shall need them. They in turn will need us.

The present war has brought into full sunlight the world treatment of black and brown peoples. The question, the problem, is not a local one. It is a national problem. It is an international problem.

Throughout the world, long-silent black and brown peoples are awakening. They recognize the tortuous methods employed to lull them into a state of complacency, they no longer accept the age-old oppressions, and the teachings that so-called Master Races must dominate them, govern them, oppress them.

Too long the diabolic hostility of their enemies, and the turgid waters of confusion and frustration have swirled about their bloody but unbowed heads. They recall that Abraham Lincoln gave voice to the sentiment that no man is endowed with qualities which fit him to govern another man.

Negroes Press Their Case

The postwar perior is, we all hope, near at hand. Unhappily, it promises to be a troublesome period. Our men and women have poured and are pouring their all into winning this war as they have in every war of the republic.

They will be in no frame of mind to accept the segregations, the lynchings, the poll tax scandals, the exclusions from industry, the discriminations of labor unions, Jim-Crowism in all its ugly, vicious and cruel manifestations; unequal school facilities, political disfranchisement, government discriminations, along with federal departmental, army and navy practices with respect to treatment, promotions, and all the long list of meannesses to which we have been subjected. 3-10-45

A new world order is in the process of making. Our world society and economy are to be reconstituted after new patterns. Make no mistake about it, black and brown peoples are pressing their case in the forums of world public opinion. They are demanding equal opportunity to develop their native genius "not hampered, but aided by stronger and more advanced races," as Madame Chiang Kai-Shek expresses it.

As she also truly said more than a year and a half ago: "It is paradoxical but true that nations, like individuals, can only permanently enjoy privileges and rights if they are willing to share them with others . . . If they attempt to reserve them solely for themselves, they will altogether lose them."

Exploitations, imperialistic enterprise, and all of the other anachronisms of our present world system are on the way to being swept out of existence.

Job For Liberals

We seek to intertwine our progress with the well being and happiness of the whole American people; with the advancement of all other peoples of the world.

Eternal is the struggle of mankind for liberty and freedom. We are now engaged in that struggle.

Daniel Webster has left us a wise word: "God grants liberty to those who love it," he said, "and to those who are always ready to guard and defend it." 3-10-45

Finally: I have said that such war gains as have been achieved by us "cannot be conserved until the legalistic, the moralistic, and the idealistic forces of public opinion undergo an almost complete metamorphosis."

The liberal forces of America are bidden to gird on their armor, to go forth in the name of the Lord God of Hosts, and overwhelm the forces of evil that keep alive racial prejudices, traditional hatreds, bigotries, and reactionary practices in conflict with that idealism which calls for respect of human rights, regard for human dignity, and a sincere belief in human freedom.

Post-War Building Plan Includes Lincoln U.

1-13-45

Pittsburgh Courier - Pa.

ST. LOUIS — Lincoln university, located at Jefferson City, Mo., will share in a $40,509,735 post-war building program to be carried out at nine Missouri educational institutions, it was announced last week. The program, to be financed by a State bond issue, sets aside $2,948,264 for Lincoln university.

V-E-Day Will Bring Cut-Back

Post-War Training Programs For Negroes Urged By WMC

Pittsburgh Courier 3-3-45 Pgh. Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Participation of all people, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin" must be guaranteed in all post-war programs "in order to maintain the right of all Americans to freedom from fear, persecution and intolerance."

This observation is set forth in an article by Lawrence A. Oxley, entitled "Negroes in the Post-War Period," appearing in the February issue of "Manpower Review," official organ of the War Manpower Commission. Mr. Oxley serves with the Bureau of Placement of the WMC.

CUT-BACKS ON V-E-DAY

3-3-45

Pointing out that V-E Day (Victory in Europe Day) "will bring sharp cut-backs in many of the industries where the Negro has been accepted so widely," Oxley cites FEPC reports that show "an increase in the number of complaints of discrimination by firms who have employed Negroes in the past months, but who now appear to be attempting to 'purify' their hiring patterns.

"These factors make clear," the article states, "that unless safeguards are established, minority group workers may be faced with greater economic insecurity than majority groups, because of discriminatory lay-off or cut-back patterns."

TRAINING AND UPGRADING WITHHELD

Special attention is given the withholding of training and upgrading opportunities for Negroes. "During the entire employment history of the Negro worker," Oxley writes, "he has been restricted to menial, unskilled jobs, although some progress in placing Negroes in skilled jobs has been made during the war. This practice has increased his number in the total of marginal workers—a group always the first to be affected by the slightest change in the job structure.

3-3-45

"It is obvious that Negro workers must be trained before they can effectively break down the work barriers now raised against them. This indicates an imperative need for a thorough and adequate non-discriminatory training program to be made effective through the WMC, USES, Training Within Industry, Veterans Employment Service, and/or successor agencies. Negro applicants, as all other applicants, should be counseled according to their aptitude and previous training and work experience and not according to race, color or religion. Training opportunities should extend to all phases of post-war planning."

Invited To Parley In Frisco

Journal & Guide 3-17-45 Va.

Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti, To Sit In On United Nations Talks

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The San Francisco conference of the United Nations on April 25 will be attended by many countries populated by darker peoples, among whom will be Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Cuba, Egypt, India, and the Philippines.

The inclusion of India and the Philippines, neither of which has yet become independent states, is viewed with surprise but pleasure by many observers. The invitation to India to attend has raised the question as to whether the problems of dependent areas will be included in the discussions of the conference.

3-17-45

It is recalled that at the World Labor Conference held in London during February, it was urged that an end be brought to the system of colonies, dependencies and subject countries as spheres of economic exploitation. This part of the declaration of the labor conference was sponsored by the CIO representatives from America.

PLANNED AT CRIMEA CONFERENCE

The San Francisco conference was planned at the recent meeting of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin at Yalta, in the Crimea. It is sponsored by the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China. France, while indicating its intention of attending the conference, refused to join the other four countries as a sponsor.

3-17-45

The purpose of the meeting, according to the invitation sent to 39 nations, is to prepare a charter for a general international organization for the maintenance of international peace and security. The proposals worked out as a result of the Dumbarton Oaks conference will be used as a basis for the charter.

Each government has been invited to present views or comments concerning the proposals in advance of the conference.

Council States Nation Not Ready For Reconversion

Atlanta Daily World Georgia 8-12-45

Speedy Return To Job Bias Toward Minority Feared

WASHINGTON — (ANP) —The dropping of the atomic bomb on Japan and the entry of Russia into the war against the Nipponese has put the Fair Employment Practice Committee in danger of early termination, the National Council for a Permanent FEPC said Saturday.

These two events, said Secy. Ann Arnold Hedgeman, has raised "the fear in the hearts of minority Americans of an equally speedy return to job discrimination" with the end of the war.

In a prepared statement Mrs. Hedgeman declared that the country is not prepared for reconversion and the peace. "The present FEPC is a wartime agency," she pointed out. "This means that the necessity for immediate enactment of the permanent FEPC bill is tremendously heightened.

PEOPLE WANT FEPC

"The people want FEPC in peace time no less than in wartime," she said. "This was proven by the reaction received by this office to Senator Barkley's omission of the bill from the administration program for the fall. The people must see to it that FEPC is placed high on the agenda when congress returns."

8-12-45

Meanwhile on Friday Mrs Bell Douglass of New Orelans, southern field representative for the national council, told a press conference that she had just returned from a four-month trip through the area and had helped establish some 28 local councils in 11 states, many of which are interracial.

MONEY RAISER

Mrs. Douglas is a former school teacher. She came to the attention of the national council sometime ago when she founded an interracial local council in New Orleans and in less than two months had raised $5,000 for the work of the organization.

8-12-45

She declared that many people in the south are tired of having the areas described as the "number one economic problem of the nation." They see racial prejudice and discrimination as the main drawback and a drag to a change, and they want federal aid in coping with the matter, she said.

NAACP Opposes D.C. As World Capital

Chicago Defender

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The darker races of the world whose countries are affiliated with the United Nations "could find little succor" here in the nation's capital should this city be selected as the capital and seat of the new world organization, the district branch of the NAACP said last week.

The idea was advanced last Tuesday following a survey among local civic and business groups that Washington would be a suitable location for the United Nations.

8-11-45

"To envision the Washington of today as the 'Capital of the World' in any sense is absurd," declared Alfred E. Smith, branch secretary "As a cultural capital it would be a burlesque of the very democracy for which our nation stands so bravely in song and speech.

"Discriminatory prejudice based on race is as deep in Washington as in almost any spot on earth," Smith continued. "Prejudice based on color is even deeper. The fact that it flourishes with what, in effect is tacit consent of the federal government, does nothing to lessen its viciousness."

560-1945

Post War and Peace Plans

VITAL FOR THE POST-WAR

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY 1-6-45
(In the Richmond, Va., TIMES DISPATCH)

It is generally agreed, we believe, that when the colored soldiers return to civil live in Virginia and the other Southern States, important problems will be created. Will they be able to get jobs, will they feel that they are welcomed back, will the opportunities offered them and their race be greater than when they went away? Or will they be forced to conclude that nothing has changed, and that although they have served their country in war they are to be granted no wider opportunities in peace than they had before?

The Pittsburgh Courier, one of the leading Negro newspapers, has received many letters on this subject from Negroes in the armed services. These letters reflect anxiety, and even bitterness, over the prospect that when the colored soldiers and sailors return to civil life they will find the same discriminations and injustices that plagued them before they went away. This is a deep and widespread feeling among the Negro troops, and it is something which we on the home-front must think about now. so that when the war ends we shall be reasonably prepared for the conditions which may be expected to present themselves at that time. 1-6-45

If the colored soldiers of Virginia come back to this State and find obvious and tangible evidences of change for the better it will be highly conducive to a more cordial interracial feeling. If colored policemen and firemen have been installed by that time on the forces of several Virginia cities, for instance, as has been done in many other parts of the South, with highly beneficial results; if steps have been taken, looking toward an all-Negro staff at the Piedmont Sanatorium for Negroes at Burkeville, such as several other Southern States have already; if segregation has been abolished on our urban street cars and buses; if the poll tax is definitely on the way out, or if only one or two of these things are a reality, the returning servicemen and women will have genuine grounds for encouragement.

With a view to finding what advances of this nature are in prospect for the South, The Pittsburgh Courier is sending one of its staff writers, John H. Young III, on a tour of the region. Mr. Young, who lives in Nashville, has visited Richmond, and he reports that he is much encouraged by what he has found here. He is genuinely hopeful, and on his visit to the Times-Dispatch gave the impression of desiring earnestly to write understandingly of the situation as it exists in this part of the country. His newspaper, which is believed to have the largest circulation of any Negro newspaper in America, will present a series by him on the subject. It is a subject which needs sympathetic and non-belligerent treatment, and he indicates that this is what he will provide. 1-6-45

There are few more important issues before us than this. If The Courier can create in the minds of the returning colored servicemen, numbering hundreds of thousands, the feeling that there are important and influential white Southerners who desire to help them, much friction can be avoided.

United Nations Parley To Study Colonial Plan

Pittsburgh Courier
3-17-45 Pa

By GEORGE PADMORE, Courier London Correspondent

LONDON (Censored)—Among the subjects to be discussed at the forthcoming United Nations' Conference at San Francisco April 25 will be the future of the Colonies. Well informed colonial experts, some of whom will accompany the British delegation to the Conference, indicate that as a result of the Crimea Conference decisions relating to the future political setup in the Middle East and North-East Africa, the ground has been prepared for a final solution of all outstanding colonial and territorial readjustments in Africa, the West Indies and the Pacific areas.

ITALIAN COLONIES

Accordingly, the future of the Italian colonies in Africa and the Eastern Mediterranean area will be brought before the Conference. It is generally believed that Eritrea and Italian Somaliland will be assigned to the British as a sort of mandate subject to international supervision of the proposed World Security organization to be set up on the basis of recommendations arrived at by the Dumbarton Oaks Conference.

A Regional Council will also be set up for the entire Middle East and Red Sea area under British control, but American interests will be represented. It is also intended to get representation to the Arab States as soon as the Pan-Arab Federation comes into existence. 3-17-45

And in view of Abyssinia's special interest in Eritrea and the Red Sea—her only outlet to the world—the Emperor will be granted a seat on the Regional Council. Political and diplomatic observers in London asserted that the general outlines of the new colonial setup in this part of the world was one of the matters which President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill discussed with Haile Selassie and Ibn Saud, the Arab ruler of Saudi Arabia, on their visit to Cairo during their homeward voyage from the Crimea Conference. 3-17-45

SMUTS' SCHEME

The case for the open annexation of Southwest Africa as a new province of the South African Union will be advocated by Field Marshal Smuts who has drawn up a new blue-print for colonial administration. 3-17-45

Under this scheme, regional councils will be set up in various parts of Asia, Africa, the Pacific and the West Indies, and the colonial possessions of the various European powers will be pooled and jointly administered by the powers concerned, subject to international supervision.

The regional councils will have among other duties the training of the colored inhabitants in self-government until such time as the imperial powers consider that they are fit enough to govern themselves.

One Third Of Soldiers Plan More Schooling

Atlanta World G2
1-11-45

Many Taking Interest In GI Rights Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Over 30,000 enlisted men now in the Army plan to return to full-time school or college after the war, according to a cross-section survey which included a representative sample of the 700,000 Negro troops now in the Army, the War Department announced today.

In addition to those who have definite plans for full-time school or college, an even larger number say they may go back to school but also are considering other job plans. 1-11-45

MOST UNDER 25

About one-third of all Negro soldiers expressed definite interest in taking part-time school or college courses after leaving the service, but most of them have not selected specific courses or made definite plans.

The results of the survey indicate that a proportionately higher percentage of Negro soldiers plan to complete high school or trade school school courses on a full-time college attendance is proportionately smaller, a difference that is accounted for by previous educational experience before entering the Army.

Of the men with definite plans for full-time school or college attendance most are under 25 years old and single, and two out of three are qualified to enter college.

Although a large portion of the men in the Army were not familiar with the details of the "GI Bill of Rights" at the time the survey was made, the response indicated a high degree of interest on the part of troops in taking advantage of the bill.

TUITION PAID 1-11-45

Under this bill, all tuition and fees up to $500 are paid by the government, and the veteran receives $50 a month if single, $75 a month if he has one or more dependents.

The report, which is based on a survey made by the Research Branch Information and Education Division, Army Service Forces, pointed out that availability of jobs, wage levels and the length of the war would influence the final decision of many soldiers, as will increase knowledge of the details of the "GI Bill." Information on the opportunities under this legislation is constantly being furnished soldiers through a variety of media.

Based on the same survey it is estimated that seven per cent of all Negro troops have definite plans to start a business of their own after the war, and four per cent plan to operate farms.

WANT TO SELL

Highest interest among men planning to go into business for themselves is in retailing. Automotive, including repair services, is the largest single group with 18 per cent; service establishments, 17 per cent; food retailing, 7 per cent; and all other retail establishments, including eating places, 29 per cent.

Most of these men are planning to start small businesses — three out of five saying they plan to invest $2,000 or less.

U.S.-Britain Win Interest Zones: Syria, Arabia, Ethiopia--Security

Pittsburgh Courier 3-17-45

By GEORGE PADMORE, Courier London Correspondent

LONDON—(Censored)—In a dispatch written before the Crimea Conference I indicated that among the subjects to be discussed by the Big Three was the question of the future of Italian colonies in Africa. I am now in a position to reveal that when the question was raised Stalin showed no desire to be involved in the new "scramble for colonial territories in Africa" and forthwith colonies of Central Asia After leaving left the matter entirely in the hands of the President and Stalin pointed out that one of the Russian Revolution was the liquidation of the old Czarist Empire and the transformation of the

NEGRO TO CONTINUE

It is generally believed that Selassie will continue to be recognized as sovereign ruler of Abyssinia, but British and Americans will enjoy "spheres of interests" in the economic development of Abyssinia. The Emperor will also be called upon to make certain territorial adjustments affecting his country's frontiers adjoining British Somaliland and Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, which supplies water for irrigating the British cotton plantations on the Sudan. It is also believed, though it

Near East, well informed diplomatic circles in London hint at far-reaching political and territorial decisions.

It is pointed out that Haile Selassie and Ras Kassa, the most powerful man in Abyssinia after the Emperor, were invited to Cairo shows that the British reached American Governments concerning agreements their future relations, not only with the Arab States, but with the entire East African area, including Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland. 3-17-45

STALIN "WASHES HANDS"

As a result of Stalin's washing his hands of the question as to become of the Italian colonies in East and North Africa, the decisions of President Roosevelt and Mr. these colored rulers concerning the future status of their countries and the Arab lands of the cannot be officially confirmed, that the future of the conquered Italian colony of Lybia was among the subjects discussed by the President and Mr. Churchill with the King of Egypt.

All these hush-hush diplomatic talks coming at a time when the Arab Prime Ministers are in conference for the purpose of creating a Federation of Arab States, bring the whole question of the reshaping of the Middle East into the forefront of power politics.

FRANCE AFFECTED

As such a plan will affect the future rights of France in Syria and Lebanon, General de Gaule refused to meet Big Two because France was not represented at the Crimea Conference. Britain is backing the Syrians against the French and Mr. Churchill had talks with Al Sayed Shukri Al Kuwatly, president of the British sponsored Syrian Republic.

And to further complicate matters, it is believed that the British will divide up Palestine, based upon the recommendation of the Peel Plan announced by the British Colonial Office in 1936.

Under this plan the Jews will given the low-lying country along the shores of Palestine and would also acquire control of Negeb in that State, while the Arabs now living in mandated territory would get the highlands to be incorporated into the greater Syrian Republic. Jerusalem itself would be made a sort of international zone guaranteed by Britain and the United States.

PERUVIAN WOULD BAR PREJUDICED NATIONS

Pittsburgh Courier p2. 1-20-45

NEW YORK—A plea urging that membership to the Pan American Union be limited to nations which guarantee their inhabitants absolute equality before the law and freedom from any sort of discrimination, was put up to World powers last week.

These regulations were urged by Senor Pedro C. Beltran, Peruvian Ambassador to the United States. A member of the board of governors of the union, Senor Beltran made the recommendations at a luncheon at the Savoy-Plaza Hotel attended by British, American and Peruvian delegates to the World Jewish Congress.

SHOULD BE PART OF CONSTITUTION 1-20-45

He suggested that articles against discrimination be made a part of the constitution of the proposed world security organization.

He said no nation should be admitted to any kind of world security organization unless it is willing to offer equal opportunity to all without any sort of discrimination.

As for the World organization, Senor Beltran said it should guarantee the integrity of all countries, "however small and weak," and should be based upon the "cooperation of equal sovereign nations having as their common faith the respect of human rights throughout the world." 1-20-45

After he suggested that articles against discrimination be made a part of the constitution of the proposed world security organization, Senor Beltran was asked whether he thought the same rules should apply to the Pan American Union. 1-20-45

ENDORHED BY BRITISH

The diplomat replied: "Without question. That regulation should be written into the constitution of the Pan American Union. Evidently it wasn't thought of or considered necessary before, but it certainly is now."

Senor Beltran's anti-discirimination proposal was endorsed by S. Sidney Silverman, member of the House of Commons and chairman of the British section of the World Jewish Congress.

Feel Enforced Training Will Entrench Jim Crow

Pittsburgh Courier p2. 1-20-45

NEW YORK—Opposition to the proposed compulsory peace-time military conscription was voiced this week by the NAACP in a letter to President Roosevelt. The association cited the segregated Army system as the basis of the opposition. "The concern of Negro Americans," the letter said, "stems from concern and respect for his fellow the fact that our armed services human beings which must be the have a pattern of segregation cornerstone of any permanent which applies only to the Negro. peace for mankind." Americans of every other racial strain and religion are able to serve their country in uniform without the stigma of separation on the basis of race. We have Chinese, Japanese, Mexicans, Filipinos and other non-white soldiers fully integrated into armed units. Only the Negro is set apart.

"Our principal objection to the compulsory peace time conscription proposal is that it will perpetuate the separation and humiliation of Negro American youths solely on the basis of race and color. Thousands of Negro lads who have not been segregated from their fellows in civilian life will be embittered annually by their government's training program. Thousands of white lads in their formative and impressionable years will be taught by this example that the proper place of Negro Americans is in a segregated status. It is inevitable that this separate training program will carry over into civilian life so that segregation and its attendant evils, instead of decreasing and disappearing, will become firmly established as a policy. 1-20-45

"This Association submits that our government ought not to project into the world of the future a training program for its youth, the pattern of which will be borrowed from a past filled with inequalities, indignities, and violence. If we must have compulsory military conscription, every American youth must be inducted and trained in an integrated system with no separation on account of race, color, or religion, so that in addition to preparing himself for the duty of defending his country, he can also prepare himself to live in a democratic society, with that

DuBois Asks World Colonial Commission

Atlanta Daily World Pa. 7-15-45

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Establishment of an international colonial commission within the framework of the United Nations assembly was called for by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, special NAACP assistant, when he appeared before the senate foreign relations committee last Wednesday morning.

The committee is holding hearings on the San Francisco charter and in two days had listened to proponents of the charter. Dr. DuBois, while not opposed to the charter, appeared on the first day allotted to the opponents. He was one of the three consultants to the conference designated by the NAACP.

NO REPRESENTATION

In his statement to the committee he pointed out that the world security charter makes no provision for representation of colonial peoples.

"It gives as little recognition as possible to the wishes of the colonial peoples themselves," he declared.

He described the colonial system as being undemocratic and expressed regret that the United States was aligned with the great colonial powers rather than with China and Russia which, he said, do not depend upon imperialism.

STETTINIUS EXPLAINS

In his statement to the committee on Manday, fomer Secy. of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., explained in summary the eight provisions of the charter, including the subject of trusteeship. Considerable questioning in this an on phases of the human rights declarations had been anticipated but they never materialized.

"The objectives of the trusteeship system include the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the dependent peoples concerned and their development toward self-government or independent, together with encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms," Stettinius said. "These provisions constitute another long step forward from the league of nations mandate system." 7-14-45

Annual reports for each nonstrategic trust territory will be required by the general assembly on the basis of a questionnaire prepared by the trusteeship council, he explained. He credited both the war and navy departments for their participation in the framing of the trusteeship provisions of the charter.

Urge FDR To Name Negro As World Confab Delegate

Atlanta World 6-2

CHICAGO — (ANP) — The names of seven Negro leaders have been sent to President Roosevelt for a selection of a Negro delegate to the world security and peace conference in San Francisco on April 25.

That action was taken Sunday during a citizen's mass meeting at Liberty Baptist Church here when a resolution was adopted that urged the President to make the appointment following speeches by Edgar G. Brown of the National Negro council,, the Rev. Archibald J. Carey Jr., Woodlawn African Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. D. Z. Jackson and Dr. J. L. Horace, president of the Illinois Baptist convention. 3-8-45

The President was asked to name either Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Dr. Metz T. P. Lochard, A. Philip Randolph, Bishop John A Gregg, Bishop R. R. Wright or Bishop W. J. Walls.

Soviets To Demand Race Equality At Peace Table

Chicago Defender 1-20-45

Chicago, Ill.

LONDON ENVOY SAYS RUSS TO FIGHT RACISM

1-20-45

New Stalin Decree To Army Rips All Discrimination

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON—Russia will demand racial equality at the peace table, a Soviet representative in London revealed this week.

A clause pledging racial equality not only for Jews, but all the non-European races of Asia, Africa and other continents and countries inhabited by colored peoples will be sought by members of the Russian peace delegation, he said.

A significant New Year statement issued here this week, reveals that Marshal Stalin, Georgian-born leader of the Soviet Union, has instructed military commanders of the Red army to ruthlessly stamp out all forms of racial discrimination and jim crow laws in countries occupied by Soviet forces.

Cites Stalin's Warning

According to Professor Komarov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Stalin's warning should be heeded by all malicious spreaders of racial hatred and racial practices. The professor explained that according to the laws of the Soviet Union active fascists and anti-Semites are punished by death.

Now the Soviet Union will put that idea into practice in Poland, Rumania and Hungary, hotbeds of anti-Semitism long before Hitler became a menace to Europe.

"In the future," said Professor Komarov, "we shall not turn our backs on racial practices until we have stamped them out, pulled them up by the roots, and taken every measure against their recurrence.

1-20-45

"When any country gives shelter to the Hitlerites or their ideas in the form of discriminatory legislation, racist organizations or a racist press, it is no longer an internal affair of that country."

"If your neighbor opens in his backyard a container of poison gas which threatens to spread over the town," continued Professor Kamarov, "you do not waste time by asking permission to enter his premises to prevent the death of thousands of people.

"Racist ideas are more dangerous than any poison gas. It is our solemn duty to future generations, to civilization and humanity, not only to put out the present bonfire of Nazi-Fascism in Europe, and elsewhere, but to discover and extinguish every one of its sparks and smouldering embers, wherever they may be found."

British Guiana Trade Council Puts Forth Idea

Atlanta World

1-31-45

Atlanta, Ga.

Would Insert Racial Equal Clause In Pact

By REGINALD PIERREPOINTE

NEW YORK —(ANP)—"All governments that legalize racial discrimination should be barred from taking part in the world peace conferences unless they have taken steps to annul legislat

1-31-45

That was the resol recently passed by the British Guiana Trade council, according to Hubert Nathaniel Critchlow last week, who discussed world labor relations with a group of American and West Indian leaders here. Critchlow was en route to London to attend the World Confernce of Trade unions next month as a delegate of British Guiana.

LIST PROPOSALS 1-21-45

The conferences, attended by delegates from trade union organizations in allied and neutral countries, will discuss (a) the furtherance of the allied war effort; (b) the attitude of the trade unions towards the anticipated peace settlement; (c) representation of the trade unions at the peace conference and at the preparatory commission and conferences for relief, rehabilitation and post-war reconstruction; (d) problems of post-war reconstruction including the reconstruction of the international trade union movement.

Proposals on the resolution of furtherance of the allied war effort included:

1. "That all soldiers and camp followers under the banners of the allied nations be given similar and the same treatment in every respect."

2. That government which legalize discrimination be barred from taking part in the world peace conference unless they have taken steps to annul such legislation." 1-31-45

CALL ON UNIONS

3. "That the influence of the trade unions be used in their respective countries to combat and discourage the practice of racial discrimination by organizations and private citizens."

Other resolutions adopted by the Guiana Trade Council were "representation of trade unions at the peace conference; post-war reconstruction; nationalization of public utility services in the Caribbean area and "that the educational policy of the British Labor party be made applicable to the colonies of the Caribbean area."

DECREES RACIAL, POLITICAL FREEDOM FOR ALL GERMANS

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

READ: "PURSUIT OF DEMOCRACY," PAGE 7

WASHINGTON—The Big Three, Russia, Great Britain and the United States, in the tripartite Potsdam conference have decreed that racial discrimination in laws, in education and in the courts must and shall end . . . in Germany.

President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee, and Generalissimo Stalin have affixed their signatures to the historic document establishing democracy for conquered Germany.

On the question of Italy's African colonies, the conference was not specific, and left the entire question to the September Council of Ministers of Foreign Affairs.

LIST THREE RULES 8-11-45

Under the section of political principles for the conquered nation, the tripartite agreements list three rules:

"All Nazi laws which provided the basis of the Hitler regime or established discrimination on grounds of race, creed or political opinion shall be abolished. No such discriminations, whether legal, administrative or otherwise, shall be tolerated.

"German education shall be so controlled as completely to eliminate Nazi and militarist doctrines and to make possible the successful development of democratic ideas.

"The judicial system will be reorganized in accordance with the principles of democracy, or of justice under law, and of equal rights for all citizens, without distinction of race, nationality or religion."

The matter of territorial questions was left undecided by the conference. It is expected that the newly organized Council of Ministers of Foreign Affairs will place this matter on their September agenda. Of particular interest is the matter of Italy's former African colonies.

Russia is reported to have stirred the conference with a proposal calling for international trusteeships for Italian colonies, but the final report merely states "the disposition of any former Italian territories was one to be decided in connection with the preparation of a peace treaty for Italy..."

No mention was made of Ethiopia's claim to portions of Italian-occupied,

Parley On Post-War Prospects Of Negro Proposed By Dunjee

Chicago Defender Ill.

1-20-45

By ROSCOE DUNJEE

Chicago, Ill. (Fourth of a Series)

Discussion of post-war riots and strained race relations that may develop following the war are in my judgment detrimental to the objective and constructive thinking Negroes should participate in at the present time.

Current Negro leadership is today almost completely dominated in the kingdom of fear. Instead of patterning programs that will provide means by which darker people may be beneficiaries of whatever happens, there seems just at this time a hesitant note in black life the world over, not helpful to submerged groups. 1-20-45

Ernest E. Johnson, chief of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Negro Press, very aptly illustrates and portrays the international picture as it relates to dark people, in his recent article in the November Crisis. Mr. Johnson declares there is today no liaison or understanding between Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti or American Negro leadership. Each group shelters itself behind an individual defense technique, having to do with the expediency of the moment. The year 1944 finds black people short of spirit and the emotional enthusiasm necessary at this time to add anything to the moral and economic regeneration of the world.

ROSCOE DUNJEE is considered one of the foremost Negro leaders in the nation today, not only because of his position as president of the National Negro Business League but because of his fearless, crusading efforts in journalism and politics. He is publisher of the Oklahoma Black Dispatch and was one of the first Negroes to join in the ranks of the CIO Political Action Committee.

No Unity of Thought

Right here at home, in America, we find the Negro approaching the post-war era without any definite coordination of thought among Negro newspaper publishers, writers and thinkers. I was shocked almost out of my senses some time ago during a post-war discussion in my office, when a young Negro attorney proceeded to say that stiff imigration laws should be enacted immediately following the war.

I seriously wonder whether or not Negroes desire to join the ranks of those who would stymie freedom of movement, and I wonder whether or not this young leader realized he was discussing a subject that fundamentally has in its vitals, segregation, as we know it in Dixie, pass laws as they are administered in South Africa, and the whole tissue and technique by which black people have been held provincial slaves. 1-20-45

In a meeting at Hot Springs, Ark., last spring, I was again amazed to see an important Negro political leader stand on his feet, and make an impassioned plea for the poll tax. Anyone who believes in the poll tax structure applauds taxation without representation, and does not fundamentally believe in democratic society. How much of this sentiment dominates southern Negro leadership is yet to be determined.

Fear of Socialized Medicine

On another occasion in the city of Washington, an NYA conference was almost wrecked by three Negro doctors when the question of socialized medicine was being discussed. All were agreed that social diseases were running rampant within the black group. Stark naked figures were presented to show that the physical frame of the blacks here in America is being ravished and destroyed.

These Negro doctors had only one argument and that related to the fear that their private practice might be damaged by new innovations. In such a discussion, one wonders, does Materia Medica rightfully belong to the few or the many of our time.

In still another conference, where I sat with outstanding leaders of the nation, I suggested that the organization take a stand for the inclusion of outside workers, agriculturists and domestics within the brackets of social security. All social security, wage and hour laws leaves this group economically shipwrecked. 1-20-45

I met stiff opposition to this suggestion and opposition which at that time could not be overcome.

Future of Negro Business

Today, the Negro merchant is segregated, and will never be released from this thralldom until the Negro masses has sufficient purchasing power to give strength to the segregated Negro businessman. In 1944, Negro leadership apparently does not realize that we shall rise in proportion as we raise the standard of the common masses. Around 80 per cent of all Negroes gainfully employed, are classified as outside workers, agriculturists or domestics. Relief must come to this group before adequate and substantial growth can come to current Negro business.

Recently, the governors of southern states met in Biloxi, Miss., and announced that there would be formulated immediately a program in the South giving equal educational opportunity to all. But are Negro educators and other units of Negro life ready to be called in on this subject? 1-20-45

The best proof we are not ready to discuss this subject is evidenced by the fact that not a single college operated solely by Negroes is equipped with an industrial and agricultural establishment. Eighty years after Lincoln's freedom we pay no attention to the warning of C. C. Spaulding that the only two efforts that may be successfully started from the top are ditches and graves.

Need For Conference

I recently proposed in Chicago, at the Publishers' Association, and I suggest now that a national post-war planning conference be called at which time all of the questions respecting education, housing, health, labor, rural life, taxation, and the general structure of basic economies be properly aired and discussed. 1-20-45

Take the question of taxation. Large business interests violently oppose the present system of taxation. There is danger that middle class Negroes in business will follow this trend if attention is not called to the fact that the folk who oppose present forms of taxation are also opposed to the trends of employment that give Negro workers more opportunity to labor, resulting in larger profits for Negro business.

Negro business men are making larger profits today than ever before, and we should keep in mind that when taxes are subtracted from what we now acquire, we are left with more than we had under the old system. In other words, the new order redistributes wealth so that it reaches you in a moderate way. 1-20-45

There is no more important subject than taxation that should engage the attention of Negroes. Some day, when we enter the brackets of the very rich, we may afford to oppose taxation in its present form. Just now, we should find much interest in graduate and inheritance taxes. These also are methods by which wealth is decentralized. We have never been in a Negro gathering where either of these subjects were discussed.

South's Opportunity

One of the important tasks for Negro leadership while southern thinking is in a state of flux, is to convince the South that the Negro, instead of being the white man's burden, is the South's economic opportunity number 1. Already, the purchasing power of Negroes is greater than America's foreign trade with any single foreign nation. 1-20-45

It's up to Negro leadership just at this time to provide the information that if the more than eight millions of blacks who reside in the South are supplied purchasing power, in the form of wages, the South will immediately become one of the most prosperous sections of the nation.

Another task for Negro leadership is to actually harness the spending power and the capital gains of the group. Out of a total of two billion dollars spent annually by Negroes for food, clothing and shelter, government figures show Negro merchants have a turnover of not exceeding $110,000,000.

We can see how inconsequental this is when it is remembered that the small handful of Chinese merchants in the U. S. have an annual turnover in their business structure of $89,000,000, which almost equals the business turnover of 13,000,000 Negroes. The Negro must learn how to organize and consolidate his collective economic strength if he is to measure arms with other people in the post-war period.

Negro Migration

An alert Negro leadership should develop an awareness respecting current migration. Already, almost half-million Negroes have moved into the West and Northwest. Thousands of them will not return.

We should keep in mind also, that this is but the beginning of a general population upheaval, such as this nation has never known before. I predict that the exodus from the South, which in twenty years shifted 2,000,000 Negroes above the Mason and Dixon line, following the first world war, will be insignificant as compared to what will happen when demobilization begins.

The boys who came back home twenty years ago, did not have the clarity of vision the boys will have who will soon return. They were more illiterate, and unlike the youths of today, did not visit every corner of the earth. We do not believe the South visualizes its actual problem. There will in all likelihood be racial difficulties in attempts to prevent the blacks from leaving the South.

If our prediction is realized there will be a replacement in labor that must come from other sections. Will it be native white labor from the North, or will it be foreign labor from the Eastern seaboard?

UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING

Washington Herald

To the editor: Which means that "the only way against attack is a trained citizen army." President Truman suggests, the health of our young men for military training. We must prepare to defend ourselves as best we can. But at all times it must be blindly plain to us that any amount of preparation of manpower will be of little value in the event of a swift and sudden enemy attack. Dr. Robert Oppenheimer who direct d our atomic research at Los Alamos, N. M., said so. Only that atomic raid on congested U. S. cities could very well kill 40 million Americans, or more than one of every four of us. Hanson Baldwin, writing in the New York Times, points out that "There can only be a limited and partly effective defense against a rocket travelling at well over 1,000 M. P. H., carrying an atomic warhead." Which means that "the only way to save human lives and material resources" is not as Truman suggests, to train our young men for war, but to construct a society of nations in which war is no longer an expedient way of settling political difficulties.

We are disturbed therefore that in his full-dress message to Congress on Military Training, an occasion which offered a unique chance for full exposition of our defence policy. That the President should have so cashed in his reference to the efforts being made for world co-operation. It is on the basis of that the "best insurance of world peace" which Truman points out that we do only insurance of world peace is not "plays to the gallery." Peace has been made at a cost that the world, he is convinced, will never arrive.

When Peace Comes...What?

Big Business Leader Sees Bright Post-War Future For Negroes

Chicago Defender 2-3-45 JHL.

By IRA MOSHER

(SIXTH OF SERIES)

2-3-45

The war has given the Negro a new and firmer foundation upon which to build his postwar future and the colored leaders of this country undoubtedly realize the heavy responsibility they now face in guiding the 13,000,000 members of their race to new heights of accomplishment.

American fighting men and American working men have had the benefit of closer association with the Negro since this war started, and as far as I can learn they have a greater respect for these fellow citizens than ever before. Discriminatory barriers have been leveled at unprecedented speed during the last three years.

I am sure that the Negro's full potential usefulness in this war has not yet been reached either on the battlefield or on the production front, and much educational work is still needed—on both sides—to conquer the prejudices which hinder his maximum use.

Industrial management is not playing ostrich and ignoring the Negro in its postwar planning. The colored worker will emerge from this war with impressive footholds in skilled and semi-skilled production jobs. He has proved that there is little justification for classifying a job according to race.

2-3-45

We have come a long way since the National Association of Manufacturers went up and down the country in 1941 in a series of regional meetings preaching to its members that there should be no arbitrary prejudices in employment. The NAM's official position on this question upholds the principle that there shall be no arbitrary discrimination in employment, retention, promotion or dismissal because of age, race, sex, membership or non-membership in any organization.

IRA MOSHER as president of the National Association of Manufacturers heads the biggest and most influential organization of employers in the nation. He is president of the Russell-Harrington Cutlery Co. in Southbridge, Mass., and was elected NAM head at its recent New York convention.

Top industrial management has taken a more tolerant and constructive attitude toward the employment of the Negro than almost any other segment of society.

Actually, today's bars to the hiring and upgrading of the Negro in industry in the past has been due largely to the discriminatory attitude of other employes and the labor unions rather than by arbitrary management policy. Management has been more or less in the middle—threatened with strikes and boycotts for attempting to bring Negroes into the factory, and charged with discrimination for not doing it.

Discrimination is not a matter of geography nor group. Discrimination of any kind is an inherited tradition and education is the only means of combating the habit.

As an association, NAM intends to pursue its policy of anti-discrimination education in industry.

Education Only Solution

The Negro himself is discriminating. He considers certain people his inferiors. He protested being forced to live adjacent to the Mexicans in a Denver Defense Housing project. The same arguments against discrimination against the Negro are just as vaild in the case of intra-race discrimination—the caste system—which every race practices to a degree.

Well, what are we going to do about all this? We are approaching a period in national development and in international progress where basic issues must be faced. How are we going to reach necessary understandings? How rapidly can we overcome prejudices inherited and passed down from generation to generation? Legislation will not make it so and wishful thinking will not make it so.

2-3-45

Only education can provide a mutual meeting ground. Again, I want to emphasize this problem of education—on both sides of the question. It is no more the Negro's problem than the white man's and they will have to solve it together. What is done must not be a gift from a privileged class to an under-privileged class. I am a firm believer in that old saying "that the only thing you can GIVE a man is opportunity."

Lauds Spirit of Negro Workers

I know that a great percentage of industrial management is enlightened on this question, and is willing to cooperate fully in helping the Negro achieve economic opportunity through a program of self-improvement. It is most difficult to imagine war being good for anybody or anything, but this war has clearly demonstrated that employee prejudices against bringing in Negro workers can be broken down by association and mutual understanding—and that the Negro as an individual can take his part in production on the basis of efficiency.

Urges Restraint And Tolerance

The efficient producer who is let out because of lack of seniority is not going to like it whether he is colored or not, and I hope that all men who suffer temporary job dislocation due to reconversion and other transition problems will show the good sense to practice restraint and tolerance during this troublesome period. We have good reason to believe that very little time will be lost in getting back into the full swing of peacetime production.

Although manufacturers provide normally only about 25 per cent of the jobs in this country, they know that the other 75 per cent are affected in a major way by what happens to industry. Manufacturers are planning ahead, and in their planning there is promise for a higher level of employment than this country has ever reached—and a minimum of displacement and unemployment during the reconversion period.

Reconversion from war production to peace production has been put on the sidelines temporarily because of new materiel demands, but it is a subject of unquestioned importance that must be answered largely in the coming year. The National Association of Manufacturers has some of the answers as a result of its recent reconversion survey, and therein is contained some heartening news for war workers.

This poll of more than 2,000 companies in the last few weeks points to post-war employment in manufacturing industry 30 per cent higher than in pre-war years. If other segments of our economy match this increase, estimates of 55,000,000 post-war jobs certainly are attainable.

No Threat of Mass Unemployment

The bugaboo of a long reconversion period also has been dissipated. Survey figures show that 49 per cent of industry can swing into full peacetime production the day it gets the "green light." Sixty-one per cent can start peacetime production that same day. And an additional 27 per cent will be able to resume civilian production within four weeks of the "go-ahead." Over-all totals indicate that 95 per cent of all industry can complete reconversion within eight weeks with 76 per cent of it reaching peak production in that period.

These figures contain no threat of mass unemployment; here is factual evidence that management is planning ahead to provide maximum employment at good wages; here is reassurance to workers that postwar jobs are in the making and that they do not need to abandon present war jobs for fear of the future.

Let me conclude by pointing out the particular significance of these figures to the Negro. In times of mass unemployment, the Negro is often among those who are first and hardest hit. These figures show that the Negro's opportunity to maintain his newly won place in industry will be greatly enhanced.

Despite what the critics say, this country is still a land of tremendous opportunity, and if we apply all our resources to the job of growing and producing, we can embark on a post-war era of peace and plenty such as no nation ever dreamed—and that will be good for all Americans.

TO RAISE UP NEW LEADERS

New York Ag 5-26-45

Of the one million American Negro service men and women who will, before very long, be coming back to civilian life an estimated 30,000 are qualified for college training. Uncle Sam will pay their tuition, fees and expenses. But the Negro colleges need a lift in meeting their new responsibilities. Teaching staffs must be strengthened and physical plants enlarged and better equipped. To this end 32 of these institutions have established the United Negro College Fund, Inc., which is conducting a national campaign for $1,550,000. Its national headquarters are at 38 East Fifty-seventh street New York City, N.Y. Obviously this is a timely undertaking. To help raise up new leaders who can aid in improving the lot of the Negro people is one way of bettering race relations in America.

—The Christian Science Monitor

Negroes First Victims Of Postwar Unemployment

Daily Worker 6-25-45 N.Y.

By Federated Press

Although Negro employment in industry was higher in 1944 than ever before, Negro workers may be the first victims of postwar unemployment. This is the conclusion reached in a survey by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. 6-25-45

After relating the gains made by Negro industrial workers from 1940 to 1944, the survey quotes Lawrence A. Oxley, senior technician of the WMC's minority groups service bureau of placement, as saying a new anti- Negro discrimination has already started.

Asserting that there is an increasing percentage of Negroes looking for jobs at the U. S. Employment Service "even in acute labor shortage areas," Oxley says the FEPC reports an increasing number of complaints of discrimination.

UNIONS FIGHT BIAS

The role of unions in the anti-discriminaton fight is mentioned in the survey. It quotes the May Monthly Labor Review to the effect that all new unions organized by the AFL "explicitly bar racial discrimination." The CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination has helped in the establishment of state anti-discrimination committees in 15 states and 35 county and city industrial councils, the survey states. The United Auto Workers (CIO) has appointed a Negro to its war policy board and its education department. It has encouraged the formation of committes on anti-discrimination and minorities in each local.

The customary employer prediction of a riot in the event of Negroes being hired does not pan out when management really makes up its mind to hire Negroes, the survey finds. 6-25-45

"While there have been strikes in a number of places over the introduction of Negroes," it says, "in many parts of the country it has been found that once the plant management definitely decided to employ Negro workers and made this clear as a whole, the anticipated racial difficulties did not materialize."

More than seven percent of the total labor force in war plants at the end of 1944 were Negroes as compared with three percent in January, 1942, th survey reports. The number of Negroes in skilled work is still small, though much larger than before the war, it points out.

The National Urban League's questionnaire to 300 war plants, which employed few if any Negroes before the war, is mentioned in the survey. Of these 269 located in 25 states replied they employ 100,184 Negro workers. "Only eight of the 269 plants indicated that both work rooms and comfort facilities were segregated; 20 reported separate comfort arrangements," the survey says. "In the rest there was apparently no segregation." 6-25-45

John Robert Badger World View

Chicago Defender Chi., Ill. 7-28-45

No Negroes at Peace Table

THE DEFENDER'S symposium some months ago revealed a concensus that Negroes should sit at the peace table. But the first phase of the peace conference of World War II, which began last Sunday near Berlin, was marked by a conspicuous absence of representatives of the darker brethren—except several members of the Soviet entourage from the Mongoloid peoples of the Republics in Asia. Absent were spokesmen for Africans whose labor power and resources contributed so much to allied victory. Absent were representatives of the millions of India who paid so dear a price in hunger and blood for the preservation of British "democracy."

Absent were members of the Negro-Americans who helped open the second front on V-day and served so valiantly amongst those who finally brought the Nazi tyranny to its end in Western Europe. But this does not mean that the long-term interests of Negro Americans and the Colonial peoples were not defended at the peace conference. Behind the scenes, forming a backdrop for the historic drama enacted there, were certain world forces moving in the direction of national liberation for all peoples, forces which were not present a generation ago at Versailles, the peace conference of World War I.

Chief among these forces was the new and enormous political and military power of the Soviet Union. Backed by the world most powerful army, an industrial potential second only to that of the United States, and a moral and political prestige based on the genuine affection of most of the world's peoples and a record of performance of promises, Stalin symbolized the aspirations of all submerged, so-called dependent peoples, irrespective of race or nationality.

Stalin Held Ace

HE CAME TO THE peace conference with a new ace in his hand. The ace dealt when Molotov alone at the San Francisco security conference championed the freedom of colonial peoples, when the Soviet delegation alone demanded self-determination for the colonies and a provision for the world trade union congress to consult with and advise the new United Nations organization.

Moreover, Stalin came to the conference with a decisive influence in Asia, coupled with the power to help destroy Japanese fascism; with the ability to decide the outcome of any major political development in that sphere. And most important from our viewpoint, he came with a record of the successful implementation of a policy of racial and national equality, a record doubly embellished by the victories of the multinational and multi-racial red armies.

It was to be expected therefore, that Soviet policy at the peace conference of World War II —a factor lacking at the parley which ended World War I, would coincide with the interests of Colonial peoples and subject racial minorities. What specific influence they exerted will be found in the records of the conference and its end results, about which more later.

British Swing to Left

A SECOND FACTOR acting in our interest was the leftward swing of the British people, which was foreshadowed by their growing opposition to Churchill's foreign policies before the election, scotched the ambitious plans of certain people for an Anglo-American entente, separate from and ultimately to be directed against the Soviet Union.

Churchill attended the conference with the authority only of a "caretaker." He could not, therefore, enter into any binding commitments with the representatives of American imperialism. Thus weakened, British toryism was able to play a less influential role in deciding the fate of Europe. Moreover, although the colonial peoples cannot hope for automatic liberation under a labor government or a government even heavily influenced by labor, the new British government will be much less able to maneuver against the colonies than if Churchill had received a blank check, or if the test of strength had been postponed. 7-28-45

Another attempt to settle the crisis in India is immediately imperative. And the rising tide of rebellion in Nigeria and the West Indies, not to mention some of the British Asiatic territories, will have to be countered with force or concessions. With their moral prestige already weakened by the persistent hypocrisy of Churchill, there is reason to believe it will be a policy of concessions.

Cushion Against Post-War Cutback Seen Crucial Need For Negro People

DEFENDER — Chicago — Ill.

When Peace Comes...What?

By F. D. PATTERSON

No group in America has greater reason than the Negro to view with concern the dire possibilities of the post-war era.

4-28-45

This group has enjoyed for the first time in nearly two decades anything like full employment and has attained to a degree entirely without precedent job classifications in the skilled and professional brackets.

Few will predict that either the full employment or the job levels will withstand the pressures of reconversion. The all too grudging extension of opportunity in the present crisis makes certain that employment retrenchment will fall heaviest on the Negro. Some of the gains made will be held. There is too much at stake to be hopeful that this will be true of more than a small percentage of the advances made.

The Negro people must be prepared for setbacks. More than this they must marshall with all haste an effective program of action that will cushion the shock of readjustment as far as possible.

Such a plan to be effective will recognize a number of factors as significant. These factors emphasize the point that the welfare of the Negro in the post-war is tied up with conditions which will determine the ease of severity of the shock of reconversion to the nation as a whole.

On the favorable side some of the factors which will help the Negro to hold many of the gains of the war-time employment are as follows:

4-28-45

1. An increasing sentiment in the nation is committed to a full employment policy as the only means of insuring prosperity and adequate national strength. Vice President Wallace says that "Jobs for all" will be the slogan of peoples everywhere for the next 20 years.

4-28-45

2. It is generally conceded that full employment or anything near it will now be possible unless there is well coordinated interaction between the federal government and private industry. To this end plans are being conceived and blue printed for numerous public works projects.

3. The Negro has made a commendable record as a soldier and war worker. Because of this there is too much evidence of patriotism and competence to ignore the just petitioning of the Negro for his share of employment opportunity. It will not be as easy as formerly to find excuses other than the real one of race to justify the withdrawal of the privilege of gainful employment.

4. The Negro having gained new ground during the war period will resist unfair and discrimination where his right to earn a living is concerned with the vigor and assurance that his new won confidence in himself has given.

5. The labor movement, particularly the CIO, seems more interested in securing for the Negro worker his employment rights and will also feel constrained to protect those rights as a guarantee to its own well being. It is evident that failure to offer this protection will force the Negro into competition with organized labor as a scab worker.

6. The Negro is increasingly vote conscious and will use the ballot with improved effectiveness to protect his economic status.

Post War Handicaps

These several points will have much influence in helping the Negro to hold his own in employment There are formidable handicaps to be encountered, however. A few such handicaps are suggested as follows:

1. The period of reconversion, which will last from six months to 18 months, will be one of tension and confusion not calculated to improve race relations.

2. National unemployment will probably reach at least the ten million figure during the height of the post-war slump that will accompany reconversion. It is estimated that after reconversion he unemployment load will level off at five million.

The great increase in productive efficiency will aggravate the employment problem and may force sweeping changes in the national economy.

4. After World War I, two millions shifted from the cities and industry to the farms and rural communities. After World War II, few, if any, will be absorbed in this manner.

The foregoing indicate clearly that the Negro worker may expect to be stepped down in his level of employment and frequently pushed out of jobs. This will apply particularly to jobs gained through the war effort.

Unusual Hardship Inevitable

These factors, favorable and unfavorable, spell at best a period of uncertainty and confusion which will begin with the end of the war in Europe and continue for an indefinite period. The length of this period will be determined largely by the extent to which national economic and political forces accept the doctrine of full employment as a national policy and employ full federal aid to take up where private capital leaves off in projects of public significance.

It remains to be seen if society is willing to apply the solution required to eliminate the giant evil of unemployment in peace time. War has shown that full employment is possible. If a serious effort is made to reach the goal of employment in peace time it can only be done by the supplanting of private industry with whatever degree of public works is required.

The extent to which such an effort is made will prove doubly helpful to the Negro worker, for the nearer the nation comes to full employment the greater will be the Negro's chance for a job. More than this public works will, according to the recent record of the past more than nearly insure an equitable distribution of jobs to population groups. It is also highly probable that the Negro group will benefit proportionately from the "use value" of public facilties such as libraries, hospitals, schools, etc. In the South where Negroes yet reside in largest numbers the need for these and other facilities such as public parks and playgrounds is most acute.

Special Needs

A heavy expenditure of federal monies as a post war employment measure will not be insensitive to the national need to equalize opportunity for good health, sound education, and recreation. The South stands, therefore, to gain strongly as a geographic section. The club areas of cities over the nation at large should also prove the locale of large expenditure, especially for housing. The Negro, because of his southern concentration and low economic status, would stand to gain in either situation.

It is evident that the Negro can and must play an important role in the post war period. The identity of his needs with those of the general welfare and in behalf of the American masses requires that a constant vigil be exercised and a vigorous program be formulated that will seek to strengthen those forces working for full employment.

There must also be a concerted effort to combat those forces which will single out the Negro for special hardship and abuse because of race when jobs are scarce.

Action Program

Some of the elements which such a program might wisely contain are the following:

1. Enlightenment of the general public on the contribution of the Negro people to the war effort both in industry and the armed forces, combined with an appeal to the spirit of fair play as an concept fundamental to the American way of life.

2. The establishment of a permanent FEPC. The good derived from this will not be confined to the all too few cases that are equitably adjusted but also from the repeated emphasis which will be given to importance of just employment practices.

3. The institution as soon as possible of a federal works program which will reduce unemployment during reconversion. There should be rigid insistence that Negroes be given their proportionate share of this work. Proportionate in this instance should refer to their percentage of the idle in an area of community rather than a population ratio.

4. Negro flyers should be given the privilege of remaining in the army on active status because (a) the number will be small, (b) the adjustment to private or commercial flying will be more difficult.

5. Negroes should be aided in every reasonable way to secure the ballot in the South. With the privilege and responsibility of choosing public officials Negroes will expect and receive more consideration in all measures intended to benefit all citizens without regard to race.

6. The appointment of adequate Negro personnel by the Veterans Bureau to see that returning Negro soldiers are sought out and advised as to the full provisions of the G.I. Bill for their further education or the establishment in business or on farms with government loans.

7 The appointment of adequate Negro personnel in the several federal bureaus to insure that adequate consideration is given to the problems and needs of their group. Important among these are: (a) Financing agencies whose funds are available to private individuals. Example RFC and Farm Credit; (b) Action agencies that work directly with low income groups such as Farm Security and Agricultural Extension.

8. Extension of Social Security provisions to domestic workers. There should be adequate machinery with Negro personnel included to see that old age pensions and other provisions for the infirm research Negro eligibles.

9. The passage of national health measures to insure hospitalization and medical care to the indigent sick, along with adequate provisions for reaching needy Negro people. In the proposed plan to utilize surplus hospital material and the construction of small community and district hospital units in rural areas, it is hoped that adequate safeguards are set up to see that service to low income and indigent Negroes is available on an equitable basis and that Negro physicians and nurses are used in units established for Negroes.

10. Insist upon the establishment of full educational opportunity throughout the nation.

11. Insist that Negro youth remain in school and that those with the necessary training and ability prepare themselves in those technical fields which are related to the basic industry in the sections or regions in which they reside.

12. That the stress which has been placed upon vocational efficiency and other attributes of the successful worker or employee be continued, organized, emphasized, and extended.

13. Seek the use of federal funds and other capital for the development of private enterprise. The Negro should accept an increasing responsibility through his own initiative and resourcefulness to improve the unemployment situation.

14. Diligent efforts should be made to increase the number of Negroes in organized labor and to improve the quality of their participation.

These suggestions are not intended to be inclusive but suggestive only of the type of quality of activity which may well be adopted if the Negro is to play more than a static role in helping to see the nation through the inevitable post war slump and into the development of a reasonable peace.

Fortunately, these efforts are consistent with the national trend toward a form of government which is aware of and concerned about the needs of the total citizenry. Few will deny that the greatest possible strength for the United States in the difficult years of international relations ahead is a must of first importance. Few will also deny that to secure this strength the nation cannot afford the ignorance and disease which has exacted such a major toll in the present war effort. Full insistence upon every and all steps, therefore, that will bring the Negro people to the position of being a full and functioning asset to the general welfare is both patriotic and sound

The Negro people should gird themselves to wage an organized and aggressive effort in the full American tradition for every responsibility and privilege described as the inalienable right of citizens of the United States of America.

DR. FREDERICK D. PATTERSON is president of Tuskegee Institute and considered one of the foremost educators in the country.

The Charter and the Colonial Countries

Daily Worker N.Y.

by Alphaeus Hunton

THE weaknesses in the World Charter drafted at San Francisco, especially with reference to colonial trusteeship, deplorable though they are, should not be permitted to weaken the Negro's support for the Charter as a whole. We must keep the larger perspective clear. The San Francisco Charter is not the end but merely the beginning of United Nations' planning for world security and peace. As such a beginning, a foundation stone of international cooperation on which to build, the Charter is an important and essential document.

Every means must now be utilized, therefore, to secure the Senate's speedy ratification of the Charter so that it may be implemented and clothed with substance and meaning as quickly as possible. Realizing they can't win with a frontal attack on the Charter, the Wheelers and Vandenbergs will resort to the more subtle technique of time-consuming delays and amendments. it is especially important for those who realize the shortcomings of the Charter to be on their guard against the latter strategy: attempts in the Senate to "improve" the Charter, though on the surface appearing laudable, can only have the effect of killing it. 7-7-45

The strengthening of the United Nations postwar program on colonies or any other problem cannot be accomplished by each of the fifty nations tinkering with the Charter prior to ratification. Rather it is through further decisions yet to be made by the major powers and through the actual application of the Charter to specific probelms that the means must be found for filling in the loop-holes and strengthening the weak sections of the Charter.

This applies especially to action on the colonies. It yet remains to be seen whether the old mandated territories and new ones resulting from this war will be brought under the trusteeship plan or will be in effect annexed by individual powers. It also remains to be seen what concrete guarantees and conditions will be required of those powers which place their territories under world organization supervision. Progressive public opinion, if adequately organized and effectively expressed in the United States, Great Britain, France, and other countries, can have a great deal to do in getting the correct determination of these and other still-to-be-settled questions. 7-7-45

The key test will be right here in the United States. As was made manifest in San Francisco, this country holds the decisive power for making the United Nations Organization either a weak and inneffectual instrument (and consequently a dangerous one, such as the League was) or a strong agency for general progress.

To get down to specifics, consider the demand for unilateral control of "strategic" areas in the Pacific (other areas throughout the world are also claimed) as though the U. S. alone had the job of maintaining world peace. It was this demand which was responsible for the extremely limited and dubious character of the American proposals on trusteeship. Far more attention and organized opposition to this thinly disguised program of imperialist expansion must be evinced by organized labor and other progressive forces in the United States.

The European powers will take their cue as to their colonial policies from the United States. It therefore rests with the most alert progressive elements in this country to recognize and live up to their responsibility for mobilizing public opinion so that our government will throw its influence on the side of self determination and independence for all colonial peoples, as demanded by the Soviet Union and other anti-imperialist states. A serious and vigorous people's campaign toward this goal will counteract and negate the nationalist-imperialist currents which are finding too frequent expression today not only in Hearst and other such papers, but in the very halls of our Congress. This campaign must be undertaken simultaneously with the campaign for Senate approval of the World Charter, so that, once ratified, it will be properly implemented.

Postwar Military Training

Daily Worker N.Y.

FOR months Americans have been discussing the pros and cons of universal postwar military training. Opinions have differed widely, in most cases flowing from attitudes toward the broader issue of America's postwar role in the world. 7-7-45

Those who are genuinely behind the United Nations charter drawn at San Francisco cannot but agree with one aspect of the report of the House Postwar Military Policy Committee, namely that some form of military preparedness will be necessary if America is to discharge her responsibilities under the charter. We must also agree with the report that a large standing army is not the American or democratic way to do the job.

In principle, then, we agree that there will have to be some method of military training after the war that did not exist before the war so that we can supply force against an aggressor, by decision of the United Nations Security Council, and so that we can supply occupation forces as per agreement of the Big Three.

There is, however, no need to rush the issue, as is proposed in the House Committee report. We now have a more than ample sized Army and Navy, and our youth already have received training in a highly effective fashion. The millions of Americans now on the battlefronts and in the Armed Forces must be assured a full voice in determining the postwar military policy. Final decision on the form of postwar military training must wait the end of the war and their return. 7-7-45

This is emphasized by the fact that among those who are pushing for quick action are people who want to make our nation follow a predatory, rapacious imperialist course. They hope to see the trainees used against the Soviet Union, against the colonial peoples of the Far East and against the liberated peoples of Europe. They would like to have them for use against labor and other popular movements at home.

It is for that reason that labor and many others backers of our nation's foreign policy have expressed serious misgivings about any move to push compulsory military training legislation through now.

On the other hand, some of those who would like to wreck the United Nations Organization, like Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Norman Thomas, are agitating against any form of military preparedness.

But while some form and measure of military training is necessary, the form it takes is very important and necessitates further examination. We think the House Committee report is correct in stressing that the training program must be divorced from military service. We would go further and insist that it must be undertaken under democratic civilian control, with labor represented in its administration.

It must certainly be planned in such a way as to advance the health of our youth and to advance, rather than retard, adjustment to a democratic civilian life. That means it should supplement the education of the youth.

Of utmost importance it must be based on full equality of status and treatment of Negroes. Every trace of Jimcrow or other form of discrimination must be excluded.

Finally, it must take into account the nation's requirements under the United Nations charter. It must be geared to a democratic foreign policy.

These are some of the considerations that, in our opinion, will have to shape postwar military training legislation.

Toward Freedom

Daily Worker N.Y.

MOST of our great trade unions cannot possibly avoid the problem of the Negro's continued right to work after the war in thousands of plants where that right has but recently been won. History will thrust the problem upon them—indeed, it is already doing so. And developments of the next few months could easily bring our unions face-to-face with a serious situation which they are not prepared to handle.

There is no escaping the fact that there must be enormously more trade union discussion and planning to meet the threat which reconversion cutbacks will bring—are now bringing!—to the employment rights of hundreds of thousands of Negro workers. And I know of nothing that would contribute more to this end than for thousands of white and Negro trade unionists to read the National Negro Congress' new pamphlet on Negro Workers After the War.

In a simple and effective style, this 23-page pamphlet recounts the changes the war has made in the composition of the American working class, and the unprecedented entrance and general acceptance of Negro workers in industry. It also reports the results of

by Doxey A. Wilkerson

NNC-union-management investigations, which reveal that if reconversion layoffs follow traditional seniority practices, most of these Negro workers will be the "first fired," and in many plants and departments they will be wiped out entirely. 5-9-45

* * *

ALL of which poses the question: "Will the unions, which have made such magnificent advances in tearing down the color barrier, allow unmodified and unadjusted seniority rules to become an instrument whereby pre-war discriminations may be frozen into postwar industry, the unions disrupted, the Negro and white workers alike weakened in organizational power?"

The NNC pamphlet, with full appreciation of the absolute necessity of holding the policy of seniority intact, suggests that the procedural application of this policy now calls for modification. "Seniority rules that were adequate three years ago may no longer reflect the actual situation. With a shifting scene, they may stand in need of adjustment, like scientific instruments whose headings require correction because of varying temperatures, atmospheric pressures, and the like. The instrument is not rejected: it is adjusted."

The Negro Worker After the War

The pamphlet expresses no surprise or alarm over the fact that this "most hotly contested" proposal for seniority adjustment has not brought "instantly unanimous" opinion in the trade union movement. "This problem has no precedent. It is new to history." Nor does the pamphlet propose "detailed plans for seniority adjustment. That is the job of the unions. It is they who must take the initiative."

5-9-45

WHAT The Negro Worker After the War does do is to pose the problem of postwar Negro layoffs on the basis of objective facts, to suggest seniority adjustments as one way of meeting it, and then to examine and evaluate the main arguments for and against that proposal. It also expresses confidence "that the unions, whose white and Negro brothers and sisters have fought so splendidly for the Negro people, will take whatever measures are needed to maintain the gains of wartime."

I share that confidence. But I should like to see the unions step up their now laggard consideration of the problem by the mass distribution of The Negro Worker After the War. The pamphlet costs only five cents, is available at most progressive bookshops, and can be ordered from the National Negro Congress, 307 Lenox Ave., New York 27, N. Y.

Senator Wants Italian Peace Terms Announced

Afro-American Md.

3-3-45 WASHINGTON

Public announcement of the terms of the Italian Armistice, whose political clauses require abolition of all Fascist influence, including racial laws, was demanded of the State Department on February 19 by Sen. Styles Bridges (Rep., N.H.). 3-3-45

After a brief discussion with Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, Bridges obtained permission to insert in the Congressional Record an article printed in the International Law Review, at Geneva, purporting to outline the terms.

According to the article, under the military clauses of the armistice, Italy is required to recognize the independence of Ethiopia. Italy also would be bound to whatever disposition of her colonies—Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and Italian Libya—may be made at the peace table.

SOVIETS INVITE 99TH PILOTS TO POSTWAR JOBS

Chicago Defender

Chicago Ill.

3-10-45

No Color Line In USSR, Says Unionist At London Parley

By HENRY LEE MOON
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

LONDON — Faced with probable job discrimination by commercial airlines at home, U. S. army-trained Negro pilots and other technicians may have an opportunity to utilize their skills after the war in Soviet Russia.

Vasili V. Kusnetsov, head of the Russian delegation to the World Trade Union Conference and chairman of the powerful All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR, this week told the Defender:

"Our vast reconstruction and rehabilitation program will require tremendous raw material, machinery and manpower. We will not be satisfied merely to rebuild the devastated areas on a par with their pre-war level. We're going to improve and expand our industries, transport and communications and our agriculture. Naturally, we will welcome those technicians whose skills can make a contribution to our reconstruction program."

Kusnetsov, who remained in London to participate in deliberations of the Continuing committee which has drawn up proposals for a new permanent world federation of trade unions, speaks fluent English and is well acquainted with the American scene, having spent several years working in aircraft and automobile plants in Chicago and Detroit.

No Discrimination

While no plan for the recruitment of manpower from Allied countries had been formulated, Kusnetsov pointed out that his country's need was great and that in meeting that need, there "would, of course, be no discrimination on account of race, color or creed. We do not tolerate such discrimination in the Soviet Union. We intend to enlarge both our aircraft production and our air transit. We do not anticipate any unemployment. We expect an expansion of all our industries."

The USSR will probably not embark upon the same kind of recruitment program the country used in the late twenties and early thirties, the Soviet delegate said. At that time there were very few Soviet engineers and technicians. It was necessary to depend upon foreign assistance. Engineers, technicians and skilled workers were brought in from the United States, Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Scandanavia and other countries. Promising young Soviet workers, among them Kusnetsov, were sent abroad to learn by doing, that is, to work on production lines in foreign plants.

Today, the picture has changed somewhat, Kusnetsov said. "While the program before us is gigantic," he added, "we may not need as much outside assistance as we did in those days. We now have trained men and women who can not only produce, but who can also train others. Nevertheless, there will doubtlessly be opportunities for the full use of highly skilled personnel."

In its final sessions the demands of the colonial delegates to the World Trade Union Conference were endorsed by the continuing committee. The group called for "an end to the system of colonies, dependencies and subject countries" in the manifesto issued by the committee at its closing session, Thursday, Feb. 22.

Delegates from British colonies in Africa and America had formulated a series of demands for approval by the conference. They demanded:

1. The abolition of the color bar and all racial discrimination in all public and private employment.
2. The abolition of forced labor, child labor, peonage and all forms of slavery.
3. Abolition of pass law legislation and the establishment of the right to free assembly, free speech, free press and free movement.
4. Equal pay for equal work, irrespective of race, color, creed or sex.
5. Abolition of racial discrimination against the admittance of African and colored workers into existing white trade unions.
6. Modernization of labor and social legislation in the colonies.

Negro Consultants Ask Equality For All Races

Birmingham News 4-26-45

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— Two Negro consultants asked the United States delegation Thursday to demand an "equality for all races" declaration in the world organization charter before the United Nations Conference.

Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois and Walter White, executive of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, asked that these three provisions be written into the Dumbarton Oaks proposals:

1. Equality for all races.
2. A bill of rights for all the people of the world.
3. Abolition of the colonial system in favor of an international agency to which the colonial powers would report.

4-26-45

HINTS MILITARY MAY DROP JIM CROW IN PEACE

Chicago Defender 2-3-45

President Replies To NAACP Protest On Conscription

(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK — President Roosevelt admitted this week that "mistakes have been made" by the Army during the war in its racial policies and hinted that peacetime military conscription may bar Jim Crow.

In a cagey letter to the NAACP, the President did not make any promises that segregation will be wiped out in post-war compulsory military training, but wrote that plans for a peacetime army are still being studied and are open to change from the wartime pattern.

2-3-45

"It would not be contended by the Army or anyone speaking in its behalf that no mistakes have been made during the period of this war," Mr. Roosevelt said in response to a NAACP protest against extension of the present segregated Army policy into peacetime conscription.

Correct Unfair Situations

"Steps have been taken by the Army from time to time to correct unfair racial situations. Most assuredly this process will be repeated in the future, he continued.

"The views you expressed," the President told the NAACP, "are predicated upon the assumption that all policies have been finally determined with regard to the composition of the Army during peacetime and that they will be discriminatory in their application to Negroes. This is contrary to the facts. Final plans have not been crystallized.

"Obviously those responsible for the development of War Department policies will utilize all of their experiences of the past four years," the letter said.

2-3-45

Study Records

Mr. Roosevelt revealed that the Army is studying the records of Negro troops in training and combat and asserted that the future utilization of Negroes in the Army "will depend upon an evaluation of this material which will be conducted in a fair manner and with due regard for all available facts."

The President admitted that the peacetime military training program "affects not only our military policy, but also the social, economic and educational aspects of our way of life." He expressed confidence "that the statutes which may finally be enacted will provide maximum protection of these aspects, and yet also accomplish the prime objective, the military security of the nation. 2-3-45

"I appreciate the views you have sent me and have transmitted them to the War Department for such consideration as might be given them here."

AMENDMENT GUARANTEES CIVIL RIGHTS TO MANKIND

Pittsburgh Courier 4-12-1945

By P. L. PRATTIS
(Executive Editor)

SAN FRANCISCO — Specific amendments dealing with the equal rights of peoples and distinctions based on race, language, religion or sex have been made to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals by the Big Four governments — the United States, the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and China. 4-12-45

If approved by the United Nations Conference these amendments will become a part of the charter of the organization to be set up here. The amendments are made in paragraphs dealing with the purposes of the organization and with the functions and powers of the general assembly:

1. To develop friendly relations among nations (based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples) and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace.

2. To achieve international cooperation in the solution of international economic, social, cultural and other humanitarian problems and promotion and encouragement of respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, language, religion or sex. 8-12-45

3. The general assembly should initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of promoting international cooperation in political, economic, social and cultural fields to assist in the realization of human rights and basic freedoms for all without distinction as to race, language, religion or sex.

Announcement of the agreement of the four big powers on the amendments was made Friday just prior to the deadline for submission of amendments.

U.S. MAY CHANGE HER 'FRIENDSHIP' POLICY

The Daily Mail

From GEORGE MOORAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday.

AN atmosphere of long-suppressed realism, if not gloom, is falling upon the San Francisco Conference with the departure of Secretary of State Edward Stettinius for a conference with President Harry Truman.

Taken in connection with arbitrary Soviet actions throughout Eastern Europe, it is predicted here that America stands on the threshold of a radical change in the high-priced friendship policy cultivated so grimly during the European war years.

For the first time Conservative American newspapers — until now preserving silence because of the Security Conference hopes —are openly charging that the Russian display of force has perhaps fatally undermined efforts at world agreement.

In a front page editorial, the San Francisco News declares that Stettinius' departure is bad news —it means that the post-war situation is very much out of hand.

5-25-45

☆

THE paper says: Though there are many cross currents in the Frisco Conference and in the complicated European situation, one nation dominates both. That is Russia. At the Golden Gate her attitude has been that she must have her way on all major issues—or else.

In Europe she has been getting her way by force or threat directly and through her multiplying puppets.

The editorial says that since Yalta Stalin has not been carrying out his Big Three agreements. Meanwhile, Russia is taking military control of all Eastern and most of Central Europe.

"Much evil now being done cannot be undone unless Russia soon reverses her defiant policy," says the paper. "This is a terrible tragedy.

☆

"RUSSIA cannot realise what trouble she is storing up for herself and the world. We hope she wakes up before it is too late."

As a recent Moscow observer, it is fascinating to see the rapid understanding both by public and official Americans of views which, on my arrival a month ago were considered unreasonably hostile. This counter-swing may be too rapid and too violent, because notwithstanding the examples of Poland and Trieste, there is much more to be revealed.

I think from my conversations both here and in Washington that President Truman is prepared to make any or all disclosures of fact. He is beginning with a clean slate without obligations, secret or otherwise, to the Soviet Government.

One possibility that bears watching is the acceptance by the Security Conference of the principle that Soviet Republics are genuinely sovereign independent States. It was generally thought that Russia wanted an additional two votes for the Ukraine and White Russia because of domestic pressure or, perhaps, to bolster support against an Anglo-American bloc.

5-25-45

IN my opinion, it is something far more devious and effective. It will be noticed that since the abrogation of the Soviet-Turkish Friendship Pact there has been no move to renew it, but many speculations from Moscow and elsewhere that the Dardanelles may come under revision.

Russia has indicated that the Montreux Treaty, like the Turkish Friendship Pact, "does not conform to the present situation." More, she may ask for a change, naturally under "democratic processes." This means voting.

Now, the Montreux signatories included Turkey, Russia, Britain, France, Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece, and Yugoslavia. At best, this means five votes to four against the Russian bloc

But Russia can then bring in the independent and sovereign republics of Moldavia and the Ukraine.

Hastie Appears Against Draft In Peacetime

Memphis World 6-15-45

Notes Signs Of More Distrust In Relations

BY ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Noting "signs of increasing distrust" in American-Soviet relations, and pointing to the present policy of discrimination and segregation in the armed forces, William Hastie appeared for the NAACP last week before the Postwar Military Policy committee in opposition to ending legislation which would authorize peacetime military conscription.

Premising his early objections upon the international phase of the question, Hastie rejected the theory that "we must be a greater military power than our neighbors" in order to take independent military action, and saw this as an inconsistency in what is being attempted at the United Nations conference in San Francisco. 6-15-45

SPECIAL PROBLEMS

Getting to his main thesis, Hastie devoted the remaining time to "consideration of problems of special importance" to Negroes. The bill gives a "blank check" to the army and navy, he said, and Negroes oppose such a "blanket authority uncontrolled by legislative safeguards against abuse."

"We have no reason to belive that the navy contemplates the use of Negroes in any capacity other than messmen when it returns to a peacetime basis," he asserted. He then cited restrictions in the army against the use or limitation of Negroes to infantry, cavalry and quartermaster corps, and in "the types of training and service open to Negroes within a particular arm of the service."

So long as congress leaves the military with "unfetted discretion" to discrimination as it may please in training and service, he continued, the type and extent of discrimination will depend upon the will of the officers who are administering or supervising particular programs. This, he added, congress should not permit.

PUERTO RICO BIAS

"One of the most ridiculous and extreme manifestations of this practice (of segregation)," Hastie stated, "is to be found in Puerto where the army has introduced a system of separate colored and white Puerto Rican units. I do not know what test of racial identity is applied or can be applied, but the more matter of practical difficulty does not deter those who make a fetish of racial segregation."

6-16-45

He concluded by stating that it is "the responsibility of congress to require unequivocal language that in the army and the navy the selection of individuals for training the determinaiton of units both for training and for service shall be accomplished without regard to or distinction on account of race."

Charter Will Not Prevent Wars

An Analysis Shows United Nations' Charter Weaker Than League's Covenant In Many Respects; Little Peoples of World Must Remove Basic Causes of War

Pgh. Pa.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Courier promised to bring to its readers a detailed comparison between the United Nations Charter and the Covenant of the League of Nations. It herewith presents this comparison by its Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Dr. Rayford W. Logan.

By Dr. RAYFORD W. LOGAN, Courier Foreign Adviser

The Covenant of the League of Nations, the expression of the high hopes of mankind after a war that killed ten million men, wounded twenty-two million and cost 287 billion dollars, failed to prevent a second world war. This second war has already killed twenty-five millions, wounded perhaps a proportionately larger number and cost a trillion dollars. One could certainly expect that civilized mankind would have learned enough from the past to draft international machinery that would offer a real guaranty that a just and lasting peace would be established. This writer cannot convince himself, however, that the Charter shows enough improvement over the Covenant to give any assurance that it will succeed where the latter failed.

In at least one respect the architects of world peace in 1919 did a better job than did those in 1945. The language of the Covenant was clearer and more concise than that of the Charter. It had twenty-six articles instead of one hundred and eleven. Even if we omit the chapters dealing with the Economic and Social Council and with Regional Arrangements, we will find the new Charter verbose by contrast with the succint language of the Covenant. As a consequence, a great many more people today will have to accept the Charter as an act of faith, than in 1919. It would be interesting to know how many Americans have read the Charter and sincerely believe that they understand it. If the proportion is small, as it probably is, in this highly literate country, one can surmise that the great majority of the peoples of the world may never read the entire Charter and that only a relatively small percentage of them will understand it.

7-14-45

PEOPLE WERE NOT REPRESENTED

This "act of faith" starts off with what is at best a half-truth. Under the Covenant, nations proclaimed their intention to achieve and maintain peace and security. The Charter is hailed as being an improvement in this respect because in it "We the peoples of the United Nations" announce our determination to prevent future wars. But the preamble then declares that "our respective governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco . . . have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations." The preamble, let it be noted, does not say "our representatives," which would mean the representatives of the peoples of the world. But, it may be argued, the representatives were those of "our respective governments," which amounts to the same thing. It does not, unless the governments truly represent the peoples.

Not many of the governments represented at San Francisco met this test. Ironically, one of the arguments for admitting Argentina was the assertion that the Fascist-Farrell-Peron government did not truly represent the democratic people. The governments of some of the other Latin-American nations are dictatorships in which there have been no elections nor mock elections during many years. To what extent were the great masses of Indians, especially of Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador, represented at San Francisco? Not many persons in the United States will believe that Chiang Kai-shek's government speaks for the great masses of people of that unhappy country.

INDIA DELEGATION WAS DENOUNCED

The Indian delegation was denounced by most of the Indians in San Francisco because it was selected by the British Government which itself has remained in power for ten years without an election. The Arab governments of the Near and Middle East can hardly be described as chosen by a democratic process. The Liberian government represents the few thousand Americo-Liberians and not the million or more native Africans. Abyssinia is just beginning to emerge from a feudal monarchy. The peoples of the liberated nations of Europe were represented by their pre-war governments.

In the United States the poll tax and the white primary effectively prevent several millions of voters from expressing their choice for their representatives. Despite the clear language of the Constitution, those States are not correspondingly reduced in their representation in the House of Representatives nor in the electoral college. The government of the Union of South Africa represents the two million Britons and Boers and not the nine millions of native African, colored and Asiatic peoples.

HUMAN RIGHTS SECTION WEAK

7-14-45

Above all, the more than two hundred millions of people living in the colonies, protectorates and mandated areas were not represented at San Francisco. France has had one deputy from Senegal and a few senators and deputies from Martinique and Gaudeloupe, but even those have been criticized as representing the few planters rather than the large mass of workers. The dependent peoples of Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and the United States had absolutely no voice in the election of the representatives of their imperial masters.

The Charter is also being praised because the Chapter on Purposes and Principles contains a statement about human rights that was not included in the preamble of the Covenant. The Charter proclaims its intention of "promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for the fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion." This is, of course, only a statement of purpose, for no certain means of implementation is anywhere provided. Since practically all the governments represented at San Francisco violate these very principles, one is naturally led to remember the Declaration of Independence in which slave-holders asserted that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." But just as the violations of the creed of the Declaration of Independence constitute America's dilemma, just as the violations of the creed of the United Nations Charter will furnish an almost unanswerable basis for attacks by those who believe truly in the fundamental freedoms for all mankind.

SOVEREIGNTY NOT SURRENDERED

In the essential aspects as far is the maintenance of peace is concerned, the Charter bears a close resemblance to the Covenant. First of all, that "old debbil," national sovereignty, is clearly recognized. For many years teachers and students of international relations had constantly repeated that any effective international machinery for the maintenance of peace required a reduction of sovereignty. Wendell Willkie had only recently declared that sovereignty must be used and not hoarded. But this gospel was almost entirely forgotten at San Francisco. It is true that all except the so-called Big Five surrendered enough of their sovereignty to the latter so that the real enforcement powers were entrusted to them. But, as will be developed later, the unanimity rule in the Council of the League which was especially criticized, is maintained for these five powers whose special duty it is to prevent the outbreak of war. The Washington Post a few weeks ago, arguing in favor of ratification by the Senate, pointedly stated: "Not one iota of sovereignty has been surrendered."

We see this hoarding rather than the reduction of sovereignty by all the United Nations in the most critical danger points. Chapter 1, paragraph 7, prevents any intervention in "matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State." The Covenant used the word "solely" instead of "essentially" (Article 15), but, be it carefully noted, authorized the Council to determine whether the question was solely within the jurisdiction of the State. The Charter allows each State to determine this for itself and gives each State greater latitude in its determination for "essentially" is a less inclusive word than is "solely." As a consequence, a new Hitler could prosecute Protestants, Jews, Catholics and abolish trade unions, thereby threatening the peace and security of the world, without intervention by the United Nations.

COURT PROVISION VERY WEAK

7-14-45

The same paragraph of the Charter stipulates that no State shall be required to submit such matters to settlement by the Security Council or by the international court. Second only to the general principle of reduction of sovereignty, the lack of compulsory jurisdiction by the international court was perhaps the principal weakness of the Covenant in the arguments of those who advocated a stronger League. Nor has any progress been made in determining the type of dispute that nations would be expected to submit for peaceful settlement. As Senator Connally recognized in his statement to the Senate, June 28, 1945: "Whereas the Security Council is primarily designated to handle political disputes, the court will be called upon to adjust differences of a legal or justiciable nature."

The language of article 36, paragraph 3, simply uses the words "legal disputes," but the long discussions between 1919 and 1939 probably made the Senator inevitably join "legal" and "justiciable." Thus, the same difficulty still exists as to the kind of disputes that nations will voluntarily submit to the international court—there was no agreement as to what were justiciable and non-justiciable disputes and there will probably be none as to legal and non-legal disputes. In brief, any nation is given the right to prevent either the Security Council or the court from intervening in any question which it considers "essentially" domestic, and any nation can say that any international dispute is not a legal one and therefore not adjudicable by the court.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY CAN ONLY DISCUSS

Further, any one of the Big Five can prevent even referral, investigation or recommendation on a non-legal dispute by the Security Council unless it is a party to the dispute. (Articles 27 and 36.) And in the case of a decision with respect to a non-legal dispute, any one of the Big Five retains its veto even though it be a party to the dispute.

The general impotence of the new General Assembly and its specific exclusion from the machinery for the maintenance of peace may be an improvement over the Covenant, but they practically nullify the power of such truly democratic forces as may arise in the nations that are not permanent members of the Security Council. The Covenant authorized the Council to refer a dispute to the Assembly which in that case had the same power of settlement that the Council had (Article 15). But articles 10 to 17 of the United Nations Charter give the Assembly no voice at all in the settlement of disputes. In fact, other than electing new members upon the recommendation of the Security Council, approving the budget and the trustees for other than non-strategic areas, and certain nominal powers in administering the other trust areas, the General Assembly can only discuss, consider and recommend.

The General Assembly cannot even make a recommendation with respect to any dispute or situation already before the Security Council unless the latter so requests. (Articles 4, 10-17.) There was no such limitation on the right of the League Assembly to "deal . . . with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world" (Article 3). Thus, the generally impotent United Nations Assembly may not even be the much-vaunted "sounding board of world public opinion" at the most crucial moment, namely, when a dispute is likely to threaten world peace, unless the Security Council so permits. Military power rather than world public opinion will be the decisive factor in maintaining future peace.

NO GUARANTEE IN SANCTIONS

Fervent supporters of the Charter may reluctantly admit that the foregoing criticisms are not to be denied. The real superiority of the Charter over the Covenant, they would say, lies in its enforcement machinery. The first step against a nation that refuses to accept a pacific settlement of an international dispute is the application of sanctions. On paper the Charter does indeed provide more effective machinery than did the Covenant. Under the latter the large General Assembly was empowered to vote sanctions (Article 16) as it did in November, 1935, at the time of the Italian aggression against Ethiopia. Only the compact Security Council of the Charter has this right (Articles 41 and 42). But here again let us not forget that any one of the Big Five can prevent the application of sanctions even against itself. Article 16 of the Covenant gave no such power to any State that resorted to war in disregard of its obligations under Articles 12, 13, or 15. On the contrary, such a nation was deemed ipso facto "to have committed an act of war against all the members of the League."

But there is an even more serious question than the enforcement machinery of the Covenant and of the Charter. Is there any more likelihood that sanctions would succeed in 1955 than they did in 1935? In 1935 no sanction on oil was imposed, although oil was Italy's greatest need and although many persons believed, rightly or wrongly, that if Italy had been deprived of oil, she could not have overrun Ethiopia. 7-14-45

OIL CAN START WAR

We have had only recently another example of what Edward Mead Earle once aptly described as "oleaginous diplomacy." Shortly after Argentina was admitted to the San Francisco Conference, alert newspaper men filed two interesting reports. Arnaldo Cortesi, the New York Times correspondent in Beunos Aires, got news to his paper that he had witnessed in Argentina things that exceeded any he had seen during seventeen years in Fascist Italy. And then a few days later we were informed that the United States had permitted the sale of 500,000 tons of oil to Argentina. Those of us who remember the one dramatic plenary session in San Francisco when Molotov made his vain plea that a few days be allowed to ascertain whether Argentina had really become democratic, must wonder whether oil is still so slimy that it can ooze through the barriers ostensibly erected against Fascism and aggression.

Unless human nature shall have changed so that great corporations will refuse to permit their profits to be endangered by any such nonsense as maintaining peace or promoting human happiness, oil and other cartels may again make a mockery of sanctions. The next step is war.

CHARTER PROVIDES SECURITY FORCE

The Charter seems to provide a more effective means of preventing war than did the Covenant. The latter rather vaguely stated that in case a nation resorted to war in violation of its pledges under the Covenant, the Council should "recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military, naval or air force the members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the Covenants of the League" (Article 16). Moreover, the Council could only "advise" under Article 10 what action should be taken by the members "to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing polical independence of all members of the League." And, as President Wilson said repeatedly on his September, 1919, tour of the country, "advise" meant exactly that, to advise.

Now, under the Charter there will presumably be already in existence armed forces ready to strike instantly and effectively against an aggressor. Moreover, again presumably, special agreements will already have been signed making these forces available to the Security Council. This, however, is the big "if" of the Charter. This writer ventures the guess that the United States will sign such an agreement only if the American delegate to the Security Council is required to obtain the prior approval from some organ of the Government. He has just sent to the press a book, "The Senate and the Versailles Mandate System," which contains frequent quotations from Senators who voiced their adamant opposition to sending American boys to die in all parts of the world and to our becoming what Wilson had frequently called "the savior of the world."

U. S. INSISTED ON VETO POWER 7-14-45

When we shall have finished the war with Japan, there will probably be the same attitude in both the Senate and the House against permitting the American delegate to the Security Council to commit the United States without ratification by some of the elected representatives of the American people. The Constitution still gives Congress alone the power to declare war. Either the Constitution will remain as it is, or it will have to be amended before the American delegate could commit the American people to war. It may be doubted very much that the necessary amendment has a chance of ratification.

And let us not forget that any one of the Big Five can veto use of these armed forces, just as it can veto the application of sanctions, even against itself. Senator Connally made perfectly clear in his address to the Senate of June 28 that the United States since Yalta had consistently stood for the right of veto. There would be no chance of ratification by the United States unless this prohibitive power were assured. Incidentally, the attempt to place all blame upon Russia for this insistence is now another legend. In brief, there is no guaranty that either sanctions will be invoked or that the United Nations will go to war against any nation.

ETHIOPIA DELEGATE POINTED OUT FAULTS

The Charter pays respectful lip service to the basic causes of war, but provides no machinery for their removal. Let us note first of all that the Covenant was not entirely unmindful of some of these factors as is evident in Article 23 and Part XIII of the Versailles Treaty which provided for the establishment of the I. L. O. Although Articles 55-72 dealing with the Economic and Social Council cover a wider range of human activities, this Council has no power to carry out its recommendations. It can do just about what the General Assembly can do, consider, discuss, study and recommend. Those who have faith in these two bodies as "sounding boards for public opinion" would do well to ponder the warning of the Ethiopian delegate at a plenary session in San Francisco who reminded [illegible] that "public opinion of the peoples of the world, however enlightened and insistent, cannot of itself suffice to remedy the faults of a defective organization." For his country had such public opinion on its side, but we know only too well what happened.

The Ethiopian delegate also pointed out that the Regional Arrangements (Articles 52-54) permit opportunities for delay similar to those which under the League permitted Italy to carry out her aggression against his country.

TRUSTEESHIP IS A DISAPPOINTMENT

The new trusteeship system (Articles 73-91) is one of the greatest disappointments of the Charter. Fundamentally it has the same weakness as did the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League which failed utterly to advance the inhabitants of the mandated areas toward self-government and which did not materially improve the conditions of the inhabitants. In Southwest Africa, for example, the native people outnumber the Europeans eight to one, but eight times as much was spent on the education of the European children as on that of the natives. We criticize Mississippi for spending six times as much per capita for the education of one group of children as for another. The Union of South Africa spends sixty-four times as much.

In order to make more effective the old Permanent Mandates Commission it was proposed in 1927 that it be empowered to draw up a questionnaire as the basis for the annual reports by the mandatories, to hear oral petitions, and to make its own investigations. None of these powers was granted. The least important of these, the questionnaire, is allowed in the new Charter. But if the writer understands the English language, especially in the light of history, the Charter does not grant the trusteeship council the right to hear oral petitions.

The American draft of May 4 stated that it should "be empowered . . . to accept petitions." Some of us at San Francisco implored Commander Stassen and the technical experts to specify that these petitions included oral. Not only was this not done, but the final wording states that the council "may," not is empowered to, "accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority." When we wish to speak of oral petitions, we invariably use the words "to hear petitions." But whether this interpretation is right or wrong, and only time perhaps will tell, note the circumstances under which the petitions will be accepted—"in consultation with the administering authorities." Where are the petitioners? They are 3,000 or 5,000 miles away, with no one of their own people to represent them. 7-14-45

NATIVES IGNORED

The American draft of May 4 empowered the trusteeship council to "institute investigations." The final wording of the Charter states that the council "may," not is empowered to, "provide for periodic visits to the respective territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority." The word "investigations" connotes something wrong; the words "periodic visits" are perfectly innocuous. Moreover, any butcher can get his scales in order if he fixes the date when the inspector comes by. Some of us at San Francisco implored Commander Stassen and the technical experts to specify that the reports be published. We failed completely just as we failed in our effort to gain effective or indeed any kind of representation of the native peoples on the trusteeship council.

In fact, while the Permanent Mandates Commission had a larger number of members from the non-mandatory States, the new trusteeship council will have an equal number of administering and non-administering States. Further, the administering States will be able to raise volunteer forces in the trust areas, thus utilizing more so-called "savages" in fighting civilized man's wars. But the biggest joker of all lies in the fact that there is absolutely no guaranty that any area will be placed under trusteeship since it is left entirely to each nation to decide whether it will do so.

Educators who have worked for more than two years to have created an International Organization of Education and Cultural Development failed as completely as did the advocates of a truly effective trusteeship plan.

LITTLE HOPE IN CHARTER 7-14-45

Many persons undoubtedly feel that the writer has been unduly harsh in his criticisms of the Charter. But it would seem that our own Government has hardly any more fath in it than I have. What would be the need for compulsory military training if the new machinery afforded real hope for maintaining peace? Nor does the man in the street seem to place much confidence in it. The Gallup Poll shows a majority of the persons polled in favor of the Charter. But if they are like the persons with whom this writer has talked, they favor it because they believe it is the best they can get, not that they have any faith that it will prevent war.

He shares this fatalism not only because of the weaknesses of the machinery, but also because of those of the engineers and the laborers. Smuts, the only head of a delegation in San Francisco who played any important role in the Versailles Treaty declared recently to the Parliament of his country: "A fixed policy to maintain white supremacy is agreed on by all parties in South Africa except those quite mad." (As quoted in the New Republic, April 23, 1945.) The Senate of the United States permits a shameful filibuster to prevent passage of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Bill. Senators have already promised to prevent passage of a bill abolishing the poll tax in national elections by the same means. Even if the Labor Party should gain control in England, its attitude toward the British dependent areas is essentially the same as Churchill's.

WORLD LABOR MAY PREVENT WARS 7-14-45

If the machinery is bad, if the Anglo-Saxon leaders are blind, then the laborers, the little people, the common man, must help to create a world that will make possible a just and lasting peace for all mankind. But first of all, these laborers must not be lulled to sleep by the faith that intellectuals seem to have in the Charter. For that reason there must be Senate hearings and debates of sufficient length and scope to make the little people realize what a weak reed the Charter is. Let us not be silenced by sarcastic reference to us as "perfectionists." We were called "perfectionists" because we were not satisfied with the Dumbarton Oaks Proposals. The Charter is slightly better than were the Proposals. Let us in the same way make clear our dissatisfaction with the United Nations Charter so that amendments will be made in time to prevent another war and so that the basic causes of war will be removed in fact. 7-14-45

Let us therefore support all movements in all parts of the world that seek to remove these causes. It may well be that the World Trades Union Congress, scheduled to convene in Paris on September 25, will mean more than the Charter in the establishment of permanent peace that all decent people want. But if this is to eventuate, then the American working man must take a sympathetic and intelligent interest in the working man in all parts of the world. It is not sufficient to condemn governments and powerful corporations and cartels for exploiting the worker. So long as workers in advanced nations exploit the peons of Mexico, the cholos of Chile, the peasants of the Caribbean, the coolies of China, the fellaheen of Egypt, the economic serfs of the Balkans, or the Untouchables of India, there can be no just and lasting peace and there should be none.

560-1945

United Nations' Charter

INSIDE STUFF

by ZIK

SAN FRANCISCO & FUTURE OF COLONIES (2)

West African Pilot

The fate of the colonial empire was decided at San Francisco where it was arranged to set up a trusteeship council.

Was any provision made in this council for representatives of the colonial peoples themselves?

Find out in this instalment, which concludes the excerpts of the United Nations Charter from our issue of Saturday:

8-20-45

ARTICLE 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

(a) Territories now held under mandate;

(b) Territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of World War II and (c) Territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the Trusteeship System and upon what terms.

ARTICLE 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become members of the United Nations, relationship among them which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

ARTICLE 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

ARTICLE 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79 and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any state or any peoples or terms of existing international instruments to which members may respectively be parties. 8-20-45

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

ARTICLE 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory.

Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the organization itself.

ARTICLE 82.

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all the territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

ARTICLE 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the security council.

2 The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3 The security council shall subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the trusteeship council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas. 8-20-45

ARTICLE 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security.

To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligation towards the security council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

2. The trusteeship council Article 86 says that "The by the general assembly as operating under the authority of the general assembly, Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following members: may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the trusteeship

(a) Those members administering trust territories;

(b) Such of those members United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2 Each member of the trusteeship council shall designate one specially qualified

ARTICLE 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the general assembly.

2. The trusteeship council shall assist the general assembly in carrying out these functions.

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Chapter XIII of the covenant deals with the composition of the trusteeship council as mentioned by name in Article 23 as stering authority, those members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

(a) As many other members elected for three-year terms to ensure a balance between those members administering trust territories and those which do not.

(b) Each member of the United Nations which administers trust territories shall designate one specially qualified representative of the colonial people.

(c) As many other members elected for three-year terms to ensure a balance between those members administering trust territories and those which do not.

(d) Each member of the United Nations which administers trust territories shall designate one specially qualified representative of the people themselves.

person to represent it therein.

FUNCTIONS & POWERS

Article 87 describes the functions and powers of the council as follows:

1 The general assembly and, under its authority, the trusteeship council, in carrying out its function, may:

(a) Consider reports submitted by the administering authority; 8-20-45

(b) Accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;

(c) Provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and,

(d) Take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

ARTICLE 88

1 The trusteeship council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the general assembly shall make an annual report to the general assembly upon the basis of such a questionnaire.

2 The general assembly may, when it deems necessary, itself exercise any of these functions and powers.

VOTING RIGHTS

Article 89 deals with the question of voting.

It says:

1. Each member of the trusteeship council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the trusteeship council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

METHOD OF PROCEDURE

The last articles of the covenant dealing with the future administration of Colonies refer to method of procedure

For example, Article 90 says:

1. The trusteeship council shall adopt its own rules procedure, including the method of selecting its president. 8-20-45

2. The trusteeship council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

ARTICLE 91

The trusteeship council shall when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the economic and social council and of the specialised agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

THE END.

56-o-1945

Universal Military Training

VOICE of the PEOPLE

The Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Opposes Universal Military Training

Editor, Journal and Guide: Our nation is being threatened with peacetime universal military training. We should help make and keep America a true democracy by defeating all peacetime conscription measures. 11-10-45

Congress has been asked by the President and the Army to extend the present draft for the 18 and 25 year group. Before Congress acts, I believe it should be called to the attention of the public. Congressmen are not convinced by the President that they shall continue the teen-age draft. All of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force.

Before committing our nation to future wars, at least let us attempt to get a lasting peace and to eliminate peacetime military training in the United States and throughout the world. We should advocate such ways of dealing with offenders against society as to transform the wrong-doer rather than inflict retributive punishment; a policy that prepares for war will get war. To have a just and lasting peace we must work to abolish war. We should strive to remove from the United States and all nations that maintain hate, prejudice, poverty, intolerance, etc., and foster good will among nations, races, and classes. 11-10-45

I am hoping you will oppose peacetime universal military training for the survival of all mankind here and abroad.

—SYDNEY MOORE

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Potsdam Agreement

STAR OF ZION
CARLISLE, PA.

Our first impression of the Potsdam Agreement is one of immense satisfaction. For while many things were left undecided, the decisions in the main were as much as could be expected and the plans for the future of Germany are calculated to remove the danger that the German people will be a threat to the peace of the world for many years to come. If there were any doubt that Germany has been decisively beaten and must humbly submit to a rule dictated by other nations, not unduly harsh, such doubt has been entirely removed.

The decision to fashion a peace for Italy, which will enable that nation to become a member of the United Nations, is one that will meet with general approval, for the Italians' early capitulation proved their willingness to throw off Fascist domination and to establish a government helpful to the people and not inimical to the peace of the world.

Best of all, probably, is the apparently satisfactory settlement of the troublesome Polish question. While Russia's claims to eastern Polish territory were recognized, as we felt they would be, Poland has been given sufficient German territory to greatly mollify the losses in the East. Certainly Russia will insist upon a Polish government not inimical to her best interest, and Russianization of other Eastern European countries was to be expected in the very nature of the case and of the Soviet position among the great powers.

8-9-45

Marshal Stalin, the only remaining member of the original Big Three, admittedly played his hand well, but President Truman and Prime Minister Atlee, the latter succeeding Churchill even in the midst of deliberations, proved themselves quite capable successors to the great chieftains whom they succeeded.

N.C.

The fact that the conference was concluded within such a comparatively short time is sufficient evidence that there were no serious and bitter differences. American and world confidence in the ability of President Truman has been greatly strentghened and the American president looms larger and larger as a statesman and a clear-headed diplomat.

560-1945

peace Plans- San Francisco Conference

John Robert Badger World View

Chicago Defender Ill.

The San Francisco Parley

THE WORLD will come to San Francisco April 25 to design and blueprint the machinery for keeping the peace. It is a great opportunity for the whole of America, and especially for Negro-America. 2-24-45

This was only one of the concrete results of the Big Three conference on the shores of the Black Sea. It is in keeping with other decisions made there, all of which — as World View forecast (January 27, 1945)—dealt "with many a vital concern of Negro-America."

For instance, the decisions to crush the German Fascists and eradicate them from German life, to punish war criminals, and to dispose of German industry so as to prevent an attempt at rearmament by the great cartels a few years later—these decisions ensure us against having to send our youth to battle German imperialism again in the next decade or so. Moreover, it will mean a virtual blackout of the "master race" theory, and will certainly put those who advocate it in our own country at an ideological disadvantage. 2-24-45

So, too, the decisions to aid and guarantee the establishment of free, democratic governments in Europe will mean, first, a precedent in implementation of the principle of self-determination which cannot long be denied the peoples of Asia and Africa; and, second, the prospect of prospering European nations, able and willing to buy American products, and thus to help keep millions of Negroes employed during the peace years.

There are other implications of the Big Three decisions. But, for the time being, what is the significance of the selection of San Francisco as the site of the peace conference.

America's Decisive Role 2-24-45

FIRST, it can be taken for granted that the entire world realizes that the main obstacle to a workable peace organization lies inside of the United States. The nations have not forgotten the experience of the League of Nations, and Woodrow Wilson's unhappy fate. They know that the so-called "isolationists" in the United States, through their influence in the Congress, can balk any genuine U. S. participation in the enforcement of peace. 2-24-45

It follows, therefore, that through their political power and their alliance with the progressive forces in the country, Negro-Americans will be able to exercise a determining influence on the peace. Together with other progressive forces in the nation, they can defeat the isolationists and compel congressional ratification of the Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods agreements, thus guaranteeing U. S. participation in world peace organization.

Second, the selection of San Francisco underscores the importance of the Pacific theater of war and the problems of the peoples of Asia, once German fascism has been crushed. As we know, the problems of Asia are primarily the problems of colonial areas. The San Francisco conference, therefore, will address itself to the solution of these problems, a thing that bodes nothing but good for the future of Africa and the West Indies and all other colonial areas of the world. 2-24-45

Great Opportunity For Us

I SHOULD NOT be surprised to see a great deal of attention paid to the old Mandate System of the League of Nations. And I think all of us should now acquaint ourselves with the experience of the League, and be prepared to participate in the discussions that are bound to spread over the nation during the conference.

Finally, there is some talk that the Soviet Union, China, and perhaps several of the Latin American representatives may insist on writing the principle of racial equality into the program. I have no definite evidence that this is so. But there is every reason to expect such problems to come up on the agenda.

San Francisco will be an important place in the weeks and months to come. The eyes of the world will be upon it. And the eyes of the world will also be upon us, for we now have a great opportunity to influence the history of the world for many years to come.

Resolution Sent To Stettinius By Nat'l NAACP

Atlanta World 3-23-45

NEW YORK— (SNS)— A resolution on Colonial issues and policy adopted by the NAACP Board of Directors and transmitted March 15 to Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, for consideration at the San Francisco Conference to be held April 26, called for " a declaration of racial equaliy of the great groups of mankind in international law." and provision against economic and governmental exploitation of colonies.

The resolution written by Dr. DuBois demanded that these steps be taken to "make war at once unlikely and unprofitable."

GIVE COLONIALS VOICE

3-23-45

In regard to the control and ownership of colonies, the statement urged "it be the sense of the United Nations that the ownership and control of colonies and dependencies be recognized in international law only on the following terms: "(a) That the dominating country solemnly engage to give the peoples of such areas immediately a voice in their own government. (b) That is solemnly declare its intention that by a given date these peoples shall either be integrated into the policy of the mother country with full rights of citizenship; or shall be allowed to become independent and autonomous countries as the peoples themselves shall decide. (c) That the natural resources of these countries including mines, forest, land and its materials shall be owned by the colonies and used primarily for the benefit of the inhabitants of the area; that the organization of industry, the control of labor and investment of capital shall be ordered for the benefit of the people in the area and not simply for profit of invested capital or primarily for the welfare of peopel outside the colony. (d) That an international Mandates Commission be established and implemented under the supreme authority of the United Nations with the right to supervise the government of territory mandated after the First World War ano any such enemy territory acquired in the present war to investigate, report and recommend action in the case of countries who do not keep their commitments in colonies or will not make such commitments; and that in such cases the conduct and administration of these colonies be placed under control of the Mandates Commission, backed by the authority of the United Nations." 3-23-45

DEMAND SACRIFICE

Warning that no action less than indicated in the foregoing paragraphs could be depended upon "to rescue this world from continued war and the persistent exploitation of a large portion of mankind, if not indeed the majority of human beings," the statement pointed out "that every demand on colonial powers here made has at some time or other been declared by these powers as an integral part of their policy. Peace and civilization, humanity and religion today demand this sacrifice of independence on the part of the world's great powers for social progress and democracy.

Colored Nations List Delegates For Frisco

Journal & Guide 4-21-45

Norfolk, Va.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ANP) Delegations which shall represent Ethiopia and the republics of Liberia and Haiti at the San Francisco conference have been listed formerly with the State Department, it is announced. Already they are participating in preliminary talks.

At the same time, the department has asked that members of the American delegation begin meeting regularly until the conference opens in order that they may become thoroughly familiar with the position this government will take on the various matters to come up. These sessions began on Monday.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R) of Michigan has been suggested as the chief American delegate on the assembly commission for the proposed united nations organization. It is under the assembly that the suggested economic and security council, dealing as it will with humanitarian and social problems, will fall. 4-21-45

(From Paris it is learned that the French cabinet has named Paul Emilo Naggiar, a delegate to the Golden Gate conference, to represent his government in pre-San Francisco talks on international trusteeship.

The week-end announcement by the State Department said that Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti had indicated their intention to be represented at the meeting of the committee of jurists which opened Monday.

ETHIOPIAN DELEGATION

Prime Minister Bitwedded Makennen Endalkacheeu will head the Ethiopian delegation which will include Atk Aklilou Hapte Wold, vice minister for foreign affairs; Ato Abi Weld-Mariam, vice minister of justice; Blatta Ephrem Tewelde Medhen, minister to the United States; Ate Emanuel Abraham, director general education; Ate Gotahoun Tesemma, first secretary, Ethiopian legation, Washington; Ate Menasse Lema, director general, ministry of finance; Advisor; John Spencer, advisor to ministry for foreign affairs; Secretary; Ate Petros Sahlu, employe, ministry for foreign affairs.

HAITIAN DELEGATION

The Haitian delegation will include the follow: Gerard Lescot, minister for foreign affairs; Vely Thebaud, minister for the interior; Gen. Nemours, president of the Senate; Andre Liautaud, ambassador in Washington; assistant delegates; Pierre Chauvot, under secretary of state for commerce; Maj. Antonio Levolt, director of the military school; Antonio Borvin, Haitian charge d'affaires at Havana; technical advisors; Louis Moravia; Joseph Nadal; secretary; Louis Gardoro. 4-21-45

Vice President C. L. Simpson will be chairman of the Liberian delegation. Other members include secretary of state Gabriel Donnis, advisor; J. L. Gibson, chairman, senate foreign relations committee; Richard A. Henrios, chairman of house foreign relations committee; Coleman Moses Grant, officer commanding frontier force, military aide; Nathan Barnes, secretary of commission; and George Padmore, secretary to the advisor.

LEADERS OF COLORED PEOPLE URGE FREEDOM FOR ALL NATIONS

Kansas City Times 5-4-45

By Mason Roberson

San Francisco. (ANP)—What Observers and students with whom I've talked believe that it is almost certain to be included in the United Nations Charter. 5-4-45

Certainly the principle of equality will come before the delegates backed by more powerful protagonists than ever before in all history.

Japs Lone Backer

For example, at the end of the last war only one major voice—and feared equality, especially of salary. The British colonies and China were similarly engaged, and are the chances that the principle of racial equality will be incorporated in the poswar agreements And an examination of the background and forces involved concerning the demand for equal rights for popular reasons.

Japan's demand was denied on the grounds that it would conflict of the united nations conference? Such a belief.

Allies were interested in darker races at the peace meetings. Support for with the exclusion laws of the United States and the British empire, a not very obscure reason and not, of course, the real reason.

There were unofficial attempts to marshal forces for presenting the demands at Versailles in 1919. Under the sponsorship of Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, a Pan-African congress was called in Paris. It failed, of course, to influence the final shape of the peace.

Contrast that with the situation today at the San Francisco conference. 5-4-45

Changed Situation

Last month, Sir Zafrullah Khan, leader of the Indian delegation to the British Commonwealth conference, told the delegates it was essential that there should be no further racial discrimination in any shape or form.

At the Dumbarton Oaks meeting, the Chinese delegation requested that the principle of race equality be formally included in the agreement. No action was taken, but the Chinese are certain to raise the issue again here in San Francisco.

Stalin Wants Stand

Premier Joseph Stalin declared "the abolition of racial exclusiveness" to be one of the Soviet Union's basic peace aims. This intention has been repeated over and over again by key Russian spokesmen. A recent issue of the Information Bulletin issued by the Soviet embassy in Washington declared: "When any country gives shelter to the Hitlerites or their ideas in the form of discriminatory legislation, in the form of racist organizations or a racist press, it is no longer an internal affair of that country." 5-4-45

This from a country which shares with the United States the greatest power on earth! And, of course their official declarations of policy is confirmed by the well-known fact that the Soviet Union is the one place on earth where discrimination and prejudice of all kinds has been wiped out by rigidly enforced laws making such practices a major felony.

France to Give Citizenship

According to Rene Pleven, colonial minister, France plans to make full citizens of her colonial peoples, with all the rights of the white Frenchmen in the mainland, and to fight with all its strength any importation of racial prejudice.

The Netherlands government has announced its plan to rebuild its colonies as a commonwealth with no discrimination of any kind between races.

The position of both Britain and America on issue of equality are so much in public discussion that they need little examination here. Certainly we are all aware of the social, economic, historic factors involved. 5-4-45

Jim Crow Retreats

And certainly, no Negro will deny that since Versailles, the men and the interests supporting jim crow in America have been in constant retreat—that they have been undercut and circumscribed by such factors as the FEPC, the supreme court ruling on the vote, the army's order outlawing jim crow, the abolition of the poll tax in Georgia, and a host of other laws and actions by officials and by civic church and labor organizations all of which have brought nearer the realization of the constitution and the bill of rights as applicable to all Americans. Certainly the official position of the United States government as voiced by nearly all its leading spokesmen over the past several years, would make it extremely difficult for them to come out in active opposition to the principle of racial equality at the conference.

Friends in England

Within the British empire the forces pressing for equality are far from the disorganized and voiceless multitude of 1918. In India, in Africa, in the Far East, British colonials have organization and spokesmen. In Britain itself these people have powerful support among large powerful organizations.

Certainly we can say that neither Britain nor America will be able to bring anything like a united group in support of a policy of inequality. 5-4-45

Thus we see that China, France, the Soviet Union are definitely for the principle of race equality. And they represent a majority of the "big five." In the whole united nations assembly an even larger proportion of the delegates will be in favor of such a principle, for the simple reason that a majority of the populations of smaller nations are non-whites. In the world, whites represent a rough third of the total population.

One third of the world cannot keep two thirds of the world in a subordinate position in any international organization which is more than a mere symbol of democracy.

Fisk Youth Heads Interracial Group

Afro-American 4-28-45

100 Colored and White Students Meet in N.C.

SOUTH TAKES LEAD

Meharry Sergeant to Go to San Francisco

Balt. Md.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.—A colored student was elected president and another named one of two delegates to the forthcoming United Nations' Conference during a meeting of students of nearly fifty colored and white colleges here April 15.

The approximately 100 delegates who elected Charles Proctor of Fisk University to head the group, expressed hope that the conference will become a permanent interracial organization of college students working in the interest of democracy, justice and peace.

During the meeting at the University of North Carolina, Sgt. Maurice Clifford of the Meharry Medical College ASTU, and Douglass Hunt of the University of North Carolina, executive secretary, were named delegates to the April 25 conference. 4-28-45

Called by Students

Called by students of the University of North Carolina and dedicated to the principles of democracy and world peace upheld by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the meeting was devoted to the consideration of world peace organization plans.

Particular emphasis was placed on problems facing the San Francisco conference and developing a plan for studying on their respective campuses the Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and other similar plans.

The delegates elected to go to San Francisco will wire reports of the United Nations' Conference to the University of North Carolina, where a local committee will disseminate the information to the various participating colleges.

Second Conference Planned

An executive committee, composed of students from each of the States represented, will also start making plans for a second annual meeting of the conference, to be held at the University of North Carolina next year.

The participating colleges will be asked to contribute funds to finance the organization, which the students hope will eventually become national and international in membership. 4-28-45

Southern Youth Takes Lead

Terming the conference a challenge to youth, Dr. Frank P. Graham, university president, in the opening meeting paid tribute to President Roosevelt and urged the delegates to spread the message that Southern youth is on the march toward freedom and peace.

The remaining meetings were devoted to discussions and reports by a resolutions committee of students, resulting in the election of delegates to attend the San Francisco parley and in the proposed formation of the conference as a permanent organization.

The conference, it was agreed, marks a new epoch in the South because:

1. Colored and white students met, not to discuss local racial issues, but fundamental questions of international significance.

Racial Issue Not Stressed

2. The two delegates as well as the president were not chosen because of their race or in order to represent special interests, but because of their wide knowledge and facility in discussing the problems and issues of world peace.

Dynamic and influential figures during the session, both Hunt and Clifford, it was said ,revealed their ability to think quickly in debate and to legislate in a manner that satisfied an overwhelming majority of the delegates.

3. The conference was not the work of "leftist" faculty members, but a conference conceived by students, called by students, and run by students. The only non-student speaker at the regular sessions was President Graham, who delivered his address at the students' express request.

ACCENTUATE THE POSITIVE

Pittsburgh Courier 5-12-45

Pa.

Colored Delegates Ignore American Negroes

By P. L. PRATTIS

SAN FRANCISCO — So far as American Negroes are concerned, Ethiopia, Haiti and Liberia are like beautiful women that men fall in love with whether the girls care anything about them or not. The only difference is that the three above-named countries are not so beautiful, as women go.

American Negroes who have a yearning for freedom and would seek to use their political influence in behalf of their handicapped brothers eslewhere, all over the globe, might do well to consider whether they are wasting their energy. 5-12-45

NEGROES PROTESTED

When Mussolini built up a war on Ethiopia and sprayed the patriots of that empire with poison gas, a mighty protest rose from the lips of black men and women the United States. Hundreds of American Negroes wanted to volunteer to fight in the Ethiopian army. Some did manage to get over and give Uncle Haile a lift.

When Firestone went into Liberia and sneak-punched a huge land grab over on the Liberian politicians, American Negroes scorched Mr. Harvey and let on as how it was a shame for him to take advantage of the Liberians.

In every instance where it has seemed that the American Government, or any government, was not disposed to treat Liberia as a fully adult nation, American Negroes have screeched. 5-12-45

When American Marines chose Haiti for their play spot and made sport of the elite Haitians, American Negroes grabbed their pistols, knives and machetes and waved them menacingly at Uncle Sam. for years they cried to high heaven about the injustices being inflicted upon our brothers in the Caribbean.

COLORED VISITORS IGNORE U. S. NEGROES

Yet, when these same Ethiopians, Liberians and Haitians come to this country, to the place where our hearts have been bleeding for them, they hardly speak to us.

This is very, very evident at this United Nations Conference.

If Negro correspondents want to get anything out of these visiting black dignitaries, they had better catch them on the high fly. This is true, unless you happen to have personal friends on the delegation, such as Dr. Logan has among the Haitians.

It is a lot easier to get close to Stettinius, Eden, Molotov or one of the other big shots than it is to get a line on Medhen of Ethiopia, Simpson of Liberia, or Lescot of Haiti. 5-12-45

As soon as the British delegation arrived, they called all the correspondents into a conference. There have been British press conferences, French press conferences, American, New Zealand, Chinese, Egyptian, Indian. Almost everybody has been having press conferences.

Almost everybody but Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti. They don't even seem to want to talk to the Negro press. When you call their hotels, they take advantage of diplomatic immunity—and won't answer. When you catch them on the street, they stare at you.

Howard Thurman, the preacher, is having the visiting correspondents to dinner next Friday.

But Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti won't even give them a respectable interview.

Three days ago the Haitian foreign delegate spoke at the plenary session. Not a single correspondent has been able to get a copy of the speech, so far as this writer knows.

Brothers, we had better think about accentuating the positive, our own problems here at home, and let our negative brothers take care of themselves.

560-1945

San Francisco Conference

MOLOTOV'S POSITION CHALLENGES U. S. ON TRUSTEESHIPS

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

5-19-45

By P. L. PRATTIS, Executive Editor

SAN FRANCISCO—If teeth and meaning are to be fastened into the words and phrases being used at the United Nations Conference about equality and trusteeships, the Russians and the Chinese, possibly, among the Big Four, are the mechanics expected to do such an inlay job.

In the beginning, or purpose section of the proposed world charter, the Big Four, including the British and the Americans, have agreed to wording which recognizes the principle of equality among races and nations.

The American proposals on the trusteeship system, not agreed to by the British, are almost all right as far as they go.

GRAVE DOUBT IN SOME MINDS 5-19-45

But there is grave doubt in the minds of many observers here that the words concerning equality or the provisions for handling dependent areas will mean anything without consistent prodding by the Russians.

That is the reason the latest moves by the Russians and the Chinese are significant.

Just before he returned to Russia, Foreign Commissar Molotov held a press conference. He directed attention to the fact that the Big Four had been meeting and its members had agreed on certain amendments. Molotov then told reporters that he wished to stress the amendments to which the Soviet delegation attached "the greatest importance."

RUSSIA FOR EQUALITY

At the head of the list of the five amendments which the Soviet chief delegate alluded to was the one bearing on race equality. Number three of the list was trusteeship. 5-19-45

The Americans and British have been playing around with such expressions as "welfare of the people" and "self-development of dependent areas."

The Russian language is much more direct. It says that it should be the aim of the new world organization to make all peoples independent and that a trusteeship council should be organized which should have the job of preparing dependent peoples for independence. The last word is underlined in Soviet thinking.

U. S., BRITAIN QUIET

After the Molotov conference, Senator Vandenberg of the American delegation, and Anthony Eden, British foreign minister, were both questioned as to what they thought of the Russian position as revealed by Molotov. Vandenberg and Eden refrained from comment on the ground that such proposals by the Soviets had not been made in written form.

However, by Thursday night the Russians had taken their pens in hand and written what they wanted. Their proposals called for basic alteration of the American amendments.

In respect to dependent areas, the Russians want an international agency which will work for "self-determination with active participation of the peoples of these territories, having the aim to expedite the achievement by them of full national independence."

It is clear that the Russians don't propose to permit any imperial power to kid anybody about prospective trusteeships.

CHINESE FALL IN LINE

The Chinese, after having played passive and evasive roles at the conference, have fallen in behind the Russians.

The United States' objective in its proposals is to promote "the political, economic and social advancement of the trust territories and their inhabitants and their progressive development toward self-government. The Chinese add:

1. That "independence" should be included in this objective as well as "self-government."

2. That such independence or self-government should be gradually developed in such a way" as may be appropriate for the particular circumstances of each territory and its people."

3. That the people of each trust territory "should be accorded civil liberty and the right to representation in the local deliberative or legislative assemblies" wherever such assemblies exist.

4. That "any violation of trusteeship arrangements should be regarded as a matter of international concern" "and as such could be brought to the attention of the Security Council or the General Assembly of the proposed international organization by the United Nations.

5. That even in strategic areas, when there are no security reasons to the contrary, the promotion of native independence should be considered on a basis of the stage of local political development, geographic position, economic conditions and other relevant circumstances.

6. That when matters relating to a given trust territory are being considered by the proposed trusteeship council, representatives of the people of that territory should be allowed to sit in on council meetings.

Coloured Leaders Demand Independence For The Colonies In Frisco Manifesto

West African Pilot

By GEORGE PADMORE, Our London Correspondent

LONDON.—While the United Nations' delegates at San Francisco were discussing the future of the coloured races living under the sovereignty of various European imperial powers, representatives of colonial organisations in this country issued a draft manifesto calling upon the darker races of the world to unite and demand the right of self-determination. 2-30-45

Plans are being made to convene a special United Front Conference in London early in June, 1945, for the purpose of adopting the draft declaration as United Colonial Charter.

The declaration was prepared by a special drafting committee composed of delegates representing the Federation of Indian organisations in Great Britain, the Pan African Federation made up of the following organisations of Africans and peoples of African descent:

The Kukuyu Association of East Africa. Lagos

The International African Service Bureau.

Negro Association of Great Britain.

The Negro Welfare and Cultural Centre of Liverpool.

The Coloured Men's Institute of East London.

The United Coloured and Colonial Seamen's Association of Cardiff.

The West African Students Union, and several other progressive organisations.

This move to bring about world-wide unity among the coloured communities had also been endorsed by the Burmese Students Union, the Ceylonese Association, the Malaya and East Indies League, West Indian Federation Committee and a number of colonial trade unions in Africa and the Caribbean.

Exclusive of this attempt to promote united action among the diverse coloured races making up the far-flung British Empire, African groups in Britain are also planning another conference in September.

This conference is being organised in co operation with the National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People in New York and other Afro-American organisations.

I hope to be able to give more details about the September conference in a later dispatch.

All I can say about it at the present moment is, that one of the projects that will be discussed at the September conference is the calling of a World Pan-African Conference to be held somewhere in Africa after the end of hostilities in the Far East.

The manifesto reads in part:

"We feel it is our duty to warn the people of the United Nations and their statesmen that the subject peoples will not accept any plans which are made without their consent and consultation.

"It is imperative that the Atlantic Charter should be consistently applied to all colonial peoples, regardless of their race, colour or degree of social development.

"To this end, and as an earnest of their sincerity, it is essential that the United Nations should immediately set free all political prisoners in the colonies, and invite democratically elected representatives of the subject peoples to participate in the Peace Conference on terms of absolute equality with other delegates.

"We further suggest that at the Peace Conference there should be set up effective machinery in the form of a World Colonial Council.

"This would consist of representatives, not of imperialist powers, but of colonial countries themselves and it would be entrusted with the following tasks:

"(1) To formulate a policy and programme for the unconditional ending of all colonial systems within a definite and stipulated period.

"(2) To supervise the establishment of representative and responsible constitutions based upon universal adult suffrage in the colonies, such constitutions to provide full statutory safeguards for minority rights.

"(3) To ensure that none of the territories at present under Japanese control (Burma, Malaya, Indo-China Dutch East Indies, Korea, etc) are permitted to revert to a dependent colonial status after their liberation and that the ex Italian colonies in Africa are given full right of self-determination.

"(4) To bring about the immediate abrogation of all racial and discriminatory laws such as at present deprive Negroes in America, Asiatics and Africans in Africa, and subject peoples generally of full democratic rights of citizenship."

The manifesto concludes:

"We are convinced that fulfilment of this democratic programme will have far reaching consequences.

"On the one hand, by creating conditions favourable to the free development of subject nations, it will give an impetus to world trade and prosperity.

"On the other, by removing all inter-imperialist rivalries which are the root cause of wars; it will provide solid foundations for the building of a confraternity of free and equal nations, thus ensuring world peace which all humanity so ardently desire."

Major Wright Notices Similarities In San Francisco-Versailles Confabs

Major R. R. Wright, president of the Citizens and Southern Bank and Trust Co., covered the United Nations Conference in San Francisco as the special representative of the Philadelphia Tribune. In the article below, Major Wright, who has had an outstanding career as educator, soldier, author and business man tells what he thinks the United Nations Charter means to the darker races of the world.—Edi Pa. Not

Philadelphia Tribune

On May 4, 1945, carrying the banner of the Philadelphia Tribune, the oldest secular Negro newspaper in America, I boarded a transcontinental airplane of the TWA at New York City for a coast to coast trop of 3,453 miles to attend the Second World War Conference at San Francisco, California. I had previously obtained at Washington, D. C., all necessary priorities for the trip and had engaged Dr. W. H. Wright as my physician and Professor Joseph R. Rugett as my secretary.

Thus prepared, I made the journey in twenty-three hours and was met at the airport and photographed by my distinguished friend, Mr. P. L. Prattis, executive editor of the Pittsburgh Courier.

Thence, I hastened to my hotel (The Roosevelt) and was, thereafter, ready to perform my commission for the Philadelphia Tribune.

8-4-45

Perhaps it may not be improper to remark that it was rather singular that I should have had the opportunity to have visited, during their sessions, the seat of both the Versailles Conference and the San Francisco Conference. Each of these conferences had for its objective the same purpose. Another singular incident is the fact that the person who, at the suggestion of President Wilson's secretary, gave me my passport in 1919, was again in the State Department and facilitated my attendance to the San Francisco Conference. This person was The Honorable William Phillips, the former Ambassador to Italy, in her palm days, and also the Special Ambassador of President Roosevelt.

My experience during the Versailles Conference was very suggestive. On that visit, I secured for my album of World War I, the signatures of Ambassador White, members of the Peace Conference, Edward M. House, Hon. Robert Lansing, who was our Secretary of State. Secretary of War Baker gave me a letter of introduction to Mr. Edward M. House and Hon. Robt. Special Ambassador.

At his Paris, France headquarters, I talked long with General John J. Pershing, the General of the army of invasion. M. Diagne, the Negro member of the French Cabinet, was also very gracious and helpful to me. As commissioner General, M. Diagne had raised an army of 250,000 Senegalese to aid France in her war.

In the First World War, colored and Negro people all over the world aided the white allies to win the war for Democracy. The League of Nations was adopted January 28, 1919, in the Hall des Glaces (Hall of Mirrors), Versailles, France. A few days after the League Agreement, I walked through the great halls of the Versailles Palace near Paris, accompanied by a guide who explained as we walked. Earlier, I had sat in the Hall of Hotel Crillon, near Place de la Concord, where I obtained the autographs of some of the prominent members of the conference and heard something of the story of the great effort of our President, Woodrow Wilson, for universal peace, and my heart beat with hope for the peace of the world. Later, for more than half an hour I talked with General Pershing on the subject of World Peace. Peace, why can we not have peace? Why should the wonderful artistic and literary achievements of the ages be destroyed merely to gratify prejudice or vicious ambitions of designing men or nations?

8-4-45

Just one question from the first World War haunts me: Did the colored and Negro people profit in their economic, social and cultural condition by their contribution for definitely, for never before in the history of a peace conference have so many nations been brought together under one roof to study a plan for the cessation of wars and for the perpetuation of peace and security."

To his credit, I think President Roosevelt had the welfare of the smaller nations more in mind than was developed subsequently. His Good Neighbor policy, as well as the Atlantic Charter, pointed toward this fact. It may be noted that England and France opposed granting independence to any colony, regardless of its strength, if it belonged to either of them. Hence, the trusteeship system provoked bitter controversy. It appeared to the colonies and even to the smaller nations that the "Big Three"—England, United States and Russia, proposed to form almost a super-government, which seems to ignore the so-called Atlantic Charter. Yet, the Conference, in its Charter, established the principle that any nation administering territory whose people are not "wholly independent" and are "not members of the United Nations," should make reports to an INTERNATIONAL AGENCY on the conditions and progress of those so-called dependent peoples. While this may appear to be a new wonderful achievement, what hope for independence does it give, not only to the "not wholly independent" countries, but to those who may not be independent, but mandated or owned outright by powerful or less powerful nations? For example, Nigeria or other African Colonies, or Palestine, Lebanon, India or other Asiatic dependents; what's their hope for independence?

The "Big Three's" veto power constituted another sore spot, and for days the nations were milling about and grumbling because of what they thought was undue "power politics" to be used by the "Big Three" who pledged themselves to prevent the small nations from going to war, but reserved for themselves the right to veto any attempt at using force against either of them. However, we must admit that the big powers have the power to crush or help. The peace of the world may depend on the peaceful prosperity of the smaller nations, but the big nations rule the world.

Let us consider the plan for world peace adopted by the conference, which begins as follows: "We the peoples of the United Nations, determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind," etc. It also declares: "1. The Organization is based on the principle of the SOVEREIGN EQUALITY OF ALL ITS MEMBERS." Then follows the plan.

(1) A GENERAL ASSEMBLY of all peace loving nations which will make recommendations for the maintenance of peace and the security for the world.

2) A SECURITY COUNCIL of eleven members to have full responsibility for determining and taking action in maintaining peace through pacific, economic and military means. The permanent members will be the United States, Great Britain, Russia, China, France and the General Assembly may elect six non-permanent members consisting of eighteen members,

(3) AN ECONOMICAL AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, operating under the Assembly to deal with the humanitarian aspects of the international relations. This may prove to be helpful in that it has the right and duty to investigate and report on international, economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters. This is the people's chance.

(4) IN INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE TO HANDLE justifiable disputes.

(5) INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM.

With the adoption of these principles, we conclude that this Charter, if adhered to by the nations which adopted it, and if the Charter nations find their HOME statesmen willing to concur and practice their resolutions, and if their constituents are willing to adopt and practice among themselves and among other nations the spirit of cooperation and peace, this will go far towards maintaining peace and security as much for the small nations as for the large nations. But how long will the greedy big nations agree among themselves?

Unless the Charter Nations, therefore, practice what they preach, the Charter will be only a scrap of paper and will meet the fate of the League of Nations which was sabotaged by England and France for the pleasure of Italy to delight itself in shooting down defenseless Ethiopians. Unless these United Nations are true to their agreement, there can be no peace and no rehabilitation of the defeated nations. This disagreement and failure among the conquerors will bring war and disruption in the next quarter of the century.

For peace cannot be obtained by mere resolutions and charters, but must be a matter of individual and national practice of goodwill and neighborliness and genuine cooperation.

Pa.

Naturally, I was particularly interested in the smaller nations of Haiti, Ethiopia and Liberia. I talked with their delegates and especially to those from Ethiopia and Liberia which are surrounded by colonies mandated or trusteed by the bigger nations. These small nations represented in the conference, were on the anxious bench, as were also Syria, Palestine, etc. Yet, what could these nations do to defend themselves against such great powers as Russia and the United States or England, France, Belgium and Holland? Perhaps, I should not mention the people of the strategic islands won by th U. S. A. from Japan.

Again, it must be admitted that by exploiting their weaker nations to increase their own economic, industrial and social status, the small nations become satellites to the bigger nations and must be subject to the authority of the bigger nations.

8-4-45

In conclusion, may add several observations.

I was a little surprised to find so little social co-mingling between the nations represented at the San Francisco Conference. Each nation had is own social gathering and only once did I hear of a social gathering of two nations. I refer to that of Ethiopia and China. It seemed to me that the San Francisco Conference was just the place to begin the cultivation of the freindly international spirit and the good neighbor policy.

I listened to a bitter harangue of a representative of India against England. And one, almost as bitter, from a Nigerian representative, also against England. From what little I could hear from the minor satellites, England was the "bete noir" of all the so-called "backward nations" who desire independence. The fact is that England and France and poor Belgium and Holland have appeared to thrive upon the misfortunes of the less powerful nations. Economic gains and pelf seem to be their object rather than the moral and intellectual improvement of the smaller nations under their control.

Let us hope that the San Francisco Conference and all its tributaries may be able to focus its whole power upon the organization, not only to perpetuate peace and security, but to aid and warrant the freedoms marked in the Atlantic Charter which may bring peace, cultural, Economic and political welfare and progress to all people.

Garment Rally to Reply To ILG Heads on Frisco

Daily Worker 4-24-45

The garment center's noon rally tomorrow (Wednesday) in support of the San Francisco Conference will answer the attacks made by the leadership of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union on the Crimea decisions.

The attacks, made through the ILG publication, Justice, which opened its April pages to "democratic" discussion on Yalta, were voiced in a letter by Israel Feinberg, vice-president of the Joint Cloak Board. 4-24-45

The meeting will be held at 36th St. between Seventh and Eighth Aves. Speakers at the rally will be Rep. A. Clayton Powell, Corliss Lamont of the National Council for American-Soviet Friendship, Councilman Stanley Isaacs, Charles Collins of the Negro Labor Victory Committee, and Margo, stage and screen star. Arnold Ames, executive secretary of the American Labor Party Ladies Garment Center, which sponsors the rally, will be chairman.

Two rallies tonight (Tuesday), eve of the Frisco Conference, are:

- Tremont Citizens Committee rally, 8 p. m., P.S. 67, Mohegan Ave. and E 179 St., Bronx. Speakers: Assemblyman Louis Bennett, State Senators Isidore Dollinger and Lazarus Joseph; Charles Rubenstein, Max Perlow, Rabbis L. Predmesky and J. M. Charlop.
- East Bronx Committee for World Unity rally, 8 p. m., Hunt's Point Palace, Southern Blvd. and 163 St., Bronx. Speakers include Murray Weinstein, chairman, Bronx ALP; Harold S. Lowy, commander, Charles Crames Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars; State Senator Paul A. Fino; Isidore Begun, CPA; Assemblymen Julius J. Gans and Arthur Wachtel. 4-24-45

Other rallies scheduled for tomorrow (Wednesday) include:

- Americans United rally, 8 p. m., Erasmus Hall High School, Flatbush and Church Ave., Bklyn. Speakers: Rep. John M. Coffee, Dorothy Bellanca, Fannie Hurst, Rev. Herald Swezy and Rabbi A. Heller.
- Americans United rally, 8 p. m., Morris High School, Boston Road and 166 St., Bronx. Speakers: Roderick Stephens, chairman, Bronx Interracial Council; Councilman Michael J. Quill, Rev. Harold Green Johnson.
- Tribute to Franklin Delano Roosevelt by the Local Joint Executive Board, Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union, 2:30 p. m., Manhattan Center, 311 W. 34 St., Manhattan. Newbold Morris, president City Council, speaker.

An East Midtown Committee for World Unity rally Friday at the International Center of the YWCA, 341 E. 17 St., Manhattan. On Sunday at 2:30 p. m., the Trade Union Committee for Jewish Unity is cooperating with the American Jewish Conference and the American Zionist Emergency Council at a Lewisohn Stadium rally.

Maritime Union Hails Prestes on Release

The National Maritime Union yesterday cabled congratulations to Luiz Carlos Prestes, Brazil's Communist leader, on his release as a political prisoner.

PRESTES

"All believers in democracy throughout the world hail your release as a momentous development in the struggle against reaction," Ferdinand C. Smith, the union's national secretary, said. "Members of the NMU, who have at all times been identified in the struggle against fascism, see in this an encouraging sign for the extension of progressive democratic processes in Brazil and the Latin Americas. Salud!"

San Francisco Conference

Thousands Attend Peace Dedication

Washington Post 4-23-45 D.C.

Government and military officials, men and women from the uniformde ranks, school children, Federal workers and thousands of private citizens dedicated themselves to a lasting peace plan in memory of President Roosevelt yesterday at the Sylvan Theater.

The gathering on the sloping turf of the Monument Grounds was one of hundreds scheduled throughout the country this week in support of the United Nations Security Conference, opening in San Francisco on Wednesday.

Thousands joined in the pledge given by Marine Sergt. Maurice Pion, who lost an arm at Guadalcanal, to President Truman: "As one of the millions of American citizens who joined with Franklin Delano Roosevelt in the resolve to create an enduring peace, and because I believe it is through expressing ourselves that the millions like myself can make effective our high purpose, I do hereby pledge to the President and the Congress my wholehearted support of a world organization empowered to keep the peace."

Justice Douglas Speaks

Beforehand, they had heard from Senator Harold H. Burton, (R., Ohio), Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, the chief speaker, and Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, the distinguished actress, who read the appeal with which Franklin Delano Roosevelt concluded the text of his undelivered Jefferson Day speech. 4-23-45

Justice Douglas, in his appeal for a lasting peace, declared that in a physical sense this war has not been hard on the ones who stayed at home. One of our bastions — Pearl Harbor — was bombed. The Japanese conquered the Philippines. "And its people who are our brothers and friends, as well as our allies," he continued, "know from cruel experience what enemy rule is like.

"Next time," he added, "we may all know what it is like. If the world is stupid and selfish and blind enought to let war come once again, it will not spare the United States. It will be our cities here at home that are turned into rubble, and our children who before they can talk learn to cringe at the sound of an airplane. And this great, rich, proud country—America—may even know what starvation means." 4-23-45

The Supreme Court Justice concluded: "A conference can draw up plans, and Prime Ministers and Presidents can sign treaties. What Franklin Roosevelt knew, what he fought for all the days of his life, was a peace that would be stronger than an empty treaty; a peace that would not be a scrap of paper, a peace made out of tough hearts and the aspiring souls and the devotion of men. His death has brought hame to us with dramatic emphasis the tremendous, united effort we must make today and tomorrow and throughout the years if victory in peace is really won."

Reads Roosevelt Plea

Miss Skinner, with a spray of gardenias pinned to the coat of her blue tailored suit, stepped up to the microphone and in a clear voice read excerpts from the late President's speech, which was to be broadcast the day following his untimely death. In it, Mr. Roosevelt said: . . . "Let me assure you that my hand is the steadier for the work that is to be done, that I move more firmly knowing that you, millions and millions of you, are joined with me in the resolve to make this work endure. The work, my friends, is peace. More than an end to this war, an end to the beginnings of all wars. Yes, an end forever, to this inhuman, mipractical brutal settlement of the differences between governments by the mass killing of peoples. 4-23-45

"Today, as we move against the terrible scourge of war, as we go onward towards the greatest contribution that any generation of human beings can make in this world—the contribution of lasting peace, I ask you to keep up your faith. And to you and all Americans who dedicate themselves with us to the making of an abiding peace I say 'the only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today. Let us move forward with strong and active faith'."

Burton Asks Unity

Senator Burton in his remarks, asserted that the best memorial to any one of the present generation will be the recognition of his part in establishing a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations. This was, he said, the prayer of President Truman in his message to our armed forces last week. "This has been the prayer of President Roosevelt for three years," he continued. "This was the prayer of President Lincoln eighty years ago. In such a memorial there is room for all who share in building it.

He concluded: "Let us join hands with Lincoln, with Roosevelt, with Truman and build the greatest of all memorials—the road to a just and lasting peace dedicated to the brotherhood of Man." 4-23-45

The Rev. Paul McNally, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University was chairman and introduced the sepakers. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation gave the invocation and Dr. Frederick Reissig of the Washington Federation of Churches pronounced the benediction. Miss Dorothy Maynor, Negro concert singer, sang a traditional spiritual and The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

A color guard of Fort Myer ceremonial troops opened the proceedings, marching down the middle aisle and coming to parade rest behind the speakers. The Marine Band gave a preliminary concert 15 minutes before the ceremonies began and closed the session with the National Anthem.

Africans and San Francisco

Bantu World

Dr. A. B. Xuma, President-General of the African National Congress says: Many people have written me and others have asked me personally what part the African National Congress is taking to bring to the attention of Allied Nations and outside world the back-breaking and hope-destroying restrictions and disabilities of the Africans. Many are just now desperately catching at every straw that something must be done. There is a scramble for all sorts of makeshift activities for celebrating V day. It has just dawned upon them that the order to cease fire in Europe has been given.

6-19-45

The African National Congress, your leaders, who believe in method and planning instead of patchwork grabbing at every straw have long anticipated all these events. They have not been caught napping. As far back as December 1943 they prepared and submitted a document, "The African Claims" which was adopted at the national conference.

This document was delivered to the Prime Minister, General Smuts whom we know to be the Constitutional leader of the South African delegation to any Peace Conference as things are at present. It was made clear to him in a covering letter that these were the claims of the African people and that they were an essential and honest basis for any just and permanent peace.

These "African Claims" deal with Land, Labour, Education, Political Status and other problems of the status of the African.

In order to know the truth and be intelligent about the Congress demands on behalf of our people, order the booklet "African Claims" 1s. 3d. post free.

Some dishonest and unthinking people may endeavour to mislead you that this document was drawn up by your leaders without the masses. Tell them in every part of the world the leaders and representatives of the people, not the mob, think and plan for them. General Smuts alone will commit the whole of South Africa, Black and White, in San Francisco. Dr. Soong will speak for the 400 millions Chinese, Mr. Anthony Eden for Great Britain and the Empire, Mr. Edward Stettinius for 130 millions in America while Mr. Molotov stands for nearly 200 million Russians.

Johannesburg S. Africa

Consequently in ordered world and interracial affairs Africans must depend and place their full confidence upon their true leaders to champion their cause and protect their interests. In order to further allay your anxiety I wish to state that besides handing over the African Claims to the Prime Minister we have sent that document and another entitled "San Francisco and the Africans" which appeared in the Democrat 5th May, 1945 to our overseas connections, England, America and other countries. Still further, we want you to realise that the San Francisco Conference is not the last word. It is one of the necessary and important steps toward the final Peace Conference. In other words, there is still opportunity to continue pressing your claims for full freedom as human beings.

Demonstrations on Victory Day may be merely a stage in this fight for freedom. The struggle must be continued, intensified until the peace is won including full and human benefits for the African soldiers, ex-soldiers and their families.

The battle for the full freedom for the winning of the peace calls for every African man, woman and child to join the ranks of the African National Congress and take part in this noble cause.

San Francisco Conference

World Watches U.S. Handling Of Negro As Key To Future

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

5-5-45

When Peace Comes...What?

By ROBERT REDFIELD

ROBERT REDFIELD is a professor of social sciences at the University of Chicago and author of a number of books.

Robert E. Park used to say that the American Negro became successively a population, a folk, and a race.

Imported from Africa with native traditions interrupted, the Negro arrived here as so many human beings, as so many laborers. Without common language or customs, these men and women were at first a mere population. 5-5-

Thereupon, in the relative isolation of the plantations but with the raw materials of living provided by white men and with whatever vestiges of African life remained, the Negro developed the only important American folk life.

Later, as education and sophistication gave him awareness of his position and the will to change it, he became conscious of the cause for which he would, and must, struggle. And so he became a race, not in the anthropological sense, but in the sociological sense of an ethnic group conscious of its distinct nature and common interests.

This remark was probably first made by Park more than a score of years ago. When he first made it, the problem of the American Negro was thought of as a problem of the United States. It was recognized as the outstanding social problem of this country.

The important change that has occurred since that time is the conversion of this local and national problem into an international, a world-wide problem. 5-5-45

So perhaps now it may be said that the American Negro has undergone yet another change. Perhaps it may now be said that the Negro has become an international responsibility. He is a responsibility to all men of all racial origins who want a peaceful and a just world. And he is a new responsibility to himself. For his conduct, and the solutions reached as to his problem, now stand, as a symbol, for all men who are denied justice and equality, in all parts of the world.

We might also say that whereas a generation ago the Negro has become, in the sense explained, a race, he will be, after this war, the race. He will be, at least, the most critical and symbolically significant case of a people denied full participation in human civil and political rights because of race.

Two Plans of Living

In this world, two plans of human living contend, as never before, for supremacy. One plan denies human rights, adopts expediency as its rule, and makes the individual a mere means to the strength of the state or an imagined dominant "race." The other plan extols human rights, adopts moral principle as its rule, and places the human individual above state or imagined "race."

The end of the war will not see the end of the struggle between these two ways of living. It will rather bring about a re-definition of the struggle between them.

During the war the totalitarian states fight for the first plan, and the United Nations, on the whole, represent the other plan. But everybody knows that within the United Nations there is internal struggle between these two plans of living. The end of the war will remove the immediate and obvious adversary of the democratic and liberal way of life.

As another result, it will make plain to view the internal struggle. The struggle between the two plans for living will be seen for what, more lastingly, it is: a struggle that goes on within every nation, every community, every heart. It will be seen to be both local and international, both personal and global.

Symbol of Conflict

The American Negro will lie across the battleground between these two plans for human living. No other group anywhere in the world presents so sharp a conflict between the ideal of democracy, the proposition that all men are created equal, and the great qualifying fact of injustice and prejudice. 5-5-45

This country, great in power and paramount in democratic leadership, is the same country that cannot solve the problems of its own persisting racially directed injustices.

The American Negro will receive the anxious gaze of struggling minorities in every land, and the American white man will have upon his conscience a wrong that works against not only himself but against his fellow men who stand, in other communities, for the democratic and liberal way of life. As Paul Robeson said, the cause of the American Negro has become part of the struggle against fascism.

Interests Clash

It will not be seen to be so by most men, white or Negro. As the white man will seek to preserve social arrangements which are easy and comfortable and convenient to him, so the Negro will seek to change them, not in the interests of all men, white and Negro, but in order to get some immediate advantage for himself.

The Negro too will see the short-run interests, will cry out with the immediate pain. He will follow the political leader who promises him a better job even if the leader be corrupt. He will see the white returned soldier take the job which he, the Negro, held during the war, and he will nurse his natural anger or vent it in mere expressions of bitterness.

So, too, the white man will seek to restore the Negro to the positions of social and economic subordination which he occupied in the local communities before the war. "The laws of biology will reassert themselves after the war," writes a southern editor.

The conflict will be felt, on the whole, as many local struggles, as so many little unconnected attempts of a subjected minority to wrest an increment of material security from a dominating group. It will be in part blind, in part clouded with fear or resentment. In part it will go on as it has always gone on.

And yet, in ever increasing part, it will be understood by those of both races who are thoughtful, and who read and reflect, that this is no longer a matter of who gets what somebody else has and hasn't enough of himself. It will be more and more seen to be a conflict, not between white and Negro, but between free and slave, between men of good will, of all races, and men of power, of all races. 5-5-45

It will be recognized as a part of the great effort toward a decision as to whether the world will be ruled by expediency or by principles of justice, by what serves me, or by what serves all men. Insofar as Americans, Negroes and whites, see the problem of the American Negro in these terms, we shall go forward toward the right.

NAACP Sets Equality As Parley Goal

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

4-28-45

NEW YORK—A world Bill of Rights "which will include unequivocal affirmation of equality of all peoples and races" will be a primary goal of Walter White and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the World Security Conference in San Francisco.

In a statement issued before boarding a special train in New York, Mr. White said:

HOPES U. S. WILL NOT SUPPORT EMPIRES

"It is our hope as consultants to the American delegation, to induce the San Francisco conference to face what is one of the most serious problems of the twentieth century—the question of race and color. We are particularly concerned with what is done about colonial empires and the well-being of colonial peoples around the world. Most of these colonial peoples are colored. What happens to even the most exploited of these has direct bearing upon the future of Negroes in the United States.

"It is to be hoped that the United States is not going into the conference with any willingness to perpetuate colonial empires.

"Equally important is the adoption by the conference of a world bill of rights which will include unequivocal affirmation of the equality of all peoples and races."

Color Line Absent At Frisco, DuBois Finds

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

By W. E. B. DuBOIS

(Official Consultant, American Delegation to United Nations Conference)

SAN FRANCISCO — I attended the opening plenary session of the United Nations Conference on International Organization. We sat in a great opera house, built as a memorial to the soldiers who, as the Mayor of San Francisco said, "died in vain" in the first world war. 5-5-45

Before us rose four golden columns against a cerulian blue background with three festoons drooping between, and the massed brilliance of the flags of 46 nations.

Down below as the blue-green podium, with green garlands, and above and at the sides leered the golden masks of tragedy and comedy. On the mezzanine floor was massed the press with its machines, eyes and ears of the world, snapping and grinding. Its engineers ran crouching to and fro, up and down the aisles. In the seats under blazing lights were all types of mankind, all languages and shades of co[illegible] Arabia and China, India and Africa were conspicuous, Latin-America and all Europe and America.

Franklin Roo[illegible] was curiously absent. God lacks a sense of drama, otherwise he would have let the dead President make here his last speech and appearance. There, too, was an absence of music. A military band screeched intermittently, but no one listened. It may have been playing national anthems, but I could not hear. A great music of organs and trumpets ought to have sounded, but there was severe simplicity, perhaps even a little over done. Only one fine note, and that was the minute of silent meditation. 5-5-45

The ceremonies were rather conspicuously American, English; no other tongue was heard, no allusion to their cultures. There came in first 17 young folk in military dress: soldiers, sailors, WACs, WAVES and SPARS. 5-5-45

I was sorry there was no colored face among them. It would have been a world-wide gesture of significance, if [illegible] some one had thought of that, but there were a number of things here unthought of. Four men sat on the platform, and a voice. The young white-haired Edward Stettinius presided.

Where Are Colonies?

The President of the United States spoke from Washington in flat mid-western voice; clear, not altogether logical in sequence, but pressing on the whole what needed to be stressed. We represent the overwhelming majority of mankind — do we? Where are the colonies? The Governor of California, that astute politician, made a conventional speech, the best speech of the day in thought and diction was that of the Mayor of San Francisco.

Then Stettinius welcomed the United conference, and said two words: "Always the West has meant Future." "We meet on the ocean named Peace."

Naturally I looked for color. It was there, and one the whole conspicuous. To my consternation I came near being photographed with the Indian delegation. Three hand-picked stooges of Great Britain: but I escaped.

World Security Conference Sidelights

AFRO AMERICAN
Balt., Md.

By RALPH MATTHEWS

5-19-45

SAN FRANCISCO — There are six times as many newspaper reporters, radio commentators and observers at the World Security Conference as there are delegates.

Not only is it difficult for the diplomats to arrive at any secret agreements, but they find it difficult to eat or take a bath without somebody snooping around.

Most of the delegates and many of the reporters as well have at least two rooms — one in which they sleep and one maintained as an office. 5-19-45

The number of the office phone is on file at conference headquarters, while that of the one in the bedroom is kept secret or given only to a few private friends.

Haitians Elusive

The most elusive delegates in Frisco are the Haitians. It is even difficult to obtain their public speeches because they speak French, one of the diplomatic languages of the conference, and their remarks are not translated unless requested by the speaker. The Haitians seldom make this request.

San Francisco weather is capricious. Although the calendar says May, weather runs the gamut from June to November, all in one day. 5-19-45

Women Bus Drivers

Riding the cable cars here is like being on a scenic railway. Strangers ride up and down the mountainsides with their hearts in their mouths.

But more exciting than a cable car ride is a ride on a bus operated mostly by girls. The person who called women the weaker sex never saw a San Francisco bus driver.

The most secretive person at the conference is the Courier's P. L. Pratttis, while the busiest man here is Edgar G. Brown, president of the National Negro Council, who has already staged several mass meetings.

Leaders Embarrassed

At one of these meetings held at the University High School in Berkeley, Sunday, Edgar invited all the visiting dignitaries who graced the platform.

Withtout telling them his purpose, he opened a verbal tirade on Walter White and all other leadrs of the race who, Edgar declared, were selling the people out.

According to Edgar's speech everybody but himself was a crook, a traitor and a charlatan. He was the only one the common man could trust.

As they were all new faces to the people of San Francisco, the leaders on the platform looked pretty sheepish when Edgar finally got around to introducing them. 5-19-45

Later, Edgar cleared the air by explaining that those on the platform were O.K. and that they had banded together to throw out all the rascals.

The Free India delegation has elaborate headquarters two blocks away from the seat of the conference. I have been there two or three times a day for five days and always found it locked.. . . .

Elk Delegation

The "Free-the-Elks" delegation is housed in the Scaggs Hotel and includes Grand Exalted Ruler J. Finley Wilson, Grand Legal Advisor Perry W. Howard, Grand Treasurer Kelly, Grand Commissioner town joined with the Elks at the of Civil Liberties Hobson Reynolds.

All of the other organizations in Third Baptist Church and called themselves the Federated Organization for Civil Rights of Colored Peoples of the World.

The name had been changed three times in three days, and the group was about to adopt the name, "The League of Races," when the members discovered they only had one race present.

I have been here one week and can count all the colored people I have seen on two hands, and most of them are from the East.

Exalted Ruler Leaves

In his address to the conference, J. Finley Wilson said:

"We are here to stay as long as the conference lasts, as long as there is one delegate left to hear our plea. We would feel that we were disloyal to our trust, had broken faith with the millions of our race who look to us for results, if we went home without accomplishing our purpose. I am in this fight to the bitter end."

The day after V-E Day some of the Elk leaders on the East Coast called Finley long distance and told him the curfew law was lifted, racing had been restored and it appeared that they might be able to have their convention.

Finley left on the first train out. 5-19-45

Mysterious Ladies

The two stylishly dressed and mysterious ladies seen at most of the major press conferences are Mrs. Crystal Bird Fausett of Philadelphia and Mrs. Yarnall Jacobs millionaire patron of the Philadelphia Symphony, who are joint advisors to the Inter-Cultural Committee of the United Nations Council. 5-19-45

They have some very beady schemes about making the peoples of the world love each other better through music and culture, an dthey hope to make the City of Brotherly Love the permanent seat of the conference.

If they could bring together the heads of all the great powers and let them listen to a good symphony concert, there just couldn't possibly be any more wars. (This last is my own deduction.)

Anti-Prejudice Society

The busy gentleman seen around the conference who might be mistaken for a race track fixer is the Rev. C. Townsend Tucker of Los Angeles, president, founder and chief member of the Anti-Prejudice Society.

The Rev. Mr. Tucker, who operates an exclusive club for bachelors, sells real estate and preaches on occasion, called the press together for an important handout. It was a prayer for the success of the conference.

This Is San Francisco

Although there are more Chinese in Frisco than in all of the Eastern cities combined, one seldem, if ever, sees a Chinese laundry. 5-19-45

I did find one, but there was a sign on the counter reading "Sorry, we take no laundry today. Got all we can do."

Don't be surprised if all the colored war workers pack up and go home as fast as possible after the war. Most of them are worse off here than when they drew low wages in the South.

Being colored costs plenty. Rents are exorbitant and food is out of reach in colored sections. A haircut costs a dollar and a shoe shine 25 cents plus an ugly look if you don't tip.

One honky-tonk in which the average Easterner wouldn't enter socks you 75 cents to sit at a table and a buck for a drink, and one must drink often and fast or clear out.

Intruder

Steve Wright, Washington photographer, who supervises the State Department picture output with a crew of cameramen and technicians under him, was not permitted to shoot any pictures of the Haitian, Liberian or Ethiopian delegations. White photographers were assigned because the State Department feared that if a colored photographer was assigned to these delegations they would think they were being segregated or discriminated against.

Steve was aroused from his sleep in the Chancellor Hotel the other night when a strange man crawled into his room off the fire escape. 5-19-45

The intruder, very much inebriated, had gotten out on the fire escape while attending a party in one of the rooms and crawled into Steve's room by mistake. After being guided to his proper destination, he insisted that Steve get dressed and join the party.

Gandhi Urges Justice For Colored Peoples

DEFENDER — Chicago, Ill
4-28-45

Indian Leader Lashes Imperialist Rule Over Colonies

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON. — Mahatma Gandhi, venerable spokesman for India's teeming millions, this week demanded freedom, justice and equality for colored races the world over in a statement addressed to delegates to the United Nations' San Francisco conference.

"India must have complete freedom from foreign control," declared the leader of 400 millions of the world's colored peoples. "Germany and Japan must not be humiliated and the fruits of peace must be equally shared," he warned.

"I reiterate my conviction," asserted Gandhi, "there will be no peace for the Allies or the world unless they shed belief in the efficacy of war and its accompanying terrible deceptions and fraud, and are determined to hammer out a real peace based on universal freedom and equality of colored races and nations." 4-28-45

Free India "Indispensible"

Voicing the aspirations of the darker races, Gandhi declared:

"Imperialistic exploitation and domination by Europeans and Americans over Asia and Africa can have no place in a postwar world striving for lasting peace."

Complete freedom for India is an indespensible preliminary to peace, Gandhi emphasized. Immediate freedom for India, he stated, would "demonstrate to the Africans and other colored races that their freedom is approaching."

Denouncing the Indian delegates to San Francisco, handpicked by Britain, Gandhi said, "This camouflage of Indian representation through Indians nominated by British imperialism should be dropped." 4-28-45

Such stooge representation by Indian nationalists, Gandhi charged, was "worse than no representation at all." "India should either be represented by elected representatives enjoying the confidence of the masses or be unrepresented," he added.

SAN FRANCISCO PREVIEW

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

Race Problem To Confront United Nations Parley

(First article of a series discussing major problems of the World Security Conference opening in San Francisco this month. Clip and use as background material.) 4-14-45

By
JOHN ROBERT BADGER
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO — Negro Americans, together with the rest of humanity, are centering their attention in coming weeks on San Francisco, where the representatives of some forty odd nations will combine their intelligence in the effort to organize the peace of the world for generations to come.

It is a grandiose project, inspired by the noblest of aims and the most elementary of needs. For a world without war, in which men can give their energies to the mastery of nature and the peaceful "pursuit of life, liberty and happiness," is the immemorial dream of all mankind.

Yet, within the memory of millions now living is the failure of other conferences with similar aims. Plain, simple men of every land and clime know the dream of peace has proved but a dream. Especially Negro Americans and other people victimized by forms of political oppression, with their conditioned mistrust of idealistic formulas, ask to know the premises for the undertaking at San Francisco. Specifically—

1. Is there any more substantial basis for assurance today that an enduring peace is possible than existed previously? Can there be a stable peace in the world of tomorrow?

2. What kind of world organization is required to keep the peace? And is the world ready today to establish such an organization? 4-14-45

3. What about the interests of racial and national minorities and of the colonial peoples? In addition to the simple machinery of peace organization, will the representatives of the United Nations deal with such problems as these, which are related to the causes of war and may, if not resolved, lead to World War III?

Presumably, when the United Nations representatives begin deliberations in San Francisco on the twenty-fifth of this month, they will start work with the conviction that world security can be organized. Any other belief would be self-defeatist. And if it is assumed that the representatives are men and women of intelligence, it must also be assumed that they are aware of the present movement and direction of objective world realities.

Key to this is the process of destroying fascism, the major threat to world security.

Indeed, the daily newspapers disclose how rapid is proceeding one phase of this prospect, namely, the physical destruction of the striking forces of the Axis. By the time, or soon after, the security conference begins, Germany may be out of the war and the decision against Japan well on the way.

Another phase of the process, that of enforcing peace on the defeated Axis countries and preventing their future aggression, has already been charted at the Moscow, Cairo and Crimea conferences, and the chart is being adhered to in parts of the Axis countries now occupied by United Nations' forces. 4-14-45

A third phase of the process, that of eliminating Fascist survivals and forces in the liberated countries and stifling the Fascist regimes of such Axis-satellites as Spain, Portugal and the Argentine, is also in motion, though admittedly—as was shown in Greece, Belgium and in the case of Spain—at a much slower rate of development and with more reversals and zigzags than other phases. Nevertheless, despite defeats, retreats, compromises and interruptions, the eradication of the main threat to world security is already far advanced, and spots of its infection elsewhere are already being quarantined.

All important is the process of peaceful collaboration among the majority of the world's nations.

At the heart of this process is the peaceful collaboration of the "Big Five"—the world's five mightiest powers, Great Britain, the United States, the Soviet Union, China and France. This is the development which determines and conditions all other aspects of the process, and which distinguishes the favorable world "environment" of the San Francisco undertaking from that of any preceding attempt to organize peace. It is a new and potent development, growing out of the wartime need of mutual survival, and accelerated by the emerging postwar needs of political democracy and economic security.

Another potent aspect of this whole process is the growing unity of the labor movements of the United Nations. In this is to be seen a substantiation of the statement of the governments of Britain, the U. S., and the U.S.S.R., at Teheran, that the policies of collaboration formulated there and subsequently are not merely agreements between the officials of states, but reflect and express the desires and needs of the peoples of the United Nations themselves. It is obvious that a global "PAC" (political action committee) can be an effective instrument in enforcing the peace.

The forms of peaceful collaboration are already charted, as, for instance, the Crimea conference blueprint for the occupation and control of enemy territory, the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees, the Bretton Woods proposals for an international bank and stabilization fund, the combined Shipping Adjustment Board, the food and agriculture organization of the United Nations, the old International Labor Organization of the League of Nations and the new World Labor Congress to meet in Paris in August, and numerous other agencies which are already concerning themselves with postwar economic collaboration and in some instances have begun piecemeal operations.

These are the conditions which form the gigantic world setting for the drama that will unfold at San Francisco. In all history, there have been more durable foundations upon which to build a peace organization. They are real world forces, partly engendered by the collective intelligence and effort of men. Can the architects of tomorrow's future design a security organization as sound as the foundations warrant? 4-14-45

Plan of Organization

From the foregoing it should be clear that the architects will not start "from scratch." Both the general and specific outlines of their blueprint have already been prepared. Indeed, if we understand by "general outlines" those broad principles of policy formulated at Teheran, Cairo, and Yalta, then the representatives to the San Francisco conference have a limited and special function.

They are not delegated to reverse or even alter those essential agreements upon which they very prospect of postwar peace is based. They are not delegated, as Senator Arthur Vandenberg and certain other isolationist spokesmen in America would wish, even to review the decisions of the Teheran, Cairo and Crimean conferences. They have a more concrete, less critical task, namely, to work out the form and functions of an organization which will implement the spirit and letter of the Teheran, Cairo and Crimean agreements.

On this task also, the preliminary work has been done. At Dumbarton Oaks, Va., last summer representatives of the "Big Three" worked out an initial plan for the world security organization. The skeleton has thus been completed and the delegates to the San Francisco meeting have but to mount it with flesh.

New Vitality

In appearance, this skeletal organization resembles the form of the League of Nations. But it is necessary to remember that here the resemblance ends: the content is altogether different. It is the new content which, even beginning in old forms, will give these forms a new function and new vitality that may be expected to change them. 4-14-45

Thus, the Dumbarton Oaks principles provide for the establishment of an assembly, comprising a representative of each member nation; a council, comprised of the Big Five as permanent members and six others chosen by the assembly on a rotating basis; a world court, for the settlement of justifiable disputes; a secretariat, the administrative arm of the assembly; and an economic and social council for coordinating the various social and economic agencies now effective within the United Nations' program. Attached to the assembly will also be various committees; while the executive arm of the council is to be a military staff, comprising the chiefs of staff of the permanent members of the council with their military and technical advisers.

Beneath this facade of the new "league's" structure lie the new characteristics and its essential differences from the old League of Nations. The difference of content, for instance, includes the new and distinctive character of the composition of the organization. The Britain of today is not the same Britain of David Lloyd George and Versailles. The world environment, as already indicated, is not the same. And in addition, within the organization blueprint itself are essential differences. 4-14-45

Use of Force

The restraining, coercive power of the League of Nations was limited to reliance on "world public opinion" and the threat of economic sanctions. But because of the disunity among the old League's members, even these mild measures were never fully mobilized and applied. According to the Dumbarton Oaks charter, the security council of the new world organization will have the power to employ military force against an aggressor, and to employ it instantly and in adequate quantity and kind to destroy the threat of aggression.

Also, the functions of the economic and social agencies of the old League corresponded to the tasks which the dominating powers of the old League considered to be the major problems of the period. Needless to say, the major problem of that time was regarded as the maintenance of the status quo of Versailles. Hence, the functions of these agencies were extremely limited, and in many cases genuinely reactionary.

The function of the old Mandates Commission, for instance, is a case in point. But the problems of the postwar world will set new tasks for the economic and social agencies of the new world organization. The new agencies will be required to exercise extreme flexibility on the basis of broad, progressive policies.

These, then, are the main characteristics of the new world organization as outlined at Dumbarton Oaks. I have purposely omitted discussion of such questions as the voting principle, about which so many parliamentary "prima donnas" have sounded discordant and confusing views. Such "criticism" is not germane to an understanding of the skeletal outline of the new organization; on the contrary, it largely stems from a fundamental disagreement with the policies of collaboration which underlie the whole perspective of postwar security. 4-14-45

Voting Issue

Briefly explained by U. S. Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, the question of voting by the security council is as follows: Since the permanent members of the council (the Big Five) bear the principal responsibility for action to enforce the peace, concurrence of all the permanent members will be required before such action can be taken. Each members of the council has one vote. Decisions by the council on procedural matters require only an affirmative vote of any majority, that is, of any seven members. But all other decisions require that the five permanent members be among the affirmative seven.

Upon such general foundations, the delegates at San Francisco will erect a superstructure which, it is hoped, will be able to deal with the many nuances and shadings of matters affecting the peace, as well as with the plain problems of aggression. That is to say, a principal task of the new world organization will be to act as a preventative of war as much as to deal with threats of war once these have arisen. This is in keeping with the lessons learned from the failure of the old League, in keeping with the new realistic approach to problems of international relations which are dictated by the necessities of the future. 4-14-45

Racial, Colonial Questions

War-preventative measures, therefore, require of the delegates a consideration of problems relating to racial, minority and colonial questions. And there are already many signs that these questions will be raised at San Francisco. The need for a new agency to undertake functions relating to the development of colonial countries is plainly indicated in the Dumbarton Oaks charter. (This question is the subject of the next article in this series.) In addition, the issue of racial equality has already been broached.

Last month in London, Sir Zaffrullah Khan, leader of the Indian delegation to the British Commonwealth Conference, declared that the "racial problem" had been "clearly, emphatically, and vigorously" put to the conference. Earlier, in October of 1944, the Chinese delegate at the Dumbarton Oaks meeting asked that the principle of race equality be formally included in postwar international agreements. It seems fairly definite that the Chinese will present their request again at San Francisco.

It should be recalled, and the lesson is no doubt remembered, that militarism and fascism in Japan found a ready instrument for their aims in the fact that twenty-five years ago, at the conclusion of World War I, the United States and Britain rejected Japan's plea for inclusion of the racial equality principle in the League of Nations Covenant.

Moreover, the statements of policy of the major United Nations have inspired subject peoples of the non-Caucasian world to demand an end to discrimination and exploitation based on race and color. The Atlantic Charter proclaimed "the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live." And this principle was reaffirmed in the Teheran, Cairo and Moscow agreements. Then, too, three of the members of the "Big Five" stand committed to policies which negate racial exclusiveness.

Soviet Policy

The policy of the Soviet Union is well known in this regard. Recently, this policy has been reaffirmed emphatically. Premier Stalin on November 6, 1942, declared that the abolition of racial discrimination was one of the USSR's basic peace aims. And official Soviet publications, in the past six months, have declared in numerous articles that the permanent crushing of fascism is possible only by the general acceptance of the principle of racial equality. The Soviet Embassy bulletin, issued in Washington, said last November that "when any country gives shelter to the Hitlerites or their ideas in the form of discriminatory legislation, in the form of racist organizations or a racist press, it is no longer an internal affair of that country." 4-14-45

France's colonial minister, Rene Pleven, has declared that his government expects to begin a "colonial New Deal" in French overseas territories, which will include the grant of full French citizenship to all colonials. Pleven also added that French policy is adamant against any importation of racial prejudice.

The new China, as already indicated, cannot tolerate the affront of continued racial discrimination to its status of a fully sovereign, potentially great power.

Added to these three powers and their influence at San Francisco will be the voice of many smaller nations, such as the Latin American countries, Liberia, Ethiopia, Syria, the Lebanon, Egypt and the Philippines.

This is not to say that the principle of racial equality will be easily incorporated in the new charter of the peace. On the contrary, its introduction is certain to meet vigorous opposition, both direct and screened behind "reservations" and distinctions. But it is reasonable to believe that the collective intelligence of mankind, as represented by the delegates to San Francisco, will see in the subjection of two-thirds of the world's people by so-called white nations a potent threat to the prospect of international security. Consequently, the principle of racial equality and the principle of international responsibility for colonial peoples may be expected to have staunch champions at the security conference.

DELEGATES TO WORK FIVE DAYS A WEEK

N.Y. Times

Conference Hours Will Be From 9 A. M. to 5:30 P. M.—Night Sessions May Be Called

4-20-45

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19 (U.P.)—Delegates to the United Nations Conference on International Organization opening here Wednesday will work "a good long day" five days a week, and nights when necessary, the working program showed ttoday.

Delegates, State Department officials and reporters were gathering here in ever-increasing numbers. A large number of Latin Americans are expected tomorrow. The influx will reach its peak Monday and Tuesday when five special trains will arrive with delegates and newspapermen.

General structure of the conference was outlined by John C. Ross, secretary general. The Dumbarton Oaks proposals will form the conference agenda. The working plan, approved by the sponsoring group, is subject to approval by the conference. 4-20-45

A steering committee composed of all delegation heads will be the conference's principal group. An executive committee of a smaller number of delegation heads will assist the presiding officer.

Delegates will work from 9 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. Night session will be held when necessary to speed up handling of proposals.

The conference will be opened to the public on a first-come, first-served basis. A total of 15,000 persons will be accommodated during an estimated ten plenary sessions in the Opera House. There will be 10,000 public admittances to business meetings in the Veteras Building.

Arrivals today included a South African group headed by H. T. Andrews, for three years head of the South African supply mission in Washington, and H. N. Erenel of the Turkish Foreign Office.

The National Negro Council today proposed a group of recommendations for incorporation in the league charter. The council asked for representation of the 13,000,00 Negroes in this country in the American delegation in the permanent assembly.

The Council's program asks for a moral code to renounce war, provides for honor and justice as the basis of relations between nations, peoples an draces and urges the outlawing of the color bar.

A "bill of rights" asks protection for minorities and underprivileged people, prohibtions against involuntary servitude, safeguards from execution or imprisonment without fair trial, and inviolability of freedom of the press and religion.

Negro Nations List Delegates For Peace Meet

Atlanta World 4-12-45

Representatives Take Part In Preliminaries

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Delegations which shall represent Ethiopia and the republics of Liberia and Haiti at the San Francisco conference have been listed formally with the state department, it is announced. Already they are participating in preliminary talks.

At the same time, the department has asked that members of the American delegation begin meeting regularly until the conference opens in order that they may become thoroughly familiar with the position this government will take on the various matters to come up. These sessions began on Monday.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R) of Michigan has been suggested as the chief American delegate on the assembly commission for the proposed united nations organizations. It is under the assembly that the suggested economic and security council, dealing as it will with humanitarian and social problems, will fall.

NAGGIAR COMING

From Paris it is learned that the French cabinet has named Paul Emilo Naggiar, a delegate to the Golden Gate conference to represent his government in pre-San Francisco talks on international trusteeships.) 4-12-45

The week-end announcement by the state department said that Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti had indicated their intention to be represented at the meeting of the committee of jurists which opened Monday.

Prime Minister Bitwedded Makennen Endalkacheeu will head the Ethiopian delegation which will include Atk Akilou Hapte Weld, vice minister for foreign affairs; Ate A'bai Weld-Marian, vice minister of justice; Blatta Ephrem Tewelde Medhen, minister to the United States; Ate Emanuel Abraham, director general of education; Ate Getahoun Tesemma, first secretary, Ethiopian legation, Washington; Ate Menasse Lema, director general ministry of finance; Adviser; John Spencer, adviser to ministry for foreign affairs; Secretary; Ate Petres Sahlu, employe, ministry for foreign affairs. 4-12-45

LESCOT FOR HAITI

The Haitian delegation will include the following: Gerard Lescot, minister for foreign affairs; Voly Thebaud, minister for the interior; Gen. Nemours, president of the senate; Andre Liataud, ambassador in Washington; assistant delegates; Pierre Chauvet, under secretary of state for commerce; Major Antoino Levelt, director of the military school; Antoino Bervin, Haitian charge d'affaires at Havana; technical advisors; Louis Moravia; Joseph Nadal; secretary, Louis Gardere.

Vice President C. L. Simpson will be chairman of the Liberian delegation. Other members include secretary of state Gabriel Dennis, adviser; J. L. Gibson, chairman, senate foreign relations committee; R. A. Henries, chairman of house foreign committee; Coleman Moses Grant, officer commanding frontier force military aide; Nathan Barnes secretary of commission; and George Padmore, secretary to the adviser.

Negroes Ask End of Colonial System

N.Y.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Pressing for democratic administration of the colonies, mandated territories, and possessions of the world a seven-point program was presented to the United Nations Conference by William L. Sherrill of Detroit, official observer at the Conference for the Universal Negro Improvement Association. P.M.

Highlighting the document, which bore the signatures of all high ranking officials of the international Negro group, was Point No. 6, calling for complete reorganization of the world colonial system, which stated: P.M.

"We submit that the colonial system, as has been known up to the present time, be completely set aside and the concept of colonialism as a means of exploitation of other peoples and their land on the pretext of political protection and taking their so-called backwardness as an excuse for their domination, be supplanted by a system which establishes a relationship of guardian and ward, with the more powerful nation as a trustee and the future of the subordinate nation as its trust. 5-1-45

"To this end, we submit that for every ounce or pound of produce extracted from the land or any services rendered by the people, these people in return should be paid equitably in terms of education, cultural advancement and preparation for free and independent life."

Other cited facts and recommendations in the memorial were:

¶ That human rights must be the order of the day at the peace conference, that these rights should form the basis of any social, political or economic determinations made by the conference and that any action contrary to these rights will only form the basis for future wars.

¶ That all nations of the world should be entitled to representation and participation in the conference with equal rights and equal voting power for all nations regardless of size or international status.

¶ That the markets of raw materials of the world be made available to all nations that have to depend on those raw materials for their existence and that free and easy access, without competition, strain or disadvantage, be given to all nations in order that all may live and that one of the main causes of war be removed. 5-1-45

560-1945

San Fransisco Conference

Smaller Nations Demand

RACE PLANK AT 'FRISCO

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

By P. L. PRATTIS and DR. RAYFORD W. LOGAN

SAN FRANCISCO—Regardless of the final contents of the charter to be drawn up at this United Nations Conference for International Organization, it must be recognized that, at this point, the insistently intoned plea and demand of all of the smaller nations whose representatives have spoken are for full and complete racial, political and human equality.

It is recognized that the spirit and the contents of the final charter of the new world organization will largely be determined behind closed doors by representatives of the so-called great powers—the United States, Russia, Great Britain, China, possibly France.

OPPOSED EQUALITY CLAUSE IN 1919

At Paris, in 1919, the Japanese delegate, Baron Makino, asked for the recognition of the principle of racial equality. He was turned down by a combination of Great Britain, the British Dominions and the United States. These same states will wield great influence in the present conference.

But if the plea for equality is rejected here, it will have to be done in the face of an equally potent combination of nations, large and small, which seek its recognition.

Among the large powers expected to support the principle of equality are the Union of Soviet Republics, China and France.

STETTINIUS MAY SUPPORT CLAUSE 5-5-45

But even the chairman of the United States delegation, Secretary of State Stettinius, in one of his early public statements at the conference, played on the note of establishing a new world order without regard to race, color or creed.

So far as the British Dominions are concerned, a dent in their solid front was perceived in the recommendations made on behalf of the Australian delegation by Francis M. Forde, deputy prime minister. Mr. Forde stated at the second plenary session of the conference: "We believe that the principle of trusteeship, which in modern times, powers have frequently recognized in relation to their colonial possessions by positive unilateral declarations, can not in principle be confined to undeveloped territories formerly belonging to our enemies in World War I or World War II.

TERRITORIES FOR NATIVES' BENEFIT

"We, therefore, wish to see provision in the charter for the continuance of the mandate system; the establishment of new mandates; the recognition of the principle that the purpose of the administration of dependent territories is the welfare and advancement of the peoples of such territories.

"It is generally agreed that the position taken by the Australian delegation is sound if it is backed up by provisions for inspection and report by the international authority supervising the mandates, and by the right of oral appeal for the peoples of such dependent areas to the international authority."

However, the first sustained note for equality was struck, ironically enough, by the British-picked leader of the Indian delegation, Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, who, with T. V. Soong of China in the chair, lifted the conference to the highest moral level it had attained.

IMPASSIONED PLEA FOR EQUALITY

The swarthy Indian, the target of attack from Indian Nationalists because he has been favored by the British, was the first head of a delegation to choose to speak without manuscript. With an eloquence which charmed because of its grace and fluency, he clearly and incisively defined what the world had a right to expect from the new organization to be set up here. After treating the physical and technical aspects of the organization, he moved to a discussion of the moral aspects, the relations of nations, races, colors, of human beings. 5-5-45

The audience sat spellbound as he uttered an almost prayerful plea that, in order to avert another war, the sanctity of the human personality, however clothed, be respected by the nations of the world.

When Sir Ramaswami concluded the audience rose and cheered in tribute.

PHILIPPINES BACK EQUALITY PLEA

The same ethical note was struck at the afternoon session by the head of the Philippines delegation, Brigadier General Carlos Romulo. He again made a fervent plea for equality although he lacked the depth and breadth of the Indian's speech.

Romulo was followed by Jose Serrato, chairman of the delegation from Uruguay, who urged the "repudiation of doctrines of racial prejudice and discrimination."

It is significant that the speakers who have not mentioned race or color, have emphasized the responsibility of the conference to do what it can to lift the economic and social status of all people everywhere. In his opening speech of the conference, President Truman asserted:

"We must work and live to guarantee justice for all."

Haiti, Ethiopia and Liberia have not spoken yet. Nevertheless, those men who have spoken have let the major powers know that the small nations and peoples of the world are demanding their place in the sun. The removal of the boot and the heel from their necks and their recognition as human beings.

Mrs. Bethune, Walter White Feuding

Unofficial Observers Plead For Equality

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

5-5-45

SAN FRANCISCO—Negro groups rushing to this city to make their voices heard at the United Nations Conference were fusing into one grand organization last Friday morning, at a meeting held in the Third Baptist Church. Spearheaded by a delegation of seven national leaders of the Elks, led by J. Finley Wilson, Grand Exalted Ruler, the new organization came into being as the National Negro Organizations of America for World Security and Equality.

CHICAGOAN HEADS GROUP

Officers are: the Rev. J. L. Horace, Chicago, representing the Fraternal Council of Churches, president; Magistrate Hobson R. Reynolds, Philadelphia, vice president; the Rev. G. Cooper Faultleroy, Oakland, secretary, and J. Finley Wilson, treasurer.

Perry W. Howard, grand legal adviser of the Elks, was chosen as chairman of a steering committee, which includes J. Finley Wilson, Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council; Dr. J. C. Austin, of the Natiqnal Baptist Convention; Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Dr. T. L. Boone, Detroit; Dr. E. I. Robinson, Los Angeles; the Rev. Charles Waters, of the AME Zion Church; Joseph Oliver, Potentate of the Mystic Shrine, and Harold D. Summers, of the International Honor Bright Society.

This organization, which is composed of the unofficial observers at the conference, has already pledged itself to work, through the group of three consultants chosen by the State Department, to represent American Negroes.

HITS DISCRIMINATION

These consultants, designated by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, are Walter White, consultant; Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, associate consultant, and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, associate consultant. 5-5-45

One resolution already drawn up by the combined group and turned over to the consultants reads:

"That the new world organization will look with disfavor upon any nation which discriminates by law, practice or custom against any segment of its citizens in the matter of civic rights, on account of race, creed or color."

It can be easily discerned that the Elk group intends to make its weight felt here. Those in the city are the Grand Exalted Ruler, J. Finley Wilson; James E. Kelly, grand secretary; Mrs. Buena Kelly Berry, grand secretary of the temples; Magistrate Hobson R. Reynolds, grand director of civil liberties; Mrs. Theresa L. Robinson, grand directress of civil liberties; Atty. C. Henri Lewis Jr., director of post-war planning; Eugene Sortell, grand esquire, and Perry W. Howard, legal adviser. 5-5-45

MRS. BETHUNE IGNORED BY CONSULTANTS

The Elks threw themselves into the breach Friday to try to prevent a break among the consultants. Mrs. Bethune had freely criticized her collaegues for failing to call her into consultation. She asserted that she came on the same train with Mr. White and Dr. DuBois, but never saw them after boarding the train.

Further, she charged, they did not call her into consultation prior to the opening of the conference.

She was therefore somewhat nettled when a statement was issued to the daily press which she had not had a chance to read or approve. This statement was published the day before the conference opened. Substantially, in the name of Walter White and Dr. DuBois of the NAACP, it read:

"That the American delegation be urged to support the incorporation of clauses recognizing racial equality, and international bill of rights and the abolition of colonialism."

Mrs. Bethune spoke at the Third Baptist Church meeting and expressed the conviction that she was being ignored. 5-5-45

WHITE DENIES CHARGES

"I may not know a whole lot about international affairs," she chided, "but I have common sense."

Mr. White took the position, in spite of the statement given to the press, that the consultants had had nothing to consult about. He pointed to the fact that the consultants themselves were not called into consultation by Archibald MacLeish, Assistant Secretary of State until Wednesday, and that they had not had a clear knowledge of their exact function until then.

Furthermore, he claimed that Mrs. Bethune, because of her closeness to Mrs. Roosevelt, was designated by the NAACP, but she had attempted to register in the name of the National Council of Negro Women. This, he said, would have upset the entire scheme of things, inasmuch as only forty-two organizations were invited to send consultants.

Still further, there was a question of who was paying for what.

This is the type of situation the Elks moved into and tried to correct. They thought they had the breach repaired at Friday's meeting.

FEUDING GOES ON

However, late Friday evening, notices appeared on the bulletin boards of hotels where members of the press are staying, inviting them to a press conference to be held by Mrs. Bethune at the Palace Hotel, Monday morning. 5-5-45

This press conference for the consultants is being sponsored by a Chicago newspaper, which is also presenting Atty. James B. Cashin, Chicago Civil Service commissioner, who spent a short time with the Roosevelt-sponsored commission to West Africa last year.

Mrs. Bethune contends that her Bethune, associate consultant of UGGCP, and James D. Cashin, member of the commission sent to Africa recently by the National Negro Publishers Association. The conference was arranged for Mrs. Bethune and Cashin to release special statements concerning the Negro. 5-5-45

After Mrs. Bethune had read a prepared statement describing what Negroes hoped to read as a result

NEGRO MIGRANTS

Pittsburgh Courier

SAN FRANCISCO — Only eight of the 1,500 newspaper and radio representatives here for the United Nations Conference attended the Monday morning press conference sponsored by a Chicago newspaper for Mrs. Mary McLeod of the San Francisco Conference, she defended Negroes who have taken up residence in California since the war began. Reporters who questioned Mrs. Bethune pointed out that whites and pioneer Negro residents of the State resented the fact that hundreds of colored persons are now pouring into California.

BETHUNE DEFENDS

Newsmen Scarce

WHITE, DuBOIS ABSENT

John Noble of the Oakland Tribune was of the opinion that riots may break out as a result of this sudden migration. 5-5-45

Walter White and Dr. DuBois, both of the NAACP, were absent from the press conference.

Bernard Young Jr., editor of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, who was a member of the African Commission, sat as a reporter during the press conference.

The 'Little Man' Just Isn't Here

Courier, Pittsbur Pa

By DR. RAYFORD W. LOGAN

SAN FRANCISCO — Two-thirds of the people represented at this conference are the darker peoples of the world. But nine-tenths of the delegates here are white.

One-half of the peoples represented at this conference are women. But there are hardly a dozen women among the several hundred delegates.

Most of the peoples of the world are workers. But there isn't a pair of overalls among the delegates.

The "Little Man" just isn't here. 5-5-45

The "People's Peace" will be white, male and middle-class if the other conferences at the end of this war are similarly constituted.

Britain Stands Pat On Refusal To Quit Colonies

Chicago Defender

5-12-45

Chicago, Ill.

By RICHARD DURHAM
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO.—The battle to crack the world's color line burst into the open at the giant World Security conference here this week.

Great Britain's plan to freeze 450,000,000 Negro and non-white colonial peoples as permanent dependents touched off an uproar as the historic conference, termed "the most important gathering since the Last Supper," swept to a climax.

Contending that "what's mine's mine," and demanding a strict hands-off policy by the United Nations in the affairs of colonial powers, England's draft for the new World Charter was substantially the same proposal proffered to the old League of Nations.

Same Old Story

As the deadline for amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals ended last week, the four sponsoring nations—China, the United States, Russia and England—had been locked in more debates on the burning trusteeship issue than even those caused by the explosive Polish and Argentine question. 5-12-45

Lord Cranborne, suave-mannered head of England's House of Lords, admitted to the Chicago Defender that the only substantial difference between England's new chapter on colonialism and that submitted to the old League of Nations is in the method of allowing for the defense of mandated territories.

England's plan, reported opposed by Russia, China and the United States, but supported by France, Belgium and the Netherlands, if accepted, would provide that:

1. Colonies cannot be placed under the guardianship of the United Nations without the consent of the nation holding the colony.

2. Inspection of colonies or mandated territories to see that they are administered in accordance with the new World Charter cannot take place unless requested by the nation holding the colony.

3. No time limit is to be set on the period people in an area can remain "dependent" or economically or educationally "backwards." 5-12-45

4. Colonial peoples will have no representation on any of the United Nations' colonial commissions or to determine in any way not acceptable to the colonial power who shall govern them.

5. No colonial power is answerable to the United Nations for the administration of its colonies.

Africa Snubbed

Lord Cranborne explained that England's proposal would divide colonial territories into three categories—A, B and C. Inhabitants of all territories falling into Category C are excluded from the non-discriminatory clause now almost certain to be included in the World Charter.

Most of England's African colonies and all of her Asiatic and Pacific holdings fall within the C category. A and B categories are those territories which were formerly League of Nations mandates and those re-conquered from the Axis.

"There's no difference between the United States' proposal and our proposal," Lord Cranborne said, "the only difference is in method—not in objective."

However, U.S. Naval Commander Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota and member of the American delegation, revealed that the American proposal on the trusteeship question not only seeks the eventual establishment of an international civil rights police force but also the inclusion of an "equal racial rights" clause in the new charter. 5-12-45

Dependency "Technical"

Asked when, under British plan, would a dependent colony cease to be dependent, His Lordship answered that this was a "technical" question and had not been considered at the conference.

He emphasized that the British proposal would not give the United Nations the right to decide which colony was ready for independence, nor does the proposal give the inhabitants of the colony that right.

Cranborne admitted that provisions to include native representatives, or representatives from the mandated peoples on the colonial commission, had not even been discussed by his delegation. He said, however, that he thought this might be "a good point to consider." 5-12-45

Anti-Negro Smuts Drafts Parley Equal Rights Plan

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

By RICHARD DURHAM
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO — Drafting of England's most liberal proposal this week was done by the world's bitterest Negro hater.

Premier Jan Christian Smuts, participant in the old League of Nations conference and head of the delegation from the Union of South Africa here, wrote the preamble to the Charter of the United Nations which Great Britain is seeking to have adopted by the World Security Conference. 5-12-45

Smuts, whose South African government has enabled its two million white folk to hold eight million natives in slavery and subordination unmatched even by Hitler at his peak, drew up the following preamble on the purposes of the San Francisco Conference which gave as its goals:

"To reestablish faith in fundamental human rights in the sanctity and ultimate value of human personality, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small. 5-12-45

"To promote social progress and better standards of life, to enlarge freedom, and for these ends to practice tolerance and to live together in peace with one another as good neighbors."

A bill to force South Africans to wear identification tags around their necks rating them in various discriminating categories was recently introduced into the South African legislature. 5-12-45

Negroes in Smut's South Africa are not allowed to join trade unions, receive education above an elementary grade, or move from one area to another without the permission of white officials.

Contacted by the Chicago Defender to ask if the new preamble would apply to South Africa an official in the South African press department snapped: "I am sure Mr. Smuts meant it for the entire world."

Black Dispatch Covers Conference

Black Dispatch

5-5-45

Okla. City, Okla.

(Editor's Note: Two of the nation's outstanding newspapermen are covering the San Francisco conference for this newspaper thru the Associated Negro Press. They are Mason Roberson and John Pittman.

(Mason Roberson is a native of San Francisco, attended school in the Philippines, has been reporter and columnist for the San Francisco Spokesman; editor, Spokesman, 1935; city editor, Cleveland Eagle, 1937; reporter and desk man, New York Amsterdam News, 1938; free lance and radio writing, 1939-42; publicity, Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee committee, trade unions and labor press in San Francisco, 1943. 5-5-45

(John Pittman, Atlanta born, graduated from Morehouse college A.B., 1926; University of California, M.A. 1929; postgraduate work there, 1929-31; editor, San Francisco Spokesman, 1931-34; postgraduate work, California University, 1935-38; foreign editor, Daily Peoples World, a Pacific coast labor daily, 1938-43; managing editor, Daily Peoples World, 1943. Mr. Pittman also founded and edited the Marron Tiger while a student at Morehouse).

Consultants Didn't Make Trip In Vain

Pittsburgh Courier Pg. 6-2-45

SAN FRANCISCO—During the first ten days of the United Nations Conference the distance between the American delegation and the American consultants was so enormous that there was natural wonder as to why the State Department had asked some forty-two national organizations to send these official consultants to this city.

Since that time, however, business has picked up and the State Department has arranged for close liaison between it, the American delegation and the consultants who survived their initial disgust and remained on the scene.

CONSULTANTS PROVE USEFUL

It is only fair, therefore, to note that the picture has changed and that the consultants are directly responsible for some of the most significant language that will find its way into the new world charter.

There can be no question but the language used and the positions taken by the consultants of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, percolated not only through the thinking, acting and writing of many of the other American consultants, but also through the thinking and final wording of the American delegation. 6-2-45

PRAISE FOR LOGAN, BUNCHE

In this respect, credit should also be given to Dr. Rayford Logan, my colleague in covering this enterprise, and Dr. Ralph Bunche, associate director of the Division of Dependent Areas in the State Department. Dr. Bunche served as an able, willing and friendly intermediary, and Dr. Logan, because of his exact and profound knowledge of the subjects vital to Negroes, was a source of help to the consultants themselves.

One of the big little jobs done by the American consultants was to force the use of the word "educational" into the functions of the Economic and Social Council. Opposition to the use of the word education persisted for days, there being great fear among some delegates of other nations that education might connote propaganda or interference with domestic policy. Finally, the consultants prevailed, and the word "education" found its way into the charter.

ACCENTUATING THE POSITIVE 6-2-45

There was the same fight in respect to the use of the term "full employment." It was finally adopted, but only after the minutes of the committee handling the subject were made to show exactly what was and was not meant by full employment.

In a word, the consultants have been helping the American delegation to "accentuate the positive."

THE SECRETARY OF STATE
WASHINGTON

San Francisco
May 17, 1945

Dear Mr. Holloway,

I have just seen your cartoon, "There Can Be No World Peace With HIM Outside!", which appeared in the May 5th issue of the Pittsburgh Courier.

I wonder if you would be good enough to send me the original of this drawing which I shall prize highly.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

E. R. Stettinius, Jr.

Mr. Wilbert L. Holloway
Cartoonist
Pittsburgh Courier
2628 Center Avenue
Pittsburgh 19, Pennsylvania

Pittsburgh Courier

Here is a reproduction of Art Editor Wilbur Holloway's Unit Nations Conference illustration which so impressed Secretary of St e Edward R. Stettinius that he has written to the artist and asked for e original drawing. Mr. Stettinius' letter was sent from San Francisco n May 17.

AUSTRALIAN DELEGATE LEADS FIGHT FOR COLONIAL RIGHTS, SUPPORTS NAACP'S POSITION

Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.

(By The Associated Negro Press)

San Francisco, May 2.—The colonial issue, close to the hearts of every American Negro, had its first direct presentation to the delegates to the United Nations' Conference here Friday when F. M. Forde, chief delegate for Australia, told a plenary session of the conference that his country wants the charter to include the policy that "the purpose of administration of dependent or undeveloped territories is the welfare and advancement of the peoples of those territories."

5-5-45

Forde was one of five delegate spokesmen who addressed the plenary session Friday. Each set forth their country's position on the proposed world organization. They were, besides Forde, Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak, for Belgium; Ambassador Victor Andrade, for Bolivia; Dr. Pedro Leao Vellose, for Brazil, and Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, for Canada.

In this, the Australian leader is demanding exactly the program put forward by the Council of African Affairs and the NAACP, that the United Nations be given stewardship over all the colonies in the world.

5-5-45

The United Nations would be given the power to investigate any colony and, if it were found that the nation governing a colony were not following the principles laid down by the United Nations, the nation at fault could be brought to trial by the world powers. The United Nations body would be also obligated to see that the administration of all colonies was for the welfare and advancement of the colonials.

U. S., GREAT BRITAIN ALMOST BOUND TO SUPPORT NATIONS' PRINCIPLE OF RACE EQUALITY

Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.

(By The Associated Negro Press)

(By Mason Roberson

San Francisco, May 3.—Wha are the chances that the principle of racial equality will be incorporated in the post-war agreements of the united nations conference?

5-5-45

Observers and students with whom I've talked believe that it is almost certain to be included. And an examination of the background and forces involved convince me of the correctness of such a belief.

Certainly the principle of equality will come before the delegates backed by more powerful protagonists than ever before in all history.

Last month, Sir Zaffrullah Khan, leader of the Indian delegation to the British Commonweath conference, told the delegates it was essential that there should be no further racial discrimination in any shape or form.

At the Dumbarton Oaks meeting, the Chinese delegation requested that the principle of race equality be formally included in the agreement. No action was taken, but the Chinese are certain to raise the issue again here in San Francisco.

Stalin Wants Stand

5-5-45

Premier Joseph Stalin declared "the abolition of racial exclusiveness" to be one of the Soviet Union's basic peace aims. This intention has been repeated over and over again by key Russian spokesmen. A recent issue of the Information Bulletin issued by the Soviet embassy in Washington declared: "When any country gives shelter to the Hitlerites or their ideas in the form of discriminatory legislation, in the form of racist organizations or a racist press, it is no longer an internal affair of that country."

This from a country which shares with the United States the greatest power on earth! And, of course their official declarations of policy is confirmed by the well known fact that the Soviet Union is the one place on earth where discrimination and prejudice of all kinds have been wiped out by rigidly enforced laws making such practices a major felony.

France To Give Citizenship

According to Rene Pleven, colonial minister, France plans to make full citizens of all her colonial peoples, with all the rights of white Frenchmen in the mainland, and to fight "with all its strength" any importation of racial prejudice.

The Netherlands government has announced its plan to rebuild its colonies as a commonwealth with no discrimination of any kind between races.

The position of both Britain and America on issue of equality are so much in public discussion that they need little examination here. Certainly we are all aware of the social, economic, historic factors involved.

5-5-45

Jim Crow Retreats

And certainly, no Negro will deny that since Versailles, the men and the interests supporting jim crow in America have been in constant retreat—that they have been undercut and circumscribed by such factors as the FEPC, the supreme court ruling on the vote, the army's order outlawing jim crow, the abolition of the poll tax in Georgia, and a host of other laws and actions by officials and by civic, church and labor organizations all of which have brought nearer the realization of the constitution and the bill of rights as applicable to all Americans. Certainly the official position of the United States government as voiced by nearly all its leading spokesmen over the past several years, would make it extremely difficult for them to come out in active opposition to the principle of racial equality at the conference.

5-5-45

Friends In England

Within the British empire the forces pressing for equality are far from the disorganized and voiceless multitude of 1918. In India, in Africa, in the Far East, British colonials have organization and spokesmen. In Britain it self these people have powerful support among large powerful organizations.

Certainly we can say that neither Britain nor America will be able to bring anything like a united group in support of a policy of inequality.

Thus we see that China, France, the Soviet Union are definitely for the principle of race equality. And they represent a majority of the "big five". In the whole united nations assembly an even larger proportion of the delegates will be in favor of such a principle, for the simple reason that a majority of the populations of smaller nations are non-whites. In the world, whites represent a rough third of the total population.

One third of the world cannot keep two-thirds of the world in a subordinate position in any international organization which is more than a more symbol of democracy.

560-1945

Negro Recognition Asked At Frisco

Courier-Journal 5-12-45 Ky.

Denver, April 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt today was asked by the National Negro Council to name Dr. Metz T. P. Lochard, Chicago, Negro Rhodes scholar and editor, as an adviser to Secretary of State Stettinius at the United Nations conference in San Francisco.

World Equality Clause Demanded

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

SAN FRANCISCO—The United States delegation to the World Security Conference here was asked on April 26, immediately after the close of opening formalities, to demand that a racial equality clause be included in the proposed world organization charter.

The request was made by Walter White and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, NAACP consultants, who asked that the clause, together with two other proposals, be written into the Dumbarton Oaks agreement. 5-5-45

The other two requests were that a bill of rights for all peoples be adopted and that the colonial system be abolished in favor of an international agency to which the colonial powers would report. 5-5-

Colonial Commission Sought at 'Frisco

People's Voice N.Y. 5-21-45

The Council on African Affairs, headed by Paul Robeson, this week submitted a memorandum to the delegates of the United States and other members of the United Nations to the San Francisco Conference calling for the establishment of an International Colonial Commission within the proposed world organization in order to promote a higher standard of living, self-government and self-determination for all colonial peoples as an essential part of the post-war task of maintaining world security and peace.

The memorandum includes specific recommendations for the exercise of international responsibility through a proposed Colonial Commission in the case of colonies taken from enemy powers in this war, colonial territories where military bases have been or may be established, mandated colonies from World War I, all other dependent territories, and regional commissions embracing colonies.

Among other things, it is recommended that: 5-21-45 —

- the international Colonial Commission would have final authority over the above-mentioned dependencies and should be responsible to the General Assembly of the World Organization, and be composed of representatives of all permanent members of the Security Council, with additional representatives elected by the Assembly;
- the commission would establish social, economic and political standards of colonial administration; insure adherence to these standards by all colonial administrators: set a definite time for the people of each dependent territory to achieve political self-determination; promote international cooperation in securing the economic, industrial, and social advancement of all colonial peoples; and guarantee equal access to trade and commerce. 5-21-45

AGAINST DISCRIMINATION

In addition to the powers vested in the League of Nations Mandates Commission, the new instrument would have the right to make direct, on-the-spot investigations in all dependencies, to receive direct petitions, both oral and written, from the dependent peoples, and to propose action by the General Assembly "in any case in which a mandatory or trustee power is in disagreement with the Colonial Commission or has been found habitually delinquent" in adherence to any standards of administration.

Direct international administration is recommended for colonies taken from enemies in this war, and all military bases on colonial territories are to be under the direction of the Military Staff Committee under the Security Council of the International Organization. 5-21-45

Annexation of any mandated territory would be prohibited, and "no state which practices legally sanctioned discrimination against any body of its inhabitants or the inhabitants of a mandated territory because of race, creed, or color, should be regarded as qualified to serve as a mandatory power."

NEGRO LEADERS UNITE IN PARLEY EFFORTS

St. Louis Argus Mo. 5-4-45

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., May 1—(Special to the St. Louis Argus) — On yesterday, April 27th Negro leaders at the World Conference, made history when all elements got together and settled their differences.

There are at this League of Nations Conference, representatives from all leading organizations in the world, spearheaded by the National Baptist Convention and the I. B. P. O. E. of W. These are listed as unofficial observers.

There are three consultants on American Negroes to the League of Nations. 5-4-45

The unofficial observers and consultants were at war with each other. But at the said conference on yesterday, the whole matter was threshed out and a solid front will be presented by the American Negroes to the League of Nations.

Also, the combined line up was able to agree on a plank to go into the Charter of the League of Nations, which was presented to this unified body by Perry W. Howard, Legal Adviser to the united body. The plank is as follows:

That the League of Nations will look with disfavor upon any Nation which discriminates by law, practice or custom against any segment of its citizens in the matter of civic rights on account of race, creed or color.

An organization of the consolidated group was perfect with Rev. J. L. Horace of the National Baptist Convention as chairman, Rev. C. Cooper Fauntelroy as secretary, Dr. J. Finley Wilson as treasurer, Judge Hobson R. Reynolds as vice chairman.

A steering and drafting committee was appointed, consisting of Perry W. Howard, legal adviser of the Elks, as chairman, Dr. J. Finley Wilson, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, Mr. Edgar G. Brown, director National Negro Council, Washington, D. C., Dr. J. C. Austin, National Baptist Convention, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, Dr. T. L. Boone, Detroit, Mich., Dr. L. I. Robinson of Los Angeles, president National Medical Association, Rev. Waters of the A. M. E. Zion Church, Mr. Joseph Oliver, Potentate of the Mystic Shrine and Mr. Harold D. Summers, International Honor Bright Society. 5-4-45

Most favorable comment is made upon showing of major organizations in representation at this the world's greatest conclave, such as the I. B. P. O. E. of W. led by the Grand Exalted Ruler, Dr. J. Finley Wilson, and his delegation of 7 members. Mr. James E. Kelley, Grand Secretary, Mrs. Beuna Kelley, Grand Secretary of the Templars, Judge Hobson R. Reynolds, Grand Director of Civil Liberties, Mrs. Theresa L. Robinson, Directress of Civil Liberties, Attorney C. Lewis, Jr., Director of Post War Planning, Mr. Jean Sorrell, Grand Esquire, Mr. Perry W. Howard, Grand Legal Adviser.

Negro Countries Get Executive Posts At Frisco

Houston, Texas The Informer

By P. BERNARD YOUNG, Jr.
(Published Jointly by Informer and Journal)
(Copyright, reproduction forbidden)

5-12-45

SAN FRANCISCO. — Of eleven executive posts on the four Major Commissions set up Tuesday by the United Nations conference, Negro countries, Liberia and Ethiopia, got two while the third one represented here, Haiti, was named rapporteur (secretary-general) for membership on the general provisions and membership committee under commission one.

Liberia and Ethiopia were assigned the assistant secretary general posts respectively on the commissions to work out the security charter provisions for the proposed general assembly and for judicial world (court) organization.

5-12-45

There are four major commissions, general provisions, general assembly, security council and judicial organization. Each has a president, rapporteur and assistant secretary general. Under the commissions are a total of twelve vital committees each with chairmen and rapporteurs. The committee on which Haiti is represented has two rapporteurs with Saudi Arabia assigned the general provisions assignment.

The commission and committee assignment conference, Co-Chairman Edward Stettinius Jr., told a press conference Tuesday afternoon were approved by the executive committee and the steering committee of the conference and would formally go before the plenary session of delegates later in the way. Final acceptance was regarded as a formality as the steering committee is composed of the 46 heads of participating delegations.

"Nations such as those from Latin America, Liberia and Ethiopia," Stettinius said in reply to a question, "May name experts or advisers to the official posts of commissions and committees since they would not have enough delegates to go around."

Each country is entitled to one spokesman-member on each of the committees and commissions. The same person may serve on more than one.

To date it was officially revealed Tuesday proposed amendments to Dumbarton Oaks proposals total seven hundred pages. Any nation or organization may submit comments of proposals to the conference through its secretary general. The deadline is Friday night.

"The commissions will get to work Wednesday on Preliminary details," Stettinius said, "and by Monday should be really at grips with our task here."

It was authentically stated that Foreign Minister Molotov may return to Russia soon because of war developments. He is expected to remain here until the key Commissions are functioning well.

The conference is proceeding very satisfactorily. The Big Four leaders met harmoniously last Monday night. "I plan to see the conference through to a successful conclusion," Stettinius told a press conference. The reporters applauded.

NEGRO LEADER DISAPPOINTED IN FRISCO PARLEY

Chicago Defender 5-26-45

Dr. W. E. B. Dubois, Negro author and educator, yesterday told an audience of 3,000 at Pilgrim Baptist church, 33d st. and Indiana av., that the San Francisco conference holds small hope for minority groups under its present setup.

Dr. Dubois returned recently from San Francisco, where he was the accredited consultant for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Consultants, he told his listeners, carried little weight.

"A consultant," he said, "is of no importance unless he is consulted. We were not. We would ask a few questions, but seldom received a satisfactory answer."

The speaker said that many persons misunderstood the functions of the conference and emphasized that it has no power to enforce any mandale. 6-5-45

Dr. Dubois is the author of numerous books, including "The Soul of Black Folk," "Dark Waters," "Black Reconstruction," and "Color and Democracy."

Smuts Plans To Extend Jim Crow!

Chicago Defender 5-19-45

Hope For World Agreement Fades

DuBois Says Many At Parley Don't Know What It's About

5-19-45

By W. E. B. DuBOIS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO—Among the difficulties and misconceptions which face us at San Francisco are the numbers of people who have flocked here with utterly erroneous ideas of what this meeting is about.

Some regard it as a sort of international circus, and are disgusted that admission to see the elephants is so difficult to obtain. Why hold a circus, they seem to say, if the public is excluded? To which the answer is, even assuming that this is a circus, the big tent seats only 3,000 and today 60,000 people are clamoring for admission. If people suggest a larger tent, the answer is that this is not a circus. This is an international conference in which 48 different nations with at least 500 million inhabitants are listening in. The conference then, as a conference, is a comparatively small body and must go on despite those present who want to see and hear, outside the delegates. 5-19-45

And then there are well-meaning American Negroes who seem to think this conference is called to settle the Negro problem in the United States. One woman, for instance, sent to the Secretary of State a request that Harriet Tubman's home be bought and put under her supervision. Quite outside the question as to whether supervision of this lady would be proper for Harriet Tubman's home, is the basic fact that the San Francisco conference is not considering questions of this sort. 5-19-45

This means, too, that ordinary pressure tactics cannot be used here by groups or individuals. There is no chance for conventional publicity, stunts; for mass-meetings and resolutions. And the opportunities for collecting money are not what some people seem to think.

It happens that the N.A.A.C.P. is the only organization that has the recognized right to have consultants present at the meetings of the conference, and to be called into consultation with the American delegation. This is a privilege; but it carries no great power and is a recognition simply that American Negroes are one of 42 interests represented by consultants which ought to be recognized by the American delegation. Moreover, the N.A.A.C.P. is not speaking simply for itself. When it was first known that we would have the right to send consultants we immediately communicated with other organizations.

As a result, we have been authorized to speak for the March on Washington Movement, the National Urban League, the Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, the Delta Sigma Theta sorority, the National Association of Deans and Advisers of Men in Negro Educational Institutions, the conference on Adult Education and the Negro, the National Medical Association, the National Bar Association, the National Association of Ministers' Wives, the National Dental Association, the Independent Order of St. Luke, the Independent Order of Good Samaritans, National Council of Negro Women, the National Negro Insurance Association, and a number of other national organizations. All of these have sent us special resolutions and points of view which we have taken into consideration. 5-19-45

But, after all, we represent only one nation. There are other nations here. Nations powerful in their possibilities, jealous in their sovereignty. They are trying the very difficult task of agreeing upon an international organization and giving that organization some power. The first power which it must have is the power to stop aggression which will lead to war. The second power which it must not forget is the power to reduce the causes of war; and what we three consultants of the N.A.A.C.P. are trying to impress upon the American delegation and others, is that human rights among the great nations and especially among colonies must be respected. Their flagrant disregard has caused war among the great nations. But even more than that, their contined disregard toward colonial peoples has caused two wars in our day and will cause other wars in the future.

We have done everything we can to emphasize this point of view. We have sent petitions and have had interviews with American delegates. We have had interviews with a half dozen foreign delegates. We have written articles in the many newspapers and we have delivered lectures. Our total effort may accomplish little but we have tried.

South African Plot Aims At Grabbing More Colonies

5-19-45

By RICHARD DURHAM
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO—South Africa's super jim-crow state notified the United Nations conference this week that she wants another slice of West Africa. 5-19-45

Headed by its ancient premier, Jan Christians Smuts, the South African delegation formally proposed that the huge area of South West Africa be permanently incorporated into the lily-white Union of South Africa.

Listing 14 reasons why South West Africa, a territory more than half the sige of the Union itself, should be given wholly to the Union The South African delegation made the first grab for colonies heard at the conference.

South West Africa, whic has an estimated three million Negro natives, has been under the jim-crow rule of the Union since December 17, 1920, by an agreement with the old League of Nations.

The premature proposal for extending its rule over Africa was made by the Union immediately upon announcement of the American and British proposal on trusteeships which recommended that former mandated areas revert to the original nation in control.

Saying that, "its dependent native peoples spring from the same ethnological stem as the great mass of the native peoples of the Union," the South African delegation contended that, "there is no prospect of the territory ever existing as a separate state, and the ultimate objective of the mandatory principle is there impossible of achievement." 5-19-45

The "ultimate objective" of the mandatory principle had been eventual independence of the territory held in trust.

Meanwhile China and Russia this week demanded independence and self-government for now-dependent peoples.

Upsetting the British and American proposals which looked forward to freezing some 750,000,000 non-white colonial peoples in a status quo, the Chinese and Russian demands carried the bitter battle for trusteeship into its second week here.

China's plunge into the fight for a new deal for dependent peoples came after its delegation had ignored the earlier drive to include proposals in the new chapter to outlaw race discrimination.

Russia, although blocked in its attempt to include in the new world charter "right to work" and "right to education" clauses covering all peoples, regardless of color, race or sex, served notice before departure of Foreign Commissar Molotov that it intends to take a strong and active part in the allocation and supervision of colonial areas. 5-19-45

Ask Non-Whites' Freedom

Both the Russian and Chinese proposals favored America's detailed trusteeship plan over that of Britain but inserted wordings to the effect that "independence" and "self-government" must be the object of the administration of colonials. Neither Britain nor America had a word to say about eventual independence of the non-white colonies. Neither provided for representation of colonial peoples in the management of their own affairs. 5-19-45

Throwing the full weight of America's 13,000,000 Negroes behind the fight for future independence of colonial peoples, the NAACP sent a hot protest to Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., chairman of the American delegation.

Walter White, W. E. B. DuBois and Mary McLeod Bethune, the only Negro consultants, pointed out the lack of native representation in the American and British proposals and stated: "This failure to include natives in the growing council does not carry out the stated objectives of the proposal to train the natives for progressive development toward self-government 5-19-45

"We believe that a declaration should lay down the principle and course to be followed so as to provide for the transition of all colonial peoples from colonial status to such autonomy as they desire. The eventual disapperance of the colonial system is the best insurance of peace. This democratic principle, the international organization has not recognized."

Southern Students Work for Peace

N.Y. Times 4-22-45

A conference to "defend the ideals of human justice, freedom and democratic action" was formed by students from fifty colleges and universities in thirteen Southern States at a conference held last week at the University of North Carolina.

Members of the group pledged themselves to disseminate information, inspire action and serve as an organ of expression for the students of all the Southern colleges and universities who subscribe to the principles of Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and the World Security Conference at San Francisco.

The student conference adopted resolutions asserting that agreements drawn up at the San Francisco meeting should include provision for the reexamination and revision of the machinery for international cooperation within five years of the date of establishment of the security organization. It also proposed that provisions be considered to amend the agreements made at San Francisco by less than unanimous consent, and that power to function in all matters be given to the General Assembly. 4-22-45

Proposed Bill of Rights

The resolutions urged that the conference at San Francisco state that no nation should set itself above the moral and international law and constitute itself a judge in its own cause. The students favored including in the agreement an international "bill of rights" of all peoples regardless of color, race or creed.

In a message to the conference, President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina challenged the youth of the South to be on the march toward freedom, democracy and peace. Commenting upon the grave loss to the United States and the world in the death of President Roosevelt, Dr. Graham told the students that "your commitment to the great spirit of our late lamented leader and to the new Commander in Chief is to see to it that the Roosevelt policies will go forward."

Greatest Opportunity

This country faces its greatest opportunity to see that peace shall be organized among all the nations of the world, Dr. Graham told the delegates. He urged them to work for one great world neighborhood of human freedom. President Roosevelt's hopes for making a peace that will prevent other wars is a call to young people representing every State in the South to take up this torch, the university head declared. 4-22-45

The delegates agreed to raise a minimum of $50 from their schools to pay the expenses of two representatives to the San Francisco meeting. Douglas Hunt, University of North Carolina student, was elected delegate to represent the new organization at the conference. He will serve as observer and reporter. Charles D. Parker of Fisk University was elected president.

The action of the Southern students is indicative of nation-wide interest of students in American colleges and universities in the San Francisco Conference. The students are weighing the problems of world peace, and discussing the various proposals in the classroom.

Lauds Molotov's Frankness In 'World Equality' Speech

Chicago Defender 5-26-45

By W. E. B. DuBOIS
(Official Consultant, U. S. Delegation, United Nations Conference)

SAN FRANCISCO — The greatest thing that has happened at San Francisco so far has either been unnoticed or deliberately played down by the newspapers. I saw one Negro correspondent who heard the words and did not understand them just as Galahad failed to read the message of the Grail. 5-26-45

What I have in mind was the splendid frank straightforward statement Molotov made to the world in the presence of 2,000 press representatives. He said frankly the chapter of the proposed charter of the International Organization "expressly provides now for the observance of the principles of justice and international law. It also contains a reference to the necessity of respecting the principles of equality and self-determination of nations to which the Soviet Union has always attached first-rate importance. The principles of justice and self-determination of nations proclaimed by the international security organization will draw particular attention of the population of colonies and mandated territories; this will help realize the sooner these great principles which is so vital."

Besides, he continued, this chapter "now provides for the encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, language, creed or sex. Such a program is incompatible with the membership of Fascist countries in the organization of international security. 5-26-45

Right To Work Vital

He said further that the Soviet delegation had proposed another declaration on the right to work and the right to education as two of the most important human rights. They were not pressing that because his colleagues had thought it inadvisable to mention any specific rights, but, he continued: "Is it not clear that the right to say, work, is of vital importance to working men and women in the transitional period from war to peace when the danger of mass unemployment will be particularly grave . . ."

And finally, with regard to trusteeship he said: "The Soviet delegation realizes that from the viewpoint of the interests of international security we must first of all see to it that dependent countries are enabled as soon as possible to take the path of national independence."

This, as I have said, is the most straightforward declaration made at the San Francisco Conference It will not be followed because the British are sitting tight on Churchill's determination. Marquis W. Childs declares that this refusal of Churchill at Yalta to let the question of colonial peoples be taken up at San Francisco was a sore disappointment to Franklin Roosevelt.

FDR Deeply Interested

Mr. Childs emphasizes the deep interest that President Roosevelt had in colonies. He said that the white man would find himself "pushed out completely" from Asia unless something was done. His exact words were:

"Sometime ago I worked out a form of trusteeship from French Indo China You know, that colony was governed very badly. For every dollar the French put in, they took ten dollars out. Those little people had a culture of their own, Cambodia and the Cambodian kings. But they were badly treated.

"Now my idea is for a trusteeship to administer Indo China. I put this up to Chiang Kai-shek and he was strong for it. The idea is to have one Chinese trustee, one Philippine trustee, one French trustee, a British trustee and perhaps an American trustee."

Stalin thought the plan excellent but Churchill refused to consider the matter at all. It is possible that if Roosevelt had lived he might have influenced the conference at San Francisco. As it is the chances are now that the colonial question will not really be touched, despite all of the talk about trusteeships.

U. S. Seeks Recognition Of Human Rights, Justice Within World Charter for Peace

Richmond Times Va. 5-4-45

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3—(AP)—America made its bid today to strengthen a world charter for peace through specific recognition of the cardinal principles of justice, international law, human rights and the Atlantic Charter's four freedoms. 5-4-45

And, beyond these, the United States delegation to the United Nations Conference further recommended:

Future review of a projected international constitution "in the light of experience and the developing world situation after the war is over."

Provision for "peaceful change of conditions in the world so that the world is not frozen."

The American suggestions fell into nine major categories. A spokesman for the delegation, Commander Harold E. Stasser, outlined them to reporters and said they had been approved unanimously. 5-4-45

Even as he went down the list, foreign ministers of the four nations sponsoring the conference—Stettinius, of the United States; Soong, of China; Molotov, of Russia, and Eden, of Britain—were going over them.

The Big Four, in fact, were surveying the whole future of the conference in an effort to anticipate issues and insure a quick, smooth run toward its goal after Molotov and Eden leave the Golden Gate. 5-4-45

Four conference commissions which will cull over all amendments and try to fit the most meritorious into the scheme of a world organization met at conference headquarters to begin their taks. The American-endorsed changes had been submitted to Britain, Russia and China in advance. Their announcement at this time was interpreted by many delegates as indicating there are no major spheres of disagreement on them.

What Americans Want

This is what the Americans want:

(1) An international organization functioning "in keeping with the principles of justice."

(2) Clarification of the Dumbarton Oaks blueprint, worked out last fall by the four sponsoring nations as the agenda for this conference, to say that the world organization shall function within international law and assist in perfecting it. 5-4-45

(3) The development and safeguarding of human rights.

(4) Provision for peaceful change of world conditions.

(5) A definite system of trusteeships for weak or strategic territories.

(6) A system to facilitate amending the charter to meet postwar conditions.

(7) A modernized world court.

(8) Incorporation into the charter of specific provisions of the Atlantic Charter, including assurances of freedom from want and fear, freedom of speech and worship.

(9) A declaration of cultural objectives similar to those already proposed by China.

Other Problems Remain

China asked that the economic and social council of the world organization promote "education and other forms of cultural cooperation." 5-4-45

Adoption of the American recommendations would dissolve some, but not all, of the dissatisfaction of small powers with Dumbarton Oaks as it now stands.

They make no concession to little power demands for a bigger voice in a security council, which would be the real instrumentality for keeping peace because it would be empowered to bring armed force into play.

Nor do they settle small-country claims that regional security systems, such as the Pan-American arrangement, should be allowed to settle local or regional disputes on their own.

These may become the next big local point of conflict within the conference.

And even within the Big Four there still remain some differences of views. The Brtish and Americans, for instance, both believe some form of international trusteeships must be established. But they are in disagreement on important details.

Byrd Arrives to Advise

The first formal meeting of representatives of the Big Five powers—the Big Four plus France—was scheduled tonight to consider the trusteeship problem. And members of a Senate naval subcommittee, Byrd (D-Va.), Eastland (D-Miss.) and Tobey (R-N. H.), came to town to advise the American representatives.

Sentiment has crystalized among the United States delegation for retaining control of strategic Pacific bases seized from Japan.

Altogether some 70 or 80 specific amendments have been submitted by all countries for inclusion in an international charter.

They fall mainly into four categories. 5-4-45

Most small and middle powers want to change the security council to reduce big-power control.

Several middle powers, like Canada, Australia, New Zealand and The Netherlands, say countries which actually have fought in the war, and presumably would contribute military strength to be put at the council's disposal, should have council seats.

Numerous amendments are intended to strengthen a council designed to help eliminate social and economic conditions which might lead to wars in the future as they have in the past.

Full Independence Opposed By Parley

Chicago Defender

China, Russia Line Up For Colonial Liberty But Lose Fight

5-26-45

By RICHARD DURHAM
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO. — A Dixie-conscious United States delegation this week struck against independence for now-dependent peoples at the United Nations Conference.

America joined hands with Britain and France to maintain the status quo for some 750 million non-white peoples.

Snubbing liberal proposals projected by China and Russia which called for specific plans for freeing and eventual self-government of colonial peoples, the American delegation dealt the heaviest blow against colonial independence made here thus far.

After a bitter closed session of the "trusteeship" committee, during which Britain's Lord Cranborne stated that dependent peoples did not aspire to independence, even if they could achieve it, Commander Harold Stassen announced that America would back the British and French proposals.

"Independence" Is the Word

The proposal around which the battle rages, and which is now opposed only by China and Russia, does not mention "independence" but states that dependent territories should be given "self-government in forms appropriate to the varying circumstances of each territory."

China, which has set forth the most advanced plan for liberation of dependent areas strongly protested the British proposals and insisted, through Dr. Wellington Koo, its vice chairman, that the word "independence" be added to or substituted for "self-government."

A. A. Rostchin, of Russia, vigorously supported Koo, pointed out that Russia's original draft on trusteeships set forth "full national independence" as one of the system's goals.

5-26-45

Russia Hits Compromise

The principle of "equal rights and self-determination of peoples" was asserted in one of the Big Five's proposed amendments to the Dumbarton Oakes chapter on purposes of the projected world organization. Rostchin demanded that it be restated with regard to trusteeships.

While no vote has yet been taken on the raging question, the alliance of the U. S. with Britain against the liberal, democratic Chinese-Russian proposals drew sharp criticism from the 42 American consultants and from some of the American delegation.

This position contrasted sharply with the lead taken by Edward R. Stettinius, head of the U. S. delegation when he proposed that the American sponsor an international bill of rights recently.

"It is a far-reaching step because it would pledge the members of the World Organization to cooperate effectively in promoting human rights and fundamental freedoms for all individuals and peoples, regardless of race, language, religion or sex," Stettinius said when introducing the proposals, regarded as the most advanced step made in the conference.

Stettinius Proposal

"These provisions are essential if we are to build peace on the basis of justice and freedom for all . . ." he continued. ". . . Racial tensions have been built up since the rise of Nazism and fascism by systematic campaigns of hatred and prejudice. . .

"The people of the world will not be satisfied simply to return to an order which offers them only worn-out answers to their hopes. They rightly demand the active defense and promotion of basic human rights and fundamental freedom. It is a matter of elementary justice that this demand be answered affirmatively."

While the responsibility for carrying out the proposed ban against racial discrimination would "rest with the member government" without interference from the Security organization, it was felt here that the fight for independence of now-dependent peoples is of far more significance to future racial equality than the proposed "Bill of Rights."

This is what makes the American opposition to the freeing of dependent peoples even more paradoxical.

"Equality" Is Biggest Little Word at World Conference

AFRO-American 5-26-45

5-26-45

By RALPH MATTHEWS
(AFRO Correspondent at World Security Conference)

Balt., Md.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—Perhaps no word is more overworked here today than the word "equality" which is being applied to everything by everybody.

It was pushed at every turn by colored consultants and observers of the British Military Administration. Without exception all the 12 members of the Council desired reunion to Ethiopia. Miss Pankhurst revealed for the first time that when the British were trying to capture Eritrea they appealed to the patriots to rise-up and help throw the Italians out. Leaflets were dropped by Royal Air Force planes telling the Eritreans that once the Italians were expelled they would be allowed to rejoin Abyssinia, but now they were being double-crossed. The people had expected the immediate fulfilment of the pledge.

Since the British haven't enough officials of their own, they are employing Italian administrators, judges and police officers who were brought into Africa by Mussolini and taken prisoners when the Blackshirts surrendered.

Miss Pankhurst said that these former Fascist leaders committed many unpunished crimes against the natives. When the native peasants tried to graze their cattle on Italian occupied lands they had been driven off by machine guns.

The Eritreans, therefore, marched at the conference prodding the American delegation, and was also given a good hand by the Ethiopian, Liberian and Haitian delegations .

Russia put in a few powerful blows which left the Big Three Groggy. But the word meant many things to many people, aside from the mere question of race.

Equal Voice Sought

The smaller nations used the term in pressing for equality beside the big powers, and their whole fight on the relative strength of the General Assembly was an attempt to give each an equal voice in keeping the peace.

The question of equality was injected into the controversial formula for trusteeships when certain powers urged representation of native peoples on the trustee commission, giving them an equal voice with their rulers in the administration of native affairs.

Equality for Women

Equality for women came to the fore when Russia called for a clause in the charter giving women a voice equal to men.

The revolutionary import of the Russian proposal is highlighted by the fact that, in many countires, women have little or no voice at all.

5-26-45

The abject state of native womanhood in India is a classic example. Chinese, Japanese and German women, and millions more who are chained to the Islamic code, are but slaves of the state, and their husbands.

Labor vs. Capital

The state of womanhood is also deplorable in many Latin-American and West Indies areas.

The new world labor organization in session in Oakland—formed in London prior to the World Security Conference—has petitioned (with Russia's blessing) for an equal voice in the conference with capital, and so share in making economic decisions of world importance.

5-26-45

This struggle for "equality" with capital, by labor, is important because we already know how financial monopolies and vested interests, through international exchange, cartels and other devices built a super state transcending the power of any government, and bringing the world close to ruin.

International labor organizations with a voice in a world security organization, can do much to arrest the manipulations of financial dictators, and help keep the peace for the masses who must work and die when war comes.

And so, equality is, in many ways, the biggest little word heard at this conference because, on its achievement hangs the peace of the world.

Frisco Air Cleared For Full Discussion Of Trusteeship

5-26-45

By METZ T. P. LOCHARD
(Editor-in-Chief, Chicago Defender)

The final agreement by the Big Five at San Francisco on the much contested Regional Security Plan, has cleared the air for a definitive, forthright declaration on trusteeship.

With the notable exception of the Chinese and Russian delegates who want to see eventual independence guaranteed to dependent colonials, the countries which control the destiny of 750,000,000 subject peoples are far from being genuinely concerned about them.

Britain, France, Belgium and even America insist that the best formula for solving this issue is a promise of self-government, if and when the colonies are ready for it. But who is to determine when the colonies are ready for self-government? To be sure the native population of dependent areas will not be given the right to make such a decision. In arrogating unto themselves the right to establish the future status of subject peoples, the colonial powers are forging another link in the chain of oppression.

Polite Wrangle For Booty

All the proposals and plans which have been debated and argued upon, were meant to deceive those who were naive enough to believe that the ethical forces of the world were sufficiently developed to guarantee universal human rights. What has really been going on here under the grandiose and attractive idea of trusteeship, says one commentator, is a polite but unmistakable wrangle over strategic bases and the territorial booty which will be left over after the Axis is finally defeated.

5-26-45

Public opinion is neither strong nor insistent enough to force the American delegation to change its position on the question. Thus it appears, so far this world security conference is concerned, that the vast concourse of human beings forcibly placed under the yoke of colonialism are doomed to everlasting serfdom.

The policies of the powers towards colonial peoples are governed by the idea of trusteeship. The legal interpretation of this idea was first applied to public affairs by John Marshall, chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. He ruled in 1831 that the Federal government must regard itself as trustee for the lands of Cherokees.

We Have A Stake

Negroes have a definite stake in the success of the World Security Conference now in session in San Francisco. Despite the many experiences showing one that decisions affecting the people generally have not always related to the Negro as well, the fact remains that the future of colored Americans is bound up with America's future. America's future is bound up with the world's future. Hence Negroes who explain their casual interest in the conference by saying that they will make the decisions and we will abide by them whether we like them or not, are being shortsighted, and unduly cynical.

That little word all which appears in so many of America's often-quoted political documents, but which excludes the interest of the Negro so often, will see increasingly more literal interpretation if the conferees agree to make a collective effort to raise the living standards of the common man throughout the world.

Colored Groups Represented

Among the Negroes whose presence at the conference is in interest of a literal interpretation of the word all are NAACP's Walter White, fresh from doing a reportorial job in the Pacific theatre, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois of the Council of African Affairs and the very vigilant Mary McLeod Bethune. The Council on African Affairs adopted among other resolutions, one calling upon the conference to provide for the adherence of all participating governments to the principle of granting the same economic, social, cultural, legal and political rights and benefits to all persons, regardless of race, creed or color. They also passed a resolution asking the conference to establish machinery to bring about the industrial and economic advancement for non-self-governing peoples with a view toward making them self-governing. The presence of these Negro consuitants is reassuring. Even if they are not consulted, they have registered their opinions.

Liberia, the Dominician Republic, Haiti and Ethiopia have direct representation at the conference. The resolving of any issues affecting the welfare of these people, or of any of the colored peoples, is of importance to Negro Americans. The extension of legal, economic and political justice to even the smallest body of any racial minority invariably affects the welfare of all minorities. The attitude that the conferees take on the exploitation of Liberian workers, for instance, will have more than a subtle effect upon how Americans feel about the exploitation of Negro labor.

Conferees Know Price Of Peace

It has been made clear that the conference is not a peace parley, as such. It will, however, have on its agenda many of the issues which affect strongly the quality of the peace that we will have after the war. Many of the delegates to the conference are keenly aware of the fact that there can be no lasting peace as long as one group attempts to hold another in subjugation. Those of us who have long been subjects of subjugation, exploitation and discrimination should be interested in knowing how matters involving these practices are resolved by the conferees.

We have a stake in the conference— a stake that is important enough for us to be informed about its deliberations and to be concerned about its disposal of problems affecting the welfare of minority groups.

Walter White and DuBois Consultants to Americans At San Francisco Parley

New York—A world Bill of Rights "which will include unequivocal affirmation of equality of all peoples and races" will be a primary goal of Walter White and Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the World Security Conference in San Francisco opening April 25.

Dr. DuBois and Mr. White will be consultants to the American delegation at San Francisco, officially designated as such by the State Department. The NAACP is one of 42 organizations, and the only Negro organization, invited by the State Department.

In a statement issued before boarding a special train in New York April 19, Mr. White said:

"It is our hope as consultants to the American delegation, to induce the San Francisco conference to face what is one of the most serious problems of the twentieth century—the question of race and color. We are particularly concerned with what is done about colonial empires and the well-being of colonial peoples around the world. Most of these colonial peoples are colored. What happens to even the most exploited of these has direct bearing upon the future of Negroes in the United States.

'Disturbing to Read'

"It is disturbing to read on the eve of the conference the statement by Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., that the position of the United States government on the question of assignment of trusteeships for Pacific islands and former mandated territories has not been determined upon. The Army, the Navy and other forces, including the Hearst press, are waging a determined campaign against the Ameriacn delegation approving any formula for former mandates and island possessions which would interfere with the United States retaining as military bases certain Pacific islands which have been wrested from the Japanese. It is reported that powerful forces in the United States are willing to permit colonial powers like the British, Dutch and French, to do whatever they choose in colonies they held before the war if in return the United States is permitted to hold on to the islands it wishes.

"It is to be hoped that the United States is not going into the conference with any willingness to perpetuate colonial empires.

World Bill of Rights

"Equally important is the adoption by the conference of a world bill of rights which will include unequivocal affirmation of the equality of all peoples and races. Such a resolution was introduced at Dumbarton Oaks by the Chinese but was quietly smothered. It is our hope that there will be no repetition of such suppression at San Francisco, since that would be merely an affirmation of determination to perpetuate 'white supremacy.'

"We realize that the task we face is not an easy one. Our voices will be heard only if a sustained and enlightened public opinion backs the efforts to induce the San Francisco conference to support such reasonable and necessary principles."

At the last moment Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, was added to the NAACP delegation with the permission of the State Department, but she will not be recognized as representing her organization. She is one of the vice presidents of the NAACP.

Negro Republics To Attend United Nations Parley

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The San Francisco conference of the United Nations on April 25 will be attended by many countries populated by darker peoples, among whom will be Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Cuba, Egypt, India and the Philippines.

The inclusion of India and the Philippines, neither of which yet have become independent states, is viewed with surprise and pleasure by many observers.

Text of world race equality demand on S. F. confab given

SAN FRANCISCO—A formal statement that "the main groups of mankind, commonly called races, are essentially equal in capability of progress and deserve equality of treatment" was presented to the American delegation at the World Security Conference by the NAACP consultants Walter White, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois.

The statement was presented not only to the American delegation but to all other consultants present here by 42 organizations designated by the State Department.

Branding the colonial system of government as "undemocratic, socially dangerous and a main cause of wars", the statement called upon the United Nations to see that at the "earliest practical moment no nation or group shall be deprived of effective voice in its own government".

The statement, however deeply rooted in history and custom, is today undemocratic, socially dangerous and a main cause of wars. The United Nations, recognizing democracy as the only just way of life for all peoples, should make it a first statute of international law that at the earliest practical moment no nation or group shall be deprived of effective voice in its own government.

"An international colonial commission on which colonial peoples shall have representation should have power to investigate the facts and implement this declaration under the security council."

Mrs. Bethune and the two NAACP officials are consulting with various foreign delegations, the enlisting whenever possible their support of a strong racial equality provision, for an international bill of rights with machinery to implement it, and for the abolition of colonialism.

The first duty of civilization is to see to it that no human being is deprived of these rights because of poverty, disease or ignorance. The colonial system

W. E. B. DuBois

The Winds Of Time

Chicago Defender

Recognition at Frisco

AFTER CONSIDERABLE agitation and negotiation, the American Negro has won not indeed a seat at the peace table in San Francisco but official recognition as a consultant of the American delegation. This is considerable. The consultants have been appointed for forty-two labor, business, professional, religious and other organizations. These consultants will have no direct power; they may or may not be called into consultation; but at any rate it has been established that among the vast and varied interests of this nation in commerce, trade, law, labor, war veterans, farmers, women, Jews, Catholics, Protestants, education and various other general interests, the interest of thirteen million American Negroes must at least be recognized.

This is more than has ever happened before to American Negroes since the Civil war. It came to pass through temperate but insistent agitation on the part of the Negro press and organizations like the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In addition to this, there are certain over-all organizations fighting for the Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods plans. The most important of these is perhaps the American Association for the United Nations which is a union of a dozen or more national peace organizations. This federation has appointed a core committee of thirteen and one member of this committee is an American Negro.

Colonies Seen Key to Parley

WE MUST also remember that directly represented at the peace table will be Liberia, Ethiopia, Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Finally, there will be numbers of interested observers from the Council on African Affairs, the West Indies National Council and probably from some of the great church organizations and especially reporters representing the Negro press.

From all these persons one thing will most certainly be accomplished: whatever is discussed and decided, the situation of the Negro race in Africa, in the West Indies and in America cannot and will not be neglected. It will become part and parcel of the whole problem of colonies; and the problem of colonies either in San Francisco or soon after will become the central problem of world democracy and world peace.

At a small colonial conference held recently in New York the one central agreement was that the colonial system must go; and that plans for transition of colonials from subordination to empires to autonomy must be put on foot. I am not sure how soon the world is going to realize this. Opposition to the plan is of course centered in the British Empire and there it is strong. On the other hand, there are elements in England who sympathize with this program and believe in the danger of colonialism.

Economic Background

OF COURSE the central problem behind all change is economic. Mere political freedom means nothing if people cannot earn a living and support with their income the education of their children and the protection of their health. This economic program is fundamental and the great hope of the world that its basic importance will not be ignored is the growing strength of Russia. Russia has based its growth upon the Marxian proposition that economic development is basic to all human progress. There is no gainsaying this foundation of truth.

The difficulty with all of the small and so-called independent countries is that imperial commerce is so organized today as to make their self-support impossible. Not only are the colonies wretchedly poor, ignorant and diseased but the little nations resemble them. The mass of the people of the Balkans are poverty stricken. The central problem of Ethiopia, Haiti and Liberia is the tremendous difficulty of earning decent returns for their work and materials.

If after this war tariff walls are maintained and rebuilt; if trade is manipulated in favor of the great empires; if the currencies are at the mercy of vast banking monopolies; then we cannot attack poverty. We will have no money for education. We will have continued disease; all this primarily in colonies and small countries, but also as a corollary among the depressed classes of the leading countries of the world.

Mrs. Bethune Added To Frisco Advisors

Chicago Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, has been named by the State Department as the only Negro woman who will attend the San Francisco conference as an official consultant. Mrs. Bethune is one of the three official appointees who will represent the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, one of 42 national organizations granted official representation at the historic meeting which aims to lay the foundation for achieving world security. The other N.A.A.C.P. consultants to the conference are Walter White, secretary and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois.

Mrs. Bethune is vice president of the association.

Fully cognizant of the responsibility which the appointment carries, Mrs. Bethune said, "I consider it a privilege. I shall do my utmost to help bring about a world in which a larger measure of justice, equality of opportunity, economic security and brotherhood may be attained for all peoples."

Mrs. Bethune added, "Negro women like all other women must take a part in building this world, and must therefore keep informed on all world-shaping events."

6 Consultants to Frisco Conference

AFRO-AMERICAN

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Three representatives of the united colored church and three ther persons representing tthe NAACP have been certified by the State Department to serve as consultants to the American delegation at the United Nations Conference.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, and the Revs. J. L. Horace of the Illinois Baptist State Convention, and H. T. Medford of the AMEZ foreign mission board will represent the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches.

Mrs. Mary McL. Bethune, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois and Walter White, executive secretary who has just returned from a tour as a war correspondent in the Pacific theatre of war, will represent the NAACP.

Mrs. Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women, left here last week for San Francisco after she had been notified that she had been named one of three consultants accredited to the NAACP, at first invited to send only one representative.

Jernagin Spearheads Fight

Request that a representative of the colored church be certified as consultant to the conference was made by Dr. W. H. Jernagin, director of the council's Washington bureau, who contended that it was not represented by any of the groups accredited.

Dr. Jernagin and a committee of churchmen appeared before State department officials and stated that there was no purely colored organization among those mentioned in the entire setup—the NAACP (interracial) being the only colored group given such status.

The group pointed out that some interracial organizations were included in the accredited list, but none that represented the sovereign will of the colored people as a whole.

Called Only Mouthpiece

The colored church, they pointed out, is the only such representative body in America owned and controlled by colored Americans—represents a cross section of their life and is free to express the unhampered will of a disadvantaged people.

The council was notified April 13 by the State Department that provisions would be made whereby the council could have its views presented to the American delegation and credentials were later issued to the three religious leaders.

A brief containing the views of the church on securing a lasting peace will be presented to the American delegation, Dr. Jernagin declared this week.

Ralph Bunche Gets New Post

Pittsburgh Courier

SAN FRANCISCO—Dr. Ralph Bunche, technical adviser to the American delegation to the United Nations Conference, has been named Associate Chief of the Division of Dependent Areas in the State Department.

Dr. Bunche served as an American adviser at Dumbarton Oaks. He has served here as a member of the subcommittee of the United States delegation which has drawn up and presented the American program in respect to trusteeship.

Other members of the subcommittee are: Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, chairman; John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War; Artemus Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Abe Fortas, Under-Secretary of the Interior, and Benjamin Gerig, chief of the Division of Dependent Affairs.

560-1945

Plan to Frisco

4-21-45

NEW YORK — An international colonial commission within the proposed World Security organization was recommended last week by the Council on African Affairs, Paul Robeson, chairman, to U.S. delegates and United Nations representatives to the San Francisco conference.

The memorandum urged such a commission, to promote a higher standard of living, self-government and self-determination for all colonial peoples, as an essential part of the post-war task of maintaining world security and peace.

The council endorsed the maintenance of international unity and co-operation, central objective of the San Francisco conference, as fundamental to the solution of the colonial problem and other world issues.

Liberal Colonial Rule

It emphasized that, with a far more genuine basis of agreement existing among the allied nations today than existed after the first World War, it is possible to develop a much more effective international instrument for colonial advancement than the weak mandates system. 4-21-45

Specific recommendations for the exercise of international responsibility through the proposed colonial commission were:

That the commission, which would have final authority over dependent colonies, should be responsible to the General Assembly of the world organization, and be composed of representatives of all permanent members of the Security Council.

Also additional representatives elected by the General Assembly, and members who "represent directly the several broad groups of colonial peoples."

The commission would establish social, economic, and political standards of colonial administration; insure adherence to these standards by all colonial administrators; set a definite time for peoples of dependent territories to achieve political self-determination; 4-21-45

Bars Bias State

Promote international co-operation in securing the economic, industrial and social advancement of all colonial peoples; and guarantee equal access to trade and commerce.

Direct international administration is recommended for colonies taken from enemies; a military committee to direct bases on colonial territories; annexation of mandated territory would be prohibited; and no state practising discrimination can qualify as a mandatory power.

NAACP, African Affairs Body Represented

Atlanta World 4-26-45

Yergan, White And Others To Counsel With Delegates

BY MASON ROBERSON

(Editor's Note: Two of the nation's outstanding newspapermen are covering the San Francisco conference for this newspaper thru the Associated Negro Press. They are Mason Roberson, a native of San Francisco and John Pittman, a native of Atlanta, Georgia.)

4-26-45

SAN FRANCISCO (ANP) — For the first time in the history of such meetings as that of the United Nations Conference for International Organization, the desires of Negro America in the matter of the advancement of colonial peoples will have proper hearing and weight in the deliberations of the conference.

This is assured in the presence here of representatives of the N. A. A. C. P. and of the Council on African Affairs

The NAACP has been made an accredited consultative body to the U. S. delegation to the conference which means that it will be consulted by the delegates on matters within its sphere on interest.

YERGAN OPENS OFFICES

Dr. Max Yergan, executive director of the Council on African Affairs, has opened offices in San Francisco and will be on hand during the conference to lend his immense influence and prestige as a world authority on the subject to influence the conference to formalize into law its declared intent to achieve "international cooperation in the solution of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems" as projected at Dumbarton Oaks. 4-26-45

It is already established that the idea of international trusteeship over the world's billion or more colonial peoples will be discussed by a committee of the conference. When the United States delgation declared itself as a sponsor of the idea, it added great weight to an already formidable array of major powers whose support of the idea had either been formally declared or can be taken for granted. These include, among others, China, the Soviet Union, France and the Netherlands. Along with these can be added the votes of a good two-thirds of the smaller of the United Nations which have a direct interest in bettering international colonial policy.

Hardly any of the suggestions advanced by these two organizations are new. Nearly all of them are already the declared policy of the major trustee nations of the world. There should be little difficulty in establishing responsibility over colonies.

The real battle will probably revolve around attempts by some of the empires to avoid having the principles of equality and controls applied to all the colonies—especially theirs. 4-26-45

In this relation the intelligence of the Negro bodies in using their influence with the U. S. delegation to advance demands in support of the fundamental issues involved rather than any immediate and selfish gains reflects great credit on the maturity of thinking among their leaders.

Such a program of recommendations indicates clearly that our leaders are thinking beyond race, that they realize that the Negro cannot march forward except together with all men of all races and nationalities.

Mordecai Johnson To San Francisco

In former Pittsburgh Courier 4-28-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA)—Three representatives of the United Negro church, Dr. Mordecai Johnson of Howard university; Rev. J. L. Horace of the Baptist State Convention of Illinois, and Rev. H. T. Medford of the AME Zion Foreign Mission, have been accredited to the San Francisco Conference, according to announcement of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches.

White Warns Against Colonial Policy in East

AFRO-AMERICAN 4-21-45

Says Restoration of Pre-War System Will Lead to Third World War

NEW YORK — Declaring that colonial policy must be discussed at the San Francisco world security conference, Walter White warned last week that a restoration of pre-war colonial systems would only lead to another world war. B24, Md.

This statement was made Monday in a report by Mr. White to the NAACP board of directors on his return from a four-month 36,000-mile tour of the Pacific theatre of war. 4-21-45

Says Americans Must Wake Up

He pointed out that thousands of Americans had died and billions of dollars had been spent to oust the Japanese, "apparently only to restore the islands to European powers that exploited them before the war."

Mr. White warned that Americans must "wake up" and "make it clear to allies and enemies alike that we are not fighting this war to restore colonial systems which inevitably will breed another war."

Will Aid Japs

He said that failure to act on colonial policy now will aid Japanese propaganda that "the sole purpose of the so-called 'white nations' is to enslave colored peoples throughout the world."

"It was disheartening to find everywhere calm acceptance of the fact that no other course is even thought of except to re-establish colonial empire," the NAACP executive secretary stated.

"The rights of native peoples to share in the benefits of raw materials and their own labor are completely unthought of, except by the natives themselves.

"Their poverty, physical condition and educational disadvantages are a terrible indictment of their British, Dutch and French exploiters. They are bewildered and dismayed that winning a war for 'freedom' means no change in their status."

Mr. White also stated that an anti-American feeling was created by attempts of some American whites to spread race hatred in the Pacific.

"This was contributed to greatly," he declared, "by the confinement of colored troops almost exclusively to service instead of combat duty. 4-21-45

"But in conferences with Admiral Chester Nimitz and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, assurance was given that in future phases of the war in the Pacific, more opportunity would be given to colored combat units."

Mr. White arrived in San Francisco April 5 after a 38½-hour flight from Australia in a B-24 plane.

THE CALL's Managing Editor To San Francisco Conference

Kansas City Call Mo. 4-20-45

THE CALL, and through it the people of the Midwest, Missouri and Kansas City will be represented at the United Nations conference which opens in San Francisco next Wednesday, April 25.

Because of the far-reaching effect that this conference will have upon the peoples of the world and the interest that dark-skinned peoples have in the shaping of the peace, this newspaper is sending its managing editor, Miss Lucile H. Bluford, to San Francisco to cover the conference proceedings for its readers.

Official delegations will be there from Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti and other little countries of the earth with whom Negroes feel a certain kinship. Miss Bluford will be there to record their hopes, their expectations from the conference and from the peace. 4-20-45

The stand that the world delegates take on the issue of racial equality will be watched with deep interest and reported to the readers of The Call.

Miss Bluford is scheduled to fly to San Francisco Monday morning.

Three Colored Countries List Frisco Delegations

AFRO-AMERICAN
4-21-45 Balt., Md.

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Delegations which will represent Ethiopia and the republics of Liberia and Haiti at the San Francisco World Security Conference have been listed formally with the State Department, and are participating in preliminary talks.

Members of the American delegation began regular preliminary discussions last week to become thoroughly familiar with the position this government will take on vital issues.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) has been suggested as chief American delegate on the Assembly Commission for the proposed United Nations organization.

Big Ethiopian Delegation

Prime Minister Bitwodded M. Endalkachoou will head the Ethiopian delegation which includes Atk Aklilou Hapte Wold, vice-minister for foreign affairs; Ate A, bai Wold-Mariam, vice-minister of justice; Blatta Ephrom Toweldemedhen, minister to the United States; 4-21-45

Ato Emanuel Abraham, director general of education; Ate Getahoun Tosomma, first secretary, Ethiopian Legation, Washington; Ate Menasse Lema, director general, ministry of finance; advisor; John Spencer, advisor, ministry for foreign affairs, secretary; Ate Portes Sahlu, ministry for foreign affairs.

Members of the Haitian delegation are: Gerald Lescot, minister, ofreign affairs; Vely Thebaud, interior minister; Gen. Nemours, senate president; Andre Liautaud, ambassador, Washington; Pierre Chauvot, under secretary for commerce; Maj. Antoine Levelt, director, military school; Antoine Borvin, Cuban charge d'affaires; Louis Moravia; Louis Nadal, secretary; Louis Gardero. 4-21-45

Liberian delegates are Vice-President C. L. Simpson, chairman; Gabriel Dennis, secretary of state; J. L. Gibson and Richard A. Henries, chairman, Senate and House foreign relations committee; Coleman M. Grant, military; Nathan Barnes, secretary; and George Padmere, secretary to the advisor.

President Truman's Speech

Birmingham News

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Text of President Truman's speech to delegates at the United Nations Conference at San Francisco: 4-26-45

The world has experienced a revival of an old faith in the everlasting moral force of justice. At no time in history has there been a more important conference, nor a more necessary meeting, than this one in San Francisco, which you are opening today.

On behalf of the American people, I extend to you a most hearty welcome. 4-26-45

President Roosevelt appointed an able delegation to represent the United States. I have complete confidence in its chairman, Secretary of State Stettinius, and in his distinguished colleagues, former Secretary Cordell Hull, Sen. Connally, Sen. Vandenberg, Rep. Bloom and Rep. Eaton, Gov. Stassen and Dean Gildersleeve.

They have my confidence. They have my support.

In the name of a great humanitarian—one who surely is with us today in spirit—I earnestly appeal to each and every one of you to rise above personal interests, and adhere to those lofty principles, which benefit all mankind.

Franklin D. Roosevelt gave his life while trying to perpetuate these high ideals. This conference owes its existence, in a large part, to the vision and foresight and determination of Franklin Roosevelt.

Justice Must Be Guaranteed

Each of you can remember other courageous champions, who also made the supreme sacrifice, serving under your flag. They gave their lives, so that others might live in security. They died to insure justice. We must work and live to guarantee justice—for all.

You members of this conference are to be the architects of the better world. In your hands rests our future. By your labors at this conference we shall know if suffering humanity is to achieve a just and lasting peace. 4-26-45

Let us labor to achieve a peace which is really worthy of their great sacrifice. We must make certain, by your work here, that another war will be impossible.

We, who have lived through the torture and the tragedy of two world conflicts, must realize the magnitude of the problem before us. We do not need far-sighted vision to understand the trend in recent history. Its significance is all too clear.

Two Courses Offered

With ever increasing brutality and destruction, modern warfare, if unchecked, would ultimately crush all civilization. We still have a choice between the alternatives: The continuation of international chaos—or the establishment of a world organization for the enforcement of peace.

It is not the purpose of this conference to draft a treaty of peace in the old sense of that term. It is not our assignment to settle specific questions of territories, boundaries, citizenship and reparations.

This conference will devote its energies and its labor exclusively to the single problem of setting up the essential organization to keep the peace. You are to write the fundamental charter.

Our sole objective, at this decisive gathering, is to create the structure. We must provide the machinery, which will make future peace, not only possible, but certain. 4-26-45

The construction of this delicate machine is far more complicated than drawing boundary lines on a map, or estimating fair reparations, or placing reasonable limits upon armaments. Your task must be completed first.

We represent the overwhelming majority of all mankind. We speak for people who have endured the most savage and devastating war ever inflicted upon innocent men, women and children.

Powerful Mandate Held

We hold a powerful mandate from our people. They believe we will fulfill this obligation. We must prevent, if human mind, heart and hope can prevent it, the repetition of the disaster from which the entire world will suffer for years to come.

If we should pay merely lip service to inspiring ideals, and later do violence to simple justice, we would draw down upon us the bitter wrath of generations yet unborn. 4-26-45

We must not continue to sacrifice the flower of our youth merely to check madmen, those who in every age plan world domination. The sacrifices of our youth today must lead, through your efforts, to the building for tomorrow of a mighty combination of nations founded upon justice for peace.

Justice remains the greatest power on earth.

To that tremendous power alone will we submit.

Nine days ago, I told the Congress of the United States, and I now repeat it to you:

Cooperation Is Essential

"Nothing is more essential to the future peace of the world, than continued cooperation of the nations, which had to muster the force necessary to defeat the conspiracy of the Axis powers to dominate the world.

"While these great states have a special responsibility to enforce the peace, their responsibility is based upon the obligations resting upon all states, large and small, not to use force in international relations, except in the defense of law. The responsibility of the great states is to serve, and not dominate the peoples of the world."

None of us doubt that, with Divine guidance, friendly cooperation, and hard work, we shall find an adequate answer to the problem history has put before us.

Realizing the scope of our task and the imperative need for success, we proceed with humility and determination.

By harmonious cooperation, the United Nations repelled the onslaught of the greatest aggregation of military force that was ever assembled in the long history of aggression. Every nation now fighting for freedom is giving according to its ability and opportunity. 4-26-45

We fully realize today that victory in war requires a mighty united effort. Certainly, victory in peace calls for, and must receive, an equal effort.

Isolation Is Opposed

Man has learned long ago, that it is impossible to live unto himself. This same basic principle applies today to nations. We were not isolated during the war. We dare not become isolated in peace.

All will concede that in order to have good neighbors we must also be good neighbors. That applies in every field of human endeavor.

For lasting security, men of good will must unite and organize. Moreover, if our friendly policies should ever be considered by belligerent leaders as merely evidence of weakness, the organization we establish must be adequately prepared to meet any challenge.

Differences between men, and between nations, will always remain. In fact, if held within reasonable limits, such disagreements are actually wholesome. All progress begins with differences of opinion and moves onward as the differences are adjusted through reason and mutual understanding.

In recent years, our enemies have clearly demonstrated the disaster which follows when freedom of thought is no longer tolerated. Honest minds cannot long be regimented without protest.

The essence of our problem here is to provide sensible machinery for the settlement of disputes among nations. Without this, peace cannot exist. We can no longer permit any nation, or group of nations, to attempt to settle their arguments with bombs and bayonets.

Words Not Enough

If we continue to abide by such decisions, we will be forced to accept the fundamental philosophy of our enemies, namely, that "might makes right." To deny this premise, and we most certainly do, we are obliged to provide the necessary means to refute it. Words are not enough.

We must, once and for all, reverse the order, and prove by our acts conclusively, that right has might.

If we do not want to die together in war, we must learn to live together in peace.

With firm faith in our hearts, to sustain us along the hard road to victory, we will find our way to a secure peace, for the ultimate benefit of all humanity.

We must build a new world—a far better world—one in which the eternal dignity of man is respected.

As we are about to undertake our heavy duties, we beseech Almighty God to guide us in building a permanent monument to those who gave their lives that this moment might come.

May He lead our steps in His own righteous path of peace.

Delegate to Geneva at S. F. meet

Los Angeles Tribune
6-14-45
CALIF.

SAN FRANCISCO—Delegate of Marcus Garvey's Universal Negro Improvement Association to the League of Nations at Geneva, William L. Sherrill, of Detroit, is here in watchful attendance on the United Nations world security conference, sent by his organization which still functions despite Mr. Garvey's death.

At the Geneva meet, Mr. Sherrill sat next to the late Ignace Paderewski, famed Polish pianist-statesman. Then, as now, his organization's main interest was in petitioning the assembled nations for fair and generous consideration of subjected colonies.

Mr. Sherrill has already submitted his petition to the delegates, in the form of a memorial, asking complete reorganization of the world colonial system.

A system of trusteeship, setting aside "the concept of colonialism as a means of exploitation of other peoples and their land," is asked in the memorial, which continues. 5-14-45

"To this end, we submit that for every ounce or pound of produce extracted from the land or any services rendered by the people, these people in return should be paid equitably in terms of education, cultural advancement and preparation for free and independent life."